teaches only Unity. Religious differences poison the mind. No one should give room for religious differences. All are spiritually one. In this context, it should be realised that from time to time, prophets, messiahs and avatars manifest themselves on earth to proclaim the glow of the human estate and make humanness blossom among mankind. The advent of Jesus Two thousand years ago, in Palestine, a province of the Roman empire, there were Jews professing Judaism. The Jews believed in one God called Yehovah. They believed that God would send a messiah for the people of Israel. Jerusalem was the sacred city of the Jews and continued to be so even under the Romans. This was the time when Jesus was born. From his childhood Jesus displayed such sacred qualities as compassion, love and sacrifice. Realising from his early years that the discharge of one's duties was the primary obligation of a human being, Jesus used to help his father in his work as a carpenter. The father passed away in Jesus's twelfth year. For a while he carried on his father's work, but in due course he set out his ministry in the service of the people. Like the fragrance in the bud of a flower, Jesus's divinity was evident from his boyhood. Three kings from the East came to see him at the time of his birth. One of them, on seeing the child, felt that he would be a lover of God. Another felt that he would be loved by God. The third king felt that he would one day declare his oneness with God. The first one's thought indicated Jesus's role as a "Messenger of God." The second one's thought indicated that he would be the "Son of God." The third person's thought indicated that the child would indicate one day that "I and my Father are one." Who is a "Messenger of God"? He is the one who comprehends the purpose of his life. The "Son of God" is one who appears as divine to others. "I and my Father are one" signifies the true nature of the individual, his identity with divinity. It is in this manner that Christ progressed in his ministry. He conveyed His message in simple and convincing terms. Changes in time, place and circumstances bring about changes in religious ideas and institutions. This is evident in the history of all religions and creeds. Such changes can be seen in the history of Christianity and the career of the Catholic Church. One of the notable changes was effected by the Reformation brought about by Martin Luther. Basic teachings of Jesus Christ Christ's basic teachings were related to promotion of compassion, sympathy, love, sacrifice and fellowship among human beings. Jesus was named the Christ as he was regarded as the "chosen" messenger of God.

The growth of Christianity in the Middle Ages culminated as it were in its acquiring the status of a State religion under Emperor Constantine. With the growth of Christianity, schisms also developed in the religion. The growth of schisms often results in a decline in spirituality. As men develop worldly desires, religious faith declines. Men do not realise that the pursuit of physical pleasures is like the pursuit of a mirage to quench one's thirst. Embodiments of Divine Love! Realise that human happiness is not to be found in sensory objects or experiences. Whatever pleasure is derived from these is transient and momentary. Real and enduring bliss is to be derived from within one's self. Body is a thing of matter--Annamaya. Life is based on Prana (lifebreath)--Pranamaya. Mind is subtle--Manomaya. In all, man is enveloped in five sheaths--Annamaya, Pranamaya, Manomaya, Vijanamaya and Anandamaya kosas. The first two are gross and the last three are subtle.

Man is a product of his mind. The mind consists of a bundle of thoughts. Thoughts lead to actions. Actions are the source of joys and sorrows experienced in daily life. It follows from this that if the world today is in bad shape, it is because men's actions are misdirected. All the good and the evil in the world are based on the actions of men. When men's actions are sublime, the world will be great and noble.

Man is a combination of body, mind and Atma. When we speak of man, we should consider him as the combination of body, mind and Atma.

The body is an instrument for performing actions. Mind is the faculty that determines what is right or wrong. The Atma is that which is ever pure, unchanging and permanent.

"Man" implies three things: doing, knowing, being. It is when the body, mind and the Atma are present in union that a human being can be said to exist. When the body alone acts without regard to the mind and Atma, that person is said to be in the state of Pasuthvam (animal state).

When the mind alone acts in association with the body, without regard to the Atma, that condition is described as Danavatvam (demonic). When the Atma functions according to its true nature, without concern for the body and the mind, that state is described as Daivatvam (oneness with the Divine).

The four catagories of men Hence, man has in him, these four possibilities: animality, humanness, demonic nature and divinity.

"Brahmanishtaratho devah," says a Vedic aphorism. This means that one who is ever immersed in the contemplation of the Brahmam (Supreme) is divine. Such a person is ever dedicated to righteousness and integrity and leads a life of purity. Ever seeking to be helpful to others, he showers love on all and does no harm to anyone.

"Sathyanithyaratho marthyah" (One who is always wedded to Truth is a true man). This means that one who adheres to truth and righteous conduct in daily life is alone entitled to be called a man.

The third category is described as "Madhyapaanoratha daanavah" (One who is addicted to intoxicating drinks and meat eating and leads a sensuous life is a demonic being). Such a person is intensely selfish and has no feeling or consideration for others. A wicked person, swayed by evil motives and evil actions, is described as a demon.

The fourth category consists of beings who only lead a life devoted to eating, sleeping and sexual indulgence with no awareness of the real meaning of human existence. Such ignorant beings have been described as Pasubhis-samaanah (equal to animals). Such persons are immersed in sensual pleasures. The senses should be regarded as instruments for rendering service to others.

The foolish idea that all pleasures consist in indulgence of sensual appetites should be given up.

Only animals are content to derive all satisfaction from the senses alone. Hence every man should firmly declare, "I am a man and not an animal." Only when he has this double conviction will man cease to be an animal and assert his humanness.

Unfortunately today men claim to be human, but are engaged in animal activities.

All religions have emphasised the same truths in their basic teachings, But few people try to understand the inner import of religions. Out of a narrow feeling that one's own religion is superior and other faiths are inferior, members of different religions are developing hatred towards members of other faiths and acting like demons. Such narrow ideas should be given up totally. All should develop the awareness that though names and forms may be different, the essential truth is one in all religions. Firmly believe that "Love is God: God is love" Today all over the world because of these narrow-minded attitudes, conflict, disorder and violence are rampant. To overcome these troubles, there is one simple method. Men must firmly adhere to the idea that "Love is God and God is Love." Live in Love. This is the task before every one. Where love prevails, peace will grow. To promote love, the first requisite is faith. It is only when you believe that one is your mother that you develop love towards her. If you do not regard her as your mother, you will not have that love for her. Therefore, faith is the starting point. Where there is Love, there is Peace. Where there is Peace, there is Truth. Where there is Truth, there is Bliss. Where there is Bliss, there is God. There is constant quest for peace. Everyone is seeking it. But peace is not to be had from the external world. Peace is within you. Only the divinity within you is the basis of peace within. When you turn your vision outward, what you have are only pieces. Try to comprehend your own true nature. When you go on affirming, "I am God, I am God," you realise your divinity, as declared in the Upanishadic saying "Brahmavid Brahmaiva Bhavathi" (The Knower of the Brahman becomes Brahman itself). Eschew hatred; develop love First of all, strengthen your faith. Without faith all kinds of worship and all spiritual disciplines are of no use; they are a waste of time. To begin with, cultivate love. Everything grows out of love. That love will reveal to you your true self. That love will confer bliss on you. Therefore, eschew hatred; develop love. What matters in the world is not what you eat. How important, for instance, is bread? Is it bread that sustains your life? Not at all. It is God alone who sustains and protects you. How many millionaires are there in the world living in the lap of luxury? But only God's grace can protect them. Without it, all their wealth will be of no avail. What you should pray for is God's love. With all your scholarship, all your power and pelf, and all your scientific achievements, how far have you succeeded in raising your status as a human being? How far have you preserved your humanness? Without ensuring humanness, man cannot ensure peace or security.

(Bhagavan then referred to the activities of the old students of the Sathya Sai College for Women who are members of the organisation called "Messengers of Sathya Sai." This part of Bhagavan's discourse is published separately in the next chapter). Discourse in the Poornachandra Auditorium, on 25-12-1991. Not only in this Kali Yuga but even the earlier yugas, the Kritha, the Thretha and the Dwapara, Namasmarana has been the secret of liberation from bondage. The temple is the place where Namasmarana is natural and automatic and undisturbed. Therefore, going to them is imperative, especially in the Kali age when the air is full of wicked and ungodly thoughts.

30. Earn a good name

DEAR Students! Today you have listened to reports about the service activities carried on by the "Messengers of Sathya Sai." As pointed out by their office-bearers (in their speeches earlier at the meeting), women all through their lives labour under many constraints. During their tenure as students they are in the custody of their parents. Then they come under the regime of their husbands and parents-in-law. As they grow older, they get involved in the responsibilities to their children.

Inspite of these constraints and obligations, they have been able to adhere to the disciplines acquired in their college and engage themselves in service activities and develop their organization "Messengers of Sathya Sai" continually. Whether one is a student or any other person, one should always remain grateful for the benefits one has received from others. The foremost quality every human being should have is gratitude. Without it, man ceases to be human. It is because today men have ceased to cherish gratitude that they have become a prey to many ills.

Sun-God's penalty for ingratitude

In the worship of the Sun-God, certain mantras are used (invoking the different attributes of the deity). Among the names recited in praise of the Sun-God are: "Himaghnaaya namah" (prostrations to the dispeller of snow!; "Tamaghnaaya namah" (prostrations to the "Kritaghnaaya namah" destroyer of darkness), (prostrations to the destroyer of the ungrateful).

The Sun is hailed as the melter of snow and the dispeller of darkness in the first two names. The third name describes the Sun-God as one who gives up those who forget the good done to them.

How does the Sun-God give up the ungrateful? The Vedas have declared that the Sun emerged from the eyes of Viraat Purusha (the Cosmic person). The Sun's radiance illumines the eyes of a human being. When the mantra declares that the Sun-God goes away from the one who is ungrateful, its inner meaning is that the Sun-God makes the ungrateful person blind and withdraws from him the power of sight. Today persons guilty of ingratitude go about as blind persons or as ignorant beings devoid of the real power of sight. Every person should therefore cherish the sense of gratitude.

These former students (of the Anantapur College) after the completion of their studies, when they took up some jobs, resolved to offer to Swami their first month's salary as a token of gratitude. There are several thousands of such old students. Many of them, even after marriage, have been coming to Bhagavan regularly and often bringing their husbands and children with them. This kind of devotion stems from their deep sense of gratitude. During the past year, they engaged themselves in a variety of service activities out of their devotion to Swami. On the occasion of Bhagavan's sixtieth birthday, sixty cottages were built for the poor. The enthusiasm and spirit of sacrifice of these old students were responsible for the construction of these cottages. Offer not money but love. Last year, with view to offering to Bhagavan their first month's earnings, the old students brought two lakhs of rupees to be given to Swami. Their love is priceless. Wealth has value, but love is invaluable. Your gratitude is the most precious thing. It is enough if you cherish this feeling. There is no need for you to make this kind of offering of money.

Even now, they have brought cheques for lakhs of rupees (as offering to Swami). But what I desire from you is your love. It is enough for Me if you adhere to the disciplines of the Sathya Sai Institute wherever you may be. If after you get married, your parents-in-law hold you in high esteem as girls who were educated in the Sathya Sai Institute and if your husbands feel that they have been specially fortunate in marrying girls educated in the Institute, that will be sufficient reward for Me. What you must offer to Me is the good name that you are able to earn. You have to set

womanhood. You have to impart right ideals to the children. Only then will Bharat achieve real prosperity. There is nothing greater than being exemplary mothers and women of good repute.

Dear girl students! I desire that you should devote yourselves to social service in the villages, run educational classes for the children and render whatever service the elderly people may require. I am returning your cheques so that you may use the funds for these service activities. I bless you all (Swami returned the cheques to the President of the Organization).

Cherish gratefulness

Do not seek to offer such monetary contributions to Me in the future. Engage yourselves in pure activities with pure hearts and earn a good name. What you have to offer to Me is the good name earned by you. This is the highest expression of your gratitude. You should earn the approbation of the public as students of the Institute.

Do not bring a bad name to the Institute by your conduct in the outside world. It does not matter much if you fail to bring a good name to the Institute, but in no circumstances should you bring it a bad name. Even if you fail to be helpful to others, do not cause harm to others.

Students should bear this in mind. Not students alone, but all spiritual aspirants should cherish in their hearts with gratitude the good done to them by others and always remember whatever form in which help was rendered to them. Only those who lead such grateful lives will be able to find peace and happiness in their lives.

I desire that all of you ("The Messengers of Sathya Sai") should constantly think of God, continue to render social service, lead ideal family lives and enjoy peace and happiness. This is My benediction for all of you.

Discourse in the Poornachandra Auditorium on 25-12-1991 when large contributions were offered to Swami by the former students of the Sri Sathya Sai College for Women at Anantapur.

Students must bear in mind that their life is determined by their actions, whether they are good or bad. The other determining factor is Time. Time is all-powerful. It is not subject to anyone. All are subject to it. It rolls on without beginning or end. Rama's exile, Ravana's death, emperor Bali's descent to the nether world, Sibi's supreme sacrifice, the ordeals of the Pandavas----are all examples of the power of Time over the destinies of men. It is only when one's actions are harmonised with the dictates of Time can one enjoy the bliss called Thrupti.

1. Divinise Every Moment

If you wish to embark on a new life, you need not wait for the arrival of a new year. To wait for a whole year means waiting for twelve months and so many days, hours, minutes and seconds.

Treat every second as new. Sanctify every moment of your life. This has to be done by realising the unity of Sath (the Divine) and Chith (the individual Consciousness). When this union is achieved, Ananda (Spiritual Bliss) is experienced. This is the primary task before everyone.

Every second should be regarded as an expression of the Divine. This New Year Day relates to the Christian Era. December and January may come and go (every year) but God neither comes nor goes.

In this context, you have to bear in mind three things. One is that which, after it goes, will not come back. The second one is that which, after it comes will not leave. The third is the one that neither comes nor goes. That which, when it comes, will not go is Inaana (spiritual wisdom).

When this sublime knowledge comes to one, it would not leave him. The knowledge which comes and goes relates to the waking and sleeping states. Knowledge of Supreme Reality, when once it is acquired, will never go away. The knowledge that is lost is not true knowledge.

Ignorance is the thing which, once it is gone, will not return. If it returns, it is "ignorance piled on ignorance." This has been described in Vedantic parlance as Mithya in Mithya delusion within a delusion.

Surrender to the Divine present everywhere

That which does not come and does not leave is Aatma Thathwa (the Aatmic Principle). That which is omnipresent, where can it go? Where is the place for it to go?

You set up a door to separate one place from a place outside it. If there is no place outside, there will be no need for a door. There is no place where the Divine is not present. Where, then, can the Divine come or go?

Such questions are the products of confused book knowledge. The state of mind of the confused person is described in a song by a Gopika (Cowherd girl). The doubting mind calls for closing the door of the mind (to truth). The person with faith asks for the opening of the door. Seeing the plight of the Gopika, who is racked by both doubt and faith, Radha was amused. Radha observed:

When the whole Universe is the mansion of the Lord,
Where is the need for a street or a door?

When the cosmic Lord is shining within,
Where is the need for a door?

When one offers one's entire life to the Lord and sheds tears of bliss, that is all that is needed. As long as there is no such complete surrender, there will be need for doors and the like. Why are doors erected? To regulate the entry and exit of persons. But, it is the irony of the present Kali or Dark Age that the door is kept open for the entry of all kinds of undesirable creatures. Man's mind is kept open for the entry of evil thoughts. The door should be barred against the inroads of egoism and acquisitive impulses. The door (of the mind) should be kept sacred.

Regard the entire cosmos as the great mansion of the Supreme Lord. It has no streets or doors.

Total surrender is the way to enter the mansion.

The advent of a New Year is greeted by welcoming the New Year and bidding farewell to the old one. This is the practice in the ordinary world. But it is not entirely a worldly affair.

Qualify yourselves to enter the Kingdom of God

The observance of the beginning of a New Year is based on the statements of the Siddhaanthi

(the almanac maker). The almanac is an artificial man-made work and is not related to anything permanent or unchanging. The sun and the moon remain unchanged. The calendar is a man-made device. For the Divine, there is no coming or going. God transcends such conceptions. He is the Lord of what is called the Kingdom of God. Each one has to acquire the qualification to enter that Kingdom. All are not entitled to enter it. But every human being should aspire to achieve that right. That is the essential purpose of human birth. Man is bound by his actions in this world.

The actions should be good. Be pure in your speech. Develop a sacred vision. Purify your hearts.

Discourse at Prashanthi Mandir to a vast gathering of devotees from all parts of world, 1 Jan

2. Manifest Your-Divinity

The Lord of the cosmos permeates the entire universe.

Remaining invisible in the visible universe,

The cosmic consciousness illumines everything

Like the thread that runs through a necklace of gems.

All things happen, good and bad, according to the dictates of Time.

Time is the cause of joy and sorrow, gain and loss.

Realise that Time is the cause of all happenings in the world.

There is none who is not subject to the sway of Time.

Embodiments of Divine Love! Time moves fast like a whirlwind. Each one's life span is getting reduced every moment, like a melting block of ice. Time passes even before man realises his duties in life. The human body is not easily acquired. The end of man's life should not be to waste his precious human birth without realising its primary purpose.

It is the duty of every man to realise the purpose of life and utilise his time in the performance of his duties to sanctify his existence. Given the will, there is nothing that man cannot achieve in this world. But before embarking on any enterprise, man should recognise his abilities and endowments.

Today's man, who claims to know everything and engages in exploring space, is unable to experience bliss. If one acquires the ability to explore the stars or walk on the moon, but is unable to understand his own true nature, he misses his integral consciousness. This consciousness is not related to knowledge of the external world. It can be experienced only by turning one's vision inward. Only when he has samagratha bhaavam (integral awareness) will he have the right perception of a sage. Only such integral vision can confer bliss. The greatest cause of bondage

When people speak about man's bondage, what is it that binds man? Man can liberate himself only when he knows what it is that binds him. Are wife and children the bonds? No. Is it property? No. Are they sensual desires? No. The greatest cause of bondage is the failure to know himself. An individual who is not aware of his true self cannot escape from sorrow. As long as sorrow is there, bliss cannot be experienced.

What is the sorrow that envelops man? Sorrow envelops man in three ways and afflicts him in many ways. One source of sorrow is Asath (the unreal). The second cause is Thamas (the darkness of ignorance). The third cause is death. In this context the Vedanta mentions three categories: Prakruthi (nature), Jivaatma (the individual soul) and Parmamaatma (the Cosmic Spirit).

As long as man does not give up what he ought to renounce, he will not experience bliss. As long as he is not aware of what he ought to know he cannot get bliss. Bliss will elude man until he reaches the goal he should aim at. Give up the fascination for the world

What is it that man should give up? What is it that he ought to know? What is his goal? What has to be given up is Jagath-bhaavam (the fascination for the world). The reason is the world is not different from God. "Eashaavaasyam idham jagath" (God dwells in the Universe). "Viswam Vishnu-swaroopam." (The entire cosmos is the embodiment of the Supreme). Disregarding this profound and sacred truth, man is becoming a prey to grief by his worldly attachments. The world should not be treated as merely physical, but should be looked upon as a Divine manifestation. It is only when man is filled with godly thoughts that he will be rid of sorrow.

Hence, what should be given up is worldliness. Then alone Aatmaananda (the Bliss of the Spirit) can be got.

The second thing that has to be given up is Jiva Bhaava (the feeling of separate individuality).

Who is a Jiva? Jiva is God. "The Jiva (the individual self) resides in the body. God dwells in the heart." They come together and engage in mutual sport. There is a Director who directs the play of the puppets. Both good and bad are present in the puppets. The Jivaatma (the individual self) and the Divine principle are not two distinct and separate entities. Out of ignorance, man forgets the basic reality and cherishes delusions which cause sorrow. It is like a man who is seized with fear when he mistakes a rope for a snake. When the truth is known the fear goes. Likewise man, looking at the world, considers it a separate phenomenal entity--Jiva Thathwa. But in reality it is Divine. When the Divine nature of the cosmos is understood, man is free from the delusion of separateness.

The Divine Master illumines the entire cosmos And the cosmos shines in the Divine. God and the cosmos are inseparable friends. This is the prime dictum of Sai. Human destiny is realisation of his divinity What is the destination that man should attain? It is the original home from where he came (Swasthaanam) What is this original home? It is the awareness of one's own true self. It is for the realisation of this truth that the body has been given to man by the Divine. Where can one search for one's self? Can the search be made outside of you? No. Similarly, the search for God in the external is futile. "His hands and feet are everywhere. His eyes, head and mouth are everywhere. He stands forth encompassing everything in the cosmos"

(Stanza from the Bhagavad Gita). When the Divine is omnipresent, it is foolish for man to search for God in some place.

Hence the destination for man is the realisation of his divinity (the original source). This realisation must come through the Vedantic process of exclusion ("Nethi, nethi" "not this, not this"). "I am not the body. I am not the intellect. I am not the Will. I am not the Antha Karana, the inner instrument." All these are only instruments. Man should realise: "I am the Master of all of them." When by this process of elimination man realises his true Self, he is freed from sorrow.

Man's most precious and sacred gift from God is Buddhi (intelligence). The intelligence that should be used for seeking the Aatma (Spirit) is being used by man today to seek Annam (food).

When you are given a mirror to recognise your face, if you turn it in the reverse direction, how can you see your face? Use the mirror of Buddhi to recognise your true self. That is known as Saakshaatkaaram----direct vision of one's true Self.

Unfortunately man today seeks to know everything except his own true nature. He asks everyone: "Who are you?" but does not put the question, "Who am I?" One who does not know himself, what right has he to seek about others? Such an enquiry proceeds from ignorance.

Without the awareness of his own true self, man can never attain bliss.

God contains everything within Himself

It is to set men on the path of such self-enquiry that the celebration of the New Year is intended.

God as the embodiment of Time, is worshipped by the name Samvathsara (year). This name also means that God contains within Himself everything. God is also known by the name Kaalaaathmaka (the Time Spirit). God incarnates on earth for revealing to man his divine essence.

Man has been endowed with intelligence (as Dheemantha) so that he may use it for discovering the Divine within him.

The name Samvathsara represents the cosmic manifestation of the Divine. The Divine displays four kinds of glorious potencies (Vibhuthis) as the Supreme Omni-Self. As such, He is called Chathuraatma. This means He is the Self that embodies three potencies. The three are:

Vaasudheva, Sankarshana and Aniruddha. When these three Vibhuthis are understood the fourth one, Pradyumna becomes intelligible. The meaning of the four potencies Vaasudeva indicates that the entire cosmos is the Lord's dwelling place. It also means that He is the Supreme Master of the Universe. This means that the Divine resides in all beings as the Indwelling Spirit. Moreover, He pervades the entire Universe. The Upanishad describes Him as

"Narayana who is inside and outside and pervades everything."

Sankarshana refers to the divine's capacity to attract and transform all beings. All beings, moreover, have emerged from Him. The name is also associated with His power to transfer any object from one place to another. The child that was in the womb of Devaki was transferred to the womb of Rohini (another wife of Vasudhva) and for this reason the child got the name

Sankarshana (another name for Balarama, the elder brother of Sri Krishna). The name Sankarshana also means one who attracts what is pure. Sam (pure) Karshana (attracts).

Aniruddha is one who is beyond the control of anyone. He can be swayed only by His grace and not by any other means. This term applies to one who is all-pervading, all-powerful and allknowing.

Pradyumna refers to one who possesses Aiswarya (infinite wealth). He confers by His grace all prosperity and happiness on those who adore, worship and love the Lord. Aiswarya includes not only material wealth, but every kind of wealth such as health, knowledge, intelligence and virtue.

Another name of the Divine is "Bhagavan." The term "Bhaga" represents six attributes: Divine wealth, righteousness, power, fame, detachment and Supreme Wisdom. The Lord is called "Bhagavan" because He has these six attributes.

Thus every name of the Lord is related to specific attributes and not an expression of the devotee's feelings or fancies.

Because of the Divine's myriad attributes, the sages hailed Him as "Om Samvathsaraaya Namah."

As the Creator of the Universe and as the One from whom everything emerged, God is also called Yugadi (The initiator of every Yuga or Aeon). He is the One who willed to become the Many.

The one Aatma that has different names and forms

What is the unity that prevails in the multiplicity? This is illustrated by the example of a huge mansion within which there are rooms and halls for different purposes. When all the dividing walls are removed, only the main mansion remains. All beings in the world have different names and forms as embodied beings. When the embodiment is taken away only the one Aatma in all of them remains. The sense of separateness is a creation of the mind. When this feeling, born of ignorance goes, the Godliness in man will shine. Every man has within him a Kalpatharu (wish-fulfilling tree). But around it there is a wild growth of bushes. When you clear away the bushes, the tree can be seen. That tree is the Self within each one. This Self is covered by man's sensory desires. When the desires are removed, the Self is recognised. Although the Self is in man, no attempt is made to realise it. How can a man who is involved in external pursuits realise his inner Reality? The fight method has to be adopted to attain the desired objective. The first requisite for the purpose is faith. There must be an unshakeable faith in God. Man's beliefs today are liable to be blown away like dried leaves. Man should strive to experience the Divine with firm faith, through weal and woe. Man is inherently Divine Embodiments of Divine Love! Man who is the embodiment of the immortal Spirit, identifies himself with his body and falls a prey to worldly desires. How can such a person be a true devotee of God, even if he calls himself a Bhaktha (devotee)? Such a man is only a devotee of Prakruthi (the phenomenal world of Nature). If you regard even Prakruthi as Divine, it will be a good thing. But even here, men separate the Paramaatma (Divine) from Prakruthi (Nature). As long as this sense of separation exists, all forms of japa and worship, performed even over many lives, are of no avail. What is Srishti (creation)? Srishti is an expression of the will of God. This is called Prakruthi. Everyone who emanates from Prakruthi should have divine qualities. That which has emerged from the Divine should have divine qualities and not the traits of an animal or a demon. A human being without the feeling of compassion or love is not human at all. Every human being should manifest his inherent divinity. He should make himself a "messenger" of God. Instead, he behaves like a "miss-inger of God," as one who has "missed" what he should know about himself. When man realises his true nature and his role in life, he becomes one with God. This is described in Vedanta as the Thuriya-avastha--the fourth state of consciousness in which the individual Spirit is one with the Universal. It is a transcendental state which is beyond the body and the mind--beyond the waking, dream and deep sleep states. What do we understand by the term Vyakthi (individual)? This term is applied to one who manifests the unmanifested Divine Power hidden within him. It is meaningless to apply it to anyone who does not manifest the Divine with him. The Cosmic form of Divinity Manifesting one's inner divinity does not mean producing something new. Divinity is inherent in man. It is called Swabhaava (one's true nature)--the Aatmic nature. It is the Aatma that confers all powers on man. Those who bemoan their weakness are not aware of their inherent potential and are not putting it to fight use. The first feeling which one has to get rid of is the identification of his physical form with his real self. Those who ask, "Where is God?" do not realise that all they see in the cosmos is a manifestation of the Divine. That is why the scripture declares, "Pashyannapi cha na pashyathi mudho" (Even while seeing, the foolish one does not see). Man is all the time seeing the universe around him and yet declares he has not seen God. What is the form of the Cosmos? Is it not Divine? You are seeing the Divine in the form of the physical universe. In the Bhagavad Gita this cosmic form of the Lord is described as Viswa Viraata Ruupa. What is Viswa? It is the whole cosmos. The Viswa Viraata Ruupa is the collective form of everything in the universe. No attempt is made to understand the inner meaning of such expressions as Viswa Viraata Ruupa. The intellect is used to misinterpret words and create confusion. What is needed is understanding through the heart. Even a highly evolved person like Arjuna confessed to Krishna that the mind is ever wavering and fickle. Are the intellectuals of today, with all their degrees, greater than Arjuna? Not at all. Above all degrees and intellectual attainments, one needs the grace of God. Krishna recognised Arjuna as His devotee. That is the supreme accomplishment. The abode of the Lord is the heart When you earn from the Lord the epithet of Bhaktha (God's devotee) you will be equal with Arjuna. God is not calling you as His devotee. It is not enough if you style yourself a devotee of God. God should hail you as His devotee. It is only when your devotion is acknowledged by the Lord that you can call yourself a devotee. If you have not received the acknowledgement, it may mean that you have given the wrong address in your devotion. The correct address of the Lord is Hridayavaasi-the Indweller in the Heart. This means that you must continue with your devotion to God untill your own conscience is satisfied. To achieve this satisfaction you have to purify yourself constantly. This means that you have to get rid of your bad qualities, bad thoughts and bad actions. Body is an instrument for realisation of Dharma. Realise that the body has been given to you for the service of others. How is this service to be rendered? Through righteous and pure means. The body is an instrument for the realisation of Dharma (Righteousness). This truth is allegorically conveyed by the example of the Pandavas in the Mahabharatha. The Pandava brothers (Bheema, Arjuna, Nakula and Sahadeva) and Draupadi representing Prakruthi (Nature) followed Truth and Righteousness as represented by Dharmaraja (the eldest of the Pandavas) and sanctified their lives. This applies to every human being. It is only when he adheres to Truth and Righteousness that he can realise the Aatma. Worship of the Divine must stem from the heart. When devotion flows from the heart, the voice of the Divine can be experienced in silence-- Sabda Brahman (sound of the Supreme Spirit). This was the experience of Ramakrishna Paramahansa. He observed perfect silence awaiting the voice of God at any moment. Can the Divine voice be heard in the cacophony of daily sounds? No. Devotees must practice reticence. When speech is restrained, the voice of the Spirit within makes itself heard. That is subtler than the human breath. It is only through Prapathi or total surrender, that the Divine can be experienced. It is an experience that can be had every moment of your life. Prashanthi Nilayam, 1 Jan 1992

You say, "Seeing is believing! I will believe in God only if I see Him " But are all things seen or heard or touched or tasted, as real as they seem ? Is it the eye that sees? Your eye may be open and turned in one direction, but if your mind is wandering elsewhere, you will not notice anything at all. You see things only through the illumination of the Aatma. You love only because the Aatma is Love. You know because the Aatma is knowledge.

3. How To Be Near and Dear To God

Of what avail is it to be

A scholar or clever intellectual

If one does not practice even a Fraction of what one knows ?

Not all the luxuries and pleasures of the world

Will give a man contentment and peace.

Only when he realises the truth of the Spirit

Will he experience true peace and contentment.

Dear Students! Embodiments of Divine Love! Whatever a man sees in the world rouses fear in him. Detachment alone can free him from fear. Failing to grasp this profound truth, man is allowing his desires to multiply. As long as man is attached to the body, he cannot get over the desire to possess the objects that attract him. A man afflicted with mamatra (the acquisitive impulse) can never get rid of worries. To overcome this attachment and possessiveness, the ancient sages, from Vedic times, pursued their studies. The sages believed that self-control promoted humility and that humility was the true index of fight education. System of education promoted by ancients

Control of the senses is essential for realising humility. Education should be pursued for achieving control of the senses. The ancients esteemed only that system of education which promoted Indhriyanigraha (control of the senses). Control of the senses is called Dhama (in metaphysical parlance). The vicissitudes of time, place and circumstances have resulted in the term Dhama getting reversed in today's student community into the term Madha (arrogance). The reason is the disappearance of humility and reverence from the students. Indulgence in sensory pleasures has become their primary concern.

Students should regard control of the senses as their foremost guiding principle. In the old days, students who achieved self-control received a diploma in true education called Saakshara. The inner significance of this title is that the recipient is one who has mastered his senses and recognised his inherent Divinity. When Dhama (self-control) turns into Madha (conceit), Saakshara gets reversed and we have Rakshasa in its place. Consequently the student who practised Dhama and displayed humility and reverence was regarded as Saakshara and the student who was filled with arrogance and egoism was characterised as Rakshasa (a demon). Scholarship without humility and reverence

It is not enough if one becomes a mere scholar. Even if one has mastered all the scriptures, if he lacks humility and reverence and has no self-control, the ancients regarded such learning as Rakshasa Vidya (demonic knowledge). During Vedic times, the people believed in human values, had faith in God and led pure and sacred lives. The advance of science and technology has enabled man to produce weapons of mass annihilation. Scientists who can manufacture such destructive weapons are unable to secure peace of mind. A scientist who has acquired mastery over the elements is unable to get rid of the fear that haunts him. The scientists do not enjoy the sense of peace and security experienced by common people and are wasting their lives.

The educational process is more concerned with imparting bookish knowledge, while education itself is sought only as a means for earning a living. This link between education and employment should be severed. Education should be the means for acquiring Vijnana (wisdom).

The world today consists of two types of persons: those who are consumed by excessive desires and those who have no desires. The desireless person treats with indifference all worldly things.

The desire-filled man will not be satisfied even if he is offered a mountain of gold (the Meru mountain). In the Ramayana there was a demonic character named Kabandha, who had his head in his stomach and who used his long arms to catch whatever object he could to fill his stomach.

Most students seem like Kabandha to be concerned only about earning a living.

The primary object of education is not to ensure how one can fill his stomach. The Lord, who gave a stomach, will not fail to provide the necessary sustenance. Man, who should seek the Aatma or God, is searching for Annam (food). In the world today, three-fourths of the people appear to be Kabandhas and not truly educated persons. In all their actions--whether in sports or other fields--they are concerned with only selfish interests.

Recognise your duties and responsibilities

There are today two aspects relating to man which have to be considered. One relates to a person's rights. The other relates to one's duties. Most people are concerned only about their rights and engage themselves in struggles to secure them. But they do not recognise their responsibilities. In all the different fields----social, political, economic and even spiritual--men do not recognise their responsibilities and duties. They want high positions and emoluments. The entire life is wasted in the pursuit of such desires. No one considers whether he is performing the quantum of work for the salary he receives, whether he is discharging his duties properly and fulfilling his responsibilities.

Such an attitude is prevalent not only in mundane affairs, but also in the spiritual field. Everyone says, "I want God. I want Moksha (Liberation). I want to ensure my Yogakshemam (well-being here and hereafter)." But he does not make the necessary effort to achieve these desires. "I have no time for bhajans (devotional chants). I can't do any sadhana (spiritual practice). I have no time to think of God"--this is his attitude. But still he wants God. With such a narrow outlook, how can a man know what his fights are? To get anything you want from a shop, you have to pay the price. But is man, who wants God to ensure his well-being, prepared to pay the price for getting it? Is he prepared to offer to God the sacrifice he has to make to secure his Yogakshema?

Does he offer the love that has to be given to secure peace, prosperity and security?

Man today seeks to get something without paying the price for it. But the Lord cannot be deceived. He offers the appropriate reward for each action according to its nature--whether it be gain or loss, good or bad. We will be entitled to expect what we desire from God only if we make the appropriate offering to God. No one is prepared to offer anything to God, but everyone is eager to get something from God.

Be grateful to those who help you

People go about preaching to others. How far are they practising what they preach? Many call upon others to make sacrifices. What sacrifices are they making? People expect others to be grateful to them for what they have received. How far are they themselves grateful to those from whom they have received benefits? There is no point in investigating all kinds of things in the world. The first thing one should do is to enquire into the truth about himself. Only then will he be competent to enquire into the conduct of others.

The devotion and faith of devotees today can be compared to a dried leaf which can be blown away by a slight breeze. A true devotee, on the contrary, will remain unshaken like a ball of iron whatever the trials or tribulations he may have to face. Many devotees, who are voluble in their speech, ostentatious in their display of devotion, are swept off their feet when they encounter any adversity. When their expectations are not realised, they develop all kinds of aversions. They make no efforts to recognise their own faults.

Students, for instance, nourish a grievance that Swami is not smiling at them, that Swami does not talk to them, but they do not enquire within themselves why Swami is acting in this manner and in what way they have violated Bhagavan's injunctions. If they examine their own conduct in this manner, there would be no room for them to entertain such thoughts about Swami.

It is not truly human to commit mistakes

Many feel that it is human to err and that Bhagavan should forgive their lapses. In fact, if they are truly human, they should not commit mistakes at all. Even if sometimes a mistake is committed, wittingly or unwittingly, it should not be repeated again. It is a grievous error to think that it is natural for a human being to err. Such feeling should not be entertained at all by anyone. Every man should realise, "I am not weak. I am not an animal. I am not a demon. I am a man." When a man has this conviction he will not commit mistakes.

When a man is described as Nara, it means that he is the very embodiment of the Aatma (Spirit).

The Aatma cannot be affected by any taint. It is the attachment to the body which is the cause of bad thoughts, bad desires and bad actions. It is the one who is a slave to his senses, who is a prey to such impulses. To follow the directives of the senses is a mark of the animal. To be guided by the Aatma is the sign of the human. No one should attempt to justify his weaknesses and lapses as natural to a human being. They should be regarded as signs of mental debility. You should continually strive to master your senses. When you have truly acquired sense-control, you will experience the power of the Divine within you.

Become the captor and not captive of the senses

There is a story which illustrates what happens when the agency intended for control of the senses becomes itself a victim of the senses. Once upon a time the government of a country set up a border force to prevent the entry of hostile foreign elements. A camp was set up on the border. A soldier who was keeping vigil caught an enemy intruder entering the country. After catching him, he shouted aloud that he had caught an enemy. The captain, who heard his shout from his tent, asked the soldier to bring the captive to his tent. The soldier said that the man was refusing to come. Then the captain asked the soldier himself to come. The soldier said that the intruder would not let him go! This illustrates the plight of educated students today. Education, which should enable them to acquire mastery over the senses, has made them captives of the senses.

Students should not give way to such weakness. They must develop spiritual strength. They must keep out the bad qualities which afflict them. Those who cannot do this can never become good students.

Men should regard the senses as potential enemies. They should not be allowed to have their own way. They should be subject to one's control and direction. What is the easiest way to achieve this mastery? Only the spiritual path.

Let conscience prevail

If there is real faith and devotion in a man, the senses will be powerless against him. It is the decline in faith and devotion which has led to man becoming a slave of the senses. Students should, therefore, examine before they do anything whether it is good or bad, right or wrong, and act according to the dictates of their conscience. Even in respect of the conscience, certain facts should be borne in mind. The promptings of intellectual reasoning should not be identified with the dictates of the conscience. The directives should come from the heart.

When you dive deep into a problem and enquire whether what you should do is in the interest of your friends and society in general, your conscience will give you the right answer. You should not be guided by intellectual reasoning which has a selfish element in it. You should be guided by a concern for the collective interests of society at large. That alone is the true voice of conscience. This kind of broad social conscience should be developed through education.

Students! You have performed a variety of gymnastic feats. You have distinguished yourselves in a variety of games and sports. Although these games have a value of their own in the physical field, there is something greater than all of them. Life is a game, play it! Treat life itself as a big game. To achieve a good name and success in this game, you have to cultivate good habits. Good thoughts, good speech and good actions are the disciplines required in this game. When so much practice and effort are required to achieve success in games like tennis, how much more effort is needed to succeed in the game of life! In this game, if you wish to achieve a good name, uphold your ideals, and realise the Divine. You have to observe in your daily life, right thinking, right conduct and right attitudes.

 Longevity and the good life
 Students! You have to take a resolve today to restore the ancient culture and tradition of Bharath.
 Life is wasting away every moment. People are growing older every minute, forgetting their duties. In this situation, what is it that you have to achieve? All that you wish to accomplish, you must set out to achieve now when you are in the vigour of youth.
 Man's lifespan, which should be a hundred years, is shortened by the misuse of the body. The length of man's life is determined by his own actions. A man's bad thoughts, his hatreds, his jealousy and bitterness are shearing his life into bits every moment.
 Anger shortens a man's life. This can be seen from everyday experience. When a man gets angry, his temperature rises. The blood gets heated up. In the process the nerves get weaker and as a consequence all organs in the body also get weaker. This weakness may last for six months. One moment of anger will deprive a man of the energy got from six months of food. Every fit of anger shortens a man's life span. Regardless of the temporary satisfaction a man may derive by the display of anger, it causes greater damage to the individual concerned than to others.
 Likewise, hatred and envy are equally debilitating in their effect. Egoism and attachment also have similar deleterious effects on man's life.
 Transcend the body and mind to attain the Divine Man is made up of three constituents---the body, the mind and the Aatma. Man needs the body for performing actions. But if the actions are done without using the discriminating power of the mind, man will be behaving like an animal, which acts on impulse. Moreover, if the mind, without relying on the eternal and ever-pure Aatma, follows the demands of the body and the senses, the actions will be demonic. The combination of mind and body leads to demonic qualities. When one is installed in the Aatmic principle, transcending the body and the mind, he attains the Divine.
 The ancient sages divinised their lives by control of the senses, by observing spiritual discipline and by successfully carrying on their daily avocations. These are the means by which men can transform themselves into sages. For effecting this transformation, students will have to cultivate faith and devotion. Spiritual education is greater than all other types of education. This was declared by Krishna in the Gita. Rivers are distinct in their names and forms, but when they merge in the ocean, they become one. Likewise, all kinds of studies and practices, when they are merged in the ocean of spiritual knowledge, become one.

 The Lord's offer to man
 Make your heart pure so that it becomes a worthy abode of the Divine. What should be a Ksheerasaagara (an ocean of milk) has been turned by man's misdeeds into an ocean of brine.
 Sanctify all your thoughts, words and deeds. Only then you will deserve the title Saakshara (truly educated).
 The Lord made three declarations: "Son! I shall give you what you ask. If you search for Me, you shall find Me. When you knock at My door, I shall open it." But man today asks for favours not from God but from Nature. He searches not for God but for worldly pleasures. He knocks not at the doors of Liberation but at the gates of Hell.
 What you should ask for is the grace of the Divine. What you should search for is God. And you should knock at the doors of the gate to Liberation. Man is acting contrary to God's injunctions.
 If only man followed God's commands he would be divinising his life.
 Man's frailties have made him distant from God. A student (in his speech earlier) said that to be away from God was a "living death." Man should strive to be "near and dear" to God. Many who are "near" to God are not "dear" to God. For instance, here in Prashanthi Nilayam you see devotees who have come from distant countries like Argentina, Australia and America out of their love for God. Many who are near Swami may meditate on God but they do not dedicate their lives to God. Only by dedication can they become "dear" to God.
 Students should strive to be both near and dear to God.
 Outsiders coming to Prashanthi Nilayam, on seeing the students, feel: "How lucky are these students! Swami is always talking to them and moving with them." But they are not aware who are really "near" to Swami.
 Saint Thyagaraja's confession
 The saint Thyagaraja's experiences provide an illustration of the dilemma confronting devotees.
 Once while experiencing troubles and undergoing indignities from others, Thyagaraja wondered whether the troubles he had to go through were due to deficiencies in his devotion or whether Sri Rama was not potent enough to help him. Convinced about his own devotion, he attributed his troubles to Rama's inability to relieve him. Such doubts often arise in the minds of devotees.

After meditating over this matter, he realised that Rama's power was limitless and that the defect lay in his own devotion. He composed a song which described how devotion to Rama had enabled Hanuman to leap over the ocean and how it had enabled Lakshmana and Bharatha to perform heroic deeds. Thyagaraja confessed that in doubting Rama's powers he had been guilty of weakness in his devotion.

If Swami did not possess such power, is it conceivable that people would come seeking Swami's grace from distant countries like Argentina and Australia? No one issued any invitation to them.

Are they less intelligent than any of you? The fact that they have come here at great expense, prepared to put up with many inconveniences, shows the depth of their devotion.

Therefore, you should not entertain complaints against God or blame Him for your difficulties. If

Swami did not have the power, would people of different faiths and from different countries come to Him and experience their oneness? What is the Will that is able to accomplish this? If you enquire along these lines, you will discover the jejuneness of your attitudes. It is your smallmindedness, which accounts for such reactions. Therefore, develop a broad outlook and a wide vision.

All the students of our Institute of Higher Learning should prove themselves to be ideal men wherever they go. You should earn a good name from everyone.

Students who have won prizes in sports should realise that by their conduct they should earn the esteem and love of Swami. All kinds of titles are conferred on people today. But the title which all of you should aim at is that you are Amruthasya Puthraah (Children of Immortality).

Install God in your hearts and make Him the basis for all your actions. Then all your actions will become sacred. Bring a good name to your parents, to your society and to the land of your birth.

4. The Sacred Message Of A Holy Festival

The Sun appeared serenely peaceful.

The day started to get shorter.

And the chill wind blew fiercely.

The fields were ripe with the golden crop.

The farmers rejoiced in singing.

The buds of flowers blossomed

On the banks of rivers like garlands.

Farmers were bringing home the newly harvested grain.

And hailed the arrival of the sweet

Festival of Sankraanthi.

Embodiments of the Divine Aatma! Many persons in the world have expounded in different ways the nature of divinity. Even in Bharath, although from ancient times profound spiritual truths have been proclaimed and propagated, the minds of men have not turned towards the sublime. It is the minds of men that need to be changed, not their external appearances. Men are judged by their qualities, not their garments.

"Yath Dhrishyam Thannashyam" (That which is perceived is perishable). Everything associated with the phenomenal world is continually changing. That which is subject to change is impermanent. What is unchanging is the eternal. By attaching excessive value to the changing things of the world, man is making himself remote from the changeless and eternal Reality. Men should endeavour to realise the eternal and unchanging Aatma (Omni-Self).

Significance of Sun's entry into Capricorn

In a year, the Sun passes through the 12 houses of the Zodiac in 12 months. The Sun's entry into each house of the Zodiac is described as a Sankramana. Kraanthi means change. Sankraanthi means a sacred change. The Sun's entry into every house in the Zodiac is not considered as equally holy. What, then, is the reason for giving special importance and sacredness to Makara Sankramana, the entry of the Sun into Makara (Capricorn)? Besides the physical qualities associated with the Sun's movement into each house of the Zodiac, there is an inner spiritual significance relating to the Makara Sankramana.

The Sun's entry into Capricorn takes place in mid passage between the months of Margasheersha and Pushyami. In the Bhagavad Gita, Sri Krishna has declared:

"Among the months I am the month of Margasheersha." The Margasheersha month is the crown among the 12 months. What is the reason? Among the planets of the solar system, the Sun is the presiding deity. Without the Sun the life process in the world will cease. During the month of Margasheersha, the world experiences the abundance of the harvested food grains, which sustain and confer joy on the people. Every farmer's granary is filled with grain. The weather during the season is cool and pleasant. It is an appropriate time for enjoying peaceful rest. It is the time when man is free from the burdens of daily toil and can devote his time to enjoyment with his children and his cattle.

Every experience is reflection of the Inner Being

However, what is the connection between these physical comforts and the spiritual significance of this season? Man is a lover of the beautiful. He rejoices at the sight of good food. It may be asked whether this joy, which he experiences is related solely to physical things or has it an inner spiritual basis? It is not the body that experiences joy. It is the Aatma (the Indwelling Spirit).

The joy that one derives from looking at others is not related to the body but the Aatma. What the eye sees, the ear hears, the mind thinks, or the heart feels, all of them are experiences of the Aatma. The senses are only instruments. Every experience is a reflection of the Inner Being.

Only when this truth is recognised will it be possible to comprehend to some extent the nature of the Divine.

For all actions, the inspirer, the performer and the experiencer is the Sun-God. For man, caught up in a meaningless existence and going through an endless round of futile activities, the Sun-

God stands out as the exemplar of tireless and selfless service. He enjoys no respite from work.

He is above praise and censure. He carries on his duties with absolute equanimity. Everything he does is only for the well-being of the world and not for causing any harm. It is only man's senses which prove helpful or harmful to him. When man submits to his senses, they become his enemies. When man masters the senses they become his friends. Friends and enemies result from the strength or weakness of men.

Earlier, a student in his speech mentioned that to Vibhishana, who believed in God, Rama was a friend. To the unbelieving Ravana, Rama became an enemy. Hence, man's happiness or sorrow stems from his belief or disbelief.

Faith leads to God

The primary motto for man should be Sraddha (faith or trust). The ancients declared: "Believe and Live." Without Faith you cannot live happily. Only when you have the belief that one is your mother you develop love for her. Likewise, a woman loves a baby only when she feels he is her child. In the same manner, the recognition of the Divine arises from Faith.

Where there is Faith, there is Love.

Where there is Love, there is Peace.

Where there is Peace, there is Truth.

Where there is Truth, there is Bliss.

Where there is Bliss, there is God.

Thus it is Faith that reminds us of God.

All that is taught or learnt today appears to consist of pompous verbiage concerning the external world. Doubtless, there is a great deal of talk about Divinity and Spirituality. But one cannot notice in these preachers any sacred mark of Truth, Love or Peace associated with Godly men.

Are men to be esteemed for the clothes they wear, the speeches they make, or the "punditry" they display? No. The only person worthy of esteem as a wise man is the one whose actions correspond to his thoughts and words. The Divine judges men by their thoughts and motives.

God sees only the inner purity of man's motives and not his external appearance or the power and pelf he possesses. Valmiki, Nanda, Kuchela, Gajendra (the Lord of the Elephants), the child

Dhruva, the illiterate Sabari, Vidura and Hanuman are all examples of beings who enjoyed God's grace only through their devotion and not because of birth, wealth, scholarship, or any other accomplishment.

Entertain good thoughts and good feelings

What is Bhakthi (Devotion)? Bhakthi is directing one's sacred love towards God. Man gets bound by his attachment, through egoism, to the transient things of the world.

Your primary task is to discharge your duty. This does not mean renouncing worldly life or your obligations to your family. Keep your mind serene and unruffled. All the changes affect the external. They do not affect the internal experience. Entertain always good thoughts and good feelings.

In this connection, an incident from Jesus's life may serve as a good example. Jesus saw in the market place a woman who was being stoned by people around her as one who had gone astray.

Jesus approached them and said: "Oh People! you are all persecuting this woman for some physical misconduct. Think how many such sins you are committing mentally. Whoever has not committed such a sin even mentally, let him cast the first stone. All others have no right to throw stones at her!"

People go on judging who is a sinner and who is a pure person, but they should enquire within themselves how far they are sinners or meritorious. Everyone must try to keep his mind free from bad thoughts. The Sankraanthi Festival is intended to make people embark on this exercise in transformation.

Symbolism of Sankraanthi celebration

In the Dwapara Yuga the cowherds and cowherdesses used to experience boundless joy in the presence of Krishna, forgetting themselves in their devotion to the Lord. On Sankraanthi Day they used to employ cow-dung as a sacred means for cleansing purposes. They demonstrated also the inner significance of the Sankraanthi celebration. They placed three balls of cow-dung in front of their houses, fixing three pumpkin flowers on their top and went round singing and dancing in adoration of Krishna.

What is the significance of these three balls of cow-dung? People are inclined to despise cowdung.

But in the eyes of the Gopikas they were sacred. In olden days, people used to sprinkle water mixed with cow-dung in front of their houses. The cow-dung helped to destroy the bacteria in the atmosphere. The cow-dung was considered a symbol of health and happiness. The first cow-dung ball represented Krishna, who was worshipped as Gopala (the protector of cows).

Krishna was adored as the bestower of joy and health. The second cowdung ball was placed as a symbol of the Govardhana Hill which Krishna lifted and thereby demonstrated His divinity. The third cow-dung ball symbolised the cow, which is the source of health and joy for the people as the giver of milk. Gopala, Govardhana and Go (the cow) were worshipped in this manner.

Among vegetables the pumpkin has a place of honour as the largest in size. The Gopikas looked upon the pumpkin as a symbol of large-heartedness. Hence, pumpkins were offered as fitting gifts on Sankraanthi Day. What is the gain from this offering? The pumpkin does not rot quickly.

It can be preserved for a long period. Any number of edible preparations can be made from it. It can also be used in combination with many other vegetables. Because of its distinct qualities, the offer of a pumpkin also meant making an offering of one's virtues. Develop harmony towards everyone Sankraanthi is a holy day for many reasons. It was the day on which Aadhi Shankara took Sanyasa (renounced all worldly ties and donned the ochre robe). On this day it is the usual custom to offer to people a mixture of jaggery and Thil (sesame). Jaggery is sweet and is a symbol of love. Thil is also known as sneha, which means friendship. Therefore, the offer of the jaggery-thil mixture means offering to people love surcharged with friendliness. Develop harmony towards everyone. Much of what passes for friendship today consists in associating with persons when they are affluent and benefiting from their money. When they are in distress, the same persons will not even look at them. This is not friendship at all. True friendship must emanate from the heart and should remain unaffected by weal or woe. In fact, God alone can be an unfailing friend in all situations. He is with you, above you, below you, beside you and around you.

The profound message of Sankraanthi

Today people do not rely on such Divine friendship. They place their faith in the transient things of the world. The message of Sankraanthi is the promotion of love among one's kith and kin and friends by all of them coming together to celebrate this festival. It is on this day that the "Ganga" bull trainers take their decorated animals from house to house, play music in front of the homes and make the bulls demonstrate their skills before the family gatherings.

The bulls are also made to give demonstrations in the market place with a view to promoting fellow feeling and harmony. The girls in every home will take their younger brothers to such demonstrations. The trainer of these animals will be dressed in a special way and display large caste-marks on his forehead. He will carry a small whip which is used for training the bull. The bull will be taught to respond to instructions designed to promote love and happiness in the home by relating the story of the wedding of Rama and Sita. Rama and Sita represent the Omni-Self and Prakruthi (Nature) respectively. Their union is to be celebrated by the offering of one's love to the Divine couple. Thus, the performance of the sacred bull on 'Sankraanthi day conveyed a profound message to the people.

Because Sankraanthi was deemed the most important festival, it was the day on which the newlywed bridegroom visited the bride's home. It was the day on which many people called on others as a mark of goodwill. There were rejoicing in every home because of the get-together of all kinsfolk. (Swami recited a poem describing how the young girls in the family celebrated the occasion by cutting jokes and playing tricks).

The Sankraanthi festival was thus designed to promote harmony and love in the family, to make people realise the unity of the Creator and creation, to teach the people their obligation to instil heroism in them by making the Sun-God their example, and, above all, to make them realise their inherent Divinity. This is the sacred purpose of the Sankraanthi festival.

Sankraanthi festival: then and now

Today such a holy festival has been converted into a day for the enjoyment of jaggery and thil, totally missing its inner significance. People are immersed in the darkness of self-indulgence.

Rice cooked with jaggery is a special preparation for Sankraanthi day. What is the reason for this? In the olden days, this sweet rice was prepared to celebrate the gathering of the harvest and after the cows had been fed with the sweet rice, it was scattered over the fields. On the third day, all the cattle used to be decorated and taken round the bazaar in procession. For this reason, the festival was called in Tamil Nadu "Maattuppongal"--the Pongal festival of the cattle. The bull is much more than a mere quadruped. As the vehicle of Shiva, it has an honoured place in the Shiva temple as Nandi. Its eyes are always directed towards the Lord in the sanctum. The Nandi is worshipped before one enters the sanctum.

Develop faith in God and serve fellowmen

The Sankraanthi festival should be regarded as the day on which man turns his vision towards

God. Man's life may be compared to a stalk of sugar cane. Like the cane, which is hard and has many knots, life is full of difficulties. But these difficulties have to be overcome to enjoy the bliss of the Divine, just as the sugarcane has to be crushed and its juice converted into jaggery to enjoy the permanent sweetness of jaggery.

Enduring bliss can be got only by overcoming trials and tribulations. Gold cannot be made into an attractive jewel without its being subjected to the process of melting in a crucible and being beaten into the required shape. When I address devotees as Bangaaru (Golden one), I am considering you as precious beings. But only by going through the vicissitudes of life with forbearance can you become attractive jewels. You should not allow yourselves to be overwhelmed by difficulties.

Develop self-confidence and have firm faith in God. With unshakeable faith, dedicate yourselves to the service of your fellowmen and lead exemplary lives.

Today the Sun-God begins his northward journey, Uttarayana. The noble and heroic warrior Bhishma waited for fifty six days so that he could give up his life in Uttarayana.

Do your duty like the Sun

The Sun, in entering on his northward journey, hailed the Himalayas in the north as the beautiful abode of Lord Shiva. The heart should be regarded as the abode of the Lord and the vision should be turned to experience the Divine. The human heart itself symbolises the Himalayas as the abode of purity and peace.

The Sun's northward journey is a pointer to the path man should take to realise God. The Sun is the supreme example of selfless and tireless service. The world cannot survive without the Sun.

Life on earth is possible only because of the Sun. The Sun teaches man the lesson of humble devotion to duty, without any conceit. The Sun is the supreme example for everyone that he should do his duty with devotion and dedication. Doing one's duty is the greatest Yoga, as pointed out by Krishna in the Gita. Let your actions and thoughts be good. You will then experience the Bliss Divine.

Sankraanthi is intended to bring about various changes in man's attitude so that he may sanctify his life. It is a festival not intended for Bharathiyas alone. Its message has a meaning for everyone in the world. It has a message for people of all climes, creeds and countries. Kraanthi

(change) and Shanthi (peace) both reside in the heart. You need not search for them in the outside world. Discover them within you. This is your duty. Serve your parents and society. Lead a Godly life, dedicating all your actions to God. Live in Love!

Poornachandra Auditorium Sankraanthi Day, 15 Jan 1992

What exactly is the cause of all grief? It is the attachment to the body that produces grief as well as its immediate precursors:

affection and hate. These two are the results of the intellect considering some things and conditions as beneficial, and some other things and conditions as harmful. This is a delusion, this idea of beneficence and malevolence. Still you get attached to objects that are considered beneficial, and you start hating the others. But, from the highest point of view, there is neither. The distinction is just meaningless. There is no two at all. How can there be good and bad then? To see two where there is only one, that is delusion or ignorance. The ignorance that plunged Arjuna into grief was of this nature-- seeing many, when there is only ONE.

5. Graama Seva is Rama Seva

Union is strength,

With unity anything can be achieved,

Like ants which collectively

Can destroy even a python.
The honour of a community Rests on its morality.
Without morality the community
Loses its honour and name.
Only that can be called a community
In which morality is cherished.
Hearken! You noble sons of Bharath
To this profound truth.
Embodiments of the Divine Spirit! Village Officers who have gathered here! If an individual is to progress, or a village is to develop or a nation is to be prosperous, social consciousness and the sense of unity are essential. Unity protects man. Disunity makes man a prey to worries of all kinds. "Sanghe bali Kali Yuge" (In union lies strength in the Kali Age). This adage proclaims that there is no greater strength than that derived from unity.
When we recall the past history of Bharath, we find that various invaders--Muslims, the Portuguese, the French and the British---overran the country and tried to change the ancient culture and institutions of the country. The nation did not lack men of valour or scholarship or eminent political leaders or men of science. But because there was no unity amongst them, the nation was subjected to various calamities.
Unity is the supreme need for Bharathiyas Unity should be the supreme watchword for Bharathiyas. Freedom was achieved but not unity.
This is because of the steady eclipse of an all-embracing vision.
Parochial fanaticism, caste and religious dissension, and selfish and self-centred ambitions have combined to degrade human qualities to their nadir. Another potent factor responsible for the moral decline in the country is the absence of a feeling of national oneness and the regard for a common national culture.
In the Mahabharatha, Dharmaraja once made a significant declaration. He said, "When an outsider attacks our country, we will all stand as one, all the 105 of us (the hundred Kauravas and the five Pandava brothers). But when there are internal differences, only the five of us will be together." The lesson of this statement is that when the national interests are at stake, all in the country should be united as brothers. All should work in unison, but in matters affecting individuals, differences may remain.
The four pillars of national edifice
The situation in the country today demands that all Bharathiyas should unite as brothers to strive for the progress, the prosperity and the well-being of the nation. This means that in the interests of the nation and the society, four things are essential: Equality, Unity, Co-operation and Fraternity. These are like four pillars of the national edifice. If any one of these is absent, the edifice will collapse. Hence, the people should cherish equality and unity.

For the divinity inherent in man, man himself is the authority. The term "Man" is derived from the term "Mind." Mind means an aggregation of thoughts. And thoughts account for the joys and sorrows experienced in daily life. Hence, it is only when the mind is filled with pure thoughts that human existence becomes meaningful.
When the headman in a village deems himself a servant of the village, he will be able to render selfless service. Can a person obsessed with power have a pure heart?
No. Hence, the village
chief should become the servant of the village.
The village officials are like a bridge between the Government and the people. It is only when this bridge is safe and sound that there can be good relations between the Government and the people.
When we speak about village officials, we should remember that in the villages Graama Adhikari (village officer) means one who has no antipathy towards anyone in the village. He is one who treats all alike. It is only when such terms are understood properly and people act accordingly that a person leads a meaningful existence.
On the vast ocean, countless waves appear. Each wave appears different from another. But despite these differences the waves are not different from the ocean.
The waves arise from the ocean and are of the same stuff as the ocean. Likewise, although human beings appear different from each other, it has to be realised that all of them have emerged from the ocean of Sath-chithananda.
Forgetting this truth and identifying themselves with the impermanent body, many are falling a prey to various troubles. For people who are caught up in the coils of mundane desires and pursuits, the beacon of spirituality is showing the path to emancipation. Spirituality is fundamental for man to reveal to him the means for the blossoming of his qualities.
Look upon the entire mankind as one family
Spirituality, however, does not mean leading a solitary, ascetic life.
Spirituality means looking upon the whole of mankind as one family and realising the unity in diversity. This is the essence of Indian Culture.

This ancient culture, rooted in the villages, spread over the years to the cities. Today the situation is reversed. The practices of the cities are spreading to the villages. Modern education and modern ways of living cannot serve to improve the quality of life. People must ponder over the values of the culture that has come down to us from ancient times.

The well-being of the village determines the well-being of the nation. By providing the essential amenities for the people in the villages, promoting mutual co-operation amongst them and developing fraternal feelings among them, the progress of the village has to be ensured. At the individual level, there may be differences. But these should be set aside and all efforts concentrated on the development of the village as a whole.

When rain falls from the sky, the rain water is totally pure. But depending on the nature of the place where it falls, the name and form of the water become various. Likewise, there may be diversity among men on account of regional and other factors, but the historical reasons for this diversity will have to be borne in mind. Conduct yourselves in an ideal and sacred manner. Embodiments of Divine Love! It is only when you equip yourselves well as village officials that the villagers will enjoy peace and prosperity. What is past is past. But the future is dependent on what you do in the present. Your actions in the present will determine the shape of things in the future. If you wish to secure a great future, you have to conduct yourselves in the present in an ideal and sacred manner.

If today such a large number of village officers have gathered here for a training programme, it must be regarded as an exemplary occasion. There may be differences and problems of various kinds among you as individuals. But setting them aside, you should concentrate on the promotion of national well-being. Regard the nation's welfare as your welfare. Entertain the sacred feeling that the nation's good is your good. There can be no nobler feeling than this for a human being.

The true mark of a human being is the cultivation of a broad outlook. When you have such a vision, you can transform the national scene. The nation's welfare depends on the individual. The individual's welfare depends on the family. The welfare of the family is bound up with the condition of the village and so on right up to the national level. At the base of all is the individual.

And only when all the individuals in a community act in unison can the society progress.

Unity, is, therefore, the essential means for accomplishing anything. Today senior officers from the district and the State capital and several Ministers have come here to launch this vital programme. I desire that all of you should extend your wholehearted co-operation to them so that the villages in this district may serve as an ideal example to the rest of the State.

There should be no place for factions. You must take note of one important factor. There are in the villages many factions and rival groups. Village officers should see that there is no room for these divisive forces. Today, in every village there are several factions. This is not good at all. The man who does not feel that this is his Motherland and has no love for his country or mother tongue is a soulless corpse.

Every villager should feel proud of his village and feel himself one with everyone else in the village. You must strive your best to promote such a sense of unity.

The Minister admitted that the remuneration that was being offered to you is meagre. But you should not be swayed by this factor. When you discharge your duties well, your remuneration also will improve. Regardless of the remuneration, you must dedicate yourselves to the development of your respective villages. Whatever amenities you may need for doing your work, you should not resort to senseless methods like strikes for securing redress. Resorting to such methods means causing harm to the villages for securing selfish gains. Bandhs and strikes have become utterly senseless actions causing a great deal of inconvenience to the public. There is nothing heroic about these forms of agitation. They are disrupting the political fabric. If the village officers act with courage and devotion today, they can do a great deal of good to the people.

The role of village headmen. Act with courage and dedication to ensure the prosperity of the villages and strive to earn a good name for yourselves. This is the foremost task before you. In olden days, the village headman was regarded with great respect and looked upon as "the Lion of the village." This does not mean that he was lording over the villagers and terrorising them. Rather, he was their protector as the chief of the village.

Sri Diwakar Reddy (the Revenue Minister) said that the village officer was to the village what the Collector was for the district and a Minister was for the State. He has to properly discharge his duties with regard to collection of taxes and other matters. Village officers should consider themselves fortunate that this position has been conferred on them. They have to live up to the responsibility entrusted to them. If they pride themselves on their official status and ignore their responsibilities, they will be guilty of treason to the village and the nation.

Rights and duties are like two wheels of a cart

Men have both duties and rights, but today they are more concerned about rights than duties.

Rights and duties are like the two wheels of a cart or the two wings of a bird. Both are essential.

When duties are discharged properly, rights will be secured of their own accord. If everyone examines within himself how far he is carrying out his duties, he will realise how his rights are also protected.

In ancient times, when there were no minister or district officials, the village headman was all in all. He cared for the welfare of the villagers and the villagers lived in unity and harmony. Today, every family appears to be a house divided. There is no unity. If the five fingers in a hand do not function in unity, the hand will be useless. There are five qualities in man: Sathya, Dharma, Shanthi, Prema and Ahimsa (Truth, Right conduct, Peace, Love and Non-violence). These human qualities have to be fostered. Today peace is absent because fear of sin and love of God have declined and man has degraded himself. If we have fear of sin, love of God and morality in society, mankind will be truly human and there will be harmony in society.

When you cultivate human qualities like compassion and love and act in unison with a sense of mutual regard and friendliness, you can render valuable service to the people. By your performance, you must make Anantapur district an example and an ideal for the whole of India.

Graama Seva is Rama Seva (Service to the village is service to God). There is no value in worshipping Rama if you do not serve your Graama (village) well. But if they have not installed Rama in their hearts, what use is there in building a temple for Rama? Sanctify your hearts and make the village a shrine in your hearts for the Lord. When you make service to the village your service to Sri Rama, you will be promoting your welfare in every way, economically, socially, morally and spiritually. You need not strive for salvation as a separate goal. Service to the village will itself ensure Mukthi (liberation). Bear this truth in mind and act up to it in your daily life.

This is my message to all of you. I wish you all happiness, peace and prosperity.

Address to Village Administrative Officers from Anantapur district in the Institute Auditorium at

When man is able to master the senses, and direct them along more beneficent channels--the eye seeing God's footprints in stars and rose petals, the ear hearing God's voice in the throats of birds and peals of thunder, the tongue tasting God's sweetness in all that appeals to it; the nose discovering fragrance in everything that recalls the glory of God, the sense of touch content to clasp the hand of the forlorn and the distressed as the beloved children of God -- then, he can visualise the God installed in the cavity of the heart; that is the lesson the five-hooded Sesha (divine serpent) imparts!

Sathya Sai Baba

6. The Mansion Of Life

You do not need a lamp

To see a lamp that is burning brilliantly.

Likewise there is no need for Any other knowledge to know the One

Who is the very embodiment of all knowledge.

When birds and beasts that have known no education

Lead regulated lives, it is a pity

That an intelligent human being

Does not have this sense.

Students! Embodiments of Divine Love! Life is a four-storied mansion. For any edifice to be strong, the foundation has to be strong. The mansion is visible to the beholders. Its architecture is attractive and pleasing. But the foundation has no such attractions.

Nevertheless the safety of the mansion depends on the strength of the foundation. Every part of the mansion may have its own attractive feature. But the foundation has no feeling of pride about its being the base on which the mansion stands nor does it desire that anyone should take notice of it. The foundation is unaffected by praise or blame.

The four floors of the mansion of life

The first floor of the mansion (of life) is Brahmacharya (celibacy).

The second floor is the Grihastha (householder) stage. The third is Vaanaprastha (recluse).

The fourth is the stage of Sanyasa (renunciant).

Many persons pass through all the four stages. Some go through only three of them and some others only two. But irrespective of the number of stages, the foundation is the base.

The first stage (or floor) is that of Brahmacharya. You students who are in the first floor of the mansion of life have to ensure the firmness of the foundation. This foundation consists of humility, reverence, morality and integrity. The strength of the foundation depends on these four constituents.

Unfortunately, the nation today is affected by the consequences of seven grievous sins. The first is business without morality. The second is politics without principle; third, education without character; fourth, worship without sacrifice; fifth, wealth without hard work; sixth, human existence without regard for scriptures; seventh, devotion without austerity. These are the seven deadly sins that are ravaging the nation. The country will regain prosperity and peace only when all these are banished and we have morality in business, principles in politics, educated men who have character and work is the basis of wealth. The mansion of man's life should be built on these virtues. But unfortunately today morality and integrity have declined and the spirit of sacrifice is on the wane.

Because these qualities are lacking among students, the nation is suffering from disorders and violence.

Although these statements may not be quite palatable to the students to hear, they should realise what the public feels about the present situation.

The actor should relate strictly to his role

Anyone's thoughts and actions should be related to the role he has to play. If there is no such correspondence between one's role and one's conduct, the social fabric will be shaken.

Once upon a time a strolling actor, Pagati Veshagaadu, presented himself before a king in the role of Aadhi Sankaracharya. The king, welcoming the Acharya, gave him an honoured seat and enquired about his welfare. In keeping with his role, the visiting actor recited a stanza. "Birth is sorrow, old age is a curse, marriage brings sorrow. The end is the most sorrowful of all; therefore, beware! beware! There is no mother or father, friend or kinsman. Neither wealth nor home abides. Therefore, beware! beware !" He preached in this manner the truth about the ephemeral nature of human existence. At the end, before the

"Sankaracharya" was leaving, the king offered him gold coins in a silver plate. He told the king: "I don't accept this." He declared that immortality can be attained only by sacrifice and not by karmas, wealth or progeny as stated in the Upanishadic stanza: "Thyage Neike Amrithathwam Aanashuh." He left the palace, informing the king that he would present himself the next day in a different role.

The next day he appeared as a well-dressed danseuse and danced before the king in his audience chamber. The dance was so superb that the entire audience was enraptured. The king offered the dancer a plateful of gold coins. The "danseuse" said that what was offered was too meagre and asked for more. The king said: "Yesterday you refused to take the gold coins I offered. Today you say these are too meagre. What is the mystery behind these different attitudes?"

The actor replied, "The behaviour is in accord with the role.

Yesterday I appeared in the role of Sankaracharya and I behaved as Sankaracharya would have done.

Today I have come as a dancer and I am behaving as a dancer would."

The inner meaning of this story is that when people do not act according to their roles in the different stages in life--Brahmacharya, Grihastha, Vaanaprastha and Sanyasa---the nation will be morally ruined.

Students and teachers should act up to their roles

It is only when students conduct themselves according to the role assigned to them that they will acquit themselves well as students. If they do not behave properly as students, the culture and traditions of the entire community are undermined. Likewise, if teachers do not act up to their roles as teachers, the good name of the teaching profession is tarnished.

When householders do not discharge the duties of householders, they bring the Grihastha tradition itself into bad repute.

Divine operates to reduce the burdens of people

Whatever the role one has to play at any place or time, and in any capacity, he has to act up to that role properly. It will be seen from the Puranas that this principle applies to the Divine also

(when the Divine appears in human form). This may be illustrated by a small story from Sri Krishna's life in the Dwapara Yuga. Once a Gopika went to a well to bring two pitchers of water.

After placing one pitcher on her head, she wanted someone to place the other water-filled pitcher on the first one. At that time, Krishna came there and she asked him to place the water-filled pitcher on the first one. Krishna refused to do so. Soon another Gopika came along and helped the first Gopika. The Gopika carrying the two pitchers reached her home.

Krishna followed her to the house and without even waiting to be asked, he took the top pitcher from the Gopika's head and placed it down. She was surprised at Krishna's strange behaviour.

She asked him, "Krishna, at the well, you refused to place the pitcher on my head when I appealed to you to help me. Now you take it down from the head without my asking. What is the inner meaning of this action?" Krishna replied, "Oh Gopika! I am wont to remove the burdens borne by people and not to add to them."

This shows that the Divine operates only to reduce the burdens of the people and not to increase them. It means that there are rules which govern the role which each one has to play in life. Men, however, find it difficult to act upon this truth.

Man is a seeker of happiness. He is essentially the repository of happiness. But not realising this truth about himself, man goes after happiness all over the world. He pursues studies in the belief that scholarship will give him happiness. But happiness eludes him. He tries to find happiness in work and fails to get it. Seeking happiness in married life, he meets with disappointment. Nor does he get it through children. Then he gets absorbed in the acquisition of wealth in the belief that wealth will give him the means of securing happiness. At the end of it all, he finds himself a pitiful creature when the wealth he acquired is either stolen or misused by his profligate progeny.

He then realises that all his earlier efforts to secure happiness gave him only some temporary satisfaction but not any lasting joy. A wealthy man behaves like a dog in the manger. He will neither enjoy his wealth nor give it for good causes. A rich man should realise that sacrifice should be the hallmark of a wealthy man and that true happiness is to be got through sacrifice.

The five kinds of afflictions

What is it that prevents man from securing enduring happiness? There are five kinds of Kleshas (sufferings) which stand in the way. The first one is Avidya (ignorance). Asthitha-Klesha (unsteadiness) is another. Abhinivesha-Klesha (immaturity) is another. Raaga-Klesha

Avidya (ignorance) is one kind of suffering. What is this ignorance? In the scriptures, the question is asked: "Who is a murkha (fool)?" The answer is given: "One who identifies himself with the body." By this kind of identification the foolish one forgets his true nature. The day he realises that he is not the body but the eternal Indwelling Spirit, that day he experiences true bliss. The body, the mind and the intellect are all instruments. These are called Karanas. It is a sign of ignorance to identify one's Self with these instruments.

Avidya-Klesha is the suffering arising out of ignorance. As long as man has a body, he experiences various kinds of sorrow.

What is the saga of this body? "In childhood, the young lad sports with his companions. In youth he falls a prey to sensuous enjoyment. In middle age he is lost in the pursuit of wealth. Unable to give up attachments, he is caught up in the cage of karma (action and reaction), and at the end he returns to the dust." This is the real truth about the body. Man is thus pursued by a myriad sorrows because of his identification with the body.

Mind is the cause of all desires and pains

The second Klesha is Abhinivesha-Klesha. For all kinds of desires and pains the cause is the mind. All desires arise in the mind. When desires are not fulfilled, hatred arises. If the desires are realised, the man loses his mental balance. Failing to realise how the mind is the cause of sorrow and giving a free rein to desires is Abhinivesha-Klesha (suffering due to mental infirmity). Only when man is able to give up desires and disregard the mind, which is the cause of desires, will he be able to experience Ananda (bliss).

The third is, Asthitha-Klesha (suffering due to unsteadiness). This suffering arises from an insatiable appetite for all kinds of things. It is the result of one being immersed in the vagaries of the senses. To regard as enduring the sensuous pleasures which are impermanent is the cause of this type of suffering.

Raaga-Klesha refers to the suffering arising out of attachment of all kinds. All other evil tendencies in man like hatred, envy, etc., have their root in Raaga. It is this attachment which ruins the entire life of man. There should be a limit to one's attachment to persons and things.

Excessive attachment is the cause of sorrow. Man is unable to derive happiness from excessive possessions.

Dweshha-Klesha (the suffering caused by hatred) arises when a man fails to obtain what he seeks from someone. This is the result of selfishness and self-seeking.

Every action begets a corresponding reaction

Man's failure to secure happiness is due to these five factors. You are today in the stage of students--the first storey in the mansion of life. When you arm yourselves with adequate safeguard at this stage, the rest of your journey will be safe and secure. The basic qualities required for the successful completion of the other three Ashramas (stages) in life will have to be acquired now itself. If in the stage of Brahmacharya (celibate studentship) you do not acquire these qualities, the other stages in your life will be mined.

Students! Having in view your future, you have to make right use of the present and follow the right path. You are allowing yourselves to drift from moment to moment. You are giving way to the attractions of the moment, failing to comprehend what is transient and what is permanent.

You are laying up endless troubles for the future.

The Lord created everything in the Universe, but kept nothing for Himself. Every creature has been given complete freedom. Everyone is free to enjoy anything he likes. But there is one limitation. For every action, there is a corresponding reaction. You are free to do as you please subject to this rule. If you use the freedom given to you to indulge in wrongful acts, the consequences are bound to be bad. These results are not caused by God but are the fruits of your own actions. The Lord inflicts no harm on anybody. Everything that happens to you is the consequence of your own thoughts and actions.

Prabhaava and Swabhaava

Students! Lured by the external, man is forgetting his true nature. The Prabhaava (external trappings) are the products of Praarabdham (past action). The observance of Purusharthas (the practices prescribed for the different stages) determines one's Swabhaava (nature). Prabhaava is momentary and evanescent. Swabhaava is enduring. Today, the permanent and the enduring is being ignored, while the transient and the trivial are being pursued assiduously. The consequences of this misplaced effort are inescapable.

This freedom given by the Divine to man should be exercised with a due sense of detachment.

Examine for a moment how various objects in creation are conducting themselves. For instance, a tree bears sweet fruits. But it does not enjoy the fruits itself. It offers them to others for enjoyment. What a spirit of sacrifice is displayed by the tree! The Lord created the rivers. But the rivers do not use for their own benefit even a drop of their water. The water is offered to those who seek it. Likewise, the cow does not consume the milk it produces, but offers it to its calf and to others.

Selfishness is the worst disease of man

But man, despite all his intelligence and knowledge, does not exhibit this sense of sacrifice. He keeps all that he earns for the benefit of himself and his kith and kin and makes no sacrifice at all. Consequently, man is haunted by all kinds of troubles. He is a victim of many diseases.

Neither birds nor beasts are subject to such afflictions. They are content to live on whatever they can get. But man consumes a variety of foods and invites a variety of maladies.

The worst disease to which man is subject is selfishness. Only when man is able to rid himself of selfishness will he be able to understand the meaning of life and experience real Divine bliss.

Birds, beasts and trees display the spirit of sacrifice. Man alone is the exception. When man is animated by sacrifice, he will become sublime. If selfishness grows, he loses his radiance and vitality.

The lesson provided by three great devotees

The life-stories of three great devotees--Thyagaraja, Goparaju (Ramadas) and Potharaju (the author of the Telugu Bhagavatham)--show what sacrifices they were prepared to make out of their devotion to the Lord. They were totally indifferent to material gains in their love for the

These three devotees by their sacrifices made themselves Rajus (rulers) of the world. This means that only those who make the highest sacrifice are entitled to be called Rajus (monarchs). Today, only the wealthy are regarded as "kings." But real kings are those who are prepared to make every kind of sacrifice. At Rishikesh, the sadhus are greeted by the pilgrims as Maharaj. In the eyes of the devotees, only those who have given up everything are entitled to be called Maharajas. Maharaja means King of Kings. The term is appropriate only for the person who makes the greatest sacrifice.

It is a pity that today people are wasting their lives in the pursuit of meaningless desires. The true purpose of education is to make one recognise truth. The rationale of education consists in the quest for truth. Realisation of Truth is the Goal. "Sathyasya Sathyam" (The Truth of Truths) is how God has been defined.

Students! While you are acting the role of students, you should conduct yourselves according to the role of Vidyaarthi (those who have to seek knowledge) and not behave as Vishayaarthi (seekers of sensuous pleasures). Otherwise, you will be degrading yourselves.

Humility is the hallmark of true education. Truth and integrity are essential qualities for students.

The means to acquire these qualities is devotion to God. Without these attainments, education is a futile exercise.

You all know how the village folk and the tribal population lead more virtuous lives than most "educated" persons. Immoral practices are on the increase in places where there are colleges, universities and courts. More honesty and integrity and compassion and fellow-feeling seem to prevail among the people in the remote forest areas. The "educated" are doing more harm to society today than the uneducated.

Compassion is the greatest wealth

This is not proper education. You must set an example to the world. You must correct your faults and avoid committing them in the future. Love God and earn His love. Redeem your lives by developing compassion and kindness. All other accomplishments and sadhanas are of no avail.

Compassion is the greatest wealth. Purity of heart comes foremost. Students should take note of two things. One is the health of your body depends on the purity of your blood. The other is: you can always enjoy real bliss as long as your devotion is pure and unsullied. With purity of body and mind, you are assured of the highest bliss. When you have achieved this, you can carry on your normal lives with ease.

Because of the uniqueness of our University, you have to demonstrate its exemplary character.

You have to take in whatever good things you can from others, but you should lead your own ideal life. This is the lesson to be learnt from a tree, which draws its sustenance from the soil, the water, the air, and the sun, but remains true to its own nature as a tree. Surrender yourselves to God and not to anyone else.

Discourse at the Institute Auditorium after the distribution of prizes to Secondary School students who had participated in the Annual Sports and Cultural Meet in January. 20 Feb 1992

Elation at profit, joy and cheer, dejection at loss and misery, these are the natural characteristics common to all mortals. What, then, is the excellence of the Sadhaka? He should not forget the principle, "Be vigilant and suffer the inevitable, gladly." When difficulties and losses overwhelm you, do not lose heart and precipitate some action but meditate calmly on how they ever came to be. Try to discover simple means of overcoming them or avoiding them in an atmosphere of Shanthi.

Sathya Sai Baba

7. Power Of The Divine Name

When rains fall, if seeds have not been sown,
Will there be any crop in the field?
If seeds are sown, but there is no rain
Will any crop come up in the field?
Both rain and seeds are needed
For the harvest to be reaped.
Likewise, Divine Grace will bear fruit
Only when there is also human effort,
When the thoughts in the mind are good
They will be reflected in the actions;
When the thoughts are ill-disposed
The fruits thereof will be equally bad.

Embodiments of Divine Love! The world is based on three entities: Fire, the Sun and the Moon.

No one can deny the existence of these three. "Hethu Krisaanu Bhaanu Himakarathe." Krisaanu means the Fire principle. Bhaanu refers to the Sun and Himakara refers to the Moon. The combination of these three attracts and sustains all beings in the world. They give pleasure, provoke wonder and also delude men. Because they give pleasure, the three are called "Rama."

In the word "Rama" there are three sounds: Ra, Aa, Ma. "Ra" refers to Agni (Fire). "Aa" refers to the Sun and "Ma" refers to the Moon. The combination of these three entities represents the "Rama Principle."

The name is fundamental for all objects
All objects in the world can be cognised by name and form and nothing else. All objects are identified by their names. The form is derived from the name. Hence, for everything in the world, the name is primary and fundamental.

The Divine Name is highly potent. Even the wish-fulfilling celestial cow, Kama Dhenu, when it is tethered to the post, comes under control. Likewise, when the Supreme Lord, the Indweller in all hearts, is bound by the rope of Bhakthi (devotion) and tethered to the post of the tongue, He gets bound to the devotee. There are only two means by which the

enjoyed, namely, through the name and through Love. The name can be "Rama," "Hari" or

"Hara" or any other name, because the All-pervading Divine bears all names.

The name "Rama" is not confined only to the son of Dasaratha. The Aatma that confers bliss is known as Rama. The sage Vasishta gave the name Rama to Emperor Dasaratha's son. The name Rama symbolises the universal attributes of the Divine such as omniscience, omnipotence and omnifelicity.

The sage Valmiki composed the Ramayana in a hundred crores (a thousand billion) of stanzas.

He prayed to the Lord that the stanzas should be divided equally among the denizens of the three worlds. When the stanzas were thus divided and distributed, one stanza of 32 syllables alone remained. After 30 syllables were equally divided, only two syllables remained undistributed.

These two syllables have become the names of the Divine such as Rama, Had, Hara and Saayee.

These names can be recited by people of any country or faith. They are not confined exclusively to any faith or country. Any person with a pure and loving heart can recite any of these names.

No blame will attach to him.

Divine Name can convert poison to nectar

The potency of the Divine Name is such that it can convert even poison into nectar. This is illustrated by an episode from the life of Meera. She was a queen. But she was so much absorbed in her devotion to Krishna that she would sing and dance with ecstasy unmindful of whether she was in a palace or in a crowded bazaar. Her brother-in-law, who was incensed at such conduct in public places by the queen, was not aware of what true devotion meant. Meera had no body consciousness at all. A true devotee should be totally free from the sense of "I" and "Mine."

Feeling that Meera's conduct was casting a slur on the royal family's prestige and reputation, her brother-in-law decided to do away with her by giving her a cup of milk mixed with poison.

Having dedicated herself heart and soul to Krishna, Meera used to take any food only after offering it to Krishna. When she offered the milk given to her to Krishna before drinking it, the Lord accepted all the poison in it and made the entire milk pure. In this way, Meera demonstrated to the world the power of the Lord's name and the greatness of devotion to the Lord.

Very few in the world try to find out how the Name emerged, how it is to be pronounced and what is its potency. The authority for and exponent of the glory of the Lord's name is the Bhagavatham.

From the navel to the tongue

Yasoda did not know where Balarama and Krishna were born. She brought them up as her own children. They were born in Mathura, but grew up in Gokulam. They grew in the womb of Devaki (the wife of Vasudheva). But they lived and played in Yasoda's house.

When we try to explore the inner meaning of these events, we realise the Divine story unfolded by them. Balarama and Krishna were both in Mathura. Mathura signifies the navel. Devaki represents the Divine Shakthi. The Naadam (Divine sound) represented by the names Balarama and Krishna emerging from the womb of the Divine Shakthi, proceeding to Gokulam, represented by the mouth, was playing on the tongue, represented by Yasoda. "Rama" signifies one who gives delight. "Krishna" means one who attracts.

The Divine name thus has its origin in the navel and its sacredness should be safeguarded when it is uttered by the tongue. Thus, Nama-smarana, remembrance of the name of the Lord, implies chanting the name from one's inmost being and preserving its sacredness.

What is the significance of the word Nama? "Na + Aa + Ma," according to the science of numerology, amounts to a total of 7. Na=0, Aa=2, Ma=5. The total is 7. Seven is associated with the Sapthasvaras in music (Sa, Ri, Ga, Ma, Pa, Da, Ni). The Sun's rays are made up of seven colours. There are seven oceans in the world. The supreme sages are seven in number Saptharishis. It is significant that certain religious observances are spread over seven days----

Sapthaaham.

Potency of Rama-Nama

The name "Rama" has a unique spiritual significance. "Ra" represents the Paramaatma, "Ma" represents the individual soul and "Aa" brings the two together. The Divine Name thus demonstrates the unifying principle.

The Puranas relate a story regarding the potency of the Rama name. Once Easwara wanted to choose a leader for the host of ganas (Divine entities). Gana refers to the Devas. Easwara summoned all the deities and told them that whoever amongst them goes round the earth quickest will be made the leader of the Deva ganas. The different deities got on to their respective vehicles and set out on the round-the-world trip.

Ganapathi, the elder son of Easwara, was one of them. He was originally called "Lambodhara" because of his big belly. His vehicle was a rat. Sitting on the rodent Lambodhara entered the race to go round the world. On his way, Narada saw him and enquired about his mission. Lambodhara was put out by the facts that a lone

Brahmin had confronted him in his trip and put the inauspicious question as to where he was going. He feared that his trip would be a failure. Narada approached

Lambodhara with a smile and told him that he was well aware of Lambodhara's mission. But, he declared that only if Lambodhara acted up to the Vedic injunctions would he be successful in his mission. Narada explained what this Vedic injunction was. All the Vedas have extolled the potency of the Lord's name. "As a vast banyan tree is potentially immanent in a little seed, the entire universe is potentially contained in the Lord's name. The cosmos is, therefore, not different from the Name.

If you go round the Name, you will have gone round the world. If the deities object to this claim,

I shall bear witness on your behalf," declared Narada.

How Lambodhara became Ganapathi

Lambodhara said: "Well, if that is so, what is that name?" Narada replied: "I shall impart that name to you only if you are prepared to carry out my words." "Yes, I shall do so implicitly," said Lambodhara. "Write the two letters "Ra" and "Ma" and go round them. Then go back to Easwara," said Narada. "This is the name which delights the universe. The entire world is contained within this name. Going round the name is equivalent to going round the world," declared Narada.

Lambodhara acted according to Narada's advice and went back to Easwara. As the one who had found the truth about the potency of the Rama name, Lambodhara became the chief of the Ganas and got the name Ganapathi (the chief of the Divine entities).

Easwara blessed his son with the words: "As the chief of the Ganas, you will be the first deity to be worshipped on all auspicious occasions and at all religious ceremonies before the commencement of the functions."

This is the inner meaning of the worship of Ganapathi at all religious functions. Ganapathi is also called "Siddhi Ganapathi" and "Buddhi Ganapathi." Ganapathi is noted for His acute intelligence. "Siddhi" and "Buddhi" are His powers. Because He possesses these powers and is capable of ensuring that any undertaking is carried out without impediments, He is known as the remover of obstacles--Vighneswara.

Consider how Ganapathi got his overlordship of the Ganas. It was solely through the name of the Lord. How potent is this name can be explored by you.

Entire cosmos rests on the basis of Name

In the name "Rama," the three deities--Agni, Sun and Moon--are present. From where have these three deities originated? The Sun has the power to scorch the earth from millions of miles away.

Who are the parents of the Sun? Should they not be even more powerful than the Sun? There is, then, the Fire principle. Fire can destroy anything. Who are the parents of Agni? The Moon is the source of coolness and light. Who are the parents of the Moon? If the enquiry is made regarding the parents of these three powerful entities, it will be found that God is the parent.

Everything has come from God. The common people do not make this basic enquiry into the root cause of all things. Nothing can exist without a basis. Even scientists are now engaged in trying to discover this basis. In fact, the Name is the basis and the entire cosmos rests on it. The Name is the easiest means to identify anything or any person. Hence, the best way to recognise

God and envisage His form is through the Name. The Name is always auspicious.

Every human being experiences three kinds of night. One is a moon-lit night. A second is a dark night. The third is a night half-dark and half-lit by the moon. But, apart from these three, there is one night which is more sacred and unique. That is Shivarathri. This is the night devoted to the chanting of the sacred name of Shiva. This means that the entire night should be devoted to recitation of the auspicious name of Shiva.

God is one and one only

Unfortunately, in this Kali Age, people observe the vigil of Shivarathri by seeing three cinema shows all through the night or playing cards or seeing some dramas. This cannot be called

"Shivarathri." What is true vigil on Shivarathri night? It is to devote every moment of the night to thoughts of God and recite His name. This alone is Shivarathri.

Shiva means auspicious, not

Easwara. God has innumerable names. There is no difference at all between Hari and Hara. The differences between the two names have been created by Vaishnavites and Shaivites, but God has no such sectarian differences. God is one and one only. There may be many names and forms but Divinity is one alone.

Many worshippers go to Tirupathi. Vaishnavites repeat the name: "Venkataramana, Venkataramana!" They derive satisfaction from repeating this name. Ramana is favoured by Vaishnavites. They carry a mark of three vertical lines on their foreheads. Shaivites go to the Thirumula temple and repeat the name: "Venkateshvara, Venkateshvara." They derive some satisfaction from using the word Easwara. The Shaivites carry on their foreheads three horizontal lines of vibhuthi. These marks are the difference between the two sects. But the Lord in the temple is one and the same, whether he is called Venkataramana or Venkateswara.

Meaning of the four weapons in Vishnu's hands

Moreover, Vaishnavites consider that Vishnu carries four insignia in His four hands--Sanka (conch), Chakra (discus), Gadha (mace) and Padma (lotus). The conch is a symbol of sound.

This means that the entire universe is in God's hand. The chakra (discus) symbolises the Wheel of Time. The inner significance of this is that God holds Time in His grip. The lotus is a symbol of the heart. God holds in His hand the hearts of all beings. The mace is a symbol of prowess.

God is the possessor of all power and strength. This is the esoteric meaning of the weapons attributed to Vishnu.

Easwara bears in one hand a Damaruka (kettledrum). In another hand He carries a conch. The kettledrum symbolises sound. In another hand, Easwara carries a trident, which symbolises the three aspects of Time--the past, the present and the future. Thus, Easwara is also Lord of Sound and Time.

When the attributes of the Divine are studied in this manner, it will be found that divinity in any name or form bears all the attributes and potencies. Among the glorious attributes of the Divine, Sadhaashivamayee (perpetual auspiciousness) is one.

Comprehending the significance of the name, eschewing all differences, remembering the glories of the Lord, people should sanctify their lives by utilising the sacred days like Shivarathri for the purpose intended by Bharathiya tradition.

Embodiments of the Divine Aatma! Remember that the Indwelling Spirit in everyone is the same Divine. He is called Hridayavaasi---the dweller in the Heart.

You must consider the distinction between mind and heart. Heart refers to the blood-pumping organ in the body. This heart produces pure blood and circulates it to every part of the body. The Mind is not related to the body. It transcends the body. It is associated with the Universal Consciousness. There are two other agencies: the Buddhi and the Medhas. The Medhas is the agency that controls all Indriyas (organs). It is described as the "Control room." Buddhi, however, is not related to the body. The Medhas is related to the Indriyas (the instruments of perception and action). "Buddhigraahyam atheendhriyam," it is said. The Buddhi transcends the Indriyas. When a person says, "My Buddhi was preoccupied with something else," it shows that the Buddhi is beyond the body. Hence, both the mind and Buddhi are related to the Aatma and not the body.

Men are accustomed to treat the mind as part of the body. This relates only to the sensory activities of the mind. This mind is made up of thoughts and doubts. But the mind that is associated with the Divine Aatma transcends the body. Consequently, it is only when the ordinary thought processes are extinguished that the divinity within can be experienced. The consciousness that goes beyond thought is a reflection of the Aatma.

The Aatma, the Buddhi and the mind are three in one. This unified consciousness transcends the sense of "I" and "Mine." It may be called Aham. Aham means Consciousness. In the Aatma, the Aham abides as a subtle entity. When the Aham acquires a form, it becomes Ahamkaara, the Ego. The distinction between Aham and Ahamkaara should be understood. To identify the Aham with the corporeal form is Ahamkaara--the Ego feeling. Aham transcends the Ahamkaara (the physical form). When the identification of the Self with the body is given up, the state of "Aham Brahmaasmi" (I am Brahman) is realised. Brahman and Aatma are the same. Brahman refers to the Universal Consciousness that is present in all beings. The consciousness that is present in the body is called Aatma. It is called Conscience. The distinction between the Conscience and the Universal Consciousness should be noted.

Conscience is a reflection of the Consciousness. When the Conscience ultimately leaves the body, it merges in the Universal Consciousness and becomes one with it. This process may be likened to the oneness that occurs when the air within a balloon joins the atmospheric air outside.

This is the process of the many merging with the One. The individual self is the Bhuthaatma.

The Universal Self is the Paramaatma. The individual self confined within a body is like the air confined within a balloon. When the individual self sheds its attachments relating to the body and develops universal love, it overcomes the confines of the body. It merges in the vast, infinite

Love. This merger is described as Mukthi, Moksha or Liberation. The correct name for this consummation is Saayuiyam (oneness with the Universal). It is comparable to the merger of a river in the ocean from which it had its origin.

Brahma-Inaana exists within everyone

Once this merger of Consciousness takes place, there is no reversal of the process. The individual self has become the Universal, as when a drop of water is put into the ocean and becomes one with it. As long as the individual self is attached to the body and maintains its separateness from the Universal Self, it cannot escape the succession of birth and death. But once it casts off its separateness and becomes one with the Omni-Self, there is no further return to the cycle of birth and death--Punarjanma na vidhyathe.

This Brahma-Inaana (awareness of the Divine) cannot be got from any external source. It exists within everyone. Once the delusion of separateness in which the individual is enveloped goes, the resplendent Awareness manifests itself. All other knowledge relates to the external world.

This external knowledge is only "a reflection of the Inner Being." It is entirely wrong to imagine that one can acquire knowledge of the Inner Reality by exploring Prakruthi (Nature). The Omni-

Self is not to be realised through the understanding of the phenomenal world. You have come from the Paramaatma (the OmniSelf). This truth has to be understood. The fountain-source of all knowledge is within you. The Inaani (wise one) is not the one who has a great deal of book knowledge or knowledge of the physical universe.

The true Inaani is one who is aware of the Self within and lives accordingly. Many who discourse elaborately on the glories of God do not lead a Godly life. Of what use is their scriptural knowledge? What fight have they to exhort others, when they themselves do not practice what they preach? This was the message of Jesus when he saw a woman being stoned by a crowd for her sinful conduct. He told the crowd: "If there is anyone among you who has not sinned mentally, let him cast the stone at her."

The proper way to observe Shivarathri

Festivals like Shivarathri are intended to make people cultivate auspicious and Godly qualities.

To listen to a Divine discourse on Shivarathri day and forget all about its message after leaving the hall is not the way to observe Shivarathri. It may well be called "Shavarathri" (a Night of Death).

The difference between "Shiva" (what is auspicious) and "Shava" (a lifeless corpse) can be understood from the process of breathing and cessation of breathing. The process of inhaling and exhaling conveys the message of union with God--So-Ham (He is I). It is the consciousness of this oneness that is auspicious. When this consciousness is absent, inauspiciousness (or death) sets in.

There has to be a complete absence of body consciousness. It was by forgetting the body completely while chanting the Name of Rama that Ratnakara, the dacoit, became Valmiki the supreme poet (who gave the Ramayana to the world). He was so completely absorbed in chanting the name that he was oblivious to the anthill that had grown over him.

Shivarathri is the day that is devoted to the contemplation of God. It does not come only once a year. Every night can be a Shivarathri. Even if you are not able to contemplate on God all through the night, it is enough if you think of God before going to bed and when you wake up in the morning.

Again, whatever manner in which you may think of God, the results will be good. There is a story to illustrate this. Once a father took his son to the temple and advised him to keep vigil all night in the sanctum sanctorum. After some time, both the priest and the father dozed off. But the young lad, who was keeping vigil, observed a mouse repeatedly nibbling at the fruit and other edibles kept as offering to the deity. He felt sad that the mouse should be nibbling away at what was intended for God. Because he was thinking in this manner about God all night his life became sanctified. But neither the priest nor the others in the temple got the benefit of Divine grace. What is important is that devotion should be expressed in some form.

Different devotees are bound to differ in their ways of worshipping God. But whatever the method of worship, there must be one-pointed devotion. Develop the love of God. Love towards

God is devotion. Love towards the world is attachment. Devote this entire night to chanting the name of God. Life can be immensely sanctified through bhajans.

8. Purify The World By Sankeerthana

There is no age like the Kali Age, none at all.

Where by mere meditation on the name of the Lord,

The Supreme Goal is realised Oh Blessed One!

Even a multi-millionaire has to be content

With ordinary raiment and food

He cannot live on a diet of gold

When Time is unpropitious, a stick may turn into a snake

While, when it is favourable, dust may turn to gold.

The wheel of Time can make a scholar a dumb animal,

And a dumb man can become a saint,

And a wealthy man may become a plaything of the Goddess of Poverty at one time.

Whatever your prayers, you cannot get

What you are not destined to get.

Don't cherish, Oh young man, any desires.

Lead instead a noble life with intelligence.

What more can I tell you

The good people assembled here ?

Embodiments of Divine Love! "Samyak-keerthanam Sankeerthanam" (Congregational singing of bhajans is the best of bhajans). There is a big difference between Keerthanam and Sankeerthanam. Keerthanam is an individual affair. It is singing by an individual for the fulfilment of his prayers. Sankeerthanam aims at the well-being of the whole universe. This is also described as Saamaajika bhajans (community singing). This method of singing bhajans was first initiated by Guru Nanak, the founder of Sikhism.

Sankeerthana aims at demonstrating unity in diversity. When all the participants combine to sing in unison with one voice, it is described as Sankeerthana.

Four kinds of Sankeerthana

Sankeerthana is of four kinds: One is Guna Sankeerthana; two, Leela Sankeerthana; three, Bhaava Sankeerthana; four, Naama Sankeerthana.

Guna Sankeerthana applies to the kind of bhajan in which the devotee recites the auspicious qualities of the Divine, experiences oneness with the Divine, and acquires the Godly qualities.

Thyagaraja had recourse to this type of singing. In one of his keerthanas, he exclaimed: "Oh

Lord! You are beyond all words. Is it possible for even Brahma or other Gods to extol your glorious exploits? I am waiting for your grace. Harken to my entreaties. You restored to the preceptor the son whom the Lord of Death had taken away. You conquered the God of Love.

You liberated from prison Vasudheva and Devaki. You protected Draupadi when she appealed to you in despair. You were the guardian of the Pandavas. You relieved Kuchela of his poverty.

You saved 16,000 damsels from subjection." In this manner, Thyagaraja recounted the great qualities of God in his songs.

Gita Govindam is a form of Leela Sankeerthana

Leela Sankeerthana refers to the enjoyment by the devotee of the sacred sport of the Divine in ecstatic dancing and singing and being totally absorbed in it. This is exemplified by the Gita

Govindam of Jayadeva.

Bhaava Sankeerthana: This is illustrated by Radha alone, who expresses her different feelings towards God and identifies herself with the Divine in every mood of devotion. She expressed her devotion in the five forms of Santha (Serenity), Sakhya (friendliness), Vaatsalya (eternal love), Anuraaga (affection) and Madhura (sweetness). Radha and Meera were the exponents of Bhaava

Sankeerthana.

Naama Sankeerthana: Chaithanya was the exponent of this form of Keerthana. "All names are yours. There is nothing in this cosmos which does not bear the imprint of your name or form"--

"Sarvaroopaa Dharam Shaantham Sarvanaama-dharam Shivam Satchidaananda roopam

Advaitam Sathyam Shivam Sundaram" (Swami sang this sloka). Chaithanya revelled in singing the name of the Lord as signifying all that was beautiful and glorious in the universe.

While in each of the previous aeons the devotees adopted one or another methods of singing the glories, it is the supreme good fortune of the residents of Prashanthi Nilayam to enjoy all the four forms of Sankeerthana. The bhajans sung here are a combination of all the four forms of Sankeerthana.

The significance of Naamalikhitam

There is yet another special form of glorifying the name of the Lord. This is Naamalikhitam

(writing the Name of the Lord). Contemplating on the name of the Lord mentally, uttering the name by mouth and writing the name by hand serve to perform Trikarana Suddhi (purify the mind, the speech and the action). The name of the Lord has been glorified in different ways all over the world. Jayadeva was one who enjoyed always the leelas (sport) of the Divine, experienced the presence of the Divine within him, devoted every one of his daily activities to enjoying the sport of the Divine, felt that he had no use for anything other than God's love, merged his love in Divine Love and thereby became the very embodiment of Divine Love. As people did not comprehend the spiritual significance of his keerthanas, they misunderstood and misinterpreted the meaning of Jayadeva's Ashtapadhis (octaves). Hanuman, after the completion of his mission in Lanka, went to Sita to receive her blessings before returning to Rama. At that time, Mother Sita blessed Hanuman in this manner: "Hanuman! You are full of prowess, intelligence and fortitude. May you never grow old." This did not give joy to Hanuman. Noticing his sense of disappointment, Sita blessed him again: "Live as an immortal." Even this did not please Hanuman. Sita then blessed him again: "Hanuman! You are full of virtues! May the dwellers in the three worlds extol your qualities." Hanuman felt embarrassed and bent his head as if he was ashamed to hear her praise him. Observing Hanuman's reactions, Sita finally blessed him thus: "May Sri Rama always love you!" The moment he heard these words, Hanuman was in rapture. "This was all that I wanted," he declared. "I must be worthy of Rama's love. A life without Rama's love is an utter waste. It is a living death. The only thing I desire is Rama's love." Hanuman was proficient in music. There was none that could excel him in singing. Even Narada and Tumbura could not prevail against him. Such a great singer continued always to chant the name of Rama. Devotional singing is outpouring of love to God. What then is the essence of Sankeerthana? Its essential purpose is to earn the love of God. Combining one's voice, tune, feeling and rhythm to the appropriate beat of the song, the devotee should immerse himself in the singing. Harmonising the feeling with devotion and Love, the sacred words of the song should be an outpouring of love towards God. That alone is devotional singing.

When the song is rendered without understanding the meaning of the words and without any inner feeling or genuine love for God, it is a mechanical performance. Bhaava (feeling), Raaga (melody) and Thaala (rhythm) are the essentials for proper singing. Even the name Bharath signifies the combination of these three elements. (Bha-Ra-Tha). In every action in daily life, the combination of these three elements should be observed. This rule can be applied even to one's studies. Bhaava, in relation to study of a subject, means understanding the subject thoroughly. Raaga implies cultivating a love for the subject and Thaala means expressing one's knowledge coherently and clearly. Understand the meaning of songs while rendering. In the rendering of Thyagaraja's songs, the failure to observe the meaning of the words of the song has produced bizarre results. Thyagaraja's songs are in Telugu. Tamil musicians, who are experts in music, rendering Thyagaraja's songs have often mangled the words of the songs and made them meaningless. In one of his songs, Thyagaraja sang: "Ne pogadakunte neekemi kodhavu Rama?" (If I do not praise you, what do you lose Oh Rama?). A Tamil musician sang the song in such a manner that it meant: "If I eat pakodas, what do you lose?" It is essential to ensure that the meaning of the words, the emotional feeling of the composer and the melody of the song are all brought out in rendering the songs during Nagarsankeerthan and in bhajans. Where one does not understand the meanings of the words, he should get the meaning from those who know. Embodiments of Divine Love! Regard community singing as sacred devotional exercise. Even if you have no musical ability, utter the names of the Lord with feeling and love. There is no greater means of God-realisation in the Kali Yuga than chanting the names of the Lord. Dhyana (meditation) in Kritha Yuga, Yajna (sacrifice) in Thretha Yuga, Archana (worship of idols) in Dwapara Yuga and Naama Sankeerthana (Reciting the name of the Lord) in Kali Yuga are the methods prescribed for realising the Divine. Remembering the Name is the panacea. When the name is chanted as a song set to music, it delights the heart immensely. Many pandits recite the names as slokas (verse). They do not experience the intense yearning expressed in the stanzas. Some actors are able to pronounce the words loud and clear, but without any depth of feeling. But when the melodiously they appeal to the hearts of the singers and the listeners. Even non-believers and agnostics nod their heads in appreciation when they listen to devotional music.

A song sung melodiously tugs at the heart-strings
The words of a song can be expressed in prosaic manner which has no appeal to the listener. But when they are sung melodiously as in the song: "Rama! Nannu Kaapaadu" "Rama! save me," they tug at the heart-strings. (Swami sang the song to demonstrate its appeal). Such sweetness is contained in the song when it is rendered melodiously.

Everyone, whether he is well-versed in music or not, should listen attentively to the singer and try to repeat the words of the song with feeling. Some persons attending bhajans do not move their lips at all. They may say that they are singing the songs mentally within themselves. This is not proper. If you have devotional feeling, it should be expressed by the tongue joining in the bhajan. Only then can it be called Sankeerthana--singing in unison with others. You must sing the names aloud, full-throated, as far as the voice can reach. Only then the Divine will respond in full measure and shower His grace. No one will go to the rescue of a drowning man if his cries are feeble. Only when he cries aloud at the top of his voice will the cries be heard and people will rush to save him.

Sankeerthana means singing with abandon and fervour. Everyone should realise that every limb and organ in the body has been given to man to be used for a sacred purpose the tongue to utter the Lord's name, the hands to offer worship, the feet to go to the temple and so on. These organs should not be used for frivolous and unholy purposes.

Sanctifying every one of the sense organs, man should purify the mind and contemplate on God.

The only means to purify the polluted world Embodiments of Divine Love! It is impossible to describe the sweetness and sacredness of the name of the Lord. The intensity of the devotion with which you chant the name of the Lord will yield commensurate benefits and confer joy on you. All should strive to chant the names in unison. Today, all the five elements in the world--space, air, fire, water and the earth--are polluted. You cannot get pure water or pure air. The sounds you hear are impure. The earth is polluted. The Kali Yuga has become Kalmasha Yuga (the age of impurity). To purify all this the only means is chanting the names of the Lord.

Today people spend most of their time watching the TV and Video screens. Is it any surprise if children born in these circumstances are TV products? They behave as actors from childhood.

They indulge in stunts. Only the parents are to blame. In olden times, when a woman was enceinte, she used to hear stories about Prahlada, Sathyavaan and other noble characters. The child in the womb was influenced by such stories. Atmosphere is purified by chanting Divine Name Experiments in Russia and other countries have demonstrated the relationship between the food one consumes and one's mental attitudes. It was found, for instance, that a child which had been fed on apple juice while it was growing in the womb, exhibited a love for apples after birth.

The recitation of the names of the Lord will help to purify the atmosphere as a result of the sacred sound waves getting absorbed in the atmosphere. The power of sound waves is evident from the way radio waves are transmitted and received over long distances. The atmosphere that has been polluted by impure sound waves can be purified by the chanting of the Divine Name.

Likewise, sacred thoughts, pure speech and pure actions will purify other polluted elements.

There is no better purifying agent than this. Crores (one crore is ten million) are being spent to purify the Ganges water. Of what use is this exercise if the Ganges continues to be polluted by the discharge of drainage water into the river? First prevent the flow of filthy effluents into the Ganges.

In the same manner, the evil thoughts arising in the mind should be diverted; and it should be filled with pure, Godly thoughts by reciting the Divine name.

Everyone participating in bhajans should sing the name of the Lord and thereby serve to purify the atmosphere and promote the well-being of the nation.

Poornachandra Auditorium, 3 Mar 1992

You must see, hear, study, observe, experience and reflect. Only then, can you understand me. You will learn then that I am Love (Prema); that I give only one thing, Bliss (Ananda) through Love. My task is to grant solace, courage, and Peace (Shanthi). That is to say, my characteristics are the ancient, authentic ones. Only the manifested form is new.

Sathya Sai Baba

9. The Head and The Heart

If the thoughts in the mind are good

The sequel will be equally beneficial

If the thoughts in the mind are impure

The resulting actions will be likewise.

Yad Bhaavam Thadbhavathi (As one feels, that he becomes). As are the thoughts, so are the results. As is the seed, so is the plant. As is the flour, so is the bread.

In the human body, there are two important organs. One is the heart and the other is the head. All the actions in the world, all their consequences, originate in the head. The Vedas have declared that all things that originate in the head relate to the Pravritthi Marga (the External Path) and those that arise from the heart relate to the Nivritthi Marga (the Inward Path). All that you think, all that you do, all your achievements, gains and losses, are all related to the head (to thoughts).

All that comes out of the head relates to Prakruthi (the phenomenal world), grows from it and ultimately merges in it. Hence, all thoughts are associated with the Prakruthi (external world).

But, feelings like .peace, kindness, compassion, forbearance and love emanate from the heart.

These transcend Prakruthi (external phenomena). Consequently, what should be cherished in the heart should be pure and sacred, and nothing that is sullied.

The human heart that should be like ksheera (milk) in its purity is today unfortunately polluted and kshara (saline) like sea water. The Lord resides wherever there is purity of the milky ocean.

It is for this reason that the Lord was described by the devotees as Ksheerasaagara Sayana (the One who reclines on the Ocean of Milk).

Lord dwells only in pure Sathwik heart

Ksheera or milk represents that which is Sathwik, pure and sacred. The heart should be pure and untainted like milk. It is only in such a pure Sathwik heart that the Lord will choose to dwell.

Alas! Man's heart today, instead of being a Ksheerasaagara (ocean of milk), is Kshaarasaagara

(filled with brine). In the Ocean of Milk, dreadful aquatic creatures like whales and crocodiles will not flourish. These creatures can only survive and grow in an ocean of brine. In the saltish ocean (of the heart) what are the creatures that flourish? They are bad qualities like lust, hatred, greed, envy and pride. If man is filled today with all these bad qualities, what does it signify? It shows that man's heart is bereft of the milk (of good qualities). If it had been pure as milk, them would have been no place for any qualities other than the godly virtues.

Fill your heads with sacred thoughts

Today there seems to be no limit to man's desires. The entire human life is spent in the pursuit of these desires. Every moment is filled with insatiable wants. Man's head is filled with these desires. If only the head is filled with sacred thoughts, it will get sanctified.

How is this change to be effected? Food is an important factor. When pure, sacred and wholesome food is taken in moderation, that food itself will transform the head. The head will be turned towards God. Thus, Food, Head and God are the three whose unity will divinise man.

Even Sathwik food (food. which is conducive to the promotion of good qualities) should be consumed in moderation. If there is no purity, wholesomeness and moderation in the food, the man turns Thamasik (evil minded). In due course, this leads to the development of Rajasik qualities (anger, etc).

What, then, is the proper food for man? Man possesses five organs of perception: the mouth, the ears, the eyes, the nose and the skin. What is regarded as Sathwik food is taken through the mouth. But what kind of food are the other senses consuming? The eyes are "consuming"

Rajasik food (seeing ugly and undesirable things). Looking here and there like crows, the eyes are taking in impure "food" of all kinds. The eyes thus do not receive proper food. See no evil, see what is good.

Now, what is it that the ears hear? They are listening all the time to scandal, idle gossip, bad stories about others. They do not listen to the name of God or anything that is sacred and good.

Why should anyone listen to such gossip? He should be concerned only about his affairs.

Transforming himself, he should share his good thoughts with others. It is totally wrong to interest oneself in bad things about others. Hear no evil; hear what is good.

Multiple role of the tongue

Now we come to speech. The tongue is a very powerful organ. The eyes can only see. The ears can only hear. But the tongue has a double function: speech and taste. Hence, the tongue has to be kept under rigorous control. Only then the food that is consumed through the mouth will be pure and sacred.

The tongue is prone to indulge in several undesirable activities: talking ill of others, talking excessively, idle gossip and the like. Of the four kinds of misbehaviour by the tongue, the first is excessive talking with others. Talking endlessly with all kinds of persons is an evil. The second evil tendency is abusing others. The third evil is making fun of others. The fourth is indulging in falsehood. By indulging in these four forms of abuse of the tongue, man's life is rendered unholy.

Recognising the greatness of the tongue, Saint Jayadeva declared: "Oh tongue! You know what is sweet and relish what delights the heart. You must utter what is true and beneficial. Therefore, rejoice in uttering the names of the Lord and in nothing else." The tongue is the cause of greatness in a man or his downfall. There must be harmony between speech and action. If your actions do not correspond to your words, your life will be mined. Therefore the tongue should be "fed" properly. It should be "fed" with good thoughts, good words and good actions so that it may behave properly.

The importance of sense of touch

Then, there is the sparsa (sense of touch). Avoid touching others. The meaning of this rule will not be apparent on the surface. But it is highly significant from a deeper sense. The ancient sages used to seek secluded spots and engage themselves in meditation. The mason is there is a divine energy within the body, a kind of current flowing in it. This divine energy is in everyone.

When a house is electrified, an earth wire is also fixed to protect people from electric shocks.

When a person is meditating, a divine energy is generated in him. The earth also has an energy (gravitational energy) which attracts objects towards itself. That is the reason why when a person sits in meditation, he uses a wooden plank one inch above the ground, spreads a deer-skin on it and covers it with a cloth. The cloth serves as a cushion protecting the meditator from any pricks from the deerskin. This kind of meditation is called Sukhadhyana (meditation in comfort). The wooden plank acts as an insulator, preventing the energy from passing down.

It should be recognised that there is a divine energy in the human body. When this divine energy comes into contact with the body of another person, it is likely to receive the bad thoughts in the latter. If the other person is a good man, you may receive good thoughts from the contact. But you cannot decide who is good and who is bad. Hence, if you sit apart during meditation, you may experience highly elevating thoughts. Some persons say: "Swami! I do not entertain any bad thoughts in my mind. But somehow bad thoughts infiltrate into the mind. How does this happen?" The reason is: Other people's bad thoughts enter your mind. It is by close association with bad persons that bad ideas enter the head.

The idea behind bowing one's head at the feet of Bhagavan is that thereby sacred thoughts enter the devotee's mind. This means that when one comes in contact with Bhagavan's feet, the sacred impulses from them flow to the devotee. When the devotee's head touches the Lord's feet, the Lord's divine energy flows towards him. This implies that you should keep contact with only pure objects and keep away from impure objects. You are affected by whatever you touch. For instance, if you touch fire, it scalds. Fire can burn even iron. It is so potent. But when the fire is extinguished, the residue is mere charcoal. When you touch charcoal, your hand becomes black. Thus, in either case, the contact is not beneficial.

But, what happens when you come into contact with divine fire? All your bad thoughts and bad actions are reduced to ashes. This is the sanctity attaching to the performance of Paadanamaskar (prostrating at the Feet of the Lord). When you associate with anyone, you are affected by the qualities of the other person. That is why, it has been said: "Through association with the good, develop detachment and solitude. Through seclusion, steady the mind. Through steadiness of the mind, get rid of all delusions. Freedom from delusions is Liberation." (Bhagavan recited the relevant stanza from Bhaja Govindam).

Choose to become dear and near to God

Good company is thus most essential. Take for instance, a piece of charcoal. If it is to bum, it has to be brought close to a piece of burning charcoal. It will bum better if a fan is turned towards both. This is the result of being both "near and dear" (to the source of fire). This applies to devotees as well. There are many who are "near" to Bhagavan. But they are like frogs in a lotus pond. The frogs are near to the lotus, but do not taste its honey. But bees come from remote distances to taste the honey in the lotus. If the frogs were aware of the sweetness of the honey, they would not have let the bees come near. It is, therefore not enough if you are near. You have also to become dear to the Lord.

You must be both near and dear. If you love the Lord, but are far from Him, you suffer the pangs of separation like a mother who is worried when she has no news from her son who is abroad.

Thus both love and nearness are necessary. This is the value of having darshan of the Lord.

Vedanta has declared: "Dharshanam paapa naashanam" (Sight of the Lord destroys all sins).

"Sambhashanam Sankata naashanam" (Conversing with the Lord destroys all grief).

"Sparshanam Karma vimochanam" (The touch of the Divine liberates one from all karmic bonds). What you should seek is Karma vimochanam (freedom from the bondage of one's actions).

"Sambhashanam Sankatanaashanam." You can recognise the truth of this declaration from your own experience. Some may have doubts whether the touch of the Lord will destroy all their karmic bonds or whether the darshan of the Lord will destroy all sins. But there can be no doubts regarding the effect of Sambhashanam.

When you are conversing with Swami you forget all your sorrows. You forget even your worries and anxieties. This is direct experiential proof of the truth of this dictum. As long as you are conversing with Swami you are in a blissful state. Whatever your worries, when you are conversing with Swami in the interview room you forget everything. From this, you should infer that the darshan of the Lord can destroy all sins, even though you may not know it. Many people don't recognise this fact. For all difficulties and sorrows, the mind is responsible. Most people are not conscious of their own feelings. If one's thoughts are good, they are bound to lead to good results.

The results of our past karma are born with us

As you sow, so shall you reap. This is an inescapable fact. If your thoughts are of one kind, how can you expect the results to be different? When you are born, the Creator sends you with a necklace round your neck made up of the results of your good and bad deeds in the previous life reckoned most meticulously.

When anyone accuses you and if you do not respond to it in a like manner, but ignore it, the accusation returns to the accuser like a registered letter which the addressee declines to accept.

An incident in the life of Buddha illustrates this truth.

How to react when you are accused

There used to be a village-chief who did not like Buddha's way of life. He used to look upon him as a lazy person who was gathering round him young men and making them lead an idle life.

Buddha who was aware of the man's attitude, went to his house one day with his disciples and begged for alms "Bhavathi! Bhikshaam Dehi" (Oh blessed one! offer me alms). The headman, who had espied Buddha approaching the house and begging for alms, shouted: "You lazy fellow!

You don't deserve any alms. Get out! You have been wasting your time." The headman went on abusing Buddha, calling him all kinds of names. Buddha was amused and was smiling.

After exhausting his abuses, the headman calmed down and asked Buddha, "Sire! I have a doubt.

Will you clear it?" Buddha said, "What is your doubt? Speak out." The headman asked how Buddha had remained unaffected by all the abuse he had levelled against the latter. Buddha said,

"I came to you begging for food. Supposing you had brought the food and I had refused to take it, what would you have done with the food?" The man replied, "I would have taken it back."

Buddha then said, "Now, instead of food, you gave me all your abuse. I refused to receive it.

What happens to it? It goes back to you. I have no connection with it." The headman learnt a good lesson.

You should not be concerned with the goodness or badness of others. You have to entertain good thoughts and direct your mind towards God. Bliss is got by experiencing oneness with the Divine.

The Vedantic message of oneness has been perverted by exponents who promoted divisive tendencies. The supreme message of the Vedas is unity as proclaimed in the manthra: "Sahanaa yavathu, Sahanau bhunakthu, Saha veeryam Karavaavahai" (May we be protected together. May we be nourished together. May we work together with great energy.)

Let us all work together. Only then will there be peace. (Swami recited a Telugu poem conveying the purport of the Sanskrit stanza from the Shvethaashvathara Upanishad). What a great message is conveyed by this prayer! The pandits however, are interpreting the message in different ways and causing divisions. Vedamaatha (Mother Veda) sought to promote oneness and a universal vision by its all-embracing message. Fill the heart with love and Divine feeling

Man today receives all kinds of knowledge in his head in a distorted form and behaves like a demented being. Whatever he reads, whatever he hears, he fills his mind with all sorts of things about the world. When he wakes up in the morning he starts reading the newspaper to know what is happening in one country or another and stuffs his mind with a lot of junk. Does he fill his heart with any divine feeling? Instead of stuffing the head with a mass of rubbish, he should try to fill his heart with love. Without love in the heart, you are only another newspaper. From the time of waking to the time of going to bed, the day is punctuated by eating breakfast, lunch and dinner. What is the meaning in indulging in this repetitive routine day after day? What is the new thing that you should do? It is contemplation on God. Are you making any effort in this direction?

Science and technology are advancing apace. They are penetrating the depths of space. But is the slightest movement being made to explore the depths of the heart? Man has not moved even half an inch to understand his heart. Scientists do not acquire any experience of life. It is by exploring the internal that man will discover the truth and not by going far out into space.

The entire preoccupation of science is with the study of matter. What is it you find when you go far out into space? There is nothing there. If you need air, you have to carry it from the earth. Travel in space has thus become a kind of picnic! You carry everything you need from here. There is nothing there. The water you need and the food you require lie at your feet. All the metals, the diamonds or anything else you want are all underneath your feet. Above the head (in space) there is nothing. They spend crores to go out into space. But when they need food, they have to come back to the earth.

A proper understanding of how the senses function is a function of science. Without knowing how to control the senses, what is the use of all other scientific knowledge? Many scientists ultimately qualify themselves for places in the mental hospital. Burying themselves in a dark laboratory and performing experiments all their lives, they expire without acquiring any experience of life.

Follow the heart--not the head

Students! Take care of your heart. Do not follow the head. Take into your head all that is useful.

But transmit it to the heart. That will generate real energy. That is Sath. That is imperishable energy. What is received in the head comes and goes. The head seeks happiness. But this happiness is temporary. It is satisfaction of needs and desires as they arise from time to time.

You are hungry, you take food and you feel happy. But this lasts only for a few hours till you feel hungry again. This kind of happiness comes and goes. This process relates to the head. But the heart is concerned with securing lasting bliss.

You must understand the difference between the head and the heart. The head is content to carry out temporary obligations. The heart is concerned with what is permanent. Once bliss is secured, all that the head seeks will also be got.

Students! The story of Emperor Bali teaches you that in no circumstance should you go back on your plighted word. Bali was prepared to discard the advice and warning of the guru Sukracharya, in order to fulfil the promise he gave to Vamana, even if it cost him his kingdom or his life.

Truth is the food that sustains speech. Likewise, you should feed your senses with wholesome food by listening to sacred things, seeing what is holy and speaking what is true and good.

Consuming wholesome food through the mouth is not enough. Everything that you take in through all your senses should be pure.

Dedicate the sweet period of your life to God

Students! This is the most sacred stage in your life. It is a sweet period. It is a time that should be dedicated to the Divine. Does anyone offer an unripe or overripe fruit to the Divine? Only a ripe fruit, rich with sweet juice, is offered to God. You are neither an unripe fruit nor a spoiled fruit.

You are good, ripe fruit. It is such a fruit that should be offered to God. That is the proper kind of sacrifice to be made in one's life.

The Upanishad has proclaimed that immortality can be attained only through sacrifice and not through good actions, progeny or wealth. You cannot take with you, when you pass away, even a handful of earth. So, make the best use of your years now by leading a selfless, dedicated life.

Thereby you should earn God's grace and share it with others. This is the secret of a meaningful life.

Kalyana Mandap, Brindavan, 15 Mar 1992

10. Hold Fast To The Lord

When sandalwood is rubbed repeatedly, the fragrance from it increases;

When the sugarcane is chewed again and again, the juice gets sweeter.

When gold is heated in the crucible repeatedly, it becomes pure and brighter.

The noble ones adhere to righteousness through all the vicissitudes of life.

Embodiments of Divine Love! Human life is supremely precious in this world. But not all are alive to this truth. Wherein lies this preciousness? Humanness does not consist merely in the physical and the mundane. "Shareeram Aadhyam khalu Dharmasaadhanam" (Verily, the body is the primary requisite for the realisation of Dharma). It is for the pursuit of Righteousness that this body has been given to man. God is the repository of Ananda (Bliss). He is eternal. Among the myriad names of the Divine, the greatest is Sath-chith-ananda. Sath means that which is unchanging at all times--past, present and future. It remains the same irrespective of time, place and circumstance. It transcends time, space and conditions. Chith means paripurna jnaana (complete awareness). It comprehends full knowledge of everything--social, moral, physical, scientific and spiritual. It is the undercurrent of every kind of knowledge. Where Sath and Chith exist together, there is Ananda (Bliss). Humanness originates from Ananda, grows in Ananda and merges in Ananda. This bliss is the goal of man. Man is born in bliss. To manifest bliss is the duty of man. This is the secret of the human saga. It is a sheer folly to search for bliss outside. Every individual makes a variety of efforts to experience bliss. From infancy to old age, man dedicates every effort of his to secure bliss. But, this bliss is not to be found in the places he searches. When he is the very embodiment of bliss, to seek for it outside himself is sheer folly. Does any man in the world search for himself outside himself? If such search is a sign of ignorance, equally the search for bliss outside one's self is a mark of ignorance. Water can exist without fish, but fish cannot exist out of water. A branch is part of a tree. A child is part of the mother. A branch cannot survive apart from the tree. The child cannot live without the mother. Likewise, the human existence is based on the Divine. Man is a spark of the Divine. Without the Divine, man cannot experience bliss. Unfortunately, on account of the perversions of the Kali Age, men express verbal acceptance of this truth, but do not experience it wholeheartedly and hence seek, by their own efforts, to find the bliss by exploring the phenomenal world. Understand your true self. What is the origin of man? Wherefrom has he come? What is his original home? No one tries to investigate these matters in the proper manner. Man exists, he moves about, eats and lives, but wherefrom has he come? Basing himself on his corporeal form, he declares that he has come from Madras, Bombay or some other place. Similarly, reckoning on the profession in which he is engaged, he describes himself as a doctor, a lawyer, an agriculturist or something else. By relating himself to a place, a country or a profession, he cannot understand his real self. What is this true self? The answer is Manuja or Maanava. What does Manu signify? It refers to Swayambhu Manu (the self-created Manu). Ja means birth. Manuja refers to one who has had his birth from Manu. Man is called Manuja because he has originated from the self-born Manu. Man does not recognise this fact. Consequently, even though he is the embodiment of Sath-chithananda, he desperately seeks bliss elsewhere. What is the reason? Oblivious to the Jnaana (higher knowledge), he lives in ignorance' in a dream world of illusions. Immersed in this sleeping state, he forgets his nature. One may be a president, an emperor or a prime minister, but in the sleeping state he is not conscious of his position. In the dreams he experiences in this state, he considers them to be real and feels that these are his true state. In that dream state, a poor man may think he is an emperor (or a President). But the moment he wakes up, he is conscious of his real position and status. Wake up from the sleep of ignorance. Likewise, man in his dream state of Ajnaana (ignorance) forgetting his true form of Sath-chithananda, identifies himself with a country, a profession or a physical form. It is this ignorance that envelops man in delusion. Just as one cannot see the rice when it is covered by husk, or see the water underneath a layer of moss, or the sun covered by a cloud, a man enveloped in ignorance is unable to see his true self. Hence it is that the Upanishads have exhorted man to wake up from his sleep of ignorance and realise his true nature. When the husk is removed, the rice is visible. It was there in the paddy. But because of the husk coveting it, it could not be seen. All objects that are enveloped in this manner are liable to change and are impermanent. The Veda has declared: "Whatever is perceived is liable to perish." That is, all objects in the phenomenal world are bound to perish sometime or other. Man sees with his physical eyes all objects in the world, moving and non-moving. All these will disappear in due course in the stream of Time. Neither the eye that sees nor the object that is seen is permanent.

All beings in creation are endowed with eyes. What is the special significance of the eyes possessed by man? What is the unique significance of human existence? Having been born as a human being, it will be unfortunate if man is content with the physical vision. Man must acquire Inaana netram (the eye of Wisdom). Without it, of what avail is one's education? What is the use of one's intelligence or one's mental powers? What is a man worth if he is unable to recognise the divinity within him?

Man is the crown of creation. That is why the scriptures have praised the noble virtues man is capable of manifesting. Hence, as a human being one must strive to acquire the eye of wisdom.

The physical eyes are inept. You cannot see your own eyes. These imperfect eyes, how can they see the highly subtle mind? The eyes which are unable to see the mind, how can they see the Aatma (the Indwelling Spirit)? One who is unable to understand himself, how can he expect to understand others? The physical eyes will never be able to see the Aatma.

Man is unable to comprehend his true nature. The most important thing in this world is the Aatma-jivitham (life of the Spirit). Bodily existence, mental life or intellectual life cannot be considered true living at all. Man's main preoccupation appears to be with nurturing the body and wasting it until death. Falling a prey to the forces of time, space and circumstances, man is unable to comprehend his true nature. From dawn to dusk man is engaged in enquiring into various matters. He studies many books and makes many investigations. But what is the outcome of all this? He has learnt nothing. The satisfaction he derives from time to time from these endeavours ends in disappointment. They are like the pursuit of a mirage. They do not serve to quench one's thirst. They may appear like water, but there is no water in them.

All pleasures derived from Prakruthi (the phenomenal world) may appear to confer happiness, but they do not confer real happiness and bliss, because they are not lasting. They come and go, leaving a trail of misery. Real conqueror is one who has subdued his mind

Sankaracharya posed the question: "Who is a real conqueror in this world?" His disciples gave different answers. One disciple said that a real conqueror was one who had subdued the world and brought it under his sway. Another said that the man who scaled the Himalayas and planted a flag on its summit was a great conqueror. Another declared that one who crossed the oceans was a hero. Sankaracharya listened to these replies with a smile and said: "Dear students! you are looking at conquests solely in worldly terms. Viewed in this way, anyone can achieve victories.

An animal can fight another and establish its victory. Likewise, there can be a victor among birds. Birds cross oceans and fly over the Himalayas. Where is the victory in all this? Nothing at all." Sankaracharya declared: "Only the person who has subdued his mind is a real conqueror." It is a mental aberration to think that one has achieved a victory without subduing his mind.

The mind is associated with the moon. It resembles the moon in not being self-luminous. If the moon shines at night, wherefrom does it derive its light? The moon shines by reflecting the light of the Sun. It must be noted that the Sun shines effulgently, His light is very powerful. One cannot dare to look at it directly. But moonlight is cool and comforting. Although the light from the sun and the light from the moon have the same source, what accounts for the difference between them?

With regard to the mind, it will be seen that when filled with desires, it has a thamasik quality.

Where the thamasik quality prevails, there is darkness. When the mind's desires are fulfilled, it experiences coolness. When desires are not satisfied, the mind is restless. But if does not get heated. Such is the nature of the mind.

It is not easy for anyone to control the mind. The mind has been described as a bundle of thoughts and fancies. It is not possible to stop the thought process even for a moment. The mind experiences a ceaseless flow of thoughts like the endless waves of the ocean. Sankaracharya said that the true victor is one who is able to conquer this ceaseless flow of thoughts in the mind.

The senses sway over man. Today men boast about their myriad achievements. But all these are accompanied by anxiety. So, these achievements are not significant. Man assumes that he is investigating various phenomena.

This is not so. It is man's senses which are experimenting with him.

Man imagines that he is making use of his sense organs. Not at all. The truth is the senses are sporting with man. Man is not alive to this fact. If man really mastered the senses and had full sway over them, he would not be subject to vicharam (anxiety). It is the senses that are holding sway over man. They are utilising man for their enjoyment, with the result that man has become a weakling. He is a victim of peacelessness. He is a prey to many troubles.

How, then, are the senses to be brought under control? It should be recognised that the senses are merely instruments. They are called Karanams, that is, instruments. These instruments should be wielded by you. You should not become their plaything. Unfortunately this is not the case now.

Man has become an instrument in the grip of the senses. As a result, he is powerless to act properly. Nor is that all. He is even misusing the senses. Hence, it is essential to bring the senses under one's control. Only then will the senses be powerless to cause any harm to man.

The Aatma is the seer--not the eyes. Take for instance, the power of sight. You think that it is the eyes that see (any object). No. The eye is inert matter. Who is it that sees? The seer is Aatma. When you notice the lights of a car, you think that the bulbs are burning. But the bulbs are burning because of the current they are getting.

Consider the ears. People are listening to the broadcast from their loudspeakers. They may consider the loudspeakers as the source of the sounds they hear. But if there is no current, the loudspeakers will be silent. Here, again, it is the current that is the basic factor. The ears are like a loudspeaker. It is because of the current of Aatma that the ears are able to hear.

Hence, for the functioning of all sense organs the Aatma is basic. Without mentioning this term, the scientists call this prime mover as power or energy. This energy is of no use without matter.

Equally, matter is of no use without energy. God can be defined as Matter + Energy -God.

The functioning of the Divine must be seen in this combination. For instance, one cannot see without eyes. This is true. The eyes are able to see a person only by the help of sunlight. At the same time, the sunlight by itself is of no use. There are any number of blind people in the world.

They are unable to see the effulgence of the sun. But for that reason can they deny the existence of the sun? The blind cannot see the sun, but those with eyes can see. However great a scholar may be, when he is asleep, he cannot see the world. But a totally illiterate person, who is awake, can see the world. To see things in the waking state, no scholarship or intelligence is needed. Man needs the eye of wisdom to see the good and bad things in the world.

Today is the beginning of the new year (Yugadi). What is the first rithu (season) of this year? It is Vasantha-rithu (the season of Spring). What is the most important month in the year? It is Chaithramasa (the first month of the new year). The Shuklapaksha (bright fortnight) is the better part of the month. Among the days, the first day of the lunar month is important. As all these important elements are present today, it has special significance as marking the commencement of a new year (described as Yugadi).

This is the Kali Yuga. There are four yugas (aeons) Kritha, Thretha, Dwapara and Kali. How do Bharathiyas celebrate the advent of the new year? After a sacred bath in the morning, they put on new clothes, eat sweet preparations and celebrate the day as a festive occasion. These celebrations have gone on for many years. But how far have the people imbibed the truths underlying these celebrations? The garments are new, but the natures are unchanged. It is not enough to wear new clothes. The qualities must change. Without a reformation in character there is no meaning in observing these festivals.

Bharathiyas have been observing the birthdays of Avatars as festival days. The birthdays of the founders of various faiths have also been observed as festivals. The death anniversaries of wicked persons as well as of holy men have been observed as festivals. But the Yugadi celebration is not related to the birth of any Avatar or the birth or death of any saint or prophet. It is related purely to Prakruthi (the phenomenal world). It is important for one and all. It is an occasion for comprehending the nature of the universe. When we want to know who is God, the answer is found in Prakruthi. It is the visible manifestation of God.

This earth revolves round itself hundreds of miles in an hour. What is it that happens because of these revolutions? You have night and day. Because of this succession of night and day, man is able to take rest. Moreover, the earth is moving round the sun at the speed of thousands of miles an hour. Because of this motion, the seasons occur and we have rains, crops and harvests. Thus, without expecting any return, Nature is nourishing man.

 Good prospects for the year "Angeerasa"
 There are sixty years in the Hindhu almanac's cycle of years, starting with Prabhava and ending with Akshaya. The present year is the sixth in the cycle, bearing the name Angeerasa. It conveys the message relating to the six primary enemies of man (lust, anger, delusion, greed, pride and envy). All these enemies are present in every limb of man.
 There are nine deities presiding over the events of the year. They are the Sun and other planets.
 Among these nine, six are beneficent in this year. During this year, by and large, only auspicious things will occur. Moreover, there will be no shortage of food-grains and other agricultural produce. The monsoon will be normal. Prices, however, will continue to rise because of the misguided policies of governments. But the administration in general will be peaceful and orderly. Political disorders will be less. Individual differences and antagonisms may exist, but there will be no serious disorders. This is because all the principal ruling planets are friendly towards each other and are of good disposition. When a ruler and his commander-in-chief are at variance, the nation suffers. This year, the ruler and the commander-in-chief among the planets are friends. This has beneficial effects on the world.
Angeerasa is one of the names of the Lord. It means that God as Rasa (essence) flows in every anga (limb) of man. Because the year bears the Lord's name, it is bound to be a godly year.
 Devotional activities will grow. But they are likely to be more in the nature of preaching and propagation than practice and performance. Devotion should express itself in conduct. Ninetynine out of every hundred persons in the world profess devotion, but not one of them displays any godly virtues. Devotion is preached and professed out of selfish interests and not as a means to God-realisation.
 You must hold fast to one ideal. Today man lives his life without any ideal. He has to understand what is his goal in life. The goal is Aatma (the Divine). It is Sath-chith-ananda (Being-Awareness-Bliss). This Sath-chith-ananda is within man. People eat inert things and worship inert objects, wasting their lives, but ignore the divinity that is present in the same objects in subtle form as Chaitanya (Consciousness). Any act done with love will be immensely helpful.

 Animals serve man by toiling and helping to grow crops. But man treats such animals harshly.
 He harms the creatures which serve him. But he offers worship to images of animals such as Nandi. What folly is this!
 Firm faith and clear vision are essential
 God is omnipresent. But he should be experienced as present in subtle form as Consciousness.
 This divine feeling should arise in man. The entire Cosmos is pervaded by the Divine, declares the Upanishad--"Isaavaasyam idham Sarvam" Divinity is present in every human being. Man today is more intent on dividing the One into the many than on realising the unity that subsumes the diversity. To recognise the unity that underlies the multiplicity is the primary task before man today.
 You must develop faith and see to it that it is firm and unchanging. Firm faith and a clear vision are essential. Men proclaim their faith in God when their desires are fulfilled, but deride Him when they are not realised. These desires are often petty and trivial. Men do not realise that God is waiting to fulfil much greater desires. Ignorant of the immensely valuable treasures in God's treasury, man seeks cheap trinkets. Instead of a diamond, man asks for a piece of charcoal. Not getting it, he feels disappointed. God wishes to give you a diamond. You do not have the patience to wait until you get it. Men will wait hours in a queue to catch a bus or buy a film ticket but will not devote five minutes to think of God.
 Develop an optimistic attitude in life
 Your attitude to God should not be based on the fulfilment or non-fulfilment of petty desires.
 You must feel that whatever happens to you is for your own good. You must have the firm belief that whether your wishes are fulfilled or not, nothing harmful will happen to you. Be firm in your faith in weal and woe. Develop an optimistic attitude towards life. When there is a glass half full of water the optimist is glad to see the water in it while the pessimist is sorry it is half empty.
 One must recognise both the truths.
 For instance, it is true that there is no rose without a thorn. The wise man must pick up the rose without touching the thorn. The optimist looks up at the night-sky and enjoys the cool moonlight.
 The pessimist looks down at the ground and feels depressed over the darkness below. Hence, you must look up. Aiming low is a crime. Do not look downwards. Develop sublime thoughts. It is because man today lacks sublime thoughts that he is a prey to disappointments. Why is he disappointed? Because he has built up expectations. If he does his duty without expectation, there will be no disappointment. Duty is God. Work is worship. The results come of their own accord. The weak-minded man meets with failures. The strong-minded man accomplishes whatever he wants. Turn your mind towards God. You will then be free from bondage. It is because you are all the time involved in worldly pursuits that you get bound. Love is God. Live in Love. A pure mind is like a pearl in the oyster. Worldly life is like an ocean. In that ocean you can find the pearl of a pure mind within the oyster of the human body. This pearl is the Aatmic truth. It is immaculately pure, without attributes, eternal and unchanging. Its effulgence and purity are beyond compare. The Aatma has no legs but moves faster than anything else. It has no hands but can grasp anything. It has no eyes, but there is nothing in the universe it cannot see. To experience this Aatma, the only means is the way of Love. When you are filled with Love, the Lord is easily attained. Love is God. Live in Love. Our life must be lived in Love. Years may come and go. Seasons may change. Wars may be going on. But if only you have a drop of Divine Grace, you will be able to accomplish anything. To receive the benefit of such grace, you have to direct your vision inwards. Unfortunately, all your vision is turned outwards. What you see depends on the direction of your vision. Therefore, convert your vision into Premadhrishti (a vision of Love). It is said that the cosmos is mithya (illusory) and the Brahman (Absolute) alone is real. This is not correct. The Jagath (Cosmos) is also real. When you have the love-filled vision, the whole cosmos appears Brahmanayam (permeated by the Absolute). When you see the world with the physical eye it appears as a bundle of miseries from birth to death. Love of God is the only way out of this misery. Acquire this love at least now. There is nothing greater than this that I can convey to you. Practise at least some part of what you hear Embodiments of the Divine Aatma! You listen to many discourses and exhortations from great speakers. They do not become part of you unless you practice at least some part of what you hear. Whatever position one may hold in any bank, what belongs to him in it is only the amount of his deposit in it. Likewise, whatever great teachings you may listen to, only that part of the teachings which you practice belongs to you. All that you merely hear is not yours. Wealth and education are not good or bad in themselves. This depends on how each individual uses them. When they are used for right ends, they become good. This calls for purity of the heart. Treat all experiences with equanimity. On Yugadi day, it is the practice among the rural folk to eat what is called "Yugadi pachchadi" (New Year savoury). This chutney is made from neem flowers, mango juice, honey, sugar and other ingredients with different tastes. The inner significance of this preparation is to indicate that life is a mix-rare of good and bad, joy and sorrow and all of them have to be treated alike. All experiences have to be treated with equanimity. Everyone should make a resolve that he will face calmly whatever happens in this year, accepting it with good grace. Welcome everything. Do not bemoan over anything untoward. Consider everything as for your own good. Men should rise above sorrow and happiness, success and failure. This is the primary message of the Yugadi festival. Everything that occurs should be treated as a gift from God. This world is a mixture of pleasure and pain, which are inseparable. Pleasure is the outcome of pain. By developing equal-mindedness, you must cherish faith in God. Fill your hearts with Love of God, and perform your duties with dedication. This is the foremost duty of man.

Kalyana Mandap, Brindavan, Yugadi Day, 4 Apr 1992

Greed is the monstrous evil that drags man down. When Ravana lay dying, Rama directed His brother, Lakshmana, to go to him and learn from him the secrets of successful statecraft! Ravana taught him that a king who is eager to win glory must suppress greed as soon as it lifts its head, and welcome the smallest chance to do good to others, without the slightest procrastination! He had learnt the lesson through bitter experience!

11. Parents and Teachers Must Set The Example

In this worm life is transient,

Wealth and youth are not permanent;

Equally impermanent are wife and children;

Only Truth and reputation are lasting.

Concerned only with one's good and teaching the truth,

The preceptor may chastise or beat one,

Like the mother who administers unpalatable medicine
 For the good of her child
 Do not forget this truth.
 What greater gift is there than the gift of food?
 What greater deity is there than one's parents?
 What greater morality is there than promoting the public good?
 What righteousness can excel more than compassion?
 Is there any gain superior to the company of the good?
 Is there any disability worse than enmity?
 Is there any death on earth worse than infamy?
 Is there anything more valuable than lasting fame?
 Can anything be more sustaining than remembrance of the Lord?
 Is there a heaven higher than inner joy?
 Embodiments of the Divine Aatma! If children are to be persons of good character, adhering to good practices, the parents should be of good character and exemplary conduct.

The great teacher, Adi Sankaracharya, was the child of parents who were highly virtuous and noble in their conduct. For the great name attained by Ramakrishna Paramahansa and Swami Vivekananda, the credit goes to their parents. Many great men achieved name and fame by following in the footsteps of their parents.

A lesson Gandhi learnt as a boy
 If Gandhi, who was an ordinary person, was able to achieve greatness and world renown, it was because of the lessons in good behaviour which he learnt from his mother. The mother used to observe a vow: she would take her food only after the cuckoo sang in the morning. Once when Gandhi was a boy, the mother was waiting for a long time to hear the call of the cuckoo. Observing this, Gandhi went out of the house, imitated the call of the cuckoo and came in and told his mother that the cuckoo had sung and that she could take her food. The mother, who saw through her son's trickery, slapped him on the cheek and said, "You wicked fellow; what sin must I have committed to bear a son like you?" She felt sad that such a child should have been born to her. Her grief touched the heart of Gandhi. From that moment Gandhi took a firm resolve never to utter a lie again.

In his childhood, Gandhi used to be full of fear. There was a maid in his home called Rambha. Gandhi disclosed to her how he was always afraid. Rambha told him: "Child, always recite the name of Rama. By chanting Rama's name, your fear will go away." From that time Gandhi was always chanting the name of Rama. The habit of reciting Rama's name, which began in his boyhood, continued right up to the moment of his passing. Nor was that all. By adhering to the chanting of Rama's name, Gandhiji was able to achieve his aim of winning the country's freedom by non-violent means. For such a life of purity and virtue, the parents were primarily responsible.

Today parents themselves lack refined qualities. Unfortunately, today, because the parents themselves have no purity of character and lack refined qualities, and do not lead regulated lives, evil practices and wickedness are growing all over the world. When the parents get up from their beds abusing each other, their children get up assailing each other. Because of the malefic effects of the Kali age, parents tend to be quarrelsome. Fathers are behaving like Hiranya Kashyapa. Because of such parents, Bharath is witnessing the spread of unrighteousness and evil practices.

In days of yore the people of Bharath earned name and fame by leading virtuous and sacred lives and were an example to the world. The children of today take after their parents. The tree is based on the seed and the seed determines the nature of the tree. For the evil ways and bad behaviour of children today, the parents alone are to be blamed. Few parents choose to tell their children to speak the truth, to act righteously and earn a good name. Because of such bad parents, the nation is forfeiting its good name. It is better that such children are not born at all. They are a disgrace to their parents and to their country. Their education and their jobs may help to bring to them power, position and wealth but do not serve to promote in them such virtues as compassion, kindness and sacrifice. All their acquisitions have no permanence. Whatever strength one may possess, without the strength of the Divine, he is a weakling. What happened to a valiant person like Karna? He had physical prowess, intellectual abilities and great scholarship but lacking Divine support, he met with a pitiable end. Teachers' failure to teach the right path

For all the ills with which the nation is afflicted today, the parents and teachers are responsible. The teachers do not punish the students (for their lapses). Because the students are not punished for their mistakes, they behave as they please. The teachers are responsible for the sins of the students. They do not teach the students the right path. They transmit only book knowledge, but do not teach fight knowledge, wise living and higher values. If there are no morals and no human values, a man becomes a demon.

Only he is a real man who harmonises in his life the body, the mind and the Aatma. A life based on the body and the senses is an animal existence. One who is totally dominated by the thoughts and fancies of the mind is a demon. One who ignores the calls of the body and the mind and follows the call of the Spirit is Divine. The animal, the demonic and the Divine possibilities are immanent in the human condition. Hence, one who values only the body and follows the inclinations of the senses is comparable to an animal. In a sense, the animal may be considered superior to such a man because it has "a season and a reason" for its behaviour. But one having the human form, who craves for sensuous pleasures alone, is worse than an animal.

Character is more important than wealth
Even for these three kinds of behaviour, the parents and teachers are responsible. They are responsible for the good or bad conduct of the students. It is the parents who lead children to the highest levels or cause their fall to the lowest depths. Parents are concerned solely about the material welfare of their children and have no concern for their moral and spiritual well-being. When a child is born, the parents desire that he should be educated, sent abroad, encouraged to make as much money as possible there by whatever means.

This is all that they teach their children. People today earn money in so many different ways, from begging to dacoity. It is not wealth that is important. Character is primary. Parents do not teach the children to cultivate good qualities. They do not control children who go astray. They condone the lapses of the children and often encourage them in their bad habits. They are encouraged in their wrong ways even as Duryodhana was encouraged by his father, Dhritharashtra. It is because of such parents that the children today take to wrong courses.

Dhritharashtra was not only physically blind, but lacked also the eyes of wisdom. He was totally blind. Parents today are tending to be equally blind. They don't correct the mistakes of their children or chastise them. They are afraid that the children might run away and commit suicide.

Parents have the right to warn and correct their children. Why should they be afraid to do so?

What does it matter what happens to such wicked children? Instead of being a running sore for the parents, it is better they are no more. Death is preferable to infamy. Nor is there greater wealth than fame. Better to have a renowned son who is short-lived than an infamous son with long life.

Ensure world peace by winning God's love
The foremost thing which man has to acquire today is God's love. This love will secure world peace, peace in society and peace in the home. Through the individual's love and morality, there will be peace and security in the home. By individuals winning the love of God, society secures peace and order. When the people have got the love of God, the world as a whole enjoys peace and happiness.

Happiness and peace are not to be found in wealth, position or power. All these generate only fear and anxiety and not peace and happiness. Today, even highly educated persons do not recognise this truth, pose as devotees, but follow the examples of their parents. Hiranya

Kashyapa tried all methods to divert his son, Prahlada, from devotion to God. The child was subjected to every conceivable kind of torture and ordeal: trampling by elephants, biting by cobras and immersion in the sea. But Prahlada's devotion to the Lord saved him. Disregarding his perverse father, Prahlada held fast to the Lord.

Noble and Divine feelings are absent today
There is nothing great about being a father. No father can rejoice merely when a son is born.

Only when the people praise the virtues of the son will the father rejoice over his birth. A righteous son redeems himself and his family. Verily, they alone are fit to be called parents who bring up such virtuous children.

Prahlada declared, "He alone is a father who tells his son: Child, realise God. He is a true Guru who leads the disciple to God." Such teachers and parents have become rare these days. All that had brought fame and glory to the country in the past has become a waste because of the decline of moral values and behaviour. The educational system is utterly vitiated. There is no attempt to promote human qualities. Noble and Divine feelings are absent. It is utterly unbecoming of those who call themselves human beings to behave like animals with no devotion to God.

What does the word "Bhagavan" mean? It is not a nominal title. "Brahmethi, Paramaatmethi, Bhaga Iti Sah," says the Veda. That is, Bhagavan is the One who is the Supreme Absolute and Over-Soul. The word Bhaga means Sambhartha and Bhartha. Sambhartha is one who is responsible for creation of the cosmos. Bhartha refers to one who sustains and protects the cosmos. This means that Bhagavan is One who has the power of creation and protection. "Bha" means kaanthi (effulgence) and Shanthi (peace). "Ga" means one who is all-pervading, "vaan" means the one who has the capacity. Thus, "Bhagavan" refers to one who illumines and confers peace on the universe.

Man today does not seek to comprehend the inner meaning of Divinity. There is nothing in this world apart from the Divine. All that is seen in the phenomenal world is permeated by the Divine. The egoistic conceit of man, which makes him feel that he is the doer and enjoyer, is the cause of his ruin. This egoism has to be routed out. Man must seek to manifest his divinity. Only then can peace and security be established in the world.

Responsibility of parents towards children
Every effort has to be made to experience Divine love and purity. One who has secured love can accomplish anything. Nothing is beyond his reach. Hence, one should be worthy of God's grace.

Without Divine grace, man is no more than an animal. Man should strive to control his senses, develop good qualities and lead an ideal life. Parents are primarily responsible for bringing up children who will lead such ideal lives. Therefore, they have to reform themselves.

Today parents all over the country are worried about the conduct of their children and are not at all happy. They lament about the behaviour of their children, but do not realise that they are themselves to be blamed. If the parents had brought up the children on right lines, would they go astray? Pampering the children in various ways, they are allowed to go about like street dogs.

How can such boys be reformed? It is impossible. When wealth grows, arrogance increases and morality declines.

Men should realise that without God's love, human existence is utterly valueless. A bird like Jatayu earned God's grace. A simple old woman like Sabari won God's love. But men today, despite their scholarship and scientific knowledge, are making no attempts to secure God's love.

What is the use of this education or science? True science should serve to promote the progress of the nation. But today, in the name of science, the world is being destroyed.

Education should not breed a class of parasites, who exploit others. It should help to promote good qualities.

Victory can be won only with God's grace

Students should remember that this country was known in the past as a land where people led truthful and righteous lives. Krishna told Arjuna that he should consider God and Dharma (Righteousness) as most important. Because the Pandavas adhered to Righteousness and had firm faith in God, they could ultimately enjoy all prosperity and happiness. Because of their love for God, they could bear with fortitude all troubles and difficulties.

What was the fate of the Kauravas who ignored God? Not one of Dhritharashtra's hundred sons survived. Despite all the resources they had and the valiant commanders who were on their side, God was not on their side.

True victory can be won only by God's grace. Students! Strive for securing the love of God.

Today, love is being misused for satisfying the senses, with deplorable results. (Swami related the dialogue between Yainavalkya and his wife, Maithreyee, over attachment to the things of the world and pointed out how Maithreyee was as ready to give up worldly possessions as the sage himself).

Today, such couples are rare. There must be such couples who will give birth to virtuous children. Only virtuous children can bring a good name to the country.

Of what use is a son who does not use his hands to perform good deeds, who does not use his tongue to utter the Lord's name and who does not cherish in his mind truth and compassion? This is the triple purity that makes human life sublime.

Students should dedicate their lives to the service of others. Cultivate love. Remember the great mothers in the past who gave to the world Avatars from time to time.

What is the inner significance of observing today as Mother's day? It means that women should become such great mothers. The fathers should be exemplary in their conduct. When the fathers are not setting the right example, the children should be such as to have the courage to correct the parents. But unfortunately there are neither exemplary parents nor exemplary children.

Students! Fill your hearts with love.

Kalyana Mandap, Brindavan, 6 May 1992

I am always emphasising the value of Service as a Sadhana for realising the Oneness of all in God and the oneness of one's self with God. I do not recommend the giving up of Karma, for it is not possible. What is generally meant by Karmasanyas is the giving up of rites and rituals prescribed by the Scriptures. I call upon you to adhere to a new rite, Seva a new Yaga, Sacrifice of the Ego, a new ritual of worship, Saranagathi, dedication of all thoughts, words and deeds at the Lotus Feet of the Lord and acceptance of all that happens as Grace from Him

12. No Greater Sin Than Ingratitude

When rain falls on a sandy bed, it seeps down;

When the same rain falls on a bed of clay,
it remains sweet water;

When raindrops fall into an oyster, they become pearls.

Likewise, devotion results in what one deserves.

Embodiments of Divine Love! For all names and forms in the world, there is one that is basic.

Without that basis no object can have a name or form. For instance, here is a tumbler. It has name and form. But its primary base is silver. When the tumbler is melted, what remains is only the silver. What happened to the earlier name and form? They have merged in the silver.

Likewise, the basic truth underlying all the myriad names and forms in the world is the Sathwik principle. It is pure Sathya. It is Divine. It is this Divine Principle that enables everything to have a name and form.

"Ekoham Bahushyaam" (I am One, let me become the Many). It was by the Will of the Divine that all the myriad objects came into existence. The basic principle in this multiplicity is oneness.

Between the numbers one and nine, nine is the larger number. But, in fact, the number nine is made up of nine ones (1 + 1 + 1...). One is the basic number. So also all the diversity has emanated from the One.

Life is an interlude between birth and death

What is the meaning of human life? It is an interlude between birth and death. In this interlude, men are victims of a variety of desires. There is no harmony between men's thoughts, words and actions. What is the reason? Man's actions are not in accordance with his thoughts.

Man's thoughts are full of ideals. But he makes no effort to act up to these ideals. He thinks in one way, speaks in another way and acts in a different way.

Consequently, he is subject to all kinds of sorrow and disorder. This is because he fails to satisfy his conscience. A man without self-satisfaction can have no peace. When can self-satisfaction be realised? When there is unity and harmony in thought, word and deed: to speak as you feel and to act up to your words.

Man today is racked by all kinds of troubles. Are these troubles designed to make man miserable or to elevate him to a higher level of existence? Every trouble is really a step in elevating man. If there are no troubles, man will have no proper lessons. Troubles constitute good lessons. Trouble and pleasure are inextricably mixed and cannot be separated from each other by anyone. Pleasure has no separate existence. It is the fruit of pain. This basic truth is not recognised by man. When grief smites him, he succumbs to it. He gloats over some happy experience. His entire life is bound up with these varying experiences of pleasure and pain.

Therefore, man has to cultivate the sense of equanimity in pleasure and suffering. There is a joy in sorrow. There is suffering in happiness. It is only when man cultivates the sense of equanimity in all circumstances, in pleasure or pain, that he will be able to experience peace.

Thoughts are basis for the actions

All experiences of pleasure and pain have their origin in the thoughts of man. Thought is like the seed of a tree, which in due course puts forth branches, leaves, flowers and fruits. All that you see in a tree has come from a small seed. Likewise, although man's thought is subtle, it contains potentially the entire universe. The atom is the microcosm of the Universe. Students are aware of the huge size of the banyan tree. Its seed, however, is very small. The seed and the tree are essentially one.

Man has to keep a watch over his thoughts because they form the basis for his actions. When his wishes are fulfilled, he is content. When they are not realised, he feels disappointed. Man does not enquire into the causes of these divergent results. His failures are the result of his own shortcomings. When his heart is pure, his actions yield beneficial results. His thoughts are the cause of the success or failure of his efforts. Hence, man must utilise his thoughts in the proper manner. His vision of the world depends on how he looks at it. "As he feels, so he becomes."

When one's thoughts are sublime, the results are also sublime.

Man owes the society for all his achievements

Man receives help from various people in the world. Without such help, men cannot progress towards a higher level of existence. In childhood, the mother looks after the child. In boyhood, the father provides for his education. Later, he is involved in activities with friends. And then his kith and kin involve him in family relationships. Thus various persons assist man in his life.

Without the help of various people, no one can progress towards a higher life.

A man who has derived help in this manner, what help is he rendering to his fellowmen? It is good to render help to one who has helped you. It is even greater to help one who has done you harm. When this is the case, it is essential that man should serve the society that has helped him in so many ways. He owes to society the name and position he has achieved. Hence he must render service. This was the dictum of sage Vyasa as the distilled essence of his eighteen Puranas: "It is meritorious to render help to others; it is sinful to do them harm." This means:

Help ever, hurt never. Do not cause harm to anyone. If you can help anyone, do so.

The difference between mistake and sin

Once Duryodhana declared, "I know what is good and what is bad. I also know that bad consequences will follow bad actions. But I am impelled to do only bad deeds. I know what is good. I know that good deeds will yield good results. But my mind is not inclined towards doing good. What is the reason for this? It is the absence of purity in my thoughts. My heart is filled with selfishness. My life has grown in the soil of selfishness. Out of selfishness I am seeking gains for myself. For selfish reasons I am harassing the Pandavas. I am aware of this. I am doing all this consciously."

If one commits a wrong unwittingly, he is guilty of committing a mistake. But if he commits it deliberately, he is committing a sin. This is the difference between a mistake and a sin.

In this context, it may be pointed out that Karna is a great example of one who cherished gratitude for the good done to him. He was not only a great donor who gave away whatever was sought from him. His loyalty to his master was unbounded. He was ever ready to lay down his life for his master.

The ruler of Panchala announced that his daughter Draupadi would be given in marriage to any bowman who could bring down an overhanging fish-yantra by looking at its reflection in water.

Rulers from many countries had assembled there. Draupadi was no ordinary woman. She emanated from a blaze of fire. Who was worthy of her hand in marriage? Those taking part in the wedding contest had to abide by one of two conditions. Either he should be a ruler or a Kshatriya. Karna was a great warrior. He had come to take part in the contest. Unfortunately, he was not the ruler of any state and he was a charioteer's son, not a Kshatriya. For these reasons, he was asked to withdraw from the contest. He felt depressed that in spite of all his other accomplishments he could not take part in the contest. As he was walking back, Duryodhana got up with the feeling, "There is no one equal in prowess to Karna excepting Arjuna. With Karna on my side I can always deal with the Pandavas." He came to Karna's help at that moment. In that assemblage, he made Karna King of Angadesa.

For that one act of magnanimity, by which he was made a ruler, Karna pledged himself to serve

Duryodhana by shedding the last drop of blood for him.

Later on, the Kauravas and Pandavas had gathered their forces for war. Krishna had tried his best to prevent the Armageddon as he knew the infinite calamities war brought in its train. He went as an envoy of the Pandavas to plead for a peaceful settlement with the Kauravas. Arjuna told Krishna that it was futile to parley with the wicked Kauravas and that they should get ready for battle.

A mother's love is unbounded

A day before the battle was to begin, Kunthi, the mother of the Pandavas, realised what was impending. She was the mother of Karna also. Karna was her first-born who was the child of a boon from the Sun-God. She was aware of his extraordinary powers and sought an opportunity to meet him. There may be bad sons, but there is no bad mother. A mother's love is unbounded.

One day, Karna was performing Sandhya vandanam in the morning after taking a bath in the river. Getting news of this from her maids, Kunthi went to the river bank. Karna was in meditation. Kunthi stood behind him. As she stood, she was overwhelmed by grief at seeing him after a long time. She was also stricken with sorrow at the prospect of her near and dear ones dying in the impending battle.

Kunthi reveals that Karna was her son

Unable to bear the grief, she wailed aloud. Karna emerged suddenly from his meditation. He saw Kunthidevi before him. He did not know that she was his mother, though he knew she was the mother of the Pandavas. He asked her, "Mother! Why are you in such great sorrow? I am Karna the son of Radha. I offer my salutations to you. Please let me know the cause of your grief."

Kunthi replied, "Dear child, you are not the son of Radha. You are my son. You were born to me as a boon from the Sun-God. To avoid public ignominy, I left you on the Ganga. I am a great sinner. I pitilessly abandoned you on the Ganga though you were a new-born babe. For selfish reasons, to safeguard my name, I abandoned you in this manner. You are my eldest son. The Pandavas are your brothers and Dharmaraja is your younger brother. Dear son, give me one promise. If all of you were united, you could rule the entire world. You could become the emperor. All the Pandavas will obey and follow your footsteps like a shadow. I give you my word. Do not bear any enmity towards the Pandavas in the impending battle. Consider them in your heart as your brothers. Ponder over the sorrow that afflicts your mother."

When Karna heard these words, he was caught in a whirl and his mind was in confusion. "I had heard now and then about the secret of my origin, but never before from the mouth of my mother. The Pandavas are indeed my brothers. I am Kunthidevi's son. But at this juncture, am I to abide by my mother's words? Or am I to show my gratitude to my master?" Kama debated thus within himself.

Karna's refusal to betray his master He told Kunthi: "Whether he was a wicked or an unrighteous person, it was Duryodhana who gave me a position of honour and raised me to my present state. I cannot betray my master. But, because you are my Mother, I will give you one promise declared Kama. "Promise to the mother is one thing; loyalty to the master is a different thing. The former is in the nature of a fight. The latter is a responsibility. They are like the two wheels of a chariot or the two wings of a bird.

They go together. Mother, I give you this promise. When the occasion arises, I shall spare Dharmaraja, Bheema, Nakula and Sahadeva. I will not harm them. But I will not spare Arjuna. If in this battle I lose my life, the five Pandavas will be your sons. In case Arjuna dies, you will still have five sons. I will take the place of Arjuna among the Pandavas. In any case, there will be no diminution in the number of your five sons. This is my plighted word."

Saying this, Kama caught hold of his mother's feet and said, "Mother! The other day, in the court of Dhrupadha, Duryodhana saved my honour. I know he is a wicked

man. I also know that the Pandavas are the very embodiment of Dharma. But I will be worse than a cruel animal in the forest if I forget the good done to me by Duryodhana. I have to show my gratitude to my master.

In this respect, there can be no change in my attitude," declared Kama.

No atonement for betraying the Divine

Later, Karna gave away even the earrings given to him by the Sun-God. And he offered to Indra the armour he was wearing. He even laid down his life for his master. But he did not give up the gratitude he owed to Duryodhana.

It must be remembered that there is a means of atoning for the killing of a Brahmin or a cow or an infant. But there is no way of atoning for betraying the preceptor or the Divine. If you turn ungrateful you will be worse than a wild beast.

Kunthi then declared: "I shall be happy if you remain a man with such high ideals. Let me tell you there is no one who can slay Arjuna. You bear animosity towards Arjuna. I am content with your promise. It is enough if you spare Dharmaraja, Bheema, Nakula and Sahadeva."

In this context, observe how much gratitude existed among the Pandavas, Dharmaraja, Bheema and Arjuna were the sons of Kunthi. Nakula and Sahadeva were the sons of Madri (the second wife of Pandu). When Madri was about to commit Sari on her husband's funeral pyre, Dharmaraja gave her a promise. He said, "Mother! You are about to give up your life for the sake of my father. I shall look after your sons with even greater concern than for my uterine brothers. Whatever differences may arise between us, I shall treat them as my own brothers." He gave this pledge to Madri.

In the Mahabharatha, during the stay of the Pandavas in exile, the four brothers--Bheema, Arjuna, Nakula and Sahadeva---died at a pond where they had gone to bring water because they refused to answer the questions which the guardian Yaksha (spirit) of the pond wished to put to them before they were allowed to take the water. Dharmaraja then came to the pond and answered all the questions put to him by the Yaksha.

The Yaksha was so pleased with the replies that he granted a boon to Dharmaraja. He was prepared to restore to life one of the four brothers whom Dharmaraja would name. Dharmaraja promptly asked that Nakula or Sahadeva might be restored to life. The Yaksha wondered why Dharmaraja did not ask for the restoration of one of his own brothers, Bheema or Arjuna, but preferred one of the two stepbrothers. Dharmaraja replied that as he was there as a surviving son for his mother Kunthi, he wanted that a son of his stepmother, Madri, should be alive.

Dharmaraja mentioned the pledge he had given to Madri. Appreciating the large-mindedness of Dharmaraja, the Yaksha restored all the four brothers to life. Gratitude is a great virtue. Gratitude is a great virtue. When the power of gratitude is realised, it will be seen that it can give benefits much more than anyone can imagine. If out of narrow-mindedness, men become ungrateful, they will suffer grievously. If such is the case in regard to purely human relationships, how much more rewarding gratitude can be when it is offered to God?

Dear Students! This is a period of innocence and inexperience in your life. You are filled with desires. You tend to be selfish and self-centred. But even so, you can make your lives sacred and meaningful by carrying out the injunctions of the Divine. If you adhere to this one rule, you will redeem your lives and promote the welfare of your families and your society. Although Dharmaraja asked only for the restoration to life of only one stepbrother, the Yaksha revived all the brothers.

Karna stands out as the supreme exemplar of gratitude. He demonstrated what it means to be grateful to one who has helped you, even if he happens to be a wicked person.

Kalyana Mandap, Brindavan, 10 May 1992
13. Love The Motherland: Serve The World
English education has become all-important;
Spiritual education has receded;
How, then, can purity of heart be experienced?
That purity alone is the backbone of education.
Ignorant of the high ideals of The Divine culture of Bharath,

Bharathiyas make no effort to know their heritage.
What greater misfortune can there be than this?

Dear Students! True Bharathiya education consists in instilling in the students reverence for Bharath and its cultural heritage. It is not politics that will protect Bharath. Nor will bombs and arms protect it. It is the patriotism and spirit of sacrifice enshrined in the hearts of the people and their spiritual outlook that will protect the nation. Hence students today should be filled with the spirit of sacrifice, cultivate selfless devotion to the country and prepare themselves to pursue the spiritual path. Only such students--boys and girls---can protect the nation and safeguard its security.

Bharathiya education is not a prison-house
Bharathiya education is not the kind of education which makes one spend a lot of money to acquire a degree and then go about with a begging bowl for jobs. It aims at promoting selfreliance, instilling in the student the noble idea of promoting the progress of the country in a spirit of sacrifice and leading a joyous life of dedicated service to the people. It seeks to promote unity in diversity. It prepares the minds of students to fight against all forms of injustice, corruption and wickedness afflicting society.
Bharathiya education is not a prison-house for creating mental slavery or bondage to a job. It proclaims in strident terms: "The One abides as the Inner Spirit in all beings." It calls upon everyone to manifest his divinity. Thus, true Bharathiya education seeks to instil patriotism, promote the spirit of sacrifice, and encourage spiritual pursuits and thereby lead an ideal life.
Students! Education does not mean imparting worldly knowledge for leading a mundane existence. True education should inspire one with feelings and thoughts to lead an ideal life.
When a man is born, he is endowed with limited capacities. But owing to the misuse of the senses and the limitless growth of desires, these capacities are wasted away. As a consequence, he becomes prematurely old and dies. Hence, these limited capacities should be properly used by controlling the senses, thereby prolonging one's life, and dedicating one's knowledge and talents to the service of society. It is only when students develop character and integrity that they will be able to transform the moral climate of the world around them. It is because education has failed to transform human behaviour that there is no mental or spiritual development among them. For this purpose, a system of Dharma (moral order) has to be established that will promote both worldly and other-worldly well-being. Only then will humanity be divinised.
Three qualities and three Gunas
A student has to possess three qualities. "Sarva loka hithe rathaah" (Rejoicing in the well-being of the entire world). This is the first quality. The student must wish for the welfare of every country. The second quality is "Sarvajnaana Sambhavaah" (acquire all knowledge). This means that his knowledge should not be confined only to worldly matters. His knowledge should comprehend the spiritual. Every man is endowed with Inaana (knowledge). This assumes many forms. It is not mere intellectual exercise or mental speculation. It does not mean living in a dream world. It is not a product of the imagination. Inaana, in its profound sense, is the experience of oneness-- "Ekaika dharshanam." "Adwaita dharshanam inaanam" (Perception of the One alone is Wisdom), declares the scripture. There is no duality in this Inaana. Ainaana (ignorance) is the reverse of this awareness. This awareness should be reflected every moment, in every step of a human being. To acquire such awareness or knowledge, one has to secure three capacities. One, a healthy body, two, sense control, three, restraining the mind. If any one of these three is lacking, the awareness will be incomplete. All three should be in the right condition. If there is a defect in any one of them, full Sathwik knowledge cannot be got. Abuse of the senses The reason for the prevalence of various ailments among students today is the dissipation of energy caused by the abuse of the senses. For instance, the eye has a limited capacity to see. So the eyes should be used up to their capacity. This is the rationale for the motto: "See no evil. See what is good." The ears also have limits to what they can hear. You should not let the ears hear whatever you like. Thereby, the ears lose their power of hearing. The tongue is a powerful organ, but it also is subject to certain limits. By indulging in excessive speech, using harsh words and unpleasant language, the tongue's power is weakened. The tongue's power of speech is diminished by four practises: uttering falsehood, abusing others, indulging in slander, and excessive talking. In this manner, the powers of the senses are being wasted by their misuse. As a result, one's life itself gets debilitated. It is not difficult to go through the education process. By some effort, marks may be scored. But neither the blossoming of intelligence nor the unfoldment of good qualities can be witnessed in such students. The scoring of high marks or winning of high rank is not great in itself. What is important is the transformation of the mind. In the pursuit of education, practising what one learns is most essential. The external gains derived from education are accompanied by an equal amount of losses. The powers of intelligence and discrimination are lost. Knowledge of what is good, what is significant and what is supreme wisdom is lost. People are becoming slaves of the senses. The Kathopanishad declared: "The slave of the senses is a fool. Only the man who subdues the senses is a hero." Anyone who misuses his senses is a fool Here is an illustration. Ravana was a greater scholar than Rama. He was a master of sixty-four categories of knowledge. He knew also knowledge about the training of cows and elephants. Despite all these accomplishments, Ravana was described by Valmiki as a muurkha (a stubborn fool). Rama was described as Dharmamuurthi (the very image of righteousness). Despite all his knowledge, Ravana failed to keep his senses under control. Because he let his senses have free play, he became a fool. Anyone who misuses his senses is a fool, whatever the extent of his knowledge. Rama had full control of his senses and maintained perfect equipoise in all circumstances, whether of joy or grief. When he had to leave for the forest at the very moment that had been fixed for his coronation, he left for the forest with serene equanimity. He was unaffected by gains or losses, pleasure or pain. Life is a mixture of happiness and misery. Students! Your first task is to cultivate control over the senses. Only the student who has mastery over the senses can be heroic in his life and be strong and effulgent as a diamond. The one who is a slave of the senses will be a slave of the world. Self-control must be the primary aim of education. Students today are not filled with love for the country. They are also lacking in self-confidence. And there is no sign of faith in the Spirit in them. Students therefore should cherish patriotism and develop self-confidence. Only then will they be in a position to make use of their education for serving the country and promoting the well-being and prosperity of the nation. Ideals in life are very important Educated persons today are totally immersed in selfish pursuits. They do not think of service to others or the good of the nation. They are concerned about their jobs even before they complete their education. The link between education and employment should be completely snapped.

Education should be for life and not for a living.
 It is not earning a livelihood that is important. What matters is the ideals for which you live. The primary purpose of education is to enable one to manifest the divinity within him. When students pursue education in this spirit, they will promote the welfare of the nation, of society and their own good.
 Therefore, education should not be pursued as a means for achieving a desired end. This is a degrading attitude. All worldly desires can confer only limited pleasure. How, then, is one to achieve lasting bliss? It cannot be got through the body. Only through inner experience can lasting bliss be secured. Then alone is there fulfilment in life. Today there is no harmony between thought, word and deed. Thinking in one way, speaking in a different way, and acting in a different way, men are getting themselves bound by their own contradictions. In the process, they are deceiving themselves. Keep desires within limits Education should be pursued, not merely for acquiring degrees, but for cultivating human values.
 All riches are ephemeral. Do not become slaves of wealth. Become subjects of good qualities.
 Wealth without character is worthless. Life becomes an ideal one when character constitutes one's wealth. The blossoming of one's character leads to radiance in life.
 When a child is born, he is innocent of all desires. As he grows older, desires multiply. These desires have to be kept within limits. Life is a long journey and the less luggage you carry, the greater the comfort. Reducing desires is the true mark of civilisation. The government has imposed ceilings on land, on houses, and on many other things. But there is no ceiling on desires.
 Education should lead to restraint on desires.
 It should be realised that every organ in the body has a limit to what it can do. It is dangerous to use it beyond that limit. This applies to almost everything in life. Whenever the limit is exceeded, there is an adverse consequence. Excessive light will burn the retina. A deafening noise may damage the eardrum.
 Students! You are not unaware of the situation in the world today. Wherever you turn, there is disorder and violence. Man has been given two boons, Sukham and Shanthi (happiness and peace). Every person in the world, from a king to a beggar, desires only these two. But what is the happiness that he should seek? Is it physical, mental, or material pleasure? Men are not sure about what kind of happiness they want and wherefrom they can get it. If it is sensory pleasure that they want, they will find that these are only momentary and that they are weakened at the end. This is no pleasure at all. What about peace? People consider freedom from worry as peace.

Thyagaraja declared that there can be no pleasure without peace. How is peace to be secured?
 Only when desires are reduced will peace be secured. As desires grow, peace is lost.
 Develop contentment to put an end to desires
 Man is a prey to insatiable desires. As soon as he realises one desire, he develops a desire for something more attractive. He wants to become a legislator. Soon after he becomes one, he wants to become a minister and thereafter the Chief Minister. He is not content with that. He desires to go to Delhi. There is no end to these desires. Man should develop contentment. The discontented man loses in many ways. A student may desire to score high marks, but he should not wish that others should not fare equally well. This selfish attitude is unbecoming. All should fare equally well in the examinations. All should achieve excellence. Students should have this broadminded attitude.
 Rejoice in the success of others
 The stage of the student is like that of a tender sapling. When it is tended properly, it will grow into a good tree. From this young age you should see that the mind does not go astray. Do not give room for envy, hatred and arrogance. Rejoice in the success of others. Success will come to you of its own accord. Yield place to persons weaker than yourself in queuing for the bus. Shed the desire to get ahead of others. Do not always think narrowly about your own position. It is only when you develop a broad outlook that you will be able to emerge in the years to come as leaders of the nations. You are the leaders of tomorrow. It is only if you develop fight attitudes now that you will be able to play your roles properly in the future. Purify your hearts. Control your senses. This is the fight path.
 Spirituality does not mean mere meditation or worship. It means getting rid of the pollution in the mind. Students should be known for their serenity and orderliness. Instead, we find that there is excitement and agitation wherever a few students gather. This should not be allowed to happen.

Students! Yesterday Natesan brought two life-size figures of lions in bronze from his collection of antiques. You may wonder why these lions have been displayed on the stage. Many may be under the impression that they are kept for decorative purposes. But I considered them from a sacred point of view.

The lion is esteemed as the king of animals. It is not prone to commit anything mean or lowly. It is only when it is hungry that it kills an animal. It does not kill animals wantonly. Because it is known for its nobility of character it has been dubbed the King of animals. It has been said that human birth is rare among living beings. Hence every man should strive to become a lion among men. You should not fall a prey to weakness or fear. Be lions and not sheep.

Our students should become lions who will protect the people as leaders. They should be content to use their abilities for satisfying their minimum needs. Do not get involved in foolhardy adventure. Observe the proper limits in the use of your talents, wealth or position. Pledge yourselves to promote the advancement of the country with determination, courage and spirit of sacrifice. Go forward with courage. "God is by your side. God is the Indweller in the heart."

Have this confidence in yourself. This confidence begets courage. Mr. Justice Chandhrachud said that the first requisite is courage. What kind of courage? The one who is filled with doubts perishes-- "Samshayaathma vinasayathi." Never become "Doubting Thomases." Only when you are free from doubts will you become heroic. Doubts will disappear where there is self-confidence. "Shradhavaan labhathe Inaanam" (The earnest aspirant gains supreme wisdom). It is lack of earnestness that gives rise to doubts. Students should develop firm faith in sacrifice, patriotism and the spiritual goal. There is no need to tell you more about this, as you are familiar with all this as students of the Sathya Sai Institute. But there are quite a few new things which you have to learn. And there are many things which you have learnt which you have to put into practice and experience the fruits thereof. Moreover, you have to share and rejoice with others your experiences. That is the way to experience real bliss.

Develop firm faith in God

Students! The Vice-chancellor expressed a wish that Swami should bless the students with knowledge of Bharath's culture as embodied in great works like the Mahabharatha and the Ramayana. These works are of value not only to Bharathiyas but to the whole of mankind.

However, it is not enough if you merely listen to these discourses in the Summer Course. You should try to transform yourselves as a result. Without such transformation the Summer Course will be in vain. Therefore, cherish in your hearts whatever is said here. Develop firm faith in God. It is the loss of faith in God that has led to the degradation of mankind today. The existence of the Divine is demonstrated, even by science, in many ways. For instance, the sun, the moon, the earth and other planets are moving in their different orbits according to certain speeds. It will be disastrous for the world if they change their courses. There must be an unknown power which determines their movements. Without such a power they would not be following their prescribed courses. Who has determined these orbits and limits? We must ponder over this.

We drop an object from the hand. We see the object falling to the ground. But we do not see the power of attraction of the earth---the power of gravitational attraction. The gravitational force is there even though you don't see it. To deny what you cannot see is a mark of ignorance.

How the Divine works

To give another example. During World War II, millions of men died in Europe. Two years after the war ended, the children who were born were predominantly males. What is the reason for this? It is the need for maintaining a balance between the ratio of men and women in the population. If such a balance is not maintained, the human race will be extinct. What is the power that maintains such a balance? It is the will of the Divine. Whoever enquires deeply into the workings of the Divine cannot fail to notice this. There is at the base of everything a power that is at work. That is divinity. Ignoring this, and placing his faith egoistically in some other power, man is falling a prey to ashanthi (unrest). He is a slave to his conceit as a doer and enjoyer. This is wrong. There is a principle that is the Prime Mover.

There is a power which governs the Cosmic process. Few attempt to recognise this.

However, it may be asked, if God is controlling everything, what is the need for human effort?

God is like the electric current. But even if the current is there, you must have a bulb to obtain light. It is only when the bulb is switched on to the current that the bulb will burn. Students should understand how the four values Sathya, Dharma, Shanthi, and Prema, are interrelated. If a bulb is to shed light, it has to be connected to a switch by a wire and current should flow in the wire. Sathya is the current. Dharma is the wire. Shanthi is the bulb.

Prema is the light. When the current of Truth is connected to the wire of Righteousness and enters the bulb of Peace, you have the light of Love. You can see how all the four are essential. Human effort and Divine Grace should come together like the joining of the negative and positive ends of an electric circuit, to accomplish anything.

Students! Fill your hearts with the resolve to promote the welfare of the nation. Do not succumb to selfishness and careerism. Dedicate your lives to the well-being of the world and the promotion of world peace.

Institute Auditorium, Brindavan, 21 May 1992

Drop the delusion that you have become old or diseased, or that you have become weak and debilitated. Some people count the years and grieve over advancing age and shudder like cowards afraid of Death. But remember, elation is Heaven, despondency is hell. Have always some work to do and do it so well that you get joy.

Sathya Sai Baba

14. From Knowledge To Wisdom

Not one in a hundred among today's students

Cares to study the prescribed texts.

They are anxious only to secure a pass

Modern education has become a farce.

Vidya dhadhaathi Vinayam (Education confers humility). Humility does not mean merely an external show of respect. The true meaning of humility is the absence of a feeling of Ahamkaara and Mamakaara (egoism and the pride of possession). Education should aim at inculcating such an attitude among students. Every man should cultivate such feelings of egolessness and detachment and lead his life on this basis.

"Adhyaatma Vidya Vidhyaanaam" (Among studies, I am the study of the spiritual), declared

Lord Krishna in the Gita. He also observed, "I am the embodiment of spiritual knowledge," in the Gita. Pursuing spiritual studies, the ancient sages realised spiritual truths and divinised their lives. The greatness and glory of Bharath are based on its spiritual heritage. The true wealth of Bharath consists in its spirituality. If spirituality declines in this land, the nation will go to seed.

Together with this spirituality it is essential to have morality.

Morality means ethical behaviour.

It is the supreme duty of students to demonstrate such conduct in their daily life. A characterless student can never enjoy peace or happiness. Morality, thus, determines humanness and leads to spiritual illumination. Students should recognise this truth. It was for this reason that in ancient times the people of Bharath propagated constantly the value of morality and proclaimed the greatness of spirituality.

Goodness is present within everyone

Students! "Through perseverance anything can be accomplished," is a well-known adage. For instance, goodness in a person is like a piece of burning charcoal.

However, the fire in it is covered by the ashes of worldly desires. When the ashes are removed by sadhana (spiritual practice) the fire of goodness is revealed. Without this sadhana, the goodness will not be manifest. In fact, in every man, goodness is shining within as an effulgent light. But this remains invisible because it is enveloped in a cloak of worldly attachments.

Science and technology are making rapid strides today. But along with scientific knowledge, ignorance is also growing pari passu. Vijnaana means light. Where there is light there can be no darkness. So where there is Vijnaana there is no room for ignorance.

But today we notice that everywhere, every moment ignorance is apparent. This means that the light of Vijnaana

(scientific knowledge) is not shining brightly enough. If we had the full light of Vijnaana, then would be no sign of ignorance at all. It is clear, therefore, that the light of Vijnaana (science) today is not comparable to the light of prajnaana (the light of complete awareness). Vijnaana is form of ignorance.

It is obvious, therefore, that more than knowledge, what is essential is the refinement of human behaviour and Samskara (conduct). Sacrifice and charity are more important than wealth or position. Hence, for every individual, practical knowledge of the world is more essential than mere adhikaaram (position or authority). The first prerequisite for this is the promotion of human values.

Human values come first

Because of the absence of human values, it has been impossible to demonstrate the value of human existence. Man, therefore, has to start with the cultivation of human values. These human values can be developed only by spiritual practices and by no other means. Only when a seed is planted in the soil and watered can it sprout and grow from a sapling into a big tree.

But if the seed is kept in a tin and watered, it will only rot. Likewise with human values, it is only when they are implanted in a heart that is sacred and spiritual and nurtured there, that they will flourish and shine in all their splendour. Unfortunately, today man's heart is filled with narrow selfish concerns. His love is confined to himself and his nearest kith and kin. He does not realise that his welfare and the welfare of his family are dependent on the well-being of the society. This interrelationship should be grasped by students. They should take a firm resolve to eschew selfishness and self-interest and dedicate themselves to the service of society. When the society fares well, the nation also will be prosperous. Students should realise the integral unity of their individual well-being and the well-being of the society and the nation.

Man aspires for a fruit that is ripe and sweet. Whatever the quality of the seed, if the fruit is unripe it will not be enjoyable. No one likes a tasteless fruit. Likewise, society will shun an individual who lacks a social consciousness. A student who seeks to earn the respect and regard of society should conduct himself properly. He should be a person of integrity. Spirituality should be manifested in his behaviour. He should set an example to others. Most students today are lacking in such idealism. Students tend to have narrow ideas and petty objectives. They have no conception of human values. Whatever studies one may pursue or position one may occupy, one must cherish human values.

As a youth, one tends to be hot blooded and conceited. Puffed up with pride, he treats others as men of straw. Most students today are immersed in trivial chatter and meaningless pastimes. Sacred and ennobling ideas have no appeal for them. In this situation, when they enter on their studies, they develop arrogance and ostentation and get into evil ways. They are filled with bad thoughts, bad feelings and indulge in bad actions. In the process the primary purpose of education is forgotten. Education is regarded as an exercise in getting acquainted with books. He forgets that the aim of education is to understand the purpose of life. He relies on the strength of body, wealth, position and scholarship and forgets that true strength is derived from Righteousness and Divine Grace. Without the power of Righteousness and the grace of the Divine, all other forms of strength are of no use. The world has plenty of men with wealth, physical prowess, position and authority. Have any of these given them mental peace? No. They can only confer name and fame in the mundane sphere. They cannot confer peace or happiness.

Recognising this truth, students should consider the royal road that will take them to the fight goal in the future.
Man's best friends and worst enemies
The foremost thing that should be considered by the students today is how to get rid of the bad thoughts and bad desires in which they are enveloped. They are the worst enemies of man.

Man's best friends are good thoughts and good intentions and good behaviour.
From ancient times it has been the greatness and glory of Bharath to proclaim to the world the message of human welfare and praying for the good of all mankind. The world acclaimed the fame of Bharath. In those days no other country enjoyed such peace and prosperity as Bharath.

Bharath was esteemed as the spiritual leader among nations. She was regarded as the preceptor for all countries. It is a sign of thoughtlessness for students to forget the greatness of Bharath's sacred culture, develop a fascination for exotic manners and customs, and give up Bharath's own traditions and practices. It is good for the well-being of every nation to adhere to its own traditions and practices. Students should learn to stand on their own legs and not depend on others. You must rely on the Divine and not become subservient to others in worldly matters.

That alone is swechcha (true freedom).
Act according to dictates of your conscience
Swechcha means knowledge of the Aatma (Spirit). Self-control is true freedom. Spiritual bliss is freedom. Self-realisation is freedom. Swa + Ichcha = Swechcha.
Swechcha does not consist in living according to one's whims and fancies, indulging in the fleeting pleasures of the senses and wasting one's entire life in experiencing momentary joys. Swechcha (freedom) means acting according to the dictates of one's conscience.
In his address earlier this morning, Dr. G. Ventaktaraman mentioned that the Divine, after creation, did not keep all powers within Himself but gave them to mankind. This is true. God is the Creator. He created everything in the Cosmos. But He did not retain within His hands the responsibilities relating to the Creation. He gave to human beings all capacities. But He laid down a condition relating to the use of these capacities. Men are free to live as they like. They can utilise all the material objects in creation. There can be no objection to this from anyone, not even from God. But, the Divine has declared that there is no escape from the consequences of one's action. This has to be properly understood. No one can go against the laws of Nature. For instance, in the morning's lecture a good illustration was given. The wind blows; rains fall. In the Dwapara age, Indra caused a heavy downpour. The people who were affected by the deluge, prayed to the Lord: "Oh Lord! We and our cattle are suffering from this downpour. Save us from the rain." The Lord replied: "I cannot stop this rain. Whatever has to happen in nature has to go on. But I have the right to protect you from its adverse effects. Rain comes according to the laws of Nature. These natural phenomena should go on in their respective ways. But, having regard to your devotion and prayers, I shall lift this hill and provide shelter to all of you. But I will not stop the rain." (The reference is to the lifting of the Govardhana mountain by Sri Krishna).

Now, the wind has the power to blow out a lamp. The Divine has endowed the lamp with the power to shed light. The powers of the wind and of light are derived from God. But it is foolish for anyone to order the wind not to blow out the lamp. What one can do is to protect the lamp from the blast of wind by fixing a chimney. This is within human capacity.

Through these examples you should learn how to regulate the forces of Nature and not seek to go against natural laws. It follows that man has the freedom to enjoy the things provided by the Creator.

But man should exercise his discrimination to determine what are beneficial for him and what are not fit to be used. Because all things are available, one should not use them as he likes for the simple reason that each use is accompanied by its natural consequences. One cannot avoid these consequences. If you are prepared to face the consequences, you can act as you want. What is happening, however, is enjoyment of something with relish and later bemoaning the adverse aftereffects. This is a mark of mental weakness.

Prakruthi (Nature) is like a mirror. It reflects your action. Standing before a mirror, you offer a Namaskar to it. The image in the mirror reflects your actions. If you attempt to hit the image, the reflection will hit back. Basing on this law of action and reaction, the Vedanta declared:

"Yadbhaavam Thadbhavathi." (Whatever your thought, that you become).

Hence, in the realm of natural phenomena, whatever actions you do will be followed by consequences which are inescapable, sometime or other. No escape from the consequences of your actions. Students! As human beings, you have to ascertain by the use of your intelligence and Vijnaana (discriminating power) what are the actions that are proper and what are to be avoided. Whatever appears to be good, you better do it. But, if knowing that something is wrong, you do it, you can never escape from its consequences. The Lord created the Cosmos and offered it to mankind.

Consequently, the responsibility for properly utilising all objects in the world rests on humanity and not on the Lord. If men use things in the right way and benefit from them, they will experience happiness. If you misuse them or put them to wrong uses, you will have to bear the troubles resulting therefrom. This is the lesson to be learnt through Vidya (education).

What is the meaning of Vidya? It means Jnaana (knowledge). Is it worldly knowledge or spiritual knowledge? Is it experience of the external or the internal? The meaning of knowledge will vary according to whether it relates to the external or the internal. Students should enquire into both of these. After such enquiry, they should try to reconcile both of them in practice.

Do as you would be done by. The divinity present in man is present everywhere. It is not limited to man. It is common to all living creatures. You should realise that, if what is done by others causes pain to you, similar action by you will cause similar pain to others. If you desire others to show respect towards you, show that respect to others first yourself. It is not possible for you to win the esteem of others without your showing the same feeling towards them.

The world is governed by three principles: Reaction, Reflection and Resound. Hence you should see that your actions, your vision and your words are right. For every man, humility and reverence are valuable ornaments. Humility is the hallmark of right education. Humility is lost when men are filled with self-pride, or discontentment. Humility should be observed in all circumstances. It should be manifested from the heart. Egoism is an acquisition from outside.

 The arrogance of knowledge is an acquired vice. In young persons, it is destructive of human values.
 Students! Remember that adolescence is an intermediate stage in one's life. It comes in the middle and passes off quickly. In the brief period that it lasts, it appears glamorous but only for a fleeting moment. Hence, one should be very careful how this period in one's life is used. Adi Sankara declared: "There is pain at birth. Old age is painful.
 Therefore, be vigilant always." All relationships and all possessions are temporary. One should not get deluded by them. All things pass away in due course. Only the Divine abides forever. Only the present matters, because both the past and future are in the present. Today's sapling has come out of yesterday's seed and is the parent of the tree into which it will grow. Don't worry about the future or brood over the past.
 Make good use of the present. Then life will be filled with joy. Be happy. That will lead you to union with God.
 Insatiable desires result in disappointment
 In the railway journey of life, students are like long-distance passengers. They should not burden themselves with too many desires. Reasonable aspirations to achieve distinction in one or other field are legitimate. But there should be a limit to such desires.
 Insatiable desires result in disappointments which cause mental disability. Man forfeits peace largely because of the desire to amass and hoard wealth. As birds and animals have no such tendencies, they lead a freer and more contented life.
 Students! You are entitled to become masters of Nature. Do not become its bond-slaves. Make faith in God the breath of your life. Realise that you have to share with others whatever you acquire by way of knowledge or wealth. It was the spirit of sacrifice and sharing which made Bharath famous in the past. Today the spirit of sacrifice has given place to selfish enjoyment.
 This has become a cause of disease.
 The truly educated person is one who uses his knowledge for the good of others. He is entitled to be called a Inaani (a man of wisdom). Knowledge which is used for sense-enjoyment or for the satisfaction of worldly desires is not Inaana (wisdom).

 Students! Become messengers of peace and security for the world.
 Prepare yourselves to make sacrifices for the world rather than to derive personal benefits from
 it. Derive joy from renunciation and not from sensuous pleasures.

 15. Rise From Animality To Divinity
 Man is dogged by two defects
 Which prevent him from thinking of God;
 He conceals his myriad faults;
 And proclaims the minor faults in others.
 Students! Bharath was contributing to the security and prosperity of the world from ancient times by its adherence to the spiritual path. From then to this day, the message: "Let all the people of the world be happy" has been the ideal of Bharath. Many persons in various places, at various times, immersed themselves in experiencing the joy of the Spirit.
 Today, because of the influence of modernism and modernity, young men and women treat with levity the very term spirituality. There is a reason for this attitude.
 Over the centuries, the people in the country were mouthing spiritual sayings, parrot-like, without understanding their meanings, with the result that students today are unable to understand the true meaning of spirituality. Even scholars and men of spiritual eminence have been unable to convey the spiritual message to the young people of today in a manner that is meaningful to them and appeals to their hearts.
 The impression that is conveyed to the young people is that spirituality consists solely in good actions like performing bhajans, offering puja (worship), reciting the names of the Lord, going on pilgrimages and visiting temples. The primary reason for this is the failure on the part of the propagators to comprehend the profound message of the Vedas and Vedangas and realise the underlying truths embedded in the great epics and Puranas.
 The true meanings of spirituality
 No one among the young men and women today understands what is the meaning of spirituality.
 They imagine that spirituality means meditation on God, bathing in sacred waters, and visiting holy Shrines. This is not the correct meaning of spirituality.
 Spirituality means destroying the animal nature in man and making him realise his divine consciousness. Spirituality implies that one should not develop egoistic pride on account of the divine potencies in man but utilise them for achieving spiritual strength. Spirituality calls for the recognition of the manifold capacities manifesting in man as emanating from the Spirit and not from the mind. It means developing the faith that all powers come from the Divine. Spirituality does not mean proceeding from the human to the Divine. It seeks to unfold the divinity in man. Spirituality does not mean passing from the mundane to the Divine. Spirituality means making man manifest the divinity in him. People today have the wrong impression that spirituality is concerned with the journey from the mundane world to the higher realm and vice versa. Because of this mistaken view, students today are in a state of confusion about spirituality. Spirituality appears meaningless to them. Spirituality is the realisation of the role of the Spirit in daily life. It is a way of life. Our entire life is bound up with the Spirit. All the powers of man are derived from the Spirit. It is totally wrong to think that Spirituality is divorced from daily life and that our daily concerns have no relation to spirituality. Nor does spirituality mean leading a lonely and secluded life. True spirituality calls for the recognition of the oneness of all mankind and to demonstrate the spiritual truth underlying this Divine unity. All our actions are related to the Spirit. Our entire life is bound up with the spiritual. Whatever one says, whatever one does, whatever one thinks, all of it is related to the Spirit. Spirituality is the expression of the promptings of the Inner Spirit. The good deeds by the external instruments of the body cannot be deemed spiritual. The very first thing one has to do is to destroy the animal nature in man. Without eliminating the animal nature, all rituals and acts of charity are of no avail. Of what use is it to foster one's animal instincts, while doing acts of charity or conforming to religious injunctions? As a man grows older, his desires also grow, instead of diminishing. Performing external rituals without subduing the animal nature, men are only pursuing wrong courses. However much one may contemplate on God, from time to time he is a prey to Raaga (attachment) and Dwesha (hatred). These two animal propensities have to be got rid of at the outset. Strive to overcome the animal nature. People participate in bhajans. This is doubtless a good act, but it is only an auxiliary element in spiritual discipline. People take part in bhajans, but are they transforming their attitudes as a result? No. All the animal qualities like bad feelings remain along with participation in bhajans.

Without getting rid of such attitudes, the continuous participation in bhajans is of no value.

Without removing the animal nature, a singer of bhajans continues to be a sinner. The bhajans should be used as a means for overcoming the animal nature.

Participation in bhajans and performing of worship should lead to the elimination of animal qualities. Without the conquest of animal nature, all forms of external worship are of no use.

People expatiate on the greatness of Bharathiya scripture and praise the glory of the Vedas. But all scriptures are intended to promote right practices and not merely to be used as texts for reading. Of what use is it merely to read these scriptures as a routine ritual without practising their teachings? The sacred books of the different religions--whether it be the Vedas, the Bible or the Koran--are intended to promote spiritual practices and not be used for ritualistic reading.

Even eminent scholars treat these scriptures only as texts for paaraayana (ritualistic recitation).

It is because of the mistaken notions of these scholars that young people today have failed to grasp the true import of spirituality.

All the spiritual propaganda that is carried on today is totally divorced from practice, with the result that spirituality has made little impact on the youth today. The young do not get a compelling vision of spiritual truths. Here is an illustration.

In ancient times, people used to perform Yagas and Yajnas (religious sacrifices). These sacrifices were being performed according to the rules laid down in the scriptures. But while conforming to the prescribed procedures, few understood the inner meaning of these sacrifices. All their lives were spent in external observances. In the performance of sacrifice, they used to offer cows or other dumb animals as bali (sacrifice) and propagated the view that such offerings were in accordance with spiritual injunctions. This was a great mistake. These were meaningless practices.

Offer your animality to God

What does pashuthva (animal nature) mean (when it is used with reference to the sacrifice of animals)? Pashuthva (Animal nature) refers to Jiva Thathwa (one's way of life). The manner of living in which dehabhraanthi (delusion regarding the body) is prevalent is pashuthva (animal existence). What is the delusion regarding the body? It is the identification of the body with the Self (the "I"). This is the mark of the animal nature in man. The real meaning of animal sacrifice is the sacrifice of the animal nature in man. Everyone has to get rid of Ahamkaara and Mamakaara (egoism and the sense of "mine"). Without sacrificing these animal tendencies, sacrificing dumb animals is unworthy of human beings.

God accepts the bad and gives good in return

The word bali is used with references to the sacrifices in Yagas. What is the bali that is to offered in the sacrifice? It is the offering of one's bad qualities and bad thoughts as an offering to the Divine. How can one offer bad things to God? God alone can accept such offerings and give good things in return. No one else in the world will accept the bad and give what is good in return. This kind of exchange is possible only for the Divine. An example for this may be had from ordinary life.

There is a soiled and tattered currency note with you. No one is prepared to accept it from you.

But when it is tendered to the Reserve Bank, which issued it, it is bound to accept it and issue a new note in return. Likewise, who is competent to accept one's bad thoughts, perverse feelings and evil intentions? Only the Almighty can accept them. He is the Spiritual Reserve Bank that will accept the soiled notes of your mind and give in return good currency (in the form of good thoughts).

Hence, offerings should be made only to those who are competent to receive them. All bad thoughts and feelings should be offered to God so that we may receive, by His grace, good thoughts and feelings in return. Spirituality, thus, means transforming one's life into an ideal one by offering one's bad qualities to the Lord and receiving from Him good qualities in return.

In ancient times they used to perform Aswamedha Yaga (Horse Sacrifice). What does the "Horse Sacrifice" mean? By Aswam (horse) is meant that which is restless. The horse cannot remain steady even for a moment. It will be always shaking one part or the other of its body. The horse is an animal which represents the unsteady mind. The word Medha in Aswamedha literally means the mind. Thus to perform the Horse Sacrifice really means to offer the restless mind to God.

Meaning of horse sacrifice

The horse is not only restless but it also runs fast while riding thereon. So also, man's mind is both restless and very fast-moving. That is why Arjuna complained to Krishna (during the Gita dialogue) that the mind is restless, strong, obstinate and dangerous. Such a highly fickle mind which is comparable to the horse (an animal) should be surrendered to God as a sacrificial offering. This indeed is the real meaning behind the Horse sacrifice.

But nowadays everyone is misguided by the outer meaning only, and nobody takes the trouble of knowing the inner meaning.

Some may try to argue that in olden days animals were sacrificed during Yajnas and Yagas

(sacrificial rites). But they are not correct. Only a few ignorant Pandits (scholars) and misguided elders used to indulge in animal sacrifice. But those who recognised the inner meaning of this ritual used to give prime importance to the sacrifice of the beastly qualities in man while performing such religious ceremonies. The sum and substance of the various religions observances is to destroy the animality in man. Here is one more example to illustrate this point.

Inner significance of Nandi in from of Easwara

In temples of Easwara (or Shiva), you find Nandi (image of bull) in front of the deity. What is the inner significance of this? The usual reply you get is that Nandi is the Vahana (vehicle) of Easwara; as if He could not afford to have a better vehicle than a bull. This is a wrong idea. The truth is that just as the Lingam is the symbol of the Lord (Easwara), Nandi (bull) is the symbol for Jiva (individual soul). Therefore, just like the Nandi, man should turn away from Prakruthi and direct all his attention towards Easwara only.

There are some more meanings for this symbolism. For instance, it is said that no one should stand between Easwara and Nandi. One should have the vision of Easwara by looking through the space in between the two ears of Nandi. The underlying idea is that through the Sadhana of using its ears to listen about Easwara alone, the animality in the bull becomes transformed into divinity and because of its merger with Easwara it is called Nandeeshvara (Bull-God). Thus the lesson of the symbolism is that man should also try to merge with God, by following the example of the Nandi.

His Story is History

Students! Try to understand the correct meaning of what is recorded in the Charithra or history of Bharath which is highly sacred. Charithra (history) is derived from "charayalu" (the actual actions) of people but not from mere writings or discourses. Practising, experiencing, enjoying bliss, and sharing the bliss with others--is Charithra which is called History, in the English language. In other words, "His Story is History." It means that the story of God is History.

Students should understand such inner meanings. What is meant by Rama Charithra (History of Rama)? What Rama did during His lifetime is His Charithra or History. How He had mastered His senses and mind during all the vicissitudes of life, how He was neither elated by pleasure nor depressed by pain, how He accepted His exile into the forest with the same happy countenance with which he had prepared Himself for His coronation. This story of His which describes His equanimity under all circumstances of pleasure or pain and loss or gain, is what is known as History.

Running towards pleasures and fleeing from pain is characteristic of animality. An animal rushes towards you when you show it the green grass in your hand, but it will run away from you when you show it the cane in your hand. Thus, attraction to what appears to be good and repulsion from what appears to be bad is the nature of animals. But man should be prepared to confront both with equanimity because in this worldly life these pairs of opposites always go together. No one can separate pain from pleasure, sorrow from joy, or loss from gain since they are inextricably intertwined. We can never find anywhere unadulterated pleasure or pain separate from each other. The fruit of pain is pleasure and vice versa.

When a son is born, the father celebrates it as a great festival, distributes sweets to all, and dances with joy. But when that son dies, he becomes depressed with sorrow. Thus the same son is the cause of both joy and sorrow to the father. Birth and death are the root causes for joy and sorrow. But, for whom are these births and deaths? Death is for that which is born, and birth is for that which has died. If there is no birth, there is no death. This body is the root cause for birth and death as well as for Ahamkaar and Mamakaar (the feelings of "I" and "Mine"). Only because the father had seen and experienced the form of his son, he is afflicted when that form of his son is taken away from him. The very same "father" had never wept for that very same son before the latter was born in that form.

Do not forget your divine source, Aatma

Today we are fascinated only by the form. We are being tormented by this transient form which is but a reflection. We are to take cognisance not of the form but of our divine source. Aatma (Self) is our source, which is also called Adhyaatma, because it is Aadhi + Aatma, i.e. the Aatma which is Aadhi (the beginning or source). Hence we should get back to our source. Then alone can we experience total (unalloyed) bliss.

If you bring a fish and keep it in a gold vessel studded with all the nine precious gems, it will not at all feel happy. On the contrary, it will struggle restlessly to get back to its source, namely, water. So also, we have strayed away from Aatma, our source. Having been enticed by the worldly pleasures like wealth, gold, vehicles and other properties, we are forgetting our very source. When we deeply ponder over this matter, the fish seems to be more intelligent than man.

Why? Because that fish has not forgotten its source, while man who, despite all his education, intelligence, culture and sophistication, has forgotten his source.

Our bodies are like vessels. Whatever changes the vessels may undergo, our source will never change. For example a silver plate, a silver tumbler and a silver box--the names and forms of these three articles are different. The ways in which they are made use of will also be different.

But when any one of these three articles is melted, what remains is silver alone. In other words, in spite of the change in the names and forms of the articles, there is no change in the silver which is the common substratum of all of them. Similarly whatever names and forms we may assume, the common substratum of all these forms will continue to be the same Aatma which is changeless. Always remembering this fact is what is called "Spirituality."

Reduce your desires to escape from miseries

Sacrificing your ego is Sathwik (pure and noble), while sacrificing any animal is Thamasik (impure and ignoble). Today you need to enter into the Sathwik life and sublimate your human nature into divine nature. This, indeed, is the primary goal of your life's journey. Every man undertakes the usual pilgrimages and other routine good activities like charity, etc. But all these will not save him from worries, until and unless he gives up Ahamkaara and Mamakaara i.e. "I" and "Mine."

A rich man bundled up all the necessary luggage in his bed-holder and started on a pilgrimage.

He visited Kasi (Benares), Prayag, Haridwar, etc. Although tired with the day-long journey, he could not sleep during the nights. During the day time, he used to have darshan (the holy sight) of beautiful images of Gods and Goddesses and bathe in the sacred waters of holy rivers. He was happy that by these religious activities his sins were being washed away. However, when he investigated into the reason for his not getting sleep during the nights, he found that there were lots of bugs in his bedding. He should get rid of those bugs. Then only he can have sound sleep.

In the same manner, in our bedstead called the body there are any number of bugs, namely, endless desires of various types. As long as these desires are there, one cannot escape from miseries wherever one might go. One should, therefore, reduce one's desires.

Do not entertain imaginary aspirations

Students of today are the victims of several kinds of desires. No sooner does a student step into the college than he thinks of getting his degree immediately and going abroad for higher studies.

You should not give room to such fanciful desires which will sap your mental powers. During your stay in the college, concentrate whole-heartedly on your studies. Don't entertain all sorts of unrealistic and imaginary aspirations. What is supremely important is the present.

Whenever undesirable feelings like anger, hatred, jealousy etc., raise their ugly heads in you, crush them down forthwith. For instance, when somebody criticises or abuses you, you will get angry immediately. But you should not react to such things on the spur of the moment. You must coolly reflect thus: "Am I having in me any defects which he has pointed out? In case these defects are in me, will it not be a mistake on my part to criticise or abuse him in retaliation?"

Suppose there are no defects at all in me, then why should I get angry?" When you reflect like this, your anger will leave at once and you will become calm and cool. "My life is My message"

Students! I am an ideal example in this respect. That is why I say, "My Life is My Message."

Many will be criticising Me, while many others will be praising Me. But I am neither depressed by their criticism nor elated by their praise. Why? Because, if some people mention about whatever qualities are actually in Me, I need not pay any attention to them; if anyone attributes to Me what is factually not in Me, I need not be worded about it. For instance, if someone calls me

"Butta Thala Sai Baba" (i.e. Sai Baba with a basket-like crown of hair), I should by all means accept their remark because I have such a bushy hair on My head. On the contrary if anybody accosts Me as "Batta Thala Sai Baba" (i.e. baldheaded Sai Baba), why should I accept it? I have no bald head. So if defects which I do not have are pointed out directly even in My very presence, I do not accept them; hence I am not upset by them. That is the fight "determination," indicating self-confidence. It is not good for you to be either elated or dejected by others' remarks, without having confidence in yourself. So, first and foremost, you should develop selfconfidence.

Students! If anybody asks you, "who are you?" You will reply, "I am a man." This is only a half truth. What is the other half of the truth? It is: "I am not an animal." Thus, the full truth is: "I am a man; I am not an animal." When you recognise the second half of the truth that you are not an animal, you will not give room to any bestial qualities in you.

If, in this impressionable age, you firmly establish such sacred ideas and feelings in your heart, you will turn out to be ideal persons in this world. All histories are sacred--whether they pertain to Bharath, Islam or Christian. It is in their followers that you find all sorts of omissions and commissions. They are full of animality. That is why the hatred between one religion and another is ever on the increase. However, there is nothing wrong with the religions per se. All religions have preached good things only. Men should recognise this fact and conduct themselves accordingly. What is wrong with religions if only your minds are good? Good and bad are creations of your mind only.

Transform from animality to divinity

You should not be misguided by the worldly and superficial meanings, and forget the inner meanings. This is the crux of spirituality. The waywardness of your mind prevails in the gross state of wakefulness as well as in the subtle state of dreaming. How can you change such a fickle mind? If you keep away from animality during waking state, then animality will not enter even in your dreams.

Students! Embodiments of Love! In the first instance, try to understand correctly the meaning of spirituality. You should transform your nature from human to divine.

You must direct your attention to God. Nandi could become Easwara, only because it turned its attention to God.

Similarly, Hanuman, the monkey, and Garuda, the bird, became dear to the Lord. Therefore, if you get rid of your animality, you will become Pashupathi (the Lord of all beings).

Some tips to control anger and hatred

You should not become a victim of the feelings of anger, hatred, ego or pride which may arise in you. When such feelings arise in you, sit silently for a few minutes. Instead of doing so, you must not give vent to your anger by scolding or beating others as you like. How to put this into practice? As soon as you get angry, you should immediately leave that place and go out into the open and quietly walk a furlong. Then your anger will disappear. An easier method than this is to stand before a mirror and look into your own angry face. You will dislike your own face and look upon it with disgust or aversion. Then try to laugh heartily and your anger will leave you.

If you find it difficult even to do this, go into your bathroom and turn the water tap on. To the accompaniment of the tune of the sound created by the water flowing from the tap, begin to sing a good song. Then your anger will certainly disappear. Or else, drink a glass of cold water. Like this, you have to seek ways and means of regaining a calm and peaceful mood. Instead of doing so, if you allow your anger to grow, restlessness will also grow along with that anger depriving you of peace of mind. You should never give tit for tat, or word for word.

The less you talk, the more will become your mental power. With the increase in your mental capacity, there will be increase in your power of discrimination too. Consequently, you will give up "individual discrimination" and resort to "fundamental discrimination." Because of this, you will begin to consider the good of the world at large rather than your own individual welfare.

You must cultivate such broad feelings from this young age itself. Strive to gain "practical knowledge"

What is the reason for the students of Bharath taking to wrong paths and becoming victims of unrest? They are not making any effort to understand matters in the proper perspective and to act accordingly. One should try to understand everything thoroughly, and not rash forward blindly into all matters. Then only you will gain "practical knowledge," and that will guide you along the desirable and sacred path. You will find guideposts here and there on the roadside, to indicate which path you should take to reach any particular place. The ups and downs in the path can be experienced only by those who tread the path, but not by the guidepost. Most of the books today are like the guideposts. However, you must not be like mere guideposts. You should actually practice and get the experience.

Expand your love

Students! You can gain all things through love alone. Without this love, you cannot obtain anything. Love can win over even the strongest of enemies. True love is desireless and natural. It is based on the Atmic relationship. A small example for such love: a mother is walking along the street, carrying her young baby. If you happen to be walking behind them, that child will smile on seeing you, and naturally you will also smile at the child. Who is that child and who are you? Although there is no relationship whatsoever between the two of you, the child is able to make you smile. What a profound bliss would you experience in such love! If you weep, you have to weep alone. But if you laugh, others too will laugh. It is such love and bliss that will make you one with God. Therefore expand your love and thereby experience expanded bliss.

16. Perennial Message Of The Ramayana

Sweeter than sugar is Rama's name

Tastier than curds and Much sweeter than honey.

Full of nectarine sweetness is Rama's name,

Chant ever and anon the name of Rama.

Students! The Ramayana depicts the triple qualities of Sathwa, Rajas and Thamas. The relevance of the Ramayana is not confined to a particular time, place or circumstances. It is of universal significance for all times. Its relevance is not limited to India alone.

The Ramayana holds out Rama as an embodiment of ideal qualities. As a son, friend, husband, master and ruler, He was an ideal without a parallel. In the world one may be an ideal son, but not an ideal friend. One may be an ideal friend, but not an ideal brother. But Rama stands out unique as an embodiment of all ideal attributes.

Students should note an important aspect relating to the breaking of the bow of Shiva at the court of Janaka. Though the bow was broken, the string connecting the two ends of the bow did not break at all, for the two ends of the bow stand for Sita and Rama-- Prakruthi and Purusha. In fact the bond between Rama and Sita, Paramaatma and Prakruthi is an unbreakable one. The Ramayana demonstrates the inseparable bond between Prakruthi and Purusha.

The Ramayana has been divided into two sections: the Puurva Ramayana and the Uttara

Ramayana. The Puurva Ramayana deals with the valorous deeds of Rama, his victory over indomitable heroes like Parashursama, Vaali and Ravana. These events speak of the dauntless courage, the matchless valour and the immense physical and mental prowess of Sri Rama. The Uttara Ramayana (the latter half is suffused with Karuna (compassion) and seeks to install the Rama Thathwa (The Rama Principle) in the hearts of the people.

Rama has no equals as a ruler

The Ramayana exemplifies the amity and harmony which should prevail among the members of a family.. It extols the glory of ideal brotherhood, noble friendship and the greatness of love and affection. Rama was an ideal ruler who ruled his people with due regard to their likes and dislikes, having their welfare as his primary concern. As a ruler Rama has no equals. He was a veritable mine of strength, virtue and love. Hence it is essential that every student should take

Rama as an ideal to be emulated and derive happiness by practising the ideal of Sri Rama.

The first canto in the Ramayana is called Baalakaanda (the canto describing the boyhood of Sri Rama). Sage Viswamithra came to Dasaratha and sought the help of his two sons, Rama and Lakshmana, for protecting his Yaga (sacrifices). Rama and Lakshmana were fourteen years old when the Sage sought their help. When Dasaratha was hesitating to send his sons in view of their tender age, Viswamithra remarked, "O! Dasaratha!

Swayed by paternal affection, you have mistaken them to be mere mortals, of flesh and blood, whereas in fact they are Divine incarnations. Do not give vent to sadness. They are the embodiments of Divinity. Send your sons with me without any hesitation".

The three Gunas in the form of three women

Rama, while going with the Sage, encountered three women of three different temperaments.

The first woman he confronted was Tataki of Thamasik temperament. The Thamasik nature makes a person mistake truth for untruth and untruth for truth. It robs one of the capacity for discrimination. Rama killed Tataki while keeping guard over the performance of Viswamithra's

Yajna. The two brothers saw to it that the Yajna was performed without any obstruction.

After the successful completion of the Yajna, Viswamithra proceeded to Mithila, accompanied by Rama and Lakshmana. On the way Rama came to the hermitage of Sage Gauthama. There he absolved Ahalya of the curse which had turned her into a stone.

Ahalya might be deemed a woman of Rajasik temperament. After imparting moral advice to Ahalya, Rama went to Mithila with Viswamithra.

It was in Mithila that Rama encountered Sita, representing the Sathwik quality. Having killed

Tataki of the Thamasik temperament and redeemed Ahalya representing the Rajasik temperament,

He accepted Sita, who represented the Sathwik quality. The marriage of Sita and Rama is symbolic of the union between Prakruthi and Paramaatma. The citizens of Mithila greatly rejoiced hearing about the prospective marriage of Rama and Sita.

(Swami recited in His own mellifluous voice a ballad in praise of the wedding of Rama and Sita).

Manifestation of three Gunas in Sita's wedding

One of the rites in the marriage ceremony in India is Thalambraalu the act of pouring rice on the head of the bridegroom by the bride. Since Janaka, the father of Sita, was immensely rich, he arranged for the pouring, of pearls instead of rice. Sita held a palmful of pearls in her hand over Rama's head. The white pearls in the palms of Sita shone with reddish splendour as her palms were of reddish hue. When she poured the pearls on the white turban Rama wore for the occasion, the pearls shone with the white hue of the turban. The pearls rolling down the body of Sri Rama assumed a dark colour reflecting the bluish colour of Sri Rama.

The pearls shining with reddish hue in the hands of Sita are symbolic of the Rajo Guna, conveying the message that one is of Rajasik nature in the company of Prakruthi. The pearls shining with whitish splendour are symbolic of the Sathwa Guna indicating the fact that one acquires the Sathwik nature in the company of God. The nature of persons who belonged neither to Prakruthi nor God will be Thamasik persons like the colour of the pearls that rolled down from Rama's head. People of divine orientation shine with Sathwik serenity and purity. People with a worldly outlook display Rajasik quality while those who are neither worldly nor Godly are Thamasik.

Three qualities of Rama's friends and enemies As Sri Rama was a king, His friends too were kings. Jambavan, the king of the forest, was a Sathwik friend. He became a friend of Rama out of sheer love for him. Sugriva, the king of the monkeys, was a Rajasik friend of Rama, who sought Rama's friendship for securing his help. It is out of desire for getting relief from his troubles and tribulations that he sought the help of Rama.
Sugriva wanted his kingdom and wife to be restored to him. The third friend was Vibhishana, the brother of Ravana. He represents the Thamasik quality, as he belonged to a Rakshasa family.
Rama had three enemies, whose qualities represent the three Gunas.
The first enemy was Vaali, a Sathwik enemy because, at the end, he acknowledged his mistakes and accepted the punishment meted out to him by Rama. Ravana was the second enemy, who harboured hatred for Rama. He refused to acknowledge his mistake and was responsible for the downfall of his country. He was a Rajasik enemy because a Rajasik enemy never acknowledges his mistakes. The third enemy, Kumbhakarna, was a Thamasik enemy. A Thamasik person is one who mistakes good to be bad and bad to be good. Rama put an end to all these enemies.
Rama, the redeemer of the fallen Rama was the redeemer of the fallen---Pathithapaavana. He redeemed and gave salvation to three characters in the Ramayana. They are Sabari, Guha and Jatayu. Sabari was a helpless and hapless old woman with no one to look after her. Her preceptor told her about Lord Rama. She was yearning for the arrival of Ramachandra whom she considered to be her saviour. She was deeply absorbed in the contemplation of Rama's name at all times and in all places. One day sage Matanga said to her, "O, Sabari, Lord Narayana has descended on the earth in the form of Rama.
He is living in the garb of an ascetic. He will be soon arriving here. But I will not be alive at the time of his arrival. He is an embodiment of immaculate purity. Greet him and honour him with devotion."
From that day, Sabari started preparing herself for the arrival of Sri Rama. Since she thought that Rama might ask her to give him something to eat, she would gather all sorts of fruits, and to satisfy herself that the fruits were sweet, she would taste them first and keep only the sweetest ones for her Lord. That was how Sabari transformed herself into a Sathwik devotee. Rama responded to her inmost prayers and Sabari in the end merged herself in Rama.

Guha, the forest chief, was another to be redeemed by Rama. Though he was a friend of Rama, his life as a forester was filled with wrongful acts; nevertheless, he never gave up contemplation of Lord Rama's name. Among the fallen, he belonged to the Rajasik category because of his worldly life.
The third pathitha to be redeemed by Rama was Jatayu. He yearned to serve Rama and was eagerly waiting for the arrival of Rama from the day Rama entered the forest, as an ascetic. A great opportunity to serve Rama's cause presented itself to him.
When he sighted Ravana carrying Sita away he fought to the bitter end to rescue Sita from Ravana. When he fell mortally wounded and succumbed to the injuries, Lord Rama performed the last rites for Jatayu, a service denied to his father Dasaratha.
What the names of Dasaratha and Ravana signify After crossing the sea of Moha (infatuation), Rama encountered in Lanka the three brothers representing the three qualities of Sathwa, Rajas and Thamas. He crowned Vibhishana, of the serene temperament, King of Lanka, and destroyed Ravana and Kumbhakarna, who symbolised Rajasik and Thamasik qualities.
Who was Dasaratha? Dasaratha was the emperor of Ayodhya. The word Dasaratha signifies the body endowed with ten senses. These ten senses are five karmendriyas and five janendriyas.
Dasaratha is the chariot drawn by the ten senses. The three wives of Dasaratha represent the three qualities, Kausalya symbolising Sathwik quality, Sumitra, Rajasik quality and Kaikeyi, Thamasik quality.
Who was Ravana? Ravana is described as a demon with ten heads.
These ten heads are the six vices, namely desire, anger, greed, infatuation, pride and jealousy and Manas (mind), Buddhi (intellect), Chitta (will) and Ahamkaara (Ego). Since these ten are present in every human being, all men are Ravana indeed! Whoever beheads all these ten heads in fact becomes a Rama. It is God alone who can behead ten heads! When a man surrenders himself to God, all these ten heads will go and he will merge in Rama.
Four brothers are embodiments of four Vedas
Who are Rama, Lakshmana, Bharatha and Satrugna? The four

Vedas came in the form of the four brothers to the abode of Dasaratha and sported there. Rama was Rig Veda and Lakshmana, who closely followed Rama, was Yajur Veda. Bharatha who always delighted in chanting Rama's name, was Sama Veda and Satrugna, who obeyed the commands of the three brothers and surrendered himself completely to them, was Atharva Veda. Hence the four brothers were the embodiments of the four Vedas.

Lord Rama was Pranava itself (AUM). The three brothers are the syllables of "A," "U" and "M" in Omkaara. Lakshmana was "A," Bharatha was "U" and Satrugna was "M," and the Lord was the Pranava.

We can realise the sacredness of the Ramayana when we comprehend its inner significance, instead of being absorbed only in the external form of the narrative. Institute Auditorium, Brindavan, 25 May 1992

The easiest path to Self-realisation is the surrender of ego: sharanaagathi.

17. The Mysteries Of Creation

In this world, birds and beasts lead regulated lives though they lack education; Why does man lack this sense though he is endowed with intelligence ?

Embodiments of Divine Love! Today's man has learnt to fly in the air like birds, and swim in the sea like fish. But he has not learnt how to live as man on the earth. Science can teach man such things as flying in the air and swimming in the sea. However, it is only religion but not science, that can teach him how to live as man on the earth. So if science were to foster the all-round development of man, it has to seek the aid of religion. Religion does not mean blind adherence to some beliefs. On the other hand, religion helps man to attain the goal of human life based on discrimination and sacred values.

All religions teach only what is good, One should understand them properly and regulate one's life according! If our minds are good, what wrong can we see in any religion ?

Therefore no religion can ever be bad. That is why the great scientist, Einstein, declared that religion without science is lame and science without religion is blind, thereby stressing the need for a judicious combination of science and religion to serve the needs of humanity.

All religions emphasise human values

Religion is of immense help in fostering the integral development of the human personality. It underlines the unity in diversity. True religion teaches the harmony and unity of all religions.

The essence as well as the goal of all religions is the attainment of the purity of mind and heart.

Every religion has its own precepts and principles. But no religion preaches hatred, untruth or unrighteousness. "Speak the truth, practice righteousness"--enjoin the Upanishads. Similar sacred injunctions are to be found in all the other religions too.

Thus all religions emphasise the human values and serve as beacons for the proper progress and development of mankind. They all facilitate the manifestation of the divinity inherent in man.

But the present-day men in general, and the youth in particular, have forgotten our age-old culture and sacred values and are bidding good-bye to God, having been enticed by the modem science and technology.

However, with the passage of time, scientists themselves are veering round to the view that the universe is being guided and governed by some divine power. The innumerable stars and planets in the universe are whirling at tremendous speeds. If they are to deviate even slightly from their orbits or their speeds, it would result in an universal holocaust. Who has ordained them to adhere to their speeds and orbits?

Contrast between scientists and Creator

Today's scientists are creating artificial satellites which are orbiting around the earth. But these satellites are crashing down or catching fire in a few days or months, whereas the planets in God's creation are orbiting regularly since time immemorial, without any crashing, or catching fire. Light travels at the rate of 1,86,000 miles per second. Even with such a tremendous speed, it takes lakhs of years for light to travel around the families or constellations of the sun and stars.

In the Milky Way that is visible to us, there are innumerable stars unknown to us. The light from some of the stars has not yet reached the earth, despite the lapse of aeons since their creation.

Even the scientists are in doldrums to understand fully such aspects of creation. What a contrast between the scientist who swells up with pride on account of discovering but a minute fraction of the mystery of creation, and the Creator (God) who is running the whole universe peacefully, silently, patiently and lovingly without any pomp or pride!

Not this alone. The way this creation or Nature is functioning is amazing beyond words. For instance, the carbon dioxide exhaled by man is being taken up by the plants and the oxygen released by the plants is being inhaled by man. Who has made this mutually beneficial arrangement in Nature? Poet-saints like Purandaradas have sung the praise of the Lord Almighty in the following terms: "Who has watered, manured and grown the small shrubs and the gigantic trees in the crevices of the rocks in the mountains? Who has painted the beautiful peacock and its tail with such attractive colours? Who has designed the wonderful combination of a green body and a red beak for the parrot?" The scientist may explain away all such things as the "Law of Nature." But are these scientists able to transcend Nature or to dispense with the materials available in Nature? The so called "creation" by the scientists Whatever the scientists claim as their "creation" is only derived from a combination of the basic materials found in Nature. For example, the scientist produces water by combining hydrogen and oxygen. But then, which scientist has produced or created hydrogen and oxygen? These elements are produced by sunlight. In the same manner whatever the scientist may produce is based only on the permutation and combination of the already existing materials in Nature. This fact is conveniently ignored by most scientists. When one ponders over the mysteries or secrets of Nature, even a fool will have to admit the existence of a divine power behind all these wonderful phenomena. Let us consider another example. There are nearly 5.08 billion human beings in the world. But it is amazing that in such a huge population, no two persons look exactly alike. Which creator, except God, can do this extraordinarily wonderful feat! The goods manufactured by the modern creators are all alike because they come out of the same mould. What a striking contrast! The students should therefore, try to understand the mysteries of creation. Scientists upset the balance in Nature We are prone to take the creation for granted, thinking that it is but insentient Nature, thereby ignoring the Sentient Principle that regulates nature and imparts a proper balance among its various constituents. Scientists and technologists, in pursuit of selfish interests as well as of name and fame, utterly disregard the security and welfare of the society and the nation, by upsetting the balance in Nature, which results in various accidents, calamities, losses and misery to the public at large. For example, the oceans contain air needed by the earth for more than ten years. One lightning in the sky emits enough electricity required for the entire world for twenty years. By building gigantic dams and storing huge quantities of water in one place, the earth goes down in that area and consequently goes up in another area, like a see-saw. The indiscriminate exploitation of natural resources by the scientists and technologists such as various types of mines for extracting minerals, mica, coal, petrol and other oils results in imbalance and pollution of the five major elements, leading to catastrophes like earthquakes, and volcanoes, etc. The rapid and excessive proliferation of industries, factories, automobiles, etc., with the attendant pollution of the atmosphere is responsible for the increasing incidence of diseases like eosinophilia, asthma, deafness, pneumonia and typhoid, etc. However, science per se is not bad; what is necessary is for man to put it to proper and judicious use. Students must have faith in God's existence Students of today have implicit faith and unquestioning belief in what the scientists say; but however much you may din into their ears, they have no faith in God. Dear students! First of all, you must have faith in God's existence. One simple reason for this is that in the dictionaries of all the languages, you find the word "God" among other words. Any dictionary contains only words which refer to things existing in the world such as birds, beasts and other living beings, as well as inanimate objects. Non existing things do not have a place in the dictionary. The very fact that the word "God" occurs in all dictionaries is enough to prove the existence of God. Even if you have not seen or experienced some of the things included in the dictionary, there are other people who have seen or experienced them. So, based on your limited experience you cannot deny the existence of anything mentioned in the dictionary. If you have not experienced God, there are other people who have experienced Him and that is why the word "God" finds a place in the dictionary. Some of you may argue that there are some words like "sky-flower," "rabbit-horn," for which the corresponding objects do not exist in the world. But you must know that they are not single words as such, but compound words coined by combining two different words. Each of the single words "Sky" and "flower" refer to existing things; similarly there are rabbits and horns. But there are no objects in the world corresponding to the artificially coined words, namely "sky-flower" and "rabbit-horn."

Mysteries of God's creation

One scientist wanted to know the meaning of the word Parama Hamsa (Supreme Swan) used in spiritual parlance. He was told that just as the swan separates milk from water by dipping its beak into a mixture of milk and water, the Parama Hamsa through his proper enquiry and the resulting wisdom separates the Aatma (Self) from Anaatma (Non-self). In turn, when the scientist was questioned as to who endowed the swan with the capacity to separate milk and water, the scientist replied that when the acid secreted by the beak of the swan comes into contact with the mixture of milk and water, the acid curdles the milk, thus separating it from water. But then the question arises as to who has placed this acid in the beak of the swan. Has any scientist done it? No, it is only God who has done this. Such, indeed, are the mysteries of God's creation!

About fifty years back, scientists believed that there is no greater power than the atomic energy.

They expressed the fear that if the atomic power is further split, it will lead to disaster. But now after exploring and experimenting during the last fifty years, the scientists have been able to discover that there are greater powers than the atomic power.

Similarly, persons who presently have no experience of God may have such experience, say, after ten years. Divinity is allpervading.

You must firmly believe this. Without faith in God, human life would go in vain.

Along with physical sciences you should also try to understand the spiritual science to some extent at least.

Do not give room to unnecessary doubts

Nowadays students give room to unnecessary doubts. One boy came to me and said, "Swami!

Sankaracharya has declared that Brahman is real and the world is illusory. But Brahman who is said to be real is not to be seen anywhere, while we are vividly experiencing the so-called illusory world in our daily lives with all the attendant gains and losses, joys and sorrows--that too not for one or two years but over a period of several years. So, how can we believe that the world is illusory?" To this I replied, "My dear boy! Don't waste your time in thinking about such questions. Why do you worry yourself about the reality or unreality of Brahman and the world?

You leave that question to them (i.e. to Brahman and the world). First of all, find out the truth about yourself. You may think that you are real. But that alone is considered as real which does not undergo any change during all the three periods of time viz., past, present and future. In the light of this criterion, since your body undergoes change from moment to moment, and also since it is liable to perish altogether at any time, it is considered illusory. The same is the case with the rest of the world."

The youth of today argue that they do not undergo any change, forgetting the fact that their body is subject to change from time to time--birth, childhood, adolescence, adulthood (manhood), old age and death. Thus, everything in this world undergoes change from time to time and that is the reason why the world is declared to be illusory. Sankaracharya did not say that the world is absolutely unreal. He called it illusory, because it is a mixture of reality and unreality, appearing at one time and disappearing at another time. However, students should understand that there is a substratum of reality underlying the illusory world. This can be illustrated by the silver plate which you see on My table. This plate can be converted into a cup tomorrow, or into a spoon the day after. But the substance behind these changing names or forms continues to be the changeless silver. Nevertheless the silver and the cup (or plate) cannot be separated from each other. Similarly, the changeless reality of Brahman is the substratum underlying the everchanging illusory world.

"The doubter will perish"

The students of today are victims of several doubts, because there is a dearth of capable teachers who can come down to the level of the students and explain things clearly to them. Let the students understand the significance of the slogans exhibited on the hind wall of this auditorium,

viz. "Samshayaatma Vinashyathi" (The doubter will perish) and "Shradhaavaan Labhathe Inaanam" (The one with faith gains wisdom). Both Nissamshayam (freedom from doubts), and Shraddha (faith and interest) are necessary for enlightenment, just as the positive and negative currents are needed for the fight to emerge. Hence it is necessary that freedom from doubts on the one hand and faith on the other, should constitute the two banks through which the river of your life should flow, so that it may ultimately merge in the ocean of Divine Grace.

The woman saint, Meera said, "Braving all hardships, I dived deep into the ocean of the worldly life and at last got hold of the precious pearl in the name of Krishna. If I lose hold of this pearl, I may not get it again. Therefore, Oh Lord! You are my sole refuge." So also, you students may not get such a golden opportunity (as this Summer Course) once again. You should therefore, try to carefully garner the pearls of precious ideas that are now being made available to you, so that they may stand you in good stead throughout your life.

Institute Auditorium, Brindavan, 26 May 1992

18. Aham Brahmaasmi

Students! You are neither sinners nor meritorious. You are not pleasure-seekers, nor are you yogis. You are neither Manthra nor Yantra nor Thanthra. You are not committed to action or to enjoyment. Who, then, are you? "Satchindananda swarupam Shivoham, Shivoham." You are ever the embodiments of auspiciousness. Sai Leela (who had spoken earlier) had reminded you of Sarvadevathaa swarupam (all deities appearing in one form).

There are no such deities. The combined form of all human beings represents the unified form of all deities. The Vedas declare

"Sahasra Seershaa Purushah Sahasraaksha Sahasrapaadh" (the Lord has a myriad heads, a myriad eyes and myriad feet).

You are what you are, not somebody else. Whether it be a pauper or a millionaire, a pandit or an ignoramus, a child or an old man, a man or a woman, when they introduce themselves everyone uses the word, "I," "I," "I," (Nenu in Telugu). If birds and animals could speak, they would describe themselves as "I am a cat, I am a monkey, I am a dog," and so on. Thus "I" is found everywhere. The cosmos is based on the consciousness of "I." "I" is not only the basis, it is the very form of the cosmos. Wherefrom has this "I" originated? In fact, it has no origin. It is a principle which exists in all beings at all times.

"I" is the embodiment of the Aatma

If we examine the phenomenal world, we can see that terms like "you" and "he" and "we" came into existence only after the term "I." What is this "I"? Who is this "I"? It is the embodiment of the Aatma. Where does the Aatma dwell? It is all-pervading. The Shrutis have described this allpervading

Aatma as hridaya. Hrid + dhaya is hridaya. Dhaya means compassion. That which is the embodiment of compassion is hridaya. Therefore, the term "I" refers to that which is filled with compassion.

If a student is asked "Who are you?" he may reply "I am Rangayya or Ramayya." If you ask him

"When did you come?" he will reply, "I came on May 20 for the Summer course." What is it that has come? It is the body. It is in relation to the body that the student says that he came on the 20th. Here the reply is based on identification of himself with the body. The next day the same student says, "My stomach is upset." When he says "My stomach," there is an obvious distinction between him and the stomach. When one refers to "my hand," "my head," "my belly,"

"my leg" and so on, obviously he is different from these organs. When one says "This is my towel," the towel is separate from the owner.

The question naturally arises, "who are you?" This question has to be fully explored. One makes himself separate from all physical objects. The entire cosmos is thus made up of two elements,

"This" and "I." "This" refers to what is seen (Drishyam). "I" is the seer. We use the terms, "This is a table." "This is an auditorium." We cannot refer to any object without first using the word

"this." By the use of the term "this," the particular object that is referred to is made clear.

There is no Seen without the Seer

That which is seen is perceived only because there is a Seer. When there is no Seer, there is no Seen. People say that the eyes see. But on what basis do the eyes see? It is not the eyes that see.

There is something more basic. For instance, when a bulb sheds light, it is not the bulb that illuminates. It is the current that makes the bulb shed light. Likewise all the objects in the world that are present are perceptible and made manifest by the perceiver.

Thus the principle of "I" is all-pervasive. People may call themselves by different names. But the one thing that is common to all of them is the concept of "I." The very first word in the universe was "I." Aham ("I") is the first name of the Lord "Aham Brahmaasmi." Aham comes first and Brahma comes afterwards. This means that Aham is the name of the Lord. For everyone, therefore, the term "I" is always present.

Creation proclaims the will of the Divine. All beings in creation are images of the divine. The advent of man is for the purpose of proclaiming to the world the glory of the Creator. Man is the image of the Creator. The "I" indicates the oneness of man and the Creator. Hence, the nature of the "I" has to be explored. Physical desires become barriers to the discovery of the true nature of "I." Clouds which have been caused by the sun hide the sun from view. How, then, are we to see the sun? We know that the sun is there, but is not visible because it is covered by clouds. When the wind blows, the clouds are scattered and the sun is visible again. The fire in a burning piece of charcoal is not visible when it is covered by ashes. The reason is that the ashes, which, came out of the fire, have covered the fire. To see the fire, we have to remove the ashes.

Shed Anaatma to enable the Aatma to shine
Man today performs various spiritual exercises. These are of nine kinds: listening to the praise of God, singing the glories of God, remembering the name of the Lord, adoring the Lord's feet, service to the Lord, prostration, worshipping the idol of the Lord, cultivating friendship towards the Lord and complete surrender of the self to the Lord. People think that these nine forms of devotion are for the purpose of realising the Aatma. This is a mistake. These forms of worship are intended to shed the Anaatma (that which is not the Aatma). When the Anaatma is cast off, the Aatma shines of its own accord, just as the burning charcoal is perceived when the ashes are removed and the sun is perceived when the clouds move away. The Aatma is omnipresent. Only if it is confined to one place, will you have to search for it. But Aatma is present everywhere.

When you want to experience it you have to get rid of the Anaatma that envelops it.

What are Aatma and Anaatma? In reality there is no such thing as Anaatma. Anaatma is merely the inability to perceive the Aatma. For instance, here is a light that is burning. As long as the light is burning, you cannot have darkness. When you switch off the light, there is darkness.

Wherefrom did this darkness come? It did not come from anywhere. The mere absence of light produced the darkness. When there is light darkness goes. So, darkness is simply the absence of light. As long as one does not experience the Aatma Bhaava, he will be immersed in the Anaatma. When the Aatma is experienced the Anaatma feeling disappears.

The mind turns men away from the Aatma

It is because one has lost the vision of the Aatma that he is caught up in the Anaatma Bhaava (vagaries of the mind). This is like depending on the light of the moon when the sun is not shining. Forgetting the effulgence of the Sun (the Aatma), man relies on the mind, which is like the moon that sheds the reflected light from the sun. All spiritual practices in which people are engaged today are related to the mind only. This is totally wrong. By blindly adhering to certain transitional practices people have fallen a prey to peacelessness. Spiritual exercises should not be performed mentally. The mind is like the thief who cannot be expected to catch a thief. The mind, instead of seeking the Aatma, interests itself in other things.

It turns man away from the Aatma and involves him in illusory pleasures of the world. Hence, spiritual exercises based on the mind cannot lead man out of the darkness of ignorance. When the Aatma is experienced, the mind will cease to exist.

When the mind is absent, there is no need for control of the mind, Once the Aatma is experienced, the mind control becomes superfluous. It is like the light of the moon fading in the presence of the sunlight.

Hence, what men have to seek and acquire is Aatmaanandam (the bliss of the Aatma), not the pleasure of the mind, the body or the senses. All the latter forms of happiness are transient.

The way to experience the Aatma

If man enquires earnestly into the nature of "I," his enquiry will lead him to the experience of the Aatma. This may be illustrated by an episode from the Bhagavatha. It was one of the sports of Krishna to go stealthily into the houses of the Gopikas and upset pots containing milk and curds.

The Gopikas, who were worded about Krishna's pranks, were keen to catch him red-handed.

Krishna was an elusive thief. So, one Gopika suggested that the only way to catch Him was to pray to him. The Gopikas started praying to Krishna. "O Krishna, is it possible for us to get at you? You are subtler than the atom and vaster than the vastest thing in the world. You pervade every being in creation. How can we comprehend you?" As a result of the prayer, the Gopikas were shown the means of catching Him. Krishna poured out the milk from the pot, washed His feet in the milk and ran out of the house. The Gopikas followed Krishna's footprints and caught hold of Him. The symbolic significance of this episode is that the Divine can be experienced only when the devotee clings to the feet of the Lord. This is the teaching of the Bhagavatha.

When the enquiry into the nature of "I" is pursued, it will be found that the "I" is the omnipresent entity present in every living being. This is the truth of the Vedic declaration: "Aham Brahmaasmi" (I am the Supreme Self). Some people may ask whether it is enough to meditate on the declaration "Aham Brahmaasmi." This may be done, but when one meditates on the declaration "Aham Brahmaasmi," one has to start with the understanding of the "I"; then you will understand Brahman.

Pray to God: "I am you and you are me"

There is a prayer addressed to God in which God is described as mother, father, brother, friend and everything else. This is not the right way to worship God. This kind of prayer binds man to worldly relationships. Instead of these multiple relationships, a simpler way of describing the relationship between man and God is to say: "I am you and you are me."

The divinity inherent in man should be considered as one only, and not many. All the variety of names and forms one perceives are creations of the mind and are bound to pass away. When you and the Divine are one, where is the need for seeking the Divine? Only a fool goes in search of himself. Instead of resorting to all forms of meditation, it is simpler and easier to proceed on the single idea that you and the Divine are one. But this process of identification should not be an artificial exercise. It should come from the heart. In declaring "I am the Divine," you should express a genuine and deep experience. You should feel that the Divine is not separate from you.

Instead of that if you merely repeat, "I am God, I am God," on the basis that Swami has told you so, you will be indulging in a foolish exercise.

The Divine should be comprehended by earnest enquiry and a profound inner experience. It should, however be realised that as long as you live in this phenomenal world and have to perform worldly duties, it is not easy to express this oneness in the Divine. It has to be a gradual process by which the divinisation of life is achieved.

Get rid of the identification with the body

You have to realise that there are two elements in a human being. One is the Aatma and the other is Anaatma (one is the body and the other is the indweller in the body). One is the Kshetra (the field), the other is Kshetrajna (the Knower of the field). As in a grinder, one stone is firm and unmoving while the other is movable, it is only when both combine that you can achieve fulfilment.

The body should be considered as an instrument. Only then gradually the identification with the body can be got rid of. Man is perpetually enhancing the attachments relating to the body.

Because of these attachments and infatuation, the ego principle gets inflated. As the ego sense grows, the spiritual aspiration becomes weaker. But there can be no decay of the Spirit. What happens is the fading out of the Spirit (the Aatma) from one's vision. This implies that a constant effort must be made to control the impulses of the body.

The Divine is only one. The names given to God like Rama and Krishna are incidental. Birth is an incident, like giving a name to one that is born, Life itself is an interlude. But in this artificial interlude of life there is an eternal Aatmic principle. That should be made the basis of life. Only then the Reality can be understood.

Whatever books you may read, whatever discourses you may listen to, all these are merely mental lumber without application in practice. What sweetness will you experience if you merely read the description of various sweet preparations? But when you eat them, you experience their sweetness immediately. There is a vast difference between the bliss that is directly experienced and the bliss which is intellectually comprehended by the study of books. Therefore, the first step is to begin practising what you learn. Your faith must be translated into action.

Live the life of a human being

Students! You may pass examinations by studying books. After that you may get a job in which there is no use for all that you have studied. You must see that there is a close link between what you have studied and the life which you lead. There must be harmony between the knowledge you acquire and your speech and actions. It is only when there is this threefold unity that you can live the life of a human being.

Today this unity in thought, word and deed is rarely to be found among men. Students! You have to realise the supreme sacredness of human life. It is better to lead a brief but glorious life of a swan than live for long like a crow. Do not give way to the ever-changing promptings of the mind. Use your discrimination in deciding what you should do. You must examine whether what one wants to do is fight or wrong and you should be guided by your intellect. Never act on the impulses of the moment.

You must recognise the divine that is present in all beings. The Upanishad declares;

"Ishaavaasyam Idham Sarvam" (All this is pervaded by the divine).

The divine is one, although described by different names. There is some basis for the differences in names. The same person may be described in different terms according to the functions he discharges.

The idea of total surrender to God

People tend to blame God for their troubles and say that even though they have surrendered to God their troubles have not ceased. This is misuse of the idea of surrender. If one has really surrendered to God, one should not be worried about what happens to him. The sense of separation between oneself and God should go. As long as the sense of separation exists, the divine cannot be realised. Brahman means that which is infinite. The divine, therefore, has to be experienced in all forms.

In whatever form the divine is worshipped, the offering goes to the divine. In the deep sleep state one is not aware of the names or forms or position or anything else. It is also described as the state of Samadhi. In that state names and forms do not exist. There is no consciousness of differences. There is no feeling of love or hatred. No likes and dislikes. Samadhi is not a state of unconsciousness. It is a transcendental state, in which all differences have ceased. This state is attained when the mind merges with the Aatma.

Do not forget your inherent divinity

Students! In the different forms and names, you are like different actors on the stage. As long as you have to play your part, you have to act according to the role assigned to you. But you should not forget your true Aatmic self. Whatever role you play, your Aatmic self remains unchanged.

You should never forget your inherent divinity.

Many parents today are responsible for allowing their children to go astray. Students should remember that even if the parents advise them against their pursuing the spiritual path, they are entitled to act against their parents advice. When a father comes between a son and his devotion to God, the son is free to disobey the father. In worldly matters the son may follow the father's advice. But with regard to relationship with the divine you must follow your own way. At the time of marriage, the bride and the bridegroom are enjoined to act together in matters relating to righteous conduct, material interests, and worldly desires--- Dharmecha, Arthecha and Kaamecha. But with regard to Moksha, attainment of salvation, each must follow his or her path.

This means that in the spiritual field you need not have to be afraid of anyone.

When Meera was locked out of the Krishna Mandir by the Rana she was advised by Tulasidas that in the quest for God she was not bound to obey her husband's orders. In the case of Vibhishana, he chose to renounce his elder brother Ravana when Ravana was opposed to Vibhishana's devotion to Rama. Bharatha did not allow his mother's wishes to come in the way of his devotion and loyalty to Rama. The Emperor Bali disregarded the advice of his preceptor Sukracharya, when he came in the way of Bali carrying out his promise to the Lord.

The lesson to be drawn from all these episodes is that God is above all others. Father, mother, brother, teacher and all others rank far below God. All such relations are temporary and transient.

Only the relationship between man and God is permanent and unchanging. The faith in God must be firm and unwavering.

You must acquire steadiness of mind. When a person has a vacillating mind, he is worse than a monkey.

Brindavan, 27 May 1992

Greed arises from attachment to the senses and catering to them. Put them in their proper place, they are windows for knowledge, not channels of contamination.

Sathya Sai Baba

19. Prajnaanam Brahma

Not all the pleasures and luxuries of the world

Will confer contentment on man;

Without realisation of the Aatmic Principle

He cannot experience peace and contentment.

There are various kinds of Dharma (rules governing one's conduct) in the world. Brahmacharya (celibacy), Grihastha Dharma (the duties of the householder), Vaanaprastha Dharma (withdrawal from the world) and Sanyasa (complete renunciation) are known as the Ashrama Dharmas (the dharmas relating to different stages in a man's life). The Varna or caste dharmas relate to Brahmins, Kshathriya, Vaisyas and Sudras. They are, moreover, dharmas relating to worldly life and spiritual life. In Bharath, man's life is thus regulated by dharmas. All these dharmas are related to the mind. Enquiry will show that these Dharmas are of minor importance.

There is one Dharma which is greater than all these. That is the Dharma concerning the awareness of the "I" -- Prajna-Dharma. It is the Dharma which pervades equally the body, the mind, the will and the Anta Karana (Inner instrument). It has been defined as "Constant Integrated Awareness." It expresses itself as "I" and shines forth in its fullness. It manifests itself throughout the world. But man does not recognise its effulgence in spite of its presence within him. What is the reason? How to realise the "I" principle? The sun shines in all his glory, but his light is not felt inside a house because of the walls around and the ceiling above. In relation to man, what are these walls and this roof? The Vedas have declared: "The body is a divine temple and the indwelling spirit is the eternal Jiva." The body is like a temple. But, man has created the walls of Abhimaana and Mamakaara (attachment and possessiveness) around it and covered it with the ceiling of Ahamkaara (egoism). It is only when these walls and roof are removed that the divine "I" principle will be revealed in its true form as the effulgent Prajna. Out of his egoistic feeling, a man declares, "I did this." "I saw this." "I heard this." "I experienced this." It is true that it is the "I" that sees, hears and experiences. But when a man uses the "I" today, he identifies it with the body sense and not with an awareness of its Prajna nature. Hence there are two kinds of "I" One may be equated with the term "eye" and the other with the single letter "I." The "I" that corresponds to the "eye" is related to the body. The single letter "I" proclaims the power of the Prajna (Constant Integrated Awareness). Students! You must realise that when a man with the body-consciousness says, "I have seen," it is not the eyes that have seen. Nor is it the ears that have heard or the hands that have performed actions. Nor is it the mind that has experienced. Behind all these is the power of Prajna which enables man to have all experiences of seeing, etc. It is only when man gives up the ego sense relating to the body and realises the role of the Aatmic power of Prajna that he would be able to comprehend the principle of Divinity within him. Conscience always declares only the truth The basic human nature is related to Divinity and not to the body and sensory organs. In this human nature, how does one comprehend the meaning of "I"? This "I" shines as an entity that is pure, unsullied and unselfish. In modern parlance this is called "Conscience." Whatever action one does, the Conscience declares whether it is right or wrong. Whatever one may say or do in worldly life, the Prajna Shakthi (the power of Conscience) proclaims what is true, what is permanent and what is unaffected by the past, the present or the future. Here is an example. A thief stole valuable jewels from a house one night. The next morning the police arrested him on suspicion. To escape from the clutches of the police, the man uttered a number of falsehoods saying that he had never stirred out of his house and that he had not committed any theft. Although from a worldly point of view, he was uttering all these lies, his conscience was telling him that he had committed the theft and hidden the stolen articles somewhere and that he should not utter lies. This is the voice of the Prajna principle which is related to the Universal consciousness. The individual and the Divine are not separate To recognise this Prajna principle there is a certain kind of yoga (spiritual discipline). What is this yoga? Is it Kriya yoga, or Bhakti yoga or Jnana yoga or Karma yoga? There has been a great deal of misinterpretation of the term Yoga from very early times. It has been wrongly associated with some form of physical discipline. This is not the right meaning. Yoga means Ananda (Bliss). This is the correct meaning. When is this bliss experienced? When there is an awareness of the "I" principle, this bliss is secured. When life is enjoyed with the full awareness of the Prajna Shakthi, bliss is experienced as a result of this yoga. Yoga is the unity of the individual with the Divine. Yoga means an end to dualism. Yoga teaches that the Jiva (the individual Spirit) and the Brahman are not separate but one. This is the significance of the declaration in the Shruti "Ekam Sath: Vipraa bahudhaa vadhanthi" (The Truth is one: the wise call it by many names). This truth is beyond the categories of Time. So, the individual and the Divine are not separate. Some are of the view that they are like an object and its reflection. There is, however, a big difference between the reflection and the object. The Prajna principle explains the relationship between the object and the image. The Prajna Shakthi teaches that when a person sees his reflection in a trough of water, the reflection resembles him, but he is not the reflection. Students today are not taking to the spiritual path because there are not qualified teachers to tell them the spiritual truths in the proper manner.

The truth taught by Prajna-principle

The image is you, but you are not the image. The Prajna-principle explains this by the following example. For instance, if someone beats you, you are hit, but the image is not affected by the beating. This demonstrates the fact that you are affected by the beating. If you and the image were identical, the blow that hit you should affect the image equally. Therefore, it is clear you are not the same as your image. But the image identifies itself with you. For instance, if someone insults the image, you get angry. But if you are hit, the image does not suffer any blow.

This is the truth taught by the Prajna-principle. Awareness of this Truth is more significant than all other truths (Dharmas). The essence of all truths is contained in the truth about the "I" as recognised by Prajna (the constant integrated awareness). Its value is equal to the total value of all other truths, which are only fractions of the whole, like 100 paise making up a rupee.

The significance of Sri Krishna's statement in the Gita, "Sarvadharmaan parithyajya maamekam Sharanam vraja," is that by giving up all petty dharmas (observances) and surrendering to the Lord you get the benefit of adhering to all the other dharmas. This is contained in the assurance:

"Aham Thvaa sarvapaapebhyo mokshayishyaami maa suchah" (I shall liberate you from all sins, do not grieve). Do not attach any value to the minor dharmas. Understand the basic truth about the "I" (nenu)---the Prajna-principle---and derive the maximum benefit.

Apart from Prajna, there are in man entities like the body, the mind, the intellect, the will and the ego. All these appear to be distinct and disparate. But essentially they are one. It is the functional differences of the mind which account for the different terms like intellect, will, etc. It is the same mind that assumes all the forms. Prajna (Constant Integrated Awareness) is present in all of them.

Prajna is the common factor

To understand the Prajna-principle, what has to be recognised is that Prajna is present in all the constituents of the body and the mind, but under different names and forms. Just as sugar is the common factor in a variety of sweets with different labels, Prajna is the common factor. This common factor is identified with the "I" (nenu).

How does this happen? One declares: "This is my body." "My" is an expression of "I." Again, one declares: "This is my mind." Here, again, the "I" is affirmed. "This is my chitta" (will),

"These are my sensory organs," "This is my Antha Karana (Inner motivator)." In all these statements, the "I" is repeatedly affirmed in the possessive case. ("naa" in Telugu, meaning "my"). But in Sanskrit, "naa" means "not." The declaration that "This is my (naa) body" also carries by implication the meaning "I am not the body." Similarly when one says, "This is my mind," he implicitly affirms that he is not the mind. It will be seen that even within such simple statements, deep meanings are implicit. The use of "my" in describing one's body or mind also means that he is different from the body and mind.

The "I" principle is like a flowing river

Here is an example. You have a block of ice. No one terms it as water. Nevertheless the ice block is full of water. Without water there can be no ice. This means that ice is one form of water and is entirely based on it. Likewise, for the body, the mind, etc., the basis is the Chith-Shakthi (the spiritual element) known as "I." It is the Prajna-Shakthi.

To give another illustration. You go to the Ganga with ten tumblers and fill them with Ganga water. All the tumblers contain Ganga water, but the Ganga is different from them. The "I" principle is like the flowing river Ganga. This infinite "I" principle appears in a myriad objects in multifarious forms. All these objects have emanated from the infinite "I." They are fragments of the Infinite like the Ganga water in each tumbler.

Similarly, in the body, the mind, the intellect, etc. the Prajna-Shakthi of (the integrated awareness) "I" is present. All these have emerged from the Infinite and are manifestations of it.

Today, in the modern world, there is no attempt at expounding the unity that underlies the diversity. What is the reason for this? It is because many ancient sayings are interpreted in different ways. For instance, there is the saying: "Shareeram Aadhyam khalu Dharma Saadhanam" (for the achievement of righteousness the body is primary). The meaning of this aphorism is that the body is given to you for the pursuit of Dharma. Another aphorism is:

"Sarvam khalu idham Brahma" (Verily, all this is Brahman). The entire creation is pervaded by Brahman (the Universal Absolute). Then there is "Aham Brahmaasmi" (I am the Brahman). It means: "I am the embodiment of the Divine Consciousness." The Sastras make such pronouncements on one side. On the other, some unseemly slokas are recited at the conclusion of traditional ritual worship in Brahmin houses. "Paapoham, Paapakarmaaham Paapaathma, Paapasambhavam" (I am sin itself, I am a committer of sin, I am a sinful soul, I am born out of sin). This is a prayer in which the worshipper attributes sin not only to himself but even to his forebears. You may well imagine how unseemly all this is. Such prayers were devised to induce in the pious a sense of guilt and make them atone for their "sins" by making offerings to the priestly class. The reason for loss of faith in the Divine When the Sastra declares that everything has originated from Brahman (the Absolute), when the Upanishads declare that the Lord is the indweller in all beings--- "Eeshvaras sarvabhoothaanaam," how could the ideas of "birth in sin" and "I am a sinner" have any place? By arousing baseless fears in men, such sayings have served to undermine whatever little faith the people had in the Divine. This also accounts for the loss of faith among students today. Consequently, I introduced changes in this sloka in Prashanthi Nilayam. The priest in our Mandir used to repeat the old sloka earlier. In the place of paapoham, the term Praapthoham was substituted. Praapthakarmaaham, Praaptasambhavam. The changes meant: "I am born as a pure being. My parents were pure persons. My spirit is holy. My actions are sacred." The old sloka (verse) was changed in this manner. Divine love is the panacea for curing "diseases" On the basis of what happens in the world, people talk about sin and merit, but inherently there is nothing of the kind. There are misdeeds no doubt, but these should not be characterised as sins. Wittingly or otherwise man is prone to commit wrongs. Man should not commit such wrongs, because actions arising out of attachment or aversion, anger or hatred are expressions of the animal nature. When a man is filled with lust or hatred, he is a prey to a grievous illness. Vices like envy, anger, ego and hatred are various kinds of diseases. These cannot be cured by ordinary medicines or by professional doctors, who can only deal with physical ailments. These maladies are related to the Antha Karana (the internal instrument of action). There is a divine panacea for curing these diseases. That is Divine Love. Once that Divine Love is got, one can experience the "I" (higher Self) present in the Prajna-principle. When the diseases go, health is ensured. Hence, the first requisite is to develop the Love principle as the supreme quality of a human being. But this Love should not be mixed up with the myriad forms of affection and attachment found in daily life. These may be called "love," but they are only different forms of Anuraaga (attachment). Students should understand the difference between Anuraaga (worldly love) and Prema (Divine Love). Worldly love knows only how to receive and not to give. Divine Love gives and forgives and does not receive. It does not expect any return. In worldly love, there is no spirit of sacrifice. The Shruti declares firmly that immortality can be attained only through sacrifice and by no other means. Preciousness of Aatma-Jnaana People indulge in what they call meditation in ekaantham (solitude). It is not seclusion in a room or a cave or a forest that constitutes solitude. It is the one-pointed contemplation of God that is true meditation. It means merging the mind in thoughts of the Divine exclusively. The mind is a prey to continuous fickleness. The only way to achieve concentration is to merge the mind in the Prajna-Thathwa, the integral awareness of the "I." The Prajna-principle is also described as Guhyam, that which is hidden or held in secret. It is infinitely precious. Prajnana is also termed Brahma-Jnaana or Adwaita-Jnaana (knowledge of the Absolute). It is also called Aatma-Jnaana. This knowledge is so precious that it has to be carefully safeguarded. But when its preciousness is not realised, it is treated lightly. There was a shepherd who found a shining piece of stone in a river and not knowing its value, he tied it round the neck of his favourite lamb. A jeweller saw it and knowing its value as a diamond bought it from the shepherd for ten rupees. When he was gloating over the cheap price at which he had got the highly valuable diamond, the diamond broke into a thousand pieces and an ethereal voice told the jeweller: "I could excuse the shepherd for treating the diamond as an ordinary shining pebble, because he did not know its worth. But when you, who knew its value, got me for a low price, I could not bear the humiliation and my heart broke into pieces." Students are indifferent to spirituality because they do not know how precious it is.

Students should first of all realise the supreme value of spirituality. To pursue the spiritual quest with real understanding is yoga. People refer to Raja yoga and associate it with Emperor Janaka.

How did Janaka practice yoga? He reigned over the empire as a ruler. He led the life of a householder. He experienced the spirit of a thyaagi (renunciant). He merged his entire being in the Aatma. To merge the body, the mind, the intellect, the will and the ego in the awareness of Aham (the "I" or the Self) is Raja yoga. The goal of life should be to become a Raja Yogi. This is the means to get rid of all worries.

How to get rid of worry and attachment

Students! How do you get rid of worry? Worry arises out of Moha (attachment). To get rid of attachment for anything, you should turn your yearning towards something that is greater, more beautiful and satisfying than the one to which you are attached. There is an illustration for this from the Ramayana. When Bharatha and Satrughna returned to Ayodhya from their uncle's kingdom, they were stricken with grief on learning about the death of their father. They felt sad that they had been denied the chance to be beside their father at the moment of his passing.

When they went to Kausalya to enquire about Rama and Lakshmana, and what their father's last words were, Kausalya broke into sobs and told them about the exile of Rama and how Lakshmana and Sita had gone with him into the forest to stay there for fourteen years. When Bharatha heard this, his love for Rama overwhelmed his grief over the death of his father, and his greater love for Rama made him even bitter with regard to his father as the cause of Rama's exile. The grief over the death of the father yielded place to the sadness over separation from his beloved brother.

Develop noble sentiments and sublime ideas

A greater grief submerges a smaller grief. A nobler feeling eliminates an unworthy thought.

Hence, to get rid of petty and mean thoughts, one has to cultivate noble sentiments and sublime ideas.

Man's entire life is a procession of worries from birth to death. To get over these worries, at least from now on turn your minds towards God, because love of God is the panacea for all worries.

Develop love of God. This is my sole message to all of you students.

Students! Dedicate all your thoughts towards the single object of realising the Divinity in you.

"Prajnaanam Brahma," declares the Upanishad. The integral awareness which is your real Self is the Universal Consciousness. Ruminates over this truth. Then you will realise your oneness with the Divine.

Brindavan, 28 May 1992

First, tend your parents with love and reverence and gratitude.

Second, Sathyam vadha, Dharmam chara speak the truth and act virtuously.

Third, whenever you have a few moments to spare, repeat the name of the Lord, with the form in your mind.

Fourth, never indulge in talking ill of others or try to discover faults in others. Finally, do not cause pain to others, in any form.

20. The Message Of The Vedas

Of what woe is a life lived without chanting the Lord's name ?

What happiness is there in reigning over the realm of the Devas ?

What is the benefit from possessing all worldly riches?

Without Bhakthi can one be free from bondage ?

Although in the human, there are animal, demonic, human and divine possibilities, ignoring the human potential, pursuing animal tendencies is a great misfortune for man.

There are some who identify themselves with the body. They do not realise that this body is transient and may pass away any moment like a water bubble. Death overtakes the man who identifies himself with his body. The body is made up of the five elements (ether, air, fire, water and earth). It is bound to perish. The Indweller is permanent, has no birth or death and is, indeed, the Divine itself. By treating the impermanent body as himself, man is wasting his life.

Five types of human beings

There are other misguided persons, the second category, who identify themselves with their minds and waste their lives. They are harried continually by thoughts and fancies. Brooding over the past and speculating about the future, these persons ignore the present and land themselves in confusion.

The third category of persons apothecise the Buddhi (intellect), identify themselves with it, make use of its powers and embark on various plans. By glorifying the discriminating powers of the intellect in this manner, these persons fail to recognise their true (divine) nature. Thereby, man is wasting the divine potentiality of the Buddhi. Life is wasted in endless enquiries and experiments. However long one may conduct enquiries and researches, the intellect cannot help one to realise the Divine.

The fourth category of persons rely on the power of the Antha Karana (the Inner instrument of thinking). Regarding the phenomenal world as separate from themselves, these persons seek to realise the Divine by taking to the spiritual path.
The man belonging to the fifth category declares: "I am everything.
There is nothing in the world apart from me." He believes that the world itself is unreal. He is one who comprehends the Prajna-principle relating to the "I." The Prajna is constant integrated awareness).

If one seeks to integrate the body, the mind, the intellect and the Antha Karana to realise the transcendental goal, he has to go beyond the mind, the Buddhi and the Antha Karana and transcend the states of waking, dream and deep sleep. Only then can he comprehend the "I" principle of Prajna. The body, the mind, the intellect and the Antha Karana are related to the Prakruthi (phenomena of Nature). They are all functional variants of the mind. Divinity cannot be comprehended through the mind. Efforts should be made to bring the mind under control.

Four great Mahaavaakyas
In this context, the Vedas have proclaimed four great Mahaavaakyas (aphorisms). One is "Prajnaanam Brahma." What is this Prajnaanam? It is Chaithanyam (consciousness or awareness). This consciousness pervades everything in creation, man, demon or deity, birds and beasts. This all-pervading consciousness has been regarded as the Brahman (Absolute Divinity).

Brahman refers to that which is pervasive. It transcends the body and the mind and is beyond the three states of waking, dreaming and deep sleep.
Because this all-pervasive Brahman is identical with the Aham---the universal "I" principle---the Vedas gave the second aphorism, "Aham Brahmaasmi" (I am the Brahman). This emphasised the oneness of the "I" and Brahman.

Therefore, Brahman (Divinity), Chaithanyam (Consciousness) and pervasiveness are not entities with different names and forms. They are identical. But Brahman has different organs and limbs.

For instance, there is the human body. It has a single name---body.
But within the body, you have hands, eyes, ears, etc. In the same manner, the Brahman principle is associated with the Prajna principle, has the attributes of pervasiveness and Paripurnathvam (wholeness), and Consciousness. All these are its limbs. Divinity is the integral form of all these constituents.

Hence, the declaration Prajnaanam Brahma means "Brahman is Consciousness." Where is this consciousness? It is everywhere. There is no place without consciousness. On this basis, the Vedas proclaimed that the Divine is omnipresent, omnipotent and omniscient.

No difference between Aham and Brahma

In the second great Mahaavaakya "Aham Brahmaasmi," there are three words: Aham, Brahma,

Asmi. Aham signifies Paripurnathvam (wholeness). It is not subject to change on account of time, place or circumstances. Aham has another meaning, namely Saakshi (Witness). This means that the Divine is a witness to everything--in the past, the present and the future. But he remains unaffected by any of these. Brahma refers to the principle that is the basis for aakaasa (ether) and other Pancha Bhutas (five basic elements). There is no difference between Aham and Brahma. They are interdependent and inseparable. The Aham principle also has the attribute of pervasiveness. Aham is present in the five elements also. Asmi unifies the Aham and Brahma.

They are not separate but one and the same. This is the meaning of Aham Brahmaasmi.

The third pronouncement is "Thath Thoyam Asi." Thath is that which has remained unchanged before and after creation. It has no name or form. That is why it is called Thath (That). The Shuddha-Sathwa (the pure goodness principle) is called Thath. It is changeless. Hence it is called

"Being," that which is ever unchanging and transcends the categories of time and space.

The common bond between Formless and Form

The second term, Thwam, refers to that which has name and form. It has body, mind, intellect and Antha Karana. It belongs to the phenomenal world. There is a common bond between the Formless and the Object with Form. In all the objects with forms the Prajna, the awareness of

"I" principle is present. Consequently, Thwam also acquires the attribute of Thath.

This is illustrated by an example. A sculptor produced an idol of Krishna out of a block of stone hewn from a rock. While chiselling the stone for sculpting the idol, he threw away the unwanted stones. He was concerned only with making the idol. After the idol was completed, it was installed in a temple. The idol was the object of daily worship in the temple. After the removal of the idol, the other stone chips remained on the hill. These nameless and misshapen chips of stones proclaimed: "We are the same as That (the idol of Krishna). Once we were together in one rock. But because the other stone was given a name and form, we have become different from it. But the Divinity present in all of us is one and the same." Likewise, it is from the Shuddha Thathwa--Thath--- that the body, mind, etc. have emanated. By separation from the Sathwik element, the body and others have been rendered useless. In what way are they useless? So far as ordinary worldly life is concerned, all these--- body, mind, etc.-- are essential. For performing any sadhana, the body is a prerequisite. To think about anything, you require the mind. To enquire into any matter, you have to utilise the Buddhi (intellect). So, for leading a worldly life, the body, mind and intellect are primary instruments. However, they are only instruments, but the agency that puts them to work is different. That is Thath which, residing in the body, the mind, the intellect and the Antha Karana, makes them discharge their respective duties. There is, however, no difference separating them from each other.

Principle of oneness implied by "Thath Thwam Asi"

To take another example. There is the vast fathomless ocean. Innumerable waves arise from the ocean. The waves appear to be different from each other, but are not really different. They are expressions of the same water of the ocean. Only their forms appear to vary. From the waves arise foam. The foam is inseparable from the waves. The foam cannot separate itself from the waves and the waves cannot separate themselves for the sea-water. The ocean is present both in the waves and the foam. The unity of these three is called Kootastha by Vedantha. Kootastha refers to the Thath that is present in all things (that differ in name and form). This principle of oneness is proclaimed by Vedantha in the pronouncement, "Thath Thwam Asi."

The fourth declaration is: "Ayam Aatma Brahma." Ayam means that which is self-luminous and self-created. It is unmanifested--Paroksha. Its form is self-chosen. Next to it is the term Aatma.

The Aatma is present in all beings in the form of Chaithanya (Consciousness). Such Consciousness, which is present in all beings, has been called Sathyam. The reason for this appellation is that this Aatma is Nithya (ever-present). Moreover, it is called Sathyam because, as pointed out in the Thaitthireeya Upanishad, the Aatma is the basis for all good thoughts and good actions.

The Eight Divine Majestic Powers

Thus, the truth underlying all the four Vedantic pronouncements is the same. It is the principle of Aham ("I") as expressed by Prajna (constant integrated awareness). Aham ("I") is the Divine swara (sound) in all beings. All other sounds have emerged from Aham. That is the reason why the term Shabdhabrahman came to be used.

Where is this Shabdhabrahman? The answer comes from the term, Charaacharamayee (the one that is present in the moving and the non-moving). How does this Charaacharamayee exist? As Iyothirmayee (Infinite effulgence). How does the word Iyothirmayee issue from the mouth of man? As Vaangmayee (in the form of Vaak or speech). Even after a man dies, his words survive in the form of electrical waves in the ether. Broadcasts from Delhi can be heard simultaneously in distant places. The sounds are carried by radio waves to all places. Because of the power of Vaangmayee, we can experience the bliss indicated by the attribute, Nithyaanandamayee (Ever-blissful). The blissful nature is the characteristic of one who is Paraathparamayee. Para is usually regarded as referring to a heavenly abode like Vaikunta. But it refers to that which permeates everything and is present as a witness. It is also called, Maayaamayee. It is the power which makes one believe the unreal as real and the real as unreal.

This illusion-producing power is called Maaya. A student, for instance, mistakes a rope for a serpent in the semi-darkness of twilight. Immediately he experiences fear. After bringing a torch, he finds that it was not a snake but a rope. His fear disappears. Only the rope existed before he brought the torch. There was no snake in the beginning or later. The snake was a creation of his mind on account of ignorance caused by darkness.

Today the darkness of ignorance has to be dispelled. Ignorance is due to Aviveka (lack of discriminating power). Aviveka is due to Bhraanthi (imaginary apprehension). These imaginary fears are caused by attachment and anger. The latter are the result of Karma, which is a consequence of Janma (birth).

Ignorance is the source of fears
 There is, thus, a close relationship between ignorance and birth.
 Human birth is the result of Karma (past actions). Actions result in attachments and aversions, which produce imaginary fears. The ultimate source of these fears is ignorance, which has neither birth nor death. There is no specific cause for ignorance. Forgetting his divine nature, man is caught up in the meshes of Maaya (delusion) and the fears caused by it. How to get rid of Maaya? The answer is: recognition of Srimayee. What is this Srimayee? It is the one that shines effulgently always, being wide awake and fully aware. Inauspiciousness is alien to it. It is ever auspicious. That is Sath. That is Prajna. That is "I" (nenu).
 Divinity has the above-mentioned eight attributes--forms of wealth. It is necessary to unify them by getting rid of the body-mind consciousness. Then the oneness of the Divine becomes evident.
 Today men's efforts are governed by selfish desires, narrow feelings and mundane objectives. As a result the meaning of divinity eludes man.
 The supreme sadhana that has to be practised by man today is to concentrate all his senses on God. This may not appear easy, but with strength of will it is quite possible. It is easier to give up things than hold on to them. Those who declare that Samsaara (family life) is keeping them in bondage are misusing the language. It is they who are binding themselves to families and possessions.
 Man should develop faith in God. Only then would he be able to experience lasting happiness.

 Change your vision, and the worm will appear accordingly. Let the eye be charged with the Divine, it will see all as God.

 21. Power Of Divine Love
 Love is the form of the Divine.
 Love alone can merge in love.
 When one is filled with Divine love
 He can experience oneness with the Divine.
 Happiness arises from pure love
 Which is also the source of Truth, Righteousness, Peace and Forbearance.
 Students! embodiments of Divine Love! The ancient renown of Bharathiya culture is tainted today by the proliferation of three evil tendencies: indulgence in self-praise, scandalising others and hypocrisy. What is the reason for this? It is the pursuit of mundane pleasure by man, forgetting the glory of pure love.

 There is no one in Bharath who does not know the word Prema. The entire cosmos is steeped in it. Prema is incomparable and indescribable. The sage Narada declared "Anirvachaneeyam Prema" (Love transcends speech).
 The difference between Prema and Anuraaga At the human level, this love assumes many forms. The word love is used in common parlance in the context of the relations between mother and child, husband and wife, master and servant, the preceptor and the pupil. But this is not true love. It cannot be termed Prema (love). It is only Anuraaga (attachment). Prema can be applied only to the total love towards the Divine. It is utterly selfless. It has not come from the world nor has it fallen from the sky. It is Sahaja swaroopam (sui generis).
 Today man has forgotten this sacred and enduring love. There is nothing equal to love in this world. Even nectar is insipid in comparison with the sweetness of love. This love makes even the Divine dance in ecstasy, as well as the devotee. It expresses itself in dance. Such a love can find no place in the heart of self-seeking persons. It will dwell only in the hearts of the pure, the unselfish and the godly.
 The scriptures have compared this love to a precious diamond.
 Where is this gem to be found?
 When even ordinary diamonds are preserved with great care in a strong safe, how much more safely should the precious diamond of love be preserved? Who is entitled to offer this diamond to others? Only the person who is filled with love and who sustains himself by love always. Only the Divine is qualified to offer such love. Only the Divine, who is the embodiment of love, knows the value of love.
 Hence, the greater your love for the Divine, the greater is the bliss you experience. Your bliss declines in the measure of the diminution in your love. The extent of your love determines the magnitude of your bliss.
 The love which men today show towards God is filled with selfishness. The love is for the purpose of securing some desires. But love is not a commercial commodity to be got in exchange. It is offered spontaneously.
 Pure Love is the royal road to reach God
 There are many ways of realising God. Among them are: the Shanthi Marga (Path of Peace); the Sakhya Marga (Path of Friendship); Anuraaga Marga (the Path of attachment); Vaatsalya

Marga (the Path of Affectionate Love); Madhura Marga (Path of Sweetness). In all these five paths, there is some element of self-interest. But in the Prema Marga (path of Pure Love), there is no trace of self-interest. Hence, all other paths merge in the path of Love. Pure Love is therefore the royal road.

We should consider that this Love is present in all. It is the form of the Divine. Because the Divine is present in all, whomever you love, you are loving the Divine. Forgetting this sublime and all-encompassing conception of Love, men today have lost themselves in narrow alleys.

To promote among men love between humanity and God, the Divine descends on earth from time to time. For what purpose is the advent? To promote the Love Principle is His primary purpose.

Failing to understand the true meaning of this Love Principle, man is undermining his life.

Everyone should realise that Love is present equally in all beings. But this love assumes many different forms when it is exhibited in different relationships in worldly life. The love between husband and wife is termed Moha (infatuation). The love between a mother and child is called Vaatsalya (maternal love). The love between kith and kin is called Anuraaga (attachment). The love towards God is termed Bhakthi (devotion).

Thus, love is one, but is expressed in many ways. Experiences are varied, but the goal is one. To carry on this life in this phenomenal world, love has assumed these manifold forms. The forms of love keep changing according to one's relationships.

But Pure Love is unchanging. Such Pure Love is limited today by man's self-interest.

How man's love changes from time to time

Immediately after birth as an infant he clings to the mother's bosom and considers it as paradise.

As he grows, he gets interested in education and forgets the mother. In his boyhood, one experiences this love in sport and games, in studies and recreation. After completing his education, he enters on family life and immerses himself in sensual pleasures. Later, he gets interested in earning wealth and loses interest in wife and children. Later on he loses interest even in wealth and turns his thoughts towards God. Thus, man exhibits his love for different objects at different stages in his life. (Swami sang a song describing how man's love changes from time to time and how he wastes his life at the end without developing love for God).

Students! Love is not something which enters your lives midway. It is the Aatmic Principle which is always with you at all times. You should not allow this love to change from moment to moment. You must transmute all your thoughts into expressions of love. To regard whatever actions you perform as an offering to God is the best form of sadhana. Whatever good deeds or spiritual acts you may perform, if they are not suffused with love they are worthless.

Love is like a mariner's compass

Love is like a mariner's compass, which always points to the north.

Love should direct you

Godward in every action that you do. There is no greater path or goal than this. Scholarship or ritual worship will not serve to transform your spirituality. Fill your hearts with love of God.

Then the nation will enjoy peace. Your view of the world depends on the colour of the glasses you wear. When your vision is filled with love, the whole creation will appear as Brahma mayam

(filled with Divinity). This is what the youth of today needs most.

This love is not related to the body. It is based on the heart. It is present equally in all. There may be varied bodily relationships but the kinship based on the Aatma is one and the same. "Ekovasee sarvabhoothaa-antharaatma" (The One dwells in all beings). It is like the current that is common to all bulbs of varying power.

There should be no trace of selfishness in love. Unfortunately today men's hearts have become barren without love. Hence, there is no compassion in them. Men today behave in a more cruel manner than wild animals in the jungle. There is hatred between man and man. Maternal love has become rare and fraternal feelings between brothers are absent. The love among the Pandava brothers and that among Rama and his brothers are supreme examples of fraternal love.

Dharmaraja's one-pointed devotion to Krishna

The Pandavas overcame all their trials and tribulations by their faith in God. The eldest of the Pandavas, Dharmaraja, had his mind always centred on Krishna. He was known for his onepointed, simple-minded devotion to Krishna. He always thought of Krishna even while experiencing all kinds of difficulties in exile. Even when his children, the Upapandavas were killed by Asvathaama, he did not give way to grief because of his faith in Krishna. When he reigned as a mighty emperor, he did not feel elated and he was not overwhelmed by grievous ordeals. For the Pandavas, the Lord came first, the world next and their own interests last. First God, then the world, last "I."

The Kauravas had a different order of priorities. First "I," then the world and God last, with the result that they lost everything. Because the Pandavas kept God in the forefront, they were ultimately successful in their endeavours. If you want to succeed in life, you have to develop love of God as the most potent weapon. It was love which enabled the ancient sages to live in harmony with wild animals in the forest. Such is the power of love. But students today are not recognising the power of this pure love. Instead, they are immersed in impure desires and mining their precious lives.

The Gopikas exemplified the highest and purest form of love for God. (Swami sang a song which the Gopikas addressed to Krishna, praying to Him to fill their parched hearts with nectarine showers of His love). Love of God is greater than nectar. It is called Paraa Bhakthi, Devotion to the Lord. It transcends the four Purusharthas (goals of life). Man may love the body, the mind, the Buddhi or the Anta Karana (the Inner Instruments). Love for the body ends with the death of the body. Love for the mind results in bondage because of the aberrations of the mind. Love for the intellect results in endless speculation and enquiry. Love for the Anta Karana promotes the ego feeling. It encourages dualism (separating man from God). Only the one who realises his oneness with the Aatma can experience infinite bliss----the bliss that is eternal.

Investigate the nature of the "I"

Everyone should undertake an enquiry into the ultimate goal of life. For instance, we find that ghee is the ultimate product derived from milk after it goes through the processes of conversion to curds and butter. This process of enquiry is known as Mimaamsa. You have to investigate the nature of the "I," which claims ownership of the body, the mind, the senses and other things ("My body," "my mind" and so on). If you are not the body, the mind, etc., who are you? Does anyone pursue this line of enquiry?

Man is called Maanava. This Sanskrit term has two meanings. One is, man is a being who lives free from ignorance. The other meaning is that he is not a new being, but has had a long past, in many previous lives. When such meanings are recognised in terms of Vedantic parlance, the greatness of human birth becomes evident. It fills one with joy.

Students! The world today is simmering with discord and violence. Peace and security are absent. Fear stalks the land everywhere. To get rid of fear, you have to acquire Abhayathvam (fearlessness). How is it to be got? When you reduce desires and attachments.

Students! Develop morality and good conduct. Lead exemplary lives and serve the nation. The sole purpose of education is to develop humility and discipline. Respect your parents and have love for God. This is true education.

Brindavan, 30 May 1992

Your work as Seva Dal members and as volunteer helpers must correct your vision, clarify your eyes, enable them to see God in everyone. Then, that awareness will transmute every word, thought and deed of yours into a benediction.

Sathya Sai Baba

22. God Alone Is The Sadhguru

Brahmaanandam Parama Sukhadham Kevalam Inaanamurthim Dhvandhvaatheetham Gagana Sadhrisham Tathvam asyaadilakshyam

Ekam Nithyam Vimalam Achalam Sarvadhee Saakshibhutham Bhavaatheetham Thrigunarahitham Sadhgurum Tham Namaami

Embodiments of Divine Love! It is not easy to understand the divine principle. The ego of "I" and the attachment of "Mine" are responsible for all difficulties. Man attains divinity very easily the moment he gives up ego and attachment. Aatma is omnipresent. Aatma is infinite. Aatma is the One without a second. But, it appears as many because of the diversity of forms. Spirituality is that which recognises the One that subsumes all diversities as the Aatma.

Unfortunately, today there are many intellectuals who divide the One into the many. But there are very few who see the One in the many. Here is an example. We have built a mansion. In this mansion we have one room for bath, one for cooking, another for dining and yet another for living. What is it responsible for this division? It is walls in between. If you remove the walls, the mansion becomes one again. Because of the walls in between, there are different rooms with different names and forms. Similarly, the mansion of Aatma is only one. Since we have created in this mansion of Aatma, different rooms of the body, senses, mind, intellect, will and ego, the diversity appears.

The underlying Guru principle of Bliss

Since this divisive tendency is on the increase among mankind today there is great need for the Guru. Who is a true Guru? What is the truth underlying the Guru principle? Is he the one that teaches worldly education? Is the one who explores the properties of matter, a Guru? Is the one who describes in detail Natural Sciences, a Guru? No, they are only teachers. A true Guru is the embodiment of Brahmaananda (transcendental bliss). Who is this Brahmaananda? Where does he exist? When we enquire on these lines, we find that there is nothing comparable to it in the universe. All the joys of the world are immanent in Brahmaananda (transcendental divine bliss).

The true measure of Brahmaananda

What kind of joy does a man experience when he is happy, healthy and contented? What is the type of joy that man derives out of wealth, properties, pleasures and fortune? This is called Manushyaananda (human joy). Hundred times more than Manushyaananda is Indhurananda; hundred times more than Indhurananda is Dhevendhurananda; hundred times more than Dhevendhurananda is Dhevaananda; hundred times more than Dhevaananda is Brihaspathi Ananda; hundred times more than Brihaspathi Ananda is Prajaapathi Ananda; hundred times more than Prajaapathi Ananda is Brahmaananda. This is the true measure of Brahmaananda.

Such an expression as Brahmaananda (transcendental divine bliss) which is beyond all human imagination is used in common parlance to mean worldly joy. People say, "My daughter's marriage was performed with Brahmaananda!" or "My son is in foreign country with Brahmaananda!" or "My son has secured good results in the examination with Brahmaananda!" But, is Brahmaananda such an easy and cheap thing to be attained? Is it worldly or material? No. Not at all. This Brahmaananda transcends the material, moral, religious and spiritual aspects of life.

The true Guru is one who experiences the supreme bliss of Brahmaananda. Who is he? None except God has the competence to experience such bliss. All the joys are inherent in this bliss.

The next aspect of Guru is Paramasukhadham (highest happiness). This happiness is higher than all the happiness in the world. This is not worldly happiness, which has a beginning and an end and is ever-changing; it comes and goes. But Paramasukhadham neither comes nor goes.

Mundane pleasures are just water bubbles. They may burst any moment. The happiness with changes is not true happiness. All the pleasures enjoyed by man in this world change with time and place. A true Guru is one who enjoys and confers changeless supreme happiness.

The third aspect of the Guru is Kevalam (the ultimate). What is Kevalam? It means that which transcends time and space. All the things in the world are bound by time and space. But He is beyond space and time and there is nothing higher than Him. That is why He is called Kevalam. He is none other than God. The vision of oneness is true wisdom. He is Inaanamurthi (embodiment of wisdom). What is Inaana or true wisdom? Is it material or worldly knowledge? Is it the knowledge of chemistry? Is it science? No, all this knowledge is related to materials in the world. But true Inaanam is the basis for all types of knowledge and is beyond them. It is infinite, unmanifest and remains ever as the One, "Adwaita Darshanam Inaanam" (true wisdom is the vision of Oneness). All this is one and there is no second object in the world. Even if there is a second object, it is nothing but the reflection, reaction and resound of the first One. Real wisdom is the vision of one's own true nature. Knowing oneself is true wisdom. Where does the man who seeks to know himself go? With which Guru does he take shelter? Is a person who asks others, "Where am I" a wise one? No, he is ignorant. None would search for oneself in the external world. But, today's men are such ignorant ones. One who knows himself is the wise one. He is none other than God. God is the very embodiment of wisdom. He is the very form of truth and infinite. Sath yam Inaanam Anantham Brahma (Brahma is Truth, Wisdom and infinite).

The next is Dhvandhvaatheetham or the One who transcends the pairs of opposites. What is this principle? It transcends heat and cold, happiness and sorrow, gain and loss or praise and blame. This principle can only be God and none else has this power--He is the true Guru. God is more omnipresent than space Gagana Sadhrisham is the next aspect. Where is Gagana or sky? It is all-pervading. "Akaasham Gaganam Shoonyam." Really, it cannot be seen. We look upward and say it is the sky. But, it is not the sky, which is just a combination of clouds. Sky is the one that provides space for them.

This sky (space) exists everywhere. Is it possible to show it? Yes, it is possible. It is there when you snap your fingers or clap your hands. It is there when Swami speaks. What is the nature of this Akaasha (space)? Sound is its nature. Wherever there is sound, there is the space. Even inhalation and exhalation are sounds. Therefore, where is the place without space? There is no such place at all. Space is present everywhere. One who is more Omnipresent than space is God Himself. Therefore, such a God is the true Guru.

Thathvamasyaadhi lakshyam is the next aspect. What is Thathvam? There are four great pronouncements. "Prajnaanam Brahma" ---this is the essence of Rig Veda; "Aham Brahmaasmi" is the essence of Yajur Veda; "Thath Thwam Asi" is the essence of Sama Veda; "Ayam Aatma Brahma" is the essence of Atharvana Veda. All those four great declarations point to One Divinity. Though they state and explain differently, their goal is One Divinity.

The first pronouncement is "Prajnaanam Brahma." What is Prajna? We call an intelligent person as a Prajnaashaali. Is Prajna merely intelligence or cleverness? No. Where is this Prajna? This Prajna is present in the body, senses, the mind, intellect, inner will and ego and all over. This Prajna is present in all the living and the non-living alike. It is called Constant Integrated Awareness. What is Awareness? Awareness is nothing To know what? Is it fractional knowledge? No, it is complete knowledge. It is the knowledge of the principle that is immanent in the living and the non-living alike. Actually, Prajna and Brahman are synonymous. Some scholars interpret that Prajna is Brahman. But, they are not two different things. What is Brahman? Brahman is the all-pervasive One. It is the Brihath principle. The universe itself is the Brihath or mighty principle. Brahman is immanent in the whole cosmos. To put it in simple terms, Brahman means pervasiveness. It is all-pervading. The true Guru is the one with these attributes.

Aham as witness is the very form of Aatma

The second pronouncement is "Aham Brahmaasmi." People think that Aham is "I." No. It has another meaning also. It is witness. He is witness to everything. He is the Aatma. Aham is the very form of Aatma. The Awareness or Consciousness which is present everywhere is installed as Aatma in man. Aatma, Consciousness and Brahman are not different. What is this? (Bhagavan showed-the handkerchief in his hand). This is cloth. If you remove the idea of cloth, you see thread and if you remove the idea of thread, you see cotton. The cloth, thread and cotton are one and the same. Similarly the same principle takes upon the names of Aatma, Brahman or Aham at different times and situations. Therefore, the statement of "Aham Brahmaasmi" means that the witness Aatma or "I" in me is Brahman Himself.

The third declaration is "Thath Thwam Asi." This is the essence of Sama Veda. Thath means "That" and Thwam means "This," Asi means "one and the same." When "I" and "you" stand apart, "I" am different from "you." But when "I" and "you" get together, the difference is lost and they together become "We." The two become one. The one with the Upaadhi (body) is Thwam and the one without the Upaadhi is Thath. One is Jiva (the individual) and the other is Deva (God). Sama Veda explains clearly that Jiva and Deva are one and the same.

Three in one

"Ayam Aatma Brahma." You should enquire into this statement clearly. There are three words-- Ayam, Aatma and Brahman. But, they are one and the same. This statement depicts the oneness of the three persons-- "The one you think you are." "The one others think you are" and "The one you really are!" i.e. the body, the mind and the Aatma. You act with the body, think with the mind and you witness both as the Aatman. In the wakeful state you are the Vishva, you are Thaijasa in the dream state and in the deep sleep state you are Prajna. Who is the Prajna? "Prajnaanam Brahma." Prajnaanam is the Aatma.

The real Guru is the very embodiment of the Divine principle, which is the inner meaning of these four great pronouncements. He is the one who has experienced and enjoyed the essence of these declarations and takes upon Himself a Form to teach the same. A true Guru recognises the nature of God

Ekam: Brahman is the One without a second. It is only One. It is the One that exists before birth, after death and during one's lifetime. It does not change. God is the only one. All other things are diverse manifestations. A Guru is one who has recognised that the many exist in the One. Take for example, a banyan seed. It is one. Within this small seed exists the huge tree with branches and sub-branches with flowers and fruit. Roots are different, the branches are different, flowers and fruits are different. But, all of them come from the one seed. The tree is one but one person may look at the branches, another at the leaf, another at the flower and yet another at the fruit.

The Guru is this Ekam (the One). Who is it? It is God Himself.

Nithyam: The One who never changes under any circumstances. The sun and the moon move and change, but He does not change. When someone is born he is a child, at 10 years he becomes a boy, at 30 a man and at 75 a grandfather. Thus man changes with time. But, He remains the same in birth and death. In fact, He has neither birth nor death, neither beginning nor end. He is God Himself: He is the Guru.

Vimalam is the next attribute. He is the One without any type of impurity. He is pure, unsullied and sacred. He is not tainted by anything worldly. Whatever is put into fire is burnt into ashes.

The things thrown into fire may be pure or impure. Fire remains ever-pure. You may burn the body, wood, iron or gold in fire: but the fire is not tainted. He is pure and sacred. Who is He? He is God.

Achalam: All things change and move. The earth rotates around its axis at a speed of 1016 miles an hour. Not only does the earth revolve around itself, it moves around the sun at a speed of 66,000 miles. But, we cannot see its movement. We think we are moving and the earth is still.

No. The earth is moving. The moon and the sun and the planets are also moving. On a cinema screen sixteen pictures of the film move in one second but the screen is steady. Similarly, He is steady and motionless. He need not move anywhere, because He is here, there and everywhere.

The eternal witness

Sarvaadhee Saakhshibhutham: He is the witness of everything. A drama is being enacted on the stage. The king is speaking majestically, the minister is explaining something and the servant is standing with a stick in his hand. But, the light on the stage is not affected by their conversation.

It remains ever the same. Harischandra is grieved. Chandramathi is lamenting. Rohitasya is fallen dead by a serpent bite. But, nothing affects the stage-light. All the changes are for the actors on the stage. But the light is not affected by them. It remains as a mere witness. The Guru is such an Eternal Witness.

Bhaavaatheetham: He transcends mental comprehension and verbal explanation. None can explain His nature. He is beyond all feelings and thoughts. He is the true Guru.

Thrigunarahitham: The three qualities of Sathwa, Rajas and Thamas are the characteristics of Nature. Wherever these qualities exist, happiness and sorrow follow. When these three are absent, there is neither happiness nor sorrow. Who is beyond these qualities? He is God. He is the true Guru.

Guru and the cosmos

Who is a Guru?

Gurur Brahma Gurur Vishnu

Gurur Dhevo Maheswarah

Guruh Sakshath Para Brahma Thasmaih

Sri Gurave Namaha.

Guru is Brahman. He is the Creator. He Himself is the creation and He is the One that exists in the creation. The universe is filled with Brahman. It becomes clear that the One who Himself has become the universe is the Guru.

Guru is Vishnu. Who is Vishnu? Is He the one with conch, discus, mace and lotus in His hands?

No. Vishnu is one who has the quality of pervasiveness. He is the Doer and also what is done.

The universe is the action, God is the Doer. God is the consciousness behind the cause and effect. The whole universe is the form of Vishnu. This Vishnu is the Guru.

Who is a Guru? Is one who teaches a "manthra" a Guru? No.

Gukaaro Gunaatheetham, Rukaaro Ruupavarjithah

Gukaaro Andhakaarascha Rukaaro Thannivaaranah.

"Gu" stands for Gunaatheetha (one who transcends the three Gunas) while "ru" stands for Ruupavarjitha (one who is formless). Also "Gu" means the darkness of ignorance. What can dispel the darkness? Only light can do it. Therefore Guru is one who dispels the darkness of ignorance. Guru is not the one who gives a Manthra or teaches you Vedantha. Those whom we call Gurus in the common parlance are not real Gurus! You may call them teachers. Those who practice and teach the same to others are called Acharyas. Acharya is one who demonstrates through practice. Today we have neither Acharyas nor Gurus. Today the so-called Gurus whisper a Manthra in the ear and stretch their hands for money.

A Guru is God Himself

Guru is Maheswara. Who is Maheswara? He is the one who rules all beings in the Universe. He commands and ordains everything in the universe in the right manner. Sunrise and Sunset go on according to His command. Seasons, rain, the day and night are His commands. Easwara is one that makes everything follow its discipline without any lapse. Guru is not one who merely teaches. A Guru is omnipotent, omniscient and omnipresent, He is God himself.

Guru is Brahma, Vishnu and Easwara. Some people may say that Vishnu and Easwara do not go together. But it is ignorance to think so. It is only the narrow-mindedness of these devotees.

Some call themselves Vaishnavites (the worshippers of Vishnu) and some others namely Shaivites (worshippers of Shiva or Easwara). But Vishnu and Shiva are one and same.

Vishnu holds in the four hands the Conch, the Discus, the Mace and the Lotus. The Conch is the symbol of sound, the Discus of time, the Mace of power and the Lotus of the heart. He is the master of sound, time, power and the hearts of all beings. Similarly Shiva holds in the hands Damaru (the drum), and Trishuula (trident). Here Damaru stands for sound and Trishuula for a three-pronged time. He is the master of time and sound. Thus both are the same, only names and forms are different.

Only narrow minds create differences

Here is an example in the context of Indian traditions. Both Vaishnavites and Shaivites visit Tirupathi. There is only one God there. Shaivites call Him Venkateswara and Vaishnavites call Him Venkataramana. There may be difference in their feelings but God is one. They create differences in order to satisfy their petty minds.

Another example. Shiva is called Pashupathi, the Lord of pashu or beings. The individual with mind-principle are beings. Vishnu is called Gopala, the Lord of Cows or beings. Actually both mean the same. Only narrow minds create differences. Narrow minded people can never attain higher states whatever practices they undertake for any length of time. We should recognise the unity in diversity. This is true spirituality. You are yourself God. As long as you do not know this truth you are Jiva (individual); once you know, you are Deva (God).

The power of faith and surrender

Today you have heard Anil Kumar speaking with joy about the devotion and the experiences of devotees in Japan, Thailand and Hong Kong. Some people think these people from far off places have such intense devotion, sense of surrender and many experiences, but how is it that being so near to Swami for so long we do not experience these? Swami does not shower any extra compassion on them. God responds according to one's faith. Their faith is responsible for everything.

Of course, there are right and wrong things both here and there. But because of the great distance, they develop more intense devotion and sense of surrender. Intense feelings remain secure under all circumstances. When the devotion is not intense, it becomes fickle. Here is an example. There are huge trees on the roadside. These trees remain green in spite of famine and draught. On the other side there is the paddy crop nearby. You have to water it every day. Even if you do not water it one day, it will dry up. Foolish ones may think, "Paddy crop dries up if it does not get water for a day. How is it the trees remain green even in a long period of draught?"

What is the reason for this? The roots of the tree have gone deep down to the water level, whereas the roots of the paddy crop remain on the surface.

We do not have steady and strong faith. Faith is our breath. We listen to Swami's discourses every day, but we do not derive any benefit. There are some who hear only once but remain strong forever. Anil Kumar has delivered discourses all over India. His discourses are highly attractive and colourful. But his monkey mind is full of jumps and bumps. Sometimes, he doubts these things which he himself says. In order to remove his doubts I sent him to Tokyo. He went and saw for himself their devotion and sense of surrender. He has understood that their faith is responsible for everything. All the difficulties begin when one's faith wavered.

Prahlada loved Hari (God) and his father Hiranya Kashyapa hated Hari. The father went on arguing and denying the existence of God, whereas the son went on establishing His existence.

Who protected Prahlada when he was thrown down the mountain? His faith protected him and not Vishnu. His faith took the form of Vishnu.

Divinity in all forms--the Shirdi episode

Once in Shirdi, Thahtya's wife prayed to Baba to visit their home and partake of food there. Baba accepted her request and promised to visit their home. She prepared everything for Baba's visit and kept everything ready. But Baba did not come at the appointed hour. She served food in the plate and went to Baba's photograph and said, "Baba why are you putting me to shame? More than my humiliation, you will be called a liar if you do not come. Why do you utter a lie? You should keep up your word!"

Meanwhile, a dog came into the house and started eating the food in the plate served for Baba.

When she turned round to see what was happening, she found the dog. She got angry and beat the dog with a stick and sent it out. She was very sad that food served for God was eaten up by a dog. Next day she went to Baba and pleaded with him, "Baba! Should you not keep your word?"

Why should you utter falsehood?" Baba got angry and shouted at her. "Saitan! What is the need for me to utter falsehood?" In Shirdi, Baba used the word "Saitan!" often, now Swami uses the word "Dunnapotu" (he buffalo in Telugu). Baba continued angrily, "There is no need for me to utter any lie even if it is to satisfy you. My form is Truth, but you are not able to recognise it because of your narrow thinking. You assume that Sai Baba is only this body measuring five and a half feet. All forms are Mine! You do not have such broad mindedness. You are narrowminded.

The dog was none other than Myself."

God can come in any Form. All Forms are His Divinity is that which identifies itself with all the forms. It is a narrow-minded feeling to adduce

Divinity to be in one physical frame and have all our acts of devotion on such an assumption.

God can come in any form. All forms are His. Swami tells something to some boy; He may tell something to Anil Kumar. He may send the message through anybody. One may die of serpent bite, another by being struck by a lightning and yet another by slipping and falling. People might think, "Why should he die in this way? Why did not God protect him?" But serpents and lightning were sent by God Himself. They are none but the messengers of God.

We have built the Super Speciality Hospital here. Why did we start it? Many people suffer from many diseases. It is difficult to expect everyone to develop divine feelings of devotion and surrender. Some people have faith in medicines, some in operations and some others in doctors.

Whether it is a veranda or a choultry, it is enough if one sleeps.

Similarly, here our purpose is that people should get rid of their ailments, given good health and live happily. Further, many medical experts like Dr. Venugopal and his team from Delhi, and the team from Hyderabad are performing the operations with great devotion and dedication. What is the reason for all these people to come here and carry on the operations? Apart from their faith and devotion, they have the good aspiration to give joy to one and all. They do all this keeping Swami in view.

Faith is the cause of fearlessness

Earlier, a heart operation was a very frightening thing and people would shudder at the prospect of this operation. They would be afraid of the consequences. The patients would cry and make their kith and kin cry. But in Prashanthi Nilayam today, a heart operation has become an easy thing like removing the thorn from one's foot. None has any fear. That is fearlessness!

Even little children come to our Hospital with a smile on their faces.

When Swami went to the Hospital a little child in the cot who was operated, saluted Him with a broad smile on her face.

Neither her parents nor relatives were there but she was full of joy.

What is the cause? It is because of the environment. Their faith is mainly responsible for this.

All the things are going on very joyfully. Everyone thinks it is God's work. There is no trace of ego in those who work here.

We may get fresh vegetable from the market. We prepare good sambar with dhal, tamarind, chillies and salt. But the sambar is spoilt. Is it the mistake of the salt or dhal or tamarind? No, the vessel is not tinned. The operation may be done spending lakhs of rupees. If there is no love and devotion in the work, it is like cooking sambar in an untinned vessel. Faith is most important for success or failure. It is faith or lack of faith which is responsible.

Without this faith if you get into argumentation in the name of devotion, it is only the effect of ego and ostentation.

God is the only Guru

Embodiments of Divine Love! If you want to understand divinity, you should have the firm faith that divinity is everywhere. There is no place or object without divinity. Guru Pournima means full moon without any defect or lacuna. Moon is nothing but mind.

When the mind is completely perfect, it sheds light. Gum Pournima is not performed by circumambulation and offerings to the Guru. What is the real offering? It is the offering of one's love. To know that God exists everywhere is circumambulation. If you understand these terms, every day is Guru Pournima. There is only one Guru, that is God and there is no other Guru. Contemplate on that Guru.

Poornachandra Auditorium, Guru Pournima Day, 14 Jul 1992

Drop the delusion that you have become old or diseased, or that you have become weak and debilitated. Some people count the years and grieve over advancing age and shudder like cowards afraid of Death. But remember, elation is Heaven, despondency is hell. Have always some work to do and do it so well that you get joy.

Sathya Sai Baba

23. Training Of Nurses Of Sai Mahaa Vaidhyaalaya

Embodiments of Divine Love! Bharath is not lacking in experienced doctors and specialists in every field. Many of them have gone abroad, acquired the latest knowledge in medicine and surgery and established a reputation for themselves. Indeed, very few people possess the amount of fortitude and determination which Bharathiyas are capable of. Our doctors take a good deal of trouble for the care of the patients. Even in foreign countries, a very large number of Indians are rendering medical service. There is a very well-known saying in Andhra Pradesh-- "The jewels are ours; the display is yours." Much of the medical service abroad is rendered by Indian doctors. But, others get much of the credit. Likewise, in India also, there are any number of highly capable doctors. But people do not value what is very near to them. They are attracted by what is distant. Those who are near to Swami all the twenty-four hours do not recognise His value so much. The value is realised only when one is away from Swami. For instance, there is a lighthouse. The light is visible afar but not to those under it. Why doctors leave our country Similarly there are among Bharathiyas many dedicated and capable persons. We do not lack exceptionally able persons. Despite the fact that we have so many able and competent persons, there are few who give them encouragement and recognition. It is for this reason that a large number of doctors, nurses and other paramedical personnel go abroad. They are not given adequate opportunities here. Nor is that all. They are not given the positions and authority commensurate with their abilities. Even the status that is appropriate to them is not accorded. Juniors are promoted as seniors and seniors are demoted as juniors. Because of this treatment many prefer to go abroad. Why should we allow such able and competent men to leave our country? Realising that we should make use of their services here itself, Swami has inspired many highly eminent doctors to serve in our hospital. Although Dr. Venugopal appears diminutive in size, very few people can understand the magnitude of his skills and capabilities. Here is another doctor, a short person, Babadas. Both of them work ceaselessly day and night untiringly.

When we have such highly capable and dedicated doctors, Swami willed that there should be a sufficient number of trained nursing personnel and therefore training facilities for nursing personnel will be established. It is easy for doctors to perform operations. The real difficulty is in taking care of the patients after the operations. It is easy to slice vegetables. But, to prepare a tasty dish out of that is very difficult. This task of "cooking" is done by the nurses. If there is no good nursing, even the operation may be a failure. Need for nurses with pure hearts Therefore in order to train a good hard band of nursing personnel, training facilities are being provided. All those who are pure-hearted and filled with a spirit of service, may approach Dr.

Safaya for undergoing training to serve in the hospital. They need not incur any expense. The entire training is free. Elsewhere, if people want to undergo such training, they have to pay all kinds of fees. Here nothing will be charged. Everything will be provided free. Only, we want persons with pure hearts to join the course.

Today we have quite a large number of people working in our hospital. But, there is more work to be done because of the ever-growing number of patients seeking relief. Hence, we need many more nursing personnel. We are asking for nurses not for Swami's sake but for the sake of the nation. There is a Sanskrit saying: "Jananee janmabhoomischa swargaadapi gareeyasi" (The mother and the Motherland are greater than Heaven itself). Hence, such sacred activities must be spread all over the country. It is not easy to make available such facilities for people in remote and isolated villages. Because in this village this magnificent hospital has been established, it has been possible to provide relief to a very large number of poor villagers.

Many are not aware of the genesis of this Institution. What counts is only action and not advertisement. When a heart operation is performed, the patient has generally to stay in the hospital for at least a month. It is no exaggeration to state, with reference to our hospital, that within a day after the operation, the patient starts eating on his bed the very next morning. On the third day, he starts moving about. On the fifth day, the sutures are removed. On the seventh day, the patients are discharged fully recovered.

 Health is the greatest blessing for everyone
 Our students are aware of the case of Prof. Radhaswami. He is here in the audience. He was not aware at all that he was suffering from heart trouble. It is a mystery how he was carrying on his duties. But the moment he was examined it was found that an immediate heart operation was necessary. A complicated operation had to be carded out. Today he is very much fit for this work and extremely happy. Health is the greatest blessing for anyone. If a person is in good health, he can accomplish anything. There are now a very large number of people enjoying good health after undergoing an operation in the hospital. What is happening in the hospital is not for today or tomorrow. It is an example to the whole world. People should not suffer from ailments of any kind. Regard this hospital as yours. It is not mine. This exists for your sake. Anyone is free to come to the hospital and seek relief and lead an ideal life thereafter. This is my benediction on all of you.
Poornachandra Auditorium, after delivering Guru Pournima message, 14 Jul 1992

It is no use indulging in arguments and disputations. He who clamours aloud has not grasped the truth, believe Me. Silence is the only language of the realised Practise moderation in speech. That will help you in many ways. It will develop Prema, for most misunderstandings and factions arise out of carelessly spoken words. When the foot slips, the wound can be healed; but when the tongue slips, the wound it causes in the heart of another will fester for life.

Sathya Sai Baba
 24. Bright future for Bharath : Baba
 Embodiments of Divine Love! Love is the form of the Brahman (Supreme). Love permeates Brahman. God can be attained only when love is merged with love. There is nothing greater than Love in the Cosmos. Love is sweeter than nectar. It is because men have forgotten this love that they have become a prey to all kinds of ills and lost peace of mind. Because men have lost the love of God and fear of sin they have become veritable demons. There are two kinds of love--worldly love and the love of the Divine--according to the scriptures. The love of the Divine is called Bhakthi (Devotion) or Prapatthi. Man lost Divine love because of complete involvement in worldly things and ephemeral desires. Man needs both worldly love and spiritual love. Devotion is turning the mind Godward. Faith is essential for devotion. Without faith man can never realise his true nature. Faith, however, has to be suffused with Love. Such love can make the Divine and the devotee dance in ecstasy oblivious to everything else. The nation is plunged in myriad troubles because it has forgotten the supreme principle of Love.

 Our President, Dr. Shankar Dayal Sharma, referred to Swami Vivekananda's message: "Faith in yourselves, Faith in the country and Faith in God--this is the secret of greatness."
 Dear students! Today the educational system does not promote the spirit of patriotism. Education is pursued to achieve individual aspirations. It is because patriotism is absent that we have differences between individuals and groups. It is essential to promote love of the country among students. Just as you say that this is my body, you must say this is my nation.
 The three H's that have to be developed
 The President compared Science and Technology to the head of the human body. But it is not enough to have only the head. Spirituality constitutes the heart of the body and that has to be developed equally. Science and Technology is the head, Spirituality is the heart and Dharma is the hand. Hence man must develop the 3 H's----head, heart and hand. People refer to EHV (Education in Human Values). It is the cultivation of three H's that is most important; this is called Thrikarana Shuddhi (purity in thought, word and deed) in the scriptures and when you have the triple purity you acquire Divine Love. Dear students! Today all of you should cultivate the love of the nation. The larger the number of persons you love the greater is the joy you experience. Develop the conviction that the Divine is equally present in all beings. It is not enough to utter the Upanishadic saying that the Divine is present everywhere and dwells in every being. Your actions must be based on a recognition of the truth of these sayings.
 Many of those who read the Ramayana are not really practising the message contained in it.
Rama is praised for acting according to the behest of his father. But how many obey the injunctions of their parents today? Of what use is it in reading the Ramayana without practising any of the lessons contained in it? Practise is very essential to realise the fruits of such study.
 Students should realise that time is infinitely precious. God is the embodiment of time. Even a single moment should not be wasted.

Obtain peace by rendering service to society
The President referred to the importance of Seva (service). More than wealth, rendering Seva is vital. A great devotee in the Bhagavatham prayed to God as follows: "I do not seek any kingdom. I do not seek any heaven nor do I seek freedom from rebirth. But I desire only the opportunity to relieve the sufferings of fellow human beings." The Divine cannot be experienced by Yaga and Yajna (sacrifices), nor by indulging in charity and other good deeds. Only when you engage yourselves in service to society, eschewing egoism, you can really get peace. The Upanishadic message of harmony and co-operation is relevant to all mankind. The differences of caste and community are utterly irrelevant to the practice of these truths. All the basic elements in the Cosmos do not have differences of caste and community. All human beings benefit equally from air, fire, water, earth and sky. All differences arise because of man's self-interest. The truths proclaimed in the Upanishads----Sathya and Dharma (Truth and Righteousness)-- have to be practised by everyone irrespective of caste or community. The practice of good conduct is the natural duty of man. You should realise that the happiness of the individuals is dependent on the welfare of the society as a whole. The transformation of the individual is a prerequisite for the transformation of the world. Together with changes in the political, social and economic spheres, we need transformation in the mental and spiritual spheres. Without such transformation all other changes are of no use. Therefore, make your actions pure. Only then can the human rise to the level of the Divine. The President's career a lesson for the students Students! You must realise the process by which our President, Dr. Shankar Dayal Sharma, rose to such an eminent position. In the early years he pursued education diligently. He completed his studies in the University and acquired refinement of a deep culture. He became an M.L.A., and a Member of Parliament in due course. Starting as a minister at the state level, he became a minister at the Centre. Then he became a Governor. He then rose to the position of the Vicepresident, and from Vice-president he became the President. You can see that he rose step by step and had no setback. Other persons have had ups and downs in their careers. In the case of Dr. Shankar Dayal Sharma, his refined culture, his faith and his sacred ideals have served to carry him to the most eminent position. He considered reverence for the mother and love of the motherland as greater than heaven itself. He adhered to the ideals of devotion to the mother and service to the motherland. His mother is alive today. He begins his day's activities after offering prostrations to his aged venerable mother. The status he has now achieved is due to these qualities. In the election for President he sought no one's help. He has full faith in God. He believed that God would give him whatever he should get and left everything to the will of the Divine. Honours come unsought to the pure-minded. (Swami here recited a song in which the mind is asked not to seek any favour but to leave everything to the Divine Will. Did not the Divine shower His grace on Sabari and Jatayu without their seeking any favour?). Good men at the helm will yield good results As is the seed so is the fruit. Likewise, with good men at the helm of the nation, it will experience good results. All of you should pray for such fruit. You are the future builders of the nations. The welfare of the country is dependent on the students. You must therefore strive to follow the lead of such good men at the helm and lend your support to them for the progress of the nation. Through unity, you have purity; and through purity, Divinity is realised. You all should be united. Union is strength. But alas! There is no unity today. It is the duty of the students to promote unity by all possible means. It is not enough if you maintain unity within the Institute. You must go out into the word and promote unity. This year is also notable for another significant fact. The first President of India was Babu Rajendra Prasad. He entered the Rashtrapathi Bhavan wearing the Gandhi cap, symbol of the nation's struggle for freedom. After so many years, Dr. Shankar Dayal Sharma made the entry into the Rashtrapathi Bhavan wearing the Gandhi cap. With such a President and Prime Minister we can look forward to a better future for the country with peace and prosperity. The President referred to the advent of the Divine as Avatar whenever there is decline of Dharma----"Dharmasya Glanir Bhavathi." How is the victory of Dharma achieved? The answer is given by Sanjaya in the Gita. Where the Divine and the pure-minded (like Arjuna) come together, there is bound to be the victory of Righteousness. Purity leads to unity and unity leads to Divinity.

 Combine the mundane with the Divine
 From the point of view of the students the message given by the President of India today is supremely important. Whatever aspirations and ideals he had as a student, he has presented them to you today. He has therefore set an example. The true role of a Aachaarya (preceptor) is to practice what he teaches. This is the meaning of the term Aachaara. Students! Bharath is entering a sacred and glorious period. Many sacred developments are bound to happen. The nation's prosperity and glory will grow. Man has to pursue both the Preyo Maarg (worldly path) as well as the Shreyo Maarg (Spiritual path). Man should combine the mundane with the Divine. Students should learn to combine these two paths. Develop faith in God. Without faith in God life is useless. Everything depends on faith in the Divine. The Divine is the basis of all that happens. Therefore, develop faith in the Omnipotent Divine. Anything in the world can be accomplished with faith in God.
 Discourse at Poornachandra Auditorium, on the occasion of President's visit to Prashanthi Nilayam, 28 Jul 1992
 Every act done with the consciousness of the body is bound to be egoistic. Selfless Seva can never be accomplished, while being immersed in the body-consciousness. However, consciousness of Deva instead of Dheha, of God instead of the body, will bring forth the splendour of Prema. With that as inspiration and guide, man can achieve much good, without ever knowing or proclaiming that he is selfless in outlook. For him, it is all God's will, His Leela, His work.
Sathya Sai Baba
 25. Krishna--Prema Avatar
Prema (Love) is like a most precious diamond. It will not remain even for a single moment with selfish persons. It will not stay for even half a moment with egoistic persons. It will not remain at all with ostentatious persons. Love is alien to persons who are selfish, conceited or ostentatious.
 Where, then, is this love to be found? This precious diamond can only be got in the Kingdom of Love, in the Street of Love, in the Shop of Love. It can be obtained only through a loving heart.
 It may be asked, "Is not the whole world permeated with Love? Why, then, is not Love readily available?" The love with which the world is considered to be filled is not real love. Prema cannot be associated with the body, the senses, the mind and the intellect. Anything associated with these is only Anuraaga (attachment). The Aatmic (spiritual) life alone is a Love-filled life.

Therefore, people must lead a spiritual life, not a life subject to the body, the mind, the senses and the intellect. A life related to the body, the senses the mind and the intellect can never be free from selfishness, conceit and ostentation.

To experience real Prema there is no need to practice any kind of meditation, worship or rituals.

That is because in the practice of all these there is an element of selfishness. Prema can only be obtained by complete absorption in spirituality. It was for this reason that Sri Krishna declared in the Gita: "Sarva Dharmam Parithyajya" (transcending all rules). Likewise, Jesus also declared:

"I am the Path." Buddha, conveying the same meaning, declared,

"Sarvam Sharanam Gachchaami" (I am surrendering everything). This means that the essence of all religions, the root of all scriptures, the goal of all virtues, is Sarvaathmika Bhaavam (the experience of spiritual unity). The Gopikas exemplified such a spirit of surrender and oneness.

Restrain selfishness and self-interest

It may be asked whether in this mundane world it is possible to develop such a spirit of complete surrender. It may not be possible for all to be free completely from selfishness, self-interest and self-conceit. But there should be a limit to all of them. Nothing great can be achieved without restraint "Na Shreyo Niyamam vinaa." When the normal temperature of the body is exceeded, the fever is a sign of illness. Likewise, there is a limit to selfishness. When this limit is exceeded it becomes a disease. Ahamkaara (egoism) is a disease. Ostentation is a disease. Excessive Swaprayojanam (self-interest) is a disease. All these diseases have been described as Bhavaroga (the disease of worldliness). These are the diseases which are prevalent in the world today.

When the Divine is present in everyone it is not fitting that one should fail to recognise this. One may have the faith that God resides within him, but this is not sufficient. It is not a gmat thing to feel that God resides within you. You have to see yourself in God. That is the true Prema Thathwa (principle of Love). As long as you do not see yourself in the Divine, you remain selfish and self-centred.

Experience of Ananda

Man aspires for Ananda (bliss) in the world. Vedantha defines Divine Ananda as Yoga. Yoga is usually considered as some form of breathing or physical exercise. This is not the true meaning of Yoga. Yoga means Ananda or Bliss. Wherefrom can this bliss be got? Only from the One who is the embodiment of bliss. It cannot be got from possessions of any kind or from position or power. Bliss can only be got from God, who is the embodiment of Bliss.

How is this bliss to be got? Srikanth (a student who had spoken earlier) referred to the singleminded devotion of the Gopikas and Radha. The Gopikas have been misunderstood and misrepresented by commentators. Gopikas symbolise thoughts. Radha symbolises the combination of all thoughts in the mind. So, thoughts and the mind should merge in Krishna, represented by Prajna (in a human being). That is the significance of the Vedantic declaration, "Prajnaanam Brahma." This Prajnaanam pervades every part of the human body, the mind and the intellect. It is constant integrated awareness. All our thoughts, desires and aspirations should be merged in this Prajna.

When this Prajna (constant integrated awareness) is present in all beings as the Divine (as Brahman), what is the need, it may be asked, for the descent of Avatars? There are reasons for the advent of Avatars. There are two kinds of perceptions viz. Prathyaksham and Paroksham (direct and indirect). There are also two kinds of potencies: internal and external. For example, there is fire within a piece of firewood. It is only when the fire latent in it is brought out that it can be used for cooking. Likewise, everybody is like a piece of firewood. The Aatmic principle is latent within it. To make it manifest, some form of love has to be practised. Just as you have to strike a matchbox to produce fire, Love has to merge in Love to experience the Divine.

Difference between divine love and human love

You may consider that the love within you and that the love represented by God are the same.

But there is this difference. God's love is totally selfless. It is absolutely pure. It is eternal. It is flawless. Human love is self-centred and tainted. Such a love cannot merge with God's love. It is only when one is free from egoism, pride, hatred and envy that God will abide in you. Without Thyaaga (renunciation) if a person is immersed in worldly pleasures and leads a mundane life, all his devotion is only artificial and a kind of self-deception. Such devotion will not lead him to God.

Today the world is full of such persons. People claim that they are loving God. I have not seen a single person who really loves God. Everyone loves God for his own sake and not for the sake of God. This is pure selfishness. Man seeks all things in the world for his own reasons. Even God is sought for such a reason. God cannot be got so easily. The heart has only a single seat. There is room in it for only one person. If you install worldly desires on that chair, how can you expect God to sit on it? God will enter that seat only if you empty it of all other things.

Selfless devotion of the Gopikas

Today, in the name of Prema, men are playing a game of musical chairs with their hearts. The chair of the heart is being used for occupation by different persons at different times. The Gopikas, however, dedicated their hearts to one person alone. All their thoughts were centred on Krishna. All their senses were dedicated to the Divine. They spoke only about God. Their thoughts were centred on God. They listened only to the Divine words. Their hands were engaged in Divine work. All their limbs and senses were dedicated to the Divine. They did not consider anything as their own. Krishna was their all.

Here is an episode from the life of Krishna to demonstrate the total devotion of the Gopikas to the Lord. Once Krishna feigned that he was suffering from a headache for which the cure was the application, to His head, of the dust from the feet of a devotee. Sage Narada sought to collect the dust from Sathyabhama, Rukmini and others, whom he regarded as great devotees of the Lord.

But all of them declined to give the dust from their feet because they considered it sinful to offer their dust to be placed on the Lord's head. Ultimately Narada went to the Gopikas, who did not have the slightest hesitation to offer the dust from their feet if only it would give immediate relief to the Lord, regardless of the consequences to themselves.

The Gopikas did not consider whether it was right or wrong for them to offer the dust of their feet. They were only concerned with giving relief to their Lord by any means. They declared, "Our entire life is dedicated to Krishna. His joy is ours." This was the spirit of oneness with which they offered the dust of their feet. And that very moment Krishna was rid of His ailment.

By the time Narada reached Krishna, the Lord was found wreathed in smiles. Krishna told the sage, "You are boasting that you are devotees of the Lord. But none of you has the utterly selfless devotion of the Gopikas." How to obtain Divine Love Today there are many who claim to be devotees of the Lord and close to the Lord. But few can be described as real devotees of God. In each one there is some element of selfishness in his or her devotion. As long as there is an element of selfishness and egoism, the Lord will take no notice of such devotees. The love of the Divine is all the time present. But like the cloud that hides the sun from a person, the selfishness and ego of the devotee comes between God's love and the devotee. To proceed from the human condition to the Divine in man, the only means is the Prema Thathwa (Love Principle). All other means are of no avail. From the Mahabharatha take the example of the fate of Karna and the destiny of Arjuna which indicates the difference between one who does not have Divine grace and another who has the benefit of Divine grace. While Karna, who was associated with the wicked Kauravas, met with a tragic end, Arjuna, who was a firm devotee of the Lord, was blessed with victory. All Indian scriptures and Puranas demonstrate the power of the Lord's grace to transform the human to the state of the Divine. Although people have been taking birth after birth because of their attachment to worldly pleasures, they have not been able to get rid of their involvement with worldly concerns. Hence they are unable to experience the bliss of oneness with the Divine. All the bad thoughts and bad actions which they have experienced in previous lives continue to prevent them from experiencing the Divine. It is only when one gets rid of these impure thoughts that he can experience Divine feelings. Cultivate love in its purest form The Prema Thathwa (Love Principle) is the essence of Krishna Thathwa (Krishna Principle). It is associated with the Divine. Worldly love cannot be equated with Divine Love (Prema). The term Prema is used in ordinary parlance to describe what is really worldly attachment. People are attached more to names and forms than to the inner spirit of things. To get over this false attachment to external forms and names, it is essential to cultivate love in its purest form. There is no greater path to the Divine than this love. To manifest this love, the first requisite is to get rid of selfishness and self-interest. Dear students, dear devotees! It is not so easy to experience the Divine. You may imagine that you have comprehended the Divine. But this is a delusion. You are immersed in the affairs of the phenomenal world. This cannot lead you to the Eternal Reality. Only those who are dedicated to the realisation of the Eternal can attain it. This is illustrated by the Gopikas: total dedication of their lives to Krishna. They sought the complete mergence of themselves in the Divine. Surrender completely to the Lord People today are totally immersed in worldly concerns and do not devote any attention to the spiritual quest. It is true, involvement in worldly affairs cannot be given up totally. But all such actions can be sanctified by performing them in a spirit of dedication to the Divine. The Bhagavatha demonstrates how this kind of dedicated life can be led by a devotee. It is not enough if you claim to be a devotee of the Lord. The Lord must recognise you as a devotee. Only then does one's devotion acquire value. Arjuna, for a long time, felt proud about his closeness to Krishna and about his devotion to Him. It was only towards the end he realised that he had to abide by the words of Krishna and completely surrender to the Lord. He then declared "Karishye Vachanam Thava" (I shall carry out your words). No one should feel that it is beyond his capacity to surrender himself completely to the Lord. If there is firm determination, this can be accomplished. It is only through earnest endeavour that Divine wisdom can be got--- "Shraddhaavaan Labhathe Inaanam." Today the world is afflicted with the epidemic of Ahamkaara (egoism). There is really no basis for this kind of self-conceit. It is born of ignorance. It has to be totally eradicated. If everyone realises that the body has been given for the pursuit of righteousness and acts on that basis, he will be able to realise the Divine. Avatars come to propagate Divine Love Embodiments of Divine Love! Experience the Love Principle. Thereby you will rid the world of hatred. Once hatred goes the world will be free from violence and strife. For all the cruelty and violence that we find in the world today, the root cause is selfishness. This has to be eradicated. Cultivating the Love Principle and manifesting love in all your thoughts and actions, you will experience the bliss of Love. When one is filled with Love of the Divine, all pains and troubles will be forgotten. It is to propagate this principle of Divine Love that the advent of Avatars takes place from time to time. Although the Divine dwells in every person, this fact remains latent like oil in the thil seed. To manifest the Divine within you, you have to go through certain trials and ordeals. Love of the Divine should grow as a result of such experiences of adversity. Just as gold improves in brilliance the more it is heated in the crucible, your devotion has to go through a constant purificatory process. Today all thoughts and actions are polluted in one way or another. All one's words or looks or thoughts are polluted. Young people should realise that they have to lead ideal lives. Only then will they be true to the message of the Ramayana and other Indian epics. Every student should aim at becoming an ideal example to the world. For this purpose they should cultivate good company; the company of persons filled with Divine Love. Unlike in previous Yugas people today pretend to be what they are not. They have to get rid of their animal instincts and progress from the human to the Divine. Poornachandra Auditorium, 21 Aug 1992

Everyone has ultimately to base his life on some one truth; that truth is God. No life can be lived in complete defiance of truth. Sathya Sai Baba

26. Work Together for The Nation's Progress

Embodiments of the Divine Atma! Bharathiya culture is preeminent and unexcelled. It bears testimony to the eternal verities which are unaffected by time, place or circumstance. Sanathana

Dharma is the inner core of this culture. The obverse of Sanathana Dharma is the doctrine of Karma (the Law of Cause and Effect). No one can fully comprehend how Karma operates. Its operations over time, place or people defy definition. The doctrine of Karma rules over the whole world.

The Vedas are the primary scriptures of Bharathiyas. The Vedas have three Kaandas (divisions).

The first part deals with Karma-Yoga (the Yoga of action and reaction). The Upanishads came into existence to indicate the path of Inaana (Higher Knowledge). The Upanishads also have three divisions one of which deals with Karma-Yoga.

It is necessary to find out why the doctrine of Karma (action) has been given primary place both in the Vedas and the Upanishads. The entire gamut of human life--birth, growth and death---is governed by Karma. All the joys and sorrows man experiences, all his sins and merits, all the praise and blame he gets, flow from his actions. Man is thus bound by the operation of Karma.

Not realising the relationship between cause and effect, man indulges in actions which give pleasure for the moment. When he reaps the consequences of his bad actions, he is immersed in misery.

Consequences are implicit in the action itself

Hence, before undertaking any action man has to follow the Upanishadic advice and offer his salutations to the Lord of Karma. He should pray that he should be endowed with the strength and competence to perform good deeds which will produce good results.

The consequences of every action are implicit in the action itself. For instance, there is a small seed. Its entire capacity to grow into a big tree is latent within it. The seed contains within it the potentiality of growing into a tree with branches, flowers and fruits. There is an interval between the planting of a seed in the ground and its growing into a full fledged tree. Wherefrom has this tree come? Krishna has declared in the Gita, "Beejam Maam Sarva Bhuthaanaam" (I am the seed of all living beings).

All that you see in the world is the result of Karma. Everything has a beginning and an end.

Pleasure and pain have a beginning and an end. They are inseparable. Man has to realise the preciousness of human birth. It is highly unfortunate that people born in Bharath do not realise the greatness of Bharathiya culture.

Understanding the operation of Karma is one of the essential aspects of Indian culture. Karma is not something remote. It is related to one's actions. Sin is not associated with some distant land. It is related to the actions which one does. Bhakthi (Devotion) and Inaana (Wisdom) are based on Karma (Action). Wisdom is the fruit of action.

Why Bharath is a Karma-Bhoomi

Bharathiyas had recognised how Karma operated. Nowhere else has the secret of the Law of Cause and Effect been explored as thoroughly as in Bharath. That is the reason why Bharath was called Karma-Bhoomi (the land of Karma). Having taken birth in such a sacred, sublime and great country, it is a pity Bharathiyas today are not aware of the truth about Samskaaras (Right Actions).

People are making no effort to understand the place of Right Actions in life. They should be aware of the essence of Indian culture. Everything that happens is the result of some action.

Everything in creation is based upon action. Whether one believes in it or not, Karma is the cause of creation. Here is an example. You feel hungry. The hunger is appeased after you take food. But there is a chain of events like putting the food in the mouth, masticating it, sending it to the stomach, digesting it and distributing it to all parts of the body. Hunger is relieved only after all these processes. Taking food is Karma, relieving of hunger is the fruit of the action. But between the action and the fruit, a number of events take place. These events may be immediate or spread over many years, or lifetimes. But the fruits of Karma are bound to be realised sometime or other. Therefore all actions have to be done in the right way. People should engage themselves in noble deeds and serve as an ideal example to the nation.

Human qualities to be cultivated
Fraternal feelings, ethical conduct and the sense of fellowship are the qualities which elevate human nature. People do not strive to cultivate these qualities. People should realise that bad thoughts in the mind affect every part of the human body, just as a small stone cast on a pond generates ripples which cover the entire pond. Similarly good thoughts affect the entire body.

Good thoughts lead to good actions, good speech, good hearing and seeing good things. When the thoughts are bad, the consequent actions are equally bad.

The ancient history of India is full of the actions and teachings of sages who exemplified, in their lives, great ideals. But today, while we have considerable talk about ideals, they are not reflected in practical living.

The truth of the Law of Action and Reaction can be verified from a simple experience. If you stand before a mirror and offer a Namaskar, the image returns the Namaskar. If you assume a threatening posture before the mirror, the image reflects it back in the same manner. Reflection, reaction and resound are three aspects of how Karma operates.

For all the troubles and chaos in the world today it is our own actions that are responsible. There is no meaning in blaming others. Each person suffers from the consequences of his own actions.

How can anyone escape the consequences of his actions? If this fact is realised, men will not find fault with others, or blame others for their troubles.

Inherent divinity in everyone is the same

People must, therefore, engage themselves in noble actions and strive for unity with all their fellow beings. Intellectuals today are more busy promoting divisions rather than in fostering unity. There are very few good men who seek to promote unity in diversity. The oneness of all mankind has to be realised. Names and forms are many, but the inherent divinity in everyone is the same. You see a variety of bulbs in this hall. They are different from each other. But it is the same current that flows in all of them. The same analogy applies to human beings. They may vary from each other in several respects, but the divine spark in all of them is one and the same.

The Divine is common to all. There is no separate God for each country or each religion. God is one.

The people must realise the importance of unity for promoting the welfare and progress of the country. Selfishness is the cause of disunity. Only when Swaartha (selfishness) is given up will people realise the Parartha (Supreme).

It is essential to cultivate the spirit of Thyaaga (sacrifice). People do not realise all that can be achieved by sacrifice. When every action is done in a spirit of dedication to others, it becomes a form of sacrifice and a source of joy. When egoism is shed in the performance of actions and the desire for fruits is renounced, then sacrifice itself becomes a source of pleasure. This magnificent auditorium is the result of the combined efforts of many persons, engineers, workers, electricians and many others. It is the outcome of their labour.

Every product is the result of action. Hence, the nature of action should be properly understood.

What seems enjoyable at one time has consequences which are saddening later on. At the time of birth, a child cries Koham (Who am I). This cry should not last through life. Before death one should be able to say, Soham (I am He). Man must experience the divine in him. This is the goal of life.

The nation belongs to all

Bharath is a sacred and glorious country. It is our good fortune to be born in this land. You should realise the truth of the saying, "As you sow, so shall you reap." Hence all your actions should be pure and noble and such as would promote the well-being of the nation and give you joy.

Good or bad fortune in life comes in its own time. It is not easy, however, for everyone to leave things to the will of the Divine. Men are prevented from adopting such an attitude because they magnify other people's faults and forget their own defects. People should get rid of such an attitude. If one cannot be helpful to others, at least he should not do any harm to others.

The nation belongs to all. This truth should not be forgotten. People must stand up for truth.

There is nothing greater than truth. Truth knows no barriers of caste or community. It is the same for all. Many people are undermining the reputation of Bharath by their actions. This amounts to treason to the nation. One who is not proud of his motherland and its reputation is worse than a corpse. All must protect the honour of the nation. They should be united. This is the message of the Vedas, "Let us all live and strive together in harmony." If only this spirit prevails among Bharathiyas, the nation will shine in all its glory. It is because people have forgotten the greatness of Bharath that our country is suffering from many troubles and difficulties. If people act together in concert, there is nothing they cannot achieve in Bharath. Determination and unity are essential.

Three concepts and ideals you should cherish

Bharathiyas should give no room for differences of caste, religion or language. They should recognise the unity of the human family. Remember: "Caste of Humanity, Religion of Love, Language of the Heart." If you base your actions on these three concepts, the country can make any amount of progress. Cherish these ideals in your hearts and discharge your duties.

Bharath is faced with many grave problems and people are worried about what may happen, on seeing reports in the Press. There is no danger for Bharath, because what are happening are only the birth-pangs of changes to come. The changes will be for the good.

There must be, however, a transformation in the minds of the people. There is no use in changes in external forms. Qualities must change. There must be a change in the way of thinking. Only then the change will be to the lasting good of the country. Envy and egoism are animal qualities.

The qualities which every human being should have are peace, compassion, forbearance, love and sacrifice. These are the qualities that should be developed in all people, not vices like hatred, greed, envy, pride and others. Cultivate the feeling of love. Get rid of old prejudices and differences. Foster divine feelings. Only then the nation can make all-around progress.

Embodiments of Divine Love! You must regard the construction of this magnificent mansion as a symbol of universal good--Vishva kalyaanam. Vishva kalyaanam means the well-being of all.

There should be unity of hearts so that anything that is desirable can be accomplished. People should co-operate with each other. From today resolve to give up selfishness and achieve unity among yourselves to serve the nation.

Before I conclude I call upon all of you to regard yourselves as the children of one mother.

Develop genuine fraternal feelings and eschew separatist tendencies. Concentrate on the well being of society as a whole.

Forget all your differences and come together to uphold the reputation of the nation. Bharath, which was once known for its moral and spiritual greatness, has been going down in moral stature. Every effort should be made to raise the reputation of the country. Consider today's function as an auspicious beginning for transformation of the nation. I bless you all.

27. Significance Of Vinayaka Worship

The stream of man's life is marked by different stages. In each stage man falls a prey to vices like egoism, jealousy and falsehood instead of cultivating truth, righteousness and humility. A life, which should be holy and pure, is turned into poison. What should be a meaningful and divinised human existence is converted into a worthless and evil life. The first stage in human life is that of boyhood. At this stage he leads an innocent life, without being aware of the Preyo or Sreyo

Marga (worldly or the sacred path). But as he advances in age, he takes to the worldly path rather than to the sublime path. Endowed with the vigour of youth and in full possession of his mental and other powers, he forgets his basic human qualities and leads a worldly life devoid of any meaning. He loses the power of discrimination between good and bad and forgets what is high and what is low. He forgets even his essential human nature. He is unaware of the Divine.

He descends to the level of the animal. At the end, he ceases to be human.

The necessity to have Sathsangam

Plunging into the river of Desire, tossed by the waves of Delusion, getting immersed in the waters of Family life, and submerged by peacelessness and strife, man is swallowed by the whale of Discontentment. To turn human life from this mundane existence towards the Divine it is essential to have association with Sath--Sathsangam. The term Sath refers to that which is not subject to change over time. It is the Truth which remains the same regardless of time, place or circumstance. Man should associate himself with this Truth. Merging one's consciousness with this Truth he should experience the bliss of such association.

Sathsangam (association with truth)

means experiencing Sath-chith-ananda (Truth-Awareness-Bliss).

The Sathsangam has three facets as indicated in the Manu Dharma Shastra-- "Bhadram pashyanthu, Bhadram srun-vanthu, Bhadram kurvanthu" (See only what is good, hear what is good and do what is good). Unfortunately, in the stage of manhood, these qualities are absent in man. At this stage, he may appear to have devotion but it is neither sincere nor constant.

Spirituality is viewed more as a formal observance than an inner experience.

What really constitutes spirituality? Do bhajans constitute spirituality? Or repeating the words

"Sai Ram" or making pilgrimages to Shrines? All these are signs of human weakness. True spirituality consists in the elimination of all animal instincts in man and manifesting the Divine light within him. This is the true meaning of spirituality.

Today, man practices meditation and performs japa, but along with them the animal qualities are also allowed to grow. As long as these qualities remain, the observance of religious practices is worthless. All such spiritual practices amount to practising deception on the Divine itself.

Therefore, true Sadhana (spiritual practice) means getting rid of all of one's animal qualities such as cruelty, wickedness, etc. Two qualities make a man alien to God:

Asuuya and Ahamkaara

(envy and egoism). Envy and Egoism are two pests which destroy the tree of life. They deprive man of his essential human nature. With these bad qualities, people get divorced from the company of the good.

Significance of the Ganesha festival

The essential purpose of the Vinayaka Chathurthi festival is to teach a person to avoid the company of bad people and cultivate the company of the good. What does the term Ganapathi signify? "Ga" means Buddhi (intellect). "Na" means Vijnaana (Wisdom). "Ganapathi" means one who is the Lord of the intellect and of wisdom. He is also the Lord of all Ganas (spiritual entities). Ganas also symbolise the senses. Ganapathi is thus the Lord of the senses. "Vigatho Nayakah Ithi Vinayakah" (Vinayaka is one who is without a Master above him).

All festivals of Bharathiyas are full of transcendental significance and are not related to worldly phenomena. The first thing which is done on a festival day is to hang a festoon of green leaves on the front doors of the house. A festoon of green leaves is a sign of auspiciousness. By having such a festoon, the householder indicates that he seeks auspicious happenings. This custom has also scientific significance. The green leaves hung at the door serve to absorb the Carbon dioxide exhaled by people and they release Oxygen which is inhaled by them. Thus scientifically the green leaves serve a vital purpose.

Importance of inner and outer purity

On a festival day every person in the house takes an oil bath early in the morning. Personal cleanliness is conducive to good health. Moreover, as the Divine dwells both inside and outside the body, external purity is also important. To achieve inner purity one has to get rid of all bad qualities and cultivate good qualities. The significance of wearing new clothes on festival days is to replace the dirty linen in the mind by good thoughts. The heart is called Vastra, which is the term used for cloth. Hence, inner purity has to be achieved by purifying the heart. The wearing of new clothes is intended to serve as a prelude to purifying the heart within. Thus the different festival practices have an inner significance, apart from the external observances.

In connection with the Ganesha festival, Prasadam (food offering) is dedicated to the deity in the form of Kudumulu and Undrallu. What are the kinds of edibles that should be offered to the deity? The preparations should not involve the use of oil or fire. They have to be cooked by the use of steam. Using rice flour and some pulses and thil, one kind of offering is made for Ganesha. In this preparation no oil or fire is used. The significance of this offering is: During the month of Bhaadhrapadha, the farmers bring home the harvest of thil seeds. Thil seeds have medicinal properties for curing lung and eye diseases. When the thil seeds and pulses are cooked by steam, the preparation becomes easily digestible. In offering such food to the deity two purposes are served. The offerings are tasty and wholesome (giving pleasure and promoting good health). These were the reasons for the observance of various festivals by our ancients.

It is only when a man is pure that the intelligence blossoms. It is only with the blossoming of intelligence that Siddhi (the spiritual goal) is attained. Vinayaka presides over Buddhi and Siddhi

(the intellect and spiritual realisation). Siddhi signifies the realisation of Wisdom. The scriptures say that Siddhi and Buddhi are the consorts of Vinayaka and Kshema and Ananda are his two sons. Siddhi and Buddhi symbolise the powers of attraction of Ganapathi.

First correct your own faults

The Ganapathi festival is an occasion for people to purify their minds. People generally tend to see in others the faults which they themselves have. Thereby they try to cover up their own defects by attributing the same defects to others. This is a bad quality. A man can improve only by recognising his faults and not by seeing the same faults in others. You must see what is good in others and look at your own defects. Only such a person can improve. Man does violence to his human nature by ignoring his defects and magnifying the faults in others. This trait is widely prevalent among students today. Students should aim at achieving harmony in thought, word and deed.

Harmony in the Lord's family

Men today are too much immersed in selfish pursuits. Animals and birds display less selfishness than man. The purpose of festivals like Ganesha Chathurthi is to remind men of their inherent divinity and awakening in them the sense of oneness of all mankind.

Easwara's family consists of Shiva, Parvathi, Ganapathi and Subrahmanya. When you consider the vehicles of the four, you find that by nature they are antagonistic to each other. Shiva's vehicle is Nandi (the Bull). Parvathi's vehicle is the lion. By nature the bull and the lion are inimical towards each other. On Easwara's head there is Ganga. In His forehead He has fire.

There is natural antagonism between water (in the Ganga) and fire in the Lord's forehead.

Ganapathi has the elephant's face and His vehicle is a rat. There is a natural antagonism between Parvathi's lion and Ganapathi's elephant-head. Likewise there is natural enmity between the serpent around Easwara's neck and Ganapathi's vehicle, the rat. There is also enmity between Shiva's serpent and Subrahmanya's peacock. In spite of the natural enmity of these different vehicles of Easwara's family, there is no discord at all among them. Perfect harmony prevails among the members of the family and their different vehicles. This harmony and unity is an example to the world.

Unity is essential for achieving good things. There should be no unity for evil purposes. Whether a person achieves eminence or goes down depends on the kind of people with whom he associates. However, students should not associate with fair-weather friends. The only true friend is God. All others are friends only for their own selfish purposes. God is always with you, in you and around you. He will not give you up in any circumstance. But if your heart is polluted, God will leave you. There is no room in a polluted heart for God.

The inner significance of the elephant head

Vinayaka has the head of an elephant. What is its significance? No human being has an elephant's head. It is against the order of nature. How then did

Vinayaka acquire an elephant's head? This has an inner significance. Vinayaka is known for His supreme intelligence. The elephant is also known for its high intelligence (Gajathelivi). The elephant will not trust anybody except its master. Because Vinayaka is endowed with exceptional intelligence, His elephant face is symbolic of supreme intelligence.

Those of you who are staying in the hostel notice cars going up and down the road. On the other side of the hostel is Sai Gita (Bhagavan's elephant). Sai Gita takes no notice of the innumerable cars going on the road. But, without any notice, it smells, as it were, the passing of Swami's car and immediately comes out with a roar to greet Swami. That is the devotion of Sai Gita to its Lord. The faith of the elephant is as strong as its intelligence. His love for the master is equally strong. It is steadfast love. These qualities of devotion, faith and intelligence are associated with the elephant. Whoever has these qualities can be regarded as endowed with the head of an elephant.

Students who may be inclined to entertain doubts regarding the reasons for Ganesha having the head of an elephant, should understand the inner meaning of this appearance, apart from what is seen on the surface.

Sacred ritual reduced to ludicrous practices

Unfortunately, people attach more importance to external forms than to the inner meanings of these festivals. As a result, meaningful festivals are often reduced to superstitious practices. And often sacred rituals are reduced to ludicrous observances. In olden days there was a practice of confining the cat in the house in a basket during the performance of the Sathyanarayana Vrata so that the cat would not go after the various offerings kept for the deity. The cat was maintained in olden days when there was the fear of rats eating up the grains stored in the house. Even though there are no rats any longer in houses today and there is no need to keep a cat, the practice of confining a cat in a basket is being observed as a part of the religious ceremony. This is how a practice, which was relevant in the past, is observed though it serves no purpose.

Students! You should realise that for every action there is a consequence. The results of each action depend on the nature of the action, just as the nature of the tree depends on the seed which is sowed. The consequences of one's actions are inescapable and it was for this reason that the Emperor Manu laid down that all should observe Dharma. The consequences of actions may appear sooner or later but they are bound to occur. Students like to worship Ganapathi. They pray to Ganesha to confer on them Buddhi (intelligence) and Siddhi (the capacity to realise their aspirations).

In the name Ganapathi, "Ga" stands for Guna (virtue) and "Na" for Vijnaana (wisdom). When Ga and Na are joined we have the combination of Vijnaana (worldly wisdom) and Prajnaana (Spiritual wisdom). It is out of the combination of Vijnaana and Prajnaana that Sujnaana (Supreme knowledge) emerges. Sujnaana is the distinguishing mark of a true man. Ajnaana is the sign of ignorance. Ganapathi is the Lord of Vijnaana and Prajnaana (worldly knowledge and spiritual wisdom). Therefore, when a devotee prays to Ganesha, he asks for the conferment of Vijnaana, Prajnaana and Sujnaana.

Education today lacks all the three types of knowledge Vijnaana, Prajnaana and Sujnaana. You have only bookish knowledge and superficial knowledge. They are of temporary value, perhaps no farther than the examinations! If the value of education is to last all through life, students have to cultivate faith in God. They should realise that when they constantly think of God and perform all actions with Divine feelings, they will experience the full blossoming of their human qualities. Consider every action as dedicated to God. You cannot avoid actions. You must transform work into worship. You have to perform work in this spirit. You cannot substitute prayer for work. You have to combine both work and worship.

28. The Avatar As Liberator

Nishkriyo Nithyo Nirvikalpo Niranjanah Nirvikaaro Niraakaaro Nithyamukthosmi Nirmalah.
 (Actionless, ever abiding, free from delusions, ever blissful, unchanging, formless, ever liberated and untainted am I).
 God transcends the Gunas (attributes). He is without cause. He is without form and is unchanging. He is beyond all thoughts and fancies. He is eternal, pure, omniscient and infinite.

The cosmos is the embodiment of the Divine. There is nothing, not even an atom, in the world without the Divine.

Embodiments of love! Inside us and outside and all around there is air. But it cannot be seen, nor can it be grasped by the hand. Can you deny the existence of air for this reason? How can one exist if there is no air? To deny the existence of air is to deny one's own existence.

God is all-pervading. He is omnipresent. He transcends time, space and circumstances.

According to one's level of understanding of the Divine, God exists at that level. The mind is the means, of comprehending everything in the world. In the world, which is a projection of the mind, the Lord exists as Chittaswarupa (Universal Consciousness). It is foolish to deny the existence of the Divine. All the animate and inanimate objects in the world are Vishnuswarupa (manifestations of the Divine). It is foolish to look at the cosmos and deny the principle that pervades the cosmos.

Equally is it not foolish to look at the universe, which is the embodiment of the Divine, and deny the existence of the Divine? That is the reason why the scripture declared: Pashyannapi na pashyathi Mudho (The foolish one, even though he beholds the Lord of the cosmos, does not recognise Him).

What is the reason for this failure? Man is looking at the cosmos as a physical phenomenon----

Vishvabhaavam. He does not look at it from the point of view of divinity. It is only when the attitude changes that the Eternal will also be seen differently. The external world is a reflection, a resound and reaction of the inner feelings. The outer world has been described as a reflection of the inner being. What is felt within appears as a phenomenon outside. Therefore, it is only when every man renounces the worldly point of view and adopts a divine point of view that he can comprehend divinity in the cosmos.

For man to acquire peace, he has to cultivate Thyaaga (sacrifice) and get rid of the sense of dualism. The highest wisdom consists in seeing the One alone---

"Adwaitha Darsanam Inaanam"

The shedding of all attachment is Thyaaga. The Gita declares that supreme peace is obtained only through Thyaaga.

Mental transformation of sages Vyasa and Shuka

Once Shuka, the son of Sage Vyasa, renouncing all attachments, left his home. Unable to endure his departure, Vyasa followed Shuka. Vyasa appealed to him: "Dear son, you should not leave your home." Shuka told him: "You are not a father nor am I a son.

Both of us are embodiments of Bliss.

Because of the forms which we bear, you consider yourself as the father and me as the son. The world consists of forms. You cannot comprehend the Divine without giving up attachment to forms. You cannot be the Seer without giving up the seen. You are carried away by your attachment to the external world."

As soon as he heard this, Vyasa experienced a mental transformation and started considering himself as an embodiment of bliss.

It is asked: "Is it possible to sacrifice (worldly things)?" The answer is: "It is not impossible if you make a determined effort." Unfortunately, man today is unable to give up addiction to even the most trivial things. Many are unable to give up cigarettes or bidis, tea or coffee. If one cannot give up such acquired tastes, how is he going to give up qualities like raaga and dvesha (attachment and hatred)?

Man is, in essence, the embodiment of puurnaprema (complete love). But this love is constantly changing because of attachment to forms. When he is born, he depends on the mother and is deeply attached to her. As he grows, giving up attachment to the mother, he develops attachment to friends in the outside world. He regards his friends as his life itself. As the years pass, he gets married. Deeming his wife as the breath of his life, he gives up his friends. As children are born, he wearies of his wife. He gets more attached to the children and interests himself in their education. After some time differences arise between the children and the father. At that stage the father attaches great value to wealth. This becomes the source of discord between father and sons. The affection which started with love of the mother ends in love of wealth. And then, he becomes a prey to greed.

Emperor Ianaka's practice of Raja Yoga

It is evident from this that changes in the objects of one's affection bring about changes which cause grief. This kind of love is not proper love. Love which arises at one moment and fades the next moment is not love at all. True love shines like a pure divine flame in the heart of the man whose soul has no birth and death. True love is not subject to growth and decay. Whatever grows or declines is related to the ego. True love should be regarded as an effulgent flame.

Once, Emperor Ianaka approached the Sage Yajnavalkya and asked him: "Oh Sage! Please let me know the facts about my previous life." The Sage replied: "What is past is past. There is no use in recalling it. You have completed a journey along a road. Do not bother about the road that has been traversed. It does not redound to your glory." Although the sage used many arguments to dissuade Ianaka from persisting in his request, Ianaka was insistent on knowing about his previous birth. Yajnavalkya then resorted to his divine insight and told the Emperor: "Ianaka, your wife in the present birth was your mother in your previous life." On hearing this, Ianaka was shocked. He reflected: "What a wicked person have I been to treat my former mother as my wife! I must give up such a wicked life." From that moment he began to treat his queen as his mother, and giving up all attachments to worldly things, began to pursue spiritual wisdom. (The spiritual discipline he practised is known as Raja Yoga).

When, while performing one's duties, one cherishes divine aspirations and contemplates on God, leading a purposeful life, it is called Raja Yoga. This kind of devotion to duty, while pursuing one's spiritual Sadhana, was exemplified by Emperor Ianaka, who attained liberation in this way.

Every person has to discharge his duties in this spirit. Then, duty is God.

Sisupala's mergence with Krishna

Once a great assemblage of kings and sages had gathered at a yajna performed by Yudhistira. In that assemblage Sisupala and Dantavakra levelled abuses at Krishna recklessly. They rebuked

Dharmaraja (Yudhistira) for giving precedence to Krishna by offering him Agrathaambuula (the first honours symbolised by the offer of betel leaves) at the assembly. They asked: "Are there not more eminent and worthy preceptors in this assembly than Krishna? There are, in this assembly, yogis, rishis and eminent ascetics. There are Acharyas (preceptors) like Dronacharya, Krupacharya and others. Bhishmacharya is pre-eminent among them. When such preceptors are present, why give the place of honour to Krishna?" Sisupala referred sneeringly to the boyhood pranks of Krishna to suggest that he was unworthy of such high honours.

Dharmaraja could not bear listening to the abuses of Sisupala. His mind was racked with anguish. At that moment Krishna took the plate on which the offerings had been made to him and hurled it at Sisupala's throat. Krishna did not wield his Sudarsana Chakra (discus). He only threw the plate at Sisupala. That plate severed Sisupala's head. Dharmaraja was happy. The very next moment, the blood coming out of Sisupala's body flowed towards Krishna's feet while a flame from Sisupala's body merged in Sri Krishna. Who attains lasting liberation and bliss?

Dharmaraja was even more astonished at this phenomenon. Dharmaraja wondered, "Should the soul of a wicked person like Sisupala get merged in the Divine? Should his blood touch the Lord's feet?" Dharmaraja's mind was filled with such doubts. Unable to contain himself, he went to the sage Narada and sought from him an explanation of the inner significance of what had happened. Narada said, "Praise and blame, abuse and appreciation are all related to the body and not to the Aatma. You imagine that Krishna is merely the physical form in which you see Him. Because of this misconception, you interpret praise and blame in worldly terms. But the Divine is not confined to the body. He is eternally pure. He is ever pure and omniscient and omnipresent. For such a Lord, both abuse and praise have no meaning. However, in the world many persons secure Moksha (liberation) by abusing the Lord, many others achieve salvation by adoring God. Others achieve liberation by friendship with the Divine. Some achieve the same through Love. But wicked persons achieve liberation more easily than those who love the Divine. The wicked person achieves merger in the divine very quickly. The devotee goes through many trials and tribulations before attaining liberation. What is the difference between the two types of merger? The devotee who merges in the Divine after experiencing many trials and difficulties, attains lasting liberation. It is a blissful experience. The wicked person attains momentary merger. It is not an experience of bliss."

This means that all persons may attain merger with the divine. But the devotee who surrenders himself to the Lord attains everlasting merger. The inner secret of the spiritual process The manner in which the Aatmic Principle operates has to be properly understood. It appears as if many bad, sinful and unrighteous persons in the world secure liberation while many good devotees appear to be suffering from many difficulties and troubles. These things, however, should not be viewed purely from the external point of view. The inner secret of the spiritual process should be understood. It was to give such an inner spiritual experience to Emperor Bali that the Lord assumed the form of Vamana and came to him. Bali was the grandson of Prahlada, who was the son of Hiranya Kashyapa. No one mentions the name of Bali's father Virochana, who was a wicked asura. While Prahlada's father, Hiranya Kashyapa was a hater of Hari, Bali worshipped Hari. Bali was ruling over his realm righteously. He loved his subjects as his own children. The land enjoyed plenty and peace. "As is the king so are the subjects" is an old saying. The ancients always prayed for righteous rulers. Emperor Manu laid down three prescriptions. They are "Bhadrham Pashyanthu" (See what is good), "Bhadrham Shrunvanthu" (Listen to what is good), "Bhadrham Kurvanthu" (Do what is good). These are the life-breath of Dharma (righteous conduct). It is not enough for us merely to say "See good." These injunctions have to be observed. If these are not observed, righteousness will cease to exist. Emperor Bali practised these three precepts and inspired his people to observe them. One returns to the place from which he came. On one occasion Prahlada's father, Hiranya Kashyapa, went to his mother to console her on the death of Hiranyaksha (Hiranya Kashyapa's elder brother). The mother was wailing over the corpse of her son. Hiranya Kashyapa told his mother: "Mother, this whole world is transient. Every being is a traveller in this world of Karma and after completing one's pilgrimage, one returns to the place from which he came. Such being the case, why do you grieve? Moreover, my elder brother, who hated Hari, was slain by Him. That is his good fortune. He did not die at the hands of some ordinary person. The Creator became his destroyer. The one who created him also punished him. How fortunate was my brother! I am praying for a similar end for myself." On hearing these words, the mother was happy and declared, "Be it so." Hiranya Kashyapa was killed by Hari and thereby his wish was fulfilled. This episode indicates how God is realised even through hatred and abuse of the Divine. Emperor Bali's gift to Vamana Vamana sought from Emperor Bali three footsteps of land. What is the reason for the Lord appearing as a dwarf before Bali? When the Lord could measure the earth and the heavens with two steps (after Bali had made the offering that Vamana wanted), why did He appear at first as a dwarf?. This shows that however mighty a person may be, when he appears as a supplicant he gets diminished in stature. When one stretches his palm for an offering he becomes small. The giver of gifts acquires a high stature. Bali realised the greatness of his status as a giver. He rejoiced over his good fortune. When Bali agreed to make the gift which Vamana sought, Sukracharya intervened to tell the Emperor: "Don't give Him what He asks. He is not a mere Brahmin lad. He is Lord Vishnu Himself." Bali replied: "Oh Guru, I esteem no one higher than God. I will rather give up the preceptor than renounce God." There are any number of people in the world who are willing to make gifts of wealth, education and many other things, but there are few who offer themselves as a gift. Considering the gift which he was making to Vamana as a total offering of himself, Bali made the gift. Bali declared: "I am offering my wealth, my family and everything else and surrendering myself totally to you. O Lord' Save me." Bali offered his all to the Lord. After the Lord had used two footsteps to measure the earth and the firmament, Bali prayed to the Lord to place his foot upon his head for the third footstep. What is the inner meaning of this action? As the Lord had measured the entire earth with one footstep it meant that the place occupied by Bali was also covered by the first step. What separate claim could he make regarding his head? The inner significance of this should be understood. By measuring the earth the Lord has covered the earthly realm. By His second step He had covered the heavenly realm.

By placing his foot on the head of Bali, the Lord covered Manorajyam (the realm of the mind). This indicates that the Lord accepted and received from Bali the kingdom of his mind. Vamana confers liberating glory to Bali The mind is at the root of this phenomenal world. The mind is the cause of both bondage and liberation for men. It is only when one is free from the trammels of the mind that he obtains true Moksha (liberation). Vamana conferred liberation on Bali by freeing him from his bondage to the mind. It should be realised that Vamana did not come to Bali just to seek a gift. He came to Bali to liberate him. He came to Bali as a protector. He sought to make Bali an ideal example to the world. For what reason? Bali was the very embodiment of righteousness. He was a just ruler. In looking after the welfare of his subjects, he was exemplary. He excelled also in his generosity and his adoration of the Divine. He was steadfast in his faith. The advent of Vamana was intended to glorify Bali and make him an ideal example to the world. Inner significance of Onam festival Emperor Bali made one request to Vamana. "O Lord, my virtues are not very important. The devotion of my people is of great importance. I could be a great ruler because of the good qualities of my subjects. It is only when the goodness of the subjects and righteousness of the ruler are both present that there is real fulfilment. Lord Narayana, it is not enough if you give salvation to me alone. My subjects are responsible for making me what I am. You must bless my people also." Bali appealed to the Lord to permit him to visit his people once a year. Bali prayed that in the month of Shravana, when the Moon is in the constellation of Shravana and on a Saturday he should be allowed to appear among his subjects. Unfortunately, this year, the Shravana month is over. Only the Shravana constellation is present today. Vamana granted Bali's prayer. The Kerala people observe this day as a festival day in the belief that on this day Bali visits their homes and blesses them. There is, however, another significance for the Onam festival. Onam means wearing new clothes. But is it enough to wear new clothes? The word Vastra not only means cloth but also means the heart. Therefore, the significance of wearing new clothes is that one should make the heart new by getting rid of all bad thoughts and feelings. Today in Kerala every home is cleaned and a festoon of green leaves

 and the trunks of plantain trees are put up in front of each house. The significance of this observance is that both the external dwelling and the internal heart should be kept clean and pure, because God dwells both inside and outside of everything in the world. The real purpose of our festivals is that they should be an occasion for purifying our heart and getting rid of selfishness. There is also a scientific significance of having festoons of green leaves at the entrance of houses and the use of cow-dung for cleaning the floors inside and outside houses.

The sweet preparations made from bananas by Keralites on festive occasions has special dietetic properties, besides being tasty. Give up worldly feelings and develop devotion. The offering of sweets to the Lord on festive occasions has a spiritual significance. The Lord is the very embodiment of Madhuram (sweetness). Krishna took birth in Mathura itself. The inner purpose of partaking sweets on festive days is to cultivate sweet thoughts and feelings. Bad thoughts and bad feelings should be given no room.

Although Emperor Bali was of Rakshasa (demonic) lineage, he exemplified great virtues and sought to promote among his people noble feelings and Godly qualities. Though born in a family of Rakshasas, he was a devotee of God. What matters is not the lineage or caste of a person. What matters is the way one feels and thinks. Everything is transformed by the nature of one's thoughts.

Therefore, everyone should give up wordly feelings and develop devotion to God. This is the means to the realisation of oneness with the Divine. One should not make a distinction between the phenomenal world and the Divine. The cosmos is permeated by the Divine, and there is nothing in the world apart from the Divine. But, because of attachment to the body and out of egoistic feelings, men react to praise or blame as affecting them. They ought to be indifferent to them. If one abuses loudly, it will be lost in the air. If the abuse is uttered in a low voice, it remains with him. Why should one be concerned about accusations or get agitated over them?

Because there are few who express this point of view, people today are making themselves victims of praise or blame. The Lord cares only for the purity of heart. People are lost in the observance of external rituals. The Lord is not concerned with formal observances. The Lord cares only for the purity of the heart. The saint Thiruthondar expresses this feeling in one of his hymns. He exclaimed: "O Rama, I am worshipping you with a pure heart." Purity of heart is essential. Without such purity all forms of worship and all pious acts are of no avail. True spirituality consists in getting rid of the demonic and animal qualities in one and cultivating godly qualities.

Today people are filled with anger and hatred. When men utter the word "peace" three times, it signifies the desire for peace of body, peace of mind and peace of the Aatma. Men should aspire for this triple peace. People go on building rest houses. But they do not build "peace houses."

Peace of mind is most important. It can be got only by renunciation. Egoism and possessiveness have to be utterly eradicated.

Emperor Bali was a supreme example of one who had completely given up the ego and attachment. It is not enough to offer worship to Bali or praise him. People must practice the qualities which Bali represented. People must develop Bali's spirit of generosity. They must be prepared to offer themselves totally to God as Emperor Bali did.

Many people go on reciting the name of Rama, but how many follow his example either in the matter of obeying their parents: commands or cherishing love for their brothers? The real devotee of Rama should develop Rama's qualities. A devotee of Krishna should at least follow one or two precepts of Krishna.

The birthdays of great men are celebrated mainly by feasting and not by following their example. This is not the way to observe their birthdays. You must give birth to the qualities of the great men within you when you celebrate their birthdays.

Keralites' adherence to their old traditions. Embodiments of the Divine Aatma! From ancient times the people of Kerala have been adhering, by and large, to their old traditions. It used to be said that Kerala is a communist area and atheism is rampant there. The truth is that Kerala is a theistic state. Other things are only part of the game of politics. At heart the people of Kerala are filled with devotion. Nambudiripad was a communist leader and was for some time Chief Minister of Kerala. But he translated the Upanishads. The spiritual urge is present in all Keralites. Political changes may come and go, but the inner feelings remain unchanged. The Kerala people are fortunate in having been blessed with the advent of three Avatars in their country. I desire that you should develop your devotional tendencies and sanctify your lives. The people of Kerala are especially devoted to the worship of Krishna. It is Krishna as a child that is worshipped in Guruvayur. I desire that they should experience the bliss of the worship of Krishna and share it with all others in the world.

Poornachandra Auditorium, Onam Day, 9 Sep 1992

29. Three Cardinal Vices

Dear Students! In order to foster one's individual personality, everyone has to acquire knowledge of ethics and morality. Personality is not an ordinary term. It expresses the essential quality of a human being. For the Sanskrit word Vyakthithvam the equivalent term in English is personality.

Personality is acquired only on the basis of adherence to moral principles. The term neethi in Sanskrit is associated with manners and good conduct. When a man exercises discrimination in daily activity, then he is said to observe morality. A life without morality is utterly useless. The prestige of any community depends upon its morals. If morality is absent, the community comes to grief. Whether it is a nation, a society, or an individual, when they conduct themselves contrary to morality, the civilisation which they might have fostered for a long time will come to ruin. One may have plenty of wealth, position, authority and much else, but all these are meretricious; morality alone enhances the worth of a human being.

Kings and emperors in Bharath from quite ancient times based their lives on morality and acquired honour and glory. It is on account of them that Bharath was called a Divine land, a land of Karma (right Action), a land of Yoga, and a land of Thyaaga (sacrifice). The name and fame of Emperor Ashoka have survived for millennia because he practised in his day-to-day life the great virtues. Akbar, among Mogul emperors, has been esteemed as a great ruler because of his conduct as an emperor.

Destroy selfishness totally

Only a moral life can be called sacred. Man is a sacred being. But when he indulges in selfishness, his sacred, divine life is undermined. The sacred Aatma is fundamental for every human being. This is also called Anthar-aatma. God as the Indweller guides and directs human life as Anthar-aatma, the inner-conscience of every human being.

In human life today selfishness and self-interest have assumed prodigious proportions. Whatever he does, whatever he sees, whatever he studies, man makes it subserve selfish interests. Human life has become a plaything in the hands of selfishness.

Only when selfishness is totally destroyed in the human heart, will man develop a broadmindedness that will promote unity and sacredness among mankind. When this selfishness grows continually, it takes the form of Kaama (lust), Krodha (hatred) and Lobha (greed). These three vices are demonic in nature. When these three demonic vices grow in them, human beings lose faith in God. Besides losing faith in God, they also develop enmity towards God. Worldly desires increase. The Divine quality declines.

Hatred and enmity towards God ruins oneself

You can find proofs of this in the Ramayana, the Bhagavatha and the Mahabharatha. The story of Ramayana shows how one who began his career with lust, developed hatred and enmity towards God and mined himself. Ravana was a great scholar. He had mastered sixty-four types of vidya (knowledge). He was the first one who invented an aeroplane called Pushpaka Vimaana.

He had mastered the language of animals, birds and insects. There was nothing wanting by way of knowledge in Ravana. In terms of wealth and prosperity his kingdom excelled heaven itself.

He did a lot of penance to acquire mastery over the physical world. In spite of all these, he had faith only in the phenomenal world and not in the Divine. He did not choose to enquire who was behind all creation.

The universe is the property of the Creator. Rama was verily the Over-Soul itself. Sita was Rama's Shakti. She was the daughter of Mother Earth. She was the embodiment of Nature.

Ravana developed enmity towards Rama and wanted to abduct Sita. What was the result of all this? Hating God and going after Nature, how did he end? At the end of it all, not only himself, but his kingdom and his entire brood were destroyed. In spite of all his knowledge and powers, he ruined himself because of his moral lapses. He did not recognise the divinity within him.

What is the lesson to be learnt from Ravana's fate? It is this: However much of worldly knowledge you may have, you should seek Aatma Vidya (knowledge of the Aatma). Your parents or relations may be distant from you. But God is not distant from you. God is always with you, behind you and around you and He will protect you. Giving up the Divine, which is so close to you, and going after worldly happiness, is fraught with danger. Ravana made all efforts to satisfy his own desire, became an enemy of God and was ultimately destroyed.

Lesson from the Bhagavatha

Next, you have the Bhagavatha. The Bhagavatha teaches the lesson that anger destroys people.

In the Bhagavatha, Hiranya Kashyapa looked upon God as his enemy. He deemed himself the supreme Lord. He felt that there was no power greater than himself. Hiranya Kashyapa was a great scientist. He plumbed the depths of the ocean. He had control over the five elements.

Despite all these accomplishments he developed enmity towards God. He subjected his son, Prahlada, to innumerable ordeals because he was a devotee of Narayana. He tried to drown Prahlada in the ocean and hurl him from the top of a mountain. He got Prahlada bitten by snakes.

But Prahlada survived all the ordeals. Prahlada was always chanting the name of Lord Narayana, whom Hiranya Kashyapa hated. Anger causes destruction of wisdom. And when wisdom is lost, everything is lost--honour, wealth, position and life itself. Scientific knowledge without wisdom is of no use. Along with science there should be discrimination.

The Ramayana teaches how a person suffers on account of evil desires. The Bhagavatha teaches lessons as to how a person suffers on account of anger and hatred. All their knowledge and powers could not save Ravana or Hiranya Kashyapa. It is only God who can give protection.

Developing enmity towards God, Ravana and Hiranya Kashyapa courted disaster.

Greed goeth before a fall

Duryodhana signifies one who has wicked thoughts. His minister was Dussasana. Dussasana means one who promulgates bad laws. A combination of these two led to the growth of greed.

On account of their lobha (greed) the Kauravas were totally destroyed.

On one occasion Krishna said, "Arjuna means a person whose heart is pure, immaculately."

Krishna told Arjuna (on the battlefield), "Arjuna! Get up, get up Dhananjaya. Destiny is all powerful. Justice always wins. Selfishness will end in ruin. This is the nature of Yuga Dharma.

Know the truth (of what is to come). Dhritharashtra may be the father of a hundred children. But, there will not be even one to perform the last rites for him. That is how fate works." Krishna thus revealed to Arjuna the fate of the Kauravas in the beginning itself. Dhritharashtra had a hundred sons. Of what use were they? At the end not even one son remained to perform his obsequies.

The reason was greed. The Kauravas were not prepared to give to the Pandavas their rightful share. Duryodhana wanted to keep everything to himself, including what belonged to others.

This kind of selfishness is called Lobha (greed).

In the Ramayana, because of Kaama (desire) Ravana was destroyed. In the Bhagavatha, Hiranya Kashyapa, despite his prodigious knowledge and power, was destroyed on account of his anger against God.

The fate of those who hated God Ravana, Hiranya Kashyapa and Duryodhana hated God and were utterly destroyed. The basic difference between the Kauravas and the Pandavas was in their attitude towards God. The Pandavas had full faith in God. They thought God was their all. The Kauravas were indifferent to God. All they wanted was only the kingdom.

Before the Kurukshetra war, Arjuna went to Krishna to seek His help and Duryodhana also went to Krishna. Krishna saw both of them coming. He closed his eyes and acted as if He was sleeping. He wanted to teach the world the difference between the two. When he was awakened he found Arjuna sitting at his feet. Duryodhana was full of ego. He thought: "I am a king. How can I sit at the feet of Krishna?" He took his seat behind the head of Krishna. On opening His eyes, Krishna saw Arjuna, who was sitting at his feet. Krishna asked, "Brother-in-law, why have you come?" Duryodhana was filled with jealousy. He reflected, "As soon as He got up, Krishna is talking to Arjuna and not to me." He did not realise that it was only natural for Krishna to see Arjuna first because he was sitting at Krishna's feet. Arjuna got up and offered Namaskar.

Krishna knew that Duryodhana was sitting behind. He asked Arjuna, "What do you want?"

Duryodhana came closer and said, "Krishna I have also come." Krishna said, "So both of you have come. I have two things to offer. On one side I am alone. On the other side there is my entire army. Do you want my army and kingdom or Myself?" Being apprehensive that Arjuna might ask for the Army, Duryodhana came forward and said, "Krishna, I want your army." He said, "Duryodhana, I give you my army, you can go." Arjuna told Krishna, "Swami, I do not want anything except you. I will be happy if I have you alone."

Right from the beginning the Pandavas believed in "God first, the world next and finally the I."

The belief of the Kauravas was: "I first, the world next and God last." So, for them God was last.

Those who are close to God gets His grace

In order to prevent a war between the Kauravas and Pandavas, Krishna played the role of an envoy. Duryodhana felt that the Pandavas were successful because of the support of Krishna and hatched a number of plans to get hold of Krishna and do away with him when he came to Hastinapura. Vidura was aware of these plans. Krishna entered the Assembly of the Kauravas along with Vidura. The blind king Dhritharashtra addressed Krishna and said: "The Pandavas and the Kauravas are cousins. When they are children of two brothers, you should have the same attitude towards them. Why are you prejudiced against the Kauravas? Why do you love the Pandavas?" Krishna replied: "Dhritharashtra! You are not merely suffering from physical blindness, mentally also you are blind. I shower my grace on those who take refuge in Me. The one who is close to a fire gets both warmth and light. The Pandavas have been close to the fire. They are getting the wisdom and the grace in the form of light and fire. The Kauravas are staying far from the fire." Here fire refers to Inanaagni, the fire of wisdom. The Pandavas were near and dear to Krishna. To whom can you compare them? In our body the head is very important. Next the shoulder, the stomach, and the legs. The body consists of these four parts, but it is useless without the heart. Krishna told Dhritharashtra: "Oh blind king, I am giving the analogy of a body with reference to the Pandavas. In this body, Dharmaraja may be compared to the head, Arjuna to the shoulders, Bheema to the stomach and Nakula and Sahadeva to the legs.. In it, Krishna is the heart. Without Krishna, there are no Pandavas. Without the Pandavas there is no Krishna. That is the kind of mutual relationship between them. They are mutually interdependent." Justice will prevail where there is God Krishna made this declaration in the open court, so dear were the Pandavas to the Lord. As there was protection for the Pandavas from Krishna, though they had lost the kingdom and everything else, Krishna was able to get back the kingdom and everything else and confer joy on them.

Success comes to those who have the protection of God. When Dhritharashtra asked Sanjaya who would win the war, Sanjaya answered: "Where there is Krishna, the Yogeswara, and Partha with bow and arrow, there justice will prevail and there will be victory. This is my firm conviction."

The Pandavas firmly believed in Dharma and God. The Kauravas went and prostrated at the feet of their mother, Gandhari, before the start of the war. She had blindfolded her eyes and was not able to see them. She caressed Duryodhana and blessed him. She observed: "Yatho Dharmah thatho jayah." (Where there is Dharma, there is victory). But they had no righteousness on their side. Even their mother blessed them in that manner. Their wickedness was responsible for this.

They went to their preceptor Dronacharya, and offered Namaskar. Dronacharya declared: "Where there is Dharma, there is Krishna: where there is Krishna, there is victory." Thus both mother and their preceptor blessed in these terms. Neither the mother nor the preceptor blessed them with success. The Kauravas relied on their wealth and the power of their arms. But, there is need for God's grace. Along with God's grace, there could be wealth, position, power and knowledge. Earn blessings of parents and God's grace Dear students! Pursue your studies. But, together with education, earn the blessings of your parents. In addition, earn the grace of God. Despite all his knowledge, authority, power and prowess, what happened to a warrior like Karna? He lacked God's grace. Earn God's grace. That is true spiritual education. Along with spiritual education, you may pursue worldly education. A basic requirement for all this is good character. Morality alone helps one in a number of ways. If your conduct is not good, society will not respect you. As long as one is in power, society may respect one. Once power goes, the man will be an object of derision. You may not have any power, but morality will confer honour and respect. Epics to show the power of the Divine To recognise the power of the Divine, here is an illustration from the Ramayana: Rama and Lakshmana went to protect the yaga performed by the sage Viswamithra. There were demons who wanted to undo the yaga performed by Viswamithra. Mareecha was one of them. He was the son of the ogress Thataki.

As soon as Rama espied Mareecha, with one arrow he despatched him far away. Mareecha recognised then the power of Rama. He firmly believed that Rama had the power of Divinity.

From that moment he gave up his demonic quality. When he was in this state Ravana came to him to seek his help for kidnapping Sita. Ravana said, "I want to kidnap Sita. Rama and Lakshmana are there. Become a gold deer and divert their attention." Folding his palms, Mareecha told Ravana: "Oh King of Demons! You are having so much confidence in your physical power. Rama is not an ordinary man. I have experienced his prowess. You have lost your senses. Do not embark on this enterprise. You can never achieve victory over Rama."

In a number of ways Mareecha sought to advise Ravana. There is a saying: "When destruction is impending, one's intelligence will be perverted." Ravana was in a rage. He said: "Mareecha will you obey my command or shall I sever your head?" Mareecha thought within himself: "When I become a golden deer Rama may kill me. If I go against Ravana, he will kill me. Death is certain either way. Instead of meeting with death at the hands of Ravana, it is better I die at the hands of Rama." Mareecha did not like to be killed by the wicked King Ravana. That is why Mareecha took the form of the golden deer.

Dear Students! the Ramayana, the Mahabharatha and the Bhagavatha teach the lesson that desire, anger and greed cause destruction. Fix your faith on God and not on the things of the world. When you have faith in God, your discrimination will be perfect. You will be guided by your conscience, which will always lead you properly. In Vedantic parlance, this conscience is called Chith. God is Sath-chith-ananda. Sath means Being, Chith means Awareness. Where the two are combined them is bliss. That is the meaning of BABA- Being + Awareness + Bliss - Aatma.

Dear students! You are all aspirants of Bliss. You should enjoy bliss. You have to combine Sath and Chith to realise Ananda. Without Sath (purity), there can be no divinity. Without divinity there is no bliss. Always think of God.

Man has become artificial, crooked, twisted out of his normal shape. He has left behind the simple natural ways and made his mind a lumber-room for ideas, worries, anxieties and terrors. He can live on very much less, with much greater joy for himself and others. If only he remembers that he is a treasure chest with the Divine spark in it, he will be more loving and more useful.

30. Inner Significance Of Navarathri Festival

Navarathri means nine nights. Darkness is associated with night.

What is this darkness? It is the darkness of ignorance. The purpose of the Navarathri celebration is to enable man to get rid of nine types of darkness which have taken hold of him. When a reference is made to Devi, it signifies the unified form of Dhurga, Lakshmi and Saraswathi. The three together represent Shakthi. Shakthi is the energy that accounts for all the phenomena of Prakruthi (Nature). Nature is energy and the controller of that energy is the Lord.

Prakruthi (Nature) is made up of the three qualities, Sathwa, Rajas and Thamas. Saraswathi represents the Sathya Guna. Lakshmi represents the Rajo Guna and Parvathi represents the Thamo Guna. As Prakruthi (Nature) is made up of these three qualities (Sathwa, Rajas and Thamas), to get control over Nature, man has been offering worship to Dhurga, Lakshmi and Saraswathi. These are not goddesses but deified symbols of the three qualities.

The role of Nature in the creative process

To acquire the grace of the Lord, man has to offer worship at the outset to Prakruthi. On the one hand you need human effort and on the other you have to acquire the grace of the Divine.

Prakruthi (Nature) and Paramaatma (the Omni-Self) are like the negative and positive poles in electricity. However powerful the Lord may be (as the positive pole), there can be no creation without Prakruthi (representing the negative pole). The basis for creation is Prakruthi. For instance, however good the seeds you may have with you, without planting them in the ground you cannot reap the fruit. The role of Nature in the creative process is similar.

When man forgets God and desires to enjoy the benefits of Nature, he becomes ultimately a demon like Ravana who brought about his own destruction. To secure the grace of the Lord, one has to have purity of the heart, purity in speech and purity in action. This triple purity is described in Vedantic parlance as Tripurasundari. Lakshmi, who is the embodiment of all prosperity, is represented by the heart. The mouth represents Saraswathi. Kriyaa Shuddhi (Purity in action) is represented by Dhurga. The observance of the Navarathri celebration is to get rid of the darkness in which man is enveloped, by cultivating the triple purity of thought, word and deed.

The human body emerged from Nature. Nature has two forms: Aparaa Prakruthi and Paraa Prakruthi. Paraa Prakruthi includes Ashta Aishwaryas (eight forms of wealth), and Kaama, Krodha, Moha, Lobha, Mada, Maatsarya and the three mental faculties in man: Manas, Chitta and Ahamkaara. Paraa Prakruthi (the higher Nature) represents the consciousness in man.

Without the Praana (life force) and Chaithanyam (consciousness) man is only a corpse. True humanness consists in controlling the five elements which make up the Aparaa Prakruthi (lower Nature) and merge in the higher Nature represented by the life force and Chaithanyam (consciousness).

Maintain steadiness of mind during worship

The Navarathri has been divided into three parts the first three days being dedicated to the worship of Dhurga, the next three days to the worship of Lakshmi and the last three days to the worship of Saraswathi. All Hindu festivals have a sacred purpose. Unfortunately, nowadays the festivals are observed only with external rituals without understanding their inner meaning. In the performance of all forms of worship there should be steadiness of mind and body. Only then concentration can be achieved. Today men are unable to maintain steadiness of body and mind.

(At this stage Swami referred to the advent of Shirdi Sai and described incidents from his early life. This part of Swami's discourse is published separately in the next chapter. Towards the end of His discourse, Swami again reverted to an exposition of the inner significance of the Dashara festival).

The basic significance of Devi Navarathri is the adoration of Prakruthi (Nature). Devi refers to Bhudevi (Mother Earth). All the vital requirements of man can be found in the earth. Those who travel to the moon have to carry with them the oxygen, water and food they need from the earth. None of these can be found on the moon.

Adoration of Nature

Students! The progress of modern technology, by polluting the atmosphere with Carbon dioxide smoke, is causing a threat to life on earth. This smoke has already created a hole in the ozone ring above the earth which has been serving as a protecting cover against harmful radiation from the sun. If the ozone layer is destroyed, the effect of the sun's rays may be disastrous. All nations are now worried about this threat. All that needs to be done to avert this danger is to reduce the pollution of the atmosphere caused by automobiles and industrial effluents. The uncontrolled development of industries has to be checked. Development should be in the common interest, to promote the welfare of all.

The Navarathri celebration is an occasion for revering Nature and considering how natural resources can be used properly in the best interests of mankind. Resources like water, air, power and minerals should be used properly and not misused or wasted. Economy in the use of every natural resource is vital. Pollution of the air has many evil consequences. The inner significance of observances like Nagarasankirtan and bhajans is to fill the atmosphere with sacred vibrations and holy thoughts.

The power of Manthra

Today we know how radio and television broadcasts are transmitted to all parts of the world by radio waves. Is it unbelievable that Krishna was able similarly to appear in the homes of Gopikas simultaneously? If a Yantra (machine) could achieve such a result, how much more power should be attributed to Manthra? The power of the divine name and form is all pervading. The electromagnetic waves in the atmosphere can preserve sounds and forms for all time.

When Swami was recently in Hyderabad, His activities there were seen on the TV in various parts of the country. If a mechanical contrivance could achieve this, is it incredible that much more could be done by the divine power of manthras? What is needed is the power to tune in to the Spirit just as appropriate tuning is needed to receive a radio or TV broadcast. Regard your heart as a radio receiver. Your concentration is the tuning device. You will experience the Divine when you tune your heart properly. This calls for firm, unwavering concentration.

The inauguration of the Navarathri celebrations means that you should use this occasion for offering worship to Nature and resolving to make sacred use of all natural resources.

Prashanthi Mandir, 27 Sep 1992

The mere removal of hate from the heart will not ensure Ananda. Love too should be cultivated. That is to say, uproot hate and plant love. If the absence of hate ensures Bhakthi, hill and anthill, tree and twig, mud and mountain--what do these hate? They have no dislikes. But for this reason, do we ascribe Bhakthi to them at all? We do not, for that would be absurd. The Bhaktha must first be free from hate and full of Love.

Hate breeds fear, hate is the seedbed of anxiety, scandal and falsehood. It drains your mind of peace. You may have light without oil, fire without smoke, breeze without a bearer fanning you, a chilliness in the air of your room in the sizzling heat of summer--but, unless you are at peace with yourselves and with those around you, your pulse will be quick and your blood will be racing in rage and rancor. Love alone can alleviate anxiety and allay fear.

Sathya Sai Baba

31. The Shirdi Sai Saga

All festivals have been designed to teach men how to lead a godly life while carrying on worldly activities. It was to teach this truth to mankind that Avatars and saints made their advent on earth from time to time.

This day (the first day of Navarathri) has another special significance. Shirdi Sai Baba was born on September 27, 1838. He was born in a poor Brahmin family in the village of Pathri in Aurangaabaadh District. For various reasons the parents left the child. A fakir found him. As he was a foundling, the fakir had no natural affection for him. After some years the boy was handed over to one Gopaal Rao Dheshmukh, who was also called Venkusa by the people on account of his scholarship and wisdom. The boy grew up in Venkusa's home for some time. However, he was not inclined to stay there for long. In 1854 he went to Shirdi. At Shirdi, Mhalaspathi saw him entering the local temple. Looking at his appearance as a Muslim, Mhalaspathi turned him out of the temple. The boy went back and sat under a neem tree. He was sixteen years old at that time. No one knew then what his name was. If anyone asked for his name, he would give no answer. He would sometimes retort saying, "Why do you want to know my name?" Because of this, nobody could find out his name.

Baba the healer

Some villagers from nearby places used to visit him under the tree and get relief for their ailments. He would take out some leaves, crush them and give them to the ailing person as a medicine. In this manner he cured many persons of their illnesses.

News of the healing powers spread to all the surrounding villages. As a result a large number of persons used to come to him, receive the crushed leaves from him and get cured of their ailments.

Suddenly, one morning he disappeared. A futile search was made in the nearby areas to trace him. Later, in 1858, he came to Shirdi again after three years. There was a village called Dhoop in Aurangaabaadh. One Chandhubhai Patel, belonging to a middle class family, lived in Dhoop.

As no other form of transport was available in those days, people used to go on horseback.

Chandhubhai went on his horse to Aurangaabaadh on some urgent business. When he had finished his business there at the end of three days, he found that the horse was missing.

Disappointed over the missing horse, Chandhubhai was returning to Dhoop passing through dense forests on the way.

Chandhubhai's first encounter with Baba

At one place, he saw a fakir sitting under a tree in a forest. The fakir appeared to be lost in his own thoughts. Suddenly, the fakir hailed Chandhubhai with the words. "Hey, Patel! Come here."

The fakir liked to smoke Chilim (hookah). As there was no water nearby, the fakir hit the ground with a stick and water gushed forth from the place. He hit again another place with a stick and there was a fire. Using the water and the fire, he started smoking his hookah and offered it to Chandhubhai also. Chandhubhai declined the offer.

The fakir asked Chandhubhai, "What is worrying you, Patel?" Patel asked, "How did you know I am Patel?" "I know everything," replied the fakir. "You are worried about your horse. You are keeping your eyes on the top of your head! You must lower them to trace the horse. Your horse is grazing under the tree there." He had made the search for the horse in the same place with some workers but could not find it. Now he saw it under a tree close to him. Chandhubhai was astonished that the fakir had produced water and fire out of the earth and had located his missing horse. He appealed to the fakir: "Swami! You have rendered great help to me. Please come with me and share my hospitality." "All fight, let us go," he said.

About this time, the marriage of Chandhubhai's niece, who was residing in Shirdi, was settled.

Chandhubhai had to go to Shirdi for the wedding. He requested the fakir to come along with him.

They went in carts to Shirdi. Mhalaspathi saw the fakir getting down from a cart and went to him and said: "Aayiye, Baba! Aayiye Sai!" (Come, Baba! Come Sai!) The name "Sai" was given by Mhalaspathi. Till then, no one had conferred a name on him.

Sometime later, Baba was involved in a criminal case. He had to give evidence in a case which related to the theft of some valuables from a rich man's house by a gang of thieves. The police caught the thieves and questioned them about the stolen articles. The thieves said that the valuables had been given to them by a fakir. Searching for the fakir, they came to Baba. They asked him, "Fakir did you give these articles to them?" "Yes," he said. "Wherefrom did you get them?" was the next question. Baba replied: "They have come from the same place from which all things come." "Who gave them to you?" "I gave them to myself." The emergence of the name "Sai Baba" Baba gave such intriguing answers, which the police could not understand. "I am the giver of everything. How can anyone get anything without my sanction?" declared Baba. Feeling that it was futile to question him further, the police prepared a report. Baba received a summons from the magistrate to give evidence in the case. Chandhubhai Patel did not want Baba to go to the Magistrate and so arranged for Baba being examined on commission (in Shirdi itself). During the examination on commission, Baba was asked: "What is your father's name?" He replied, "Baba." (Baba means "father" and the reply meant that the father's name was "father").

Q. "What is your religion?"

A. "The religion of God."

Q. "Wherefrom did you come?"

A. "I have come from the Aatma."

Q. "What is your caste?"

A. "The caste of the Divine."

Baba answered all the questions in this manner. Earlier he had been hailed as "Sai." In his examination, he had given his father's name as Baba. By the combination of these two names, he was therefore called "Sai Baba." No one knew when and where Sai Baba was born and who gave him that name.

Baba as incarnation of Datthaathreya

Later, many persons began to have doubts about his transcendental powers. One day, the birth anniversary of Datthaathreya was to be celebrated (in the month of Maargasheersha on Panchami day). Several devotees had assembled in Shirdi. Among them was a wealthy man, a great scholar called Kaijack. He is not to be confused with "hijack"! His name was Balwanth Kaijack. As he was approaching the masjid, Baba took a stick and waved it at the devotees, asking them to get away. He even beat some of them, shouting, "Saithan! Saithan!" No one could understand why Baba was behaving like this. "I am suffering labour pains. Get away, all of you!" he shouted. In those days, Baba not only used to shout at people, but also wield the stick on them on occasions.

He used even to throw the stick at fleeing persons. Everyone used to be afraid of him. They all fled from the place.

Some time later, he called all of them to come. "Balwanth Kaijack come!" he said. When Balwanth came, Baba went inside the masjid. Balwanth went in and found that Baba was not there. He found a three-headed baby on the floor. Baba had declared that he was suffering from labour pains and there was a baby there. The three-headed child appeared to represent Datthaathreya. It was a small baby with a number of hands.

Balwanth recognised the child as Datthaathreya and called other devotees to come inside. They went in and on seeing the child closed their eyes. At that instant Baba reappeared there. From that time onwards, people started looking upon Baba as the incarnation of Datthaathreya.

Baba's lesson to Muslims

A controversy arose among the local people as to whether Baba was a Muslim or a Hindu. At one time he used to say: "Allah Malik! Allah Malik!" At other times, he would say

"Datthaathreya Malik!"! Whenever he shouted "Allah Malik!"

Muslims used to come to him in the masjid. His appearance was very much like that of a Muslim.

Hence, many Muslims used to come to him. Hindus also used to come and offer incense to him. The Muslims did not approve of what the Hindus were doing. The Hindus did not like the way Muslims revered Baba.

Consequently, bitterness developed between the two communities.

One day, Mhalaspathi was sitting near Baba and doing some service to him. Mhalaspathi was the priest in the Khandoba temple. The Muslims, who were opposed to the presence of a Hindu priest near Baba, came with sticks and beat up Mhalaspathi. At every stroke, Mhalaspathi cried out: "Baba!" "Baba!" Each time he shouted the name of Baba, the blow was borne by Baba.

Mhalaspathi fell to the ground. Baba came out.

Muslims had great reverence for Baba. Baba roared at the Muslim crowd; "Saithan! On the one side you worship me and on the other you beat me. Is this your devotion?" Baba was bleeding all over the body. The Muslims saw it and asked Baba who had beaten him. "Did you not beat me?"

Did you not beat me?" said Baba pointing to several men in the crowd. They said: "We did not come near you at all. We only beat Mhalaspathi." "Who is in Mhalaspathi? I am in him," declared Baba. "He has surrendered to me and hence all his troubles are mine."

Baba teaches a lesson to all

On hearing this, the Muslims fell at Baba's feet and craved his forgiveness. Baba then summoned the Hindus and Muslims and told them: "Dear Children, you are all the progeny of one mother."

Thereby Baba demonstrated the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man. He wanted all differences of caste and creed to be eschewed. What mattered for mankind was the heart.

One who is only concerned about his matham (creed) will never discover the Divine (Madhava).

You must seek the Divine within you. Baba pointed out that all caste and creed distinctions related only to the body. Therefore, you should seek the Supreme in your inner consciousness.

Baba, who came to Shirdi with Chandhubhai Patel in 1858, did not leave the place unill his passing in 1918. Baba lived for eighty years.

How Hemanth Panth wrote the life of Baba

One day, a pandit came to Baba and said that his biography should be written. His name was

Hemanth Panth. He is the author of "Sai Sath Charitha." He entreated Baba to disclose facts about the place of his birth, his parentage, his name and his early life. He could not get any information. Baba did not reveal anything to anyone. But on one occasion, when he was alone with Mhalaspathi, Baba disclosed his date of birth to him.

Mhalaspathi was no scholar. He had learnt only a few manthras to conduct the puja in the temple. He noted down the date of birth on a piece of paper. This came into the hands of Hemanth Panth. With this, he began to write the life of Baba.

No one knows the real truth about Baba. The world knows some facts about his life after his sixteenth year. He was born on September 27, 1838, and attained Samadhi on Vijayadasami day in 1918. During his lifetime he taught many sacred things to the people and performed many remarkable deeds. He was worshipped by many devotees. Daada, Naana, Shaama, Abdul Baba,

Mhalaspathi, Chandharkar and Dhas Ganu were always with him.

Abdul Baba was active till recently.

He was a fervent devotee of Baba. In his view it did not matter to what religion one belonged. All were one in their devotion to God.

Kaaka Dixith was a Judge whose son stayed in Brindavan (Whitefield) for twenty years. The latter's wife is now in Brindavan. Kaaka Dixit maintained a diary in which many facts about Baba have been recorded including his statement about when he would pass away.

Acquire spiritual bliss through Thyaaga

No one can make any affirmations about the nature of the Divine. One's relationship with the Divine is spiritual--Aatma to Aatma. In this Kali or the evil age, however, many become a prey to doubts because of their preoccupation with the physical form. This is because of their being immersed in worldly attitudes derived from their perception of the physical elements. The phenomenal Prakruthi (world) is replete with sensory experiences. The spiritual life is based on Thyaaga (detachment). Enduring bliss is experienced only when there is sacrifice or detachment.

Man today is not prepared for sacrifice. On the contrary, his desires are insatiable and he is losing all human qualities. The mind is polluted and truth has become a rarity. At every step, man is indulging in wrong doing. Noble thoughts have taken flight.

Envy and hatred are rampant.

Men should learn to follow the dictates of their heart and act according to the promptings of their conscience. This conscience is related to the universal consciousness.

Prashanthi Nilayam, first day of Navarathri, 27 Sep 1992

Love alone can overcome obstacles, however many and mighty.

There is no strength more effective than purity, no bliss more satisfying than Love, no joy more restoring than Bhakthi, no triumph more praiseworthy than surrender.

Sathya Sai Baba

32. See The One In The Many

Embodiments of the Divine Aatma! For all living beings on earth, the earth is the basis of life.

The Life Force for the earth is water. Out of water come sasyam (food grains). Food grains sustain Purusha (man). Speech is the highest expression of man.

Ritham (the Cosmic order) is based on Vaak (the Divine word). Ritham is cognised in Riks (Vedic hymns). The beauty of Riks is found in Saama (one of the four Vedas). Omkaara (the primal sound Pranava) is the essence of Saama.

Human existence arises from the Divine, is sustained by the Divine and finally merges in the Divine. Omkaara has three constituents. Akaara, Ukaara and Makaara (the three syllables--A, U, M). Akaara represents the vital principle Praana Thathwa.

Ukaara represents the Mind.

Makaara represents the body. Omkaara is thus the unified expression of the Aatma, the mind and the Body.

The cosmos emerged from Akaara. It is the Praana (Life-Force). The Mind principle came from Ukaara. The Body emerged from Makaara. The Aatma, the Mind and the Body, which emanated from the three syllables "A," "U" and "M," permeate the sun, the firmament and the entire universe. Omkaara is the essential basis for the entire creation.

The three forms of Omkaara principle

The Omkaara principle has three forms: Naadha, Bindu and Kalaa. Naadha is the sound that comes from the life-breath. This means that Omkaara is associated with the sound coming from the life-breath. The five kinds of life breath--Praana, Samaana.

Udaana and Vyaana--are expressions of the Life-Principle. These five represent the Pancha Bhutas (five basic elements).

Bindu is the unified form of the Aatma, the Mind and the Body. Kalaa is the reflected image of the Paramaatma (OmniSelf) through the Buddhi (intellect). The triple principle Naadha, Bindu, Kalaa--permeate the entire universe.

What is the purpose served by these three? All three are forms of Maaya (deceptive appearances). Even the sounds, "A," "U" and "M," are deluding.

Praana, Mind and Body are also forms of Maaya (delusion). Hence, the ancient sages declared:

"Tasmai namah." Salutations to the One that transcends all forms. The yogis prayed to the One who is beyond Naadha, Bindu and Kalaa (Naadabindukalaatheetha).

The cosmos, thus, is made up. of Naadha, Bindu and Kalaa. How is man to recognise this fact?

The sages declared that Sathsanga is essential for this purpose.

Sathsanga is commonly understood as referring to good company. This is not the proper meaning. Sath refers to that which is permanent, pure and unchanging. It is unaffected by time.

Sathsanga means association with Sath in this sense.

Sath refers therefore to the Cosmic Consciousness which is present in all beings. The consciousness present in an individual cannot be called Sath. Sath applied to that collective Cosmic Consciousness which is present in all beings. Sathsanga means the cultivation of association with this Cosmic Consciousness by the individual. Most people consider that coming together with other individuals for the purpose of prayer and other devotional acts is Sathsanga.

This is not so. Sathsanga represents the striving by man to establish union with the all-pervading, omnipotent, Universal Consciousness.

The inner meaning of Moha

There is, however, an impediment in the way of achieving this, known as Moha. Moha does not refer to attachment to wealth, property or children. Man can get rid of Moha only when he understands its inner meaning. Moha is derived from the words Maa meaning "finite," and Ooha, meaning, "imagining that which does not exist." Moha means, "finite conception of the unreal as real." This is divorced from any concept of divinity. Moha is totally related to the Praakritham

(phenomenal world). It is associated with Kaama or desire. Kaama signifies transient pleasure based on worldly desires. Lasting happiness can only be got from Divine feelings related to the Chaithanya (Cosmic Consciousness). This consciousness itself is based on the transcendental

Sath-chith-ananda. Sath is that which is eternal--the Being that is permanent. Chith signifies

Paripoorna Inaana (total awareness or knowledge). Chith is total awareness of what Sath represents. Both these transcend the phenomenal world. But these transcendental entities are present in the phenomenal objects. How are the two to be distinguished from each other? The transcendental element in the phenomenal world must be recognised as reflected images, like the reflections of the sun in a pot of water. The body is like a vessel in which the Divine is present as reflection--like the reflection of the sun, which is permanent, in a vessel which is impermanent.

The Divine is present inside and outside everything in the Cosmos. In the body, that may be compared to a vessel, the reflection of the Life principle, or the Aatma, can be seen in the mind, which corresponds to water in the vessel. While the body and the mind are finite, the Aatma is Infinite.

All the prayers, japas, Yogas and Yainas performed by men today are confined to the achievement of temporary pleasures and rewards. They are related to a life which is itself impermanent.

The mind and the phenomenal world are equally impermanent.

How to recognise unity in diversity?

The Universe is called prapancha--a manifestation of the Pancha Bhutas--the five basic elements, ether, air, fire, water and earth. As these elements are impermanent and subject to change, all human life is related to impermanent objects and pleasures. How is one to achieve that which is lasting within the framework of the impermanent? This should be done by breaking down the separation between the permanent and the impermanent and recognising the permanent in the imperma-nent---the One in the many, unity in diversity. How is one to recognise unity in diversity? We see the manifoldness of bodies, with a multiplicity of names, forms, speech and feelings. But in all of them there are the five elements common to all. But these are gross elements. Besides these, there is the spiritual element, Chinmaya (Consciousness). The Vedantins described the body as a doll of clay. Because of its predominant earthy nature, the body by itself is unable to raise itself to a higher level of existence. For this purpose, it needs the power of Manthra or Yantra. An aeroplane is Yantra (a machine) which is able to lift man far above the earth. Development of Life-principle in man

The predominant earth element in man is constantly pulling him downwards. To lift himself above the mundane level man has to reduce the earthy element in him and increase the other four elements, air, fire, water and ether. The fire element that has to be increased is the Inaana-Agni--the Fire of Wisdom. Similarly, man has to reduce the Apaana Vaayu in him and increase the Samaana Vaayu. This is the development of the Life-principle in man.

What is the purpose of the Navarathri celebrations? It is to acquire mastery over the forces of Nature and use it for obtaining mental satisfaction. Contentment in the mind is not easily secured. As soon as one desire is satisfied, another crops up. There is no limit to Kaama (desires). Even the aspiration for Moksha (liberation from mundane existence) is a desire. As long as desires remain, man is bound to the mundane existence. Prema is love of God

Moksha means the disappearance of Moha (attachment). Liberation signifies freedom from fleeting pleasures. What is it that man should aspire for? There is a Divinity that is permanent and unchanging. That is known as Prema (Divine Love). This Prema is not related to the physical. Men experience this love in its worldly form as affection or attachment. All love in human relationships today is not Prema but Anuraaga (attachment).

It is inherently of a passing nature--interludes in the human journey. All attachment arises at one stage---between mother and son, husband and wife, and so on--and drops away at another stage. As against these transient attachments, the love of God (Prema) is something totally different. God is eternal--existing before man's birth and continuing after his death. The Divine is without a beginning or an end.

True love means the Love of God. When a man and woman wed, we call it "marriage." But when the Jivaatma (the individual Self) unites with the Paramaatma (the Omni-Self), it is called merger.

During the Dashara festival, the three Goddesses Dhurga, Lakshmi and Saraswathi--are worshipped according to certain traditional practices. The tenth day of the festival is celebrated as the Day of Victory. The celebration has its roots deep in the ancient history of Bharath. In the Dwapara Yuga, when the Pandavas had to spend one year incognito, they hid all their asthras (weapons), on the advice of Krishna, in a Jammi tree which is thick in foliage and whose branches are filled with latent fire. Vijayadasami was the day on which they retrieved the weapons from the tree and used them to win victory over the Kauravas.

Earlier, in the Thretha Yuga, Sri Rama's coronation, after his victorious return to Ayodhya from Lanka, was performed on Vijayadasami day. Dhurga represents the prodigious Prakruthi Shakthi (power of Nature). As against this power of Nature is the Paraa Shakthi (the power of the Spirit). When spiritual power is predominant, the power of Nature is kept under control. When spiritual power is weak, the power of Nature becomes predominant. This is illustrated by the example of smoke and fire. When smoke is predominant, the fire is suppressed. When the fire is blazing, the smoke vanishes. Hence, to enhance the power of the Spirit and limit the power of Nature, man has to cultivate Vairaagya (detachment). To the extent the power of Nature is under control, to that extent spiritual power grows.

The need to develop Will power

Ichcha-Shakthi (the potency of Will) arises from thoughts. This Ichcha-Shakthi is the source of several other potencies like intellectual power, the discriminating capacity and others. To develop this Ichcha-Shakthi (Will power), one has to worship Devi.

This calls for the cultivation of thyaaga (renunciation or detachment). For instance, if one has a desire for various drinks, he can bring the desires under control by giving up, to begin with, the desire for some of them. Thereby the Ichcha-Shakthi (Will power) is developed and in due course it becomes easier to give up other desires. In Vedantic parlance this is described as Vairaagya (renouncing all attachments).

Vairaagya is not abandonment of hearth and home and retiring to a forest. It means developing Godly thoughts and reducing worldly feelings. It is when this balanced development takes place that one acquires Prakruthi-Shakthi (control over the power of Nature). When these powers are got, the mental power in a person increases.

Dhurga represents the Prakruthi-Shakthi and Lakshmi represents the Thought power--Sankalpa-Shakthi. Vaak-Shakthi, the power of speech, is represented by Saraswathi. It is to acquire these three powers that the various forms of worship are performed during the Navarathri festival. But prayers alone are not enough. Prayers issue from the lips. They should emanate from the heart.

The Hridaya (heart) symbolises the Ksheerasagara (Ocean of Milk). Lakshmi emerged from the ocean of Milk. When Lakshmi emerges, purity of speech follows. Whatever you speak conforms to truth.

The concepts of Sathya and Ritha are two concepts: Sathya (truth) and Ritha (conduct based on unity of thought, word and deed). The triple purity of mind, speech and body is Ritha. To adhere to Ritha and speak and act accordingly is Truth. What is uttered with this triple purity is alone Truth, not other words. The ancients have declared that adherence to the truth is Dharma (Righteousness). There is no higher Dharma than Truth---Sathyaannaasthi paro Dharmah. Without the firm foundation of Truth, the mansion of Dharma cannot stand.

A life built upon sankalpa (desires) cannot last. The mansion of desires must be converted into a Mansion of Divine Will (Ichcha-Bhavanam). When the Ichcha-Shakthi (Will Power) is converted into Kriya-Shakthi (power of action), it results in Inaana-Shakthi (the power of Wisdom). It is through this Divine Wisdom that spiritual liberation Kaivalyam is secured.

Divine potencies of the three Goddesses

The Navarathri festival should not be observed as a festival for worshipping the consorts of Vishnu, Shiva and Brahma. These Goddesses symbolise Divine potencies. All these potencies are derived from Vishnu. The entire cosmos is a manifestation of the myriad forms of Vishnu.

People must recognise this oneness underlying the different forms. All beings breathe the same air as their life-breath. Likewise all the five basic elements are common to all. These elements are the stuff of Nature. But in the Para Thathwa (the Supreme Principle, the Divine), these do not exist. The elements are mortal. The Divine is immortal. To proceed from the mortal to the immortal the easiest means is the cultivation of Prema (Divine Love).

The heart is like a sky wherein the clouds in the form of thoughts hide the Buddhi (the intellect) and the Mind representing the sun and the moon. Vairaagya is the means to get rid of thoughts and the desires arising from them. The Devi Puja performed during Navarathri is intended to get rid of worldly attachments and divert the mind towards God.

There are four different qualities in man: humanness, the animal nature, the demonic nature and the Divine nature. When man follows the dictates of the body, he is a prey to his animal nature.

When he is subject to the vagaries of the mind, he becomes demonic. When he is following the Aatma, he is manifesting his Divinity. When he is governed by all three--the body, the mind and the Aatma--he is human.

The way to enter the spiritual path

When Ravana fell a victim to the promptings of the mind, his demonic nature predominated over his other good qualities as a worshipper of Shiva and a master of many sciences. Whenever a desire arises in the mind, one should exercise the power of discrimination and decide whether it is good or bad. This is the way to enter on the spiritual path.

Each person has to decide for himself in which of these four states he is placed. The Aatmic principle is fundamental and everyone should strive to fortify the heart for spiritual ends. This heart is not the physical heart. It is the abode of the Spirit and is located in the spinal column between the ninth and twelfth vertebrae. It shines like lightning in the core of a dark cloud. This is called Sushumna.

Sushumna refers to the state in which all the sensory organs are subdued and the mind and desires are under control. It is not the state of deep sleep, as is interpreted by some. The terms used by the Vedantins (spiritual philosophers) should be understood in their deeper sense. This is a difficult exercise. The easier path is to love God with a pure and unwavering mind. Tukaram confessed that he was unacquainted with the techniques of meditation or the rules for performing sacrifices. "Oh Rama! The only method I know to attain you is to love you with a pure heart! Let me have your grace for cherishing this love," he declared. The Ozone layer above the earth faces great danger owing to atmospheric pollution and intensive afforestation is essential for controlling this pollution and safeguarding the Ozone layer. Seek the kingdom of the Spirit within. The Navarathri festival was celebrated by kings in olden days for propitiating Nature before embarking on wars of conquest. The Navarathri festival has another significance also. It is intended to secure victory over the Navagrahas (nine planets). Saint Thyagaraja, however, declared that if only he has Rama's Anugraha (grace), the Navagrahas would be utterly powerless. Men today should not seek the earthly victories sought by the ancient rulers. They should seek the sovereignty of the Aatmasaamraajyam (Kingdom of the Spirit) within them. This calls for control over the senses and the eschewing of bad qualities like anger, greed and jealousy. This sadhana must begin from now itself when you are young. Do not put it off for your old age. The students are well behaved while they are here. But they should carry their good conduct wherever they may be. Only then will they serve to reform the world. Just as people of all faiths live in harmony here, you should live in harmony with people of other faiths in whatever country you may live. You will be serving your Motherland well only when you set the example to the world.

Prashanthi Mandir, 4 Oct 1992

You have Shanthi. The subtle effect of manthras or mystic formulae mentioned in the Vedas cannot be seen or heard by the senses! They have to be experienced in and through the inner consciousness, the Antha Karana.

It is foolish to try to shape the world. Shape yourself as the embodiment of Peace, Love and Reverence. Then you will see all as Love, Compassion and Humility.

Sathya Sai Baba

33. Let Your Buddhi Shine

Sukham aathyanthikam Buddhi graahyam atheendhriyam. The Gita declares that everlasting bliss can be secured by the Buddhi (intellect) by transcending the senses. Sukham (happiness)

cannot be derived through the senses. Sensory pleasures are deceptive and transient. True happiness is permanent and real. Man can realise this only through the Buddhi. The intellect is characterised by earnestness and steadiness.

All the pleasures enjoyed by man in ordinary life are related to the senses. Vishayasukham

(sensuous pleasure) is verily visha (poisonous) and not

Amrithasukham (eternal). These pleasures result in bondage for man and do not elevate him. All the pleasures man enjoys are based on the senses and have no relation to the intellect.

Man should seek the bliss that is real and lasting and this can be got through the Buddhi. The Thaitthireeya Upanishad has expounded the nature of the Buddhi in detail. Comparing Buddhi to a bird, the Upanishad has described its head as Sraddha (earnestness). The two wings of the bird are Sathya and Ritha. Yoga is its tail. The body is Mahath-Thatwa. The five constituents-- Sraddha, Sathya, Ritha, Yoga and Mahath Thatwa--are parts of Buddhi.

Among these Sraddha comes first. Man cannot accomplish any undertaking without Sraddha (earnest endeavour). All daily actions like eating and walking are prompted by Sraddha.

"Shraddhaavaan labhathe Inaanam," says the Gita (The higher wisdom is obtained by the earnest seeker). Nor is that all. The Gita has declared that Sraddha as well as Buddhi are forms of the Lord. Buddhi, therefore, should not be regarded as an ordinary appendage of man. It is associated with Sraddha, Sathyam (Truth), Ritham (the Cosmic order), Yoga and Mahath (the Supreme Principle). To treat an attribute that is related to these five significant entities as an ordinary quality in man is the result of viewing it from a mundane perspective.

Supremacy of Buddhi over mental cleverness

Buddhi should not be equated with Medhaa Shakthi (mental agility or cleverness). The superiority of Buddhi over Medhaa Shakthi was proclaimed by King Vikramaditya at an assembly of scholars whom he had gathered for discussing this issue. Without Buddhi, with its five important associates, all mental faculties are useless like a fruit without juice, a tree without fruit, a temple without a lamp, or a counterfeit coin. Most intellectuals today, not realising the supremacy of the Buddhi and relying only on their intelligence, are ignoring their inherent divinity. Buddhi is the divine element in man, which is shining effulgently always. The Gita declares: The Buddhi transcends the senses (Atheendriyam). It is related to the Divine. What passes for the intellect today is divorced from the Divine and is not Buddhi in its real sense. This intellect is limited in its capacity and is motivated by Self-interest. Hence the Buddhi's power of discrimination is used by man for selfish purposes. All actions are based on swartha (selfinterest) and not on Paraaartha (higher values). Actions which are free from self-interest lead to Thaarakam (liberation). Actions based on self-interest lead to Maarakam (mortality). The difference between these two should be properly understood. All actions based on the Aatmabhaava (the Aatmic feeling) lead to liberation. All worldly actions are Maaraka (self-destroying). The object of reciting manthras In olden days, many persons who were observing transitional practices, used to recite some manthras before taking food. "Annam Brahma" (The food is Brahman). "Rasam Vishnu" (The sweet drink is Vishnu). "Bhoktho Devo Maheswarah" (The partaker is the Lord Maheswara). Reciting these manthras, they would start eating. The object of this prayer was: "May the food that we consume be converted to the vital fluid that circulates in every part of the body and endows the body with all powers. Confer on our mind the capacity to make right use of these powers. Purify our speech in conformity with the nature of the mind." The physical part of the food that we consume serves the needs of the gross body. The subtle element in it goes to the mind. The subtler element enters into Vaak (speech). The Buddhi is thus related to the functioning of the body, the organs and the mind. These three are represented by Brahma, Vishnu and Maheswara. The Praana (life-principle) is related to Brahma. The mind is related to Vishnu and vaak (speech) is related to Shiva. These three faculties should not be wasted. They should be utilised properly. The power of speech should be used for speaking the truth. The mind should be directed towards sacred paths. The body given to man should be used for achieving righteousness. Sareeram-aadyam khalu dharmasaadhanam. (The body is the primary requisite for realising Dharma). Thus, the mind, speech and body are manifestations of Brahma, Vishnu and Shiva. Sathya and Ritha are vital in a man's life

If people today indulge in meaningless and impure activities, it means that they are wasting their Divine gifts. Before undertaking any action, one should utter the prayer: "May my actions be holy. May my speech be helpful to others and not cause any pain to them. May all my thoughts be sacred, godly and purposeful." The rulers and people in ancient days used to sanctify their lives by such prayerful actions. Two things are vital in a man's life: Sathya (Truth) and Ritha (Unity in thought, word and deed). In most people today, this triple unity is absent. One reason for this is that people have allowed their intellect to be polluted, as in the case of a lamp in which the chimney is covered by soot from the flame inside and dust from outside. The light from the lamp will be effulgent if the soot inside and the dust outside are removed. In the case of the Buddhi (intellect), the soot comes from Ahamkaara (ego) and the dust from Mamakaara (mine-ness). These two reduce the effulgence of the intellect. They have to be removed to make the Buddhi shed its light fully. The role of Ahamkaara and Mamakaara To explain how Ahamkaara (egoism) and Mamakaara (Mine-ness) affect even those who claim to be renunciants, there is an episode from the life of Aadhi Sankaracharya in which Ubhayabhaarathi, the wife of the great scholar, Mandana Mishra, acted as a judge in the debate between Sankaracharya and Mishra. In the first debate Ubhayabhaarathi declared Sankaracharya to be the winner and Mandana Mishra took Sanyasa (renunciant stage). Thereupon, Ubhayabhaarathi challenged Sankaracharya to vanquish her in a debate as she was one half of her husband. She also took to Sanyasa after losing in the debate. One day Ubhayabhaarathi saw a Sadhu (mendicant) using his drinking vessel as a pillow while resting on the ground and meditating. She remarked to her disciples: "Look at this Sadhu! He claims he has renounced everything, but in his attachment for his drinking vessel he is taking care of it by keeping it under his head lest someone should take it. Is this renunciation?" On hearing her words, the Sadhu threw away the vessel. While Ubhayabhaarathi and her disciples were returning from the Ganges, Ubhayabhaarathi noticed what the Sadhu had done and remarked: "I thought the sanyasi had only one defect--attachment. I find he has another: Anger arising out of ego, Ahamkaara. He threw away the vessel enraged by my words. Both attachment and anger are enemies of thapas." On hearing these words, the Sadhu fell at her feet and declared that she was her preceptor. The purpose of worshipping Devi Every man who aspires for experiencing the Divine, should strive to remove the blemishes affecting the Buddhi by getting rid of egoism and attachment. When the ego goes, attachment also can be given up easily. The ego affects in various ways. It induces people in various professions to resort to pomp and ostentation for impressing their clients. Egoism is a demonic quality. Devi has been described as a destroyer of demons. Worshipping of Devi is for the purpose of destroying the demonic qualities in each person. During the Mahabharatha war, Arjuna got dispirited on the ninth day when he saw Krishna bleeding all over, as he shielded Arjuna from the rain of arrows showered by Bhishma. Krishna jumped down from the chariot and advanced towards Bhishma, declaring that He would himself slay Bhishma. Bhishma was so much charmed by the beauty of the Lord that he declared: "If Sri Krishna is coming to kill me, let the same Krishna be my saviour." Devotees nowadays would act differently. If they lost their faith in one deity, they would seek favours from another. But, in fact, there is only one God. Irrespective of names and forms, God is one only. Dhurga represents Prakruthi-maatha (Mother Nature). To overcome the demonic qualities arising out of the influence of Nature, the power of Nature has to be invoked. This is the meaning of the worship of Dhurga. Nature is the protector as well as the chastiser. Lakshmi represents the protecting aspect of Nature. When Dhurga has destroyed the demonic qualities, Lakshmi purifies the mind. Then there is purity in speech, represented by Saraswathi. The worship of Dhurga, Lakshmi and Saraswathi is thus undertaken to get rid of the impurities in the mind and purify one's thoughts, words and deeds. Prakruthi (Nature) is the embodiment of the Divine. Man perceives Nature and experiences Nature, but is unable to recognise the Divinity in Nature. To see the external manifestations of the Divine and yet fail to recognise the Divine is a sign of stupidity. Man sees Nature in the form of the Universe, which is Virata-Swaroop (Cosmic form of Vishnu). Has the Lord any particular form or abode? No. He is everywhere. He is you and you are He. The day you recognise this, you will comprehend God. If you want to see the Divine in you, you have to use your Buddhi, just as you need a mirror to see your own eyes, which are able to see everything else in the world. It is folly to seek the Divine elsewhere. God is nearer to you than your own mother. With purity of heart, you can experience the Divine within through your intellect. Love is the means to have this experience, for Love is God. Prashanthi Mandir, 5 Oct 1992

34. How Devotees Are Tested and Found Wanting
In my previous body (as Shirdi Sai Baba) everyone was taught through actions. For example, Dhamu and Naana were rendering service to the Lord (Shirdi Baba). Baba collected a few copper coins and was playing with them by tossing them from one hand to another and also testing them in various ways. He appeared to examine them individually. He did not exchange a word with Dhamu and Naana. He went on playing with the coins for half an hour in this manner. Curious to know what Baba was doing, Naana asked him why He was scrutinising the same coins, again and again. Baba replied, "Beta (Dear Son), it is true I am repeating the same action again and again, repeating the same words. Look at that mango tree in front of you. It is in full bloom. The leaves are hardly visible. If all the flowers in the tree were to become fruits, will the branches be able to bear the weight? But it does not happen that way. Most of the flowers are swept away by the wind. Many others drop of their own accord. Only some of them become fruits. Of these some are eaten by squirrels, birds or monkeys. In this way ninety percent of the flowers do not result in fruits. Only ten percent remain in the tree. Is it not so?" They agreed, that it was so. "No one comes for My sake" --- Shirdi Baba Baba continued, "In the same manner thousands of devotees are coming to me. Are they all ripening into good devotees? Many drop away in the middle. Some come for getting their desires fulfilled. Some seek wealth. Many are coming either for study or in connection with jobs or marriage or other personal desires of their own. In each of them there is some defect or other. No one comes for My sake. I have a precious thing to offer in my coffers. But no one seeks it. It is for this reason that I am examining them (coins). Among these coins there are some which are worn out, some which are debased and some which are twisted and worthless."

"Just as I am examining the defects in these coins, I am also looking for the defects among the devotees who come to Me. I am trying to find out what defects are there in these people and whether, with those defects, they can really comprehend My Truth. They want Me, but all their desires are related to mundane objects. How can they attain Me with this attitude?

How can you reach your destination if you get into a wrong train going in some other direction?

They want Me, but they don't make efforts for realising Me. Among the many who come to Me, it is only one in a thousand who really makes the effort to realise Me.

"The minds of the so called devotees are turned in the wrong directions. If their desires are fulfilled, they praise Me. But, once a desire is not realised they go to the extent of even reviling

Me. Even while they are attempting to understand Me, they harbour doubts from head to foot.

Some even leave Me when their worldly desires are not fulfilled. These are not sincere devotees at all. They are in fact the worst sinners. How can they reach Me?" said Baba.

Experience of Baba's devotees

At one time a wealthy man came with a lot of money to Shirdi Baba with the object of gaining Brahma Inaana (Supreme Wisdom). He boasted about his wealth. Baba asked him: "How long will you be here?" He replied that he had come by a taxi fixing to and fro charges and had to return in a day or two. Baba said: "When you have greed for wealth, how can you realise God? It is not a goal that can be accomplished in a fixed time. Get away." Baba noticed that he was still sitting and became furious. He chased him out, wielding a stick.

To one who sought His grace with purity of heart and selfless devotion, Baba conferred His grace abundantly. Mathaji Krishna Priya was one such devotee.

Living in Nagpur, she used to worship Krishna and considered Baba also as another form of Krishna. She frequently visited Shirdi to seek Baba's blessings with genuine devotion. Once she went to Simla. She was offering worship with unstinted devotion to Krishna considering Him as Baba.

She came to know that Baba had left his mortal coil at 2.30 p.m. on Vijayadasami day in 1918.

Immediately after this Ekaadasi followed. Baba had told his close devotee, Kaakaji, in the year 1916, that Dhadha would be shedding his mortal coil in 1918.

Kaakaji thought that Baba was mentioning only about Dhadha Sahib, another devotee, and never thought the reference was to Baba himself.

The last days of Shirdi Baba

On September 28, 1918, Baba developed high temperature. Two days earlier he had collected food by seeking alms in some houses. He took that food and at noon, He expressed His wish to his devotees that he should be taken from the choultry to Bootywada. He hoped to have a quiet time there. In that ward, a Muraleedhar temple had been built by a devotee by name Booty. He wanted Baba to install the idol of Krishna in the temple. But Baba was putting off the installation on one pretext or other. Booty did not want to install the idol without the blessings of Baba. Until his end Baba did not say anything about installation of the idol. He directed Booty and Kaakaji to go and take their lunch. Feeling that Baba was better, they went out. Baba had nine rupee coins under His pillow. He took them out and gave them to Lakshmibai. Then Baba summoned Shyaam to come near Him. Shyaam sat close to Baba. Baba reclined on Shyaam's shoulders and passed away.

Baba reappears in Simla after passing away

Krishna Priya came to know of this and felt very sad the whole day. The next day she closed all the doors and windows in her house because of the severe cold in Simla. While she was resting in the house, a tall and well-built monk arrived at the next door and enquired about Mathaji's house. He made enquiry not because He did not know where Mathaji lived, but only to make others know that he was physically present in Simla. The neighbour sent a servant with an umbrella as it was snowing, to show the stranger Mathaji's house. He knocked at the door.

Mathaji opened the door and could not believe the evidence of her eyes. She wondered how Baba, who had passed away the previous day, could come to Simla. She asked: "How did you manage to come so soon? It takes at least three days to come from Shirdi to Simla."

Baba said: "Beti (dear daughter), I am everywhere. You have worshipped Me in the form of Krishna. Is this all that you know about Me? I am feeling the cold. First get Me hot tea." She prepared tea and offered it to Baba. After taking the tea, Baba said that He was hungry after His long journey. Krishna Priya brought Him chapathis and brinjal curry which Baba used to like very much. After taking the food Baba washed His hands and wiped them in a towel. He then told her: The purpose for which I came is over and I am going away." In those days nobody dared to exchange words with Baba. If anybody opposed or said anything to the contrary, Baba would wield the stick against them. He never brooked any contradiction.

Hence Krishna Priya could not tell Him anything. He gave her a jasmine garland.

Krishna Priya watched Him as he went out walking through the bazaar. In Simla, on the roadside, there are usually deep valleys. As Baba was walking along, some workmen were engaged in some road work. Noticing that Baba had fallen down from the road, they ran to rescue Him. But they could find nobody there. Baba had just disappeared.

Before taking leave of Krishna Priya, Baba whispered in her ears: "See me in 1926." She did not know where to see Him, how to see Him. When I went to Simla about fifteen years ago Krishna

Priya came to see Me. She was shivering on account of age and the cold weather. She asked:

"Baba, have you forgotten the promise that you made to Me long ago?" I told her: "It is you who have forgotten, not I. I never forget what I promised."

These are some of the aspects of the Shirdi manifestation. When Shirdi Sai sought to impart wisdom, it was not through discourses. Everything was taught by stern methods. It was because of the conditions prevailing in those days.

Baba takes on child's illness

Once, Dhaadha's wife brought her child to Baba with the intention of staying for some time in Shirdi. She got her husband's reluctant approval for the visit. At that time plague was rampant in Shirdi. On the second day of her arrival the child developed fever and boils all over the body.

The mother felt sorry that she had not acted on her husband's advice and lamented who would protect her child from the affliction. She immediately rushed to Baba and cried aloud: "Baba!

Baba!" Baba asked her why she had come. "Is your child having fever? Are there boils on his body? Not only the child but I am also having boils. You look at them." So saying, he lifted his Kafni (coveting garment) and showed the boil on his body.

Mhalaspathi, who was standing near, exclaimed: "Swami! What large boils are these?" He touched Baba's body and found that he was having high fever. The temperature might be as high as 105 or 106 F. The mother cried: "Oh Baba! Has the disease affected not only my son, but you also? Who will protect you?" She was in deep distress. Baba said: "Is there any other to protect the one who is the protector of all?" The mother immediately begged for Baba's forgiveness. A short while thereafter, Baba's fever came down.

The mother returned home feeling happy. She saw that the fever and the boils had vanished from the child. She exclaimed: "Baba! Did you take on my child's illness?"

Total faith that people had in Baba

In this manner, Shirdi Baba used to demonstrate His powers as and when the occasion arose.

What was the reason for this? It was solely due to Paripoorna Viswaasam (total faith) which people had in Baba. The devotees followed implicitly whatever Baba directed them to do.

It is not so these days. Whenever anything is said by Swami ten questions are raised. Besides the questions, they are racked by doubts from head to foot. This is traceable to the influence of modern education. This system is undermining faith in human values. Whatever help a man may receive, he is utterly ungrateful. He forgets all the good done to him and remembers only the harm done to him. Consequently, the demonic nature has grown in human beings.

In the old days, human beings retained at least human qualities.

Today, men have only the human form but behave like animals. All their impulses are selfish. When their desires are fulfilled, they come smiling and uttering: "Baba! Baba!" If their desires are not fulfilled they have a different attitude. In such beastly beings, how can devotion to Baba exist? Only when men shed their animal natures, can they become human.

Baba leaves His physical body

This is the anniversary of the day when (Shirdi) Baba gave up his mortal body. The facts relating to his passing need to be understood. On September 28, 1918, Baba developed fever. For seventeen days thereafter he was quite well. On October 15, Baba was not to be found anywhere.

Naana, Kaaka, Dhaas and Lakshman Rao made a search for him all over the place. There was a small well nearby and they went to see whether he had fallen there.

When they returned to Baba's abode, they found him standing near the door. Baba told them:

"Where are you searching for Me? I am in one place and you search for Me elsewhere. I am in all pure hearts. You are searching for Me in all polluted places. How can you find Me?" He then sat down.

Baba left his body only on October 15. He developed high temperature on September 28. He was keeping well for the next 17 days.

After Baba left his body, several controversies arose. Mohammedans came there and claimed that the body belonged to them. The Hindus claimed that the body belonged to them. Baba used to declare from time to time, "Allah Malik! Allah Malik!" On account of this, Mohammedans claimed that Baba was a Muslim. At other times, Baba used to say:

"Rama Malik! Krishna

Malik!" For this reason the Hindus claimed he was a Hindhu.

Because of these rival claims, the body was kept for thirty-six hours as no decision could be arrived at regarding the manner of disposal, of the body.

How the last rites of Shirdi Baba were conducted

To prevent clashes between the Hindus and the Muslims, the Collector, the Police

Superintendent and other officials arrived there. They asked all the residents of Shirdi to assemble there. They decided to take the vote of the people to find out how the majority of the local population wanted the last rites to be done for Baba. Everybody favoured the Hindu way of disposal of the body. When this decision was arrived at, a pit was being dug in the Booty

Mandir. Some persons opposed the digging. The dispute went on and ultimately the Collector and the Police arranged for the Samadhi to be consecrated in the Muraleedhar temple. That temple is the present Samadhi Shrine of Baba.

At this time a remarkable incident occurred in Simla. The garland given to Mathaji Krishna Priya was placed on the idol of Krishna by her in the presence of all in her residence. Many wondered why she was garlanding the Krishna idol when she was a devotee of Sai Baba and there was a picture of Baba there. Bhajans were going on at that time. The garland placed on the Krishna

Krishna. Everyone in Simla rejoiced in the discovery that Krishna and Sai Baba were one.

When all the people came there the next morning, they found that the garland given by Baba was no longer on the figure of Krishna. That garland was found on the Samadhi of Baba in the Booty Mandhir.

Miracles and the messages of Shirdi Baba

Why did Baba manifest such miracles? In those days there were bitter differences between

Hindus and Muslims. With a view to ending such communal differences, Baba wanted to show, through his miracles, the truth that Baba is the Supreme master of all beings. He has no differences of caste or community. His religion is common to people of all faiths. It is good for everyone. It is observed by all godly persons. This is the creed for all mankind.

Spiritual wisdom is not something received from others. It has to blossom from within. Each one has to develop the faith by his own efforts. Those lacking such faith make themselves remote from God. Their own past actions account for such lack of faith.

Many spend years here (in Prashanthi Nilayam). But for some reason or other, they go away.

This is due to the effect of their karma. No man can escape the consequences of his actions.

Whether one is a scholar or an ascetic,

Whether one is in a forest or a temple

Can anyone avoid the Consequences of his karma ?

Many who claim to be great devotees, fall away sometime or other. The truth is that they were not true devotees even earlier. It is all a make-believe. Whatever devotion existed will not go away; nor will devotion come where it was absent. This means that devotion was absent from the outset. Those who used to proclaim their devotion by saying, "Swami is everything for us," really had no devotion at all. It was all a show. No true devotee will ever leave Swami. The one who leaves is never a real devotee. In this context, it must be realised that the true nature of devotion cannot be comprehended by anyone.

Can one remember the name of God in his last moments,

When the messengers of Death are waiting

And all one's relations are weeping,

If he has not been devoted to God all his life ?

God is moved by unwavering and firm devotion

Only when there is dedicated devotion from early in life can it remain steady and unchanging.

The devotion of selfish and self-centred persons will be vacillating. Those with total love for God will never change. That is unwavering devotion. Where there is such yearning for God, the heart melts. God is moved by such firm devotion. That is the kind of devotion everyone should cherish.

During festivals like Navarathri, devotees should develop such divine feelings and strive to secure a direct vision of God in their hearts. God is in and around us.

But no effort is made to experience this. People are immersed in dualism, separating God from themselves. Through love, this sense of separation can be ended. Love is the binding force between the Jivaatma (the individual) and the Paramaatma (the Omni-Self). It is this feeling of Paripuurna Prema (total love) that has to be cultivated today. God has no use for indolent persons. Embodiments of Divine Love! Do not give room for the doubts which arise on account of the food you consume, the company you keep or the environment in which you live. Meet the doubts with courage and faith. Don't pray to Baba for changing your mind. It is your duty to change your mind. If you expect Baba to do everything, what is it you are doing? God has no use for such indolent persons. You must do your sadhana and go ahead. God's help will come when you do your part. Do your duty and leave the results to God. Praying to God to do this or that is a sign of weakness. If you have full faith in God, your mind is bound to change. Baba's role is not to change your minds, but to redeem you from the consequences of your actions. Everyone should realise and act up to this truth. To start with, get rid of the blemishes in you, strengthen your devotion and make it firm and unshakeable. That is Purusha prayathna (the effort which everyone should make). Then you will earn Daivaanugraha (God's grace). Entering on this path of truth, traversing the road of Inaana (spiritual wisdom), merge yourself in the Divine. In the course of discourse when a reference to Shirdi Sai manifestation was made, Vijayadasami Day, Prashanthi Nilayam, 6 Oct 1992, The way in which the Avatar has to be used for one's liberation and uplift is: watch His every step, observe His actions and activities, follow the guiding principles of which His life is an elaboration. Mark His love, His compassion, His wisdom, try to bring them into your own life. Sathya Sai Baba 35. Spiritual Basis Of Dashara Festival The Lord created everything from Truth and everything is permeated by Truth. Realise that there is nothing in the world that is not based on Truth and everything is composed of Suddha Sarva (the divine essence). Man has forgotten this fact. Man has emerged from the Divine (Madhava). Forgetting this truth is the Maaya (delusion) from which man suffers. A true human being cannot suffer from this delusion.

Embodiments of Divine Love! Humanness is inextricably linked to divinity and is not separate from it. The same Aatma resides in all beings. There are various limbs and organs in the body such as hands, legs, eyes, nose, mouth, ear, etc. All of them are integral parts of the body. There is an intimate connection between these different limbs and the Shareeri (Indweller) in the body. The Jivaatma is the Indweller. The limbs constitute the body. The relationship between the Indweller and the body is integral. All limbs belong to the individual. Hence the Indweller will not hate any limb. The Shareeri (Indweller) will not feel happy if any limb suffers because all limbs belong to him and their experiences are also his. Likewise, Vishnu pervades the cosmos as His body. All things in the cosmos are limbs of the body of Vishnu. Hence no one should have any aversion to anything in the universe. You should not hate anyone, because the same Divine is present in you and in everything in the universe. The cosmos has three forms: the gross, the subtle and the causal. The physical universe represents the gross form. The subtle form is the mind and subtler than the mind is the Aatma. The five Kosas or inner coverings A human being has five sheaths. These five sheaths have been grouped into three. The gross sheath is the Annamaya Kosa. The three Kosas, Praanamaya (vital breath), Manomaya (the mental sheath) and the Vijnanamaya (the intellectual sheath) together constitute the subtle sheath. The causal sheath is the Anandamaya Kosa (the Bliss sheath). Even the last sheath does not represent total bliss, because there is a higher entity above the Anandamaya Kosa. This is known as Mahakaarana or supracausal entity. This is the Aatmic principle. Because every individual has these three bodies, he is called Tripurasundari. Every human being has these Thripuras (three cities). The three puras are the body, the mind and the heart. Since the Prakruthi element, which is feminine in nature, is present in greater measure in the body, it is termed as Sundari (a beautiful damsel). Spiritual truth of Navarathri During the Navarathri festival Tripurasundari is worshipped. Unfortunately, from ancient times people have been observing only the external forms of worship without understanding the inner significance of these festivals. The entire cosmos is a temple. The Lord pervades the cosmos.

Prakruthi (Nature) teaches the spiritual truth about Navarathri.

Realise the love of Sai through spiritual practice. The Lord has to be realised through sadhana.

Sadhana does not mean adoring

God in a particular place or in a particular form. It means thinking of God in all that you do wherever you may be. It may be asked whether this is possible. The answer is that it is possible by dedicating every action to God.

During Navarathri there is a form of worship called Angaarpana

Puja. In this form of worship, all the limbs of the body are offered to the Divine in a spirit of surrender Sharanaagathi.

Surrender means offering everything to the Divine and giving up the idea of separation between oneself and the Divine. There can be no true surrender if there is a sense of separation. There must be the conviction that it is the same Divine who dwells in all beings--Eko Vasee

Sarvabhutha-antharaathma.

The true meaning of Angaarpana Puja

In the performance of Angaarpana Puja, there is a form of self-deception. When a devotee says,

"Nethram Samarpayaami" (I offer my eyes to the Lord) and offers only a flower to the Lord, he is indulging in a kind of deception. The proper thing would be to say that he is offering a flower.

Actually manthras like "Nethram Samarpayaami" are intended to indicate that one is using his eyes only to see God. The real significance of the Manthra is that you think of the divine in whatever you see or do.

Therefore, the true meaning of the Angaarpana Puja is to declare that you offer all your limbs in the service of the Lord. This means that whatever work you do should be done as an offering to God. Nowadays selfishness is rampant among devotees and they love God not for God's sake but only to get their selfish desires fulfilled. As long as selfishness prevails, the Divine cannot be understood.

The Navarathri festival should be used as an occasion to examine one's own nature whether it is human, animal or demonic, and strive to transform the animal nature to the human and divinise the human nature. Wisdom cannot be acquired from outside. It has to be got through inward Sadhana.

In the course of Discourse on Vijayadasami day, Prashanthi Nilayam, 6 Oct 1992

Vyaamohas is the dust that settles upon the glass of the chimney of the lantern and dims the light. The attachment to sensual objects and to the pleasure they give is the soot that sticks to the inside of the chimney; that too dims the light. Clean the chimney by Naamasmarana every day and the flame will shine for you and others.

Sathya Sai Baba

36. Purify The Heart To Realise God

Though, at the time of birth, man has no good or bad qualities, changes occur in his nature due to the food he consumes, and the influence of associates around him.

One develops ego and attachment based on the company he keeps. As a person gets educated, he or she develops pride and entertains vainglorious thoughts about one's superiority over others. This conceit pollutes the heart.

When dirty water gets mixed with milk, the milk has to be boiled to make it pure. Likewise man has to undertake various types of Sadhana to purge his heart of impurities. Exercises such as meditation, Yajna or thapas can only provide mental satisfaction. It is only when the heart is melted in the heat of Divine love that one can succeed in getting rid of bad qualities and make the heart shine in its pristine effulgence. Just as the sun's rays can burn a heap of cotton if the rays are concentrated by passing through a lens, the rays of the intellect will destroy one's bad qualities only when they are passed through the lens of Divine love.

The growth of demonic nature in man

Although man has come from Madhava (God), he is enveloped in a Bhrama (delusion) which obscures the Brahma (Divinity) within him. So long as one is in the grip of this delusion one cannot understand God. Because of this delusion one gets attached to the body and develops limitless desires. This leads to the growth of the Asura (demonic) nature in him.

In the word "Nara" meaning man, "na" means "no" and "ra" means "destruction." So, the term

"nara" describes man as one without destruction (that is, one who is eternal). When the letter

"ka" is added to "nara" it becomes "Naraka," hell, which is the opposite of heaven. When one descends to the demonic level, he forgets divinity and follows the path to hell. The Divine is realised by pursuing the spiritual path (the Aatmic path).

According to the Puranic story, Narakaasura is said to have been destroyed on this day of Deepavali (Naraka Chathurthasi). Narakaasura was a demon filled with attachment to bodily pleasures. He was full of bad qualities like lust, anger and greed. He was a terror to women and perpetrated many evil deeds, inviting his own destruction at the hands of a woman, Sathyabhama, the consort of Sri Krishna.

It is worthy of note that the Lord gave this opportunity to Sathyabhama only after subjecting her to a cleansing process to rid her of her pride and jealousy as revealed in the Tulabhaaram episode, where Sathyabhama was advised by Narada to make a gift of Krishna to him and win him back by offering an equivalent weight of gold and jewellery.

When Sathyabhama offered all the valuables she possessed, it had no effect. Ultimately a Tulasi leaf offered by Rukmini with a prayer to Krishna tilted the balance. Thereby Sathyabhama was cured of her pride and jealousy.

Apart from this Puranic version, there is a cosmic explanation for the observance of Deepavali.

Naraka was a planet moving in orbit with the moon around the earth. Once it appeared to be heading towards the earth. People prayed to Lord Krishna to avert the impending catastrophe.

The Lord had to take action to destroy this planet and save the world from disaster. From that day, Deepavali was being observed as a joyous day of deliverance from evil.

Deepavali eve, Prashanthi Mandir, 24 Oct 1992

Among men, each one is himself the cause of his fortune, good or bad. He is himself the builder, the architect. Fate, destiny, predetermination, the Will of God--every one of these explanations is toppled by the principle of Karma. God and man can be reconciled and affiliated only on the basis of this Sutra or principal of Karma. When man realises that God has no share in causing his suffering and that he is himself the sole cause, that no blame attaches to any other person, that he is the initiator as well as the beneficiary--the cause and the effect of his acts, that he is free to shape his future, then he approaches God with a firmer step and a clearer mind

37. Recovery Of Moral Values

Dhaivaadheenam Jagathsarvam

Sathyaadheenam thu Dhaivatam

Sathyam Uthamaadheenam

Uthamo paramo dhevatha.

(The Cosmos is controlled by the Divine.

The Divine is governed by truth.

Truth is subject to the high-souled.

The high-souled are supremely Divine).

Students! Educationists! Patrons of Education! The entire Cosmos is under the control of the Divine. But the Divine is bound by truth. Truth is under the control of high-souled persons.

These persons are the embodiments of the Divine in the world.

The universe is infinite and marvellous. Unable to comprehend the nature of Creation, man is a prey to divisive forces. Creation proclaims the Will of the Divine. It is known as Prakruthi (Nature). Every man, who is a child of Nature, should have Divine nature. Man is born in the world to proclaim the Will of the Divine. Man is a part of Creation. He is bound by all the material objects in the world. His awareness is based on his perception of the world. Man has to order his life for the purpose of furthering the creative process.

Abuse of nature's resources by men

Unfortunately today, as a consequence of scientific and technological progress, humanness has declined and man considers the world as only intended for his enjoyment. As a result, the powers of Nature are being used in a manner which poses a great threat to the world. The world has not been created for mere enjoyment. Abusing the resources of Nature and forgetting his own basic human nature, man is going against the purpose of Creation. Many natural catastrophes are entirely due to man's behaviour. Earthquake, volcanic eruptions, wars, floods and famines and other calamities are the result of grave disorders in Nature. These disorders are traceable to man's conduct. Man has not recognised the integral relationship between humanity and the world of Nature.

In the human body, all organs like eyes, ears, mouth, etc., are integrally related to each other.

Just as these organs are important for man, man is equally important for society as a limb of the social organism. Man is a part of the human community. Mankind is a part of nature. Nature is a limb of God. Man has not recognised these inter-relationships.

Man is a kind of stage-director of what goes on in Nature. Forgetting his responsibilities, man fight for rights. If a deep enquiry is made, it will be realised that man has no rights at all in this world. He has only duties and no rights. It is foolish to fight for rights without discharging one's duties. All the chaos and conflicts in the world are due to men forgetting their duties. If everyone discharges his duty, the world will be peaceful and prosperous.

When the master performs his duties, the employees will work well. When the parents discharge their duties, the children will realise their responsibilities. When the children do their duties by the parents, the latter will be honoured. Likewise, when teachers discharge their duties, the students will conduct themselves well. When the students perform their duties well, the authorities will secure due respect.

Today men are forgetting their obligations. The Cosmos is an integral organism of interrelated parts. When each one performs his duty, the benefits are available to all. Man is enti-fled only to perform his duties and not to the fruits thereof.

Need for ideal persons

Students! Today the educational world is immersed in multifarious problems which are baffling the authorities concerned. The educational system is contributing to the collapse of human values in society. Educational institutions, which ought to give a lead in promoting the nation's allround welfare, are leading the country astray. Human values like sacrifice, integrity, fairness and morality have almost disappeared. Reverence and respect for elders are totally absent. What we need today is not a new system of education, nor a new social order, nor even a new religion.

There is a good deal of speculation about how to bring about a new social order. All these are exercises in futility. What we need today are Uttama-purushulu (noble and high-minded men and women). The nation will be prosperous only when there are such persons with noble minds and hearts. Such persons will emerge in society only when there is purity of mind and morality in society. Only a society with a moral foundation can foster such noble persons.

Spirituality is the means for redemption

Morality and integrity are based upon spiritual consciousness.

Spirituality alone will take man to the sacred path leading to his destiny. Spirituality alone can elevate man and raise him to higher levels. It is the means to real national progress and prosperity. World peace can be secured only through spirituality. It is the means for the redemption of mankind.

Forgetting spirituality, man is leading an artificial life based on worldly pleasures. Education should be used for promoting the nation's welfare. Knowledge gained through education should be used selflessly for promoting the welfare of humanity.

Truth is the ornament for the mouth. Charity is the adornment for the hand. Education is the ornament for the ear. Apart from these ornaments, what does anyone need? A man with these ornaments can reach great heights. He alone is a full man.

Mere knowledge by itself is of no avail. Ravana had studied as many branches of knowledge as Rama. Educationally both were equals. But Valmiki described Ravana as muurkha, a self-willed fool. Rama was hailed as a perfect man. Wherein lies the difference between the two? Rama utilised all the knowledge he had gained for noble purposes and the welfare of all. He had mastery over the senses. He gave up his rulership. He was pledged to the upholding of truth.

Dedicating his knowledge to the cause of truth, to set an example of ideal life to mankind, he dedicated his life to the welfare of the country. Rama exemplified human perfection by his sacrifice, his adherence to truth and his spotless character. On the other hand, Ravana utilised all his knowledge for enjoying sensuous pleasures. He became a slave of his senses and brought rain upon himself and his country.

Whatever knowledge one may acquire, one should use it for the well-being of all-- "Sarvathitha rathaah." Only then he can be deemed Inaana-sampannah (rich in wisdom). Such a wise person will be endowed with all good qualities. It is for these noble purposes that the ancient system of education was devised.

Bharathiya education in ancient days

All that students learn today is unrelated to the Bharathiya system of education. A system which enslaves the mind and promotes the office-hunting mentality can have no relation to Bharathiya education. It was a system which sought to combat injustice and corruption and promote truth and righteousness. It was not designed to make a student acquire a degree at great expense and then go about with a begging bowl in search of jobs. It aimed at promoting self-reliance and encouraging one to take up social service in a spirit of dedication.

Bharathiya education was based on the twin mottoes: "Sathyam vadha; Dharmam chara" (Speak the truth, practice righteousness).

Love is the spiritual discipline governing human life. Truth is one's life-breath. Bharath produced any number of men in the past who were dedicated to these two ideals. Bharathiya education made the human personality shine effulgently like a multifaceted diamond.

Bharath: then and now

Bharath is like a myriad-petalled lotus. The variety of creeds and communities, languages and customs, manners and traditions to be found in Bharath cannot be found in any other country.

With its many languages, customs and cultures, Bharath is a magnificent garden blooming with flowers of many hues. Bharathiyas today are oblivious to the greatness of their country. People of many faiths lived in harmony as members of one family in ancient times. The harmony has now been lost. The love-principle has become extinct. People are unable even to recognise what is truth.

Students should enshrine in their hearts the greatness of Bharath. Their lives should not be offered as a sacrifice to self-ishness and self-interest. Give up selfishness completely. Only then will you have acquired education that is Divine and-holy.

In the olden days, after the students had-completed their education, the Gurus (teachers) used to offer them words of advice before they embarked on Grihastha ashrama (the life of householders). It was a kind of convocation. The advice the preceptors gave them was: "Serve the world. First of all, revere your father and mother. Develop love for the nation." What kind of patriotism do students have who, after completing their studies here, go abroad for work? Live in society and earn the esteem of your fellow men. These are the essential lessons to be learnt by students.

The gospel of service

Today you took the Institute pledge as to how you will conduct yourselves after you go out into the world. You have pledged yourselves to lead ideal lives. This pledge should pervade every corpuscle of your blood. You will be guilty of treason to yourselves if you fail to live up to the pledge.

Students! From now onwards you should engage yourselves in service to society and cherish Indian culture. Do not aspire for positions. Practise at least a fraction of what you have learnt.

Action alone counts. Only through practical experience is wisdom gained. Money is not everything. Acquiring good qualities is vital. Education without character is utterly worthless.

Go to the villages and serve the poor and the downtrodden. The essence of education is service to one's fellowmen. There is no greater occupation than service to society. Become leaders through service. Only when you lead such exemplary lives can you be deemed truly educated.

Whatever may be the situation in other universities, the students from the Sathya Sai Institute should behave in an exemplary and ideal manner. Foster moral, spiritual and social values.

Dedicate your lives to the upholding of morality. Officials without morality can never serve society properly. They can never protect the greatness of Bharath.

Dear students! Uphold the ideals of education. Cultivate the love of God and inspire in everyone devotion to God. Live in God! Make others live in God!

Benedictory discourse to the XI Convocation, Vidhyaagiri Stadium, 22 Nov 1992

I did not insist that a person should have faith in God, I refuse to call any person a Nasthika, an atheist. Beings exist as a result of his will, in accordance with his plan; so no one is beyond His Grace. Besides, everyone has love towards some one thing or other, and that love is a spark of the Divine. One has to pay heed to truth and speak the Truth to someone in order to make life worth living. Now, that moment is God's Moment and at that moment when he utters the truth, or loves, or serves or bends, he is a theist.

Sathya Sai Baba

38. Revere The Mother: Serve The Motherland

By being borne by Kausalya Rama fulfilled His divine role;

Brought up by the noble exemplar of womanhood, Sita, The twins, Lava and Kusha, achieved glory;

The loving care of Iijibai made Shivaji a heroic warrior.

Fostered with love by Puthlibai Gandhi became a Mahatma.

The first letter of the Spiritual alphabet is "Aatma" (Mother).

Is there anything greater in the world than the Spirit that protects all living beings all the time ?

Embodiments of Divine Aatma! There is nothing sweeter than maternal love.

Forbearance lends beauty to man. Truth and integrity constitute the hard penance for man. The Divinity inherent in man is not recognised by him. Failing to realise that neethi (morality) is greater than one's jaathi (community) and that Guna: (virtue) is greater than one's Kulam (caste), man is laying waste his life.

The ancient sages regarded human life as something sweet. Man's primary duty is to preserve the sacred sweetness of this life. This can be accomplished only through sacrifice. and not selfishness. To lose the sweet nature of life is to forfeit man's humanness.

Maternal love is Divine

The Divine sweetness in human life is derived from Maathru bhaavam (maternal love). For the protection and rearing of her children, the mother is prepared to make every sacrifice. It is this spirit of sacrifice that makes motherhood infinitely precious. The Upanishads have declared that there is no other means than Thyaaga (sacrifice) to achieve immortality.

There is no diviner or purer feeling than maternal love. Today people make no effort to cherish this feeling. Sri Rama declared: "The mother and the Motherland are greater than heaven itself."

God is formless and attributeless. The unmanifested Divine is worshipped in various forms. God is not easily accessible to everyone. Nevertheless God is worshipped with faith in various ways and joy is derived therefrom.

Among the sacred aphorisms cherished by Bharathiyas, the foremost are: "Maathru dhevo Bhava! Pithru dhevo Bhava!" (Adore the mother as God. Adore the father as God). The mother is the foremost deity for man as the visible embodiment of the Divine who can be directly experienced. Every son is aware of the mother's affection, care and concern. He knows how to please the mother and keep her happy.

No one knows how the unmanifested Divine showers His grace or displays His displeasure, what He desires or disapproves. One can lead a sacred life by adoring the mother, instead of worshipping the unmanifested Divine. The Chaithanyam (Aatmic Consciousness) that is present in the Divine is also present in living beings.

Macrocosm in microcosm

If this is the case, a doubt may arise. What is the need for giving a unique place to God? When you look at an array of electric bulbs, they may all look alike. But there are differences in wattage amongst them according to the filament in them. The wattage may vary from 40 to 5000 watts. Likewise, in all human beings the five elements, the five organs of action and the five organs of perception, and other organs are common. But in their thoughts and fancies there are differences. The sacred and remarkable Divine potency in each of them is also different. It is because this Divine potency is present in God in infinite measure that the uniqueness of God is recognised. It has been said: "Yatha pinde, thatha Brahmaade" (What is in the microcosm is in the macrocosm). Brahmaanda, the macrocosm is regarded as Viraata Swarupa (the Cosmic form) and the microcosm is regarded as the atomic nucleus. This is a wrong view. What is present in the atom, is present in the Cosmos. There is no difference between the two. A small seed carries within it the potential of becoming a big tree. The Cosmic Form is not a mere aggregation of various objects. It does not signify the one in the many. The Cosmic Form means that which contains within itself everything.

Illumine your lives by the sunshine of Vairaagya

You cannot see the vast tree contained in the tiny seed. Likewise, the atomic principle contains the macrocosm in microcosm. Equally, the divinity present in God (the macrocosm) is present in man in a subtle form like the fire in a match stick. You cannot get fire out of a damp match stick.

Man is filled with the fire of Divine wisdom and sacredness. But it is not perceptible in spite of spiritual exercises, severe penance and many good deeds. The reason is the fact that the mind is dampened by Ahamkaara and Mamakaara (egoistic and acquisitive tendencies). It is only when this dampness is removed by the sunshine of Vairaagya (detachment) that an illumined life becomes possible.

Man today is well informed about myriad things. But he is ignorant of his own true nature. Of what avail is all knowledge if one cannot get rid of his bad qualities and realise his true nature?

All accomplishments and possessions are of no use to man. Only a godly life can redeem him.

A nation's prosperity does not come down from the sky or sprout from the earth. It is based on man's actions. Man's conduct has to be purified. Men today have forgotten the greatness of the mother and the duties of the son. How can man expect to get the bliss for which he aspires if he fails to discharge his duties, forgets his humanness, turns his face away from God, and goes after worldly pleasures?

Rama's deep devotion to His parents

At his father's behest, Rama accompanied the sage Viswamithra, protected his Yaga and reached Mithila with the Sage. After Rama had handled the bow of Shiva, Emperor Janaka, according to his earlier declaration, wanted to offer in marriage his daughter Sita to Rama. But Rama was not willing to go through the marriage without the approval of his parents. Viswamithra tried to persuade Rama in many ways, but Rama deemed the sanction of his parents more essential than obeying the words of the preceptor. Rama did not venture even to look at Sita until his parents arrived and agreed to the alliance.

Bharath today has forgotten this divine message of Rama, revealing his deep devotion to his mother and father. To carry out the injunctions of his father, Rama went into exile and spent fourteen years in the forest. He deemed adherence to Truth as the highest penance. When Rama was in the forest, Bharatha, accompanied by Vasishtha and others, went to him to persuade him to return to the Kingdom. Rama told Vasishtha: "Guruji, life is not more precious than respect for truth. I have entered the forest to comply with my father's command, If I go back to the Kingdom, I will be betraying my father's pledge. I would sooner give up my life than give up my adherence to truth."

The story of Rama has been teaching to the world the supreme greatness of a life based on truth, sacrifice, integrity and morality. Krishna's lesson to Gaandhaari That man is to be pitied who has not earned the grace of his mother, who has not enjoyed the loving looks of his mother and who has not tried to please her. This is illustrated by an episode from the Mahabharatha. After all the Kauravas had been slain in battle, Krishna went to their blind old father, Dhritharashtra, and his wife Gaandhaari to console them. Unable to restrain her bitterness and grief, Gaandhaari blamed Krishna in harsh terms. Krishna told her: "Gaandhaari! You are making a grievous mistake. From the time of their birth, did you look at any of your children? If the Kauravas did not benefit from your own sight, how can they be seen by me?"

This means one who has not received the loving look of his mother does not deserve the gracious look of the Divine. In Bharath today, this Dharmic principle has been erased. Immersed in selfish concerns, people are forgetting the Divine and giving up all principles of morality and justice. Looking at the state of things in Bharath today, it is clear that the nation has gone down in moral stature a great deal. Embodiments of Love! Recognise the truth that morality is the primary requisite of human society. You have to perform your duties and discharge your obligations. You must be united and take part in social service. Union is strength. It promotes the welfare of all. If one does not strive for unity and progress, how can he serve society? Even small ants acting in union can destroy a serpent. Today unity is being undermined in the country. There are differences in every home. Institutions without unity ultimately collapse. A divided nation faces destruction. Hence, for the welfare of the nation, all must live in unity. Distinctions of high and low should be given up. The nation's welfare alone must be kept in mind. You are well aware of the divisions in every political party. These divisions are breaking the parties into fragments. If this fragmentation goes on, how can the nation progress? The individual who is concerned about the welfare of the nation should eschew self-interest, cultivate the spirit of unity and work for the progress of the nation. This should be the first motto of the country. Uphold the culture of Bharath as a true citizen Those who claim to be citizens of Bharath are oblivious to the honour and prestige of the nation. The man who is not proud of this motherland and his mother tongue is worse than a corpse. If you proclaim yourself a citizen of Bharath, you should uphold the culture of Bharath. You should conduct yourself according to Bharathiya culture. If unity is lost, what can anyone accomplish? If there are three persons in a house, there can be peace in the house only if the three live in harmony. In every individual, there are three entities in the body that is his dwelling: the Manas (mind), the Vaak (tongue) and Kaayam (the organs of actions). It is only when these three entities function harmoniously that the individual can have peace. When there is discord between them, how can peace be got? No room for lazy persons in Bharath Manifest the divinity that is in you. Only then you can be a true vyakthi (individual). Practise sadhana for this purpose. Jettison your worldly attachments. Develop love so that you may get rid of divisive feelings in you. It is extremely unfortunate that men should waste their human lives, which are so precious and sacred. Life is short and men should make good use of their divine potentialities without wasting time. Two hands have been given to man for feeding himself and rendering service. There is no room for lazy persons in Bharath. One who does not work has no right to eat. Work, work and work! That is your duty. Consider what is appropriate in a particular situation and act accordingly. Few try to understand the ways of the Divine. They are beyond the comprehension of the intellectuals. God is omnipotent. This is beyond doubt. The lamp shines because of the Divine.

The power of the wind which can blow out the lamp also comes from God. It is ridiculous to expose a lamp to a strong wind and pray to God not to allow the light to go out. The powers of the Divine are to be rightly understood and used in the appropriate way.

Once a devotee asked Swami why He should not convert all sea water into petrol because of the steep rise in the price of petrol. The devotee had read a report of Bhagavan's conversion of water into petrol on one occasion. Swami told him. "You are no doubt intelligent, but your intelligence is not functioning properly. If the seas around India are converted to petrol, what will happen if a witless person like you, walking on the beach, throws a burning cigarette in the sea. There will be a holocaust. Have you thought about this possibility? Have you any concern for the welfare of the country? It is stupid to make suggestions of this kind."

There are many such scatter-brained persons in the world. They are posing as highly intelligent persons. They come forward to criticise God. No one has the fight or the competence to criticise God. God can do anything by an act of will. All actions performed selflessly are godly.

God is present in all beings. Everything in the Cosmos is a form of the Divine. The Divine power sustains everybody at all times. Hence every man is an embodiment of God. Once you have that faith, you will not be inclined to follow the wrong path.

Who is Sai?

Everyone should strive to recognise the divinity that is present in all. This effort has to be made by everyone. Human birth has been given for this purpose. It cannot be left to God.

There are many who do not understand the Sai principle. Who is this Sai? Why are certain things happening in this manner? These questions are asked.

I am not a sanyasi (renunciant). I am not a yogi. I am not a bhogi (pleasure-seeker). I am not a thyaagi (one who sacrifices). I am I. This "I" is the first name given to the Aatma. A renunciant is bound by certain restrictions. The pleasure-seeker is bound in other ways. I have no limitations.

Mine is boundless bliss. My name is "I." It is not a name given after one's birth. To understand Me, everyone has to realise that the "I" is present in everyone. The "I" is used by everyone in every context, whether he is a millionaire or a pauper. This "I" is Brahman---"Aham Brahmaasmi." Everyone uses the "I" from dawn to dusk without understanding its meaning.

Offer every action of daily life to God

Students! As future citizens of the nation you have to conduct yourselves in an exemplary manner. Remember that there is no special merit in so-called spiritual exercises. Every action in daily life calls for Dhyana (concentration) and has to be sanctified by performing it as an offering to God. A farmer tilling his field should feel at the same time that he is tilling the field of his heart. While sowing seeds, he should sow the seeds of good qualities in his heart. While watering the field, he should think he is watering the field of his heart with love. In this way, everyone can pursue the spiritual path without the aid of rosary or betaking himself to the forest.

Today, the foremost need is the promotion of unity. Irrespective of physical and ideological differences, the Aatma principle is common to all.

It has to be recognised that individuals are integrally related to Society like the different organs in a body. Humanity itself is a limb of Nature and Prakruthi (nature) is a limb. of God (the Omni-Self). If this integral relationship is understood, where is the ground for hatred? No one should consider himself as insignificant or unimportant. Everyone, small or big, is a vital part of the whole and is essential for its proper functioning like all the parts in a rocket. Any small defective part may cause the rocket to explode. Likewise, in this vast Cosmos every being has a significant role to play to ensure its smooth functioning.

We celebrate many festivals in connection with birthdays or other occasions. It is not the festivities that are important, not the dresses, not the speeches. Feelings are what are important.

Without purity of thought, purity of wisdom cannot be got. Seek to purify your minds.

Cultivate selfless love towards all and engage yourselves in social service. I have often declared:

"Graama Seva is Rama Seva" (service to the villagers is service to Rama).

Enshrine Rama in your heart

It is a mistake to think only of constructing a temple for Rama. In this vast land of Bharath of what use is it to raise a temple for Rama in any particular place? Everyone's heart should be converted into a temple for Rama. The land of Bharath should be cherished as the Ramarajya

(Kingdom of Rama). What does Ramarajya mean? It does not refer to any particular state. Unity in thought, word and deed constitutes Ramarajya. Today, there is no unity, no purity, no awareness of Divinity. People are wallowing in the mire of "community." This is not the primary duty of man. When there is discord between thought, word and deed, humanness is undermined. Unity has to be promoted to foster humanness. Bharathiya culture belongs to all mankind. Time, place and conditions of life may vary. But the basic principles governing human conduct are the same. If people want to proceed to a higher state, the first requisite is improvement in one's conduct. When the foundation under your feet is shaky, how can you expect to build up the mansion of life? Your conduct is the foundation, Your actions are the means. Develop faith. Without faith life is a waste. Man today believes in everything except God. This is his misfortune. God is omnipresent. The man who has no faith in God has no faith in himself. Develop selfconfidence, which is the basis for any nation's progress. On that foundation of faith erect the walls of Ananda (Bliss). Then place the ceiling of Vairaagya (detachment) on them. Live under the roof of thyaaga (sacrifice). This is the way to Self-realisation. Chant the name of the Lord to secure mental peace and purify the heart. You can then lead a Godly life. Vidhyaagiri Stadium, Bhagavan's Birthday, 23 Nov 1992

39. Unity Based On Divinity

Embodiments of Divine Love! In the world today all those who are held in high esteem as great personages have earned their good name only by their character and conduct. To accomplish anything one wants, one should have firm determination. Those with fickle minds cannot achieve anything.

All religions and scriptures agree that going to the aid of fellow-beings in times of need and saving them from distressing situations is the greatest virtue of a person. Every human being has equal rights in the world. All belong to one family. To enjoy peace of mind, it is essential to practice forbearance and equanimity. There are persons good and bad, rich and poor, educated and uneducated in every country of the world. Though born in the same family and breathing the same air, some persons are narrow minded and have crooked ideas and indulge in selfish deeds, while others are good and selfless.

"Suhrudham Sarva bhuuthaanaam," "Ekaathma Sarvabhuutha antharaatma" are well known aphorisms from the scriptures. To be friendly towards all beings is the duty of everyone, since the same A atma is there in all beings. Comprehending this truth, it is the duty of everyone born as a human being to do good to others on the basis of love. There is no need to search for God anywhere, since God resides in every being. The body is, therefore, to be considered as the temple of God. Today man is breeding bad thoughts in the mind, thereby polluting the heart which is the seat of the Divine. Four kinds of potentialities of human beings

In every human being, there are four kinds of potentialities, namely, animal, demonic, human and Divine.

The one with the divine quality will be a Brahma-Nishtha or one engaged in the contemplation of the Aatma within and will enjoy Aatmic bliss and sanctify every moment of his life by doing good deeds. He realises that the same Aatma is them in all beings as the Antharaatma (Inner Self) and leads a blissful life, discarding selfish thoughts. He is a Brahma Inaani or Aatma Inaani, a realised soul, who is aware of the truth that revering others is revering the Lord and hurting others is hurting the Lord. Such persons radiate divinity though they are in a human body.

The "human" type of persons follow the path of Truth and Righteousness--Sathya Dharma paro marthyah. They are engaged in activities in strict accordance with Sathya and Dharma (Truth and Righteousness), using their sense of discrimination in the right manner. They discharge their responsibilities without craving for position, power, pelf or fame. Such a person lives in harmony with his fellow beings and discharges his duties with firm belief in the three precepts: fear of sin, love of God and morality in society.

The next type is the demonic person. Such a person does not care for the code of conduct for human beings, indulges in the shameless pursuit of sensual pleasures, is filled with ego and pride, and does not hesitate to hurt others for selfish purposes. He goes on nonchalantly committing sinful deeds. Egoism is his life breath and attachment is his backbone. Such a selfish person is termed as demonic. One who lacks wisdom is like an animal "Inaana Viheenah Pashubhih Samaanaha" (The man lacking wisdom is like an animal). A person who is steeped in ignorance is considered to be no better than an animal. Such a person's life is centred only on sense gratification. His thoughts never go beyond the senses because of his ignorance of the divinity within him. He deems the transient earthly pleasures as heavenly bliss and lives in delusion devoid of discrimination.

Every man must make an effort to rise to humanness, shedding his animal and demonic qualities, and then strive to realise his divine nature. Nowadays, we find that men are going down in the reverse direction, from the human to the demonic and animal states. The message of Jesus Christ

On December 25th, when Jesus was born, three kings. came to his birthplace. These three gave expression to three different views about the new-born babe. One of them, looking at the infant, said: "This child looks like one who will be a lover of God." A second king said: "God will love this child." The third king declared: "Verily, this child is God Himself." The first one viewed the child from the physical point of view. The second saw the child from the mental viewpoint. The third saw from the Aatmic (spiritual) point of view.

The three declarations indicate how one can progress from the human to the divine level. What is needed is the destruction of the animal and demonic qualities in man. Man today worships inanimate idols and images, but makes no attempt to love his fellow human beings in flesh and blood. This was the first message of Jesus. Though one sees his neighbours day after day, he does not choose to love them. How can one believe that such a person can love an invisible God?

If a man cannot love a fellow human being who is visible before his eyes, how can he love what is not visible to him? This is not possible. Only a man who loves living beings around him can love the invisible Divine. Love must start with love for beings that have form. It must be extended to all beings. This is the primary stage in spirituality. Spirituality does not mean preoccupation with meditation, worship, etc. It involves total extinction of the animal and demonic qualities in man and the manifestation of his inherent divinity.

When the attachments and hatreds in which man is enveloped are removed, the inherent divinity in man, the Sath-chith-ananda in him will manifest Itself. There is no need to search for the omnipresent Divine in any specific place. When you are yourself divine, why search for the Divine elsewhere? It is a mark of ignorance.

How Jesus Christ's message was accepted

Jesus performed many miraculous deeds, relieved the sufferings of many in distress, preached sublime truths to the people, and ultimately sacrificed his life. For over a hundred years after his martyrdom, Christ's message did not have any impact. Four centuries later, Christianity was accepted by Roman emperors. Even after many centuries humanity is yet to realise the inherent divinity of man.

Man is searching for a reason for every belief or action. Should you seek a reason for sanctifying the time spent by you on any action? When you are engaged in unselfish activity for the common good of society and discharging your duties with dedication, you are sanctifying your life.

There are four basic elements in every action. They are Kaarana, Karma, Kaala and Karthavyam. Kaarana is the reason, Karma is the action, Kaala is the time and Karthavyam is the duty that has been discharged. We can cite an example for this. Supposing you want to go to Madras to see your relatives; you go to the bus-stand in the morning, sit in the bus, travel for eight hours and reach Madras in the evening. Now, seeing your relatives is Kaarana (cause). Sitting in the bus and travelling is karma (action). Spending eight hours is Kaala (time factor) and seeing your relatives in Madras and getting satisfaction therefrom is Karthavyam (goal).

If you do the same things in your dream, there is no time factor. The cause and action factors are also absent. As soon as you wake up, you find that you are only in the bed and discover that your seeing your relatives in Madras was unreal. All the four factors are absent in the dream state.

Only where all the four are present will it be real.

The purpose in view is termed Lakshyam. You are born as a human being for doing your Karma (duty). Life is given to you only to recognise Divinity and the body is the instrument for achieving this Kaarana (purpose). When you have spent your life, you have done the karma (action) in the duration of your life--kaala. You should have the satisfaction of having achieved the karthavyam (goal).

Christ preached only this truth and taught the people that the body should be used for service to society. This is the teaching of Vedanta. Vedanta declares that the body is intended only to do actions in the world in a selfless way.

The genesis of the Christmas tree

Jesus was crucified on a Friday and He rose from the tomb on a Sunday. That is why Sunday is taken as the day of worship and service in churches. Catholics gave importance to Virgin Mary, the mother of Christ, while Protestants gave importance to the birth of Christ. Catholics celebrate

Christmas by worshipping Mary on the evening of 24th and Protestants celebrate the birth of Christ on the 25th. There is a custom of putting up a Christmas tree on this day and worshipping

it. The genesis of this custom can be traced to Germany. A preacher by name Jensen from England once visited Germany. When he was travelling in Germany on his mission, he noticed some Germans attempting to offer a child's life as sacrifice to propitiate God who, they believed, lived in an oak tree. The priest was worried and questioned them why they were offering an innocent child as sacrifice to a tree. As they asserted that God lived in the tree, he took an axe and cut the tree. To his surprise, he was shaken by an inexplicable vibration from head to foot.

He noticed the form of a child between the two portions of the tree that was cut by him.

System of worshipping Divinity in many forms

This incident teaches the truth that God lives not only in human beings but also in plants and trees. From that time onwards people started putting up a Christmas tree and worshipping it on this Christmas day. The system of worshipping Divinity in many forms including plants and stones, which originated in Bharath, has been prevalent for a long time in other countries also.

There are sanyasis even among Christians. The men are called monks and the women are called nuns. There is no difference in this regard among the various religions. In all religions the goal is one. Christianity propagated this oneness of God. But nowadays the pure, permanent Aatmic principle is forgotten in the preoccupation with worldly pursuits. (Bhagavan then described how the practice of having grandfather Christmas wearing a red robe and distributing gifts to children on Christmas day came into existence. Swami related the story of Nicholas, who began this practice when he became head of a church).

Heart is the seat of Truth

In all religions, birthdays of great personalities are celebrated but the ideals for which they lived are not remembered and followed. If you do not care to follow their teachings the celebrations lose their meaning and become artificial observances. It is not doing justice to the good people whose birthdays are being celebrated. Christ taught people to love all beings and serve all with compassion. It is only by practising these ideals that one can truly celebrate His birthday. The Divinity within should be reflected in every action. The seat of Truth is in your heart. Worship means loving others with your full heart. You must live in love and lead a life of selfless service based on love. This is the only right way of celebrating the birth of Christ.

God, in fact, has no birth and no death. No change is there in God, who is changeless and permanent. The Aatma within is but a reflection of God and it is the same in all beings as an eternal witness. Birth and death pertain only to the body. It is not correct to worship the body.

Through Saakaara (the transient body) man has to merge in Niraakaara (the ultimate Supreme Reality).

Embodiments of the Divine Aatma! Christmas is celebrated in innumerable places all over the world. Nowhere in the world is it done in the way it is celebrated here in Prashanthi Nilayam.

People elsewhere may attend some church service and revel in drinking and dining parties. But, here, people from many countries in the world, speaking many languages, following different faiths and cultures, assemble together unitedly, start the day with singing God's name and glory regardless of their differences, join in spending the day in carrying the message of Universal love. This is Unity in diversity and true Adwaita in action. Every minute we are experiencing this. Whenever one makes Namaskaram to elders, what is its significance? It signifies the bringing together of the five senses of perception and the five senses of action into one, thus unifying the different senses. In namaskaram you have "na" and "maskaram"; "na" means "no", which indicates that your ego is given up, and you have no body consciousness. The unity of all the sense organs will wipe out the Ahamkaara. This will lead to purity and purity will lead to divinity. This unity can be seen only in Prashanthi Nilayam.

Nowadays politicians and preachers talk of unity and purity but in practice it is not followed by the preachers themselves. It is only in Prashanthi Nilayam that this unity and purity are pervading naturally without any effort from anyone. All are living here like brothers and sisters of the same family.

The power of love in Prashanthi Nilayam

There are a number of foreigners here,, who are very affluent and command princely comforts in their places, who have to put up with an austere life. They live in sheds in a spirit of fellowship and camaraderie though bereft of even the minimum comforts. They could not enjoy their life in their big mansions as much as they enjoy their stay here in such uncomfortable conditions. The reason is the Divine Love in them. If there is no such love in you, you cannot live here in such uncomfortable conditions even for a minute.

 Embodiments of Divine Love! Devotees who have come from far off countries! You are putting up with the life here in spite of the lack of amenities to which you are normally accustomed back home and are feeling happy. This is indeed a big Sadhana and can be termed even as Thapas or penance.
 The foreigners, in spite of their discomforts and difficulties, radiate joy through their smiling faces. This is because of their love for Swami. They are spending a lot of money to come here and undergo the rigours of the disciplined life here most willingly and yet are always happy. But in spite of all comforts, the people of our own country who gather here do not present a cheerful countenance.
 Embodiments of Love! One who is having constant remembrance of God, with love and devotion, will ever be happy whether he is in a village or a city, flying in the sky or in a forest, because God dances in his heart and confers delight.
 Because of the lack of unity, this nation is experiencing a lot of difficulties and turmoil.
 Promotion of unity is essential for peace in the nation and the word.
 There is no use in simply greeting others with words coming from the lips; greetings should come from the heart with sincerity and love.
Poornachandra Auditorium, Christmas day, 25 Dec 1992
 The grace of God cannot be won through the gymnastics of reason, the contortions of yoga or denials of asceticism. Love alone can win it, love that needs no requital, love that knows no bargaining, love that is paid gladly as tribute to all living. Love that is unwavering.
Sathya Sai Baba
 1. Purity--the path to Divinity
 The Lord of the Universe permeates the entire Cosmos
 Remaining invisible in the visible Universe,
 The Cosmos Consciousness illumines everything
 Like the thread that runs through a necklace of gems.
 THE phenomenal world that is perceived by us is called Vishvam (the cosmos). This Cosmos is Kaaryam (action or effect). Every action is preceded by a cause. This cause is God. Hence, God and the Cosmos are related as Cause and Effect. The relationship is interdependent and inseparable.

Vishvam means that which has emerged from the Divine with many limbs. Vish + Vam means that which is pervaded exceptionally. Another meaning for Vishvam is Vaayu (air). Air is allpervading.
"Vishnuh Vishvasvaruupah" (The Cosmos is the embodiment of Vishnu). Vishnu also means all-pervasive.
 There is no specific proof for the Divine. Hence, He is called Aprameya (Immeasurable). For such an Infinite being Time is the proof and Time is the basis. God is adored as "Samvathsaraaya Namah." "Samvathsara" means Daivasvaruupam (the form of the Divine).
 The mere passage of 365 days does not amount to Samvathsara.
Samvathsara refers to one who is the Kaalaathmah (Time-Spirit). Spirit means Brahman (the Supreme Absolute). The Brahman Principle refers to the Chaithanyam (consciousness), that is omnipresent. Brahman has no specific form. It is present in all human beings as Consciousness.
 God is the Consumer of Time itself
 For man to recognise the Brahman, he has to comprehend the nature of that which transcends
 Time. Time is consuming the body. God is the Consumer of Time itself. Hence, the Vedhas have declared that "Kaala-Kaalaprapannaanaam, Kaalah kim karishyathi" (Time is powerless against those who have taken refuge in the Over-Lord of Time).
 Man's joys and sorrows, happiness or misery are not dependent on Time. They are based on man's actions. Time has no relations or friends. Time is not subordinate to anyone. All are subject to Time. Hence, if one has to realise the Divine, who is the Lord of Time, one has to carry out His injunctions. God looks with love only at such a person.
 In this context, the Geetha has described the traits of the devotee who is dear to the Lord:
Anapekshah shuchir-Dakshah Udhaaseeno Gathyavyathah
Sarvaarambha parithyaagee
Yo madbhaktah sa me priyah (That devotee is dear to me who is free from desire, who is pure in body and mind, who is resolute, unconcerned, free from sorrow and has renounced all sense of doership).
 True meaning of "desireless" actions Anapekshah: In this world, man, with his body, senses and mind cannot be free from desires. But how is he to become Anapeksha (free from expectation)? When he performs actions, regarding himself, as the doer, the actions become fetters that bind him. All action which are performed with the feeling that they are intended as offerings to please the Divine, do not lead to bondage.

They become Anapeksha (desireless actions). One has to recognise that it is the Divine principle in all beings which is getting all actions done through human beings as instruments. As long as man regards himself as karthruthva (the doer) and bhokthruthva (enjoyer) he cannot escape from the consequences of his actions.

When a man regards a certain piece of land as his, the crops grown on it will belong to him. The Geetha teaches that when actions are done as offerings to God, they become "desireless" actions.

Man has taken birth to perform his duties and not to enjoy power or assert his rights. When one's duty is performed, the right comes of its own accord. Men today fight for their "rights" and forget their duties. Hence discharge of duty comes first. It is through duty that man realises God.

Inner purity is vital for all aspirants

Shuchih: This refers to purity. It is not enough if the body is clean. Inner purity is essential. The latter, in fact, is more essential than the former. For the proper enjoyment of all things, purity of mind is essential. Whatever sacred acts you may do in the external world, if you have no purity of mind and heart, all of them are valueless. The food cooked in an untinned vessel will be spoilt even if all the ingredients are good. Likewise, in the vessel of the heart, the inside must be purified by Prema (love). Then, all that one consumes will be wholesome. Hence, purity is vital for all aspirants; without it, all man's actions get tainted. Actions done with an impure heart can only produce undesirable results.

Whatever good results you want to secure in the external world, inner purity is the basis.

Dakshah: This refers to the determination that is needed to accomplish anything. One must have the fortitude and resoluteness to achieve one's purpose, whatever might be the obstacles in the way. To accomplish any sacred task one has to possess this determination. Daksha signifies this quality of unwavering determination in the devotee.

Udhaaseenah: One who is unaffected by whatever happens. This means that one should be totally free from selfishness. He must consider the performance of his duties as the sole purpose of his existence. The human body is the result of past actions. Man is bound to the world by his actions. The body is the primary requisite for the performance of Dharma (right action).

Indifferent to fame or blame, not seeking power or position, one should perform one's duties selflessly. Do not be swayed by any consideration other than your duty. Whether it be in a political organisation or in regard to a personal matter, or in relation to national issues, you should act according to the dictates of your conscience, without any other concern. One can become a courageous leader only if he performs his duties in this spirit. All actions must be done in a spirit of service. Only one who serves is fit to become a leader. The man who seeks a position, can he be pure-hearted? No. Forgetting power and position, concentrating only on one's duties, men should engage themselves in action. This is the true import of Udhaaseenah.

Act in the present to get rid of mental anguish

Gathavyathah: Vyathah refers to anguish in the mind. Falling a prey to mental anguish, man is totally confused. Man has a tendency to brood over the past. Of what use it is to worry about what has happened? Nor should one worry about the future which is unknown and uncertain.

Bear in mind only the present. This is the way to get rid of mental anguish -- Gathavyathah. The present is the product of the past and the parent of the future. When you act properly in the present, the future will take care of itself. Do what is appropriate for the present moment. If there are no expectations, there will be no disappointments.

Sarvaarambha-parithyaagee: This means do not give room for ostentation in any of your undertakings. The world today is immersed in ostentation and egoism. What does it matter whether the world praises you or decries you? For instance, why should a devotee show off his devotion to earn the approbation of others? His devotion must be for pleasing the Lord and not for earning the approval of the world. In the spiritual path, what matters is the inner joy you experience. That is the key to self-satisfaction. Sarvaarambha parithyaagee means one who is prepared to relinquish all his possessions and acquisitions including wealth, knowledge and strength.

Thus, it is only the devotee who has these six qualities that is dear to the lord. It is such a devotee whom the Lord loves.

Man is ruined by six enemies lust, anger, delusion, greed, pride and envy. Equally man is redeemed by the six qualities mentioned in the above mentioned

Geetha shloka.

Without cultivating these qualities, without cherishing such pure feelings, what is the use of immersing one's self in so-called devotion? It is only a hallucination, which cannot lead man to the experience of the Divine.

True devotee is one who practises what he has learnt

If you are true devotees, examine for yourselves how long you have been listening to Svaami's discourses? Years have gone by. To what extent have you gone spiritually? How far have you put into practice Svaami's teachings? What is the use of merely listening? Is it not all a waste?

You are listening, but not putting the teachings into practice. Hunger can be appeased only when the cooked food is eaten. Only the devotee who practises what he has learnt is a true devotee.

Your practices are different from precepts. You are leading selfish and self-centred lives. Such a life is led by birds and beasts. Even these exhibit selflessness often. Man alone leads a totally selfish existence. It is a shame to call such persons as devotees. One must strive at least to practise one or two of the teachings. This calls for Thrikarana shuddhi-- purity in thought, word and deed. Without such triple purity, man ceases to be human.

Today, human values have given place to demonic tendencies. Animality has become dominant.

The Divine has been forgotten. Consequently, all spiritual exercises are filled with ostentation.

What is needed is sincerity. One should not do anything for the sake of earning other's approbation. If one acts with sincerity, he will be duly respected. But if one merely preaches and does not practise, he will be ignored. How can such a person expect to win the grace of the Lord?

Self-interest cannot be totally given up, but there should be a limit to it. Everything in the world, including the body, organs like the eyes and other things are governed by strict adherence to limits. When the limits are exceeded disease sets in and the consequences may be serious.

The mortal man and the Immortal Divine

Among youth today, there is no regard for the limits to be observed in any sphere. Whether it be eating or sleeping or wandering about, they indulge in excesses in the name of freedom. What is real freedom? It is Aathma Inaana (knowledge of the Spirit), Aathma Nigraham (self-control) and Aatmaanandam (Bliss of the Spirit) which constitute real freedom. Man is mortal and the Divine is immortal. In the mortal human being, there is the immortal Divine-Spirit. In the field of the heart, there is a Kalpatharu (wish-fulfilling tree). The tree is surrounded by bushes and briars. When these are removed, the tree will be visible. This wish-fulfilling tree is within each person, but it is encompassed by the bad qualities in man. When these qualities are eliminated, the celestial tree will be recognised. This is the saadhana that each one has to perform. This is not the quest for something new. It is to experience what is yours. The entire cosmos is within you. The Universe is permeated by Brahman. One should be lucky to get this experience.

How to experience the Aathma?

How is the Aathma experienced? It is the consciousness that is experienced in the interval between one sankalpa (thought) and another.

This may be illustrated by an example. Once, a man holding a time-piece in his hand and listening to the endless tick-tick of the second-hand, asked the time-piece whether it has any rest at all. The timepiece announced: You simpleton! I have all the rest I need. It is the interval between one tick and another!" The "rest" is' given by the "Rest watch." "Watch" means "look out." Seeing the watch, you have to look at the "rest" indicated by it. This is the way lessons are learnt in their spiritual journey.

When you want to swim across a river, you push the water ahead of you, behind you so that you may move forward. Today, people do not make this effort. They remain stagnant, going through the same experiences all the time. With the result, that they do not comprehend higher ideas.

For instance, there is the example of the ocean. All kinds of rivers flow into the ocean. It absorbs all the waters, but its level hardly rises and all the water that comes in becomes saltish. What happens to the water that rises from the sea as vapour and cloud? It is pure and sweet. The clouds, when they produce thunder, proudly declare that by going up from the sea, they have achieved eminence as well as purity. Moreover, the clouds come down as rain and nourish the crops on earth. Can all the waters of the ocean nourish a farm? No.

Only the transformation of the sea-water into vapour and clouds can serve this purpose.

If one wishes to go up spiritually, one has to get away from the low level. Only then, will it be possible for a person to engage himself in service to others.

Unity is supremely important
 It is not time that is responsible for all the chaos and violence in the nation and for all the difficulties experienced by the people. Men's thoughts are responsible for all these. These thoughts are filled with selfishness. It is because of these selfish and self-centred people that the nation is suffering from so many troubles.
 As long as self-interest prevails there can be no unity. Without unity you cannot experience happiness. Therefore, unity is all important. With the strength derived from unity, you can accomplish anything. The Weakness of the nation is due to growing discord between man and man. Unity is supremely important. This calls for the shedding of selfishness to some extent.
 The years are passing endlessly. It is now 1992 years since the birth of Christ. After nearly 2000 years what is it the people have learnt? What ideals are they upholding? People are celebrating the advent of the New year, but what are they doing to improve their conduct? This is what matters. Without it the celebrations are meaningless.
 Act according to your conscience
 Jesus taught many good lessons. Allah gave many high teachings.
Rama and Krishna taught many good lessons. What have people gained from all this? How far have they tried to put this into practice? There are numerous persons who read the Bhagavath Geetha everyday. There are persons propagating the Geetha in every street. Preachers have multiplied but the number of those practising the precepts is dwindling.
 People talk about what Svaami has been saying. How many are practising what Svaami says even to the slightest extent? No. What, then, is the use of all this? Whether it is Svaami's teachings or the instructions given by elders, whatever is good you should put into practice. You must act according to whatever your conscience tells is good. This is the way to honour the great ones. Not to practise their teaching is to disrespect them.
 Joy is not derived from the mere advent of a New Year. All people want to know whether the New Year will bring better progress and improvement in the general condition. Having regard to time, place and circumstances, some good and bad things may occur. If, however, people desire an improvement in the state of affairs they have to change their attitude. It will be helpful if the time factor is favourable for change. This month, January, is not quite promising. January 1st starts on Ashtami, the eighth day after the New Moon. The end of the month January 31th will also be an Ashtami. All kinds of difficulties are likely during the month.

 The New Year appears to have started on an Ashtami, which is considered inauspicious but this should not cause any apprehension among the people. With purity of heart, anything can be accomplished. Even the course of destiny can be changed by human will power.
 Only the Divine has a free Will Some students today talk about free Will. Only the Divine has free Will. Man is endowed with a Will but not a free Will. When the Divine free Will moves, the human Will also operates. There are a myriad leaves in a tree but not a leaf will move in the absence of wind. The leaves have no free Will but they have a Will which can be swayed when a breeze blows. In the tree of life human beings are like leaves. When the Divine Will blows the human Will begins to move.
 Thus, there is need for the coming together of Divine Will and the human Will. Then, there will be a blossoming of human nature. Man can never achieve anything by his own efforts. There is something which a man accomplishes without much effort on his part. There are other things which he is unable to accomplish even with his best efforts. What is the reason? It is on account of the play of the Divine Will.
 How the Divine operates may be known from two examples from every one's experience. The heart beats and the lungs breathe without any conscious human effort. These are the results of the operation of laws of nature according to the Divine Will. There is Nature on one side and human effort on the other. The two should function in unison. When there is such unity you have purity.
 That purity leads to divinity. These are not three different things but three stages in the process of a tender fruit achieving ripeness.
Bhaarith's foremost need today is unity. When the nation is in peril all parties should come together. There is no room here for ideological or partisan interests. All should regard themselves as the children of Bhaarith. All should have the nation's interest in their forefront. When this view prevails the nation's welfare is assured.
 Help ever, Hurt never Students! Regard every second as a new year and act on that basis. You need not wait for the passing of twelve months to embark on any enterprise. Transform yourselves every moment. Get rid of the bad old ideas; that will herald the birth of the new year. Take part in service activities to sanctify your lives. Adhere to righteous conduct. Live upto the motto. Help ever, Hurt never.

This is the essence of the message of Vyaasa's eighteen puranas. In rendering service you must have total dedication. For instance when you have to attend on a patient you should not leave the patient for the sake of having Svaami's dharshan. Your first duty is to look after the patient. Your devotion will be mere show if you leave the patient in the lurch and go for Svaami's dharshan. Duty is God. Work is Worship. Some nurses are behaving in this manner. They imagine that they are filled with devotion but this is not devotion. This is hurt, not help. This is not proper. God will not be pleased with this kind of "devotion." You must be by the side of the patient when he is in pain. This is real service to Svaami. But this does not happen. When delivery cases have to be attended to, instead of looking after them, people come to Svaami. This is not right at all.

In our old hospital some nurses used to behave in this manner. They are not good devotees at all. They are merely putting on the cloak of devotion. Duty comes first. Divine grace will come according to your desserts. Devotion may be there, but duty should be the first concern.

This applies to students also. They have to attend to their duties first. If duties are neglected, any pretence of devotion is merely a show. It is even a form of deception. See the Divine in every patient. A patient should be regarded as Naaraayana Himself. You may come to Svaami in your free time. I have been saying these things for many years. But how many are acting up to them? Very few. In this manner, they are not only neglecting their duties but also acting against the directive of Svaami.

Hence, you should see the Divine in every patient and render service in the feeling that God is the Indweller in all beings. This will promote your spiritual progress. When you regard yourselves as devotees of Svaami, you have to bring glory to Svaami's name. If you behave in a wrong way, you are betraying Svaami. God alone is the Master and so follow Him. All the world's problems today are due to selfishness. Individuals are concerned about the welfare of themselves and their families and do not care what happens to the rest of the world. It should be realised that the welfare of the individual is related to the welfare of society, the nation and the world. Students must develop a broad outlook. Selfishness and narrowness of outlook are more prevalent among the educated than among the villagers and tribal folk. The evil practices prevailing in big cities are not to be found even in jungles.

Yudhishtira learnt that the educated man who had bad qualities was truly blind. Educated persons should develop discrimination, humility and a right sense of values. Students should try to enquire into the cause of the world's problems, seek remedies for them and live in unity. If you carry out the injunctions of the Divine, all will be well with you. Every one is selfish in this world. God alone is selfless. He alone has the authority to confer joy even on selfish persons. He alone is the Master. Follow the Master. Discourse on 1.1.1993 at Prashanthi Nilayam.

2. Sanctify sports and games

The advent of the Sankraanthi festival is greeted by farmers who have brought home their harvest, singing with joy. THIS sacred and auspicious Makara Sankraanthi is a divine occasion for people to transform their lives so that they may experience the divinity, the grandeur and greatness of human birth.

Whatever possessions and luxuries one may have, They will not confer peace of mind. Only when Godly feelings are developed, Man will realise peace and bliss. In this mundane world, what people regard ordinarily as inaana (knowledge) is not proper inaana at all. Aathmajnaana (knowledge of the Self) alone, is true knowledge. Aathma and Inaana are synonymous. Inaana is fundamental. It cannot be got through thought or sense perceptions. All that is acquired as knowledge about the things of the world is not inaana. Inaana is that which remains after the mind is stilled.

Students! Remember that wealth lost can be regained, health lost can be recovered, but time lost is lost forever. Hence, do not waste time. Time is God. Sanctify the time given to you by worthy deeds, experience bliss and share it with others.

Commercialisation of sport has lowered its value. Sports and Arts are intended to give pleasure. But the commercialisation of sports and music has lowered their value, together with the decline in human values. There should be no room for hatred or jealousy in games and sports. Our Institute students should engage themselves in sports for health and enjoyment. The participation of students coming from different regions and different backgrounds in games should be conducive to the promotion of unity. Even games should be regarded as sacred. Thereby, the participants become holy. Students! Uphold your human status by developing firm faith in the Divine. Men act on faith in a hundred trivial things in daily life but why don't they have firm faith in the Vedhic dictum that they are one with the Divine--Tath Thvam Asi (Thou art That)? Because immersed in sensual pleasures, they are oblivious to their real potency and state. In worldly matters, every action has a subject, object and predicate, as in the statement: Raama killed a dog." But this rule does not apply to the actions of the Divine. He is the doer, He is the deed and He is the object of action (Kartha, Karma and Kaarana). No one is competent to enquire into the actions of the Divine. One cannot know how the Divine is directing his actions in relation to his past. Each one should carry out his self-examination himself. Students should continue spiritual exercises together with academic studies. Regard yourselves as instruments of the Divine. Men should realise that they are entitled only to carry out their duties without concern for the fruits thereof. Duties come first. The results will come in due course. Men should realise how so many vital things are happening without any conscious efforts on their part. Their breathing, the functioning of their hearts and digestive organs are taking place naturally without any effort on their part. Even the time and manner of one's death are dependent on the Will of the Divine. However, man should regard himself as an instrument of the Divine. This was the advice Krishna gave to Arjuna. After Arjuna has exhausted all his questions to Krishna and got the answers from Krishna, his final decision was: "Karishye vachanam thava" (I shall abide by what you say). Priding himself on his talents and powers, man ruins himself. He does not realise that all his powers come from God. But it is in his power to ruin himself by the misuse of his talents. No one can know the origin of anything. For example, there is a green gram seed. Who can trace its genealogy? But one can recognise its future. The moment it is placed in the mouth and munched, that will be its end. Its origin is not known, but its end is in our hands. This is the reason why man is enjoined to concern himself about his end. Do not worry about rebirth because that is not in your power. Strive only to ensure that your end is pure and sacred. That calls for saadhana (spiritual practice). Many imagine that the quest for God is saadhana. There is no need to search for God. When the God is all-pervading, inside and outside, where is the need to search for Him? The only saadhana one has to practise is to get rid of the Anaathma bhaava (identification of the self with the body). Anaathma is that which is impermanent. When you give up the impermanent, you realise what is permanent and eternal. Man today foolishly seeks to enjoy all things indiscriminately. This is wrong. One must enjoy what is good and wholesome and eschew what is bad and unwholesome. In spiritual, terms, this means that one should give up the impermanent physical objects and realise the Aathma that is permanent. This alone is true saadhana---not various forms of worship and meditation, which are not genuinely concentrated on God. Combine studies with elevating actions. All acts should be performed in spirit of dedication, realizing that God is omnipresent. Then bliss will be experienced. Students should combine normal studies with the refinement of their way of living through Samskaaras (elevating actions). This refinement cannot be got from teachers or books, but only by one's daily conduct. Some students refrain from taking part in sports and games on the pretext that they are not interested in winning prizes. This is not genuine detachment, but only a form of laziness. Participation in sports and games is necessary for your health and recreation. Our Institute students are doubtless filled with devotion and faith. But together with these, they should cultivate humility and discipline. Their behaviour should be exemplary. When Svaami's car is going, students run beside it faster than the car. This is a bad example to others. During bhajan sessions students are eager to sit as near as Svaami as possible. But in their eagerness they rush forward and fall upon each other in a manner which may cause serious collisions. Is this a good example for others? No. Students should set a good example even in small matters like these. Students have abundant love for Svaami but this is exhibited in unseemly ways. There should be restraint in doing anything.

Life is a game! Play it!
Students think that sports events are confined to a few days in January. On the contrary, they should regard life itself as one continuous game. Life is a game! Play it! Treat the play as an ideal. Thereby you will be adhering to your ideals wherever you go. Understand the true meaning of discipline. It is not something that should be observed only when you are in the hostel. Discipline must accompany you like your shadow. After leaving College, when you get employed, then also you should observe discipline. Discipline is the life-breath of man. It is like the spine for the human body. Moreover, students should take care to avoid undue risk in their physical feats. You may desire to please Svaami to the maximum extent. But if you sustain injuries, will it give joy to Svaami? Your safety is important. All the spectators should feel happy. Your displays should be attractive without being unduly hazardous. You may perform thrilling feats. But do not give room for anxiety to others. Svaami is concerned about your welfare. Whatever you do, it should be pleasing and enjoyable. Where there is devotion and earnestness, nothing serious may happen, thanks to the grace of Bhagavaan. Devotion earns the grace of God. One student fell from a height with the head downwards. Doctors felt that it was a serious case and that the boy should be sent to Hyderabad. But I declared that it was nothing serious and that all would be well with him. The boy is full of devotion for Svaami. Without any bandage or treatment, he was all-right. (Svaami summoned the student to come on stage. The entire audience cheered as the student came walking to Svaami). Look at this boy. The doctors said that his entire leg has sustained a fracture. How did he come here after the severe fall? His devotion and faith helped him to overcome the effects of the fall. Hence, if devotion and earnestness are present, even great dangers can be averted. Dangers may come from any cause. But even mountains of danger can be removed by the grace of God. But that does not mean you may take any risk. You should be cautious. Moreover, when some hazardous exercises are performed, there should be safety measures to meet any untoward contingencies. Soft mattresses should be kept on the ground. Such precautions should be taken by the organisers of the sports events.

Cars for hostels presented by Svaami
The students from the Brindhaavan Campus put up a good show. They spent money from their own pockets to go to several places and arrange for attractive programmes. They suffered from lack of adequate facilities. Our Prashaanthi Nilayam students, despite the nearness of the old hospital, have oftentimes need to go to the speciality hospital by taxi or auto-rickshaw. You have witnessed the superb performance of the Primary School children. Not even the grown-ups reached the level of their excellence. All their programmes were designed by themselves without any outside help. This is an amazing achievement. Their displays were done with ease and were thoroughly enjoyable. Likewise, the performance of the girl students from Ananthapur was splendid. Even they desired to perform some hazardous feats. They showed great presence of mind in their exercises. No accidents occurred. Their only concern was to please Svaami and win His approbation. All the students from all the three campuses are full of devotion to Svaami. To meet the needs of the four Institutions in regard to transport facilities during emergencies. I am presenting cars to each of the three Institute campuses--Brindhaavan, Prashaanthi Nilayam and Ananthapur--and one for the Primary School. In view of the high cost of petrol, they are being given diesel-driven cars. Students, however, should use the vehicles carefully. The Wardens and principals must see to this. The cars should not be entrusted to juveniles. I am handing over the keys of the cars to the Wardens of the Brindhaavan Campus, the Prashaanthi Nilayam Campus and the Primary School. The key of the car for the Ananthapur hostel has already been given. I bless you all that you should continue to give joy to your parents and others by your performances in the future and acquit yourselves well in every way. Discourse in the Puurnachandhra Auditorium on 14-1-1993. Hate breeds fear; hate is the seedbed of anxiety, scandal and falsehood. It drains your mind of peace. You may have light without oil, fire without smoke, breeze without a bearer fanning you, a chillness in the air of your room in the sizzling heat of summer but, unless you are at peace with yourselves and with those around you, your pulse will be quick and your blood will be racing in rage and rancour. Love alone can alleviate anxiety and allay fear. BABA
3. The predicament of man today

The influence of the Western style of life and the alien language has eroded The glorious culture and righteous conduct of the people of Bhaarith. It is high time Bhaarithheeyas woke up and made efforts to restore the Wisdom and Culture of their motherland to its ancient glory.

THE primary requisites for ensuring the safety, security and peace of this great country are tolerance, understanding and unity amongst its people. The feeling that the same Divine Aathma is residing in all beings should be cultivated so that wisdom, social justice and real sense of freedom can prevail. The entire humanity should be considered as one brotherhood on the basis of Universal Love. Then only the objective of human birth can be fulfilled. The feeling of oneness is essential for enjoying bliss based on realisation of divinity in everyone.

In ancient times, the Rishis enjoyed fullness of human life. They experienced this bliss of Universal Love within them and conveyed it to all mankind. They propounded the Premathava (doctrine of Love) which is the means to know one's Inner Reality.

Today, there is no security or safety for the people in the country and there is disorder all over the world. Hatred and anger are rampant among the people. Under these circumstances, the only path they have to follow is the Path of Love.

Man has become a slave to selfishness. With the rapid growth of industrial development in the West, humanness has deteriorated.

Because of this, man has moved away from his true inner self. Though man has advanced considerably in the field of Science and Technology and has reached higher levels in the development of secular and physical knowledge, he has strayed far away from spiritual and moral goals. Everyone is indulging in selfish pursuits only. In fact, man has become a slave to selfishness.

Because of the scientific and technological advancement man is attaching importance to the physical body, taking it to be the real self, and spends, his time in catering to the needs and comforts of the body. He is using the body as a toy and plays with it in a mechanical way. The body is functioning through the power of Prajna Shakthi (Integral Awareness) which is directing the functions through the Spandana Shakthi or Praana Shakthi (Pulsatory life force).

The triple forces through which man functions Man is functioning by the combination of three forces: Radiation, Vibration and Materiality. The body is just matter only. It is called Prakrithi. Praana Shakthi makes it vibrant. This vibration is directed by the Prajna Shakthi which is consciousness (awareness). Thus man's life is a combination of consciousness, vital force and matter. Without realising this fact, man is always keen on looking after the body alone, with the wrong conception that the body is all powerful.

All of you know that America (U.S.A) is considered to be a land of plenty where there is no dearth of food. So the people eat well and enjoy material pleasures. They consume excessive 'food and lead a life of luxury. But we find that there are more deaths owing to heart diseases in that country, than in other countries.

Sweden is very affluent country in Europe and the government is also providing all possible comforts and looks after the people well. In spite of such prosperity, there are more suicide cases in this country than anywhere else and the number of divorce cases are plenty. What is the cause for this? It is not lack of any physical or material facilities but lack of spiritual outlook that is responsible for such a situation. It is because they identify themselves with the body, which is perishable and impermanent, and are ignorant about their Real Inner Self which is the permanent and eternal entity. They lead an artificial life.

The power of Gaayathri manthra In Bhaarith, from ancient times, through the sacred Gaayathri manthra, spiritual awareness has been developed. The manthra "Om Bhur Bhuvas Suvah" represents the three basic principles of the godliness in every one. Bhu means matter. Bhuvah is the Praana Shakthi (the vibrant principle). Suvah is the Prajna Shakthi (awareness). These three constituent forces--radiation, vibration and material energy--activate the human being. But man is not able to realise this fact.

In the mythology of Bhaarith, Naaradha is a sage well known as Thriloka Sanchaari (to constantly travel in the three worlds). Naaradha represents the life principle. The three worlds are Bhur, Bhuvas, Suvah meaning material energy, life force and latent Aathma Shakthi (spiritual energy).

Man is not making efforts to understand the relationship between Prakrithi (phenomenal world) and Jeevathma (man) and Paramaathma (Supreme Spirit). These are very intimately interrelated to one another. They are not disparate. The relationship between Paramaathma and Prakrithi--God and Nature--is the same as that between mother and child. The relationship between man and society is the same as that between the honey-bee and the flower. Just as the child is fed by mother's milk, as the honey-bee is fed by the honey in a flower, man must enjoy the gifts of Nature. From time immemorial man has been plagued by negative ideas. There is a legendary tale in which one greedy man killed the goose that laid, golden eggs thinking that he can extract all the eggs from it in one lump. Such acts of folly are committed freely by scientists today by exploiting Nature's gifts beyond all limits, creating disastrous imbalance resulting in natural calamities such as earthquakes, spelling danger to humanity. We cannot blame science for this. Those who apply the scientific discoveries without discrimination are to be blamed for this. They fail to consider with deep deliberation the effects of excessive depletion of the natural resources.

Do not trigger the negative aspect of Nature

Man has to consider himself as a limb of the society and help in the welfare of society, just as the organs of one's body are used for one's well-being. Again society is a limb of Prakrithi (Nature) and Prakrithi is a limb of Paramaathma (Supreme Lord). Thus there is close relationship between man and God. Nature is more progressive than man, and to protect Nature, man has to exploit it within limits. When man tampers with Nature recklessly, it reacts adversely and trouble arises. In order to protect Nature, man has to practise ceiling on desires. He should not trigger the negative aspect of Nature.

In this respect, scientists have no concern for the harmful effects that may accrue to society by their inventions. They don't care for the welfare of the mankind and go on making use of intelligence to produce their weapons of destruction.

Care should be exercised in providing comforts as excessive comforts may spoil man's mind and cause misery instead of happiness. "Na Shreyo Niyamam Vinaa" (Nothing good can be achieved without certain restraints). Because of the advancement of technology and provision of excessive comforts, life has become mechanical and spirituality has declined. Science fragments everything to pieces while spirituality builds up unity in diversity.

Today man is not making efforts to cultivate the feeling of oneness among humanity.

Intimate relationship of man, God and Nature

To quote an example you have the ozone layer in the atmosphere which protects the people on earth from the evil effects of solar radiation. Because of the advance of technology, several factories have sprung up causing emission of harmful gases in the atmosphere as a result of which the ozone layer has become thinner and if this goes on unchecked it may have disastrous consequences. The scientists are trying to stop the break up of the ozone layer but they are unable to find a remedy.

The actual cause for this situation is that more carbon-dioxide is let into the atmosphere, which normally is absorbed by the plants and trees which can assimilate the gas and supply oxygen by the natural process of photosynthesis. But, because there is de-forestation to an alarming extent, the extent of carbon-dioxide in the atmosphere has considerably increased. Therefore, the remedy for this situation is intensive afforestation, growing more trees everywhere and protecting the existing trees without destroying them for other purposes. Thus the relationship of man, Nature and God is very intimate which scientists may not be able to realise.

You have to enquire into everything thoroughly. Dharma is a word that has originated in Bhaarith and is misinterpreted often. The attitudes of the Westerners and our countrymen differ widely. In the West, they are more keen on the rights of the individual. Immediately on birth, the child acquires a right. Father, mother, society and government each has a right. The worker has a right, the ruler has a right. While in the West, they were more concerned about rights the people of Bhaarith had been laying stress on Dharma or the duty of everyone.

The concept of Dharma is peculiar to Bhaarith

The word Dharma is peculiar to Bhaarith and no language other than Sanskrit has it in its vocabulary, nor any country for that matter. It is interpreted by some as 'Righteousness' and by yet others as 'reason', etc Dharma is Dharma only. No other word can give the same meaning.

"Dharmo Rakshathi Rakshitaha" (Dharana protects those who protect it). That which controls and encompasses everything is Dharma. There is a lot of difference between Dharma and religion. Dharma is like an ocean. Religion is just like a small lake.

Religion is related to the individual while Culture is "fundamental order." They use the terms 'Mohammedan culture,' 'Hindu culture,' 'Christian culture' and fight against one another. In reality, there is no difference between one Religion and another. There is no difference between man and man as God is in the form of love in everyone. So it is not correct to fight on the basis of religious differences. All belong to the human race. When one understands this truth one can comprehend Dharma.

"Karmanyeva Adhikaarasthe Maa Paleshu" says the Geetha. You have the right to perform your duty only. You have no right to demand the fruits of your action. No one has got any right other than doing his duty. He has the responsibility to discharge his duty. But, today people are clamouring for rights and don't want to discharge duties. The result will always be there whether you ask for it or not. Right and Responsibility are like two wings of a bird which make it fly or like the two wheels of a vehicle which facilitate a person to ride on it. How long can you drive with a single wheel? How can a bird fly high with one wing? If you discharge your duty with responsibility result will take care of itself. This is what everyone should clearly understand today. If everyone does his duty well there will be no trouble in the world. It is because people claim rights without doing their duty there is chaos and confusion. Man is immersed in self-conflict because he is keen on exercising his right without discharging his responsibility. The body is given to man for helping others. Man should realise his reality. The body is given to him for performing his duty. What kind of duty? "Paropakaraartham Idam Shareeram" (This body is given for helping others). So your duty is to help others. But people don't cherish this broad outlook. Today there is terrible conflict and misery and disorder in the country because such a broad outlook is not there and people are narrow minded. They should discard this narrow selfish feelings and practise expansion of love. You should cultivate the feeling that all human beings belong to one family. The divinity in all beings is one. Constant Integrated Awareness

Bulbs are many but current is one,
Jewels are many but Gold is one,
Beings are many but Breath is one,
Nations are many but Earth is one.
People should develop broad feelings on the above lines. Then only humanity will prosper. There is divinity in every one which one should sincerely try to realise. It is not enough only to propagate the theory. There are a large number of people who propagate and preach but those who practise are rare. Many speak one thing and act differently. There should be harmony in thought, word and deed. This is the unity of head, heart and hand. But, now-a-days people think in one way, speak in another and do yet another thing. This is why the Prajna Shakthi (power of conscience), Praana Shakthi (life force) and material force are diverted in different directions. Matter, life force and conscience should be unified. One should be careful about conscience which will always spell the truth.-It will never lead you on the wrong path. Vedhas call this "Prajnaanam Brahma." It is present equally in body, mind, intellect and Inner Instruments. This is Constant Integrated Awareness. No one is making efforts to realise the latent Divine Power in him. In the world today, people care only for material things. Selfishness is on the increase. 'Right' is born out of selfishness and ends in conflict. Dharma is born from Prema (love) and merges in Aathma (spirituality). Therefore one should discard 'rights' and take up 'responsibility' born out of love. Such an individual only will lead a true life. Divinity within is responsible for the functioning of all organs of the body. That divinity is the Prajna Shakthi, the life force and also the Chaithanya (Awareness). This awareness is in everyone. It is Brahman. "The One is in all beings." This is a sutra (aphorism). Sutra means also a thread. When you make a garland of flowers, the thread keeping them in position is only one though flowers are many. They may be in different stages of bloom and change every day, but the thread is the same today and tomorrow. Similarly the Chaithanya (consciousness) is the same while one is a child or boy, or adult or in old age. Though the description of the person changes as boy, man, grand father etc., the Chaithanya inside is changeless. There is no distinction of woman or man too. Changes are in the body and not in Aathma which is changeless. It exists in all brilliance at all times. There is beauty in it. We should understand the principle of beauty. Service to humanity is beauty. For the hand, charity lends beauty.-For speech, it is truth that lends beauty. For ears, wisdom lends beauty. What more beauty do you need than these? For life, service to humanity is beauty.

In Kannada there is a wise saying that houses make a village beautiful, flowers make the branch of the tree beautiful, moon beautifies the sky, waves beautify the Ocean and character makes a person beautiful.

Every man has intelligence. When you put it to skillful use it is serving well. But actually man is misusing knowledge. This is termed as technology which is in fact 'Trick'nology. Because of this man is not having peace. An individual utters falsehood to please another person. He may think that he is deceiving the other. But he is deceiving himself. One should not act against the dictates of his conscience. Conscience is Chith, awareness is Sath. Both combine and give Aanandha.

They are like syrup got by mixing sugar and water (Sath + Chith). The syrup is Aanandha. I and you should combine to say 'we'. Many don't understand this properly and say "I and you are one." This is not correct. "I and you are We" is the correct statement. "We and We are One." I am in you and you are in me and so we are one. This is a combination of Aathma and Aathma and not matter to matter. The bond between matter and matter is the life force. Life is sustained by the infinite force of Prajna Shakthi. Prajna is the source and Praana is propelled by this.

Even if there is life unless the Prajna Shakthi is there this can't work. Human life is therefore, the combination of three: Prajna, Praana and Matter. Man is ignorant of this truth and concerns himself only with the body which is matter only.

Unity leads to purity and divinity

Ancient Rishis called these three as Bhurh, Bhuvah and Suvah.

When you realise this unity in everyone child, boy or old people--how can you hate any body? When one develops this principle of unity there will be peace. The 'divide and rule' policy is driving the society to destruction in the political field. In the spiritual field unity must be the basis. It leads to purity and divinity.

Embodiments of Divine Love! Spirituality is not mere worship, japa or dhyaana. These may be good activities but they don't constitute spirituality. The driving away of animal qualities and proceeding from the human to the divine is real spirituality. There are human, divine and animal traits in every one. You should get rid of the animal nature and develop divine quality.

What is Saadhana? It is doing good deeds with this body. These good works are God's work too.

The essence of the eighteen Puraanas of Vyaasa is condensed by him as "Help ever; Hurt never." This is true devotion. While doing worship and meditation on one side if you hurt others can it be real saadhana?

God is love; love is God

One may get angry. He should not plunge into action immediately. If he does so his hasty action will be fraught with undesirable consequences. "Haste makes waste; waste makes worry." He should think whether it is right or wrong before plunging into action to hurt the other man towards whom he is angry. Slowly as his temper comes down he will change his mind and desist from hasty action. This is the practical way of controlling oneself in daily life. This is the way of life which is called culture. You should engage in such thoughtful action as will serve the cause of society and foster goodwill and unity. You should foster good thoughts. This is real Saadhana.

God is Love; Love is God (Bhagavaan sang the song Prem Eeshvar Hai; Eeshvar Prem Hai).

Love is one. It is not good to cause hurt to others. The world is a globe. You know that the balance has to be maintained to keep it stable. We utilise the natural resources without any limit and create imbalance.

I have been visiting Madras for the past 45 years. Now I see that there is traffic even at 2.00 a.m.

as it used to be in Bombay. There is more carbon dioxide smoke released. There are factories and industries everywhere. So there is more pollution of the air and diseases are on the increase. All these are dangerous offshoots of technological progress.

Love all and Serve all

One can serve God only through Shrama and Prema, (effort with love). The best way to serve

God is to Love all and serve all.

There was an old lady in Mathura. She used to take blankets in the darkest hour of the night and distribute them to poor people who were shivering in cold. One day she was bending her head and serving the poor. A few youths gathered there and asked her "Oh! Lady! while you are doing such selfless work why are you bending your head and walking?" She replied: God has given so much of wealth to the people with so many hands. But I am able to serve the people only with my two hands. Is it not a thing about which I should feel ashamed?"

We are not prepared to share with others and are only ready to receive whatever we can get. This is one way traffic. "There is no chance of immortality without doing sacrifice" say the Vedhas.

You should sacrifice and share what you have with others. Then only you may have peace. You should make others happy. You must do the Saadhana of Sacrifice. You should provide help to other devotees. Charity is the beauty for hands and not decoration with bangles.

The Mind is like a key to the lock of the heart. If you turn it towards God you get liberation; if you turn it towards the world you get into bondage. You should develop the feeling "Lokaas Samasthaas Sukhino Bhavanthu." You should aspire for world unity. Out of unity you get purity and from purity comes divinity. Now there is only community and enmity, which has to be eliminated.

Prema is the binding factor to unite all humanity together. Therefore, cultivate Prema or

Discourse in the Kaamaraj Memorial hall, Madras, on 21-1-1993.

The Mahaabhaaratha and Raamaayana which are the most precious jewels of India are like vast oceans. If we look at these oceans one side, we will have only a limited view but if we climb up a hill and have a look at them, we get a fuller view and a better understanding of them. What we have to do is to delve into them and try to explore and understand the treasures contained in these big oceans.

4. Integral approach to human ailments

One whose heart is filled with compassion,

Whose words spell truth,

And who works for the welfare of others

Will never suffer from difficulties

Or diseases even in the Kali age.

"IN THIS wide world, everyone aspires for long life, prosperity and health. A healthy body is essential if one has to achieve the four goals of human life, namely, Dharma (righteousness),

Artha (wealth), Kaama (desire) and Moksha (liberation). Science and technology have made great strides in contributing to the progress of human society. But man has deteriorated morally and spiritually.

Among the four Vedhas, the Atharvana Vedha is the one that has given the science relating to longevity, known as Ayurvedha. Ayurvedha transcends time and space and is valid for all places, at all times. It relates to the spirit, mind and the body and has an integrated approach. The Allopathic system came much later. It is based on an objective, external approach while Ayurvedha is subjective. Both have to be coordinated for better results. Since Ayurvedha is subjective it is more efficacious than the Allopathic system. There is a superior artistic sense in Ayurvedha.

Doctors have to realise the distinction between subjective and objective approaches. The latter has an external outlook while the former has an inner view. The object is a reflection of the subject. Without realising this relationship between Ayurvedha and Allopathy, doctors are wasting their time in arguments.

Basic difference between Ayurvedha and Allopathy

Ayurvedha affirms that purity of mind is more essential for one's health while Allopathic doctors do not consider the mind as so important. They give importance to the eradication of diseasecausing germs and consider this as the only means to cure diseases. This does not take into account the role of the mind and the Spirit in the eradication of disease. Allopathy is based on external knowledge and experimentation, while Ayurvedha is based on inner knowledge and experience. There is gulf of difference between experiment and experience. Because of the difference between the subjective and objective approaches, in course of time, Allopathy resorted to the use of antibiotics to deal with various diseases. The antibiotics act powerfully and yield quick results in curing a disease. But, in the process of curing a disease they give rise to adverse side-effects.

The role of the mind in causing sickness

Allopathic doctors experiment only with matter. They do not take the inner consciousness (Self) into account. In spite of the prodigious technological developments in the world, man is not able to enjoy peace. Peace cannot be achieved by knowledge of the physical. Peace should come from inner feeling or the Spirit within. It is only when the body, the mind and the Spirit are in harmony that peace will prevail. Medical science should recognise the role of the mind in causing sickness. Good health confers mental peace. Mental worry impairs physical health.

Ayurvedha, therefore, lays emphasis on mental peace and aims at the elimination of the root cause of disease.

There are three basic factors which are responsible for health or disease in the human body according to Ayurvedha. They are vaatha (vital air), piththa (bile) and shleshma (phlegm).

Vaatha accounts for 36 diseases, piththa accounts for 98 and shleshma for 96 diseases. These three factors are essential for the human body but they should be in proper balance without exceeding their respective limits. When they are in balance, there will be no disease. Moderation is the golden rule for good health.

For the treatment of disease arising out of vaatha, piththa and shleshma, gingely oil, ghee and honey respectively are prescribed as remedies. These should be taken in moderation. The body is a gift of God and cannot be made by doctors. The human heart beats 1,03,000 times a day. The blood circulation in the body is computed to cover 1,68,000 miles per day. Man breathes 21,600 times and consumes 438 cubic feet of air every day. These are based on Divine Will and are regarded as a Law of Nature.

God is the preceptor of Prakrithi (Nature). The body is unclean in many ways and is subject to various diseases. But in such an inherently unattractive abode dwells the most valuable divinity.

Man should always act in harmony with Nature, which is reflection of Divinity.

Heart troubles are caused by hurry, worry and curry

What is the cause of heart ailments? Many doctors say that they are due to smoking, consumption of fatty foods, overeating and other habits. The relationship between food and habits should be properly understood. We should see that proper balance is maintained between the physical body and inner feelings (Spirit). Modern man is continuously in a hurry. Hurry causes worry which affects the physical health. The main cause of heart troubles may be said to be hurry, worry and curry. Curry means fatty foods. Many doctors have made investigations in this field but the results have not been made known widely. Heart diseases are found to be more rampant among non-vegetarians while vegetarians are not prone to heart ailments to the same extent. This is because of higher percentage of fats in non-vegetarian food which increases the cholesterol in the blood. Worry causes high blood pressure and hurry causes diabetes. Both ofthem are like twins, one acting on the heart inside and the other externally on the blood.

Every one should know how to control these causes. Some people do not do any physical exercises and lead a sedentary life. My advice to office-goers and students is that it is good for them to commute by cycle at least 5 or 6 kilometers a day. This cycling exercise is very useful not only for maintaining health but' also for reducing the expenditure incurred on automobiles.

Another advantage is the avoidance of accidents. Moreover, it serves to reduce atmospheric pollution caused by the release of harmful fumes from automobiles. The carbon-dioxide smoke form motor vehicles and factories is already polluting the air in cities and is affecting the ozone layer above the earth.

Purifying the environment is the primary task

The primary task' is to purify .the environment which is affected by pollution of air, water and food. All the five elements are affected by pollution. People should, therefore, try to reduce the use of automobiles and control the emission of harmful industrial effluents.

In the ancient times, sages and scientists commended the Ayurvedhic system of treatment as it was considered a natural system for curing disease. Trees play a vital role in helping mankind to receive oxygen from the atmosphere while they absorb the carbon dioxide' exhaled by human beings. Hence, the ancients favoured the growing of trees to control atmospheric pollution. But nowadays trees are cut down indiscriminately and pollution is on the increase. The relationship between man and trees is indicated by the term "Vanaspathi" (herbs) employed in Ayurvedha.

Man is leading an artificial life today. One should understand that he is not merely the body but a combination of body, mind and Spirit. In the Gaayathri mantra, "Om Bhur Bhuvas Svah" is the first line. In this Bhu refers to matter, that is the body, Bhuvah refers to the Praana Shakthi (Life

Principle) which animates the body, and Suvah refers to Prajna Shakthi (Awareness or Conscience) which acts through radiation. Hence man is made up of Prajna (awareness), Praana

(the vital force) and the body (the material substance). The doctors should not consider only the body (matter), but should take into consideration the Praana (Life Force) and Prajna Shakthi

(Integrated Awareness). Prajna Shakthi is the radiation energy that promotes wisdom. Vibration is the expression of the Praana (Vital Force). In every action, there is a vibration which is in between the consciousness and the physical body. We should see that the mind is not influenced by any external 'force' but by the internal 'source,' which is Prajna or integrated awareness.

Doctors' duty to ensure healthy life for all

Esteemed Doctors! You must strive to ensure long and healthy life for the people. In my view a godly life is more important than mere longevity. What is the use of a selfish person leading a long life without rendering service to society? Only those who serve the society and the nation,, should have a long life. The essence of the 'Eighteen Puraanas of Vyaasa was given by him in the motto' Help ever, hurt never.

It is true that doctors generally work with devotion and dedication. It will be better if they develop more devotion towards God instead of being concerned with earning money. Obviously money is needed to carry on worldly life but there should be a limit to the acquisition of money.

The use of money should be properly regulated. When one does not observe restraint in daily life, he is a prey to disease. The body is governed by limits and controls. The temperature should be 98.4 F neither more nor less, the blood pressure should be 80-120. Any increase or decrease spells illness. Doctors should not compete with one another in earning huge sums and acquiring more and more possessions. They should render free service to the needy and the poor. The spirit of sacrifice is the hallmark of true education. Money earned should be usefully spent in a spirit of sacrifice.

Health and human values

There should be a harmonious blend of religion, philosophy and art for man to live healthily in the world. In this context religion means the religion of love. This is the only religion in the world. There is only one caste, the caste of humanity. One should cultivate human values for healthy living. This calls for harmony in thought, word and deed. When you cultivate this harmony you will be free from desires and fears. As selfishness is rampant in the field of medical science and other branches of sciences, the world is rocked by many hazards and calamities.

Doctors should educate laymen about the various reasons for heart ailments. Whenever people think of heart disease, the prospect of an operation looms large before them as a bugbear. As far as possible you should avoid surgery and try to cure the patients by drugs. Doctors should treat operation as a last resort. As the word operation creates fear in all types of people, whether rich or poor, high or low, you should help them to develop self-confidence and remove the cause of fear.

What the Super-Speciality hospital signifies

Divine members of the medical fraternity! It is not my intention to extol the excellence of our Hospital here. I wish to highlight the fact that the people in these areas used to be mortally afraid of heart disease because there was no facility for high-grade medical or surgical treatment and they had to take the patients to far off places entailing enormous expense. But, from 22nd

November 1991, when the Super-Speciality Hospital started functioning, even kids entered the hospital smilingly without any sense of fear. Their courage and faith ensure successful treatment.

This is the only hospital where you can see patients, doctors, nurses, technicians and paramedical staff with smiling faces. Even the relatives accompanying the patients are all smiles. Wherever you move in the hospital, you can see smiling and cheerful workers doing their duty with devotion and dedication.

How has this happiness come to the people who go to the hospital for treatment of dreaded diseases? Happiness arises out of union with God. Because there is lack of faith in God elsewhere, there is grief. But in our hospital there is full faith in Divinity. Most people who have all physical comforts do not have inner peace. We get peace only from within us. If one acts in consonance with one's conscience one gets peace. A spirit of sacrifice is essential for securing peace.

This hospital is not Svaami's. It belongs to all of you. This hospital was established with the noble aim of serving suffering humanity. Besides excellent equipment of the highest quality, we have here the most modern facilities for medical and surgical treatment and, above all, a team of dedicated doctors and other staff who render selfless service with a smile. The construction of the hospital was completed in an incredibly short period of five months. The construction of a hospital of this magnitude might have taken even ten years if the Government had taken up the work. When I announced on 23rd November 1990, that this hospital will function from 22nd

November 1991, many eyebrows were raised, doubting the possibility of the date being kept up.

But it became an accomplished fact as willed by Svaami.

Devotion and selfless service of doctors

Dr. Venugopal came from Delhi to conduct the operations on 22nd

November, 1991. Ever since he took up the work; it has been a saga of success. It has not been mentioned in the public before that he is a doctor in government service working in the All India Institute of Medical Sciences.

He used to start from Delhi on a Saturday; arrive here and perform operations on Sunday and return to Delhi for work on Monday. He has not taken any remuneration for his work and has defrayed even the travelling expense himself. I am mentioning these facts only to highlight his devotion and sense of selfless service. His entire team is of the same type. They are very happy to have the opportunity to serve here. Their purity of heart and selfless service, have helped the hospital to achieve such splendid results.

Most of the nurses and technicians are our college students. They were sent to Delhi for technical training in the operation of highly sophisticated equipment. They have often been working smilingly from 6 a.m. to 12 midnight. They serve here only out of devotion to Svaami and not for money.

To cite an example of the spirit of dedication of the staff, yesterday while Svaami was returning from the hospital, nurses who had done hard and strenuous work for more than three days were found walking on the road and on enquiry it was learnt that their bus broke down and they decided to trek the long distance back to the Mandhir on foot.

Svaami asked them to wait there and arranged for a relief bus to pick them up. The relationship between Svaami and devotees is heart to heart based on love.

A word of advice to the doctors

Not a single paise is collected from patients for anything, right from diagnostic tests to surgery and after-care. Even nutritious food is supplied free to the patients. In the beginning, the innocent and simple village folk did not know how to use the hospital beds.

Some of them slept under the cot saying in utter simplicity that they were not worthy enough to sleep on such expensive beds.

Patients do not show any sign of worry in this hospital.

I wish to give a word of advice to the doctors. While you are examining the patients you should have smiling faces and talk to the patients sweetly. If you check the pulse with a grim face the patients may collapse fearing that there is something radically wrong.

Some patients even dread the very sight of a doctor when he approaches to examine. This is not good. Doctors should infuse courage in the patients and speak soothingly radiating compassion and love. The kind approach of the doctor will have greater healing effect on the patients than the medicine itself.

Doctors must instill courage in the patients. Svaami wants more hospitals to render free treatment to the poor. Doctors should cooperate and work with unity.

Aim at a disease-free human society

It is only by sense control and steadfastness that one can lead a happy and healthy life. Along with control of the mind, one should control the temper and avoid tension. Prevention of disease should be the goal. We should aim at a human society free from diseases. It will be a happy day when a hospital gets no patients at all.

All of you have assembled here to discuss and exchange your knowledge and experience in the field of medical science, particularly relating to treatment of cardiac and cardio-vascular cases. I wish you should discuss freely and find solution to problems and render service to the people.

Discourse to an international gathering of Cardiac specialists present at a symposium held in the Auditorium of the Shri Sathya Sai Institute of Higher Learning, Prashanthi Nilayam, on 6-2-1993.

5. Doctors, patients and society

Charity is the ornament for the hand.

Truth is the adornment for the tongue.

The scriptures are the ornaments for the ears.

Of what avail are other ornaments?

EMBODIMENTS of the Divine Practitioners of Modern Medicine! It is dhaanam (charity) that lends adornment to the hand. Only Truth lends beauty to speech. The scriptures serve to adorn the ears. Man needs no more beautiful ornaments than these. The glory of Divinity consists in sanctifying human existence by these ornaments.

The human body is a thing of marvellous beauty. Men cannot easily comprehend the secret of God's creation. No one can explain how the eyes have acquired the power of seeing this phenomenal world.

The beauty of all the organs in the human body is a secret of creation. Doctors try to find out how each sense organ and how each limb functions. No one tries to find out why they are functioning in this manner. This secret can be grasped only through the Aathmik or Divine Principle.

Human life is based on six constituents in the Panchabhuthas (five basic elements) and the

Aathma. To recognise this fact, three paths have to be pursued. One is to recognise within one's self the presence of Nature and the Divine. A second path is to recognise in God the cosmic creation and one's self. The third path is to see in Nature the presence of God and one's self. It is only when knowledge is acquired by these three paths that Aathma Inaana (Knowledge of the Self) arises. This three-fold path is termed Prajna (Integrated Awareness). Every man should try to understand this three-fold path. This can be done at all times in all places. It has universal application. It has permanent validity everywhere. But, man gets involved in what is impermanent and ever-changing. Treat the patient; not the disease. There are in the world today highly intelligent and experienced doctors of great renown. They are, however, concerned only with the cure of diseases and not the redemption of the patient. It is more important to cure the mental condition of the patient than to relieve his physical illness. Doctors treat the disease and not the patient. During the past two days, the doctors have been discussing how to cure diseases. They have presented statistics as to the number of cases handled, the number of cures effected and the incidence of mortality. The doctors have had some doubts about how all diseases are cured in our Sathya Sai Hospital. How does this happen? There is a good answer for this doubt. In regard to any action, if it is done with a pure heart and good intentions, it is bound to be successful. Man today regards self-interest as a way of life. This has become the philosophy of the modern world. But, we should consider thyaga (sacrifice) alone as the true philosophy for the world. When you approach the patient in a spirit of sacrifice, the patient's feelings get purified. Vibrations of light around the body. Our body is surrounded by Divine vibrations. If you look at the thumb, there are vibrations of light around it. Few attempt to recognise this phenomenon. The body is surrounded by vibrations of light. When these vibrations of light from one person meet another's, several good things happen. There are two important organs for man. One is the heart and the other is the hand. The head is preoccupied with enquiring into mundane phenomena. It is concerned with the external. Its focus is on objects outside. The heart looks at what is within. The concern with the external has been termed Pravritthi Maarga (the path of externals)... All man's actions today, including the knowledge he acquires and the wealth he gets, are all related to the Pravritthi Maarga. The six vices of Kaama (lust), Krodha (anger), Moha (infatuation), Lobha (greed), Madha (pride) and Maathsarya (jealousy) are related to the Pravritthi Maarga. These undergo constant changes. Because the body is associated with these qualities, it is also subject to change. But the heart remains unchanging. It is associated with the Nivritthi Maarga (the Inward path). What are the qualities associated with the heart? Truth, compassion, love, forbearance, sympathy and sacrifice: These human qualities emanate from the heart. So, in human life, the head and the heart play crucial roles. These two are kept in balance by the hand. Thus, the heart, the head and the hand are the three H's which are important in studying the human predicament. Close nexus between the mind and praana. What are the causes of diseases of the heart? All diseases are a reflection of Pravritthi, the disposition of the mind: Hence, in worldly matters, man should follow the right path. In this context, two elements among the five basic elements are important. "Bhikshaannam Dheharakshaartham, Vasthram Seetha nivararanam" (Food is essential for protecting the body; raiment is necessary for protection against cold). Associated with food is water. These two occupy pride of place in human life. Life is the subtle form of the water consumed by man. The mind is the subtle form of the food taken by man. Hence a close nexus should be established between the mind and Praana (life force). As is the food, so is the head. Man's thoughts, desires and aspirations are related to the kind of food he consumes. For instance, you may discern from practical experience how food affects the mind. The cyclic process which starts with the formation of clouds and ends in the harvest of grain, determines the kind of food one can have. Heat (or fire) is the basis of this process. This fire is present within man as Jatharaagni, the digestive fire, which accounts for the conversion of the food consumed by man into various forms of energy. This fire has to be in proper balance. When the balance is upset, you have illness. The state of man's body depends on the maintenance of this balance. Man's entire life depends on preserving this balance. When is the balance upset?

 When there is no mental steadiness. Men today develop all kinds of intellectual abilities, but they have not learnt how to keep the mind steady. When serenity of mind is achieved, there will be no disease. Illness will not approach you at all.
 Importance of food in maintaining health
 There should be some regulations with regard to food. Many doctors emphasize the value of proteins and recommend meat, eggs, etc. But proteins got in this form serve only to build the body, but do considerable harm to the mind. Doctors are primarily concerned with the gross physical body. They pay little attention to the subtle form of the mental makeup. Most of the diseases that are prevalent in the world today are related to the mind. Mental illness seem to outnumber physical ailments. The Vedhaantha has declared that the mind is the cause of man's bondage or liberation. This means that the mind has to be used properly and turned godwards.
 Equally the mind is responsible for health or sickness.
 In this context, food is all important. Proteins are present in milk, curds and vegetables as much as in meat. If in the matter of diet, the doctors give the right prescription, diseases can be averted.
 Prevention is better than cure
 In my view, instead of treating people after the onset of illness, it is better to ensure that they do not fall ill at all. Both doctors and the authorities should educate encephalic women about pre-natal care of children in the womb. It is distressing to find that new-born babes suffer from congenital heart diseases. Dr. Iyer showed the picture of a smiling child that had grown up after a heart operation shortly after birth. While one rejoices at such a sight, it is frightening to think of the operation that had to be done on a ten day old infant. In the case of congenital heart diseases, neither the parents nor the child can be happy. Nor can society be happy with such a situation.
 Something must be done to prevent heart troubles developing during pregnancy. There are medicines for preventing congenital heart ailments. For instance, if the mother is given various vitamins, the child's heart can be strengthened. The mother should be taught all about pre-natal care and given the necessary medicines. Pregnant women should be periodically checked in the hospital. It is better to take all preventive measures before the birth of a child than to carry the burden of bringing up a weak and crippled child all his life.

 Doctors alone cannot impart this message to all women. They can only advise those who come to them. But doctors can bring home to the authorities their responsibility in the area of preventive measures. What is the use of spending crores on curative measures without promoting health? It is a waste of money. There are many hazards in the use of antibiotics in the treatment of certain diseases like tuberculosis and the use of pesticides in agriculture.
 Doctors should be grateful to the society
 Doctors should realise what they owe to society, which has preserved and imparted to them their knowledge of the medical sciences. Medical knowledge has been enriched by the contributions of dedicated investigators over centuries. Doctors should be grateful to society for all the knowledge and skills they have acquired from the dedicated labours of others. They should realize their deep indebtedness to society for all they have received from it. Only then, they will use their knowledge and skills in the right way.
 People today think in terms of only their personal interests. They should develop a social consciousness, realising what all they owe to society. Men today have become so utterly selfish that they behave in inhuman ways. They do not make proper use of their talents and resources in the service of their fellowmen.
 Doctors are embodiments of the Divine. As such, it is their duty to see that people do not shed tears of grief. They may doubt how far this is possible. Do as much as lies within your power.
 What happens thereafter need not bother you. Treat Duty as God and Work as Worship. If you carry on your work in this spirit, the world will be a happier place for all.
 I have to give a word of advice to the doctors present here. There is a tendency to specialize in the treatment of heart diseases which has gone to absurd lengths. I would advise the doctors to treat the heart as a whole and not fragment every part of it for specialised treatment.
Specialisation has grown to alarming proportions in the world today. Doctors should be "generalists," who know how to treat different ailments of a patient.
 The heart teaches an important lesson to man. It appears to beat tirelessly without stopping. But, in fact, it is able to rest in brief intervals between one beat and another. The heart teaches you how to take rest even while at work. I often tell the students that "change of work is rest." This is-the way the heart functions when it pumps the blood from one chamber to the other.

Lessons from the human cell

Few can realise the limitless potentialities of each cell in the human body. It is one of the great secrets of creation. The cells teach man the lesson of thyaaga (sacrifice). For the progress of human life, sacrifice is essential. The scripture, declares that immortality can be attained only through sacrifice. Immortality means the removal of immorality. The various' cells in the body account for the performance of various functions by the senses and other limbs of the body. The power of the cells comes from the Divine. No one can explain it. Modern scientists term it as a "law of Nature." But wherefrom has this "law" emerged? There should be some one who lays down the law? For every product, like this silver tumbler, there is a maker. Silver is God's creation. The tumbler has been made by a goldsmith. It has not come as a ready-made tumbler.

You have on the earth water and clay. They are God's creation. By mixing them both, the potter makes pots out of them. The creator for the pot is the potter. God is the Creator for the five elements--space, air, fire, water and earth. No one else can create these elements. But man makes use of these natural elements for making objects for his enjoyment. One man produces an aeroplane for flying. Another makes a parachute for safety if something happens to the plane.

Scientists should be concerned with producing things that ensure safety.

How the Divine works

In this connection, I should like to tell you something whether you believe it or not. I do not have any worry. When I embarked on the construction of such a big hospital (the Super Speciality Hospital), Joga Rao used to say: "We are drawing up such gigantic plans. We don't have enough money. How are we going to construct this hospital?" He was highly apprehensive. I told him:

"What we are undertaking is good work for the welfare of others. There is no selfishness in Me.

We are doing everything for the well-being of the world. Do not give room for these depressing thoughts. It is bound to come up. Have this confidence."

When does such confidence arise? When you know you are engaged in a good cause. There is a difference between an optimist and a pessimist when they view a glass half-full of water. The optimist is glad that the tumbler is half-full, while the pessimist is sorry that the tumbler is halfempty.

You should not give way to pessimism. You must feel content with whatever you have.

With contentment, anything can be achieved.

Medical education should lay stress on quality

The plight of doctors (in India) deserves sympathy. Many of them have to spend large sums to get seats in medical colleges and to complete their education. The doctor is worried how to recover the money that has been spent on his education. Something must be done to solve this problem. For instance, no one should be admitted in a medical college merely because he is able to pay a large capitation fee (of lakhs). Only those who have the talents and aptitude for medical studies should be admitted. Such students will immensely benefit from medical education and will be of use to society. Today you must have either plenty of money or influential backing to get into a medical college. Students who get admitted this way take even twelve years to complete the five year medical course. Of what use are such men? The stress should be on quality and not quantity in the sphere of medical studies.

In earlier years, medical students used to work hard spending even 18 hours a day. Without such hard work, no one would get his degree. Alas! today things are otherwise. Students pass without much study. Such ill-educated doctors are a calamity to the nation.

Not all doctors are of this kind. There are quite a few competent doctors.

It is the duty of the medical profession to rectify this situation. They should contact the authorities to bring about reforms. Only then will the nation progress.

We do not need many hospitals. Patients can be treated easily. In my view, there is no need for you to worry about money and resources. Treat your patients with love, Duty is God. This love should be mutual give and take. You may charge fees for your services, but do it with love. This is the right course for you. When you render service in this spirit, you will be successful in all cases. When you treat the patient with love, you will win the patient's love. Hence, your motto should be: "Start the day with love, fill the day with love and end the day with love." This is the way to God.

Our American doctor, who addressed the valedictory session, said that doctors should speak sweetly to patients. Whatever you do should be filled with love. A patient feels reassured when he sees the smiling face of a doctor.

Tribute to participants of Medical Conference Embodiments of Divine Love! You have come from long distances, undergoing many strains.
 Conferences and symposia of all kinds are held all over the world all the time. But none of the decisions arrived at these gathering are implemented. Our Symposium is different. You have all come in a spirit of dedication. The decisions taken here should be implemented. You came here to learn from others as well as to share your experiences with others. You should return all the better for your visit. You should feel encouraged by your experiences here. Elated by this experience, you should be able to achieve many things. Return to your countries with joy in your hearts. You have had edifying experiences. It is fortunate that highly experienced doctors have been able to participate in this Symposium. They have also visited our Hospital and given many useful suggestions for enlarging its usefulness in the years ahead. We shall try to give effect to these suggestions. We are making plans for developing the Urology and Neurology wings.
 Please convey your experience and suggestions from time to time and encourage our doctors to do better. We wish that you should also make occasional visits to our Institute and Hospital. You are always welcome. Do not have any hesitation. This is your Hospital! Not mine. You are my property. Do not wait for invitations from here. There can be no objection to your coming to your own home.
 Highly experienced professional men have come here. No conference could have taken place in such a peaceful atmosphere as here with such pure hearted participants. In most conferences there are heated debates. Here everything was peaceful and calm. It was a sacred exercise. As Dr. Somaraju said, we have here a temple, where proper prayers should be offered. What should be this prayer? It is 'All patients should get well. "Lokaas samasthaas Sukhino Bhavanthu!" (Let all people be happy).
 I conclude my discourse with the benediction that in the years to come all people should lead healthy and ideal lives.
 Address to the Valedictory session of the Cardiac Speciality Symposium on 7-2-1993.
 6. Secure God's grace by Shraddha and Vishvaasa
 Why does sun rise and set in the sky regularly every day?
 Why do the stars that shine so peacefully in the sky at night hide themselves during the day?

 Why does the wind that blows tirelessly protect living beings?
 Why do the murmuring brooks flow ceaselessly?
 Why are there among the myriad human beings In the world differences of race, religion, caste and wealth?
 Who is the Lord of all this?
 Who is their Controller?
 Come forward, all ye, to learn to carry out His commands!
Isaanah sarva vidhyaanaam Iswaras- sarvabhoothaanaam Brahmaadhipathih Sadaa Shivoham.
 THE entire creation is the cosmic dance of the Lord. It is a marvellous and incomparable dance.
 It is an enchanting scene to behold.
 In this world, birth and death, happiness and sorrow follow each other in ceaseless succession.
 However, Sumathi, an exemplar of chastity, could stay the sun from rising to prevent the death of her husband. In order to restore her husband to life, Saavithri confronted successfully the lord of Death. Such extraordinary power is given only to human beings. Dharma and adharma are prevalent in creation
 In this creation, both Dharma (Righteousness) and Adharma (unrighteousness) are prevalent. At one time righteousness is predominant. At another time unrighteousness reigns. Only a man filled with devotion can attain the triune embodiment of the Divine---
--Sathyam, Shivam, Sundaram (Truth, Auspiciousness and Beauty).
 When confronted with his final destiny man becomes a prey to many fears and doubts. The moment Kamsa heard that the child that would be born to his cousin Devaki would prove his slayer, he wanted immediately to kill her. Vasudeva saved his wife's life by promising to hand over to Kamsa every child born to Devaki. To kill or to save a life, the power vests in man alone.
 Every human being is a fragment of the Divine. Only when a man discharges his duties will his life find fulfilment. Duty is man's primary obligation. If a man is endowed with wealth and possessions, he has a duty to enjoy them. But to covet or seize other people's wealth is a crime.
 Wealth is not confined to money or gold or other possessions. All the knowledge and skills acquired by a person also constitute his wealth. Even health is wealth. The power to think is also wealth. Physical strength and mental abilities are also wealth. The time at one's command is also his wealth.
 Hence, it is man's primary duty to utilise his time and every other form of wealth in the right manner. Unfortunately, today man wastes the time, wealth and talents of others. This is Adharma--opposed to righteousness. Dharma implies right use of one's time. Oftentimes, I advise the students not to indulge in excessive talking for the reason that it is a gross abuse of the time available to them. Moreover, by excessive talk with another person, he is robbing the latter of his time. This is also wrong. Dharma implies the right use of one's time and resource. Adharma is the abuse of one's time and wealth and depriving others of their wealth. Every person has a mind of his own in which thoughts arise based on his Ichcha-Shakthi (will power). One person favours adoration of Raama. Another prefers Shiva. A third one enjoys worshipping Krishna. A fourth is inspired by contemplation of Jesus. Another is musing over the thought of Allah. All these are based on individual preferences. But, in the minds of all persons, in whatever country or region, whatever form one wishes to adore, whatever deity one wants to worship, whatever name one likes to chant, two things are essential. Vishvaasam (faith) and Shraddha (earnestness). Without earnestness, even the most trivial act cannot be performed well. Without Shraddha nothing can be accomplished. "Shraddhaavaan labhaathe Jnaanam," says the Geetha. Only the earnest seeker can acquire knowledge of the Divine. However intelligent one may be, without earnestness he will achieve nothing. A man with earnestness can convert a small burning cinder into a huge bonfire. Shraddha and Vishvaasa represent Shakthi and Shiva. Shraddha (earnestness) is the means to the realisation of the Divine. What does Shraddha signify? It signifies Dhaiva-Shakthi (Divine power). Shraddha is called Bhavaani. It refers to a goddess, to Shakthi (Divine energy) or Prakrithi (Nature). Next comes Vishvaasam (faith). What is faith? It symbolises Eeshvarathvam (the Divine Principle). Through Shraddha (earnestness) Ichcha shakthi, Kriyaa-shakthi and Jnaana-shakthi (will power, the power of action, and the power of wisdom) are manifested. The essence of these three potencies is Eeshvarathva (Divinity). They constitute the power of Vishvaasam (faith). Thus, Shraddha and Vishvaasam represent Paarvathi and Parameshvara. Humanness represents the combination of Shakthi (or Nature) and Shiva. These two are not disparate. Just as fire and the power to burn go together, these two go together. Sugar and sweetness are similarly interrelated. There is no sugar without sweetness. Where there is sweetness there is sugar. Likewise Shraddha and Vishvaasam are symbiotically related to each other. Hence these should be regarded as present in man in the form of Shiva and Shakthi. The whole of Prakrithi (nature) is Ardhnaari-svaruupam (the feminine half of the Divine couple). Any man who has no Shraddha and Vishvaasa is verily a corpse. Although both Shraddha (as God,) and Vishvaasa (as Nature) are present in man, by ignoring God (lacking earnestness) man wastes his life. Earnestness and faith together constitute spirituality. Without these, all spiritual exercises have no value. Dedicate all actions to God. How is man to realise the presence of Shiva and Shakthi in Him? It is by doing all actions as a dedication to the Divine. "Mathkarmakrith, Math-paramah, Madh-bhakthah," declares the Geetha (Whatever actions you do, dedicate them to me. Consider me as your Supreme Lord. Be devoted to Me). This is the message of the Lord in the Geetha. This is the right way to worship the Saakaara (attributeful Lord). This kind of worship promotes devotion. Only a land that is properly ploughed, weeded, manured and sown with good seeds will yield a rich harvest. Likewise, after the field of the heart has been cleared of the weeds of bad thoughts and qualities, fertilised by good feelings and virtues, and the pure seed of Prema (Love) is sown, the sacred crop of Jnaana (wisdom) can be enjoyed. Based on this, two paths have been laid down in the spiritual field: Vidhvamsaka and Vidhaayaka (the destructive and the constructive paths). Vidhvamsaka path refers to the clearing of a field of bushes, thorns and the like before it is got ready for cultivation. Vidhaayaka path refers to the planting of good seeds in the form of good qualities which will yield a harvest of joy. Hence everyone's heart has to be filled in the right way by Shraddha and Vishvaasa. It is not enough for a devotee to claim that he loves the Lord. He must find out whether the Lord loves him. You must see whether God showers His grace on you. Only then, your devotion becomes meaningful. In all his actions, man should not be concerned only with self-interest. He must find out whether his actions are approved by his conscience. Just as the Divine is always blissful, the devotee should be a Santhushtah (ever-blissful). But in the present times, men have no contentment or sense of joy. They are racked by doubts and apprehensions. How can such persons ever experience divine bliss? It has been said that one who is vacillating is merely a living creature, but one who is firm and unwavering is divine. Treat God as a friend. God has the appellation Suhrith (a good hearted friend). In every human relationship, there is an element of selfishness in the display of affection. God alone showers His love with no trace of selfishness. Man fails to understand this sacred, Divine Love principle. I would like to illustrate what it means to have God as friend from the example of the Pandavas whom Krishna was all in all. When Arjuna returned to Hasthinaapura from Dhvaaraka after the passing of Krishna, he could not bear to answer his mother Kunthi's question as to what had happened to Krishna. With tears in his eyes, he said, that Krishna, who had been their charioteer, their councillor, their preceptor, friend, lord and everything else, had left the world. There can be no greater thing than to have God as one's Suhrith (friend). Our aim should be to dwell in the Lord. Another appellation of God is Nivaasah (the Supreme Abode). Our aim should be to dwell in the Lord. This cosmos is the abode of the Lord. We are living in this cosmos. We are not separate from it. But the sacred feeling that we are living in the abode of the Lord should be cherishable by everyone. Such sacred feelings do not arise in man because of the barriers created by raaga, bhaya and dhvesha (attachment, fear and hatred). Attachment is the feeling that one develops when he considers that something other than himself can give him satisfaction and joy. This sense of separateness should go. The consciousness that the same constituents are present in one and all should be realised. Then, there will be no room for differentiation and alienation. The sense of oneness will be experienced. Where there is attachment, there is dhvesha (hatred), which is a reflection of raaga. Fear is born out of attachment--the fear of losing what one has. Attachment and fear breed hatred. These three lead man to stray from his adherence to Shraddha and Vishvaasa. Hence, these three have to be brought under control. To realise the 'Divinity within man, everyone' has to turn his vision inward. All that is perceived in the external world is subject to changes. Man cannot derive happiness from an unchanging world. He desires change. But the change He should seek is a divine change, not changes in the mundane world. he should seek to know the truth about himself. Ignorant about his true self, man today is harried by fears. As long as the fear remains, God will elude him. He has to develop faith in the Divinity (Shiva) within him, to get rid of this fear and acquire the Brahmabalam (strength of the Divine). Difference between raathri and Shivaraathri. Every night is marked by darkness. But tonight it is Shivaraathri. What is the difference between raathri (night) and Shivaraathri? For the man who has recognised his divinity, every night is Shivaraathri. For the man immersed in worldly concerns, all nights are the same. That night is marked by darkness. This night is marked by light. Spirituality is the lighthouse that spreads light for the man who is full of despair, immersed in insatiable desires. The name of God is the lighthouse. By chanting the name, the bearer of the name can be realised. Man has to proceed from the body to the Divine. Man is a limb of society. Society is a limb of Nature. Nature is a limb of God. The Aathma is present in everyone. It knows no territorial barriers. It is omnipresent. To recognize the omnipresence of the Divine is the purpose of observing Shivaraathri. This purpose is not served by fasting and keeping awake all the night. These are mere auxiliaries to what is considered the ultimate goal. But God-realisation should not be put off to some distant future. It has to be taken up here and now. That is the purpose of Shivaraathri. Concentrate Mind on God. But today, people have forgotten their Divine destiny and are wasting their lives in worldly pursuits. They have no faith in their future. Where there is no faith, there is no Shiva. They lack the power of Shraddha (earnestness). So Paarvathi is also not there. Man's pathetic condition today is he has denied himself the grace of both Paarvathi and Shiva. He can obtain it only by cultivating human values. He has to acquire the Inaana (spiritual wisdom) that comes from Shraddha (spiritual earnestness). The true values for man are Ichcha-shakthi, Kriya-shakthi, and Inaana-shakthi. These represent the triple aspects of the Divine:

Sathyam, Shivam, Sundaram

(Truth, Auspiciousness and Beauty). These are the eternal verities. Though endowed with these divine powers, man goes after petty trinkets. When the Divine is ready to confer liberation, why get involved in the bonds of worldly life? Man should seek God alone. Once God's grace is secured, all else will be got with ease. For this purpose, man has to get rid of attachment, fear and hatred. He must perform all actions as an offering to God, who is omnipresent. The vigil and fasting observed on Shivaraathri night have become farcical. True vigil and fasting consist in concentrating all one's thoughts on God during the whole night. God's grace is a direct sequel to one's actions. Each one has to examine for himself in what spirit he is performing his worship. The Divine can be realised only through Shraddha and Vishvaasa. The Divine is within everyone. Once man recognises this fact, he will give no room for bad qualities.

Embodiments of Divine Love! Dedicate yourselves to the performance of your duties. Do not waste your time or that of others in idle talk. Starting with the duties of the individual, man should aim at achieving-oneness with the Divine as the ultimate goal. Shivaraathri is an auspicious occasion for concentrating the mind on God. Devote at least this one night entirely to the contemplation of God, to the exclusion of all other thoughts and worries.

Discourse in the Puurnachandhra Auditorium on 19-2-1993, Shivaraathri Day.

I am showing you by My example how you must fill every moment with useful beneficial activity. You talk among yourselves, "O, Swami is having his rest hour; Swami is sleeping." But I have never craved for a minute's rest or sleep or relief. Shall I tell you at what time I feel restful, relieved, content? When I know that you are all earning supreme bliss through detachment and spiritual discipline, not until then.

BABA

7. Serve the Divine: chant the Name

What can Kali or the forces of evil do

To one whose heart is filled with compassion,

Who wears the jewel of truthful speech,

Whose limbs are devoted to the well-being of others?

IF MAN is to be free from the sway of evil forces, He has to achieve the triple purity of thought, word and deed. It is only when the heart, the tongue and the body are pure that man can fully comprehend Para thathva (Supreme Principle.)

This world that is inhabited by man is called Prapancha. Pra implies that which is shining or blooming. It is a prefix. It is only when this Pra is prefixed to every sense organ that Prapancha (the world) emerges.

Prapancha and Paramaathma

There are the five basic elements (space, air, fire, water and earth), the five sense organs (relating to hearing, touch, sight, taste and smell), the five sheaths (Annamaya,

Praanamaya, Manomaya,

Vijnaanamaya and Aanandhamaya), and the five life-breaths (Praana, Apaana, Vyaana, Udaana and Samaana). When the prefix Pra is added to each of these Pancha (five) categories, the Prapancha emerges. This means that the world is made up of the five elements, the five senses, the five sheaths and the five vital airs. Consequently, wherever you turn, you see in the world differences: differences among material objects, a variety among individuals, differences in experiences, etc. Wherever such differences exist, there are bound to be likes and dislikes, Raaga and dhvesha (attachments and aversions). If man has to transcend these differences, he has to recognise the all-pervading Divine principle. Only then both attachment and hatred can be totally eliminated.

The five elements are manifestations of the Paramaathma (Over-self). So are the five sheaths and the five vital airs. Hence, man cannot exist without these manifestations. That is why the scriptures declared: "His feet and hands are everywhere; His head, face, eyes and ears are everywhere." The omnipresence of the Divine can be experienced in the Cosmos.

When a man embarks on some undertaking, he imagines that no one is observing him. But no man can do anything unseen or unnoticed by God. Is it possible to deceive the Divine whose face and eyes are every where? "Sarvam Aavrithya thishthathi" (Encompassing everything, He remains). The Divine shines in every object. It is a mark of supreme ignorance to imagine that you can conceal anything from God. Nor is that all. God is described, as "Acharam Chameva Cha" (He is non-moving and moving). That is, though appearing to be moving, He remains unmoving. God has no hands, but He can grasp anything. He has no feet but He can move everywhere. He has no eyes, but can see everything. This is the significance of the statement

"Acharam Chameva Cha."

Here is an example. Man in the dream states feels that he is moving about. In the dream he wanders over all places. He experiences many actions done by the body. But despite the movements and activities in the dream, his body is still and motionless on the bed on which he is sleeping. The same body is moving about in the dream. The Divine is in that body. Equally the Divine is in the body that is motionless. Thus, He is both the unmoving and the moving. It is not easy to recognise this subtle Inaana (spiritual wisdom). Perception of One without a second is Inaana. What does Inaana mean? Ina means to know. Na refers to that which cannot be known. Inaana therefore refers to that which cannot be easily comprehended.

"Advaitha Dharshanam Inaanam," declares the scripture. Inaana (Super-knowledge) is the perception of the One without a second. Only the One exists. There is no second. In such a situation, there is nothing to be known. There is no knowledge, knowing or knower (in that state). In comprehending the One, the nature of the many has to be properly understood. Every man has to recognise the Divinity that is present in all human beings. God is one. That One is the Indweller in all beings. Did the Divine fragment Himself in a myriad ways? The answer is: without fragmenting Himself, the Divine is present in all beings. In his ignorance, man notices only the manifoldness around him. This may be illustrated this way. The sun's image can be seen in an ocean, a river, a lake, a pond or a well. Everywhere the sun appears to be shining. Are there so many different suns? No. The objects reflecting the image of the sun are varied and different from one another. Likewise, names and forms may be different, but in all beings, the same God, without being divided, shines as the Indweller. Thus, although bodies may appear with different names and forms, the Divine in them is one. Develop love, nearness and obedience to the Divine. To recognise this. omnipresent Divine, man has to get rid of Raaga, Bhaya, and Dhvesha (attachment, fear and hatred). These three are worldly 'qualities. But, merely by shedding these qualities, man cannot have God-realisation or comprehend the Divine principle. This table before me has no qualities. Can it comprehend the Divine? The mere absence of bad qualities is not enough. There must be love. You must develop love towards God. But love alone will not serve to make one comprehend the Aathmik principle. One must move towards the Divine. But, here again, nearness to God is not enough. You have to carry out the injunctions of the Divine. It is only when love, nearness and obedience to the Divine commands are present that one can realise the Aathmik principle. Recognition of the Divinity inherent in the human state calls for spiritual saadhanas (disciplines) of various kinds. Today man is enveloped in a certain disease. It is Ashaanthi (peacelessness). For curing any disease, there are normally three methods. One is to take the prescribed medicine. After taking the medicine, the prescribed diet regimen has to be followed. Taking the medicine without observing the diet regulations will not help to cure the disease. Adhering to the prescribed diet, without taking the medicine, will also not serve the purpose. Both medicines and diet control are essential to ensure a cure. If the disease of peacelessness afflicting man is to be cured, he has to take the medicine of love and adhere to the diet of following the injunctions of the Divine. Only then will the mental unrest go. Three different types of argument It is true that many have love for God. But they do not live up to the dictates of the Divine. Those who follow the Divine injunctions in a formal manner, do not act with love for God. It is only when there is a union of love and obedience that man can recover peace of mind. In this context, a Vedhic aphorism declares: "Vaadhah pravadhathaam" (Let the argument be expounded). There are three different ways of carrying on a Vaada (argument). Without attachment or hatred, with the desire to understand the Aathmik principle, with a sincere heart, engaging oneself in a spirit of enquiry, is termed a discussion, Vaadhah (purposeful argument). This means that one conducts the debate with a heartfelt yearning to know the truth, with a pure mind filled with noble thoughts. Without such an attitude, if one is keen only to assert his own opinions and defeat the others in the argument by any means, condemning the beliefs of others and defending one's own views in an egoistic spirit---this type of argumentation is termed lalpa (wrangling). The third type of argumentation is condemning everything and indulging in such condemnation habitually, without any regard for one's own defects, finding faults in others perpetually, magnifying those faults and broadcasting them. Such an attitude is termed Vithandavaadha (perverse argumentation).

Of these three types, unfortunately these days we notice only the third type of perverse logic prevalent. Vaadha and Jalpa are not very much in evidence. One pretends to be all-knowing in any argument. Such people enter into an argument only for furthering their selfish ends. These persons can never realise the Aathmik principle even after any number of lives.

Strive to understand the inherent Divinity'

The first requisite is the urge to comprehend the Aathmik principle. Only when this arises in man will his humanness become worth while. In spite of human birth and the inherent Divinity in them, men are failing to recognise their Divine nature. Man is learning all about other things, but is making no effort to understand himself.

What is the real meaning of Inaana? It is to know the truth about one's self by a process of refinement. What is spirituality? What is the refining of one's nature? It is discovering one's true self.

One is searching for something in a room. He sees everything in the room except himself.

Likewise in this vast room of the cosmos, man is searching for everything and perceives all things. But he does not know himself and has no perception of what he is. He cries out: "Where is God? Where is God?" This query is like that of a man who asks others where he is. "Where am

I? Who am I?" What is the meaning in putting such questions to others? He knows where he is.

How can others tell him where he is?

"As is your feeling, so is the outcome"

Likewise, it is sheer ignorance to search for God. There is no need to search for God. He is everywhere, all-pervading, inside and outside. You have to know the Divine which is here, there and everywhere. The Bhaagavatha says: "Dhuuraath dhuure anthike cha" (He is farther than the farthest and close by as well). There is none who is nearer to us than He. But there is also none who is farther from us than He. What is the reason for this nearness or remoteness? One's feelings alone are the primary reason. If you feel He is near, He is near; if you feel He is distant.

He is remote. It is on account of this that the scriptures declare: "As is your feeling, so is the outcome."

God has been given three names: Om Thath Sath. Man has a fascination for names. When the name of his native place or his own name is mentioned, he feels happy. But with regard to the Divine, the name is not important. If the inner significance of all the different names of the Divine is understood, it will be found that they mean one thing alone. Om is Parabrahma (the Supreme Absolute). Tath is 'That.' Sath is the Real. "Om Thath Sath" means "The Supreme

Absolute is that Reality." By describing Om as Pranava, made up of the three letters A, U, M and elaborately commenting in this manner, the pedantic expositors confuse the aspirants. By such expositions, devotion is weakened. Each one expounds these statements in his own way.

When the question is asked whether these exponents practise any of the teaching they preach, the answer is in the negative. When such is the case, how can spirituality grow?

Hence, practice is more essential than preaching. When you practise the teachings, others will follow your example. When you preach to a lakh of people what you don't practise yourself, all of them lose their faith in the teachings and are indifferent to them.

Three stages to attain the Divine

Moreover, the Aathmik bliss to be derived from practising spiritual truth cannot be derived by any other means. No preceptor's teaching will be of any use. Nor will the reading of scriptures be of any avail. The gain from study or listening is precious little. It is only when you practise what you have seen and heard that you can experience Aathmik bliss. In the Geetha, Krishna declares.

"Inaathum, Dhrashtum, Praveshtum" (the three stages of knowing, seeing and experiencing in Self-Realisation). You have heard about something; that is Inaathum. You wish to see what you have heard about: that is Dhrashtum. And then you wish to have the experience of what you have seen: that is Praveshtum. Only when these three take place can the human being attain the Divine. At present, you are merely studying the scriptures or listening to the expositions of scholars. You must embark on an undertaking to ascertain whether what you have heard can be found and put into practice. You have to begin the quest. But where is the quest to be made? Not outside you. Everything is within you. All that is outside is a reflection of the Inner Being.

Experience of the sages in realising the Divine

In ancient times, the great sages performed rigorous penances to experience the Divine. Some of them gave up the attempt after a time, considering the Divine as unattainable. Some others persisted in their attempts with the determination to achieve the goal. Thereby they realised the Divine. What did they proclaim to the world after their Realisation?

"Vedhaaham etham

Purusham Mahaantham Aadithyavarnam Thamasah d" (We were able to see the Lord, the Effulgent One, bright as the Sun). Where did they see God?

"Thamasah parasthaath" (Beyond the Thamo-guna), came the answer.

Today man is enveloped in a thick cloud of Thamoguna. The effulgent Lord can be seen beyond the Thamoguna (the quality which is the cause of all man's ignorance and wrong doings). This Thamo-guna, which holds every man in its grip, should be got rid of. For this purpose, men should perform good deeds and render service.

In the Raamaayana, during an encounter between Hanumaan and Vibheeshana, Raavana's youngest brother, in Lanka, Vibheeshana asked Hanumaan why he (Vibheeshana) had not secured a vision of Raama in spite of his chanting Raama's name.

Hanumaan replied that mere chanting of Raama's name was not enough. Vibheeshana had failed to engage himself in any act of service to Raama. He had done nothing to render help to Seetha, who was held captive in Lanka by Raavana.

It is not enough to recite the Lord's name. One has to render service to the Lord. Only then, there is a unification of the Name and the Form and the Divine is experienced.

People are chanting the name of the Lord today. They are dwelling in the aashram. Why have they come here? To secure Bhagavaan's grace and experience Aathmaanandham (spiritual bliss).

Those who have come may be reciting the name of the Lord. But are you engaging yourselves in any of the Lord's work? What part are you playing in Svaami's work? Without participating in

Divine service, your stay here for any number of years will be as futile as the presence of a frog on a lotus. While bees coming from long distances taste the nectarine sweetness of the honey in the lotus, the frog derives no benefit from its nearness to the lotus. This truth is not recognised by devotees.

Duty of the aashramites

Hence, it is not enough to come to the aashram. You have to take part in the aashram activities.

You must render service according to your capacity. You are not asked to do more than that.

Svaami does not ask for your services. He is saying all this for your own sake.

Hence, from today everyone staying in the aashram, whoever he may be, should render service according to one's capacity. There is no use merely in consuming food and taking one's seat in the Mandhir Verandah or the Dharshan (audience) line. Everyone must render service to the limit of one's ability. Those who cannot render such service should quit the Mandhir. Why have you come here? What are you doing? Consult your conscience for the answers. You have come from far away places, giving up all things. But despite this renunciation, what are you doing?

You are wasting your time. This is a grievous mistake. Time is a manifestation of God. Time is consuming man. God is the consumer of Time itself. Therefore, you should strive to earn the grace of God. If you waste time, you will forfeit God's grace.

Embark on active work

Many persons are wasting their time in this manner. Whatever you tell them, they say: "Sai Raam! Sai Raam!" Even a tape-recorder can repeat this. What is the use of uttering the name?

Embark on active work. Even for eating a masala dosa, you have to engage your hands and mouth in action. Likewise, you have to use your hands for service. Chant the name with your tongue. And experience bliss in your heart. Only when all these three are done will you qualify for God's grace.

Therefore, everyone who had joined the aashram should take part in service activities according to one's capacity. Some are doing-this. There is one devotee who is 86 years old. He is engaged in some work or other right upto 10 p.m. in the night. For doing work earnestly, is age a bar? He has difficulty in climbing stairs or coming down. But he carries on his work by using a vehicle.

There is another devotee who is also an aged person. According to his strength, he renders service in the Canteen by serving water. There is a third devotee. His energies have declined.

Despite this, he is carrying on the editorial duties assigned to him.

Do service according to your capacity

Therefore, each one may do what lies within his power. But there are quite a few younger people. who don't do any work. They take food several times. They sit in the verandah and do nothing. There is no room for such persons in the verandah. You have to work. Those who do not work, should leave. This is the import of the Geetha declaration: "Karmanyeva Adhikaarasthe maa phaleshu kadaachana" (You are entitled only to do your duty, not to the fruits thereof). Practise. and propagate this Karma Maarga (the Path of Action).

When one is told to take up some work, he says: "I won't be able to do this." Now, what is it such a person can do? He must at least say what it is that he can do. He is not being asked to build walls or dig wells. No one is asked to do such arduous work in the aashram. All tasks are easy ones. We want persons who will take up such work. It is not for the development of the aashram. It is for fulfilment of your life. The work can always be got done by wage earners without your service. But if you do that work, get involved in Karma Yoga, aim at Dharma Yoga and merge in Brahma Yoga (union with the Divine), you will have Self-Realisation. This is the teaching of Svaami. Grief follows happiness like a shadow Dear devotees! All actions should be done with a view to achieving Thrikarana shuddhi (purity in thought, word and deed). Everything is in the heart of man. Divinity is installed in the heart. A foolish person is carried away by the wealth and pomp of the outside world. The conceit that accompanies the fascination for these possessions is not recognised. Grief follows happiness like a shadow. Under the shadow of Adhikaara (Authority) flourishes the demon of Ahamkara (egotism). Do not be carried away by the lure of power. Self-conceit, which comes in its wake, will overwhelm you. Beware of its presence. Only then you will be well. Do not gloat over wealth and possessions. There is an ogress that will submerge them. That is dhurabhimaanam (self-conceit). You must take note of such dangers. When there is a lightning, you see a sudden burst of effulgence. This is followed in the next moment by intense darkness. Darkness lurks all the time behind light. Hence, man is advised to treat pleasure and pain, profit and loss, victory and defeat with an equal eye. There is nothing in the world without these opposites. This is termed Dhvaita (duality). Darkness and light, heat and cold, good and bad, sin and merit, truth and falsehood--these pairs are always there. Man has two eyes, two ears, and two nostrils in one nose. Thus the world presents a picture of dualism. And because of this, we have the phenomenon of constant" change in the Jagath (world). Jagath means that which "comes and goes" (Ja + gath).

Nothing is permanent. There is only one thing that is unchanging and eternal and that is Divinity.

To experience that Divinity man must first of all get rid of his bad qualities. He must suppress his ego and render service to the Divine along with chanting the Lord's name. That is the way to redeem one's human life. Moreover, both the chanting of God's name and rendering of service should be done with a love-filled heart.

Discourse in the Puurnachandhra Auditorium on 20-2-1993.

I am ever engaged in some activity or other for your benefit.

Things I could get done, I do not entrust to others; I do them

Myself, so that they may learn self-reliance and get experience thereby. I have always your progress, your comfort, your happiness in mind. You can note it in the slightest act of Mine. I do all work pertaining to Me. I open all letters addressed to Me and they are legion.

8. New horizons for the Sai Institute

STUDENTS! Do not be proud that you have acquired scholastic knowledge. The true form of knowledge is humility. Eschewing pride and self-conceit, pursue the right goal.

Students today are acquiring considerable scientific knowledge. It serves only to promote civilised living in the phenomenal world. But what the students need today is the refinement of the heart. This is possible only through an internal process. Students who have imbibed modern culture should not only develop their intellects, but should also develop a broad outlook.

The students today have a two-fold duty: One is to face the challenges of modern civilization, the other is to protect and preserve the ancient spiritual and cultural heritage of the country. Students should shine as ideal citizens of the nation.

A complete education is that which makes a man compassionate.

Besides giving appropriate exercises to the body, students should strive to cultivate the heart and keep it pure.

Two kinds of learning in educational system

There are two kinds of learning in the educational system today. One relates to information about various subjects. The other relates to the rectification of the individual's life. The first relates to the physical. The second relates to the spiritual. The former is concerned with earning a living.

The latter is concerned with the basic goal of life.

In the first type of education, you have opportunities to investigate various matters, and arrive at scientific truths. For instance, you find out that water is composed of two parts of hydrogen and one part of oxygen. You thereby know the composition of water. This enhances your scientific knowledge. But what is relevant from the social and spiritual point of view is how to ensure fair distribution of water among all people.

A national system of education calls for the cultivation of humility, devotion and obedience.

When students go through such a national system, they will not only manifest the inherent divinity in them, but also develop discipline. If education consisted only of scientific knowledge, the world will be a hopeless place. Scientific knowledge alone does not constitute the content of education. Character is knowledge. Character is power. Character is life itself. Character is the hallmark of true education.

Unfortunately, the student today fills his head with a lot of information, but his personality is impaired in the process. Filling his mind with physical facts and absorbed in physical investigations, he undermines his basic humanness.

Aim at cultivation of good qualities

Selflessness, humility, unostentatiousness are qualities that underlie the human personality.

Along with academic excellence, a student should aim at the cultivation of good qualities.

Education enables you to score marks, but you also need elevation of your personality. Qualities contribute to elevation. Education and elevation combine to develop the human personality.

Unfortunately, people today are only concerned about academic education and ignore the cultivation of good qualities. Today the progress of scientific and technological education has virtually destroyed the sacredness of the human personality. Even the great war leader and Prime Minister of Britain, Winston Churchill, once declared: "Man has conquered everything, but has not conquered himself." Prahlaadha reproved his father, Hiranyakashipu, by telling him that though he had conquered the three worlds, he had not learnt to conquer his senses.

Without being able to control the senses, what is the use of learning every kind of knowledge?

All knowledge is useless, if one has not acquired Self-knowledge. Such a person may be regarded as intellectually clever, but cannot be called intelligent. The first step, therefore, is to know one's Self. Spirituality is the means to acquire knowledge of yourself. Hence, as much importance should be assigned to the promotion of good qualities in the educational process as is given to academic studies.

During the past two centuries, many marvellous and even dangerous achievements have resulted from the pursuit of science. Exploiting the resources of the earth, they are boasting about their accomplishments. They have produced atomic bombs which can cause terrible destruction. Is it a sign of wisdom to boast one's capacity to destroy the world? This is a demonic power The Western nations are now worried about the consequences of their dreadful discoveries.

Vijnaana should be combined with Prajnaana

It is essential that the development of science should be accompanied by a corresponding development-of the power of Viveka (discrimination). Vijnaana (Science) is doubtless, necessary. But it should be combined with Prajnaana (divine wisdom). Prajna is the essential principle in man. This 'Integrated Awareness' in Vedhaanthik parlance, Prajnaanam has been equated with Brahman (the Supreme Absolute).

When science is combined with Prajna, discrimination follows as a corollary. By forgetting Prajna and pursuing Vijnana (science), man is making a mockery of his existence. It is not enough to make a mere man out of a person through education.

Education should aim at making him a "full man".

It is well known that the Indian economy is passing through a critical phase. But this is not so grievous a problem as the decline in morality and character. If this moral decline is not reversed, education will be utterly ruined. Students therefore must endeavour to promote morality and ethics. Without these, the entire nation will be ruined.

Four-fold formula for developing human qualities

Earning of money should not be the primary aim of students.

Education should be for developing human qualities, not for securing jobs. There are four requisites for promoting this attitude to education and life. They are: "Thyaja dhurjana samsargam" (Give up all association with the evil-minded), "Bhaja Saadhu samaagamam" (Pray for the company of the good), "Kuru punyam Ahoraathram" (Engage yourself in meritorious deeds day and night) and "Smara nithyaanithyathaam"

(Remember what is permanent and what is transient).

You should run away from bad company. A bad company can spoil even a good man. A renunciant may be turned into a covetous man. This is the effect of bad company. The ancient sages considered association with the evil-minded as companionship with a poisonous snake. It was to escape from the danger of such association that they resorted to the solitude of forests. A snake may bite a person once in a way but a bad man infects others with poison all the time. A bad man is one who is filled with bad thoughts, speaks bad words and does bad deeds.

The Mahaabhaaratha offers four examples of bad men called Dhushta Chathushtayam. The first one is Shakuni (Dhuryodhana's maternal uncle). Shakuni was all the time filled with Dhuraalochana (bad thoughts). He is a total stranger to good ideas. He was always plotting something bad for someone or other. Dhuryodhana was having Shakuni as his adviser Dhuryodhana was engaged in Dhuscharya (bad deeds). They were comrades in evil. Then came Dhushshaasana (brother of Dhuryodhana). In association with Shakuni and Dhuryodhana, Dhushshaasana became notorious for his Dhushpravarthana (bad behaviour).

When these three evil-minded men came together, "even stars, started " falling during daytime," as the saying goes. The whole cosmos rebels against such evil-minded men.

Karna, out of a false sense of Dhurabhimaanam (bad attachment), joined this trio. Gratitude is doubtless a good quality. But because Dhuryodhana came to his rescue on a critical occasion, Karna developed a wrongful attachment to Dhuryodhana. Karna was a good-natured person. He was noble-minded. But because he was associated with evil-minded men he also became a bad person. Despite his valour, physical prowess and intellectual abilities, Karna met with disaster, because he had made himself remote from God. What was the defect in Karna?

Dhurabhimaanam (misguided attachment). Four kinds of evil persons Evil thoughts, evil deeds, evil conduct-and attachment to the evil-minded---these are Dhushta Chathushtayam (the four evil persons). Hence, students should, at the outset, give up the company of bad persons. Once you have achieved maturity in moral stature, you can associate with anyone. At this stage, when your hearts are tender and your minds are not developed, you should not move freely with all and sundry. When you are spiritually immature, you should not associate with one and all equally.

These four rules should be the guiding-posts in your life. If you adhere to these four rules, you will be able to acquire all knowledge, by the grace of the Divine. This is illustrated by the story of Padhmapaadha, who acquired spiritual knowledge from Aadhi Shankara purely by his devoted service to the preceptor, without any attention to scriptural studies. Service to the preceptor was the Punyakarma (meritorious deed) which he performed all the time. This sanctified his life. While bringing the clothes of his guru from the other bank of the Ganga, the river was in spate and rose to the level of his neck. He prayed to Lord Shankara to enable him to serve his preceptor. He could reach the other bank by walking over lotus shaped slabs which appeared on the swollen river. He got the name Padhmapaadha and received all spiritual knowledge from Aadhi Shankara by sheer grace. Service to Guru sanctifies one's life. Let me relate the story of Ashvathaama, who secured the Chuudaamani (diadem) by the grace of his preceptor for his devoted service to the guru. The Chuudaamani which Ashvathaama wore on his head, saved him from being beheaded by Arjuna, who had taken a vow to cut off Ashvathaama's head for his crime of slaughtering the Upa-paandavas (infant children of the Paandava brothers). Though Arjuna was keen on carrying out his vow and took Ashvathaama before Dhraupadhi, she, out of the largeness of her heart and from the inspiration of Krishna, found a formula to punish Ashvathaama without cutting off his head. She said that if a Brahmana was kept captive in a house and sent out as free man, it was equivalent to beheading him. She also told Arjuna that it was not Dharma to kill a Brahmana who carried on his head the precious jewel given to him by his guru. Students have to bear in mind these four principles: (1) Give up association with the evil-minded. (2) Welcome the company of the good. (3) Do meritorious acts ceaselessly. (4) Remember always what is transient and what is eternal. You must remind yourselves that you are human beings and not animals. You must give no room to bad thoughts. Develop the inner vision to realise the Divine within you. This is the significance of devotees closing their eyes when they are in the inner sanctum of a temple. They pray to the Divine to open their inner vision. The unique Chancellor and Vice-chancellor In today's programme, we regard two items as important: one, a

send-off and the other, a welcome. That is not so. Both are welcome. There is no such thing as a "send-off" with Sai.

Svaami will not stand in the way of those who wish to leave. But I will not ask anyone to go.

However, during the past two years, Prof. Sampath moved among the staff and the students as among the members of the family. The teachers, the students and others lived as members of the same family. In other educational institutions, the Vice-Chancellor puts in his appearance once a year Chancellors are hardly to be seen at all. But in our Institute, even more than the Vice-Chancellor, the Chancellor is ever present.

The most amazing fact is that the Chancellor spends all twenty four hours with the students. How should they answer their examination papers? How should they face their examinations?

Speaking to the students even about these simple matters, Svaami gives them joy. In the same manner, the Vice-Chancellor also, from the morning prayer, till late in the evening, discusses their problems with the students. Prof. Sampath is a devotee. He did not come here seeking an office. To lead a sacred life in close proximity to Svaami was the sole desire of the couple Mr.

and Mrs. Sampath. Coming here, he carried on his duties, to the limit of his capacity, without any deficiencies on his part. This is his home, not mine. So everyone carried on his respective duties.

It is not merely to praise him that I say all this. He performed his duties well. That is enough.

Need for research in harnessing solar energy

Do not consider that from this day he is relinquishing his post.

Spending the rest of his life with Svaami, giving to the students the benefit of all his knowledge, he should contribute to the growth of our Institute in a unique way. He has specialized in electronics. In addition, he is interested in the harnessing of solar energy. Bhaaratheeyas revere the sun. The sun is an immense ball of hydrogen and helium. There is immense scope for harnessing a small fraction of the energy coming to the earth from the sun. My desire is that "Our Sampath" should remain here and make use of his knowledge to utilise solar power. The sun is the embodiment of effulgence.

Wherefrom does this light come? How does it come? No scientist has yet found how this light reaches us. It comes from a Divine power. The Divine is fully effulgent. He has the splendour of a billion suns. Today you are not able to make use of the energy from a single sun. How can you measure the power of One who has the splendour, of a billion suns? The solar system is like a candle to the effulgence of the Divine.

For harnessing the solar energy, with the realisation of its divine source, special efforts should be made in our Institute to develop research in electronics and solar energy. I desire that Prof.

Sampath should ascertain what arrangement should be made for this purpose and carry on his work here in the years ahead.

Raamaayana should be enacted in the Sai Institute

The new Vice-Chancellor, Dr. Hanumanthappa, has been a devotee of Svaami for the past 25 years. When the Sai College was started in Brindhaavan, he used to come all the way from the city and hold classes in Commerce for our students. Nor is that all. He has been closely associated with our educational institutions from their inception. At that time our college in Brindhaavan was affiliated to the Bangalore University. From those days he has been rendering service in various ways. He is an ardent devotee. Both the outgoing and the incoming Vice-

Chancellors should work in perfect harmony, make our Institute an ideal institution and do pioneering work in new fields for the progress of our students. They should be like Raama and Lakshmana. Our Institute should be like Seetha. When you have these three, Raama, Lakshmana and Seetha, our students will develop like Bharatha and Shatrughna. The Raamaayana should be reenacted this form and presented to the world.

What is the inner significance of the Raamaayana? "Sathyam Vadha: Dharmam Chara" (Speak the Truth and follow Righteousness). Today, these two have to be upheld. Without these two, life is worthless.

Prof. Sampath honoured

Prof. Sampath could have continued for some more time. But official regulations have prescribed an age-limit, which has to be complied with. Therefore, he had to retire. But this is only in conformity with external regulations. He will not depart from Svaami's heart. For the signal service rendered by him during the past two years, he has to be appropriately honoured. We are binding him closer to ourselves. The bonds we are placing on him are that he should impart all the knowledge he has acquired to our students and offer to the nation the new discoveries by our institutions in Prashaanthi Nilayam.

I, therefore, fasten two gold Kadiyams (bangles) on the wrists of Prof. Sampath. Sampath! we are going to bind both your hands. Hence, you will be a bondman, engaging yourself to the full measure of your capacity in Svaami's work, and rejoicing in the service you render Discourse at a special function, unique of its kind, got up by Bhagavaan Baba, Chancellor of Shri Sathya Sai Institute of Higher Learning, on 4-3-1993, in the Institute Auditorium, to honour the retiring Vice-Chancellor, Prof. Sampath, and to welcome the new Vice-Chancellor, Dr. K. Hanumanthappa.

9. Chaithanya and the 'Outcast'

ONCE, a mendicant with tattered clothes, unkempt hair and dirty body, came and stood at the threshold of Chaithanya's room and was meditating with closed eyes. On seeing him Chaithanya came out and asked him, "Who are you? You can come inside." On hearing these soft and sweet words, the mendicant opened his eyes and replied in all humility, "Svaami, I don't deserve to step into your room. I am a despicable person belonging to the caste of Chandalas (Untouchables). I am unfit to defile your sacred residence." Full of smiles, Chaithanya went closer to him and said endearingly: "My son, never say that you are mean, despicable or unworthy. Who is mean and who is sacred on this earth? All are sacred because the same God shines in every one's heart. So, please come inside without any hesitation." Power of the Lord's name erases all fears

When the mendicant was still hesitating to go inside, Chaithanya questioned him about the purpose of his visit. The visitor replied, "Svaami, I am repeatedly, chanting God's name but I feel it lacks chaithanya (spiritual power) just as a person in a state of coma has mere life without any consciousness. I seem to be mechanically chanting the Lord's name without experiencing the power of the Divine. I have come to you with the hope that if you initiate me in one of the Lord's names, it will be charged with spiritual potency and I will be benefitted by chanting such a name."

Chaithanya replied, "All the names of God are full of chaithanya (divine power). God's name is omnipotent and self-effulgent. Hence it is not proper for you to underrate the efficacy of any of the Lord's names. However, for your satisfaction, I will give you Manthropadesha (initiation into the sacred formula) as desired by you. Please step into the room." The

of the room. Noticing his plight, Chaithanya gently told him, "My son, why are you so full of fear? Freedom and fearlessness are the birth-right of every man. Freedom being your real nature, why do you give room for fear? You must recognise that the Aathmik power is behind all thoughts, and give up fear."

Saying this, Chaithanya came closer and closer to the mendicant. Seeing this, the mendicant cried out apprehensively: "Svaami, please don't touch me. If you touch me, both of us will be guilty of breach of the traditional norms of our society. I say so particularly because it is winter now, and if you touch me, you will have to take a cold water bath again and that will tell upon your health. I have accepted you as my Guru (preceptor) and since, according to the scriptures, the Guru is verily God, I shall be sinning against God by hurting you in any way. I have come to obey your commands and receive help from you, but not to hurt you in the process. Because of my sins in my past life, I am now born as an untouchable. I don't want to add to my load of sins by allowing you to touch me now'.

There is no caste for any of the five elements

On hearing this, Chaithanya remonstrated- "What a simpleton you are. You are only betraying your ignorance by observing untouchability, ignoring the divinity inherent in every being. God has no distinctions of caste and creed. There is no caste for any of the five elements, namely, earth, water, fire, air and sky, all of which have emanated from God. Irrespective of the castes, and creeds professed by men, all are equally sharing the bounties of Nature offered by the five elements. Therefore, there is no need to observe such differences of caste and creed. Come closer to me."

However, the mendicant could not shed his fear, because he had been nurturing this fear from his childhood. This shows that feelings such as fear, love, hatred etc., become ingrained in a person if he nurtures them for a long time from an early age in his life.

Chaithanya told the mendicant, "God never endows man with fear. It is one's own weakness that fosters fear, because of some short-comings in one's self. 'One who has not committed any wrong or evil act will have no fear and hence will not need any protection or security. Fearlessness is the hall-mark of divinity.

One can become fearless through thyaaga (renunciation or sacrifice). For example, if you have some valuables with you, there is room for fear. But if you give up those valuables, you will be free from fear wherever you may be, even in a jungle infested with robbers. My dear child, realise that your very nature is absolute fearlessness in all circumstances. Remain true to your nature."

Lord's name sanctifies and transforms Saying this, Chaithanya hugged the mendicant. But the latter began shaking with mixed feelings of bliss and fear, bliss because of the embrace of such a holy saint like Chaithanya, and fear because of the misapprehension that Chaithanya would be polluted by physical contact with him.

He cried out, "O Svaami, let not my sins pollute you." Laughing at this statement, Chaithanya told him assuringly: "O innocent one, you and I have now become one. We are no longer separate." So saying, Chaithanya hugged him in a warm embrace and whispered the Lord's name into his ear. The name went straight into the old man's heart, and so transformed him that he exclaimed in ecstasy, "Svaami there is no one as lucky as myself. I have now become sanctified, sacred and pure. I have got rid of my wrong notion that I am only the body made up of the five elements and have realised my true nature, because of your grace and the grace of the Lord's name which you gave me.

One's life becomes sanctified by treasuring the Lord's name in one's heart with a feeling of intense love. In the absence of such love, all so-called spiritual practices will prove futile.

Various spiritual disciplines are necessary only for the purification of the heart. Once the heart becomes pure, there is no further need for study of the scriptures or spiritual practices.

Explaining thus, Chaithanya exhorted his new disciple to give up fear henceforth. From then onwards, the mendicant became known as Haridhasa.

The moral of this story is that we should give up all differences based on one's birth and position in life and chant or sing the Lord's names with intense love and devotion. First, the Name should melt the devotee's heart; then only it can melt God's heart and draw His Grace upon the devotee.

God does not care for how long and in what ways you have practised Saadhana (spiritual discipline). What He wants is sincere, wholehearted and intense love for Him.

Discourse on 16-3-1993, when Bhagavaan chose for His theme a significant episode from the life of Chaithanya Mahaaprabhu to underline the truth that the Godly man should rise above differences of caste and creed.

Love is the vital force. Love is the governing principle. It is only when the precious diamond of love is shining in one's heart that sacred and divine thoughts about God will arise in the mind.

BABA

10. The life of Samartha Raamadhas

IN a place called Baadar in the Aurangabad district of Mahaaraashtra, a son was born to a couple highly devoted to God. He was named Naaraayana. He grew up as a naughty boy, neglecting his studies and quarrelling with other children. At the age of eight years, he lost his father. His mother Ramaa Dhevi, found it difficult to control her mischievous and delinquent son. Her relatives and neighbours advised her to get him married so that he might realise his responsibilities and change for the better.

Although the boy was only 13 years old and too young for marriage, his mother yielded to the persuasions of others and arranged for his marriage. At the time of the wedding, a screen of thick cloth was held in-between the bride and bridegroom, according to the prevailing custom, and the purohiths (priests) removed the curtain to hand over the Mangala Suuthram (the sacred thread of wedlock) to the bridegroom for him to tie it round the bride's neck. Lo and behold! The bridegroom had disappeared behind the curtain, without anybody's notice. A thorough search was made to trace him out, but in vain. So, the marriage could not be performed.

Hanumaan's blessings showered on Raamadhas

The boy Naaraayana, who had escaped from the marriage, hall, ultimately reached a place called Nasik near the source of the sacred river Godhaavari. He stayed there for sometime and then moved to a nearby mountain called 'Chithrakoota' which is considered holy, because Lord

Raama lived there for nearly 12 years. There he selected an exquisitely beautiful spot by name

Panchavati. The boy was enraptured by the grandeur of the scenery of the place, and its sanctity, associated with the stay of Lord Raama there during his exile, sent thrills of ecstasy in Naaraayana. He was always immersed in the contemplation of Lord Raama.

What was the cause for the naughty boy turning into a pious young man? Apart from the fact that his latent good Samskaaras (accumulated tendencies) were aroused by the sudden shock of the 'prospect of being saddled with the heavy responsibilities of married life, the boy, during his journey to Nasik, entered a famous Hanumaan temple enroute, and wholeheartedly prayed to the Deity to bless him with all the noble qualities for which Hanumaan was renowned. And he had an indication of his prayer being answered by way of gentle movement of the idol transmitting spiritual vibrations in the direction of the boy.

After 12 years of intense penance at Panchavati, Naaraayana gained the three-fold realisation of Lord Raama, as did Hanumaan, namely, when he had body consciousness, he was the servant and Raama the Master, when he was conscious of his being a jeeva (individual soul) he was a part of Raama (Visishtadhvaitha) and when he was aware of his being the Aathma he and Raama were one (Adhvaitha or non-dualism). Raamadhas enters the arena of social service

After this realisation, he returned to Nasik from Panchavati. While there, he came to know that the country was in the grip of a severe famine. Then he began to reflect that to spend his time thinking of only his own liberation, when all his countrymen were suffering due to famine, amounted to extreme selfishness. So, he coined the slogan, "Dhil me Raam, Haath me Kaam" (Raama in the heart, and work in the hand), and entered the arena of social service with all his energy and zeal, giving to himself and his band of dedicated workers mottoes such as: "Maanava seva (service to man) is Maadhava seva (service to God)" and "Graama seva (service to the villages) is Raama seva (service to Raama)."

He filled the tank of his heart with the holy water of Raama naam (Raama's name) which flowed through the top of his hands to quench the thirst of the multitudes of his countrymen.

Proceeding thus from village to village, doing social work, coupled with chanting of Raama naam, Naaraayana finally reached Raameshvaram at the southern tip of the Indian peninsula.

From there he went to the pilgrim centres of Thirupathi (where he had the darshan of Lord Venkateshvara) and Hampi (where he worshipped Lord Viruupaaksha). Ultimately he returned to Nasik. On the way to Nasik, he saw Saint Thukaaraam, who was singing the glories of Raama so melodiously that a large number of people including Shivaaji, the ruler of Maharashtra, were attracted to him. As Shivaaji listened to Thukaaraam, and told him about his decision to give up his kingdom and to devote himself fully and whole-heartedly to the pursuit of the spiritual path, Thukaaraam admonished Shivaaji for his narrow-minded view of spirituality and exhorted him to consider duty as God and work as worship. Thereupon Shivaaji prayed to Thukaaraam to give him initiation. Thukaaraam declined saying, "Raamadhas is your Guru, not I, so you have to receive initiation only from him." Rather disappointed, Shivaaji returned to his capital.

Shivaaji's offer to Raamadhas

When Shivaaji came to know that Naaraayana alias Raamadhas was in Nasik, he sent his Ministers and other high dignitaries to invite Raamadhas to the royal court with a band of music and other traditional honours befitting a highly distinguished personage. When Raamadhas arrived, the king received him with due honours and reverence, arranged for his stay in the palace itself, and after washing his feet, he sprinkled the holy washings on his own head and submitted to him in all humility: O revered Master! From this moment this kingdom belongs to you; and I too, am yours.

Thereupon Raamadhas replied, "My son, I am an ascetic who has renounced everything. I have neither the right nor the desire for your limited kingdom. God's kingdom is unlimited. The goal of my life is to help every one to reach that unlimited kingdom of God. So I don't want this kingdom of yours. I am now coronating you as the ruler of this kingdom which you have offered to me. From now onwards, you will be king with a difference. You should consider that the kingdom really belongs to God and that you are only "His instrument or trustee administering the kingdom on His behalf."

From Raamadhas to Samartha Raamadhas

Since Raamadhas had the extraordinary capacity to do many great things, he came to be known as Samartha Raamadhas, the appellation Samartha meaning a man of versatile skills. There is an episode in his life which describes the context in which the title of "Samartha" was conferred on him. He used to dress himself and move about like Kodhandapaani (Raama armed with his bow and arrows).

Once when he was walking along the banks of the Godhavari in this dress, some Brahmanas

who were taking bath there questioned him whether he belonged to the community of Koyas

(hunters belonging to a hill tribe were called Koyas). Raamadhas told them that he was Raamadhas (a servant of Raama) and not a Koya. Thereupon, they questioned him why he was dressed and equipped with bow and arrows like Raama if he was only a servant of Raama. They heckled him saying, "What is the use of merely trying to imitate Kodhandapaani in appearance only? Are you capable of wielding the bow and arrows as Raama did?" Just then a bird was flying fast at a great height across the sky above their heads. The Brahmanas pointed the bird to Raamadhas and asked him whether he could shoot that bird. With Rama's name on his lips, Raamadhas immediately aimed an arrow at the flying bird and brought it down right in front of the Brahmanas. Seeing the dead bird, the Brahmanas accused Raamadhas saying, "There is no harmony of thought, word and deed in you and therefore you are a dhuraathma (a wicked person); you chant Raama's name and at the same time you have committed the sin of killing an innocent bird, to show off your skill." When Raamadhas replied that he shot the bird at their instance only, they remonstrated, saying, "If we ask you to eat grass, will you do so? Don't you have your own independent thinking or discrimination?" Then Raamadhas gently replied, "Sirs, past is past. Kindly tell me what I should do now?"

Raamadhas revives a dead bird

They asked him to repent for his sin. Raamadhas promptly closed his eyes and prayed to God wholeheartedly, repenting for his sin and asking for His forgiveness. Then he opened his eyes and pointed out to the Brahmanas that the dead bird had not regained life, in spite of his repentance. The Brahmanas said reprovingly, "What a madcap you are! Repentance cannot, undo what you have done; but its purpose is to enable you to make up your mind not to repeat such misdeeds in future." "That is no repentance in my humble view," countered Raamadhas,

"God and His name are so powerful that if we pray sincerely, His grace will bring the bird back to life." So saying, he picked up the dead bird, hugged it to his bosom, and with tears flowing down his cheeks, he wholeheartedly prayed, "O Raama, if I have been chanting your name with all my mind, heart and soul and if it is a fact that I have killed this bird out of ignorance and not with an intent to kill, may your grace either revive this dead bird, or take away my life also along with that of the bird." As he concluded his prayer, the bird fluttered in his hands. Then he opened his eyes, thanked the Almighty and released the bird into the sky. Astonished at this miracle, the Brahmanas exclaimed in one voice, "Revered sir, forgive us for not recognising your greatness.

Since you have the capacity to kill a flying bird with a single arrow, and also the capacity to revive the dead bird, you will hereafter be known by the worthy name of 'Samartha Raamadhas.'

Raamadhas' visit to Pandaripuram

After this, Raamadhas visited Pandaripuram where he was an eye-witness to the ideal way in which a man by name Pundareeka served his parents as veritable gods, making Lord

Paanduranga Himself wait in front of his house standing on a pair of bricks, till he completed his service to his parents.

Then he visited Shivaaji and gave him three things as mementos to guide him in his royal duties one, a coconut to remind him that just as our intention in buying a coconut is to consume the white kernel inside, so also the purpose of owning and administering the kingdom is that the king himself should lead a saathvik life and also to ensure that the saathvik quality prevails in his kingdom; second, a handful of earth to remind the king and through him his subjects, about the sanctity of Bhaarith, their motherland; third, a pair of bricks to symbolise that just as bricks are used to construct houses for the safety of the inmates, the king should use his powers to protect the people and promote their welfare and progress.

Raamadhas' re-union with his mother

At this time the memory of Pundareeka's devoted service to his parents at Pandaripuram was revived in Raamadhas mind and he hastened back home with the idea of serving his aged mother. When he reached home, his old mother could not recognise him, particularly because of his long beard and strange dress. He told her that he was her son, Naaraayana, who was popularly known as Samartha Raamadhas. Thereupon, his mother exclaimed ecstatically, "O my dear son, I have been hearing so much about Samartha Raamadhas and have been eager to see him for a long time. But I never knew that it is the popular name of my son, Naaraayana. I am proud of you and thank the Lord for making me the mother of such a great one. My life is fulfilled." So saying she breathed her last on her son's lap.

Raamadhas duly performed the obsequies of his mother. Shortly thereafter, he heard about Sivaji's death in A.D 1680 (just six years after he was coronated by Raamadhas in A.D 1674). He went to the King's capital, installed Sivaji's son as the king and blessed him so that he might rule the kingdom, following the footsteps of his noble father.
Discourse on 19-3-1993, at Thrayee Brindhaavan, when Bhagavaan gave a detailed account of the life of Samartha Raamadhas, the great Mahaaraashtra saint.
11. Through Self-enquiry to Self-realisation
The entire Cosmos is governed by God;
God is governed by Truth;
Truth is governed by the Supreme Wise;
Such a noble one is equally Divine.
THE entire cosmos is subject to the sway of the Divine. The cosmic Divine Lord is governed, by Truth. That Truth is governed by a Uthama (supremely wise person).
Such a noble being is the very embodiment of God--- "Uthamo para Dhevatha." God is the embodiment of Time. Time is eternal. It has no end. It is boundless. As against this eternal Time, the life-span of man is very limited. Because of his limited time-span, man is bound by the passage of time in terms of hours, days, months and years. All the latter are by their intrinsic nature transient. The Lord declares: "Akshaya Kaalah" (I am the Eternal Time). It is indeed a pity that this eternal time should be considered as a fleeting moment. Man's 'actions are governed by the change in time and circumstances.
In the procession of years, the present new year is known as "Shreemukha." The past year was known as "Angeerasa." To bid farewell to Angeerasa and to welcome Shreemukha are considered a natural action among common people. Not realizing the infinite and sacred nature of Time, men set bounds to Time and bid farewell to one year and extend welcome to a new year. In this context, all actions of men appear to be artificial.
On this day; when one person meets another, he greets the other with the words: "Happy New Year!" The other man replies: "The same to you!" These words have no meaning at all. If, for one moment on one day one wishes someone happiness, will he secure happiness? People's entire lives are consumed by artificial behaviour.
Moving Time and the unchanging mind
Time is moving fast like a stormy gale. Man's life is melting away every moment like a block of ice. Months and years are rolling past in the Wheel of Time.

Everything around is undergoing change, but man's mind and Buddhi (intellect) remain unchanged.
Years are passing before our very eyes. How many eras are disappearing in our own epoch!
Eras come and go, epochs roll on, but man's mind remains as before.
What can the greeting
"Happy New Year" mean in the context of such a human predicament? It appears to be a scene in a drama on the worldly stage.
Elimination of desires leads to Mukthi
The practice of offering worship and revering elders (on New Year's Day) also appear to be artificial acts in a play on life's stage. When the source of all happiness is within you, if you go about seeking happiness from others, it is unnatural. If you desire to elevate yourself and attain a higher level, you have to adopt the appropriate means. This does not mean trying to fly like birds. What you aspire for is Mukthi (Liberation). The Vedhas declare: Liberation will not fall from the sky. Nor is it to be found in the Nether World or on the earth.
It can be got only by the elimination of desires which constitute knots in the heart.
To take an illustration from daily life: Bits of paper or pieces of cotton float in the air because they are lighter than air. Man is unable to go up spiritually because he allows himself to be weighed down by the heavy loads of his Mamakaara and Ahamkaara (possessiveness and pride).
Man is becoming heavier every day. His desires are getting insatiable.
His selfishness and selfinterest are reaching the skies. How can a heavy-loaded mind and overburdened senses help man to attain liberation? This is impossible.
A man seeking liberation cannot attain it by merely revering elders or practising meditation.
These are formal acts. By these artificial means one cannot realise the sacred, subtle and boundless experience of the Divine.
Moksha (Liberation) is not a specific place. Nor is it something that can be got from any preceptor or other person. To realise one's own true Self is Liberation. Obsessed with the external world, preoccupied with the acquisition of external objects, man's life is becoming more and more burdensome every day. Only by getting rid of these burdens can one hope to ascend spiritual heights.
Spirituality is associated today with exercises like attending religious discourses, reciting slokas, counting beads and conducting bhajans. It is imagined that by these means Liberation can be secured. This is not real spirituality. At the outset, the animality in man has to be got rid of.

Getting rid of the animal qualities, entering into the human estate, man should embark on the realisation of the Divine.

Man should be engaged in perpetual enquiry

In every man, animality, humanness and Divinity are present. Today what is happening is the growth of the animal tendencies in man. As a consequence, qualities like kindness, compassion and sympathy are not to be seen anywhere. Selfishness and self-interest are animal qualities. An animal is only concerned with external objects. It has no internal vision or any power of discrimination. Man, however, is endowed with internal vision as well as the power of discrimination.

Man, unlike an animal, is endowed with a mind, which confers on him Vichaarana Shakthi (the power to enquire into the how and why of things). Man, therefore, should undertake an enquiry into what is permanent and what is temporary, what is truth and what is false, what is bad and what is good. Only when man transcends the animal tendencies can he become truly human.

Then, his divinity will manifest in due course. This Divinity is inherent in man. It is not got from outside from anyone. It has to manifest itself from within.

Man's inherent quality is divinity. It has to be realised by him by his own efforts. The Aathmik principle is not derived from an external force. It is based on an internal source.

Man should be engaged in perpetual enquiry. He has to realise his humanness. Because of the influence of the Kali age, humanness has declined. Wickedness, immorality, cruelty and other vices are growing beyond all limits. Men are behaving worse than animals. They are harassing the innocent and the ignorant. They are behaving as demons.

Realise that the same spirit dwells in all beings

To get rid of the demonic qualities, man has to embark on self-enquiry: "Who am I?" Scriptural scholarship is of no avail in this enquiry. Aathmik bliss (Aathma-Aanandha) can be realised only by recognising that the same spirit dwells in all beings. This realisation can be got only by spiritual enquiry. Conning the shlokas of the Bhagavath Geetha will not rid a man of his sorrow.

The transformation must take place within.

Today is celebrated as Yugaadhi because it is the first day in the first month of the new year, marking the beginning of Vasantha Rithu (Spring season).

Of the four Yugas--Kritha, Thretha, Dhvaapara and Kali--the present yuga is called Kali yuga.

In truth, it is Kalaha Yuga, the Age of Discord. There is discord everywhere--between husband and wife, between preceptor and pupil, and in every other relationship. What is the reason for this discord? The absence of mutual trust. No one trusts another. As a result, hatred and bitterness are growing in the social, ethical, political, economic and every other field. There is discord even in the scientific field. The lack of trust has blinded people towards each other.

Believe in the sacred pronouncements of Vedhas

People have belief in things which should not be believed, but do not believe that which they ought to believe. People are ready to believe in the statements of the author of an almanac or the predictions of a parrot kept by a pavement astrologer or a roadside palmist, but will not believe in the sacred pronouncements of the Vedhas.

The Vedhas have declared: "Thath Thvam Asi," "Aham Brahma-asmi," "So-Ham" ("Thou art that," "I am Brahmam," "I am He"). The Vedhic dictum, "So-Ham," is confirmed by the inhaling and exhaling that go on in everyone. But no one believes in it. People believe in the films, in novels and newspapers and many other sources. But one does not believe in the truth of his own Aathma (Self). As a result, man is growing weaker and losing his humanness because of the lack of faith in his own Self. A man without Aathma-Vishvaasa (self-confidence) is no man at all.

Without self-confidence, how can he get self-satisfaction? Lacking self-satisfaction, how can he hope for Self-Realisation? This is impossible.

Hence, the mansion of Self-Realisation has to be erected on the foundation of Self-confidence, with the walls of self-satisfaction and the ceiling of self-sacrifice.

Confidence is at the root of it all. Live with faith and confidence.

Beauty of Spring is called 'Vishnupriya'

The New Year Day begins with Nature shining in all her glory, decked with flowers, with the tender leaves rustling in the wind and the cuckoo calling to its mate in mellifluous notes.

Vasantha Rithu (Spring season) has come in all its beauty and freshness. It is the season when nature presents her most beautiful and glorious appearance. The beauty of the Spring season has been dubbed Vishnupriya (Beloved of the Lord). Indeed, it is not merely dear to the Lord, it is the very form of the Lord. There are well-known sayings: "Alankaara Priyo Vishnuh" (The Lord

loves adornment), "Namasakaaro Arunapriyah" (The sun loves salutation). The Lord loves the advent of Spring when every tree is in bloom.

Today we are welcoming this Spring. But it is not enough to greet it on one day. Some people

shape of things to come. The new year should not be judged by its name Shrimukha. It is well known that there are many who belie their names. "Shri" means happiness, honour, auspiciousness. The year makes its appearance with a happy, respectful and auspicious face. But, the prospects for the year are the very opposite of what the name suggests.

Astrologers make their predictions on the basis of the relative position of the planets. The sun is expected to confer Sauryam (valour). The moon is said to confer prosperity. Rahu is expected to confer inner strength. Rohini will confer happiness. Sani (Saturn) will confer physical fitness.

But during this year, the results will be contrary to these beneficial effects.

The dangers that the country is to face

One of the consequences is the thinning of the ozone layer above the earth. As a result, there is the threat of fire disasters. There are also threats from bomb blasts of the kind you have noticed in newspaper reports. The country is faced with such dangers from man-made calamities.

These dangers can be averted if men realise the sacredness of human existence. People have to ask themselves how they are using the time that is given to them. In a year there are 3,15,36,000 seconds. How is man using these precious moments? How many seconds is he devoting to respecting elders and honouring his parents? How many seconds does he spend for earning his food? And how many is he wasting on useless activities? How many is he devoting to seeing films and T.V? How many is he spending on reading meaningless novels? And how many on studying worthwhile books? How many does he devote to God? How many to rectify his inner feelings?

If this sort of enquiry is made it will be found that the average man spends most of his time on mundane activities. Not even ten minutes or ten seconds are devoted wholeheartedly to spiritual enquiry or self-examination.

All are ostensibly engaged in the pursuit of Truth, all are devoting their time to God. They go on pilgrimages. But even in these trips, they do not concentrate their thoughts on God for a few moments. They don't make any internal enquiry.

To seek the Truth and experience God, there is no need to go out anywhere. By going to a forest or visiting temples, the inner being is not purified. Renouncing all worldly things, one must explore his inner life. This prescription of sacrifice is what the Vedhas recommended for attaining immortality.

Practice is more essential than precept

Those who claim to be Saadhaks (spiritual aspirants) are really striving for selfish ends. The Divine is omnipresent. To experience the Divine, you have to undertake an enquiry with a steady mind. People today pursue studies all their life, but hardly practise what they have learnt.

Practice is more essential than the mere acquisition of knowledge. It is not accumulation of information that is important, but the transformation of himself. Of what use is all the information you have gathered? How much of it have you put to practical use? How much bliss you have derived from it? The answer will be a zero in gathering information; a zero in putting it into practice. In this way, life is being wasted rather than being purposeful.

The first step is for each one to comprehend his true Self. In many cases, as they grow in years and study more and more books, they develop doubts. Apart from filling their minds with bookish lumber, of what use is all their studies? There is no difference between books without consciousness and minds filled with bookish knowledge. Both are equally sterile. It is a case of "living death" for both. Book knowledge without practice may be useful for teaching others, but is of no value to the man himself. A man who does not practise what he preaches is wasting other people's time. To begin with, make right use of your time. In this context, I repeatedly advise students and others to reduce their talk. Engage yourselves in spiritual enquiry and practise at least a fraction of what you learn.

Today we are supposed to bid adieu to the old year Angeerasa and to welcome the new year. But, in fact, we should not bid farewell to Angeerasa because the name suggests the presence of the Divine in every anga (limb) of our body. Welcome all the years. Don't give a send-off to any year. Develop equal-mindedness towards everything. Do not brood over the past.

The joy experienced Will be in inverse proportion to your desires. The greater the desires, the less the happiness you will experience. Therefore, try constantly to reduce your desires. In the journey of life, as in a railway journey, the less luggage (desires) you carry, the greater comfort you will have.

Meaning of true Moksha

Embodiments of Love! Recognise what holiness is associated with human life. But because of the vagaries of the senses, man develops attachments to various objects and persons entirely for selfish reasons. All the love he professes is not out of affection for others but out of self-love. If this selfishness goes, there will be real oneness. Both love and hatred will be absent. There will be Samathvam (equal-mindedness). There will be no sense of separateness. That is true Moksha (Liberation).

Moksha does not mean attaining some divine state. Divinity is within you. All you have to do is to manifest it. That which does not exist, will not come forth. That which exists will not go away.

Everything is preseat here and now. Hence, there is no need for any search or for any saadhana.

Whatever you do, do it as an offering to God. Do not make a distinction between "my work" and

"God's work." When you make a division, you give rise to enmity, because of differences. Where there is enmity, there is no room for Divinity, purity or unity.

When you install God in your heart, there is no room in it for anything else. But today's aspirants treat the heart as a musical chair. They go on from one "Svaami" to another and shift from one kind of saadhana to another. Of what avail is this kind of merry-go-round? It is a waste of time and of life itself. One heart, one-thought, one God, one Goal.. Whether you utter the name of Allah or Jesus, Buddha or Zoroaster, or Guruji (Naanak)---it is all the same. Today is sacred to the memory of Guru Naanak, who commenced the propagation of his teachings on a Yugaadhi day.

Purity, unity and divinity

We celebrate Yugaadhi today. But each one can choose his own day for celebration of the new year. God is one. All names are associated with the 'Divine. You should have no aversion to anything. You should develop this feeling of equality. Only then will you be aware of the unity that underlies the diversity.

Today, you must concentrate first on purity. For this, you have to reduce your desires gradually.

It is not practicable to give up all desires totally. But limit your desires to the essential minimum.

Do not cherish excessive or endless desires in respect of wealth or other possessions. Promote Thrupthi (sense of contentment). The discontented man loses everything. Only the contented man can experience real joy. The man with endless desires is the poorest man. The man with no desires is the richest man. The rich man can have no sleep. You must no doubt earn enough to meet your reasonable needs. But excessive wealth is undesirable. Cultivate human values

People have been listening to spiritual discourses. How far are they practising the teachings?

Without the cultivation of human values, all studies and spiritual exercises are of no use. If each examines himself, he will find how far he has failed in this respect.

Raamakrishna Paramahansa

once slapped Raani Rasmani on the cheek at a spiritual gathering when he noticed that while appearing to follow his discourse, her mind was thinking about some legal matters. Many resented Svaami Raamakrishna's action, but after his explanation, the Raani admitted her lapse.

Today no one can inflict punishment on erring devotees. Each has to examine his own lapses and correct himself.

It is not very important that you should rejoice over the advent of the New Year. You should develop new ideas and ideals. Feel your oneness with all, because the same Divine dwells in everyone. Do not hate anyone or any religion.

Embark on self-enquiry to acquire self-knowledge. For the refinement of the heart, the first requisite is seeking Sathsangam (company of the good). It is because you have assembled here that you have been able to derive the benefit of Svaami's message.

Along with good company,

you must listen only to what is sacred.

Discourse on 24-3-1993, Yugaadhi day, at Brindhaavan.

Raamaayana and Mahaabhaaratha are very sacred books, which will directly tell us about many things, especially the ways in which we have to conduct ourselves.

Raamaayana and Mahaabhaaratha will help us in our daily life, like our two eyes. We are not able to know the trite value of these jewels and we think that Mahaabhaaratha is merely a battle between the sons of two brothers, and that Raamaayana is a story wherein a demon stole away the wife of Raama and Raama again won her back. It is not like that and these two epics are like the heart and the head of India, are as vital to India as the heart and the head are to a human body.

BABA

12. The martyrdom of Mansur

ABOUT 400 years ago, there was a man by name Mansur in the city of Benaras. By virtue of his good samskaaras (inherited tendencies) and his preceptor's teachings, he had developed firm faith in the Vedhic dictum: "Aham Brahmaasmi" (I am God). When people heard him always repeating this aphorism, they questioned him whether he was really God. He used to emphatically tell them thrice, "Yes, I am God." In course of time, he became the target of envy and hatred among the prominent men in Benaras, including Vedhic scholars and heads of religious institutions. They went in a body to the King of Benaras and complained against Mansur, saying that he had no knowledge of Sanskrit or scriptures but was going about shouting, "I am God," thereby insulting eminent scholars and pandiths. The King summoned Mansur to his court and asked him, "Who are you?" Promptly came the reply, "I am God." The King got him examined by medical experts and found that he was not insane. Then the King advised him to give up saying "I am God," in view of the complaints from scholars and Mataadhipathis that he was guilty of blasphemy. Mansur firmly refused to obey the King's command and declared that he would sooner give up his life than forswear his unshakable faith and firm conviction in his oneness with the Divine. He questioned the King boldly, "Why do you want me to give up truth? The truth is: I am God; you are God; everyone is God." One with purity of heart will find God in all As he did not change his attitude despite all kinds of persuasions and threats, the King ordered that his hands should be cut off for the offence of disobeying the King. As the King's minions held Mansur tightly and raised their gleaming swords to cut off his hands, Mansur went on boldly shouting aloud: "Aham Brahmaasmi" unceasingly and smilingly. After severing both his hands, the executioners went to the King and reported that Mansur was fearlessly and smilingly repeating his declaration even after his hands had been cut off and he was bleeding profusely. The King went to the scene of Mansur's ordeal and found that the place was reverberating with the sacred sound of "Aham Brahmaasmi" coming unceasingly from the tongue of the smiling

Mansur as well as from the blood flowing profusely on the ground from his hands. In a short while, Mansur fell down dead with a smiling and calm face and "Aham Brahmaasmi" on his lips.

The King was deeply moved and he prostrated at the feet of Mansur. He sent for the scholars, priests, pandiths and heads of religious institutions who had complained against the saintly Mansur. On their arrival, he reprimanded them saying, "What is the use of your book learning?

You could not recognise or understand the greatness of Mansur. He was a man who established unity in thought, word and deed. You don't practise what you read and teach. You are all a pack of conceited, book-worms, envious of truly great persons. Misled by your complaints, I have committed the sin of virtually murdering such a saintly person. However, he has become a martyr in upholding the highest truth of "Aham Brahmaasmi." In order to teach you a lesson and to provide a source of inspiration to you and your progeny, I am building a memorial for Mansur in your Agrahaaram itself."

The criterion for true devotion is not proficiency in scriptures or routine performance of so-called spiritual practices, but the realization of the divinity in oneself as well as in all others which can be attained only through steadfast adherence to truth, purity of heart and universal love. Where there is Chittha Shuddhi (purity of mind and heart), there will be Inaana Siddhi (attainment of wisdom). One with Chittha Shuddhi need not go to the forest or pilgrim centres in search of God He will find God in himself and in others too.

Discourse in Thravee Brindhaavan on 26-3-93 relating the story of Saint Mansur, who died as a martyr four centuries ago with the manthra, "Aham Brahmaasmi" on his lips.

13. Sparks from the Divine Anvil

Bhagavaan Baba gave discourses at "Sai Shruthi," Kodaikanal, from 5th April to 26th April 1993, before a large audience exceeding three thousands including a considerable proportion of overseas devotees hailing from U.K., France, Germany, Italy, Holland, U.S.A., Latin America,

Canada, Australia and New Zealand. Produced below are excerpts from discourses delivered from 5-4-1993 to 12-4-1993.

HOSE who assemble here come for sathsang or good company so that they can advance in the spiritual path. They should shed some undesirable habits like smoking which retard their progress in the spiritual path. The fire in the cigarette is so mild that if you pile up two or three pieces of fire-wood on it that fire will be put out. But, when a huge jungle-fire is raging, it can burn even green banana plants that are thrown into it. The power of the physical body is like the fire in the cigarette tip while spiritual power is like the forest fire. Once you are advanced in spirituality even the association with evil persons may not affect you. But, when you have not developed your spiritual power you should avoid bad company just as you spit out unpalatable food even at the first taste. From concentration to meditation Devotees are generally confused about meditation. Just as you can't receive the radio programme broadcast from any station clearly unless you tune to the appropriate wavelength perfectly, even in meditation you will not get the desired communion with God until you attune yourself to the Divine perfectly. Some aspirants mistake concentration for meditation. Concentration is needed for every activity in your daily life such as reading, writing, walking, talking, eating, etc. Concentration is below the senses, contemplation is in the middle and meditation is above the senses. Meditation, in fact, is transcending the senses and the mind. During meditation, the mind is actively thinking of several things of the past, the present and the future. The thoughts are running fast. Scarcely does any one concentrate on the Divine even though one sits in the Padhmaasana (lotus pose) and closes his eyes. There is no need for sitting for meditation and wasting time in this manner. One can transform every act in daily life as worship of the Divine. Daily chores like making chappathis can be transformed into acts of worship of the Divine. Since the body is an instrument, you can make God happy through this instrument and enjoy happiness yourself in the process. In this way you practise meditation in your daily duties. Three phases of enjoying happiness There are three phases in the act of securing a desired object and enjoying happiness out of it. They are Priyam, Modham and Pramodham. Priyam is the desire to experience happiness from a particular object. Modham is the initial satisfaction derived from getting the desired object. Pramodham is the experience of Aanandha or happiness out of the object. It is not enough if you get the object which you desired to have, but you should experience the joy of using it. For example, you like to taste a mango fruit. The first phase is to buy it, the second is to hold it in hand (possessing it) and the third phase is to eat it. It is only while eating the mango that you derive the fulfilment of your desire. It is also described in the Bhagavath Geetha as Inaathum (knowing), Dhrashtum (seeing) and Praveshtum (experiencing). For instance, you hear about Sai Baba and come to know that He is at Puttaparthi, situated in Andhra Pradesh in India. You make preparations to undertake the journey to the place and have His Dharshan. The first phase is getting the knowledge about the place where He is and how to get there; the second phase is making the journey and coming face to face with Him (Seeing) and the third phase is Praveshtum, that is getting practical knowledge of and experiencing the Divinity. All the scriptures-of different religions (the Bible, the Quoran, the Geetha, etc.) explain how to reach the same goal but through different paths. Here so many of you have assembled in one place though you are coming from different countries like U.K., Italy, France, Germany, U.S.A., Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Madras, Delhi etc. Though all of you followed different routes to come to this place, all of you have the common goal of meeting here. You should realise that there is only one God who is Omnipresent, only one language, that of the heart and only one caste, that of humanity. You are all bound by one thing and that is Love. Love is God, live in love. The relationship with God breeds love alone and nothing but love. All other relationships with your mother, father, spouse or children are temporary. So you should have confidence only in the one relationship that is ever-lasting and that is with God. Excerpts from Discourse on 5-4-93. Vision should be good The paradox of human behaviour is that, having the power of discrimination to identify good and bad, man is not able to get away from bad pursuits. This is due to the weakness of the human mind, which is in turn the result of desire and anger. Take the example of Raavana, who was a great scholar and master of many arts. Raavana looked at Seetha with a bad vision. The eye is a sacred organ. Good vision generates good thoughts. In Raavana, the bad look created bad thoughts, which led to his downfall.

Desire is all right as long as it is within reasonable limits. For example, if you feel thirsty, it is a reasonable desire to seek water to quench the thirst. Not satisfied with water, if one seeks cool drinks it is tantamount to excessive desire. To illustrate the disastrous consequences of excessive desire. I will narrate a story. Once a wayfarer, who was making a long journey by foot in the hot sun, was feeling tired and sought the shade of a tree to rest for a while. It so happened that the tree was a wish fulfilling tree. Sitting under its shade, he wished for a cup of cold water for quenching his thirst. To his astonishment a cup of water was placed before him. After quenching his thirst, he felt that it would be good if he could get a bed to recline on and enjoy a siesta. Immediately a bed was provided from nowhere. Then he thought how nice it would be if his wife also was there. In a flash, he found his wife there. At this stage, he had a doubt in his mind as to how his wife, who was far away at home could come there and thought that it might be a demon in her form which might even devour him. As he thought in this manner, the woman turned into a demon and devoured him! This is the result of excessive desire, which is the enemy within you.

Excerpts from Discourse on 6-4-1993.

Will-power and Meditation

Developing good thoughts fosters the Ichcha Shakthi (will-power).

Ichcha Shakthi fosters

Praana Shakthi (Life Principle), Medha Shakthi (Intellectual power), Grahana Shakthi (Power of understanding), Nirnaya Shakthi (Power of determination) and Vaak Shakthi (Power of Speech).

One who uses one's will power in the right manner shines as a virtuous person, but one who uses it in the wrong direction becomes wicked. The will power increases as and when one reduces desires. When excessive desires are entertained, the will power declines. By reducing just one of your several habits like smoking or coffee addiction, you can experience an increase in your will power and intellectual ability. When the will power is weak, even when one sits in meditation he cannot steady his mind and it will only be a waste of time. One should reduce desires to progress in spiritual saadhana.

Excerpts from Discourse on 7-4-1993.

Ignorance is the cause of ego

Man is bound by seven types of ropes. They are (1) Dheham (body);

(2) Kaamam (desire); (3)

Krodham (anger); (4) Ahamkaaram (ego); (5) Karma (fate); (6) Ajnaana (ignorance) and (7)

Aviveka or Avidhya (lack of discrimination). Ignorance is the cause of ego, which breeds Raaga and dhvesha (attachment and hatred). For getting liberation one has to get rid of the ego, ignorance and attachment. The ego gives rise to Raaga (desire) which plunges man in Karma which, in turn, causes Janma (birth).

Ego is like an inflated football. When one is inflated with the air of ego, both the good and bad qualities kick the body. The moment ego is gone, the kicking stops and one attends to his legitimate duties with the feeling that he does not do anything but is only an instrument.

In spirituality, experience is the method of gaining wisdom while in science it is experiment.

When you put some sugar in a glass of water you can't see it or touch it as it gets dissolved. But you can find out its presence by tasting the water. Similarly you can realise Divinity, which is present in every being and within you, only by experiencing Bliss by Saadhana.

When fire on a piece of charcoal is left unattended for some time, you find that ash is covering the fire. This ash came out of the fire only because of negligence. If you blow off the ash you can see the fire. You are not bringing it afresh from outside. Similarly, Inaanaagni (the fire of wisdom) in you is covered by the ash of Maaya (illusion) which obscures it from your vision.

Just blow off the ash of Maaya, covering the fire of wisdom, by vairaagya (renunciation or sacrifice), you can realise the wisdom within you, which is constant integrated awareness.

Everyone is busy in protecting, decorating and painting the chariot of the body but does not have any concern for the charioteer. How do you expect it to move without the direction of the charioteer? The senses are the horses of the chariot of the body, the mind is the rein to control them.

The way to realise the Divinity that is in everyone is to cultivate love, which is the only divine trait. There are three sides to love forming a triangle. They are: (1) Love gives and never receives; (2) Love is fearless; (3) Love is changeless. The love that develops between a mother and child or a husband and wife is subject to change as it pertains to the body. It is only Bhrama (illusion). You should become Brahman shedding Bhrama.

The divinity in you is changeless, blemishless, without beginning or end. Just as a dhoby removes the dirt in a cloth and restores its original whiteness by washing with soap beating it on stone, man should try to regain his vision of the pure effulgent

Aathma by washing his heart in the water of love with the soap of Shraddha (earnestness) on the stone of Thyaaga (sacrifice).

This is the way to realise one's Inner Reality, which is Sathyam, Inaanam, Anantham and Brahma.

Excerpts from Discourse on 8-4-1993.

Shuka teaches Vyaasa

Air is all-pervasive. It is within you and outside as well. Similarly God is pervading everywhere in the Universe. If you look at everything with the divine feeling you will not fail to see Divinity, pure and unsullied. If you see the idol of Krishna in this hall with a divine feeling, you feel you are seeing the form of Krishna.

But if you are keen on finding out the material from which it is made, you see only the bronze or other metal of which it is made and not Krishna. You can realise that what you visualise depends on the nature of your vision--Dhrishti is Shrishti. If you look at the world with coloured glass you see everything differently and not in its real colour. The mind is the cause for feelings. If you see with the feeling that this Vishvam (Universe) is Vishnu

Svaruupam (embodiment of God), it will be so!

Every object has a Svaruupam (its own form) and Svabhaavam (its own nature). Man is completely unaware of his real nature, which is love and compassion. He is so much immersed in selfishness that he only does every action to further his own self-interest and accumulate possessions for himself. Even the love that man exhibits today towards other persons or objects is only with a selfish motive to gain something out of them and not for their sake.

Once Shuka, son of Vyaasa, wanted to leave his home and go to the forest to undertake thapas.

Vyaasa, overcome by parental attachment, entreated him not to go to the forest but to remain there and serve his parents as it was his duty to serve them.

But Shuka told Vyaasa: "Oh! Vyaasa! you are not my' father I am not your son. We came from Bliss. Everyone wants to be blissful. I am going to seek the Bliss which is our common source.

These names and forms and relationships are only ephemeral." By this he was referring to his Inner Reality which is the same in all beings.

Excerpts from Discourse on 9-4-1993.

Divine action

Everyone should remember that the purpose of human life is to do one's duty without 'regard for results, which will automatically accrue. When there is rain, water will flow in the river and one need not pray for both. It is enough if you pray for rain. Man can't live without activity even for a moment, as blood circulation and breathing are going on non-stop as long as one lives, whether one is sleeping, walking or sitting. It will be folly to attribute these natural activities to man's efforts. It is Divine action. Krishna spells this out in the Geetha: "Aham Vaishvaanaro

Bhuuthvaa Praaninaam Dehamaashrithah. Praanaapaana Samaayukthah. Pachaamyannam

Chathur Vidham." God is in every being as Vaishvaanara, aiding digesting of all types of food.

God is described as Eesha, Gireesha, Naresha, Paresha and Bilvesha. The term Eesha means sakala aishvarya sampanna (master of all types of wealth).

Aishvarya includes not only property, movable and immovable, but also strength, knowledge, skill, intelligence and prosperity. Eeshvara is the master of all wealth.

Gireesha: Gireesha means master of Girl or Hill. What does this signify? People often go to Thirupathi Hills and offer their hair in fulfilment of vows. The inner significance of this sacrifice of hair must be understood. God is not expecting your hair, which is of no value at all. Does He relish this lowliest of offerings? Certainly not! The head is the peak of the human body.

Ignorance or Thaamasik quality is supposed to be dark or black. The black hair is enveloping the peak of the human body which is the head. By removing the hair on the head you expose the white surface of the peak. This is symbolic of surrendering the dullness or Thaamasik quality.

This is an age-old practice, which is followed without comprehending its inner significance.

Since God is the master of the light of wisdom, as opposed to dullness on the head at the top of the human body, He is termed as "Gireesha."

Naresha: In the term Naresha (master of Narah) 'Na' means no, 'Rah' means ignorant of one's sacredness. Narah means 'man' who is not ignorant. He is not a sinner. He is the embodiment of pure Aathma. The Master of man is Naresha.

Paresha: 'Para' means "above all." God transcends all. He is Akhanda (limitless) and Anirvachaneeya (beyond description by words). As God transcends the three stages of time-- past, present and future and transcends space, pervading everywhere, He is termed Paresha.

Bilvesha: He is termed Bilvesha---the lover of the Bilva leaf which is having triple leaves in a single stalk, Thrinethra--one with three eyes and Thriguna---transcending the three gunas (qualifies of Sathya, Rajas and Thamas). His weapon is Thrishul, the three-pointed Javelin. One should 'offer the three qualities to God, symbolised by the offer of the triple-leaf Bilva for worship. One should do worship with full understanding of the inner significance of the rituals.

Excerpts from Discourse on 10-4-1993.

God realization

You are all embodiments of Divinity, which is within you. God is in the form of Vaishvaanara to digest your food. You listen to such teachings many times but don't practise. Instead of having tons of knowledge an ounce of practice is enough. Saadhana is essential to realise divinity. Saa means Dhaivathvam (divinity). Dhana means wealth. The acquisition of the wealth of divinity is saadhana. Saalokyam is entering the world of God; Saameepyam is going nearer to God;

Saarupyam is acquiring the feeling that you are part of God and Saavyujyam is final merging with God.

You know there is butter in milk. But you have to subject it to the process of turning into curd and then churning it to get butter. Similarly, in the pot of the body there is the milk of Divinity.

You have to churn it using Buddhi as churning rod and Bhakthi as the rope. Out of the churning, comes butter which is Self-realisation. You got it from what is already there inside you.

You should never divorce spirituality from worldly life. The cloth in my hand (a kerchief) is spirituality. It is made up of threads which represent worldly life. The cloth is there only because of the threads. If you segregate the threads there will be no cloth.

"Thvameva Maatha, Pithaa thvameva." We say, God is father, mother, friend, relative, knowledge, wealth and all. God is the energy which drives us to action. We should not waste our energy on useless things.

Excerpts from Discourse on 11-4-1993.

The senses and values

The five values of Sathya (Truth), Dharma (Righteousness), Shaanthi (Peace), Prema (Love) and Ahimsa (Non-violence) are related to different inner instruments of the body.

The value of Truth is expressed through speech or words. The value of Dharma is expressed through the body. This is related to the Annamaya kosha (physical sheath). Shaanthi can be experienced only in the mental plane--Manomaya kosha (Mental sheath). For Sathya, Dharma and Shaanthi one has to purify the instruments of speech, body and mind. This is called purity of "Mano, Vaak, Kaayam." Prema (Love) comes out of Aanandhamaya kosha (mental and bliss sheath). Ahimsa (Non-violence) comes from Bliss sheath. Prema flows as an undercurrent in all the inner instruments and purifies them. So all the five values are having relationship with the five sheaths.

Now these values are mostly absent in human beings. Thinking in one way, talking in another way, and indulging in action not related to the talk or thought is the mark of a wicked person. He may be in human form but he is to be deemed to be a demon only. Because such people are in abundance, the world is in turmoil. Sathya is full of sanctity if one deeply enquires into this value. Sath means Praana (life force). Ya means Aahaaram (food). "M" stands for Sun. It is a combination of life, food and sun. For life, food is essential and food comes from the sun. The greenery in the world subsists because of Sun's rays. It is the duty of man to make use of the food created by the Sun to sustain life. If you analyze this word Sathya in the reverse order ya stands for Yama, tha stands for thapas and sa stands for 'Sarveshvara'. It conveys the truth that by practising Yama and thapas one can realise the Almighty. Yama is not the God of death but is the five-fold discipline one should maintain. They are Ahimsa, Sathya, Brahmacharya, Astheya and Aparigraha (Non-Violence, Truth, Celibacy, Non-stealing, and Non-covetousness).

God is said to be of blue colour. It does not mean that His skin is bluish! He is Inaana Bhaaskara (the embodiment of wisdom or shining with the light, of wisdom). He is also Anantha---endless like the sky or fathomless like the Ocean. Since both are of blue colour God is also described as bluish. He is not born with blue-coloured skin. He is infinite and fathomless.

The heart of the human being is like the sky in which the 'Self' is the sun shining constantly. Just as passing clouds obstruct the vision of the sun temporarily, attachment to world and worries and troubles will obstruct the vision of the Inner Self but once the clouds clear, you can have vision of the Inner Self which is resplendent within. By means of Dhyaana Shakthi and Praana Shakthi, you can experience Divinity in the Bliss sheath, which fosters the five human values.

Shaanthi Comes from Manomaya kosha.
Sathya comes from Vijnaanamaya kosha.
Dharma comes from Annamaya kosha.
Prema comes from Praanamaya and Manomaya kosha.
Ahimsa comes from Aanandhamaya kosha.
In these five sheaths are encased three types of bodies: Sthuula (Physical), Suukshma (Subtle) and Kaarana (Causal) shareeras (bodies). Annamaya Kosha represents physical body. It is like the tyre of a lorry. If you increase intake of food it grows and the weight of the body increases.
Divinity is there in all the sheaths of the body. It is Constant Integrated Awareness in different forms in speech, action and feelings.
Excerpts from Discourse on 12-4-1993.
14. Trust in God : the Sole Protector
A person who has a compassionate heart, Whose words spell truth and Whose body is utilised to serve others
Will never be affected by any evil forces.
Such a person's life will be truly sanctified.
SANDALWOOD gives more and more fragrance when it is subjected to more and more grinding, so does sugarcane yield juice as it is chewed more and more. Gold gets refined when it is burnt and melted in fire. So also a true devotee will never falter in his love for God even when he faces troubles and obstacles in his life. God tests His devotees only to lift them up to a higher level in the spiritual ladder. A true devotee leads a sacred life which is sanctified when he faces the obstacles and problems with full faith in the Divine. The body is only for leading a sacred life.
"I am the infinite Time" says Krishna. Time has no measure, and it is unlimited, infinite. It is experienced by man in his life by dividing it into years, months, weeks, days, etc. It is only to facilitate man to pursue his daily activity that time is brought under some convenient, standard division.
God is as a spark in everyone "Mamaivaamsho jeevaloke jeevabhoothah sanaathanah." God is as a spark in every one. To recognize this Divinity man has to do some saadhana. A mirror though clean may not reflect your image if it is not having the mercury coating behind it. So also the heart may be pure but there should be the coating of love behind it to facilitate reflection of God.

There are multitudes of waves in the Ocean which are not all alike and vary in shapes and forms, but there is no difference in the sea-water that is contained in every one of these waves. Similarly names and forms of people are different but the spark of Divinity that is Sathchithaanandha is the same in every one. Every one, in fact, is an embodiment of Sathchithaanandha. When we realise this, sacred feelings will prevail and no petty ideas will arise in the mind.

God manifests in man in three forms described as, Bhur-Bhuvah-Suvah. Bhu is the padhaartha (material form). Bhuvah is Spandhana Shakthi or Praana Shakthi (Life Principle). Suvah is the form of Prajna. Prajnaa Shakthi is the radiation which, through Praana Shakthi (vibrating power) gives the material form represented by the body. God manifests in all these three forms.

The body is a combination of water, iron, lead, phosphorus and other things which are but inert matter. The body is inert but is made to function actively through vibration or the Life Force Prajnaa Shakthi (radiation) causes vibration to act. This Prajnaa Shakthi is conscience. It occupies a special place in the body. God, in the form of conscience, activates the body. If only man understands this truth of spirituality he will never indulge in bad deeds. The functioning of the body is itself a mystery.
Realise the effulgent divinity within
We use old newspapers generally to wrap different types of articles purchased in a shop. If jasmine is wrapped in the paper, the paper smells sweet like jasmine. Another person may wrap some edible like pakoda and the paper gives that smell. If dry fish is wrapped, the paper emits the smell of dry fish. Though the paper has no smell of its own it takes on the smell of the thing with which it is associated. In the same way our mind, too, gets polluted because of the illusion of body consciousness and attachment. When you think of a material object, it gets object oriented but if you turn the mind towards the Life principle it makes the life sacred. If you turn it towards the world, it is binding you to the world. If you turn it towards Awareness, which is Brahman, you become Brahman.
Embodiments of Love! If you enquire carefully you will find that the entire universe is pervaded by God: Vishvam Vishnu Svaruuopam. The human body is bound by time, karma (work) and duty. Everyone has the responsibility to do his duty. The effulgent Divinity within is not realised by man and he leads a useless life indulging in mundane pleasures.

The entire universe is made up of matter which is transient and subject to decay. Therefore, one should develop devotion to the Lord who is the permanent Reality.

Absence of self-confidence is the cause of all miseries and troubles man encounters in the world.

One should have confidence in his own inner Self that is the Aathma. If one has this selfconfidence, he will have self-satisfaction, which will lead to self-sacrifice. Self-sacrifice leads to liberation or Self-Realisation. Everything is based on "Self" and everyone is Aathmaswaruupa (embodiment of the Self). The body is just an instrument. There is water in the tumbler before me. Without the tumbler water can't be kept; the tumbler is the basis for the water which is needed to quench the thirst. So also the body is the vessel to hold the water of Divinity. To drink the water is Saadhana. Your thirst for realising Divinity is quenched by Saadhana.

Significance of the New Year "Shreemukha"

You call this day as New Year Day. There is nothing new. It is as old as any other day. We take it as a new year every time one year ends and another begins. The time is divided on the basis of the motions of Moon and the Sun. The former is called Chaandhramaana, which is followed by some people, and the latter is called Souramaana, which is followed by another section of people.

Today, we bid farewell to the year Angeerasa and welcome the year Shreemukha. Shri means very sacred. It is the highest among the eight types of Aishvaryya (wealth) of which God is described as the master. Shabda brahmamayee, Charaachara mayee, Iyothirmayee, Vaangmayee, Nithyaanandhamayee, Paraathparamayee, Maayamayi and Shreemayi are the eight-fold wealth of which Shri is the most important. In order to foster immortality in mortals it is customary to use 'Shri' as prefix to the names of males and 'Shrimathi' to those of females.

Even when God comes down to earth as Divine Incarnation such as Raama and Krishna, the prefix 'Shri' is added to their names and we call them as 'Shri Raama' and 'Shri Krishna'. The purpose is to signify the immortality of God even when he assumes the mortal human form.

God is the lighthouse for the ocean of life

The name of this year is 'Shreemukha'. The name implies that it should give brilliance to all faces. But you will not find this year as favourable as its name indicates. One should not get discouraged by these prospects. You cannot always have pleasure. Pleasure is an interval between two periods of pain. They are like sunshine and shadow. You should make efforts to look on both with equanimity.-Man wants to get all that he desires and gets disillusioned and disappointed. The lighthouse of hope for this ocean of life is God, who is the only permanent entity. This lighthouse never fails. So you should engage yourself in Godly activities with unstinted devotion.

God is omnipresent. He has hands, legs, mouth, faces everywhere and pervades the entire Universe. Where is the need to search for Him? Such a search may be termed as folly. All forms of God are in you. Any time is auspicious to realise this. You need not wait for the New Year.

There is no need for a new religion or a new culture or a new philosophy, What is needed is only a pure heart. You should not give room for impurity or pollution in the heart. You can make your life sacred by following the golden rule: "Help ever; hurt never."

Supreme Lord is the only one who can protect you Speak softly, sweetly and truthfully. There are two eyes to see different things, two ears to hear good and bad, there are two hands to do good and bad, but there is only one tongue to speak only the Truth.

Real bliss consists in sanctifying the senses. The ornament for the hand is charity, that for the tongue is truth and that for the ears is listening to divine scriptural talks. What other ornament is needed than these! "Aanandhame Andhamu" (Bliss is beauty). It is the nectar of life. You should enjoy the sweetness of bliss.

Embodiments of Divine Aathma! Spend your life in cherishing sacred thoughts, listening to good things, speaking good words, and doing good deeds. If all of you adopt this path, happiness and prosperity will reign in the world. No government or politician or any one in the world can protect you from troubles and disasters. There is only one who can protect you and that is Supreme Lord. To seek His protection, all of you must wholeheartedly pray "Lokaassamasthaas- sukhino-Bhavanthu" (Let all people in the world enjoy bliss).

Discourse at Sai Shruthi, Kodaikanal, on 14-4-1993.

15. The juice, the sugar and the sweets

EMBODIMENTS of the Divine Aathma! From ancient times, the culture of Bhaarith has been upholding high ideals. Foremost among its teachings was the concept of reverence for the mother and the father as embodiments of the Divine. "Maa thru Dhevo Bhava! Pithru Dhevo Bhava!"

(Esteem the mother as Divine, adore the father as Divine).

Human life is indeed extremely sweet. Without this sweetness, life will be worthless. Man struggles in a myriad ways to secure sensual enjoyment, but there is sweetness which transcends these physical pleasures. This is the precious fruit of Bhaarithheeya culture.

Realise the sacredness inherent in motherhood

The mother sacrifices her all for rearing the child, protecting him and bringing him up well.

Hence, the sweetness manifest in material love cannot be found in any other object or experience, "What greater sweetness is there in our land than a mother's love? One's honour is greater than one's life," goes the saying. Everyone should realise the sacredness inherent in motherhood.

When Rama went to the forest with Seetha, one day he told her: "Bhujatha! In this world there are no greater adorable deities than one's mother and father. When one has near to him a loving mother, who cares for him continually and fosters his well-being, without adoring her as Divine, how can a man contemplate on a Being that is subtle and beyond his daily experience?

The Divine transcends all human understanding. How can this be recognised? People who cannot comprehend the hearts of parents who are close to them, whose love they experience in daily life, how can they comprehend the Absolute, which the Upanishaths declare is beyond the reach of speech and the mind? Hence, the injunction that the mother and the father should be adored as Divine. It was my foremost duty to carry out the will of my father."

However, if we wish to understand the Divinity that transcends the human understanding, we should seek to reach a level above the human. Till that is reached, we have to experience everything at the human level alone. Living as a human being, how can one recognize That which transcends the human capacity?

Therefore, in the first instance, man must try to live as a human being. He has to recognise the divinity that dwells in the human form. Man has to cultivate faith in the truth and live accordingly. Leading a life of dedicated service, man must enjoy the fruit of Prema (Divine Love). The best way to love God is to love all and serve all.

Saami was telling the students the previous day that though the Divinity that resides in all human beings is one and the same, the capacities and personalities of various individuals are different. Depending on the ripeness of their experience on the cultural practices they have pursued, on the nature of their spiritual disciplines, and on their parental background, these individuals have a wide or narrow outlook. The attitudes of individuals are determined by their day-to-day experiences. Hence, people should engage themselves in good deeds. Only through hard striving can the Divinity in man be realised, like the fire that emerges from the rubbing of two sticks and butter from the churning of butter-milk.

Aadhi Shankara's Adhvaitha

Aadhi Shankara, at the age of five, after the performance of his Upanayana (spiritual initiation) ceremony, approached his preceptor and within three years was able to master the four Vedhas and the six Shaastras. Through earnestness, anything can be accomplished. From his studies, Shankara realised that Ekathvam (oneness) is the essence of all knowledge. This is the doctrine of Adhvaitha. "Ekameva Advitheyam Brahma" (The Absolute is one alone, not two). There is no second, but there is the appearance of an enormous multiplicity. How, then, can oneness be claimed? Here is an example. You have the number one and the number nine. Of the two numbers which is the bigger? The natural answer will be nine. But this is not so. One is really the bigger number 1 + 1 + 1 + 1 up to nine, make up nine. Hence, the Vedhas declare: "Ekoham bahushyaam" (I am One; I willed to be many). Only the one exists. But it has assumed numerous forms. Shankara declared that Anekathvam (the many) is subsumed by the one this is the unity in diversity. There may be many stalks of sugarcane, but the juice from all of them has the same sweetness. Beings are many, but the breath is the same. Nations are many, but the earth is one.

In this manner, Shankara proclaimed to the world the unity that underlies the apparent diversity.

He used the analogy of the same sweet juice that is present in all sugarcane stalks.

Vishishta-Adhvaitha and Dhvaitha

Raamanuja asked the question: "How long can the sweetness of the juice last?" Not for long. If the sugarcane juice is converted into some other lasting form, it could be used for sweetening many things. The conversion should be in the form of sugar, which could then be used for making any sweet preparation. Without the sugarcane juice there can be no sugar. The sugarcane juice represents the Adhvaithic principle and sugar represents the Vishishta-adhvaitha principle.

Then came the declaration of Madhva: "Pishtaadhi gunasamparkaath." The variety of sweet preparations is the result of the bringing together of Pishta (flour) and sugar. Without some kind of flour, the sugar by itself cannot appear in different forms. Flour of the sort or another, combined with sugar, can serve to produce any number of sweets.

However, it is not the flour that is the source of sweetness. It is the sugar in the sweet that is made out of the flour which accounts for the sweetness. This is the analogy employed to explain Dhvaitham (the dualistic doctrine).

Common sweetness in all the philosophies

Shankara, as the exponent of Adhvaitha (Nondualism). Raamanuja as the exponent of Vishishtaadhvaitha

(Qualified Non-dualism) and Madhva, as the expounder of Dhvaitha (Dualism), stood out as great teachers who taught the path of spirituality to the world.

However, there is common sweetness in all the three schools of philosophy.

Shankara insisted on the recognition of the unity that underlies all diversity. "Eesha, Gireesha,

Naresha, Paresha, Bilvesha namo Saamba sadhaashiva Shambho shankara sharanam mey thava charanayugam," declared Aadhi Shankara, in praise of Shiva. In listing the different attributes of Shiva, the Aachaarya declared that Shiva is everything, by whatever name He is called. Thereby, the omnipresence of the Lord is proclaimed.

The Adhvaithic doctrine of Shankara propagated the view that bodies are manifold, and in these separate bodies the one Divine is present. With regard to Adhvaitha, however, it is possible only to experience it as bhaava (a conscious feeling), but not to apply nondualism on carrying out one's activities in daily life. There is the divine in a tiger, a snake and a human being. You can recognise this as a concept, but on that account, you cannot go and embrace a tiger. The tiger must be treated as a tiger and a snake must be treated as a snake. The human being must be given the status that is appropriate to the human. You must have the faith that the same Divine dwells in all beings. This is indicated by the presence in all beings of three divine characteristics: Asthi, Bhaathi and Priyam, (existence, recognisability and utility). This is also expressed in other terms as: Sath-Chith-Aanandha (Being-Awareness-Bliss). Sath refers to That which is unchanging.

This is a Divine attribute. Chith refers to total Awareness to know the complete nature of anything. When Sath and Chith are together, there is Aanandha (Bliss). This Bliss is unchanging.

It is described as Brahmaanandham (Supreme Bliss). It is like mixing sugar with water, resulting in a syrup.

Sath-Chith-Aanandha (Being-Awareness-Bliss) is Divinity that is unchanging. Forms and names are continually changing. They are transient and momentary. The forms of tiger or a snake are impermanent. They have, therefore, to be dealt with as transient.

If you sustain a fall, your foot may suffer a fracture and you may have a bandage. But irrespective of the love your mother bears for you, she cannot bandage her leg to relieve you of your pain. She may feel sympathy for you, but she cannot take over your fracture by bandaging her leg. In the phenomenal world, such differences are inherent.

Discourse at Kodaikanal on 26-4-1993.

16. What great mothers mean to the nation

The father, to teach the child the truth,

May chide, reprove or beat.

The mother may pinch the cheek

To make the child drink the milk.

Forget not at any time

These marks of paternal Love.

Doing good deeds, one will never reap bad results;

Wickedness will never yield good fruits;

Will the neem seed produce mango fruits

Or the mango seed yield neem fruits?

EMBODIMENTS of Love! The earth is one. But, if you sow neem seeds, you will get only bitter fruits. If you plant sweet mango seeds, you will get sweet mangoes.

The earth makes no difference between them. Only the differences in the seeds account for the differences among the fruits. Likewise, the womb of a mother is like the womb of Mother Earth. The thought which prevails at the time of conception results in the kind of child that is born. If the parents desire to have virtuous, exemplary and noble children, they have to observe righteous practices and lead virtuous lives.

Mothers should possess good qualities

It was because Aryamba was a devoted and pious woman and observed sacred practices that the great world-teacher, Aadhi Shankaraacharya was born to her. For Vivekaanandha to achieve world wide renown, his mother's sacred life was responsible. Raamakrishna Paramahansa was able to preach the sacred doctrine of love to the world and achieve greatness because of his mother's good qualities. Gaandhi earned the appellation of "Mahaathma" because of the sacred "Kokila Vratha" observed by his mother. Gaandhi's mother used to observe everyday a vow ritual known as "Kokila Vratha". As soon as she completed the ritual, she would wait for the call of the Kokila (the Indian cuckoo) to have her breakfast. However, on one day, she waited for a long time, without taking food, for the call of the cuckoo. Noticing this, the young Gaandhi went out of the house, imitated the cooing of the cuckoo and then told his mother, "Now that the cuckoo has made its call, please, mother, take your food." Unable to contain her grief, the mother slapped on the cheeks of Gaandhi and wailed: "What sin have I committed that such a liar should be born to me! What a great sinner am I to have begotten such a wicked liar as son, Oh Lord!" She was shedding tears as she spoke. Deeply moved by his mother's words, Gaandhi made a promise to her "In my life, henceforth, I will not utter falsehood." In those days, the mothers used to watch the behaviour of their children and strove to keep them on the right path. Gaandhi became a 'Mahaathma' because of the severe punishment meted out to him by his mother. Gaandhi's mother Putlibai, had a maid called Rambha. One day; Gaandhi came running to her saying: "I am afraid, I am afraid!" Rambha was a worthy maid of Putlibai. She told the young fear-stricken lad: "Don't have any fear. Whenever you feel afraid, repeat the name, 'Raam, 'Raam,' and your fear will leave you." That teaching was remembered by Gaandhi all his life and he died with the name of Raama on his lips. As is the seed, so is the plant. Mothers of those days led a pure and pious life, cherishing sacred thoughts, fostering virtues and setting an example to the world. Parents today get up from their beds quarrelling with each other. When the parents wake up hurling abuses at each other, the children wake up levelling blows at each other. As is the seed, so is the plant. Parents today should ponder over the sacred ideas cherished by parents in the olden days. For all the bad ways followed by youth today, for all their wayward behaviour and bad conduct, the parents are to blame. If the mothers are good, there will be no room for bad behaviour by the children. Although parents may appear innocuous like fig fruits, they are responsible for the misbehaviour of their children, like the worms inside the fruits. Will of the Divine in shaping the children. However, in some cases, through the grace and intervention of the Divine, some children are rescued from going astray and are guided on the right path despite the desires of their parents. 'For instance, King Shuddhodhana adopted many methods to prevent his son Siddhaarth (who became The Buddha) taking to the path of Vairagya (renunciation). But he could not prevent it. This is due to the Will of the Divine. It is only when human effort and Divine Will are in unison that the great consummation takes place. Ranthideva declared, "Jeevanam Sarva-bhuuteshu." He proclaimed the truth that he who regards food as the primary thing in life is ignorant, while the wise one is he who regards the Spirit as primary. How many of those who have plenty of food taken to wrong ways? Even with abundance of food, lacking the spiritual urge, these men have become destitute. Food may sustain the body, but it will not nourish the soul: Chaithanya, the son of Satheedhevi, once went to Puri and had dharshan of Lord Jagannaath. He worshipped Jagannaath with these words: "Oh Lord! You are not merely the Lord of the earth. You are the Lord of the Universe! You are the Lord of Life!. You are the Lord of Love! Svaami! I do not need wealth or vehicles. Even less do I seek devotion, wisdom or renunciation. I do not aspire for worldly pleasures or possessions. It is enough if I am endowed with the love to love you. If I have that love, all other things will come of their own accord. The only thing I seek is love towards you. Grant me this boon." Young people do not realise that there is this Divine spirit in human beings. They consider human existence as nothing more than living like birds and beasts. This they consider as the primary purpose of life. This is wrong. They should realise that beyond the Annamaya, Praanamaya, Manomaya and Vijnanamaya koshas (the physical, the vital, the mental and the supramental sheaths associated with the body), there is the Aanandhamaya Kosha (the Sheath of Supreme Bliss). When do you attain this Bliss? The real meaning of Mahaaraaja He is not a great ruler who possesses all kinds of wealth. The real Mahaaraaja (great ruler) is one who has surrendered everything to the Divine. He is a thyaagi (renunciant), he is a yogi (one who is in communion with the Divine). It is for this reason that in Uttar Pradesh, whatever sacred shrine you visit, you will find pilgrims greeting the saadhus and ascetics as Maharaaj. They are hailed as Maharaaj because they have renounced everything, taken refuge in the Lord, sought to merge in the Lord and practised spiritual disciplines for this purpose. Chaithanya declared: "My property is not 'Shri' but 'Hari'. I value not Lakshmi (the Goddess of Wealth), but the Lord of Lakshmi (Vishnu)." If you aspire for the Lord, you will not suffer from any want. There is no greater wealth than love of the Lord. What gift is greater than the gift of food? Is there a greater deity than one's parents? What virtue is greater than compassion? What is more valuable than good company? Is there a worse enemy than anger? Is any disease worse than debt? Can any death be worse than infamy? What can be grater than a good name? What wealth is greater than God's love? It is to acquire this supreme wealth that man has taken birth on earth. There have been many mothers in the world who have sought, by their strenuous endeavours, noble thoughts and sacred practices, to bring up their children in the path of righteousness. In the city of Calcutta, there lived a mother and his son. For the education of the son, the mother made many a sacrifice. She, however, impressed on the son one lesson: "Dear son, do not be concerned about worldly education. The foolish ones acquire all kinds of scholarship, but have no understanding of what they are. By study alone, a man does not get rid of his lowly ways. Through scholarship, one learns only to engage himself in controversy but does not acquire complete wisdom. Why pursue studies which end up only in death? One should study that which frees him from death. Only spiritual knowledge can lead to immortality. It is enduring. Worldly knowledge is temporary. For earning one's livelihood, worldly education is necessary. But this education should be acquired only to lead an independent life, with limited desires. Therefore,

dear son, while pursuing studies, embark also on the spiritual quest." Human life should be used for service Prahlaadha told his father that he had learnt the essence of all education, namely, to adore the name of Naaraayana. For the realisation of the four Purusharthas, there is no need for any education. Maithreyee told King Janaka that there was no purpose in having a human birth, only to lead a sensuous life like that of birds and beasts. Human life should be utilised for service and sacrifice. The mother taught her son in this manner the true aim of education. The boy completed his education and took up a small job. One day, in that village, there was a folk festival (Jaathra). The womenfolk of the village donned their best clothes, and jewellery to attend the festival. The mother also went with tattered clothes. The son could not bear to see that sight. He said: "Mother, you have no good clothes or any jewellery. I am distressed to see you like this. Please let me know what ornaments you wish to have, mother!" The mother replied: "This is not the right time. I shall let you know at the proper time." The three ornaments sought by the mother Thanks to the good behaviour and diligence of the lad, he rose to higher positions in service. Once again, he returned to his mother and asked what ornament she desired. "I shall get them as far as I can," he said. The mother told him that she wished, three ornaments, but she would disclose what they were later on. The son in the course of years reached a very high position. Once again he entreated: "Mother, I have now some money. Please let me know what jewels you would like. I shall get them for you." The mother said "Dear son! I am now not in a state when I can wear jewels. However, there are some ornaments in which I am interested and I shall tell you what they are. Drawing the son nearer to her, she said, "In our small village, I am grieved to find that the children have to go to distant places for education. My first ornament I desire is that you should set up a primary school in the village. Secondly, our people have no facilities for medical relief even for small ailments. I spend sleepless nights thinking about their plight. If you set up a small hospital for the village folk, that will be your second ornament for me. The third ornament is something which you have to do by yourself. In the days to come, your reputation may grow. If anybody asks "who is your mother?" you may mention my name.

Your conduct must be such that you will uphold your mother's name. You must share with others the benefits of the education you have received. Do not go after wealth. The worshipper of Mammon will not yearn for God. The seeker of God will not seek for wealth. Observance of this is the third ornament I desire from you."

The young man who heard these words from his mother and later became famous and earned the people's esteem was none other than Eeshvar Chandhra Vidhyaasaagar. He earned a great name in Calcutta.
The hall-mark of education is humility
Once he was proceeding to a neighbouring village to deliver an address. People used to gather tin large numbers to listen to his lectures. A young officer, who wanted to listen to Eeshvar Chandhra Vidhyaasaagar's lecture, got down from a train with a suitcase to go to the lecture-hall.
Eeshvar Chandhra Vidhyaasaagar also get down from the same train. The young officer was calling for a porter to carry his suitcase. Eeshvar Chandhra went to him and said, "Why do you need a cooly to carry this small suitcase? Can't you carry it yourself and save the money?" He replied. "It is not in keeping with my dignity to carry my suitcase. I am an educated person."

Eeshvar Chandhra told him: "The hall-mark of education is humility, not pride. If you cannot carry your own bag, how are you carrying your body? If, however, you cannot carry your bag, I shall do so." And Eeshvar Chandhra carried the officer's bag. He acted on the motto: "Plain living and high thinking." Eeshvar Chandhra left the bag where the officer got off. The young man wanted to offer money to his "Porter". Eeshvar Chandhra told him. "To serve you is my reward."
The young officer left and was later proceeding to the venue of the meeting. There people were offering garlands to Eeshvar Chandhra Vidhyaasaagar to welcome him to the meeting. The young officer realised that the man who had offered to carry his bag at the station was none other than the respected lecturer of that evening, Eeshvar Chandhra Vidhyaasaagar. He felt ashamed that he had made such a great man carry his bag. He reflected: What is his education and what is mine? I have behaved like a little monkey. I am like a glow-worm before the Sun."
The joy of the mother

Eeshvar Chandra's mother shed tears of joy when she realised the great fame her son had achieved. "Having begotten such a son, my life has been redeemed. It does not matter what happens to me hereafter," she said to herself. That is why, the saying goes: "The father does not rejoice merely at the moment of a son's birth." These days, the petty-minded people celebrate the birth of a son with the distribution of sweets, etc. This is not a sign of wisdom. It is said: "The father rejoices when people praise his son for his great qualities." The father may feel that a son has been really born to him when he hears the praises of his son for his character and good qualities.
The Kali age has become the Kalaha age
In this manner, from ancient times the relations between mother and children have been hallowed as a result of the purity, the virtue and the integrity of the children. The relationship was full of love, mutual esteem, intense devotion and nectarine sweetness. The children had deep love for the mother Today the children have no respect for the mother Mothers have also little concern for the children. With the result, the Kali age has become Kalaha age the age of discord.
Who are responsible for this situation? The mothers are the root cause. It is because of the pampering of the children in all sorts of ways by the mothers that the children tend to go astray.
After the Burma war (in the Forties), a mother and her son came to Madras as refugees. This son used to go out begging for food and bring it home for both of them to eat. Seeing the pathetic condition of the young one, the mother said that from the next day she herself would go out for getting food, leaving the boy in the shed. Moreover no mother would like to see her son going out as a beggar. For this reason also she decided to go out herself. For some days she went out begging, but could manage to get only a small amount of food. She gave the food to the child and starved herself, but told him that she had already eaten. After some time the woman was too weak to go out begging. The son started going out to beg for food and kept feeding his mother.
Her condition deteriorated from day to-day. She could not bear the pangs of hunger. The son went out and begged for food at an officer's residence. The officer, who was glancing through the day's newspaper, heard the boy's cry for food to appease his hunger.
The Officer brought some food and gave it to the boy and asked him to eat it in his presence. The boy said he would not eat there, but take the food home. The Officer questioned him why he would not eat there when he was hungry. "You are not really hungry. You are lying," shouted the officer. The boy was too weak to stand and dropped down at the feet of the officer with the food in his hands. The officer noticed that the boy was muttering some words to himself. He went close to the boy's mouth and heard him say: First for mother, first for mother." Saying those words, the boy passed away. Children should abide by mother's injunctions. What an example is this of the love of a mother and the devotion of a son. Even though he was hungry, he wanted to give the food first to his mother. Does this kind of feeling exist even a little among students today? Of what use is education or office, wealth or authority? Children who have no love for their mothers have no reason to live at all. We must have children who revere the mother as God. Abiding by the mother's injunctions, you may do anything. Bhaarath has become a prey to numerous troubles because of the lack of exemplary mothers. What is it the mothers ask for today? Not compassion, good character, integrity and such virtues. They want their children to get educated, secure a big job, marry a wealthy girl and lead a comfortable life. Is it this kind of animal existence that one should seek? "Earn a good name. Become an ideal son. Use your wealth in righteous ways. Develop compassion. Lead a just and moral life." This is what mothers should impress on their children. Such high-minded mothers have become rare these days. Integrity and morality are going down day by day in the country. Nation needs mothers who lead an exemplary life. The nation needs noble mothers who lead an exemplary life. They should manifest in their life the great culture of Bhaarath. Then, the culture will be transmitted to their progeny. Many great men in the past brought up such worthy children and enhanced the name and glory of Bhaarath. Today the children are being spoilt only by the parents. If the children are brought up on right lines from childhood, they will grow up properly. The fathers today are behaving like Dhritharaashtra (the father of the wicked Kauravas). The mothers today are behaving like Kalakanthi (the woman who had Chandhramathi's son bitten by a serpent). The fathers, instead of chastising children who take to wrong ways, pamper them and encourage them. Children who misbehave should be severely dealt with. Youth today are forgetting God, revelling in sensual pleasures and ruining their lives. They have no reverence for the mother or the Motherland. After the war in Lanka, when Raama was entreated by Vibheeshana and others to crown himself as ruler of Lanka, Raama told them that the mother and the Motherland were greater than Heaven itself and nothing on earth would tempt him to give up his love for Ayodhya. How many today are observing the great teachings of Raama regarding love of the Motherland? There are today many sons who will deprive their mothers of their earnings and spend the money for their own pleasure. Are such sons human beings? They are not human at all. Their education is a waste. Of what use are they to the nation? Develop healthy patriotism. Students today should develop a healthy patriotism. They must honour their mothers. Only then will they be ideal men. Today corruption and dishonesty are more rampant in cities with universities, high courts and all other paraphernalia than in forest areas where illiterate tribal people live. There is greater co-operative spirit among the hill tribes than among the denizens of metropolises. The spirit of sacrifice should grow among students. They should develop a broad outlook. Once Raama told Seetha, while they were staying on the Chithrakootha mountain, that as few could comprehend the subtle principle of Divinity, people should adore their parents as the visible embodiments of God. Only when there are good mothers and good sons will the nation be free from troubles. Otherwise, the nation will break into pieces. This is the lesson of the Mahaabhaaratha where the wicked Kauravas brought ruin upon their entire clan by their evil ways. What the nation needs today is not material prosperity or high education. It needs men and women of character. The people should develop faith in God, have concern for the good name of society, cherish fear of sin and dedicate themselves to Godly activities. Then the nation will enjoy peace and security. Every mother should be regarded as an embodiment of the divine. Then every son will enjoy peace and prosperity.

Discourse in the Sai Ramesh Mandap, Brindhaavan, on 6-5-1993, Easwaramma Day.

The act of service is not to be judged according to the cost or publicity it entails; it may be only the offering of a cup of water in the depth of a jungle. But, the need of the recipient, the mood of the person who offers--these decide whether the act is gold or lead.

17. Man, the mind and the Aathma

STUDENTS and Teachers! Man struggles hard ceaselessly night and day for the sake of bodily pleasures. One who recognises that the Aathma (Spirit) is distinct from the body will not be a prey to any troubles. If, indeed, every person in the world recognizes the nature and purpose of human existence, these difficulties will not arise. The Upanishaths declare that if one, who is born as a human, grows up as a human in society, does not know the meaning of the term.

maanava (man), he is worse than birds and beasts.

Humanness is a marvellous thing. It is boundless. It is significant. The term "man" does not refer only to the physical body. A human being is a composite of body, mind and Aathma. To perform with the body, to understand them through the mind, and to have the Aathma as a witness to both these---these three constitute Maanavathvam (human existence). Action, Awareness and Realisation--these three manifest the inner meaning of human life.

It is a sheer ignorance to equate human existence with the body alone. Students have to understand at the outset how a man should grasp the nature and aim of human existence and have to lead a meaningful life.

First of all, there is the mind. Only the one with a mind can be called man. "As a man thinketh, so he becomes."

The five sheaths that envelop man

Man is enveloped by five sheaths: Annamaya (Food), Praanamaya (the Life Force), Manomaya

(the Mental), Vijnaanamaya (the Integral Consciousness) and the Aanandhamaya (the Blissful).

The physical body is sustained by food. Hence it is called sthula shareera (the gross body).

Next comes the Suukshma shareera (subtle body) which is covered by three sheaths of Lifeforce.

Mind and Integral Consciousness. This subtle body is the basis for the pleasures and pains experienced by man. All experiences of man are based on this subtle body.

Next comes Aanandhamaya Kosha (the sheath of Bliss). It is the base for the entire Cosmos. The Cosmic Consciousness that is present in the bodily sheath is called

"body consciousness." This means that even in the gross body, Chaithanyam (consciousness) is present. The consciousness that is present in the Praanamaya Kosha (The sheath of the Life Principle) not only indicates the life-principle, but also proclaims the basis of the vital force.

The third is the Aathmik Principle, which illumines the mind---Manomaya Kosha. The fourth is the consciousness in the Vijnaanamaya Kosha. This is the basis for the entire Cosmos. It is called

Chith, the all-pervading Cosmic Consciousness

Transcending all these is the Pure Divine Self--the Supreme Purusha. This is the source of all power. It is the embodiment of the Infinite Will. This is the power that protects the Cosmos. The ancient sages strove to explore the nature of the Aanandhamaya Kosha (the sheath of Bliss).

They sought to discover how they can experience Bliss.

Maanava means Aathma

To begin with, the meaning of the term Maanava (man) has to be properly understood. It means Aathma (the Self). It is from the Aathma that the five basic elements (ether, air, fire, water and the earth) have emerged. Man has brought under his control these five elements. Thereby he has become their master. Failing to comprehend the basic nature of human existence, man today has become a slave of his senses. The Vedhaantha has declared that one can know everything if he knows his own reality. To discover who you are, you have to rid yourself of the external vision.

All the experiences based on the sense perceptions are external impressions. These are merely reflections of internal responses. To regard these as real and permanent and to ignore the Divine, which is the permanent entity, is the cause of man wasting his life. Hence, man has to utilise the mind to realise his divinity.

The mind is the cause (bestower) of man's joys and sorrows. It is also the means of man's Mukthi (liberation). It is the mind which leads man to progress from the human to the Divine and forget the ephemeral world. The very name, Nara, for man implies that he is imperishable. This is the Aathmik truth of man. Man, therefore, is not the body, but the immortal Self.

Four levels of functioning of the mind

The mind functions at four different levels. The first is Super Mind. The second is Higher Mind.

The third is Illuminated Mind. The fourth is Over Mind. Man can comprehend his real human nature only when he understands these four states of the mind.

Super-Mind: An internal enquiry has to be made to understand this. This calls for turning the external vision inward. When this is done, it is realised that the physical body is inert. The mind is a reflecting mirror. The Buddhi (Intellect), Chittha (Will) and Ahamkaara (Ego) are aspects of the mind. All these are subject to change. But they are based on something that is unchanging.

The first conclusion to be drawn from the internal enquiry is that there is an unchanging divine entity in man.

From this realisation, one proceeds to the awareness of a Cosmic Divine. This realisation comes out of the recognition that the Divine Consciousness experienced by the individual is also present in all other individuals. This is the Cosmic Power. The all-pervading Divine Power is one and the same. There is no second power. Bodies may be multifarious like electric bulbs. But the energy that makes them shine is one. When this truth is realised, you have the awareness of the Cosmic Divine.

It is not enough for one to realise his true Self. He cannot seek his individual salvation. He must experience the oneness that underlies the multiplicity in creation. Only when that oneness is realised can the true meaning of humanness be understood.

At present, all man's endeavours and enquiries are limited to exploring the physical, the vital and the mental. The journey ends there. Man has proceeded only upto the mind. But he has to go beyond it to the Over-Mind.

How far can the mind take you? It can take you upto the extent comprehending the Jagath (physical world). The mind is needed for understanding the variety of physical objects and phenomena in the world.

But as long as man confines himself to the powers of the mind he remains as a human being.

But, to rise to a higher level, he has to become Amanaska--one who transcends the mind. He should progress towards the Super-Mind.

The limitless potencies that man possesses

The Super-Mind is related to the Suukshma shareera (subtle body). In the subtle body, the senses, the mind, the intellect, the will, the ego and the physical body are absent and only Chethana-shakthi (consciousness) is present. One has to proceed further to the Kaarana shareera (the causal body). The Causal body contains the power which can control the body, the senses, the mind, etc.

This means that man possesses within himself all potencies, man's powers are limitless and astonishing. Nothing in the world is beyond his comprehension. Man today appears as a highly knowledgeable and vastly capable being. But these capacities only proclaim his powers over the physical forces of Nature. There is, however, an unseen, unknown, unmanifested infinite power within him. This is the Cosmic Power in man. It is all-pervasive. It is in every human being.

Only when one goes by the form, there is an apparent distinction between the microcosm and the macrocosm, like the difference between the air in a balloon and the air in the vast atmosphere outside. But when the balloon bursts, the small air inside becomes one with the infinite air outside.

Human bodies are like the balloon. The infinite potency within each body is regarded-as infinitesimally small. But this potency is a part of the universal Cosmic power.

"Aanoraneeyaan Mahathomaheeyaan" (minuter than the atom and vaster than the vastest), declares the Upanishath. But the power in both is the same.

However, though the thoughts of the mind, the actions of the body and the role of the Aathma as Witness appear as disparate, yet they are all integrally interrelated. The differences are in form, but the bliss that is experienced is one. Hence, the Upanishaths declared the truth of the One in the Many.

Humanness and divinity are same

Humanness is not separate from Divinity. Both are one. So, in the second stage, when you develop a broad vision, you experience the feeling of the oneness of the individual, of the Universe and God. This is called the Divine Universal Form. How do you cognise this? Not by perceiving the myriad diversities among objects, but by recognizing their underlying unity, the recognition of the divine in each of them. This means that human beings are not to be seen as so many innumerable separate entities. The Chaithanya (Consciousness) that is in each of them is one and the same Universal Consciousness. It is all-pervading. For example, the air that a man breathes is not exclusive to him. It is the same air that is breathed by others. The air that is allpervading is inhaled by each according to his needs.

Judging himself by the limitations of his body, man considers himself a weak and powerless being. Once he is conscious of his Divinity; he will realise his boundless potentialities.

Cognition of inner reality

Therefore, the first requisite is for man to realise his divinity. The students have to find out who they are (their inner reality). Modern education, however, attempts to teach everything about the world except what they are. This is sheer ignorance. Along with the stupendous progress of science, there is a corresponding growth in ignorance. Such lopsided growth of science can only result in ignorance of the reality. As long as men are immersed in differences and discord, they are only steeped in ignorance.

Man must go beyond the lower mind to the Over-Mind. This is quite possible. There is nothing that is beyond human capacity if man has confidence in himself. But he is weighed down by the doubt whether he can accomplish anything great with his limited physical abilities. The body is finite, but man is not. When the limited body is placed next to the "I" (Nenu, in Telugu), the individual is lost in the limitations of the body forgetting the potentialities of the Self (the "I").

All doubts in man arise from this error. Man has to realise the impermanence of the dheha (body) and the immortality of Dhehi (the Indwelling Spirit). That Spirit is the Divine.

The human body is called Kshethra because the Indwelling Divine is Kshethrajna (the Knower of the Field). He is the embodiment of the Aathma. Students should understand the nature of the Kshethrajna, the Divine Knower, within each of them. Students should have self-confidence.

This means that they should get rid of the barrier that separates them from the Self, namely the body-consciousness. Then they will experience the bliss that is beyond all the sheaths enveloping the human body.

Students should realise the Cosmic power that is possessed by each individual. They should not be misled by the limitations of the form. If man did not possess great abilities, how could he have made so many wonderful discoveries? Spiritual development needed. While man has made astonishing progress in science and technology--in the realms of nuclear energy and electronics--he has been steadily going down in the moral, social and spiritual spheres. You have economic development on one side. On the other, you have divisions of class, caste and creed, language and territory. Unrest among students is growing. It is the animal nature in man that breeds these divisions. There are in man four traits' the animal, the demonic, the human and the divine. Man is developing his intellectual abilities, but not his divine attributes.

Man has to develop faith in himself and in God this is the secret of greatness. Students should not consider themselves weak and imbecile beings. Rely on your Conscience and not on the impermanent body or the fickle mind. Make faith your life-breath.

Aathma is the source of all strength

The Aathma (Conscience) is the source of all your strength. The reality is manifested in you by the "SOHAM" that is produced by every breath. This "SOHAM" is also known as Hamsa

Gaayathri. Hamsa (the Swan) is credited with the capacity to separate the milk from the water with which it is mixed. Hamsa Gaayathri is recited to separate the body-consciousness from the

Gaayathri signifies the mastery over the senses. Gaayathri has two other names--Saavithri and Sarasvathi. Saavithri is the master of life. Sarasvathi is the presiding deity for Vaak (speech). The Gaayathri manthra, "Bhur-Bhuvah-Suvah," refers to the body--Bhur, life--Bhuvah and Awareness--Suvah. "Bhur-Bhuvah-Suvah" does not refer to three worlds outside man. All the three are in him. Hence, man is not an ordinary being. He is Chaithanya-Svaruupa (the embodiment of the Cosmic Divine Consciousness).

This jewel of divinity is being bartered away by man for petty carnal pleasures. This is totally wrong. If one recognises his godliness, he will be engaged in godly' actions. This transformation must be effected in human attitudes. Man should transcend the mind and reach the state of integral--Chith. It is total comprehension of humanness. Out of that comprehension emerges Aanandha (Bliss).

All the discord and violence in the world are due to differences arising from selfishness- This selfishness should go. This calls for adherence to universal truth, which is common to all humanity and valid for all time and places.

The ancient sages proclaimed two eternal verities: "Sathyam Vadha' Dharmam Chara" (Speak the Truth; Adhere to Righteousness). These were regarded as two eyes for man. Today man has lost these eyes and is helpless. Man has to realise that he has emanated from the Divine Aathma.

Students should develop a universal outlook and seek to serve all without regard to race or religion. That is the true purport of education. It must lend to realisation of the Self that is in everyone. Education should lead to elevation of the consciousness. Make use of Summer Course for the purification of your minds so that you may lead selfless lives. For this, there is no other path but the Spiritual.

Discourse at the Institute Auditorium, Brindhaavan on the occasion of the inauguration of the Summer School on 20-5-1993.

Service without the idea of self is the very first step in the spiritual progress of man.

18. Tame the mind and realise the Self

EMBODIMENTS of love! To see the lamp that gives light you don't need another lamp. So also no other means of cognition is needed to realise the self-effulgent Aathma or Self. The Self is changeless. The Buddhi (intellect) has no light of its own but it shines by the effulgence of the Aathma. If the intellect is able to apprehend and judge everything in the world, it is due to the power of the Self. Buddhi or intellect is based on Medha shakthi (intelligence). The power of the intellect is only a reflection, of Aathma Chaithanya (the effulgence of the Aathma).

The mind has two aspects, as doer and experiencer. It is the cause of the sense of attachment and possession. Human action is more evident in the wakeful state than in the dream state or deep sleep state. In the deep sleep state, the Super Intellectual Consciousness is shining and the mind, senses and intellect are dormant. Just as a red hot iron glows more brilliantly than fire itself, though the fire is the cause thereof, the individual intellectual consciousness shines more because of the Cosmic Consciousness. When the mind is dormant in the deep sleep state, the Super Mind becomes active. In this state, man has no desire or fear or anxiety. Control the mind and rise higher

Man is bound by the mind and the senses. In the pursuit of the spiritual path, first of all the mind should be brought under control. When the mind is steady, you reach the state of Super-Mind. In this state there is no room for physical or transient worldly feelings. As long as the mind is pure, no evil can enter the heart. When it is polluted with bad feelings, there is room for evil thoughts to breed.

We have to recognise the fact that human life depends on the functioning of the mind. As long as one is governed by the mind one continues to be human. Once one goes beyond the mind, one can enjoy the vastness of the limitless expanse of Cosmic Consciousness. Here is an example:

Suppose you construct a spacious house with a number of bed rooms, living rooms, dining room and bath room. The spacious house appears divided into a number of small rooms. This is because of the walls put up for partitioning into rooms. If the walls are pulled down, the house will be one vast mansion. Similarly, the body is the Upaadhi (wall) which limits one's perception to the narrow confines of the body. Once you get rid of this body consciousness, you will experience the vast expanse of the Universal Cosmic Consciousness which is all-pervasive.

Just as the hands, ears, eyes and legs are all angas (limbs or organs) of individual human body, the bodies of all human beings are the limbs of society. Again, society itself is a limb of mankind. And humanity is a limb of Prakrithi (Nature) and Prakrithi is a limb of Divinity. One should understand this Anga-Angee-Bhaava--relationship between Divinity and human beings, in the proper perspective.

Realise that the heart is the seat of Divinity

Though man is endowed with Buddhi (intelligence), he is not able to master the senses. One should understand the great significance of human life, which is superior to that of all other species. Because of the body consciousness, man is forgetting his inherent divinity. You study a great deal about Prakrithi (Nature) and worldly things, and lead an artificial life, without realising that the heart is the seat of Divinity. If you allow bad feelings to enter the heart, it will be polluted and the Divine will have no place therein.

The whole world today is replete with pollution of not only the individual senses but also the five elements. The air is impure; water is polluted and everything you see or hear or touch is polluted.

How can you expect to have peace in the world? Vedhaantha teaches that we should go beyond the mind and realise the inner vision to prevent bad feelings entering the heart and polluting the seat of God.

Raama, when questioned by Sage Agastya why he acted like a man, asked him "Am I God?" It is because of the body-consciousness that one does not realise his divinity. The body is just an instrument. We eat to sustain the body. We need food for the protection of the body and clothes for protection from cold and heat. The body is a source of all diseases arising out of thrishna

(desire). Desire gives rise to Raaga and Dhvesha (attachment and hatred). There is nothing wrong in having desires for food, shelter and clothing. It is excessive desire that causes attachment and disappointment. Desire should be within limits. It should not become a hidden sickness. The desire to hoard is not there in birds and beasts, but it is rampant only among human beings. Man loses his human quality because of this greed for hoarding for selfish purposes.

Refinement is needed for transformation

How is man to be transformed? Here is an example. If there is a piece of charcoal, it cannot be made white by applying soap. You know that the charcoal came out of wood. The wood when put into fire became charcoal. When the charcoal is put back in the same fire, it burns fully and becomes glowing white. The charcoal was originally wood and when the wood was burnt, it turned into the middle form of charcoal and when it was further burnt, it reached the end form of ash, which is Vibhuuthi, representing the end-form of all beings. This teaches the truth that all materials in the world must be refined by fire and reach the final state of Brahman. The human body also reaches this end. But the inner reality of man is permanent.

This is the significance of human life. God is "Sarvabhootha antharaathma"---the Indweller in all beings, but there is no change in the Aathma. Human lives will continue to be generated like the waves of the ocean. But the ocean of Cosmic Consciousness remains unchanged.

The universe is the form of God

Suppose you make an idol of Krishna in silver. All parts of the idol are silver. When you see the form of Krishna in the idol, you are not aware of the silver. When you want to see only the silver out of which the idol is made, the form is out of your view. Similarly when you turn your mind towards God, who is pervading the entire Universe, the mind will be wholly filled with God and you won't see the different forms of the objects in the world. If the mind is directed towards worldly objects, you fail to see the Divinity that pervades all objects. "Vishvam Vishnu Svaruupam"--The Universe is the form of God. God is the cause and the Universe is the effect.

Failure to understand the cause and the effect results in delusion.

The most precious human life is devalued. A beggar calls himself an anaatha (one without anyone to support him), while asking for alms. This is not correct. For everyone, God is the Naatha (support). It is only God who is Anaatha, because there is no one above Him.

Thyaagaraaja considered Raama as his saviour and protector and did not care for the wealth of the world. He considered service at Raama's feet as the greatest treasure. Kabeer was a poor weaver and he used to share his food with others. When the King sent gold and provisions to him through his officials, Kabeer exclaimed: "For whom has the king sent all these?" They said: "The King sent these things to you as you are anaatha (helpless)." He replied: "I am not without support. Raama is my Naatha (master). You cannot say I have none to support me. It is only Raama who has none to support Him. Give these to Him." Kabeer said Anaatha means God. We should understand the correct meanings of words.

Body comes and goes but the Aathma is eternal.

Embodiments of the Divine! Have faith in Aathma alone. The body, mind and intellect are all like the dresses you wear. Do you cry when you change your old clothes to new? Death is a change of dress. Because of the long association you have established with the body, you cry at the time of death. If you consider the relationship as temporary, you won't cry. You must attach yourself only to God and not to anyone or anything in the world. God is permanent friend.

After death, where does the Aathma go? This is a question on many people's minds. What happens to the Aathma after the body is cast off and how long does it take to be re-born? These are ridiculous questions. This can be explained by an example. If you put on the switch, the bulb burns because of the electric energy flowing through it. When the bulb is removed, nothing happens to the energy which is still there, though bulb is gone.

Similarly, the body comes and goes but the Aathma is eternal.

Embodiments of the Divine Aathma! You must get rid of all narrow ideas and attitudes. All worldly things are like passing clouds. There is only one that is permanent and changeless. That is Brahmathathva. It should be realised through the path of pure Love.

Discourse on the evening of 20-5-1993 at the Sai Ramesh Hall, Brindhaavan.

There are three categories of human beings. There are those who have faith in God, there are those who have no faith in God, and there are those who are indifferent. For instance, in a bush there is a flower, its fragrance goads those who have faith in God to search for its source. These can be termed as Aasthikas or believers. Then there are those who enjoy the fragrance but do not bother to question about the source---these can be termed as the believing non-believers. There are yet others who are neither looking for the flower nor perceiving its fragrance. They may be termed as non-believers. We presume that the non-believers are those who have no faith in God, but in fact it is not true. There can be no one who has no faith in himself. All people who have faith in themselves are believers.

BABA

19. Man, mind and the Cosmos

EMBODIMENTS of Divine Love! The gross body is formed by the combination of Pancha Mahaa-bhuuthas (five basic elements) and the operation of Karma (past deeds). This body is the cause of both pleasure and pain.

Only he is truly a man

Who knows that by which

Everything else is known,

And without knowing which

All else is not worth knowing,

He is the knower of the Supreme Truth.

In human, life, what every one should try to understand is the truth relating to the Sthuula, Suukshma, Kaarana and Mahaakaarana (Gross, the Subtle, the Causal-and the Super causal) bodies. Only then can man understand the phenomena in the world. He will then comprehend the nature of man, of the world and the relationship between God and man.

Subtle body is associated with Maaya

The physical body is inert, it is formed by the aggregation of physical constituents. The body is composed of elements like iron, water, phosphorus, calcium, lead, etc. Hence, the gross body is described as inert matter.

The Suukshma shareera (subtle body) is Maaya svaruupa (illusory form). In the dream state, the mind not only creates itself but also experiences pleasure and pains, worries and fears. In the subtle body, these illusory creations of the mind are experienced. These experiences are felt to be real only at the moment. Maaya is that mental state in which what does not exist appears to exist and what exists is not perceived as real. All the experiences in the dream state are seen in the waking state as unreal. The mansions witnessed in dreams-vanish when the eyes open.

What is real and true must be that which exists in the waking, the dream and the deep sleep states.

Truth is that which is true and unchanging at all times past, present and the future. Hence the subtle body is associated with Maaya.

Then there is the Kaarana shareera (Causal body). It is only an image or reflection. It is the image of the Mahaakaarana (Super-Causal body). The Mahakaarana represents the Supreme

Principle. It is as a reflection of the Supreme--Parathathva--that the causal, subtle and gross bodies function. It follows from this that all these aspects are contained in the human being. The mind, the Super-Mind, the Higher Mind, and the Illuminated Mind are all present in these bodies.

In the waking state, the mind functions in response to the sensory organs by seeing, listening, talking, etc. The mind is bound by the limitation of time and space.

How the Super-Mind is active in dream state

In the dream state the mind creates its own world. It is related to time alone. For example, you get into the train to night, and reach Bombay the day after tomorrow.

In this you see the mind at work in respect of four things- the reason (for travel), the actual journey, the arrival at the destination and completion, of your duty. How did you go? You went by train. How long did the journey take? Thirty-six hours. What was your destination? Bombay. What was the reason for your journey? Some job to be done in an office. Time, action, and result--all these are involved in the operation of the mind.

At night you had a dream. In the dream, you reached Bombay and saw various things there. You were pleased. But in this dream, none of the four things, experienced in the waking state were present--neither time, nor movement, nor objective, nor any consummation. In the dream, how did you travel, how much time did it take, for what purpose and what was the outcome? None of these things happened. All that took place, in the dream was over in five minutes. This is the mystery and the marvel of what happens in the realm of the mind. All that happens in the dream state, the experiences and events, occurs in fleeting moments.

What is experienced in a life of forty years is covered in two minutes in the dream state. In those forty years, you have completed your education, got married, had a son, educated him and sent him abroad. The entire panorama of these events appear in your dream in a few minutes. But what you experience in a dream vanishes in a moment in the waking state. What is active in the dream state is the Super-Mind. It is more powerful than the ordinary mind, because it encompasses in a brief moment all that happens in space and time over long distances and periods.

Higher Mind functions in the deep sleep state

Next, you have the Higher Mind. This functions in the sushupthi (deep sleep state). In this state, there is no thought or worry. The mind is absent. The senses are not functioning. There are no experiences of any kind. But on waking from deep sleep, the individual experiences Aanandha.

He declares that he felt extremely happy in sound sleep. This state confers a sense of bliss without any experience. This bliss is beyond the mind and the senses. In the deep sleep state, there is life, but no mind. Only bliss remains. In deep sleep, there is no pleasure or pain, because there is no consciousness of the phenomenal world. You are conscious of the world and experience pleasure and pain only when the mind is active. Because in the deep sleep state the ordinary mind is not present, the consciousness in that state is attributed to the Higher Mind. This is associated with the Kaarana shareera (Causal Body). Here you have the cause. But there is the Doer, there is action and there is a reason for action. The relationship between cause and effect accounts for all happenings in the world. The Divine is the cause and the Cosmos is the effect.

Divine Causal Principle is called Illuminated Mind

Who is this cause? Is it the Divine, who is Mahaakaarana (the prime cause)? This Divine Causal Principle underlies all that happens in the universe. This Principle is termed the Illuminated

Mind. This is the Power that illumines everything in the world. To experience this cosmic principle, we need a divine form. That is the Super Divine Self. It is called Purushathva. This is a primary attribute of the Divine.

Above the mind, the Super-mind, the Higher Mind and the Illuminated Mind is the Over-Mind.

Purushathva is the over-Mind. It is Divinity.

It is from this Purushathva that the sense of 'I-ness' emanates. This 'I-ness' is present in all beings, from the highest to the lowest. It is the index of the Purushathva (cosmic consciousness).

Why is man-called Purusha? The human body is called Puram (a city), as he dwells in the body he is called Purusha. All bodies are the same, irrespective of differences in sex. The three states of consciousness are common to all. The effects of qualities (Sathva, Rajas, Thamas) are the same for all. In sorrow, one grieves, whether man or woman. Hunger and anger have the same effects on both men and women. The intensity of the experience may vary from person to person.

The manner in which it is experienced may also vary. One may grieve in secret, while another may make a show of it. Such differences are relative to the individuals concerned. But the experiencing body is a common factor.

In every body, the Mahaa Purusha Principle (the Super Divinity) is present. The entire cosmos is a reflection of the gross, subtle and causal bodies. The Kaaraka (primal Doer) is the Supreme Lord. The cosmos is the effect (creation).

This relationship can be recognised in the daily life of every individual. There are Pancha bhuthas (five basic elements), Pancha koshas (five sheaths),

Panchendhriyas (five sense organs),

Pancha praanas (five vital airs), the mind, the Buddhi (intellect) the chittha (will) and the Ahamkaara (Ego). All these together make up twenty four principles.

The Supreme who pervades all these twenty four entities is the Mahaa Purusha (the Supreme Person), the twenty fifth principle. Thus, the human body is made up of these twenty five constituents. Similarly, the entire universe is made up of these twenty five constituents.

All differences are the handiwork of Maaya

There is no difference between the dheha and dhesa (body and the world). But, when one looks at the external world with the physical vision, numerous differences appear. All these differences are the handiwork of the delusive power of Maaya. Not recognizing the mystery relating to this delusive power, man falls a prey to many difficulties.

Maaya envelops man in its multifarious coils. The cosmos is made up of the twenty five constituents. All is subject to delusion. In the waking state, you see, you hear and you experience many things. In sleep, you are steeped in a dream. In that state, what happens to your experiences in the waking state? Everything is forgotten. You consider the experiences in the dream state as real. This lasts only till you wake up. Then you dismiss the dreams as of no account. What is the truth? The experiences of the waking state or the experiences in dreams? The former is a daydream, the latter is a night-dream. Both are dreams.

Once, the Emperor Ianaka, a great Inaani and Yogi, devoid of body-consciousness, was having a colloquy with his ministers after dinner at night. He fell into deep sleep. Some time later, he got up and started putting the questions: "Is that true or is this true?"

(that is, whether what he experienced in the dream was true or whether his experience in the waking state was true).

The Self is present in all the three states

Nobody could give the answer. Seeing the agitated state of mind of the Emperor, the ministers tried to find an answer, but no one came forward to solve the riddle posed by the Emperor. "Is that true or is this true?" At last, the sage Vashishta was called and he, after yogic meditation, gave the reply to the emperor's question. "Your Majesty! Neither that is true nor is this true. You are the only reality. You experienced certain things in your dream and some in the waking state. In the waking state, there was no dream. In the dream, there was no waking state. But you were present both in the dream and the waking states. Therefore, you are the truth. You were the experiencer in both the states!"

This means that the Self is present in all the states of every human being. It also means that the Self exists in the past, the present and the future. Humanness is thus associated with Divinity and is no ordinary existence. All the sacred pronouncements in the Vedhas and the Upanishaths apply to man.

The Divine is described as possessing eight forms of wealth. In fact, man is endowed with all these Ashtaishvarya (eight forms of wealth)---Nirgunam, Niranjanam, Sanaathanam, Nikethanam, Nithya Shuddha, Buddha, Muktha and Nirmala Svarupinam (beyond qualities, untainted, eternal, ever-abiding, ever pure, intelligent, liberated and immaculate). Out of a sense of weakness, man assumes that these attributes relate only to the Divine and not to him. This feeling should be totally eschewed.

An individual, through considerable effort, acquires many kinds of knowledge. Wherefrom has this knowledge come? How did he acquire it? At the time of birth he was totally ignorant. But by Shraddha (diligent endeavour) anything could be acquired.

Think of the society beyond your family

Man today is preoccupied only with the concerns relating to himself and his family. Immersed in selfishness, he does not think of the society beyond his family. But what would happen to him and his family if society was not there?

All man's desires are centred on his own welfare, even when he appears to desire the welfare of the world. But, in fact his welfare is bound up with the well-being of the world. Hence, one should proceed from the 'I,' to the family, to the society and to the world at large. All the world's problems arise out of the obsession with selfish interests and lack of concern for the well-being of society. If every individual strives for the welfare of society, all these problems will cease to exist. Millennia ago, the Vedhas declared "Lokaa samasthaas-sukhino Bhavanthu!" (Let all the people of the world be happy).

When men get rid of the narrow egoistic feelings born out of ignorance, they will experience the Divine, as declared by the Vedhic seers. The Vedhas summoned human beings to strive together in unity for achieving the highest goals of life. The essence of the Vedhas is summed up in one phrase, the sense of Ekaathmabhaava (spiritual unity of all human beings). This is the realisation of the Divine. This is true Adhvaitha (Nondualism).

Unity in spiritual oneness of all beings

Declarations like "Aham Brahmaasmi" and "Tath-thvam-Asi" are cited as pronouncements proclaiming nondualism. But this is not correct. These statements themselves refer to two entities--Aham and Brahma; Tath and Thvam ('I' and the Absolute; That and You). The recognition that the one and same Aathma dwells in all beings is true Adhvaitha. The bulbs may be of different sizes, colours and wattage, but they are illumined by the same electrical energy.

It is because the doctrine of human unity based on the spiritual oneness of all beings, is not propagated in the right manner that we have today so many divisions, giving rise to conflicts.

Differences between people professing different faiths are not due to differences in the teachings of the different religions but in the mental attitudes of those belonging to these faiths.

All religions teach the same good ideals.

Understanding them, men should learn to live in harmony.

Those who preach hatred on the basis of religion are verily men with perverted minds. The broad vision of Bhaaratheeya culture, the infinite sacredness of Bhaarith, the unfathomable faith in unity--all these proclaimed the glory of the Divine and upheld the fundamental oneness of humanity. Today, because unity has been lost, humanness has reached its nadir. Morality and integrity have disappeared. This is the progress humanity has made!

This is not progress. What we should seek is spiritual progress, progress in righteousness and morality. People today talk about saving the world and safeguarding their nation. There is no need to protect the world or the nation. If you safeguard Sathya and Dharma (Truth and Righteousness), the nation and the world will be automatically protected. This is the profound message of the ancients: "Speak the Truth; follow Righteousness." Recognise the Omnipresence of the Divine. The Divine is the basis of everything in the cosmos. The integral relationship between the Divine and the Universe should be properly understood. Through many lives people have tended to identify themselves with their bodies and pursue wrongful practices. The Omnipresence of the Divine from a piece of stone to a mighty emperor should be recognized. Man should be grateful for the innumerable benefits 'provided by the Divine. Raamakrishna Paramahansa was an illiterate person. But he achieved world wide fame by his pursuit of Truth and his realisation of the Divine. Self-realisation is the goal for every human being. This is the message of the Bhaagavatha. Today almost every person is wedded to untruth. Once a year they perform Sathyanaaraayana Puja. But every moment should be employed in the worship of Sathyanaaraayana (the Lord of Truth). This calls for unity in thought, word and deed, which is the form of Truth. Transcend the feeling of smallness. Men think that to reach the spiritual height is an arduous adventure. Svaami assures you that this is not so. The spiritual journey is much easier than the worldly struggle in which men are engaged. Men should aim at reaching the Supreme state instead of carrying on their wrangles upto the Supreme Court. Man has all the divine potencies for realising the Divine Self. His consciousness can comprehend the cosmos, even as a mirror can reflect the firmament. The heart is a mirror in which one can see the entire universe. Realise from this moment that man is the embodiment of the Divine. Transcend the feeling of smallness. As you think, so you become. Therefore, divinise yourselves by constant reminder of your inherent divinity. Discourse at Summer School in Brindhavan, on 21-5-1993. 20. Beyond the Mind What can the evil forces, of Kali do To the man whose heart is filled with compassion, Whose words are immersed in love, And whose body is dedicated to the service of others? Knowledge of all the shastras and Vedhas

Will not serve to remove the curtain of the mind Which stands between the individual and God. This curtain makes it appear That God and man are separate Though both are one. Only when the mind is subdued Will God and man, Nature and God, The Cause and the Effect become one. EMBODIMENTS of Divine Love! The mind is responsible for differences in opinions, likes and dislikes, and diversity in attitudes. The world is perceived through the mind. The world is permeated by the mind. Without the mind there can be no world and no attachments and hatred, no joy and sorrow. It is because of hatred and attachment that man today is plunged in misery. As the mind is the root cause of all this, man has to go beyond the natural infirmities of the mind to the over-mind to be able to recognise Divinity. In the three states of waking, dream and deep sleep, man is bound by the mind. When man transcends these three states by developing his Inner Vision, he can progress from the human to the Divine. The seed and the tree are not different things There is a Sanskrit saying: "Yaddhrishyam thannasyam" (That which is seen is subject to extinction). "Yathpindam thath Brahmaandam" (what is in the microcosm is in the macrocosm) is another saying. All that appears in the microcosm 'are miniature replica of the macrocosm. It is like the tree that is latent in the seed. The seed and the tree are not different things. When the tree emerges, the seed disappears (becomes formless). In both the form and the formless, the principle of Sath (Being) exists as one and the same. When one looks at the seed, the tree is not visible. But all that are seen in the tree, the branches, the leaves, the flowers and the fruits, were immanent in the seed. When you enquire into-the divinity inherent in man, this profound and sacred reality can be recognised. As long as man sees only with his external vision, he can experience only the external. When man develops the internal vision and experiences the Divinity within, the cosmos will appear as a reflection of the Divine. This is called realization of the Cosmic Divine. What is the difference between the Cosmic Divine and the Inner Divine? There is no difference between the two. But when it is experienced by the individual, it is described as Inner Divine. When the individual experience is extended to the entire universe, it is called Cosmic Divine. The Individual Self and Paramaathma (the OmniSelf) are one, like the rind of a fruit and the juice inside.

The differences one notices in the world arise not from the nature of creation but from the perspective from which one looks at the world. Man's view of the world has to change. This cannot be done by intellectual argument. When the mind is subdued, the oneness of the jeevi

(Individual) and the Divine will be experienced.

Beautify your heart by good qualities

From the time he wakes, up, till he goes to sleep, man looks at everything externally. He hardly spends a few moments to develop his inner vision. All the external objects can only confer momentary pleasure. Pursuing these pleasures, man wastes his precious and sacred life. He can never achieve peace in this way.

Man devotes considerable time and energy to decorating his home, expecting to derive joy from it. But how long can this last? What he should seek to beautify is his heart. This is not visible to anyone, but the beauty of a pure heart is beyond description. What is it that lends beauty to the heart? The heart is beautified by qualities such as love, forbearance and compassion. These qualities confer enduring bliss on man. Such a man's words and actions are sweet. He is worthy of adoration. Every man should aim at becoming such an ideal human being.

What does adoration of the Lord mean? It is not mere offering of worship with the paraphernalia of rituals. It is an attempt to merge in the Divine, experiencing the bliss of oneness with the Divine, recognising unity in diversity and the Divinity that is present in all beings.

Triple pollution that affect the eyes, ears and tongue

Nature will not give real bliss as long as it is viewed from a physical and worldly point of view.

The pleasure to be derived from any object in the world depends on the condition in which it is enjoyed. For instance, a mango will be tasteless if it is tender, sour if it is half-ripe and sweet when it is fully ripe. Likewise Nature is a sweet fruit. But if it is seen from purely sensory point of view, it will give only bitter taste. But when it is viewed as a manifestation of the Divine, its unique sweetness will be apparent.

Thoughts influence the vision, which, in its turn, affects the mind. Thoughts assume good and bad forms. Good thoughts, good speech and good actions make a man truly human. This is the message of the three monkeys pictured as one with closed eyes, another with closed ears and 'the third with a closed mouth--"See no evil, hear no evil, speak no evil."

Today the entire environment is polluted by evil things which offend the eyes, the ears and the tongue. Everyone should free himself from this three-fold pollution. The mind has to be turned towards God.

Proceed from the mind to the Over-mind

To enjoy the fragrance of the sandalwood, it has to be rubbed on the grinding stone vigorously.

Likewise, to experience the great fragrance emanating from Nature, its unity with the Divine has to be realised. For this, it is necessary to transcend the limitations of the ordinary mind and proceed to the Super-Mind, the Higher-Mind, the Illuminated Mind and the Over-Mind.

It should not be presumed that this is a difficult task. In fact it is quite easy. For instance, people feel that adhering to truth is difficult. Actually it is uttering untruth that creates difficult problems. All kinds of plans have to be made to cover up a lie. But to stick to the facts as they are is easy. Men should realise that it is easy to be good. It is going astray that causes difficulties.

One cannot always avoid committing a wrong. But one should learn the lesson from it and avoid repeating it. That is saadhana.

When it is admitted that God is in all beings, one should strengthen that conviction and act on that basis. On the contrary, men who profess to believe in God, do not live up to their belief because of their attachment to useless trifles. Here is an illustration from the life of Shri

Raamakrishna Paramahansa.

Shri Raamakrishna Paramahansa used to ecstatically enjoy himself in the worship of the Goddess in the temple built by Raani Raashmani. One night thieves broke into the temple and carried away all the jewels on the idol of Krishna in the temple. With a view to carrying on his regular priestly duties, he went to Raani Raashmani's nephew, Mathuranaath, and told him, "Sir, thieves have stolen all the jewels on the idol." Mathuranaath was angry and proceeded with Raamakrishna to the temple. Losing his temper and balance of mind, he burst out in anger: "Oh

Krishna! Are you not ashamed of yourself? If you are unable to protect your jewels on your own idol, how are you going to protect the whole world? Were you paralysed when the thieves were carrying away the jewels? Or were you asleep? This is a disgrace to your Divinity."

Do not rebuke God, change your vision

Hearing these words, Shri Raamakrishna said: "Mathuranaath! Shut up your mouth! For the sake of your petty jewels and trinkets, is this the way you should berate God? When the Goddess of all wealth, Lakshmi, is the Consort of the Lord, why do you get so agitated over the loss of a few trivial ornaments? The Lord can have no such petty feelings. You are feeling so much for the action of a few thieves who loved some jewels and came to the Lord to get them. It is because of your love for jewels that you are getting distressed so much. But the Lord has no desires. He is ready to give Himself away. God is prepared to offer Himself. Such a One, will he be worried about this petty loss? Hence, change your vision. Don't comment on God." At these words Mathuranaath felt ashamed of himself.

Then, Raamakrishna sat near the idol of Shri Krishna and prayed: "Oh Krishna! As long as one is caught up in the coils of the world, he will speak like an intoxicated man. Only when he gets immersed in God will he become oblivious to himself. Therefore, do not let me get intoxicated. Confer on me the boon of self-forgetfulness." This is what is meant by the saying: "The knower of the Brahman becomes Brahman himself." When one experiences the Divine, he sees the Divine in everything.

When does man experience the pure Divine Self? It is in the Thureeya state--the fourth state of consciousness beyond the waking, dream and deep sleep states. This is the state of the Over-Mind. In that state man is one with the Divine. He has no attributes. Therefore, He is allpervading.

Nature is bound by the five qualities of sound, touch, form, taste and smell (these are the qualities of space, air, fire, water and earth--the five basic elements). With the loss of each quality, starting from smell, a process of expansion takes place. Finally, we have Akaasha (ether or space) which has only one quality, sound, and is all-pervading. That being the case, how much more pervasive must be the Lord, who has no attributes. The mind perpetually seeks comfort

If man asks the question, "I am posing this query to the entire world. I have nothing to do with the world. Am I the Truth or not?" the answer that he is the Truth will be evident in a few words. We see before our eyes many persons dying, being cremated or buried after death. In spite of this, everyone has a desire, "I must live for ever." What is the inner meaning of this desire? You are eternal and the idea of immortality arises in you because of this. The body is impermanent, but you are eternal. This truth has to be properly grasped. Whatever one may see, one always declares to himself, "I must live, I must live," and does not say, "I too must pass away one day." Even if this idea occurs, it is followed by the desire to live a little longer. Even a hundred-year old ailing man tells the doctor: "Please give the injection gently and don't cause any pain." The mind perpetually seeks comfort.

Truth, Bliss, Beauty are forms of the Divine

Truth, Bliss, Beauty are forms of the Divine. They are also known as Sathyam, Shivam, Sundharam. These represent the true form of man. Shivam is that which has no death. Sathyam is that which is not subject to change (on account of time, place or circumstance). Sundharam (Beauty) is the form of the Divine. Vishnu is described as Alankara Priyah (a lover of beauty).

Man is described as Bhojana priyah (a lover of food). What is this food? This gross body flourishes on food. But it is bound to perish some day. But the subtle body, made up of Praana (the Life-Force), Mahaa (the mind) and Vijnaana (intelligence) lasts longer. But, for how long? Only as long as the mind lasts. When the mind is absent, what happens? This state is described as Sushupthi (deep sleep state). In this state, there is only the Kaarana shareera (causal body).

There is no mind. This is a state of bliss.

Hence, it is essential to understand the functioning of the mind. Man and mind are not separate.

To treat the mind as something apart and becoming subject to it is wrong. It has to be treated as a servant as long as the body-mind consciousness remains. Then the mind obeys you. Today man follows the dictates of the mind.

Everyone should acquire the Divine Will Power

Dear students! It is not easy to subdue the mind immediately. But you must begin to bring it under control. When the mind desires something, you must immediately set the Buddhi (intellect) at work. Why? So that the intellect may give you the proper advice. The mind has to be taught the lesson: "Oh Mind! Don't play your petty pranks. Examine your desire, using the power of discrimination to find out whether it is good or bad, right or wrong. Do not wish to acquire whatever you desire." When you try to teach the mind in this manner, it loses its potency (the keenness to acquire what it wants). This Vijnana is full of intelligence and common sense. It is called Divine Intellectual Will. The Divine Will Power has to be-acquired by everyone. Only then, they can realise their true human nature. It is through this Will Power that the Cosmic Divine nature of the universe can be recognised. This Cosmic Power has to be seen with the eyes, experienced mentally, practised through the body and made an integral part of one's being. Do not speculate whether this is possible or not. If one has the determination anything is possible. If an ant has determination it can travel any distance. But, even an eagle, if it has no will to fly, will be confined to the ground. Resolve to accomplish what you want to with a firm determination. Develop the feeling: "I and God are one." This should not be purely a verbal exercise. You must realise the implications of the manthra you recite such as "Soham" (I am He) and live up to it. That is true concentration. Most students do not listen attentively to the discourses. How can they ever practise the teaching? The eyes are turned towards Svaami, but the ears do not absorb Svaami's words. How can such persons put into practice Svaami's teachings? A few may benefit from these discourses. Even if one or two practise the teachings, that is good enough! Four steps to experience ineffable bliss Listen carefully. Ruminates over whatever you have heard. Put into practice whatever you have absorbed. This is the meaning of the Upanishathic injunction: "Shravanam (listen), mananam (ruminates), Nidhidhyaasanam (practise)." Just as there is no meaning in preparing delicious food unless it is consumed and digested, it is useless to listen to discourses unless you put into practice what you have learnt. Only then can the bliss of learning be experienced. Metaphysical lectures alone will not transform the mind. What is learnt must be put into practice. This is the real Vedhaantha you have to learn today. This is the spirituality that is vital for you. The Lord's name on your lips, thoughts of God in your mind, seeing the Lord with your eyes and meditating on the Lord 'with love--these four will give you ineffable bliss. Strive to experience this bliss. Discourse in the Sai Ramesh Mandap, Brindhaavan, on 22-5-1993.

21. Thought waves make up the Cosmos
God has endowed mankind
With the great weapon of the Mind.
Only the one who subjugates the mind can achieve victories on earth.
We cannot imagine anyone who is a slave of the mind and has attained happiness or peace.
EMBODIMENTS of Love! Human existence can become meaningful only when man, at the very outset, recognises the nature of the mind and bases his actions on that understanding. The mind is extremely powerful. It runs at great speed. It is subtler than the sky and even more subtle than electricity. When such a mind is turned to bad purposes, a man becomes a prey to all kinds of sorrow.
The mind can run faster than light. Just as you are able to hear a broadcast of music from a radio station in Delhi simultaneously in Whitefield, the mind also operates like radio waves. Thought waves emanating from the mind have also got properties of radio waves. There is no end to the waves arising from the ocean of the mind.
The power of thought is immense. Thoughts outlast the human body.
Thought waves radiate very much like heat waves, radio waves and light waves. The thought waves are the cause of man's joy or sorrow, health or disease, birth or death. The potency of these waves has to be understood by man and his conduct has to be based on this awareness.
The whole cosmos is made up of thought waves; hence, the scripture declares: "The mind is at the root of the cosmos." There is no place, or form or action wherein the mind is absent. Hence, all thoughts of man should be turned in the right direction.
Our fortune is linked to our thoughts When good thoughts, good feelings and good intentions are developed, the mind becomes pure.
Only when the mind is pure, can the action be pure and the fruits thereof be pure.
Today we sow the seed of thought--karma--and reap the fruit of action. From the seed of karma arises svabhaava (the fruit of behaviour). Out of the seed of behaviour comes the fruit of character. The seed of character yields the fruit of adhrishtam (fortune). Thus, from thought to fortune, the chain of human progress can be perceived. Our good and bad luck are thus linked to our thoughts. The mind immerses man in impenetrable darkness through bad thoughts. The same mind can lift man to sublime heights by good thoughts. Thus, thoughts are supremely important for man. They constitute his very life-breath. Without understanding this truth, man allows evil tendencies like anger, envy, hatred and conceit to fill his mind and thereby courts disaster.

A man seeking to harm others nourishes many evil thoughts in his mind. But these thoughts cause him ten times the harm they do to others. He is not aware of this truth. Consequently, he indulges in abuse of others and in doing harm to them. But there are no "others," but only manifestations of the Divine. Not realising the divinity in others, man tries to harm them. But whoever wields the sword against others, will perish by the sword. The harm which he does to others will be the undoing of himself. Whoever abuses others, will also be the target of abuse by others. As are the thoughts, so is the outcome. The entire human existence is based upon thoughts and their results. Face is the index of the mind. Man perpetually tries to conceal his faults like the ostrich which buries its head in the sand hoping that thereby the hunter will not see it. In fact, the ostrich becomes an easy target for the hunter. Likewise, a man filled with ego and wickedness imagines that his thoughts are not known to anyone else. But a man's mind is like a gramophone record. His good and bad thoughts are reflected in his face, though he does not notice it. But any outside observer can observe it well.

The face of a man filled with evil thoughts appears like that of a man with pimples. The face becomes like a board indicating what goes on in the mind. As thoughts lead to actions, man's behaviour, speech and conduct affect the tendencies of the mind and give rise to good or bad impulses. Man imagines that no one can know his thoughts.

While entertaining evil thoughts about others, he acts as if he rejoices in their company. But in fact, he is not deceiving others, but deceiving himself. He is only nourishing evil thoughts and degrading himself.

The natural state of a man's heart is pure. But by letting in the poisonous snakes in the form of evil thoughts, he is inviting trouble.

How can a man have peace in his home if there is a snake in it? Bad thoughts in the mind are worse than poisonous reptiles in the house. Absolutely no room should be given for bad thoughts.

Good company leads to the Divine

By our thoughts we can even cure the ills of others. When the friendship of good persons is acquired through good thoughts, the union of the good leads to the realisation of the Divine.

One's thoughts determine the kind of people with whom one associates. A drunkard seeks the company of drunkards, a thief joins the company of thieves, a lawyer with lawyers, and so on.

So, good-intentioned persons should associate only with like-minded persons. If they get into the company of evil-minded persons, even their good thoughts may get polluted.

Men do not realise today the prodigious powers of the mind. The five elements, the five lifebreaths, the five sense organs, the five sheaths are all based on the mind. It is because the immense power of the mind is not recognised, human life is ruined. By belittling the mind, man is dehumanising himself and behaving either like an animal or as a demon. When man broadens his mental vision, he can realise his Divinity.

If the nation has to improve and progress, if you want to experience the Divine that pervades the cosmos, you have to cultivate good thoughts. Do not treat thoughts as trifles. A giant banyan tree grows out of a small seed. There is a saying in TheLugu that even a small serpent has to be beaten with a long stick. In the same manner, even a small bad thought has to be rigorously eschewed.

Discourse to the Summer School at Brindhaavan on 23-5-1993.

I do not recommend the giving up of Karma, for it is not possible. What is generally meant by Karma-Sanyaas is the giving up of rites and rituals prescribed by the Scripture.

BABA

22. From the Mind to the Over-Mind

Can life be redeemed merely by performing Japa?

Only when the mind is subdued, can man become sublime.

THE mind proclaims its astonishing uniqueness to the world by its capacity to express feelings, recognise forms, appreciate the beauty of colour, enjoy different smells, as well as its power of thought. As the world is permeated by these qualities of the mind, these five qualities are allpervasive.

The mind is highly powerful. Once the powers of the mind are understood, the nature of the whole world can be comprehended. When you taste a single drop of sea-water, you know the taste of all the water in the ocean. The drop and the ocean are the same. Likewise, the mind is the world and the world is the mind.

In this vast world, there are today more than 500 crores of human beings. There may be differences among them in name and form and in their food and recreation habits. But when you view them from the physical point of view, all human beings are one. In every human body, there are four forms, which can be understood through proper

Tathva (enquiry). In this enquiry into truth, Tath refers to Paramaathma (the Omni-Self). The Omni-Self is infinite and immeasurable.

To understand the infinite Paramaathma you have to pursue one of the innumerable paths.

Vedhaantha laid stress on nine of these paths- Shravanam

(listening), Keerthanam (singing the glories of God), Vishnuh naama smaranam (remembering the names of the Lord), Vandhanam (offering salutations), Archanam (ritual worship), Paadhasevanam (Service to the Lotus feet of the Lord), Dhaasyam (service), Saakhyam (friendship) and Aathma-Nivedanam (total surrender).

All these nine paths of devotion have been prescribed to enable man to experience their varied novelty.

Constituents of physical and subtle bodies

To begin with, there is the physical body. It is visible to the eye. The body is made up of twenty five constituents: five Karmendhriyas (organs of action), five Inaanedhriyas (sense organs), pancha-praanas (five life-breaths), pancha Thanmaathras (five sensory faculties). In addition, there are four inner instruments: the mind, the will, the ego, and the Anthahkarana (Inner Motivator). All these total twenty four. When these are associated with the Life-Force, you have altogether 25 constituents. As these twenty five constituents have emanated from the cosmos, the embodied being is called Vishva. The physical body is cosmic in form. It is not something that is individualistic. The human state is a manifestation of the collective.

The second body is Suukshma dheham (the subtle one). This is made up of seventeen constituents: the five sensory faculties, the five senses and the five vital airs. Together with the mind and the intellect, they make up seventeen constituents. As these constituents have the quality of Thejas (luminescence), the subtle body is called Thaijasa. The results of man's good and bad actions are experienced by this subtle body. All the pleasant and unpleasant happiness in the world are experienced by the subtle body. This body is also Yaathana (experiential) body because it is a prey to various experiences.

States of awareness and forgetfulness

The third is the Kaarana shareera (causal body). It is made up of only two constituents: Chitha

(will power) and Prajna (Constant Integrated Awareness). Because of its association with Prajna, this body is called Prajnaanam or Praajna.

The fourth one is Mahaakaarana (the Over-Mind). This is self-luminous and effulgent in its original form. This is called "Uniki" (a Being that is self-knowing).

Because of its capacity for self-knowledge, it is also called "Eruka" (Awareness). As against Awareness, there is its opposite, forgetfulness. The physical, subtle and. causal bodies belong to the latter (of forgetfulness). The three states of Jaagrath (waking), Svapna (dream) and Sushupthi (deep sleep) also belong to the state of forgetfulness (or non-awareness of the true Self).

Hence, the true form is Awareness. Awareness is the subtle base. Forgetfulness is gross. But in both the subtle Awareness and the gross Forgetfulness there is a Divinity that is present equally.

This is described in metaphysics in a different way. The Jeewaathma is present always in all the three states of Consciousness and in Awareness as well as Forgetfulness as the Inner Being.

Matter and energy are inter-related

In every padhaartha (object) in the world, the Paraartha (transcendental) is immanent. The padhaartha is perceptible. The paraartha is present in it as energy. Although padhaartha

(matter) and Paraartha (Energy) appear to us as two different entities, their unity constitutes the Divine principle immanent in the cosmos. Energy is the subtle base, matter is its gross expression. They are inextricably inter-related. The Geetha has described this relationship as the one between Kshethra (the Field) and Kshethrajna (the Knower of the Field). The whole of Nature is Kshethra. The Kshethrajna is the One who pervades the whole of Nature and animates it. Without the Kshethrajna (the Knower), the Kshethra cannot exist. Without the Kshethra, the Kshethrajna cannot be perceived. In the Bhagavath Geetha, Krishna declares: Know me also as the Knower in the kshethra. "

In this context, it should be realised that it is by the power of the mind that creation, sustenance and dissolution take place in the cosmos. This truth is expressed in the Brahma Suthra as: "Thath Jalaan." "From That everything is born, is sustained by it and merges in it." Thath (That) is also called Akshara Purusha (the indestructible Supreme person). Kshara and Akshara contain the secret of life. Akshara in common parlance means that which is indestructible. Kshara means that which is liable to change. The secret of life is contained in the terms Kshara and Akshara. The body is subject to decay. The Aathma (Self) is indestructible. The word Akshara contains both the indestructible and the perishable. "A" refers to the Aathma, which is indestructible. Kshara is the perishable body. Akshara represents the unified form of the perishable body and the imperishable Self. "A" also signifies that which is Anantham (Infinite) and Amritham (Immortal). Kshara is that which is impermanent and unreal. From the Akshara emerges the effulgent Divine, which is a combination of both Paramaathma (the Omni-Self) and Prakrithi (Nature). The Divine is immanent in Nature. The One is present in both. This was what Prahlada proclaimed when he told his father, Hiranyakashipu, "Do not have any doubts that He (God) is here and not there" Prakrithi is not inert. It is by the union of Nature and the Divine that humanness acquires its effulgence. Here is a match-box in my hand. The match-box does not burn my hand. I keep it in this towel. The towel is not burnt. We know that there are match-sticks in the box. When you strike the match-stick, a flame bursts forth. This flame will cause a burn if we hold it in our hand. It can set fire to a towel. Where does the fire lie? In the match stick or the coating outside the match-box? It is in both. But only when the match-stick and the outer coating are brought together does the flame emerge. Likewise, there is divinity in the mind and in the heart. But only when the mind and the heart unite does the radiance of Divinity shine. When the match-stick is dipped in water, you cannot produce fire by striking it, because the fireproducing element in it loses its power. Likewise, when the mind is immersed in the waters of sensuous desires, it loses its power to radiate the Divine effulgence. When will it recover this power? When it is rid of its dampness by going through the drying process of Vairaagya (detachment). It is only when this detachment grows in one that he can experience the bliss of oneness with the Divine. Be aware of your true essence As long as man is immersed in sensuous pursuits, he cannot experience the effulgence of his true nature. When man cultivates detachment by realizing the transience of sensory pleasures, then he begins to be aware of his true essence. All forms of ritualistic worship are of no use because they are rooted in duality. Man has to outgrow this state and realise his oneness with the Divine. Man is continually seeking to have a vision of the Divine. But he fails to realise that the Divine is present everywhere in the cosmos. Failure to see the Divine in the visible universe is a mark of ignorance. Everything in the phenomenal universe is pervaded by God. When you see Nature, you see only its worldly aspect. When your mind is centred on God, you see the Divine in everything. The fault lies, therefore, in your dhrishti (outlook) and not in srishti (creation). Transform your perspective. Therefore, from the outset, you have to view everything as a manifestation of the Divine. The difficulty in recognising the truth about the Divine was expressed by the Saint Surdas when he said, "Oh, Krishna! How can I recognise you? You are subtler than the atom and vaster than the vastest. You are present in the eighty-four lakhs of species in the universe, permeating everything in the cosmos, from a blade of grass to the vastest thing in creation. How can I recognise your infinite form?" The great ones experienced God in this infinite form, recognising that the Divine was present even in the wicked and the evil-minded. Waves are essentially the same as the ocean. The infinite number of human beings in the world are like the waves of the ocean. The waves may differ in form. But however innumerable the waves, each of them is essentially the same as the ocean. From the ocean of Sath-Chith-Aanandha (Being-Awareness-Bliss), endless waves of human beings arise. Each of them has the attributes of Sath-Chith-Aanandha, the Divine. You may be a drop in the ocean of Sath-Chith-Aanandha. But the difference is only in quantity (size) and not in quality. The divinity present in man and the divinity in God are one and the same, just as bulbs may vary but the current that makes them shine is the same. The differences in luminosity are related to the wattage of the bulbs and not to the current that flows in them. This applies equally to the differences among human beings. When a person is filled with narrow feelings, he appears inferior to one who is more broadminded and good-hearted. A man may consider himself ignorant, foolish or stupid. But this is utterly wrong.

He is, in fact, not ignorant or foolish. He is intelligent, well-intentioned and wise. All that he needs is a change in attitude to experience these inherent capacities. You have to make the divine effulgence in your heart shine.

Broaden your mind and your vision

People often recommend that one should enlarge his heart. But enlargement of the heart will compel you to go to a cardiologist! What you have to do is to broaden your mind, your vision.

The heart, meaning not the physical heart but the spiritual heart, is inherently broad. It is one with cosmic consciousness. There is no need to broaden it. Only a broad mind is needed to recognise the vastness of the spiritual heart. Narrow-mindedness should go. Narrow ideas of "me" and "mine" should be totally given up in all forms.

On the contrary, starting from the "I", you should go on expanding your consciousness to embrace your family, your village, your nation and the entire world. Then your divinity will shine forth in all its brilliance. This is described as having the vision of one's own true universal Self. This is called the Mahaa-purushathva (Infinite Divine). You have to become this Infinite Divine. You are Divine even now. But this is only a temporary phase as a result of your devotion. What you should aim at is the Infinite Divine that is" unchanging. This divinity is within you. You do not need to acquire it from outside, from anyone else. It is inherent in you.

Strive to realise it. When can you realise it? When you have got rid of the consciousness of the waking, dream and deep sleep states, then you can recognise the Mahaakaarana state (the state of the Super Causal Consciousness).

You have to transcend the gross, the subtle and the causal bodies and realise the Super Causal body. By this process you proceed from the Super-mind, the Higher Mind and the Illuminated Mind to the Divine, which is called the Over-Mind. This is the state beyond the mind; it is called Amanaska (where the mind is absent). It has also been described as the state of Vidheha (where the body consciousness is absent). The mind is associated with the body. The world is associated with the mind. And the world is bound up with pleasure and pain. All these are sources more of bondage than of Bliss. Bliss can be experienced only through the Over-Mind.

Four kinds of offerings to reach the Over-Mind

How is one to reach the Over-Mind? Vedhaantha prescribed the offering of four things as the means' Pathram, Pushpam, Phalam, Thoyam (a leaf, a flower, a fruit or water). The Lord is not secured by offerings of wealth or by flaunting one's power or position. The proper significance of the four kinds of offerings mentioned in the scripture should be understood. Out of the selfish desire to secure Krishna entirely for herself, Sathyabhama made an offering of Krishna to sage Naaradha and tried to buy Him back by offering all her wealth and jewels to be weighed against Krishna. But all of them did not equal Krishna's weight. Then Rukmini was brought and she taught a wise lesson to Sathyabhama regarding the power of devotion. Something, however small, has to be offered to the Lord to secure his grace. This is evident from the experiences of Dhraupadhi and Kuchela. This is also the rationale for the Bhaaratheeya practice of taking some flower or fruit as offering to the Lord when one visits a temple.

In reality, the mere name of the Lord is equivalent to the form of the Lord. When Rukmini invoked the name of Krishna, that was enough to balance the two sides of the scales, in one of which Krishna was seated. Narada said that something more should be offered to lift the scale in which the offering was being made to him. Rukmini then placed a thulasi leaf above the jewels and prayed: If it is true that an offering of a leaf, a flower, a fruit or water by a devotee will win the favour of the Lord, Oh Krishna, submit yourself to this thulasi leaf." The scale in which the thulasi leaf was placed, uttering the name of Krishna, went down immediately.

The body, the heart, the mind and the tears of joy

What is the inner significance of the reference to the four kinds of offerings? Pathram refers not to some kind of leaf which is subject to withering. Your body is the leaf that has to be offered.

Pushpam refers to the flower of your heart. Phalam refers to the fruit of your mind. And Thoyam signifies the tears of joy flowing from the devotee's eyes. These are to be offered to God.

When one offers these things to the Lord, he enters the state of the Over-Mind. This devotion, moreover, should not be a part-time exercise. It should be present all the time, through weal or woe, pleasure or pain. "Sathatham Yoginah," declares the Geetha. The yogis are in constant communion with God. To be yogis in the morning, bhogis (lovers of food) at noon and rogis (victims of disease) in the evening are the ways of men today.

The true devotee is immersed in the Lord all the time and performs all actions as offerings to the Lord. Any action you do, as a teacher or a student or an employee, when you do it in the name of the Lord, it becomes a pious offering. This is the easiest way to sublimate the mind. When you consider your body as gift from God, you will not do any sinful act. When you consider your wealth as a gift from God you will not misuse it. You will make the right use of it. Likewise, when you regard all your talents as endowed by God, you will use them in the service of the Divine.

The four-fold programme on ceiling of desires

In the Sathya Sai Organization, a fourfold programme of ceiling on desires has been laid down.

This enjoins on everyone not to waste food, money, time and energy. Avoiding waste of these four forms of gifts from God is spiritual saadhana. It is the means to Self-realisation.

Spirituality consists in forgetting worldly concerns and immersing oneself in God. This means sanctifying every action in life, whether it be talking or walking or anything else. Reading and writing are also forms of meditation, because they call for concentration. Everything in life can become a form of meditation.

Avoid doing anything in a hurry. It is not difficult to attain the state of the Over-Mind if one has the determination to realise it. Crores of rupees are being spent on exploring space. But very little effort is made to explore the heart within one's self.

When everyone tries to act according to the dictates of his conscience, he will realise the sublime consciousness within him. There are two basic elements in man, the head and the heart. When these two are put to right use, the hands will act in the right way.

Discourse to the Summer School at Brindhaavan on 24-5-1993.

Bhakthi and Inaana are like the pair of bullocks for the cart; both have to pull in unison. Each must keep pace with the other and help to drag weight quicker. Inaana has to help the increase of Bhakthi; Bhakthi has to contribute to the growth of Inaana'

23. Follow the intellect: not the mind

O foolish man, why do you seek God outside like the ignorant musk deer?

Like the fragrance in a flower,

God is right inside you,

if you look with insight.

God is in many; nay, man himself is God.

But strangely and foolishly man searches for God in the outside world.

However just like the ash that covers the fire on the charcoal,

Desire and hatred envelop this divinity in man.

Even as the fire is revealed

when the ash is blown off,

The Aathma will reveal itself to man when he gets rid of desire and hatred.

EMBODIMENTS of love! One and the same man plays different roles in his family and society as the husband of his wife, the father of his children, the child of his parents, the boss of his employee or vice versa, depending on physical relationship, mental attitudes and inclinations, or other circumstances. Love is showered on the daughter but not on the daughter-in-law. The sonin- law does not enjoy the same affection as the son. One does not have the same attachment for one's mother as for one's wife. What is the reason for such differences based on temporary bodily relationships, giving rise to all kinds of attractions and aversions, likes and dislikes, joys and sorrows? It is because man's mind is subject to five types of Kleshas (distortions or complexes)

The five types of mental complexes

Avidhya klesha (Ignorance Complex): Man becomes a prey to several afflictions due to narrow, deluded feelings such as, "I am the body," "I am a Jeeva," and "I am separate and different from God." This is called Avidhya Klesham (Ignorance Complex), which demeans the status of man and results in many kinds of sorrows.

Abhinivesa klesha (Attachment complex): The mind is the abode of all desires, sorrows, likes, dislikes, attachment and aversions. In spite of knowing that the mind is the culprit, which causes attachment to Samsaara (transmigratory existence and attendant miseries), man is unable to detach himself from his mind or otherwise control its vagaries and thereby to escape from sorrows and suffering. This is termed as Attachment Complex.

Asthitha Klesha (Vacillation Complex): The world is full of various vishayas (sense objects) which entice the weak-minded persons who go on flirting from one sense object to another, not realising that these Vishayas (sense objects) will ultimately turn out to be Visham (poison) which deprives them of all sense of discrimination and dispassion. As a result of this men are plunged in endless suffering throughout their lives. This is termed as Asthitha Klesha (the Complex caused by mental unsteadiness).

Lobha Klesha (Greed Complex): Labouring under the delusion that the goal of life is to acquire gold, wealth, vehicles, mansions and the like, man toils ceaselessly from dawn to dusk, to acquire and hoard such possessions beyond his needs. In the process he foregoes even food and sleep, thereby endangering his health. In spite of knowing that all such possessions are temporary, he pollutes his mind by excessive greed and falls a victim to untold suffering and sorrow. This is known as the Lobha Klesha (Greed Complex). Dhvesha Klesha (Hate Complex): For his own selfish ends, man gets trapped in a maze of unending desires of various kinds. And when his desires are not fulfilled, he unreasonably blames it all on other men as well as on God Himself and thus he develops hatred against both man and God. Hence this is designated as Dhvesha Klesha (Hate Complex).

All these complexes are nothing but mental aberrations which are injurious to man himself.

Having become a victim of such aberrations, man forgets his real Aathmik nature and falls a prey to all kinds of sorrow and misery. In this world we find very few people who are always blissful.

A large majority of people are found to be swinging between joy and sorrow. There are some others who are always sad and depressed and have never tasted bliss even once. There again, are some others, who are not bothered about anything and who lead a sort of mechanical life like animals. What is the reason for such a state of affairs? It is not due to Prakrithi but due to the different ways in which man is influenced by his own mind. Four categories of human beings Based on their mental predisposition, human beings may be classified under four categories as follows:

Dheva-maanava (Godly man): "Brahma Nishttha Ratho Dhevah," it is said. This means: He is a godly person, who rejoices in communication with Brahman, and is ever established in Brahman, dedicating all actions to God, looking upon all things as His manifestations and joyfully experiencing all forms as reflections of the Divine. The Godly man finds self-fulfillment in his life.

Maanava-maanava (The human man): "Sathya Dharma Ratho Marthyah"--He alone is a man who takes delight in truth and righteousness having faith in the scriptural injunction, "Sathyam Vadha, Dharmam Chara" (Speak the truth and practise righteousness). He conducts his life

according to the twin principles of truth and right conduct. He considers duty or responsibility as more important than rights or privileges. He is endowed with virtues such as kindness, compassion, generosity, charity and forbearance. Thus, the human-man leads the peaceful life of a he, use-holder.

Maanava-dhaanava (Demonic man): "Madhyapaana ratho Dhaanavah" (A demon is one who takes pleasure in drinking intoxicating liquors). The demonic man spends his time in such Thaamasik activities as eating, drinking, sleeping, etc. He is concerned solely with his own selfish interests and enjoyments, and never with the happiness of others. Kindness and compassion are alien to him. Not even a trace of discrimination and dispassion could be found in him. It is his nature to deride, abuse and hurt others. What is worse, the very sight of great and holy men will arouse in him feelings of jealousy and hatred. A person whose mind is filled with such evil thoughts and feelings is called a "demonic man."

Maanava-pashu (The animal man): This type of man wastes his life in seeking only sensual pleasures from birth to death. In this respect he is worse than beasts, because the latter are at least governed by instinct while there is no consideration of reason and season for the human brute who has no control over his ever-growing evil qualities. Discipline the mind to achieve the goal The mind is at the root of all such perversities. If the mind is properly understood and disciplined and is applied to get rid of wicked qualities based on selfishness, it will lead to a purposeful and fruitful life. It is basically owing to selfish thoughts that one fails to achieve the goal of human life.

We should first, of all have firm faith in the inherent divinity of man. On the one hand, there is the manifested world, which attracts the attention of our body and senses and also entices our mind, and on the other hand there is the unmanifested divinity, which is the substratum of the manifested universe. The two are only aspects of one and the same divine principle of Sath-

Chith-Aanandha (Being-Awareness-Bliss). Since all is Sath-Chith-Aanandha, the Upanishaths have declared: "Puurnamadhab, Puurnamidham etc.," meaning that both the unmanifest and the manifest aspects are fully divine. Although man's essential and true nature is Sath-Chith-Aanandha (Being-Awareness-Bliss), he is perpetually haunted by all sorts of problems, difficulties and sorrows. What is the reason? It is because he follows the mind and not the Buddhi (intellect).

Follow the guidance of the intellect
To live as maanava-maanava (human man) is only a mediocre life. Man's aim should be to live as a Maanava-Dheva (Godly-man). But man today is leading the life of an animal because of desires and hatred only. Non-fulfilment of one's desire results in hatred. The true nature of man is neither joy nor sorrow, but it is Sath-Chith-Aanandha (Being-Awareness-Bliss) that transcends both joy and sorrow, which are transient. Hence man should endeavour to experience this Sath-Chith-Aanandha. Living in this vast universe, you should try to cultivate correspondingly broad feelings. But, misguided by the mind, people are harbouring narrow feelings and thus making their lives miserable. The solution to this is to follow the guidance of the intellect, eschewing the vagaries of the mind.
The foolish man who relies on his mind will degrade himself,
By becoming worse than a brute.
While the wise person who follows the guidance of his Buddhi
Will become Pashupathi.
Why is there this importance for the intellect? Because the sense organs are superior to the body, the mind is superior to the sense organs and the intellect is superior to the mind. The Aathma (the Self) is superior to the intellect. Thus it can be seen that the intellect is the nearest of all to the Self and hence it has the advantage of receiving the maximum potency and effulgence from the Self. Therefore, man should utilise his intellect to understand and experience the Self and lead a blissful life.
Man owes to God all his achievements
From birth to death, man is spending his time and energy for the sake of food and sleep. Is this an achievement befitting the status of man? Some may boast about their scholarship or their pilgrimages or about the worship and rituals performed by them and about the high offices held by them. To think high of themselves based on such achievements is a sin.
Only when people recognise whole-heartedly that they owe all such achievements to God's grace, they would be true to their salt. Man is degrading himself into the state of a demon by thinking one thing, saying another thing and doing quite a different thing, violating the muchneeded harmony among these three activities.

Once Aadhi Shankaraachaarya reached the holy city of Kaasi (Benaras) after the successful completion of his Digvijaya Yaathra (country-wide campaign) of philosophical debates. There, while having dharshan of the presiding deity of the place, Vishvanaath, he offered the following prayer: "O Lord! I have come to you for the expiation of my sins." How strange?
Aadhi Shankara explains his three "sins" Aadhi Shankaraachaarya had sanctified his short span of life by studying all the scriptures of the land as well as writing many volumes of brilliant expositions and profound commentaries on the Vedha, the Upanishaths and other texts. Also he had conducted his life on the lines laid down in the scriptures. Because of his glorious achievements, he is acclaimed, as the very incarnation of Lord Shiva. It may, therefore, seem strange and even paradoxical that a great person of his standing should have prayed like that. What, then, were the sins committed by him? He himself gave the answer as follows:
"O Lord Shankara! My first sin is that in spite of my knowing (and also teaching others) that God is beyond mind and speech, I have tried to describe you through the several sthothras (hymns) composed by me. This betrays lack of conformity between my thought and my word."
"Next, having been convinced of the scriptural savings that God pervades and permeates everything in the manifested universe, I have been preaching this truth to one and all.
Nevertheless, I have come to Benaras to have your dharshan. This shows that my thoughts, words and deeds are at variance with one another This is my second offence."
"Thirdly, I have firm belief in the teachings of the scripture that one and the same Aathma (Self) is immanent in all beings and there is no difference between the so-called Jeevaathma (Individual Soul) and the Paramaathma (Over-Soul). While I have been proclaiming this truth in all my discourses, I have now come here to stand before you as if we two are separate and different from each other. This is my third lapse. Hence I pray that I may be absolved of all these three sins, of which I am guilty."
The true meaning of "sin"
From the above episode in the illustrious life of Shankaraachaarya, we have to learn an important lesson. The popular notion is that indulging in activities like accusing, abusing or physically hurting others alone are to be considered as sin. But contrary to this notion, thinking one thing, saying another thing, and doing quite a different thing, constitute a sin which is committed by most people. Only when man gives up this kind of sin and ensures harmony and unity in his thought, word and deed, can he be considered Puurna Maanava (a perfect man). This is why the Upanishaths have declared that a Mahaathma (great-souled person) is one who practises purity and unity of thought, word and deed, whereas he whose thoughts, words and deeds are at variance with one another, is a Dhuraathma (wicked one). In this connection, the mind plays a crucial role, and it can either elevate a man to the greatest heights or degrade him to the lowest depth. We should be master and not slaves of our mind. Proper mastery over the mind is the challenging task confronting mankind today.

Man should develop high and noble ideals and feelings in all spheres of life--physical, moral, religious and spiritual. He must not be content with sensual pleasures which are temporary and leave a trail of misery. It is the mind that is responsible either for one's upliftment or downfall.

One should not hastily rush into action, based on the whimsical dictates of the mind. It is only after considering whether the action is good or bad, right or wrong, that a person with a disciplined mind acts. Such a man will ultimately reach the goal of self-realisation.

Discourse to the Summer School at Brindhaavan on 25-5-1993.

A cleansed heart is the most appropriate altar. In that fragrant bower the Lord will establish Himself. At that instant another incident too will happen: the group of six vices that had infested the place will quit without so much as a farewell. When these vices quit, the wicked retinue of evil tendencies and vulgar attitudes which thrive on them will also break camp and disappear, without even leaving their addresses! Then man will shine in his pristine splendour of Truth and Love, and finally succeed in merging with the Supreme.

24. Essence of the Shad-Dharshanas

THE Shad-Dharshanas are six great works (Philosophical systems) that shed light on Indian culture, which many consider to be based on blind belief. Explaining the Vedhas explicitly, they share with the world the wisdom contained therein.

The six texts are based on (a) The Vedha (b) Non-belief and (c) Inner Vision. They explain

incidents and events that pertain to all the three times of past, present and future. They have taught man how to do away with suffering, restlessness etc., and lead a good life by removing the dirt in him. They explicitly state that the Vedhas, the Vedhaantha and the knower of Vedhas are all one and the same. They explain the nature of the mind which is responsible for all intelligence, intellect and discrimination. These six great Dharshanas (texts) are: (a) Nyaaya (b)

Vaisheshika (c) Saankhya (d) Yoga (e) Puurva-Meemaamsa and (f) Utthara Meemaamsa.

Nyaaya Dharshana forms the life for other dharshanas

Nyaaya Dharshana was given by Sage Gauthama and hence it is also called Gauthama

Shaasthra. This forms the life for the remaining five Dharshanas. We have measures to judge the quantity and volume of material in the world. Even in respect of Divinity, a measure must be available by which the proof may be obtained. Vedhas speak of four kinds of proofs. They are

(1) Prathyaksha (direct perception), (2) Anumaana (inference), (3) Upamaana (comparison) and

(4) Shabdha (sound).

Prathyaksha pramaana: This is called direct proof, as it is perceived by the sense organs. These organs are only instruments. The mind enters them and helps them to function. There are some limitations on the senses like disease and imperfection, that make proof obtained by this method to be infirm. For example, a normal eye can see all colours, a jaundiced eye sees everything as yellow. Though the laddu is sweet, the tongue of a malaria patient classifies it as bitter. Here, there are two points of view. From the point of view of the matter it is sweet. But from the point of view of the senses it is bitter. It can be concluded, therefore, direct proof is not complete evidence for real justice.

Padhaarth and paraarth: Students must remember that the findings of ancient Indian sages were based on extensive investigations that went beyond the four regions of mind and even the Over-mind. They were the expositions of saints who had the vision of the Divinity.

Many scientists today are anti-God and are proud that they have discovered something our ancient sages could not. How wrong! Our ancient seers concluded that all these findings of today pertain to the Low-mind and are associated with Padhaarth (matter). Their findings were based on the study of the Over- mind, associated with the Paraartha (Supreme Source) and were hence of a highly elevated nature. Before the shining splendour of these, today's investigations and discoveries look like glow worms. Investigation of the heart is the real proof. Any enquiry made with machines is subject to errors just like the machine itself. It is the investigation of the heart that will vouch as real proof. These four methods of obtaining proof is very important because all religions attach great importance to justice. It was said of Mohammed the Prophet, that when his son committed a sin, he was awarded the 100 strokes by whip prescribed by the religion for that particular mistake. When he died after 50 strokes, the Prophet ordered that the remaining 50 be carried out on his son's grave!

Anumaana pramaana: This is based on doubt and inference. One sees cranes in the distance, for example, and infers that water Could be available there. Similarly, one infers about fire by seeing the smoke, from the Svabhaava (natural traits), one. makes out about the Svaruupa (the real form).

Upamaana pramaana: This kind of testimony is based on comparison. It enables us to understand many things that cannot be otherwise easily understood, by comparing them to some others that can be. By studying the Praathibhasika (apparent reality) and the Vyaavahaarika (empirical reality), one can infer about the Paaramaarthika (transcendental). For example, by studying the foam (empirical reality) that originates from the waves (apparent reality), one can understand the reality of the Ocean (transcendental reality). This is possible because both the foam and the waves originate from the Ocean, and mirror its character in them. This is the example cited for all beings emanating from the Ocean of Divinity as waves.

Shabdha pramaana is the ultimate proof

Shabdha pramaana: It is the proof garnered on the basis of sound. It is considered to be the ultimate proof. It is based on the testimony of the sound that the Vedhas, Vedaangas, Upanishaths and the Bhagavath Geetha came into existence, But, to be able to perceive this testimony, one must be properly attuned and extremely careful. It needs one to travel beyond the mind and the senses. At this stage of Samaana chittha (mental equanimity), sound becomes the very form of God. The eight forms of God are Shabdha Brahma mayee (sound), Charaachara mayee (All pervasiveness), Paraathpara mayee (Transcendental nature), Vaang mayee (speech), Nithyaanandha mayee (blissful), Iyothir mayee (Effulgence), Maaya mayee (illusion) and Shree mayee (prosperity).

Another significance in this is that God is most pleased with sound in the form of Saama gaana (songs in praise of God). It is said that Lord Vishnu once told Naaradha that He would always instal Himself wherever his devotees sang his glory with a full and devoted heart. This is the actual sound--the songs that contain the glory of the Lord. In this way, Nyaaya Dharshana lays down the four methods of gathering proof. Students must listen to sounds that are Divine in nature. Nyaaya Dharshana declares that it is the human conscience that is the best judge. Conscience is beyond the mind, it is the vibration of life. Words originate in the mind. But, when it comes to the tongue (body) it appears different under different situations. When it goes beyond the mind, the word becomes Truth itself. Vedhas call this truth as Bhur. It is the radiation. In the materialization of body, this truth is all-pervasive and is the vibration of that truth which is the conscience. Hence from Radiation comes Vibration; from Vibration comes Materialization. The Vedhas and their form It is said that the word is itself Rig Vedha. It is all effulgent. The mind is the Yajur Vedha and life is itself Saama Vedha. Life gives breath. From this breath comes the song. Hence Saama Vedha is the form of life itself. The Yajur Vedha is the form of the Manthras that originate in the mind. The three Vedhas hence collectively state that God who is the effulgent One (as stated by Rig Vedha) must be prayed to and worshipped with the Manthras (as stated in Yajur Vedha) and pleased by sweet songs that are most endearing to Him (as said in the Saama Vedha). God is most pleased by songs alone and not by words or speeches. Once you understand and follow the six Dharshanas, you need not do any other saadhana. Without understanding such lofty ideas, Indians are today groping in ignorance. Our ancient truths are eternal. You must know that they are based upon investigations of a kind unattained or unattainable in the world today. Vaisheshika dharshana speaks about speciality of atoms

Sages and seers, in a state of deep dedication understood and grasped the spiritual reality in all matter. They hence gave little importance to the kind of secular education seen today. They understood that the same five elements within the human body constituted the tree, mountain and the entire creation. Only the forms differed.

The saints propounded that matter is constituted of atoms, but each atom was unique in itself.

The difference between two atoms is the Vishesha (speciality) and the Vaisheshika Dharshana

(that which brings out the speciality) speaks about this speciality.

Matter and nature are reality: Matter is unchangeable. It is only the form that changes; for example, the mud and water are creation of God; they are matter. The pot made out of mud and water may assume various shapes. It may break and splinter but the mud and water remain.

Hence matter being unchangeable, is reality.

Nature consists of the five elements that are unchangeable. For example, sound is of different kinds, but the Primordial Sound, Aum is unchanging. All the Sapthasvaras--Sa, Ri, Ga, Ma, Pa,

Da, Ni are Vikaaras of the Omkaara (the different forms of the Primordial Sound). Matter and Nature are hence both unchanging.

Equality of men and women: This is another truth propounded by the Vaisheshika Dharshana

Men and women differ only in gender and one is not weaker than the other. Just as woman cannot work without man's help, man also cannot function without woman's help. Basing its aadhaara (proof) on the world, this Dharshana also states that society is in trouble when it does not accept this equality and attempts to diversify the essential unity in both men and women.

Do good to the society: When man constantly asks for happiness, he expects the society to give it to him. He asks for peace and expects the world to give him peace. How is it possible? If he asks himself the question what he has done for the good of the society, there is no answer. If he asks himself the question what he has done to promote peace in the world, there is no answer.

Only if one does good to the society and strives to promote peace in the world, can he expect good from the society and peace from world. This is another

Vishesha (speciality) expressed in the Vaisheshika Dharshana.

Inherent unity of all humans

This Dharshana explains there is enormous power in the microcosm that man can harness by learning with discretion. It is this kind of study that explains the differences in the past, present, future and also the truth that remains the same in all the three times.

The Shukla Yajur Vedha has made an exhaustive study of unity in diversity. The same shows up in the Vaisheshika Dharshana, which states "All are birds of the same house (family); all men are children of the same mother; all are flowers of the same creeper; all are citizens of the same nation."

1. The first statement is: "All are the birds of the same house." The house is the body. It is like a nest that restricts the bird. The bird remains in the nest till it acquires wings. It then leaves its nest and flies away to freedom. In the same way, with the wings of Antharjinaana (Wisdom), man can develop detachment and fly away to liberation. This much is common in all men.

2. The second statement explains: "All are children of the same mother." This mother is 'Mother Earth.' All of us are born from earth, as we are composed of mind. A newly born baby is bathed and made to sleep in the cradle. But yet, in the baby's hand can be found mud, after a few hours.

This is ample proof that man's body is made of mud.

3. The third statement is: "Flowers of the same creeper" This creeper is the heart. The flower is the sweetness of the heart-to-heart relationship that each man has with another. All hearts are thus inter-related.

4. The fourth statement is: "All are citizens of the same nation." We are all members of the human race. Ours is a nation of men and not animals or rocks. We form the human society. Just as the waves originate from the ocean, all the different forms come from the Sath-Chith-

Aanandha.

Vaisheshika appeals not to fight over petty matters

With these explanations, the Vaisheshika Dharshana points out the essential unity among all men. Thus the Vaisheshika appeals to them not to fight over petty matters.

Nimitthaadhaara and Muulaadhaara: There is nothing good or bad in creation. But, as long as body consciousness exists, one has to experience both. It is said:

For one who lacks intelligence and wisdom, detachment becomes a burden.

For one who lacks knowledge, the body becomes a burden.

For one who lacks love, the mind

becomes a burden.

Man must develop discrimination to be free from all these burdens. It enables him to understand the Truth or the basis of everything. What is this truth? One must know two things: The Nimitthaadhaara (instrumental) and the Muulaadhaara (basis). Muulaadhaara is the basis on which the Nimitthaadhaara (instrumental) builds something. Example: Mud and water are the Muulaadhaara---the basis. The potter becomes the Nimitthaadhaara, who uses them and makes pots of different shapes and sizes. Man must control senses to the extent possible. The child Prahlaadha told his father Hiranyakashipu "O father! you have earned victory over all the three worlds, but are a slave to your senses." Such a one who knows not himself and is a slave to his senses, has no authority at all. He who succumbs to the enemies within, can never defeat the foes without. Man must control his senses to the extent possible. Otherwise, he will suffer grief. Man must not commit the blunder of resigning everything to his fate.. With enquiry and determination, one can achieve anything. But today, man is becoming a slave to the mind. Man is the master of mind. He alone is a real man who understands the reality--that the microcosm is in the macrocosm and the macrocosm is in the microcosm. Saankhya dharshana is related to numbers. It was Sage Kapila who gave to the world this philosophical text. Saankhya Dharshana is also called Kapala. Elucidating that only a person with sense control is true man, it states that it is impossible otherwise for man to live in this physical frame with infinite powers. At sight, this Dharshana appears to refute the statements in the Nyaaya and Vaisheshika Dharshanas. It argues that nature is a combination of numbers Saankhya (and hence the name) --and is full of conflicting forces. It explains how to reach God with the help of numbers. Divine exists in this Nature like oil in the oil seeds and fragrance in the flowers. Like the seeds and the flowers, Nature is just the external form of the Divine. This truth is called Saankhya or Thathvam. It is the power of enquiry that shows the Truth. Yet another testimony to this cause-effect theory was also placed forward by Saankhya Dharshana. Creation can only be made by a combination of two forces. These two forces are God and Nature. This Dharshana says that Nature is composed of twenty-four aspects--the five organs of knowledge, the five organs of action, the five senses, the five life breaths, Manas (mind), Buddhi (intellect), Chittha (reflective mind) and Ahamkaara (ego). Each one appears as a conflicting, unique force. For example: where there is fire, there can be no water. But yet the Saankhya dharshana splits these conflicting forces into just three subheads to facilitate an easy understanding--that of the jeeva (individual), Prakrithi (nature) and Paramaathma (creator). But the Saankhya does not stop with the Creator. It says that: "When, to the 24 numbers is added the Self, the number becomes 25. While the 24 numbers are matter, the 25th is the Self--the Creator. The process of evolution of the human soul begins with all the 24 numbers of matter, crosses the 25th (Self) as well and finally merges in the Shiva aspect--the 26th. While the 'Self' forms a part of the human being in the heart, it is also in the Nature. He is only a noble one who can see the two-in-one aspect of the Self being within as well as in the Nature. Man is like a bridge between the visible Nature and the invisible all-pervasive Divinity. He is hence called madhyama---the middle one. What we consider as invisible is what is actually guiding the consequences contrary to our belief. Mind is a white paper on which is recorded the life-records of several births of ours. It is called the Chittha. He who is hidden in this and does the recording is called Chithraguptha--the hidden recorder. This power is also called the Prajna Shakthi--the Radiation. This Radiation vibrates the Life force (Vibration) that helps this body to be alive and function--Materialization. What is Moksha? It is not something that needs to be specially earned. The Saankhya Dharshana explicitly states that actually, no special effort need be made to attain liberation. When man realises his true form, he is liberated. When man destroys all the desires in him, he is liberated--Moha Kshaya is Moksha. In terms of numbers, the Dharshanas explain that as long as man identifies with 24 numbers and the Purusha (Self) aspect, he can never realise that he is the truth. It is only when he travels beyond to the Super-mind that he can fathom the Truth. That is the Divine mind. It is sacred, and, from this stage, one can step on to the Illuminated-mind from where is visible only the Higher-mind and nothing else. When the roof is removed, one can see the sky from where he is sitting. Similarly when the roof of the Lower-mind is removed, one can see the Higher-mind, and finally the Over-mind. In this way, by showing the numbers, this text helps in guiding man from Nature to God.

Start the process now to reach the goal of life

Yet another fact elucidated in the Saankhya Dharshana is the relation between man and Aathma.

Aathma can never be obtained by investigations of the secular kind. It is natural and allpervading, whether the body is present or not. For example, though one cannot see the electricity flowing through the wires, the moment a bulb is connected to a socket attached to the wire, the bulb glows, proving the presence of electricity. Similarly, the Aathma stays permanently. Only the body comes and goes.

Saint Thyaagaraaja sang that however high a bird flies, it will have to come down and rest on a tree at some time. Similarly man has to submit to Divinity one day whatever be his reservations.

That is the goal of life. Instead of realizing it at some later stage of life it is better to do it now and start the process.

This Dharshana states that it is a demonic quality to forget God. Man must remove the demonic quality, develop the human quality and reach divinity. Just as one blows off the ash to see the latent fire, one must blow away the ashes of bad qualities on the self with the air of Naamasmarana. Just as one removes the moss on the water with-the hands to reveal crystal clear water, man must remove the moss of sensual pleasures with the hands of good-acts.

Naamasmarana is the best way prescribed for the Kali age to attain liberation.

When man submits to illusion, man himself becomes illusion. This illusion is an aspect of the 25th number. When we understand the secret between the illusion and Divinity, we ourselves become the 26th aspect Divinity. One cannot gather all the five organs of action and knowledge, and the five senses together. But exercising control and following some limits, Divinity maybe realised. A scrupulous adherence to discipline is essential.

In England, it was discovered that when a farmer fed and milked the cows at erratic times due to some tensions in the family, the quality of milk was much poorer than what was originally obtained when feeding and milking was done on a strict schedule.

That is the importance of sticking to discipline in life.

Nature does not deceive

Man must never neglect anything however small. Tiny termites may destroy an entire block of wood.

The Nyaaya dharshana states the differences between two atoms.

But the Saankhya dharshana states that the entire creation is in the microcosm an atomic structure. So, why talk of a separate atomic structure? God is this microcosm. That is the significance of the Vedhic statement:

"Anoraneeyaan Mahatho Maheeyaan" (Smaller than the smallest, mightier than the mightiest).

Pathanjali's eight-fold yoga

Sage Pathanjali has prescribed eight kinds of Yoga in his text for man to enjoy health and happiness. These eight are Yama, Niyama, Aasana, Pranaayaama, Prathyaahaara, Dhaarana, Dhyaana and Samaadhi. It states explicitly that Yoga is not just for the ochre clad monks, renunciates in the forest and celibates. Modern investigations show that in today's machine age, it is the ordinary man who actually needs Yoga.

Man struggles the whole day to feed and foster his family. This exertion and motive makes him restless and robs him of his sleep. He then resorts to artificial means to induce sleep and rest to the body, like taking sleeping pills or taking intoxicating drinks. This artificial induction has disastrous side effects and combined with the lack of rest, causes heart diseases, blood pressure, etc. Research has hence concluded that Yoga is ideally suited for all these problems.

The sacred texts were all born in India. But due to the rise of blind beliefs that are consequences of modern education and civilization, Indians show scant interest or belief in these works of brilliance. It is the misfortune of Indians that today, these sacred texts are much more fostered and believed abroad, who were quick to realise their importance.

They investigated and understood that due to lack of rest, the body weakens. This causes the breathing process to speed up. This in turn spoils the lungs. As the blood circulation also speeds up, a stage arrives when blood pressure sets in. Medicine cannot cure it completely and hence Yoga is prescribed.

This was a finding, supported by researchers at the International University in America and some others at the University of Hawaii. Some of these researchers even reversed their views on Yoga after they saw the results of their studies.

A healthy mind and body is essential

It was shown that the bliss and vitality enjoyed after two hours of sleep, could be got by just twelve minutes of Yoga. Though man can adjust without food, he cannot do the same without sleep and rest. Lack of sleep is a common problem in several countries, including India. This extracts a heavy toll on one's health. To achieve the four goals of life--Dharma, Artha, Kaama and Moksha--a healthy mind and body is essential.

In old Mexico, an experiment conducted on the inmates of a prison showed amazing results.

While previously the inmates were all restless and sick, after the practice of Yoga, within two months, they were all hale and healthy.

Yet other investigations resulted in inducing addicts of drugs, smoking, drinking, etc. to give up their habit. It is currently estimated that about 3 to 4 lakh students abroad practice Yoga.

In India, the birth-place of Yoga, there is not much progress or interest. Devaki was said to have lamented that though she had suffered the birth pangs, it was given to Yashodha to enjoy and foster the Baby Krishna. In the same way, though Patanjali gave up his life to experience and share this great Yoga in India, it has only fallen on barren soil. The main cause for this is the lack of Shraddha (Interest) and Bhakthi (faith) in not only Yoga but also in all the scriptures.

Importance of discipline

Pathanjali prescribes some major disciplines as prerequisites for deriving the benefits of yoga, notably with respect to diet. The food taken is to be both Mitha and Hitha, (limited and nutritious). Since food and water are only medicines to cure the ailment of hunger and thirst, they should be taken in that spirit. Taste should not be the yardstick to eat food, for it is only to protect the body that one eats, after all.

Foreigners realised this and found that by reducing chilies, sai.t, tamarind etc. from their diet and by eating limitedly, they could stay healthy. Pathanjali states that excess food weakens the nerves, causing blood pressure problems. Man becomes prone to excitement easily.

Lack of health among men also causes agitations and restlessness in society. In Germany, a research conducted on monkeys showed that the primates, when practised sitting silent for 3 to 4 hours daily, soon became very intelligent, developed their memory and were highly enthusiastic--in some cases, even more than man!

A similar experiment on a student considered a dullard and roguish, showed that with the help of Yoga, in just a few months, the boy became one of the most intelligent and well-behaved boys.

Encouraged, even the boy's 70-year-old father took to Yoga. Soon his body was functioning with the vitality of a 50-year-old man!

The importance of Praanaayaama: This Yoga consists of three parts, each to be done one after the other. It starts with Puuraka, then Kumbhaka and finishes with Rechaka.

Puuraka: This is the inhalation of breath. One must note carefully the time taken for this process, the duration of time can be justified as per the capacity of the person. Care must be taken to see that gasping and such kinds of exhaustion must not occur during the process.

Kumbhaka: The breath taken in must be retained for the same duration as it had taken for the inhaling process.

Rechaka: Once thus retained, it must be exhaled in the same time limit as that taken for inhaling and retention.

Caution to be exercised while doing Praanaayaama

While doing Praanaayaama, one must not concentrate or aim to hold the breath for as long as possible. One must instead concentrate on assuring that all the three processes take the same amount of time. Otherwise, this process spoils the lungs. Doing the same under an inexperienced teacher also can prove to be disastrous.

The next step is to breathe in through the right nostril alone. This is the Ida. One must then retain the breath at the Sushumna (between the eye-brows) for the same time duration as that taken for inhaling, then release the breath through the left nostril only, again taking same time. This last step is Pingala.

The Yoga Dharshana combines with the Nyaaya and Vaisheshika Dharshanas in many of its contents. Through the Nyaaya Dharshana, one understands that a proper decision ought to be made regarding the measure to be appropriately selected for the Yoga. This is evident in the way caution is advised in limiting the time factor during the Praanaayaama, taking into consideration the individual capacity.

These good thoughts are Divine thoughts and Yoga prescribes a process called Angaarpanam as the method to achieve this end. Angaarpanam means to offer all of one's limbs and organs to the Lord. It does not mean to cut them off and place them at the Lord's feet. It means to use these limbs and organs only in actions that will please God. This is where, the importance of discrimination is stressed in Yoga.

When such Angaarpanam is done, real Aanandha results. Bliss is related to the heart. When used in pursuit of sensual pleasures, only happiness results. This is called Santhosha, as it means some + thosha - limited happiness. This Santhosha is related to the head, the centre of responsibility.

One must hence take care to think well, contemplate on the thought and then put it into action.

This is the real 3 HV's---the values of Head, Heart and Hands. It is the unity of thought, word and deed.

Dhaarana can be done without doing Praanaayaama

Students must cultivate tolerance to the extent possible. Though difficult at first, it will become second nature to you with constant practice, as stated in the Bhagawath Geetha. Even if students find Praanaayaama difficult, they can still do Dhaarana. It is the singlepointed concentration of some chosen object. It is not very difficult. If practised well, it leads us on to Dhyaana (meditation) easily. It is said that with the power of Yoga, one can control anything, including the evil from entering the mind through the senses, in any form. Senses are like doors to houses, where only authorised personnel may enter. Yoga helps strengthen this guard. This absolves us of animal qualities like ego, restlessness, fickleness, anger, jealousy etc.

In the first place, if you see God in each form, within three days you can feel the Divine feelings latent in you beginning to develop. Otherwise, even 30 generations of saadhana will be of no use.

Puurva meemaamsa and Uttara meemaamsa

Sage Jaimini's concentrated and persistent life-long efforts resulted in this work. Meemaamsa means enquiry. It is called Puurva because it was in existence even before the Vedhas.

The Puurva Meemaamsa deals with the regulations and methodologies of devotion and wisdom.

Both are related to the Karma kaanda (the field of action). It traces the route to realising Brahman as first starting with Karma, then on to Dharma and finally to Brahma. This is mentioned as Karma Jignaasu, Dharma Jignaasu, and finally Brahma Jignaasu.

Karma Jignaasu: It pertains to all the actions performed by man. Even breathing and blood circulation are described as a kind of Karma. In terms of worldly explanations, it may be compared to the mixing together of ingredients like salt, tamarind, chilli, etc. to prepare chutney.

Just as the ingredients must be mixed in correct proportions, the actions in daily life must also be in ideal proportions.

Dharma Jignaasu: This may be compared to the tasting of the chutney made. Tasting brings out any defects in it. This may hence be compared to the identification of defects.

Brahma Jignaasu: Having identified the lapse, rectifying it is the Brahma Jignaasu state. It may be said that experiencing worldly life is the Karma Jignaasu. Understanding that there is no permanent joy obtainable from this world is the Dharma Jignaasu and introducing this bliss into daily life through introspection is the Brahma Jignaasu.

Man is unable to absolve himself of all worries and anxieties despite worshipping all the deities.

This is because he has forgotten moral and ethical living methods and takes the body to be the real self. When questioned as to one's identity, he introduces himself by his name first. When asked for more details, he gives his profession next. When probed still further, he names his country. But man is not the name or the profession or the country. He is the Aathma. The correct answer is "I am Aathma." One may assume an alias; one may change his profession or even migrate abroad in search of better living. But, his true self is changeless.

Shivam without Aathma becomes shavam

When a person keeps saying "I" and "Mine," "I" actually is related to the Aathma; "Mine" is related to the body--Dhehi and Dheham. It is only when all the organs and limbs combine together that a body results. Similarly, the Aathma is a combination of Mind, Intellect and Samskaara. It is the Aathma that enters and prompts the organs and limbs to operate. A body with Aathma in it is hence called Shivam (auspicious). When the Aathma leaves the body, all organs and limbs come to a stand-still. The body becomes inert. Hence such a body is called Shavam (dead-body).

Aathma is a combination of Mind, Intellect and Samskaaras (tendencies). The mind thinks, reflects and forms thoughts based on the promptings of Aathma. The intellect, endowed with the triple power of discrimination, analyzing and deciding also functions due to Aathma.

Samskaara means elevating culture and is the basis of rebirth. Our present actions become seeds of samskaara that decide the fruit in the next life. It is hence advised that doing good and constant contemplation of God, will enable one to be peaceful at the end of one's life. This can surely be achieved by constant practice, as is stated in the Bhagavath Geetha. Good actions lead to good samskaaras, that confers a good birth.

Selective adherence to Karma kaanda

Jaimini investigates the paradox that though the body is temporary, why emphasis is laid on our

Karma (bodily action). This, he concluded, was necessary to purify the mind. Hence the body must enter into actions. But today, people take from this Karma kaanda whatever part is useful to them and discard the others. A story is said about a lazy celibate, who came to a house to beg for alms. The kind lady, though it was an odd time, did not want to break a family tradition. She requested the celibate to have his bath and ablutions at the river nearby, while she cooked something for him. The lazy person answered that "Lord Govindha's name is itself a hearty bath." The wise lady saw through the fake saadhu (mendicant) and countered: "Very well then!

The same Govindha's name will also be your food."

It is because of this kind of selective adherence to Karma kaanda, that man has become so impure.

People argue that Nature is a natural entity, in the sense that, no one has created it. Matter and energy need someone to combine them. Oil, wick and container may be present. But it needs someone to strike a match and light the lamp. Though the subject and intelligence are present, a teacher is needed to impart a proper guidance for being educated.

Jaimini states that good education must impart good habits, ideals, truth, responsibility and discipline besides intellectual knowledge.

Puurva meemaamsa deals with anger control

To achieve all these, Jaimini advises purity. Without this inner purity; Divinity is a distant illusion. Clouds arise from the sun and cover the sun itself. But, it is a temporary effect. Man must also have patience to wipe away the ignorance that covers his self. Patience is another virtue mentioned in the Puurva Meemaamsa.

Method to control anger: The text advocates a very logical method to counter obstacles. For example when grief strikes, it advises that one must think of joyful incidents. This gives joy. It also conducts enquiries into the fields of Ajnaana-Prajnaana.

Control of anger and overcoming the obstacles in daily life, is also dealt with. The Puurva

Meemaamsa states that one must slowly analyze the situation when angry. By the time a conclusion is reached, tempers cool down considerably. One may also do any one of the following to control temper: (1) drink a glass of cold water; (2) see the mirror, where you distorted features will repulse you enough to cool you down; (3) walk fast and alone. This speeds up your circulation that draws away anger; (4) open a tap and watch your pitch of song with that of the falling water. In all these attempts, the time and attention definitely help cool tempers.

Do not give in to excitement

One must try to involve Utthara Meemaamsa into practice as well, to the extent possible.

Man must not give in to excitement. Arjuna was highly perturbed when Krishna was leaving to make peace with Kauravas, as a last ditch attempt. He entreated that a war was best suited as the Kauravas would not concede the demands of the Pandavas. But, the same Arjuna collapsed at the sight of his grandfather, teachers, cousins, relatives and friends lined up to do battle. He did not want to live with their blood on his hands.

Hence students must stay calm and composed. You need not become excited to acquire something. If it is destined to reach you, it shall be delivered to you wherever you are. You must remember meanwhile to concentrate on protecting your righteousness; which in turn will protect

you. "Dharmo Rakshathi Rakshithah," it is said. Hence, while following your daily routines, contemplate always on God. Wherever you are, whatever you do, do it with divine feelings.

Indian Culture and Spirituality at Brindhaavan.

25. Jealousy the root cause of evil

THE main purpose of human life is to realise one's true identity. It is only when you recognise the sacredness of human life that you can realise the Divine. It is sheer ignorance to consider man as made up of merely the body, mind and sense, which are only upaadhis (instruments). To identify yourself with the body is as absurd as to consider yourself as the house in which you dwelt or the car in which you travel. It is essential to realise the truth of your divine identity through the instruments of the body, mind and intellect. The Inner Self of Divinity is referred to by several synonyms such as Dhrishta (Seer), Chith (Awareness), Chaithanya (Consciousness), Sath-Chith-Aanandha (Existence, Knowledge and Bliss) and so on. It is Paripuurnam (complete or whole) and Sthiram (permanent). You may enquire whether the Inner Self is the subtle, causal or super-causal body, whether it is Bhakthi (devotion) or Inaana (wisdom), whether it is inert or awareness, whether it is Hiranyagarbha (cosmic mind or womb) or Vishvam (cosmos), whether it is Pinda (microcosm) or Brahmaanda (macrocosm), whether it is the beginning, the middle or the end. The answer is in the negative. All these are related to duality, while the true Self is nondual.

"Ekameva Adhvitheeyam" (There is only one and no second at all). However, when you perceive the principles of Pramedhya, Prameya and Pramaana, you can understand this Supreme Principle. Pramedhya is reflected in the individual awareness. Prameya is that which is reflected in Prakrithi (Nature). Pramaana is the nature of Chittha (the mind intellect principle). These constitute the triple aspects of seer, seen and the act of seeing.

How to realise the sacred Inner Self

The question is how to realise the sacred Inner Self. Even in worldly things, Divinity is present.

We see endless waves emanating from the vast ocean. Though the ocean is one, the waves are innumerable and apparently not of the same form. But all the waves contain the essence of the ocean and its quality, whether they are big or small. Similarly, though there are infinite forms of beings in the world, each of them contains the essence of Divinity within. The same Divinity is everywhere. This Divinity existed in the past, is in the present and will continue to be there in the future. It is, therefore, beyond the three categories of time and is eternal.

Every human being is a combination of Brahma thathwa and Jeeva thathva (Omni Self and individual Self). The waves in the ocean are caused by the wind blowing over it. Similarly, Maaya (illusory power) causes the diversity of names and forms in the world. The original basic entity, Sath-chith-aanandha, is the only one that exists and all the variety of beings in the world are all like the waves of the ocean. This Sath-chith-aanandha is termed as Asthi, Bhaathi and Priyam, which are changeless, while name and form will always be changing. This phenomenal world is called Jagath, which implies, it is "coming" and "going." The only one that is everpresent is the collective form of Divinity. Human life emerged from the Divine, is sustained by the Divine and merges in the Divine.

Birth and death go together

Though the body is transient, it is given only to do Dharma (righteous deeds) and reach the goal.

"Shareeram Aadhyam khalu Dharma-Saadhanam" (The body is essential for realising Dharana).

Birth and death go together. Death follows birth like a shadow. One cannot say when, where and how death will occur. It may be in childhood, youth or old age, in a house or outside, in a town, or a forest, on the ground, in water or in the sky. One should realise that death is natural phenomenon and avoid worrying about it.

Since you are provided with the faculty of discrimination, you should use it in the right way and not with-selfish motives. When you use it for collective benefit, with social awareness, it is very beneficial. It is because, man is using his intellect for selfish purposes, he is not happy. If it is used for the common benefit of all, one can enjoy real happiness.

Sujnaana, Vijnaana and Prajnaana

Raavana was a most powerful king, fully accomplished in all the arts, with mastery of the Vedhas. He had performed a severe penance. But, because he used all his talents for his selfish Purposes, he met with an ignominious death. He was warned by his wife Mandodhari, who was a paragon of virtue, standing for Sujnaana (right knowledge), that he was not following the righteous path as he had stealthily kidnapped Seetha, wife of Raama. She questioned him whether he would keep quiet if his wife had been kidnapped. She thus taught Sujnaana (beneficial wisdom). But Raavana ignored her advice.

His brother, Vibheeshana, tried to teach him Vijnaana (discriminatory wisdom) by telling him that he was not using his Buddhi (intellect) in the right way and was doing a reprehensible act which was unbecoming of an emperor like him. Raavana ignored this too.

Later, Hanuman advised him in terms of Prajnaana (Supreme Wisdom). He told Raavana that in spite of his Vidhya (vast scholarship and knowledge), he had failed to recognise the Aathma as the reality of an individual and with body consciousness he was indulging in a despicable act losing control over his senses and mind. He had brought Seetha, the Mother of the Universe, with a base motive.

Raavana paid no heed to the three types of advice and as a result courted disaster. The life of one who acts out of selfish motives is in the hands of others, while the one with a pure heart and selfless motive, seeking the welfare of the world, has his life in his own hands. Raama was an example of this. A really virtuous human being will see divinity in himself and also in others.

Human life is nothing but a reflection of Divinity. It is ignorance to consider God as living elsewhere in a remote place. When you are yourself the embodiment of Divinity, of what avail is it to seek the Divine elsewhere? You are the Supreme Brahman. Forgetting the truth of man's inherent Divinity, worrying themselves about what is happening somewhere, people lose their moorings. These worries are not natural, but acquired from outside. All have to realise that death is the end of everyone who is born. Birth is what is important. When the meaning of birth is realised, one transcends birth and death (Janma-raahityam). Therefore, in human life, one should understand this Para thathva (transcendental truth) and seek to realise the Divine. That is the main task of the aspirant.

Jealousy is the cardinal evil. However, many kinds of aberrations are appearing in human life. The root of all the evils arising in the world can be traced to the operations of "One hand." When something untoward happens, people try to attribute it to some foreign "hand" or to the hand of some religious sect. These are meaningless speculations or wild conjectures. They are exercises in untruth.

There is a "hand" indeed. But what is that hand? It is the hand of Asuuya (jealousy). This is a dire malady which has entered all spheres of life in the world today. There is a remedy even for the dreaded disease of cancer. But there is no way of curing the malaise of jealousy. The final end is the only cure for it.

Today the malady of jealousy has invaded every field of activity. As a result, such gruesome events occur from time to time. There are three offsprings for Asuuya (Jealousy). They are Dhvesha, Krodha and Lobha (hatred, anger and greed). There are three children begotten by Anasuuya (The one who is totally free from jealousy). They are: Brahma, Vishnu and Maheshvara, symbolising Sahana (forbearance), Prema (Love) and Saanubhoothi (compassion).

This is the difference between Asuuya and Anasuuya. The former gives birth to demonic qualities. The latter begets Divine qualities. The demonic qualities produced by Asuuya (Jealousy) result in the destruction of the discriminating power and lead men to have no sense of what is temporary and what is permanent. Consequently they pursue evil ways.

Asuuya is the reason for June incidents. We often ask what is the reason for a particular action or event. There is no need to search for reasons. Just as hunger arises out of digestion, jealousy arises out of the disappearance of noble motives. The jealous man cannot bear the sight of a noble person or of one who is handsome and attractive. He cannot bear to look at one who is getting a good name or who has secured an eminent position. This jealousy has "no reason or season." Those afflicted with this malady begin to entertain many evil thoughts.

In the world today, Sai's name and achievements are getting known the world over. To counteract this and to diminish it by some means or other, envious persons are resorting to certain types of propaganda. These propaganda campaigns will not affect My reputation in any manner. My purity is the root cause of the glory of My name. It is not due to any publicity or propaganda. My all-pervading selfless love is the cause. No one can affect this pure love. I have no ill-will towards anybody. Svaami has done no harm to anyone. How can anyone harm Svaami? It is impossible.

"All activities of Sai are utterly selfless" These happenings should be attributed to jealousy. Devotees should not be perturbed by such events. Those who have true and firm faith will not be shaken in any way by these happenings.

You have listened to the speeches of Goldstein, Sinclair and Haksar. What has impelled them to make these declarations? It is their firm faith. Although they are living in far off places, they are sustained by their firm faith. For those consumed by envy, only the false is apparent. They cannot have even a glimpse of truth.

So, whatever may happen, this Sathya will remain unmoved., Adhere, therefore, to truth.

Observe purity in life, embark on a life of selfless service. Believe it or not, there is not a trace of selfishness in Me. No one is qualified to point a finger at My purity. How can anyone recognise the grandeur of My divine purity? Only an intelligent person can recognise another's intelligence.

How can a fool recognise intelligence?

My goodness is the cause of My invulnerable purity. It is not that I want to glorify Myself. It is because the time has come when I have to speak out.

All activities of Sai are utterly selfless and aimed at the well-being of the whole world. You are aware that we built the Super Speciality Hospital. In this Hospital, we have given a fresh lease of life to many mothers and fathers and many children were enabled to enjoy the love of their parents. Who could do this? What great good fortune is it that this small, obscure village has found a notable, place on the world map? This is a source of jealousy. Nobody can fully comprehend the significance of Sathya Sai's actions, whether small or big.

Human beings cannot accomplish such things. Only those who do not choose to come here, see and find out the truth about what is being done here, and derive joy from that experience, are preaching all kinds of things, to the world, sitting in their air-conditioned rooms. Are these persons qualified to preach to the world? People whose minds are polluted should be ashamed, to claim that they are striving for the welfare of the world. Let them enter the social arena, do good deeds and engage themselves in selfless activities. Only then can the truth be understood.

On the contrary, if one is filled, with envy, his words and preachings will be meaningless. Truth is the life of the spoken word. A word without truth is lifeless. Sanctity of Sathya Sai Central Trust

All the propaganda that is being done is false. It is a form of cheap publicity. Do not be affected in any way by such publicity. Adhere to your truth and your purity.

There are some other matters on which I have to speak because of the large gathering here and what you may have read in the media. Fire cannot burn our Sathya Sai Central Trust. It is such a sacred trust. We alone know with what sacred concern we are spending every naya paisa. The world cannot know this. For the past twenty years, the members of the Central Trust have been rendering selfless service. When they have to go to Madras. Delhi or other places, they travel at their own expense, pay their hotel bills and do not draw a single paisa from the Central Trust. In the case of other trusts, the members submit their bills even for their conveyance charges. The Sathya Sai Central Trust members are using the funds in such an utterly sacred manner. Reports have been published that the trust members are after power and position. They are not interested in office. They have not lacked positions in life. They have come out of love for Svaami, and not for any position.

Pure manner in which Trust Funds are handled

You must also note how the funds of the Trust are drawn from banks. During the past 20 years not once have we drawn any cash from the bank. All payments are made only by cheques. Our Institute teachers are paid their salaries not by cheques but by the amounts beings credited to their accounts from month to month. The accounts are being maintained in this strict manner. It is because the funds are handled in this pure manner that we have not sought or have had any need to solicit donations.

This body is now 67 years old. Not once have I stretched My hand to seek any donation. What is the reason? When we are engaged in sacred task, there is no need to seek funds. Our purity will bring in funds of its own accord. There is a dearth of men of integrity. Where there are such persons there is no problem at all in securing funds.

I do not misspend even a single naya paisa of Trust money. Nor is there any room in our Trust for anyone else to draw money. Every cheque has to be signed by two persons. On every cheque, nobody can sign without My signature on it.

It is a sin to level charges against the Trust

There are reports that some crores of Trust funds in cash have been swallowed by some persons.

This is totally false. We do not handle cash at all. If anybody offers cash, we see to it that the money is given to the bank manager in the presence of a Trust official in the residence of the donor himself. Therefore, no one can point an accusing finger at the way our trusts are managed.

In these circumstances, it is a sin to level such charges against our Central Trust.

In the whole world, you cannot find any Trust that is being managed in this pure manner. That is why our institutions are growing ceaselessly. Not now alone, but as long as the sun and moon last, there is no danger to our institutions.

This propaganda stems from the frustration born of jealousy. In the peaceful atmosphere that was pervading here, such propaganda has caused perturbation. This is highly sinful. It is not good to indulge in such acts. Do good if you can, but if not, remain silent. You will be rendering help if you don't do any harm. But it is not good to do harm.

Some may ask why Svaami had so far refrained from answering the traducers. For everything there is a right moment. The Kauravas, for instance, were harassing the Paandavas in many ways, insulting and humiliating them. The Kauravas were well aware of the Paandavas' divine potencies. Each of the Paandava brothers was a man of great prowess. But they did not make use of their strength. They bore their troubles in silence. The Kauravas attribute this silence to cowardice and weakness. But this was not so. No one can realise the strength that underlies forbearance. Likewise The Sathya Sai Trust chose to maintain forbearance. This forbearance represents courage, strength, truth and non-violence. Our students are like pure refined, gold And, now, about our students; you may compare them with anybody, you cannot find anyone like them anywhere. It is now 28 days since the events of June 6th happened. Our students have been offering prayers every day, observing fasts, and thinking day and night, without, food or drink, as to how they can remove the stain that has been caused by this episode. They are in anguish and distress. Are there not likely to be a few stones in a bag of rice? In an big group there may be a few black sheep. On account of a few miscreants, it is an outrage to blacken the entire body of students. Our students are like pure refined gold. They are prepared to do anything for Svaami's sake. You have all listened to the song sung by a young lad at the beginning of the function. He sang; "We are ready to offer our lives to you Bhagavaan." It is not proper to blame all for the crimes of a few. We have to put up with this situation for some time. Have patience. When you go to sleep at night, one or two mosquitoes may bite you. The next day you use Flit to get rid of all mosquitoes. It is because of the association of other mosquitoes with the troublesome one that they also get killed. Hence the advice. "Thyaja durjana Samsargam" (Give up association with wicked persons), Never get into bad company. You must gain good company. You have to put up with calumny. A good man becomes a victim of calumny even if he is remote from bad people, just as a moth damages all kind of cloth, whether it is ordinary cloth or valuable silk, because it cannot discriminate between what is useless and. what is precious. So also an envious person does harm to good and bad people alike. "Whatever I say is for your good" By forbearance, good people will achieve their objectives in due course. Hence, do not worry about what has happened. Such things happen in the world from time to time. There is one other matter about which I have not spoken to any one so far. There are many devotees who ask why, when such things were impending, Svaami did not warn Raadhakrishna or try to save him. I am explaining the matter from the spiritual aspect and not from the mundane viewpoint. Both of us took our meals at 7.00 p.m. Raadhakrishna was sitting in the ground floor. Svaami told him: "Raadhakrishna, let us go upstairs. Don't sit here." "Svaami, if I go there, I cannot get sleep at 7 o'clock itself," said Raadhakrishna. Svaami asked him: "If you cannot sleep, what are you going to do here? You can do in upstairs what you intend to do here. I don't ask you to go to sleep. Get up immediately. Come, come," I insisted repeatedly. See how things happen. Death overtakes one, in whatever way you attempt to circumvent it. At last Svaami assumed an angry tone and rebuked him: "Your misfortune is your stubbornness." I pretended as if I was very angry with him. He felt pained. Svaami retired upstairs. He reflected for some time. He had been with Svaami for 22 years. He knew that whatever I said was for his good. He went to the kitchen and brought a tumbler of buttermilk. He came smilingly. "Svaami, you have been angry with me. Please drink this buttermilk and calm down." "Raadhakrishna! It is not anger, I have said everything for your good." said Svaami. Raadhakrishna said, "Svaami has perhaps some doubts that I may go out somewhere and talk to others." I replied, "If I have such doubts, will I keep you with me? Not at all. There are no doubts. I am saying this for your good." And then I said; "I am not used to drinking buttermilk at night. Why have you brought it for the first time to night?" He replied: "I felt like giving buttermilk to Svaami tonight and hence I brought it." "It is good that you got this idea. I shall take it, but, on one condition. I shall take the buttermilk as desired by you, but you must give me your word that after going down to place the tumbler in the kitchen, you will return upstairs." He said: "I will certainly return." I do not take buttermilk at all. I took a little quantity and told him, "I have taken buttermilk to please you." He had a pure heart. He asked me: "Svaami! Can I drink the rest of the buttermilk? I said: "Why throw it away? You may drink it." He drank it there itself. Svaami said: "But put back the tumbler and come up." He went down. He had given his word. But, he had perhaps the doubt that if he remained downstairs Svaami might call him. This kind of stubbornness is one of the traits of young people. They will not listen to the words of elders. If only they listen to their words, no danger will befall them. Apprehending that if he remained downstairs I might call him, he placed the tumbler in the kitchen and went to his sister's house. The messenger of death dogged him at 10.00 p.m. This is how it has happened. Whatever I say is for the good of others. I say only sacred things and nothing that is unholy. Whether you believe or not, I may tell you that all the time I only think of what good I can do to better the lot of the people. Svaami never thinks about Himself. The three 'desires' of Svaami After the Summer Course was over, Indulal Shah, V. Srinivasan and others came to Me with plans for various projects to be carried out in the next three years. Each year they wanted to carry out one project. I told them: "You should not do anything for Me. You may do anything you desire for the sake of the people, the society and the poor." I told Srinivasan: "I have three desires." Even I have some desires, not for My sake. "Today, middle class farmers are experiencing difficulties in cultivating their fields. Owners of five or six acres are not able to get labourers to work on their farms and do not have cattle for ploughing the fields. Therefore, you get 70 tractors to be presented to small farmers on My Seventieth birthday in 1995." Action followed right in the wake of my words. The Escorts people were immediately contacted on the phone and the tractors were brought for the selection of those that would be suitable for small farmers. As Svaami was offering the tractors free to small farmers, the Escorts people offered a concession in price. Orders were placed immediately for 70 tractors. Srinivasan asked what was Svaami's second wish. Svaami said that young people were going about in Puttaparthi without any occupation and taking to bad ways. Some useful work should be provided for them. The Super Speciality Hospital is far from the township. Even the Post Office is at a great distance. Many people are having difficulty in going to these places. To provide employment to these unemployed youth and provide an essential amenity for the public, Svaami suggested that 70 autorikshaws may be provided to the unemployed. "If these young men are given these vehicles, it would please me," I said. Orders have been placed for these autorikshaws. Svaami's thoughts are devoted to the good of others. The third wish was this: There are a number of women belonging to good families, who have no independent means to sustain themselves and are not in a position to take up jobs outside. I felt that such women should be taught tailoring and given a sewing machine so that they can earn some income independently. Immediately 70 sewing machines have been purchased. A fourth wish: Marriage should be performed for 70 poor couples without regard to caste or creed. The marriage should be such that they should feel happier beyond all their previous experiences in life. It is not enough to give them wedding clothes and the Mangala-suuthram. The Mangala-suuthram should be attached to a gold chain. In addition, to enable them to lead a life of ideal householders, each couple should be provided with a home. In this manner, all My thoughts are devoted to promoting the good of others. Is any Government or wealthy person thinking along these lines? None at all. Jealousy rears its head in envious folks. When such sacred things are being done, jealousy rears its head in some persons. This is the outcome of their sins. These envious folk will not do anything good themselves, nor will they allow others to do good. This is not a human quality. A true human being should be filled with large-hearted sentiments. The truth can be known only when one comes and sees what is being done here. Instead, if men whose hearts are filled with the poison of envy indulge in all kinds of slander from remote places, it can be described only as demonic conduct and not that of a human being. Nowhere in the world can you see the kind of work that is being carried on here. Is Free Education offered elsewhere in outside India on the lines offered here? One has to spend at least Rs. 20000/- to get a child admitted in the Ist Standard. Here, from kinder-garden to post-graduate studies, education is totally free. As for heart surgery cases, in hospitals outside, no patient will be admitted unless Rs. 4 to 5 lakhs are deposited in advance. In our Hospital, we are spending one crore of rupees a month

(Rs. 10 million). Which Government or millionaire is doing such a thing? There are some such persons who spend 10 laks of rupees in a Hospital with the hope of earning Rs. 10 crores.

They are making it a business. Here, we are not charging anything. There is no place for business' here. It is not proper that such good and sacred work should be misrepresented.

"I am in the heart of devotees as well as the wicked"

Sai's heart is as wide as the sky. Even the sky may have its limits. Sai's heart is boundless. Some say Sai is in the hands of some persons. Yes, I am indeed bound; bound by the devotees as well as by the wicked. In my view, I have more love for the wicked than for the good. The good devotees remember Me only occasionally. But the wicked remember Me all the twenty four hours. I am thus in the hearts of the devotees as well as the wicked. I cannot be caught in the grip of anyone.

In regard to every matter, my thoughts are always sublime and exemplary. You must note that Svaami's life is in His own hands and not in those of anyone else. If I will it, I can live for as long as I please. I can also terminate it at will. It is my will that decides and not any other person.

The reason is My purity, selflessness and divinity. What other testimony is called for? The life of the pure hearted is in their own hands and not in those of others.

Embodiments of the Divine Aathma! Today is Gurupuurnima. Who is a Guru? Truth is the Preceptor for the whole world. Uphold truth with steady mind and a pure and selfless heart. That truth will be your protector, your armour and your unfailing companion. There is no Dharma higher than Truth. Dharma protects its protector. If you protect Dharma, that Dharma will protect you.

Therefore, without being cowed down or shaken by these incidents, you must go forward with faith and fortitude. Keep truth as your ideal. Fill your hearts with purity and love all and hate none. Then Divinity will manifest itself in you.

An inspiring and reassuring discourse to a vast gathering of devotees from all parts of the world, who had assembled in the Puurnachandhra Auditorium on Gurupuurnima Day, 3-7-1993.

Your devotion to God is best expressed by achieving the control of the senses. For the senses rush towards the temporary and the tawdry; and they foul the heart. I require from each of you no other gift, no more valuable offering than the heart I have endowed you with. Give Me that heart, as pure as when I gave it to you, full of the nectar of Love I filled it with.

BABA

26. The Divine and destiny

The Goddess of Wealth flourishes at the tip of the tongue.

Friends and kinsfolk grow from the tip of the tongue;

Bondage and realisation emanate from the tongue;

The tip of the tongue makes death certain.

EMBODIMENTS of the Divine Aathma! Speech constitutes the wealth of the world. Speech promotes friendship and kinship. It is speech that lends sweetness and affection to all relationship. Speech, again, leads the way to death.

Speech is endowed with immense power. The power and potentialities of speech represent the Divine feelings of man. Hence, one has to be very vigilant in speech.

The mysteries of creation are marvellous. When two persons meet at any time or place, the differences between them are patent. Their forms and manners differ. They differ in their cleverness and intelligence. Their opinions also vary. Without understanding what underlies these differences, the materialist thinkers emphasize the differences.

Today, growing numbers of intellectuals, ignoring the unity that underlies the diversity, propagate the cult of differences. The good persons who realise the unity behind the apparent diversity are dwindling in numbers from day to day. This is highly unfortunate.

Lay stress on unifying factors than differences

Man's foremost task is to recognise the unity that underlies the multiplicity. If one enquires into the matter with a pure and unselfish mind, one will see what is common to all beings. Birth and death are common to all men. Hunger and thirst are experienced by every person. These are truths that apply to all persons, whether they are destitutes or millionaires, whether they are scholars or ignorant men.

Every human being has a body and a Spirit. Consequently everyone enjoys a certain degree of freedom. This is described as "Free Will." Not comprehending the nature of this freedom, men tend to stress the differences rather than the unifying factors.

Man is a combination of two kinds of traits. One is the animal nature. The other is divinity.

Swayed by evil qualities like lust, anger, greed, delusion, conceit and egoism (the six enemies of man), he degrades himself to the level of the animal. On the other side is the one who makes right use of the good qualities conferred by God such as intelligence, wisdom and virtue, pursues

the path of truth and righteousness, engages himself in divine activities and ultimately realise the Divine. Man can choose either the path that leads him to animality or to Divinity because the potentialities are common. What is important is the path one chooses. "As the thoughts, so the outcome." The mind determines the goal one pursues. Hence it is essential to divert the mind on the right path and realise the true nobility of human existence. If you have a knife, you can use it for slicing vegetables and preparing a good meal. The same knife can be used for taking away another person's life, behaving in a demonic manner and ceasing to be human.

State of the mind depends on nature of thoughts

Thus, the same mind is responsible for either animal or divine behaviour. In Vedhaanthic parlance, this is stated as: "The mind is the cause of human bondage or liberation." The state of the mind depends on the nature of the thoughts with which it is filled, even as the smell of a paper depends on what is wrapped up in it, flowers, fish or potato chips. When the mind is used properly, man achieves fulfilment.

Men perceive the world in terms of diversity. But, as the scripture declares- "There is only the

One. The wise call It by many names." People experience heat and cold, joy and sorrow, darkness and light, profit and loss. All these are opposite aspects of the same thing and not two different things. For instance, darkness helps one to enjoy light. If there were no darkness, light would have no value. Darkness is absence of light. Light is absence of darkness. Darkness lends value to light. Sorrow contributes to the value of happiness. Likewise, censure has its value. It enhances the value of praise. Censure is the stepping stone to praise. The two are interdependent.

For all the experiences in the world relating to pleasure and pain, joy and sorrow, the cause is one. All the troubles one experiences are stepping-stones to happiness. This is the essence of Vedhaantha.

Hence, for man, the proper spiritual saadhana consists in cultivating equal-mindedness, without succumbing to grief or getting elated over a happy event. In daily life, people experience all kinds of happiness and distress. The scripture declares: "Treat joy and sorrow, profit and loss alike."

Peace, Truth and the Self

Embodiments of Divine Love! What is the purpose of your joining the aashram? What is its inner meaning? You have come to lead a peaceful, sacred and blissful life dedicated to the Divine.

This peace does not lie in the external world. Peace is your very form. Truth is equally so. It is folly to think that you have to search for Truth somewhere. To know one's Self is Truth. To experience the Self within is Peace. Peacelessness is caused by involvement in external experiences, ignoring the Self within.

All things, good and bad, in the world are related to man's actions.

Your well-being is based ion your conduct. Your wealth is dependent on your actions. You will secure peace and prosperity when your conduct is good. This calls for Sahana (forbearance). The Upanishathic prayer says:

"Let us have forbearance towards each other. Let us rejoice together.

Let us all strive together."

Forbearance is a potent instrument. Dharmaja (the eldest of the Paandavas) was able to score many victories with the asthra (weapon) of forbearance.

Forbearance is not a sign of weakness or cowardice. No other weapon has the power of forbearance. It should not be used only as an individual instrument. It has to be experienced collectively also. That is the reason why the scripture has commended collective forbearance at the very outset of the spiritual quest. What is its inner meaning? "Let us live and move in harmony. Let us grow together. Let us cherish the wisdom that we have acquired together. Let us live in complete harmony without any misunderstanding." Therefore, do not have any misunderstanding amongst you, All of you should live in amity as the children of one mother.

Human effort is necessary to enjoy God's grace

God is all-powerful. But, at the same time human effort is also necessary. Without it, man cannot enjoy the benefit of God's grace. It is only when you have both Divine grace and human endeavour that you can experience bliss, just as you can enjoy the breeze of a fan only when you have both a fan and the electrical energy to operate it.

In the great drama of cosmic life, the Cosmic Director, God, is also an actor. The Cosmic play is governed by certain rules and regulations. Because He is the Almighty, God cannot behave in an arbitrary manner. His actions have to be in accordance with His role in the cosmic play. There are certain rules as to how one should act according to the time, the place and the circumstances.

He cannot behave according to His whims just because He is all-powerful. For instance, the officer who lays down the rules for controlling traffic cannot disobey them on the ground that he is their author. Likewise, the Creator has to conform to the rules laid down by Him for creation.

Every place is a temple for God

Not recognizing this truth, men, who are involved in worldly ways, ask questions as to why in certain situations God did not use his limitless powers to avert certain untoward events. These arise out of a narrow conception of things, without understanding how the Divine operates. They are concerned only about themselves and their interests. They ask: "Here is a sacred temple. How could something unholy occur in such a place?" They see things from a narrow perspective.

They do not realise that for God the entire universe is His temple. So, whatever happens anywhere, happens in God's temple. The Cosmos is the form of God (Vishnu). God is immanent everywhere in the cosmos. When a temple is constructed on a piece of land, it becomes a temple, if it is knocked down, it becomes mere land again. For God, every place is a temple. "His feet and hands, his mouth and eyes and His ears are everywhere. Encompassing all, He remains pervading everything." (Stanza from the Geetha).

When things are seen with this broad perspective, it will be recognized that anything can happen to anyone at any place or any time. No one is competent to determine where a certain thing should take place. Life may end in a town, in water or in a forest. Each one's life will end in the place, the manner and at the time prescribed for him. This is inescapable. This is according to the operation of Nature's law based on the pairs of opposites in life--the concept of dhvandhva (duality). There is a continual conflict between these opposites (pleasure and pain, birth and death, etc.)

Krishna's role as envoy of the Paandavas

By way of illustration, here is an episode from the Mahaabhaaratha. Krishna was all-powerful.

He was aware that peace parleys with the Kauravas would be of no avail because of their stubbornness. He knew that war was unavoidable. But, in the context of worldly affairs and having regard to public opinion, he had to make an effort to promote peace. Consequently, he went as an envoy of the Paandavas, made a vain effort to convince the Kauravas to accept a peaceful settlement, acted as if his peace mission had failed and told the Paandavas that war was inevitable. All these were scenes in his play.

It is asked, when Dhruapadhi was being humiliated in various ways, when Dhuryodhana was unabashedly behaving in a wicked manner in pursuance of his evil intentions, why did not Krishna intervene to prevent them? Why did not Krishna destroy the wicked Dhuryodhana? The reason is the time had not yet come for it. Bheema was the destined instrument for slaying Dhuryodhana. Dhuryodhana had to meet with his death at the hands of Bheema and not of Krishna. Krishna was waiting for the appropriate time.

Therefore, whatever has to happen, how, at what time and in what manner, has been predetermined and the mere fact that I am nearby will not serve to alter them.

In Duryodhana's audience hall, Sishupala was hurling abuses at Krishna. But Krishna waited.

The appropriate time had to come. Only when the cause, the time and the necessary action are in fruitful combination will the event happen. Krishna was patient till the time was ripe. When the moment for action came, Krishna put an end to Sishupala.

The Lord observes His rules and regulations

The Lord always adheres to His laws, the rules and regulations laid down by Him. Man does not always abide by the rules when he faces trouble. But, whatever the situation, the Lord observes His rules and regulations. Therefore, no one can determine what limits and laws govern the Lord's actions.

Jesus Christ declared: "I am the Son of God." But when he was crucified, God did not come to his rescue. Christ even cried out in anguish: "Oh Father, Why are you not coming to save me?"

But the Lord acts having regard to the time, place and the circumstances. He accords to each person the honour and esteem that is due to him. Christ became a glorious figure in the moment of his crucifixion.

Thus by a certain action, in a certain context, a person achieves name and fame. For instance, d pleaded with his mother to be allowed to fight his way through the maze Padhmavyuha, organised by the Kauravas. The mother tried to dissuade him in all possible ways.

In the last resort, she told him: "The maze is a dreadful trap. The great Bhishma is commanding the enemy's hosts. Neither your father Arjuna, nor your uncle Krishna is near. Your wife is enceinte. It is not proper in these circumstances for you to embark on this perilous adventure."

She spoke all this as a mother.
 But Abhimanyu had to speak out from the son's point of view. "Oh Mother, is it right for you to ask a lion's cub to refrain from attacking a herd of petty animals? You should have ordered me to go and fight them like a warrior and return victorious. Instead, is it not infamous if I am asked to keep away from the fight?" Saying so, he left for the battlefield.
Abhimanyu could not refrain from going to the battlefield. No warrior can fail to respond to the challenge for a fight. Death is preferable to the infamy of cowardice. Recognizing the validity of Abhimanyu's reasoning, his mother permitted him to go. "Son! You may go. May all the goddesses protect you even as they blessed their sons when they set out to fight the demons. Above all, let Shri Raama be your protector." All these blessings did not save Abhimanyu.
 The Lord is a witness to all happenings Abhimanyu was destined to die in the Padhmavyuha (the Lotus Maze). Could the blessings save him? Because he died in the Padhmavyuha he found a place in the Paradise reserved for heroes. Such fame is not got by dying in an accident or from a disease or old age. For every kind of fame, there is a specific form of death. Death however, is born together with birth. And death must come in the way it is bound to come. The Lord, however, is a witness to all happenings. In some instances, He gives prior 'indications and warnings. When these are heeded, the person concerned gets sanctified. When one disregards them, he forfeits his sanctity. One, therefore, should do his duty. The Lord's heart is boundless. He is concerned about the collective well-being of all. Man, however, tends to have a narrow and limited perspective. A narrow outlook can lead only to a limited result. God makes no distinction between one group and another. He loves all equally. He blesses all. He wishes good for every one. "Let the whole world be happy, is His benediction. Whatever people's desires are, they will be fulfilled by God only according to their deserts. One cannot go to the Ganga with a small tumbler and hope to get more than a tumblerful of Ganga water. But when one acts according to the Lord's command, the capacity of the container may get enlarged. In the Mahaabhaaratha, Krishna wished to avoid the charge that he had done nothing to prevent the great battle. Hence, he chose to go as an ambassador of peace to the Kauravas, though Arjuna expostulated with him in strong terms that there was no use in having peace parleys with the wicked Kauravas.

 Overcoming calumny manifests glory of the Divine
 The noble and the pure have been subject to calumny in all ages. From ancient times to the present, the evil minded have assailed the high-souled men who have sought to serve their fellowmen. Such untoward events happen from time to time. Only when these attacks are faced and overcome does the glory of the Divine become manifest. No great man has ever achieved eminence without overcoming abuse and calumny, trials and tribulations. Gold acquires greater brilliance by being heated in the crucible. Likewise a diamond becomes more brilliant when it is cut to produce more facets. Trials and tests are stepping stones to fame for good people. Devotees should develop firm faith. The world is steeped in trouble because of the divisible forces which have broken up human society on various irrational grounds. Devotees should develop unwavering faith, disregarding whatever happens in the world. Those who have pure and unselfish hearts will remain unshaken in their faith like an iron ball which remains unmoved even in a storm. But those who are swayed by mundane desires will waver like a dried leaf blown by a slight breeze. Let your devotion be firm. It is good for you. Consider for a moment where you are and for what purpose you have come here. You have come to this aashram (hermitage) to fill your hearts with sacred thoughts. Not the aashramites alone, but everyone has to develop fraternal feelings and eschew hatred altogether. You have to develop equal-mindedness and face all situations in life with equanimity and fortitude. Anger, hatred, ostentation and pride are animal qualities. Love, kindness, forbearance, compassion and sacrifice are natural human qualities. Spirituality does not consist merely in offering worship, doing bhajans. It calls for the elimination of the animal qualities 'in man and striving for the realisation of oneness with the Divine. "Adhveshtaa sarva bhuuthaanaam" said Narasimhan in his speech earlier. Bear no ill-will towards anybody. The means to prolong or shorten one's life lie in one's own hands. Your life-span is prolonged when you are full of joy, when you are calm and filled with pure thoughts. When you are filled with envy, anger, hatred and conceit your life-span gets shortened.

The envious man gets no sleep at all. Sleeplessness ruins the health even more than lack of food. Envy torments a man all the time. These troubles lead to shortening one's life. As for hatred, the man filled with it cannot even bear the sight of his enemy. He suffers from hallucinations which consume his body and spirit.

True devotees should always be smiling

Anger is the cause of destroying the divine potencies in man. Hatred ruins a man's circulatory system. Envy drives the man crazy by depriving him of his sleep. In that condition he cannot relish his food. Thus, these three evil qualities--hatred, envy and anger---are wasting diseases.

When you consider yourselves as devotees of God you should get rid of these three evil qualities.

Lead peaceful and pure lives. To call yourselves devotees but to look with envy at others is totally unbecoming. True devotees should always be smiling. Exude joy always. That joy will manifest itself when you experience your oneness with the Divine within you. If you are unhappy, it is because you have not experienced the Divine.

Don't worry about what has happened, what is happening or what is to come. Let things happen in their due course. You have, however, to learn lessons from what has happened. "Thasmaath Jaagratha! Jaagratha!" (Therefore, be vigilant, be vigilant). In many matters people tend to be careless. Troubles occur from time to time to warn us to be on our guard. Recognise the truth that whatever happens is for your good. Realise that even what seems to be bad is for your good.

Even calumny is a precursor of greater renown. Alongside of censure, praise also grows, as in the digging of a pit, when a mound rises by its side. Look up to the good name that is in store for you. Do not bother about the trifles that happen. Nor should you blame others or revile at them.

Be vigilant and foster your good nature. Share your goodness with those around you and experience the joy that results from such sharing.

A good man sees good even in what is bad

Our young students are tender hearted. As Sainath, (a student who spoke earlier) said, the students have been resorting to paaraayan (reciting scriptures), fasting, prayer and other such practices by way of atonement for what they regard as their lapses. They are a prey to all kinds of apprehensions and fancies. They should not bother about what is past or what is likely in the future. They must concentrate on the present, which is a product of the past and the parent of the future. Live in the present and be happy. Entertain only happy thoughts. Behave like brothers.

Keep away from bad company. Even a noble and a generous hearted warrior like Karna suffered grievously because of his association with the evil-minded Shakuni, the wicked Dhuryodhana and the malicious Dhussasana.

You must cultivate good company. How do you decide who is good and who is bad? Think over the matter deeply. The one who sees the bad in what is good is a bad man. The one who sees good even in what is bad is a good man. Therefore seek the company of the good alone.

Man, it is said, is a combination of Truth and Righteousness. Truth is God. Righteousness is Divine. Verily there is no greater Righteousness than adherence to Truth. We must live in the mansion of Peace, whose foundation is Truth, whose walls are Righteousness and whose roof is Love.

Act according to promptings of your conscience

Dear Students! You are yourselves the exemplars of your pure hearts and unselfish lives. You are feeling sad because of the feeling that a slur has been cast on the good name of the Institute students. Don't give any thought to this. When you are free from blame why should you worry?

In a bag of rice there may be a few grains of paddy. You should not feel that because of the misbehaviour of a few, the taint affects all students. Act on the conviction that no blame attaches to any of you. Act according to the promptings of your conscience. That will lead you to Divinity.

Carry on the Saadhana which you have taken up. You are bound to earn a good name and bring credit to your parents. Even the Institute will be vindicated. As youth, your journey is long. You must stick to the path of Truth and lead ideal lives.

Devotees also should conduct themselves with fortitude. Fear sin. Show gratitude to the Divine.

When you have fear of sin and love of God, you are bound to observe morality in society. Carry on your activities with zeal and faith.

Svaami will return soon to Prashanthi Nilayam and fill you all with joy and enthusiasm. Never cease to meditate on God. Cultivate a spirit of broadmindedness. Devotees, men and women, tend to magnify trifles. Avoid commenting on others. Love all, greet everyone with a smiling face, eschew harsh language. A soft answer turneth away wrath. Recognise first of all that the Divine is in every one. Understanding others is the key to adjustment.

Discourse in Prashanthi Mandhir on 21-7-1993.

In all lands the true sense of values has to be restored, and faith in the divinity of man has to be implanted. This is the work for which I have come. The world has to be saved from the consequences of limited knowledge, and from the blinding pride that precedes a fall.

BABA

27. Inscrutable are the ways of the Lord

"Kleem Krishnaaya, Govindhaaya, Gopeejana-vallabhaaya Svaaha!" Kleem means the earth. Krishnaaya means water.

Govindhaaya means fire. Gopeejana-vallabhaaya refers to air.

Svaaha refers to ether. Krishna's name encompasses the five elements: earth, water, fire, air and ether. This signifies that the Cosmos is permeated by the Divine.

EMBODIMENTS of Divine Love! "The Cosmos is under the sway of the Divine. God is subject to the sway of Truth. Truth is subject to the Uthama (noble one). The Noble one is the embodiment of the Divine" explains a Sanskrit shloka (verse).

It is not easy for all to recognise the truth about the Divine. Only the person who can comprehend the inner meaning can recognise the nature of the Divine. The Divine, which has both an internal and external significance, cannot be understood by exercising the imagination alone.

Every person born on earth should recognise his inherent divinity and make his life meaningful by leading a Godly life. This is the primary goal of life. Only that person has redeemed his life who recognises every moment, the Divine in every atom and in every cell and who inspires in others this consciousness about the Divine. It is not enough to secure a vision of the Divine. One has not only to lead a Godly life himself but help others to live likewise. This is the supreme purpose of human existence.

Man does not devote any thought as to how he should make his life meaningful. The human heart is the seat of the Divine. Every devotee should adore the Lord seated in the heart. The spiritual aspirant should fill his heart with divine feelings and lead a life of fulfilment.

The Chathaka bird and gopikas

You have the example of the Chaathaka bird. It is in continuous search of pure rain-drops falling from clouds. There is no lack of water on the earth. But the Chaathaka bird desires only the pure unsullied rain drops falling from a cloud and will go through any amount of trouble to secure them. It has no use for any other kind of water associated with the earth. Likewise, the true saadhaka, devotee or disciple, will only desire to secure the nectarine love of the Lord and for its sake will be prepared to go through any trouble or sacrifice.

The Gopikas exemplified such deep devotion in their love for the Lord. They offered all they had in the service of the Lord and performed every act as an offering to the Divine. The term "Gopi" is derived from the word "Gup". The term "go" means the Vedhas. It has another meaning, "the earth." It also refers to the cow. The Gopikas used to chant the Vedhas. They protected the cows.

They sanctified the earth. Not understanding this sublime aspect of their nature, people have misrepresented them in various ways, regarding them as ordinary women, Even their devotion was misconstrued because of the failure to understand the true nature of their love for the Lord.

On account of their narrow-mindedness, these critics could not grasp the deep significance of the Gopikas' devotion.

God is the master of eight-petalled Hridhaya Kamala

In every human being, there are what are known as the Shatchakras (the six centres of life energy). Among them, two are important. One is the Hridhaya Chakra the Chakra relating to the heart. The other is the Sahasraara Chakra--the Chakra relaiting to the head. The Hridhaya Chakra is described in Vedhaanthik parlance as Hridhaya Kamala (the Lotus of the Heart). This "lotus" has eight petals. Every petal is called Prakrithi (Nature). All the eight petals are under the sway of the Lord. This means that God is the Adhipathi (master) of the eight petals. Because Krishna is the Pathi (husband) of these eight petals, he is said to have eight "Queens," according to the scriptural text. Those who did not understand the esoteric meaning of all this, described Krishna as having eight queens and as having sported with 16000 Gopikas. The real meaning of the reference to Krishna's "eight queens" is that he is the Lord of the lotus of the human heart. As such, he holds sway over the heart. When this is rightly understood, the supreme greatness of the Divine will be apparent.

The symbolic attributes of the Divine

God is called in His Cosmic form as Vishnu, who permeates everything in the cosmos. God is the cause and the cosmos is the effect. You must try to understand the various attributes of the Lord. Vishnu is depicted as having a conch in one hand and a wheel in another. In a third hand he carries a mace and in the fourth a lotus. What is the esoteric significance of all this? The conch is a symbol of Sound. Hence, God is described as the embodiment of Sound. The Chakra (wheel) symbolises Kaalachakra (the Wheel of Time). The Lord is the master of Time and Sound. The mace signifies strength or power. This means that the Lord holds in his hand the strength of all beings. The lotus in the Lord's hand is a symbol of the heart. This means that the Lord holds in His hand the hearts of all beings. Because the symbolism of these attributes of the Divine was not properly explained by the commentators on the scriptures, a great deal of misunderstanding and confusion came to prevail in later years.

As regards the Sahasraara Chakra in the head of the human body, it is a thousand-petalled lotus, each petal having sixteen Kalaas (phases). There are thus 16000 kalaas in the Sahasraara. These phases were symbolically described as the wives of the Lord. The inner meaning of these expressions should be properly understood.

Going only by the superficial and literal meaning of these terms, the nature of the Divine is misconstrued and misinterpreted.

The Lord confers freedom

It is necessary to get at the inner meaning of what is said in the Raamaayana, the Bhaagavatha or the Bible or any other scriptural text. The good is liable to be misunderstood and construed in perverse ways. There is need for protecting carefully what is good and sacred. A beautiful parrot is kept in a cage. No one bothers to safeguard the crow. Likewise, the wicked are without restraint. Only the good are subject to restraints, ordeals, tests and difficulties.

Krishna was born on Ashtami (the eighth day of the Lunar month). From the moment of birth, He was subject to troubles. But whoever cherished the name of the Lord in the heart was free from bondage. Vasudeva was a prisoner. But the moment Dhevaki placed the infant Krishna on her husband's head, he became free. The moment the Lord touched his head, Vasudeva's fetters dropped away. As long as he carried Krishna on his head and till he deposited the child in Repalle, he was free. He placed the child in Yasoda's house. Then he returned to his prison and became bound as before. What is the meaning of this episode? As long as Divine thoughts fill our minds, there is no bondage. But when you give up the Lord, you get bound in every way.

There are deep inner meanings for the actions of the Lord. Kamsa tried every conceivable means to kill Krishna. But the Lord is beyond the grasp of anyone. Small-minded persons, consumed by hatred and jealousy, may entertain such designs. But these evil plans only recoil on the plotters and can cause no harm to God. They will only enhance His, glory

The foes of Krishna

There were reasons for Kamsa's hatred. An ethereal voice had declared that Kamsa would meet with his death at the hands of the eighth child of Dhevaki. Out of the selfish desire to save his own life, Kamsa sought to do away with Krishna by various means. All his efforts were of no avail. Kamsa carried out a slaughter of the children in Repalle in the hope of killing Krishna.

Krishna eluded his grasp. A man's intellect turns crazy when he is facing destruction. Because of his wicked actions, Kamsa came to a disastrous end.

This, however, is not the end of the story. Two other wicked men, Sishupala and Dhanthavakra, rose against Krishna. After these two had been slain by Krishna, Jaraasandha came forward.

Many demons in human form sought to eliminate Krishna. They all failed utterly. They brought disaster upon themselves. Thus, from aeon to aeon, the Divine is confronted with such hostile elements. Happiness cannot be got without going through difficulties. Fame is the product of blame.

Such incidents happen in the life of every Avathaar and in every age. They serve to promote the greatness of the Avathaar and not to tarnish it.

Is it possible for any ordinary individual to make his appearance simultaneously in numerous different places? If it is stated that the same person appeared simultaneously in the homes of 16000 Gopikas, not only will people today disbelieve in it, but many will ridicule it. But this is the reaction of petty, unthinking people, who have no spirit of enquiry. If one enquires into the truth, it will be seen that even in modern times such a phenomenon is taking place. The broadcast of music programme from Delhi is heard in millions of homes in its completeness, all at the same time in a myriad different places. A person speaking on T.V. can be seen in a million homes. If a man made yanthra (contrivance) can have such a far-reaching power, why should it not be possible for the power of manthra to reach millions simultaneously? How God's grace operates

The image of Krishna could appear in the hearts of the Gopis, though they were far away from Him. What is necessary is to purify the heart. The image of the Divine will not be reflected in an impure heart. There is no limit to the power of the Divine. Only the small-minded have limited power. God alone knows to whom, in what circumstances, at what time, to what extent and in what form His grace should be showered.

For example, take the case of Dhruvpadhi. In his vast audience-hall Dhuryodhana was inflicting humiliation on Dhruvpadhi. Unknown and unseen by anyone, Krishna was giving to Dhruvpadhi an endless number of saris. How are ordinary persons likely to view the situation? They might ask: "How is Krishna tolerating this kind of disrobing of Dhruvpadhi? Why does he not reduce Dhuryodhana to ashes that very moment? Why does He not put an end to his life? When the devotees are in agony, should the Divine merely look on?" The ignorant may tend to react in this fashion.

But the Divine, who is the embodiment of peace, love and truth, has to take note of Kaarana, Kaarya and Karthavya (the cause, the remedy and the task to be done). In the great cosmic drama, the Lord is also an actor. The time should be ripe for the role He has to play in a particular sequence of events. His action should be appropriate to His role. He cannot act otherwise.

God's role in the great cosmic drama

For instance, if Krishna decided to kill Dhuryodhana at the moment of Draupadi's humiliation, He would be going against His role in the play. He has to play His specific part. Krishna knew that Dhuryodhana's end lay in the hands of Bheema and not in His. It would be against his dharma if he did what Bheema had to do. Bheema alone should slay Dhuryodhana with his mace. This is the law of creation. Krishna waited for the ordained event.

Likewise, in various situations, the Lord remains as a witness. Is the Lord powerless or is the devotee's prayer ineffective? This sort of doubt arose once in the mind of saint Thyagaraja. d elder brother subjected him to many ordeals. Resenting the action of Thyagaraja in rejecting the treasures sent by the ruler of Thanjavur to the saint, the elder brother cast into the river the idols of Raama and others worshipped by him. Thyagaraja made a frantic search for the missing idols. Although a great devotee, Thyagaraja felt frustrated. He asked the Lord, "Oh Raama! why are you subjecting me to these difficulties? Is it because my devotion has weakened? Or has your power declined?" Thyagaraja felt that his devotion had not diminished.

So Raama's power must have weakened. But, pondering over it further, he realised that Raama's strength remained undiminished. He began to sing a song in praise of Raama's prowess.

"Without Raama's power, could a monkey have been able to cross the ocean? Or would the Goddess of wealth have chosen to be his consort? Or Lakshmana serve him? Or the supremely intelligent Bharatha revel in beholding him and worshipping him?" Thyagaraja ecstatically extolled the infinite prowess of Raama and blamed his own ignorance for having doubts about Raama.

Many devotees, out of their worldly pre-occupations and narrow-mindedness, tend to develop doubts about the Lord. The Lord, however, always remains at the same supreme level. He is not elated by praise or depressed by censure. The Lord is unchanging. Lord's concern for the well-being of the world

The Divine, therefore, has to be viewed from a wide perspective. Whatever the Lord does is for the well-being of the world. His sole concern is the welfare of the world.

It was this which made Bhaarath declare from ancient times, "Let all the world's people be happy." From early times Bhaarath held forth great ideals to all other countries in the realms of ethics and spirituality. With the passage of time, faith in these ideals has waned. Man today is plagued by scepticism. He is racked by doubts. The combination of these two is the cause of all troubles.

In the Mahaabhaaratha, Shakuni represents Anumaana (doubt). Kama symbolises Avishvaasam (lack of faith). When these two come together, Asuuya (envy) in the form of Dhuryodhana emerges. Envy is accompanied by wickedness in the form of Dhussaasana. When the four came together, the fate of the Kauravas was sealed. The Kauravas represent bad thoughts, bad intentions, bad actions and bad attachments.

Krishna clearly foresaw the fate of the Kauravas long before the Kurukshethra war. He told Arjuna: "Get up. Be prepared for war Justice will prevail. Selfishness will suffer disaster. This is the Dharma of every age. The parents of these wicked ones will have none of their children left to offer them the last rites. That is the decree of fate." Krishna concluded His call to Arjuna with the declaration that there has to be a downpour of arrows to ensure world peace after the wicked Kama, Shakuni and others had been destroyed in the fires of hate stirred up by them.

Over the ages, the wicked have behaved in the manner of the Kauravas and have met with the fate they deserved. There is no escape for anyone from the consequences of his actions. Death may come at any time,, in any place, in any form. No one can tell time or manner of anyone's death. It is pre-ordained. There is no meaning in analyzing the pros and cons of such happenings.

Even good devotees sometimes develop doubts and argue over trifles. How anger reduces one's strength Once Krishna set out to kill Jaraasandha. But whenever Jaraasandha came out of his city to fight Krishna, the latter would flee from the battlefield. Was Krishna afraid of Jaraasandha? Not at all.

But Krishna wanted to find out the appropriate means of slaying Jaraasandha. Krishna had a strategy. Each time Krishna went to challenge Jaraasandha, he would get enraged. He would come out to pursue Krishna. Krishna would go on retreating. By repeating these tactics several times, Jaraasandha was made to expend his strength in futile rage. A man's strength is considerably reduced by his anger. A man's life-span is cut to pieces by the shears of envy, anger and hatred. Envy is the main cause of shortening a man's life; when a man gets angry, his whole body trembles. His blood gets heated. It takes three months for the blood to get cool again. One moment of anger may consume the energy got from six months of eating.

This is the way anger debilitates a person. By systematically weakening Jaraasandha in this way, ultimately Krishna managed to slay him. The Lord is not visible to the non-believer Consider the cases of Hiranyaaksha and Hiranyakashipu. They were not ordinary men. They were the incarnations of Jaya and Vijaya, the divine guards at the gate of the Lord's mansion (in Vaikunta). Hiranyakashipu developed bitter hatred towards Vishnu as the slayer of his brother, Hiranyaaksha. He searched for Vishnu in every conceivable place--in the ocean, deep in the earth and in the sky--but could not find Him. Had Vishnu run away from Hiranyakashipu out of fear?

No. He was omnipresent. But He could not proclaim it Himself. He made Hiranyakashipu's son Prahlaadha declare it. He asked Prahlaadha: "You simpleton! You go on praising Hari. Where is that Hari? Show him to me. I have explored every particle of the Universe. I have not found him. Hence I am the Lord whom you should worship." Prahlaadha replied: "How can I worship the enemy of Hari? Hari is everywhere." "Can you show Him?" asked his father. "Certainly," replied Prahlaadha. "Is he in that pillar?" "Yes, he is," said Prahlaadha. The Lord came out of the pillar to confirm his devotee's faith. Prahlaadha had affirmed the omnipresence of the Lord and the Lord testified to the truth of his belief. The Lord is not visible to the non-believer. Lord observes the rules of the Cosmic game Whether the Lord makes his presence felt in certain situations or not should not be judged by narrow human considerations. The Lord will reveal His powers only at the appropriate moment, when the time is ripe. Just as a fruit takes time to ripen, God also bides his time. It is improper to speculate on the nature of the Divine's actions. Even the omnipotent and omniscient Lord has to respect the time factor. He has to observe the rules of the Cosmic game. He cannot violate His own rules and regulations even as a traffic authority cannot transgress the traffic rules made by him. For instance, God has endowed a lamp with the power to shed light and the wind with the power to blow out the lamp. When a lamp is exposed to the wind, the Lord will not direct the wind not to blow out the lamp. Everything in creation has to act according to the laws of its existence. The five elements are governed by laws which they have to observe. The Bhaagavatha relates many episodes which give rise to questions. The answers to these questions may vary according to the understanding of the persons concerned. But no one can fully comprehended the ways of the Lord. Whatever is destined to happen must happen. No one is competent to ask of God why he has not prevented something. God alone can decide this matter. Few can account for the actions of the Lord. For five thousand years, men have been exploring every kind of phenomena in this Universe. But no one has been able to unravel the mystery of the Divine. God is all-powerful, all-knowing and all-pervasive. But whatever happens in the Universe is governed by cosmic laws. Their working cannot be easily understood. That is why a devotee said: "Is it possible, Oh Krishna, to recognise your mystery? You are subtler than the atom and vaster than the vastest thing in creation. You are present in the 84 lakhs of species in the Universe and permeate every place in the cosmos. You are present in the good as well as the wicked and make them play their respective roles. You are in the accuser and in the accused. How can anyone understand your Divine mystery?"

When men declare their belief in the idea that God is one, irrespective of differences in names, they should act upto their belief by developing equal-mindedness towards everyone. This is the cardinal principle of Bhaaratheeya culture: to treat joy and sorrow, loss and gain with equal serenity. Submitting to God's will leads to bliss. Realise that it is not possible to comprehend fully the ways of the Divine. Strengthen your faith in God, carry out the Lord's injunctions, experience the bliss derived therefrom and redeem your lives. Do not indulge in futile speculation or controversy. All are aspects of the Divine. Whatever happens is for your good. Fill your hearts with this conviction. Consider everything as coming from God for your good. God knows what is good for you even as a loving mother knows what a child needs. No one can expect to receive whatever he prays for, because in his ignorance he may ask for what is not good for him. The wise man will not seek anything from God, but leave everything to God.

Chaithanya's firm faith in the will of the Divine Chaithanya exemplified this quality of unquestioning faith in the will of the Divine. When he was going about in his native village Navadhweep, chanting the name of Krishna, some envious persons attacked him and took away the cymbals from his hands. Chaithanya accepted the loss as a sign of grace from Krishna and continued singing, using his hands for clapping. He said: "Oh Lord! I am using these hands you have given to me for clapping, while singing your praise. I can do without the cymbals." The miscreants then bound his hands to prevent him from clapping.

Chaithanya exclaimed: "Lord! I shall keep the rhythm of my chanting with my voice. Your love will be my tune. I know no yoga. I have done no penance. I do not care for the treasures of the world. My greatest and only wealth is your love. Confer this wealth on

Of what avail are japa and penance without the love of the Lord? They are like preparing an excellent food in an untinned vessel. The entire food gets poisoned. Likewise, one may practise the nine forms of devotion, but without love of God in the heart, they are useless. Chaithanya declared. "Oh Lord! I want your love alone and nothing else."

At his birth, the name given to Chaithanya was Gauraanga, because of his fair complexion. But as he was always chanting the name "Krishna, Krishna," he got the popular name "Krishna Chaithanya" (one who was immersed in Krishna consciousness). The moment he repeated Krishna's name he used to lose his consciousness.

In this manner, there are many great ones who have the names given to them at birth and the names by which they get known later on. The lives of these great ones should be regarded as ideals for the rest of mankind. Strive continually to develop Divine Love. Embodiments of Divine Love! It is not enough if you merely celebrate this day as a festive occasion because it is Krishna's birthday. Krishna was the very embodiment of love. He attracted every one by His love. He melted the hearts of one and all. He made the lives of many meaningful. Love was at the root of all He did. All must strive continually to develop love. In earlier ages, men had fear of sin. The Lord's command was: Fear sin, love the Lord. Unfortunately, today in the Kali Yuga (the present age of discord), people love sin and abhor God. Why should anyone fear God? Those, who ought to be afraid to commit sin, are having fear of God. Instead of loving God, people are loving sin. This is the reversal of what ought to prevail. People are leading lives opposed to what is proper.

The Chaathaka bird will not shrink from being near a cloud to catch the fresh raindrops even if there are dreadful thunder and blinding lightning. It prays constantly for the pure unsullied raindrops. This is the attitude saadhakas should cultivate today. They must be prepared to face any kind of censure, criticism, trouble or obstacle. They should adhere to their goal regardless of anything. The Gopikas exemplified this type of devotion. They had no fear of any threats or abuse. They were totally unaffected. Love God and fear none. Hence, stick to your truth. Love God and fear none. Only the guilty need fear. Why fear when you are innocent? Without any fear in your hearts, meditate on God.

This is the royal road to the Divine in the Kali Yuga.

There is no protector like the Divine. This was demonstrated in the case of Dhraupadhi, when none of her valiant husbands or others came to her rescue and Krishna alone saved her from humiliation.

The Lord alone is the saviour of the helpless and the forlorn. Do not waver in your faith in the Lord in any circumstance. Go ahead with your tasks with faith and determination.

God tests people in many ways. They are intended only to promote your spiritual progress. None can affect God in any way. Why lose your faith in Him? They are signs of weakness. Give no room for such unfortunate doubts. Strengthen your faith and realise God by your devotion.

Discourse in the Sai Ramesh Mandap, Brindhaavan on 10-8-1993, Gokulaashtami Day.

28. Bhaarath : then and now

What greater misfortune can there be
Than the failure of Bhaaratheeyas to know
The unique greatness and sacredness
Of Bhaarath's ancient culture?

EMBODIMENTS of Divine Aathma! In ancient times, the spiritual culture of Bhaarath spread the message of peace and harmony to various countries in the world.
Then, as well as now, the Aryan tradition has proclaimed to the world the benediction:

"Lokaas-samasthaas-sukhino bhavanthoo!" (Let all the world be happy!). This tradition was upheld even at the sacrifice of their lives by the ancient kings, the savants and the noble women of the land.

Today the rulers as well as the citizens are caught up in worldly concerns and are forgetting this great cultural heritage. In the sphere of the physical and the material, man has achieved many significant victories. But he has not made the slightest progress in the fields of morality, spirituality and wisdom. What is the reason? It is the deep-rooted selfishness in human beings.

Reign of selfishness in today's world

All of man's thoughts, desires and actions are saturated with selfishness. Man today has become a puppet in the hands of selfishness. Whatever object one desires, he does not seek it for its own sake. When he loves anyone, it is not for that person's sake. He loves the other for selfish reasons.

Those who have not understood the sacredness of Bhaaratheeya culture cannot realise the sacred nature of love. The ancient Bhaaratheeyas were votaries of truth and practioners of righteousness. They stood for justice. Today the people have forgotten this legacy. This is the calamitous influence of Time. It is only when, spiritually and morally, the character of the nation is developed will Bhaaratheeya culture come into its own.

Our youth today are unable to appreciate the value of this ancient culture because its values are not being properly propagated among the people. With the waning of the hold of this culture on the people, humanness itself is being undermined. If human values are not upheld, of what use is the human birth? As a human being, a man should manifest human values.

Moreover, human beings can realise their inherent divinity only when they recognise the unity that underlies the apparent diversity. There are today many intellectuals who propagate divisive tendencies, but there are very few good men engaged in promoting unity.

All men belong to one human family

Despite differences in names and forms, in food habits and in speech, all men belong to one human family, of which God is the Father. Not realising this truth, men are victims of divisive forces.

Every man has to develop the divine faculties in him. God is the embodiment of Love. Love is His nature. Such sacred love is in every man. Even as God is manifesting to the world His selfless love, every man should manifest his unselfish love to everyone. Man is not apart from God. The Lord has declared in the Geetha: "Every human being in the world is a fragment of My Eternal Self." This implied that man is not an aspect of Nature or of the physical elements. He is Divine in spirit. This is the repeated declaration of the Lord.

The ancient sages described this Divine Love as Aathmavaan, implying that Love is the form of the Divine. This is called Svashakthi, meaning the power of the Aathma. Today people are oblivious to this Aathmik power. Relying on the strength of physical and the material world, men are forgetting the boundless power of the Aathma. The physical body is perishable. Only Dhehi

(the indwelling Spirit) is Divine.

Today, there is great need for propagating the doctrine of Love.
Divine love is beyond comprehension by the mind or description by words. Love is the very form of Brahman (the Absolute). When men forget love, are they not forgetting the Divine Itself?

People speak about freedom, calling it Svechcha. What is this Svechcha? Knowledge of Brahman is Svechcha. It is Absolute Bliss--Brahmaanandham. Instead of seeking this kind of spiritual freedom, people today are going after freedom in worldly terms. In the place of the pure, sacred, eternal Divine Love, men are lost in transient and momentary attachments.

Need for people to cultivate good thoughts

The Divine cannot be realised through wealth, scholarship or by any other means except love.

This sacred love is being fragmented in many ways out of worldly attachments and is being treated as a trivial thing. This is the manner in which people today reject truth and welcome falsehood and go afar to consume alcoholic drinks while refusing wholesome milk and curds offered to them at their doorstep. It is the bad feelings within them which make them behave in this way. Hence, there is great need for people to cultivate good thoughts and good feelings.

Love can be promoted only by the grace of God's love. The world has no dearth of wealthy men, intelligent men, or powerful men, but there are few spiritually realised persons. What is it that great emperors like Harishchandra, Nala and Raama took with them when they left the world?

What is in store for the men of wealth and power today? What is it that they will take with them?

Nothing. God alone is the eternal truth that will accompany the lover of God.

Bhaaratheeyas got their freedom in 1947, but did not achieve unity. True education consists in teaching people to live in peace and harmony with a feeling of common fellowship. Life today is riddled with differences and discord. Hatred reigns everywhere. Of what use is our Svathanthram (freedom)? Sva-than-thram really means freedom of the Spirit (Sva). It is not related to the physical. People speak about "Independence." What is this Independence? It was meant to convey the idea that freedom means not depending on any outsider. But are we really self-reliant today? We are dependent on many in several respects. How can we claim we are independent when we are dependent on others? There is only one difference between the old British days and now. In those days we used to accuse the white men of oppressing the coloured natives. Today the natives are oppressing the native population. Did we achieve freedom only to inflict suffering on ourselves through our own men? Is it to besmirch our culture that we got our freedom?

Spiritual freedom is the true freedom

We must certainly safeguard our freedom. But essentially that freedom is spiritual freedom. Any other kind of freedom is not freedom at all.

Youth today have no sense of patriotism. In the pre-independence days, many young men made great sacrifices for the sake of freedom. This was because the leaders of those days also made great sacrifices for freedom and inspired the youth to do likewise.

However, leaders today talk in one way and act in another way. They deliver lectures on Bhaaratheeya nationalism. The moment they get down from the stage, they talk about caste and creed and promote divisions among the people. How, then, can youth develop a genuine feeling of nationalism? The result is there is hardly any sense of national love and pride among the young people.

Dear students! Whatever anyone may say, regard this country as the land of your birth. It is your Motherland. It is your own native land. Love of the country must get firmly rooted in our young persons. You have to take a firm resolve to protect your Motherland.

Be prepared to sacrifice yourselves for your Motherland

Once, Aurobindo asked a group of students in Calcutta: "For what purpose are you studying? If you are going to make use of your education for the benefit of the nation pursue your studies.

Otherwise, you better burn your books. If you are studying only out of selfish motives, the education is of no value at all. If you are intent only on earning a living, you may as well beg from door to door. You must be prepared to sacrifice yourselves for your Motherland."

"Breathes there the man with soul so dead who never to himself has said'

This is my Motherland; this is my mother-tongue.

To love my country is my religion."

A youth who is not prepared to sacrifice his life for his country is as good as dead. Service to the nation is the greatest thing one can think of. All religious practices are worthless without service to one's fellowmen. Without the spirit of service, holding any udhyoga (office or position) is meaningless. Udhyoga (official position) must stem from Yoga (realisation of the Divine).

True Bhaaratheeya culture consists in developing a spirit of service, with a feeling of allembracing love. A man can get on without many things in life. But he cannot get on without love. Love is at the root of all action. This love is Divine. It is unchanging, pure and unsullied. It is unaffected by joy or sorrow, loss or gain. Feeling elated in a moment of joy and getting depressed in a moment of grief is the mark of worldly love.

Divine love is spiritual and is infinitely precious. It is not fickle and changing from moment to moment. One who is immersed in the ocean of Divine love will have no words to express its greatness and sweetness. He will speak in the language of silence. He will keep away from idle talk or debate. Those who experience the bliss of Divine love will be filled with an inner joy, whatever the external troubles they may encounter.

Eliminate pollution of air by Naamasmarana

It is only when we cultivate this kind of love that we can claim to have achieved real freedom.

Today there is no unity in the country. In its absence, enmity has taken its place. Where there is enmity; there is no purity. Today, the air is polluted. Even the sound vibrations in the ether, air, fire, water and earth are polluted. How are they to be purified?

Everyone should purify and sanctify the atmosphere by doing Naamasmarana (chanting the name of the Lord). Every sound emanating from man enters into the radio waves in the atmosphere and gets permanently recorded. If the sound waves in the world today are polluted, it is because of the unsacred words, uttered by people. By chanting the name of the Lord, the sound waves in the atmosphere must be sanctified.

Thereby, these waves can bring about a great transformation. The world, it is said, can be destroyed by an atomic bomb. Sacred sound waves can achieve greater things for the world.

They can create a new world.

The power of Consciousness is all-pervading

Man has to understand the power of three kinds of potencies: Ichcha-Shakthi, Inaana-Shakthi

and Kriya-Shakthi. Ichcha Shakthi (the power of the will) should combine with electrical energy.

There is, for instance, an aura round My thumb. If this energy were not in the body, it cannot move at all. This is called Chaithanya (the power of Consciousness).

This Consciousness is all-pervading. From this Consciousness, every individual derives what is called Conscience. This Conscience, when it functions through the sense organs, brings about the conscious state. All actions belong to the conscious state. All functions of the mind are related to the Conscience. All that is done through Buddhi (intellect) is related to Chaithanya (Consciousness).

The Consciousness that is all-pervading is present in the human body from top to toe. In spite of the presence of this Consciousness, men are misusing it or making no use of it. Just as barely 2 percent of the energy coming from the sun is used by the world, hardly a minute fraction of the power of the Divine Consciousness in man is being properly used. Make use of it to help society.

Do not live only for your own sake. When you use your energies in the service of society, the Divine power in you gets surcharged. It will not diminish to the slightest extent.

Consider every human being as the embodiment of the eternal Divine. The very name Nara for man means that his essence is imperishable. It also means he is the embodiment of the Aathma.

Born as the immortal Spirit, if 'man leads the life of an animal, there can be nothing more disgraceful.

"Svathanthram" means freedom of the spirit

We celebrate what we call our Svathanthram--the freedom of the Spirit (Svaa). Svathanthram relates to external freedom. Svathanthram is concerned with inner freedom. It is through the internal that we enjoy the external freedom. Hence, the first requisite is purity of the heart. If the heart is pure, all that you think and do will be pure, just as water from a tank filled with pure water will be pure in any tap. If your thoughts and actions are impure, you are the cause of their impurity because you have polluted your heart. You are the cause of your joy and sorrow. Do not blame others for your troubles. It is a sin. Blame yourself for your condition. Self-punishment is as important as Self-Realization. Through self-punishment you get self-satisfaction, which promotes self-sacrifice. That is the prelude to Self-Realization.

You must engage yourself in a constant process of self-enquiry into determine whether you are right or wrong. This is a spiritual exercise. It enables you to understand the true nature of freedom, namely, harmony in thought, word and action. Essentially freedom consists in maintaining complete accordance between thought, word and deed.

It is supremely important to have good feelings. One ends his life in a good way if he entertains always good feelings. Those who are racked by doubts, and suspicions are ultimately a prey to their own doubts. It should be realised that death is more important than birth. The manner of one's death indicates the way he lived. Therefore, fill your hearts and minds with good feelings and thoughts. What is good? It is love alone. Eschew hatred, envy and other vices. Fill your hearts with love. Students today tend to fill their minds with all sorts of stuff about the world. What is necessary is to fill the heart with love and the head with wisdom. Engage the hands in service. This alone will manifest the significance of human existence. Consider your body as a home To lead a peaceful life, you should bear no ill-will towards others. Cultivate unity as the key to peace in the home or outside. Consider your body as a home. The mind, the tongue and the limbs are like members of a family. If they all function harmoniously, there will be peace. But if the three are at variance with each other, there can only be discord and disharmony. Therefore, in unity lies strength, peace and success. This was the lesson that Dharmaja taught when he declared that as against the rest of the world, they were 105 (the five Paandava brothers and the 100 Kaurava brothers), but when they had internal differences, they were five against hundred. When the country is faced with an external threat, all parties should come together. They should not divide the country. You may fight among yourselves tooth and nail, but when the nation is in peril, you should act as one. You must protect the security and integrity of the nation. That is the way to cherish our freedom. Unfortunately, today, this unity is lacking. There is too much struggle for the loaves and fishes of office. How can the nation progress in this situation? The parties that have mushroomed in the country are tearing the nation to pieces. This is utterly wrong. You must all live in unity. All are children of Bhaarith. All are equally entitled to a share in the patrimony. You have to earn your right to this patrimony by your love for the country. Without earning the right, people are fighting over the spoils. They are not entitled to this right. Pray for the welfare of the nation and the world Dear students and devotees! Cultivate love and cherish divine feelings and pray for the welfare of the nation and the world. Bhaarith has always upheld the concept of universal well-being. All the five hundred odd crores of human beings in the world are the children of one God. Don't foster narrow regional loyalties. The world is one vast mansion. Countries like America, Russia, India are rooms in that mansion. The national barriers are like walls. Once the barriers are removed, humanity will be one family. National attachments should be got rid of. Differences of race and religion should go. Then alone will peace reign on earth. Therefore, develop love. Discourse in the Sai Ramesh Mandap, Brindhaavan, on 15-8-1993. My glory is spread daily through those who call themselves My Bhakthas. Your virtue, your self-control, your detachment, your faith and your steadfastness are the signs by which people read of My Glory. BABA 29. A Righteous emperor and Virtuous subjects Anapekshah Shuchir-Dhakshah Udhaaseeno Gathavyathah Sarvaarambha Parithyaagee Yo Madhbhakthah Sa Me Priyah. ANAPEKSHAH means one who is free from any kind of Apeksha (desire or expectation). Is it possible in this vast world for any man to be free from Apeksha? This is not possible. Some things may be attractive to some persons and some high aims may interest others. The objects that are desired are sensual pleasures and comforts and things of the world. The Sreshtha (higher aims) relate to the non-sensual, non-physical and ultramundane. Almost all desires fall into one or other of these two categories. How, then, is it possible to be rid of both kinds of desires? This is possible. In the Bhagavath Geetha, the Lord has declared that he is present in all righteous actions. Therefore, those who perform righteous actions can develop anapeksha (desirelessness). This means that when a man performs all actions as offerings to the Lord, they become anapeksha (desireless actions). The Lord is one who, from within, makes a person act, speak, listen, see and do many other actions. He is the doer and the enjoyer. If a person performs all actions with the conviction that the Indwelling Lord is the real Doer, then his actions become desireless. Hence every saadhak should regard his actions as offerings to the Divine. Shuchih: This means purity. This term does not merely refer to the external cleanliness of the physical body. Saadhakas need internal purity also. What are the implications of inner purity? All the actions a man does issue from internal impulses and not from external forces. They are a reflection of his inner being. It is only when man has pure feelings within him that his actions can be pure. When he is polluted within, all his actions will be impure.

How is purity in speech achieved?
How are the internal impulses to be purified? These relate to the mind, speech and the body. Of the three, speech is the most important. How is purity in speech to be achieved?

"Anudhvegakaram Vaakyam Sathyam priyahitham cha yath," says the Geetha. Every word you utter should be free from Anudhvegakaram (causing excitement or agitation). It should be Sathyam (true) and priyam (pleasing). There are four factors which account for the pollution of the tongue. One is, uttering falsehood; two, excessive talking; three, carrying tales against others;
four, abuse or criticism of others. The tongue is prone to indulge in these four types of offences in speech. Unfortunately, in this Kali age, all these four are rampant.
Untruth has become ubiquitous. People freely indulge in slandering others. Tale-bearing goes on. Indulgence in loquacity is widespread. It is only when one gets rid of these four evil tendencies can his speech become pure and unpolluted. Hence, the first task is to purify one's speech.

How to purify the mind and body Next comes the mind. The mind is polluted by wrong thoughts and bad feelings. Man should strive to keep away all bad thoughts from invading his mind. When a man is ceaselessly filled with bad thoughts, he can only reap bad consequences. To purify the mind, all bad thoughts have to be expelled. No room should be given to them. Bad feelings should be banished from the mind
Only then the mind will get totally purified.

Then comes purity of the body. One must have a body that is free from the taint of Himsa (violence or harm). Men commit many acts of violence and many sinful acts with their hands.

The body has been given to man primarily for practising Dharma (righteousness). Such a sacred gift should be used only for rendering service to others and doing Godly actions. This is the way to purify the body. Therefore, when speech, mind and the body are purified, internal purity is ensured. Shuchi, thus, calls for internal purity as well as external cleanliness.

Dhakshah: This means that one should have firm determination in performing actions. The determination should be confined to actions that are pure, helpful to others and sublimate man.

No man can refrain from action of some kind or other even for a moment. In no circumstance should one engage himself in an impure act. This is the way to achieve purity through firm determination. Only such a person can be called a Dhakshah (a resolute person).

Udhaaseenah: This means freedom from attachment to anything. It means remaining serene and unruffled by fame or blame, peace or sorrow, loss or gain, pleasure or pain, not elated by prosperity or depressed by failure. One should not succumb to calumny. Nor should one exult over fame. Fame and censure are like passing clouds. One should look upon them as a mere witness. They should be treated with Udhaaseenah (equanimous feeling). To treat them seriously is to give rise to agitations in the mind, which may lead to demonic tendencies.

Be free from worries

Gathavyathah: Vyathah represents the greatest weakness in man today. Man ignores the duties he has to perform in the present. He broods over what has happened in the distant past. He is constantly speculating over what is likely to happen in the future.
Why worry about the future or about dead past? The past is beyond recall or remedy. Forget the past.
The future is uncertain. No one can be sure about what is likely to happen the next day. Don't think about the future, as you cannot be sure about it. Concern yourself with the present, which is the child of the past and the parent of the future. This attitude is represented by the term

Gathavyathah. Brooding over the past and speculating about the future, man is failing in his duties in the present. This is the cause of his misery. Make right use of the present and a good future is assured. The aspirant should bear this truth in mind and concentrate his attention on the present.

Mental worry about the past or the future is a Raajasik quality. It should be got rid of.

Sarvaarambha parithyaagi: This quality calls for the renunciation of Ahamkaara (egoism) in any form. The ego is rooted in the Mamakaara (possessive instinct).
When egoism and possessiveness come together in a man, he is utterly ruined. Hence, one should be free from.
egoism and attachment.

The aforesaid six qualities are sacred virtues. The opening stanza declares that a devotee with these six qualities is dear to the Lord.

The six enemies of man

Apart from these six good qualities, man has six vices: Kaama (lust), Krodha (anger), Lobha

(greed), Moha (delusion), Madha (conceit) and Maathsarya (envy). These six enemies of man have to be got rid of and the six good qualities should be cultivated. Only then human life can be made meaningful. Emperor Bali was one who was endowed with these noble qualities. For this reason, the Lord came down to the earth and sought a gift from Bali. There are many philanthropists in the world. There are persons who make gifts of land, or of cows, or food, or clothes, or gold, but few can be found who are prepared to make an offering of themselves. Emperor Bali was one who was ready to give himself away as a gift. "I am offering to Thee, Oh Lord, everything that is mine, my wealth, and family. Only the Aathma remains. Save me, who is taking refuge in Thee," explains a shloka. "I gave my word to you. I am giving my kingdom to you. At this instant, I am offering my body to you." Declaring thus, Emperor Bali bowed before Vaamana.

In ancient times, there were many such noble and high-minded rulers. Bali was wedded to Truth. He cared only for the welfare of his people. He was a protector of Truth. He practised Dharma. Such a ruler was reigning over Kerala at that time. He derived all his multifarious virtues from his grand-father, Prahlaadha. However, Bali's father, Virochana, was engaged in wicked thoughts and bad deeds like Hiranyakashipu, Prahlaadha's father. All three belonged to the same clan. Virochana attempted to make Bali pursue wrong paths. But, good and bad ways cannot be imposed on others. The marks of good behaviour of persons reflect their inherent goodness. Prahlaadha was an impartial and fair judge. Once, there was a contest between Virochana, the son of Prahlaadha, and Sudhanva, the son of the Sage Angeerasa. It was agreed that whoever lost the contest should forfeit his life to the winner. Both of them prayed to Prahlaadha to act as the judge for the contest, being convinced that he would be totally impartial and fair. Prahlaadha agreed to act as judge because he was pledged to uphold truth, without any other consideration. After watching the contest, Prahlaadha declared Sudhanva as the winner and his own son, Virochana, as the loser.

Unable to control his joy over the verdict, Sudhanva embraced Prahlaadha and said: "Prahlaadha! It is because of unflinching upholders of Truth like you that the world shines in all its glory. If there were no meritorious people on earth, how can there be light in the world?

Prahlaadha! Because of your adherence to truth you gave the verdict against your own son."

Prahlaadha knew that whoever lost the contest should pay forfeit with his life. But that did not deter him from pronouncing the verdict against his son. There is no greater Dharma than Truth--

"Sathyaanaasthi Paro Dharmah." Prahlaadha was not swayed by any sense of paternal love. He shed no tears. He watched the outcome of his judgment with a sense of fulfillment.

Recognising the utter dedication of Prahlaadha to Truth and Righteousness, Sudhanva declared:

Prahlaadha! your devotion to Truth will restore the life of your son. I am not claiming his life as the reward for my victory. I am giving back your son's life to you. Dharma protects its protector

"Dharma eva Adharmo hanthi. Dharmo Rakshathi Rakshithah" (Dharma destroys the one who harms it. Dharma protects its protector). "Prahlaadha! You have stood by Dharma. Thereby you have saved your son." In this manner Sudhanva praised Prahlaadha. Prahlaadha's life exemplified innumerable virtues and ideals. Because of such great and virtuous rulers in those days, the world was blessed with peace and prosperity. Today everywhere disorder, discontent, distrust, injustice, indifference to what is good and indulgence in what is bad, excessive attachment to sensuous pleasures, selfishness and self-centredness, are rampant among people. It is unfortunate that Bhaarith, which was once famous for its morality and righteousness, its dedication to Truth and Dharma, should have degenerated to this level today.

This is a blot not only on the country but a matter of shame for the people of Bhaarith. If we have a look at the state of the society, we find that all activities in society are related to selfpraise, abusing others and duplicity in speech. These triple vices are now ubiquitous.

Bhaarithheeya society, which was once so glorious, is now plunged in darkness, enveloped in discord, agitation and pollution. Pollution of heart is of great concern today. Man considers the air as polluted, water as impure and the sounds reaching him as intolerable.

Even the food is polluted. The Government also considers the entire environment as polluted.

Enormous sums are being spent on purifying the environment. It is not the environmental pollution about which we should be concerned. What is of concern is the pollution of Hridhaya (the heart). Man's mind is polluted. Man's heart is polluted. All his feelings are polluted. It is because of this basic pollution, all other things appear polluted. The primary need today is to eradicate the pollution in the human mind. How is this to be accomplished? The mind today is immersed in worldly desires and pleasures. As a result, there is mental dissatisfaction as well as bitter frustration. The mind should be turned back to the source from which it came. A fish out of water has to be restored to the water for it to regain its life. Can it survive if it is placed on a couch and fed with coffee? It will regain peace and life only when it returns to its native home. Likewise, man's mind has to be restored to its original home in the Aathma (Self). Without doing this, how can peace be got? Thus, mental peace has to come from the Aathma. This calls for turning the mind towards the Aathma by the use of the conscience. Follow the conscience with full self-confidence. Don't rely on the body. It is a water bubble. Don't rely on the mind, which is like a mad monkey. Follow the conscience. When you follow the conscience with full self-confidence, you can accomplish anything. Emperor Bali was one who had such self-confidence. When his preceptor, Shukraachaarya, wanted to dissuade Bali from making the gift which Vaamana asked, pointing out that the young lad was no ordinary Brahmana but the incarnation of Vishnu Himself, Bali declared: If the young lad is Vishnu Himself, as you say, that is all the more reason for me to stand by the offer I have made when the supplicant is the supreme Lord. Is it not my great good fortune to be in the position of a giver to the Lord? All human beings seek favours from the Lord. When such a Divine approaches me with a request for three foot-lengths of land, how fortunate am I? This opportunity has come to me because of my good deeds in previous lives. I am ready to go against the injunctions of the preceptor, but I will not transgress the commands of the Lord. The plighted word stands. You may see two objects with the two eyes and listen to two different things with the two ears. But the tongue is one. The word that is given must be honoured. I cannot go back on it. The man who does not fulfill his promise is dubbed a sinner. I am determined to keep my pledge. God is the Supreme person and Lord of all beings. I will abide only by His words."

Emperor Bali was such a resolute ruler. Thereby, he secured a glorious opportunity. However, Bali had one special attachment for his subjects. The subjects also were equally attached to the emperor. The people bore devotion towards the ruler. The ruler was attached to his subjects. Their mutual relationship was intimate and indivisible. It was because of such a ruler and such subjects that the country was happy and prosperous. Significance of Onam day Unwilling to forsake his subjects and at the same time, unable to go back on his promise to the Lord, Bali gave a pledge to the people that he would visit them once a year. This Onam day is the auspicious day of Bali's annual visit to the earth. It is the sacred day on which Emperor Bali returns to bless his people. In the month of Shravana, when the moon is nearest to the constellation Shravana, Bali said he would make his appearance. Today that auspicious combination is present. As Sri Eradi said in his speech earlier, this is the twenty fifth year in which the Onam festival is celebrated in Bhagavaan's presence. What is the lesson to be learnt from this Silver Jubilee of Onam? Over the past twenty four years you have been listening to Bhagavaan's discourses experiencing His presence and enjoying the celebration. How far are you practising Svaami's teachings? Every human being has a heart. This heart is filled with love. With how many are you sharing the love in your hearts?. With none at all. What, then, is the use of that love if it is not shared? You must share with all the love in your hearts, not with humans alone, but with all beings in creation. Love, which is the gift of God, has to be shared with everyone in the world. Share your love with one and all. All human troubles arise out of the failure to share this love with one and all because of selfishness. Everyone repeats the benediction: "Lokaas-samasthaas-sukhino Bhavanthu!" (Let all the people of the world be happy). To how many are you giving happiness? You are repeating the words mechanically, but are you praying from your hearts for the well-being of the world? No, not at all. You are concerned only with your selfish interests. The day you root out selfishness from within you, divinity will blossom in your heart. People talk about Saakshaathkaaram. What is it? It is not something external. Saakshaathkaara is contemplation of the Divine at all times and in all states within one's self. "Sarvadhaa sarvakaaleshu sarvathra Hari Chinthanam" (Thinking of God at all times, in all places continuously). People do recite the name of Raama incessantly. But will liberation be got by this repetition? To gain liberation, to win Rama's grace, it is not enough to repeat His name, you have to act upto Rama's principles. Raama sacrificed everything for the sake of Dharma. You have to make a similar sacrifice. Keep Dharma as your ideal. Engage yourself in righteous activities. Only then will Raama shower His grace on you. If, on the contrary, you perform no Dhaarmik acts but only repeat Rama's name, it is tantamount to abusing Raama.

Likewise, there is no meaning in repeating Krishna's name. What the devotee should do is to experience the ecstasy of Krishna Consciousness. Nor is that all. You should develop the equalmindedness of Krishna. Krishna maintained the same serenity of mind whether he was in a Yoga-Bhumi, or a Yuddha-Bhumi (battlefield) or Smashanaaana-Bhumi (a cemetery). He was always in a state of bliss. You should aspire to experience such bliss. Only then can you be said to experience Krishna consciousness. Whatever deity you may worship, you should experience the lessons of the deity within you. Experience Sai truths by filling yourselves with love. Saami's main teaching is Prema thathva (the Love principle). You are all experiencing this love. With how many are you sharing it? All around there is only hatred. Only egoism is present all the time. Equally ostentation is displayed all the time. How then, can you be deemed to have experienced the Sai truths? Whoever has imbibed those truths must be filled with love. That is the true mark of devotion. Emperor Bali was one who was filled with the sense of justice, with forbearance, compassion, Truth, Dharma, and devotion to the people. Are you cultivating at least one of these good qualities? Bali gave his promise to the people to appear before them every year because his people had all these qualities. The people of today are different. How can anyone know whether Emperor Bali is appearing? People celebrate Bali's visit as a festival but Bali is not coming. Why? Because the qualities of the people of those days are not present today. Doubtless, Bali loves his people. But the people today must have the power to draw him to visit them.

They should be like a powerful magnet which can attract a heavy block of iron. They will then be able to move and melt the heart of the Divine. You are doubtless magnets. But you have to purify yourselves to increase your magnetic power. That purity consists in the triple purity of mind, speech and body. Reasons for merger of the wicked in the Lord. Whatever anyone may do, there can be no deficiency in the Divine. Whether you praise or blame God, neither affects Him. In the Mahaabhaaratha once Dharmaja watched with anguish the abuses levelled against Krishna by Sishupaala and which Krishna tolerated for quite sometime. Then he hurled a plate at Sishupaala which severed his head. Dharmaja saw the blood from Sishupaala's body flowing towards Krishna and a divine flame from his body merging in Krishna. Dharmaja asked Naaradha how the soul of a wicked person like Sishupaala could merge in Krishna. Narada explained that good and bad, fame and blame relate only to the body and not to the Aathma. The merger in the Divine of devotees who have worshipped the Lord in many ways takes place after a long period of trials and tribulations, but it lasts eternally. In the case of the wicked, who remember the Lord constantly out of hatred, the merger takes place quickly but remains only for a short spell. The merger of soul in the Divine takes place for different reasons. In the case of Kamsa it was fear of Krishna, which made him always remember Krishna; hatred in the case of Sishupaala and Dhanthavakra, maternal affection in the case of Yashodha, who merged in Krishna through love. The Gopikas merged in the Lord through single-pointed devotion and Radha merged in the Lord owing to Bkaathma bhaava (sense of spiritual oneness). All attained merger. But in each case, it was up to a specific level. Cultivate the spirit of sacrifice. Do not follow the body. Follow the mind and the Aathma. The one who follows the Aathma is the real spiritual seeker. Contemplating on God with all your heart, chanting his name and surrendering to him, redeem your lives. The name and fame of God are not derived from outside. They are not the creations of newspapers and pamphlets. They do not change because of any circumstance. The Lord's name and fame grow out of their sacredness and love. Therefore, do not bother about anything.

Develop your love. Promote your divine nature. Cultivate the spirit of sacrifice.

Discourse in the Sai Ramesh Mandap on 30-8-1993.

The tongue is liable to four big errors; uttering falsehood, scandalising, finding fault with others and excessive articulation. These have to be avoided if there has to be Shaanthi for the individual as well as for the society.

BABA

30. Role of the Avathaar in the cosmic play

Like oil in the thil seed

Like ghee in milk, fragrance in a flower,

Juice in a fruit, fire in wood,

Divinity is everywhere.

EMBODIMENTS of the Divine Aathma! From ancient times, the questions, "Where is God?" and

"How does he appear?" have been agitating the minds of people. The answers have been sought by different ways of investigation, The believers, non-believers, those with doubts and others have not been able to get clear answers to these questions. To comprehend the truth, one should look within oneself. This cannot be learnt from text-books or from teachers. Chaithanya

(Consciousness) is there in the mind and pervades everywhere. The power of vision in the eye and of taste in the tongue are derived from this Chaithanya. People are using the sense organs but do not know the source of the power which activates them.

Chaithanya cannot be comprehended by the physical vision. It is within everyone in very close proximity. People undertake external exercises and spiritual practices in vain to find it. The entire Creation is a manifestation of the Divine Will Prakrithi (Nature) is the manifestation of God. Man is also part of Prakrithi and thus has the Divine power in him.

Chaithanya is the seed of entire Universe

A seed germinates and grows into a plant and then into a tree with branches, leaves flowers, etc.

The seed of the entire Universe is Chaithanya (Pure Consciousness). It is Sath-chith-aanandha.

It grows in full bloom in the human being and blossoms into the flower of Awareness. Thus God incarnates in man. To understand this truth is the goal of human life. It is the mind that stands in the way of this realisation. The mind is perverted when it is centred on the ego (body consciousness) of a person but when it is directed towards the Aathma, it becomes sublime. One puffed up with ego forgets Divinity. Thinking on the physical plane and looking at the external world, man is not able to understand the Divinity within him.

It is wrong to think that spirituality has nothing to do with worldly matters. The physical world also reflects Divinity. There are two entities, Svabhava and Prabhaava the former emanating from the True Inner Self and the latter from worldly pursuits. Because man forgets his true

Divine nature he is wallowing in troubles and tribulations. He is reflecting only animal qualities in his actions. Only when one enquires within, one has the chance of realising Divinity.

Today we are celebrating Ganesh Jayanthi, the birthday of Vighneshvara. Who is He? What is

His greatness? What has He taught to the world? We celebrate the jayanthi but do not make any effort to understand the thathvas (principle) behind it. His supreme teaching by His own example is oneness of the Universe. When He was asked to go round the universe to get a prize from his parents, He just circumambulated His parents Lord Shiva and Paarvathi and claimed that He had completed the trip around the universe by going around them, as Lord Shiva and Paarvathi represented the Universe.

Unity in a family is the basis of unity in society

The vehicles of Shiva, Paarvathi, Ganesha, Subrahmanya and the objects worn on their bodies all get on harmoniously though they are in their original nature antagonistic to each other. Take the examples of the lion, the vehicle of Paarvathi, living in peace with the elephant, the form of Ganesha, and the bull, the vehicle of Shiva, the peacock, the vehicle of Subrahmanya, bearing no enmity towards the snake, the garland of Shiva.

Unity in a family is the basis of unity in society. Though there are lots of common features among mankind, people are not able to visualise their unity, but promote only their differences.

The cause for the lack of peace in the world is the absence of harmony in thought, word and deed in each individual, which is reflected in the lack of unity among different individuals.

Spiritual values have been given up, resulting in the turmoil that we see today. Ganapathi taught that one should respect one's parents and thereby win their grace and secure bliss.

The form of Ganapathi cannot, by any human standards, be termed as handsome. He has a small head, big stomach and uncouth form. But still we are captivated by His form and like to see Him more and more and worship Him. Beauty does not lie in the Aakaara, the external form but can be experienced even in Vikaara (apparent uncouthness). Ganesha sacrificed his own tusk and used it as a pen to write down the Mahaabhaaratha to the dictation of Vyaasa for the benefit of humanity. Man worships God only for selfish purposes. No one is prepared to sacrifice anything for getting Divine Bliss, while men are prepared to go to any length for worldly pleasures. Your mind and heart should be rendered pure to worship Divinity. You should see unity in diversity.

Role of the Divine in the cosmic drama
In the cosmic drama, the Divine has His own role to play. When one takes up a role in a drama, he should act according to the role and not according to his state in real life. Behind the screen he comes into his own. You should understand this truth clearly. A man may take up the role of Raama in a drama. Then he has to adhere to the principles of Sathya, Dharma, Shaanthi and Prema which governed all Raama's actions, though in actual life, the actor may not be righteous.

Similarly God assumes a role in the drama of the world in human form. He has to behave as a human being only. This should be clearly understood by all.

Avathaar will not transgress rules and regulations
Krishna was Paramaathma (Supreme power) and Sarvajna (All-Knowing). Though He was very close to Dhruapadhi, at the time when she suffered humiliation in the court of Dhuryodhana, who ordered that she be disrobed, Krishna made an endless supply of saris to protect her honour.

Some persons ask why Krishna did not punish Dhuryodhana on the spot when he was perpetrating such a heinous crime against a noble woman who was so devoted to Him. No doubt, Dhruapadhi was highly devoted to Krishna and Krishna had also the power to punish Dhuryodhana. But in this drama several more scenes had to be enacted. Dhuryodhana was predestined to be killed by Bhima in the war that was yet to come. So Krishna could not interfere.

Kamsa's life was in the hands of Krishna and Raavana's life was in the hands of Raama. Both Raama and Krishna are forms of Vishnu. But each had to play His specific role in His incarnation. For every incarnation there are certain rules and regulations which the Avathaar will not transgress. Mere mortals cannot understand the ways of the Divine.

In the Divine family of Lord Shiva, we should understand that Shiva represents Energy,

Paarvathi represents Prakrithi, Buddhi (intellect) and Siddhi

(fulfilment) are symbolic of Ganapathi and Subrahmanya, their sons. They are all one, though conceived in different forms.

All the five fingers in the hands are not alike but different in size and shape. But when you do any work, they join together to give maximum effect. If all are of equal size, it will not be conducive to effective functioning. This is one of the secrets of God's creation.

Realise the wisdom of the Divine
There was a mathematician taking rest under a tree, who wondered why a pumpkin creeper bore such a huge fruit, while the huge banyan tree over his head bore only tiny fruits. He was doubting the sense of proportion of God. During his sleep some fruits from the banyan tree fell on his body. On waking up he realised that if the huge tree which attracted people to take shelter under its shade, had big fruits, like pumpkins, their fall would be harmful to those resting under it. This experience made him realise the wisdom of the Divine.

You should try to have complete knowledge of anything. Partial knowledge is dangerous. You should study the nature of the heart. God thinks of Loka-Shreyas (the welfare of the whole world). He has a broad vision, while human beings have a narrow selfish outlook.

You should also expand your heart---not the physical heart, which may call for surgery if it expands. I am speaking about the spiritual heart. It is called Hridhaya, meaning one which is filled with dhaya (compassion). It is all pervading. If you think of America, your heart goes there at once. The physical heart is like a machine with limited scope. The heart with dhaya (compassion) is Dhaivam (God). If one has no dhaya his nature is devilish. Compassion is the most essential quality of a human being. Without compassion, man is inhuman. A compassionate heart reflects divinity.

God has no birth or death. He remains an Eternal Witness. How to realise such an entity who is Aprameya and Apramana (beyond description and beyond proof)? He responds only to Prema.

You should understand God through love and spend your life with love.

Discourse on 19-9-1993 at Sai Ramesh Hall at Brindhaavan.

You have been born for one purpose: to die. That is to say, to kill the "I". If Brahma dies, you become Brahmam, or rather, you know that you are Brahmam. All literature, all effort, all Yajna, all teaching is just to hold a mirror before you, so that you may see Yourself.

BABA

31. Glory of the Lord's lotus feet

Observance of right conducts has declined;

Dharma has been endangered;

Morality has nowhere to abide;

What can I say about human existence?

Morality and ethics are confined to books;

The heart has become a foul dust-bin.

EMBODIMENTS of the Divine Aathma! Wetness is the natural trait of water. Hardness is the attribute of stone. Sweetness is natural to sugar. Heat is the quality of fire.

These are the Dharma (natural behaviour) of substances. For the individual, Vaancha (desire) is natural. Because man is sustained by desire, it is considered a Dharma (natural trait) of man.

"Dhaarayathi ithi Dharmah" (Dharma is that which sustains). Man is sustained by desire. Man's primary duty is to offer all his desires to God.

This means that the practice of Dharma calls for the offering of all worldly desires to God and developing the inward vision. "Sarvadharmaan pariththyaiya maamekam sharanam Vraja"-- Renouncing all Dharmas, take refuge in Me alone--says Krishna in the Geetha. This implies that man must make it his primary aim to offer to God all external sensory, physical desires and cultivate spiritual thoughts centred on the eternal.

Purity of heart is essential for spiritual wisdom

To develop such a spiritual outlook and to inspire it in others, one has to possess Chittha suddhi

(purity of heart). Spiritual wisdom can dawn only when there is purity of heart. Just as removal of weeds, tilling the land, sowing the seeds and watering them, are required before the crop can be harvested on a plot of land, the field of the human heart has to be cleared of bad thoughts and bad feelings, watered with love, tilled by spiritual practices and the seeds of the divine Name sown. Only then one is entitled to reap the harvest of Inaana (Divine Wisdom).

Today the spiritual exercises are confined to listening to talks and not to practising the teachings.

Listening has become a kind of disease. Merely after listening, men go about bragging that they know everything. This crazy boastfulness is deepening men's ignorance.

One should ruminate over what has been heard. After rumination, one should do Nidhidhyaasa (put into practice the lessons). Only then there is the triple purity of thought, word and deed.

Today people are content with mere listening to discourses. This will not lead to Realisation.

Srinivasaraghavan referred to the practice of "Naama Likhitha japam" (repeated writing of the Lord's Name as a spiritual exercise). This practice promotes harmony in thought, word and deed

(first thinking about the Name of the Lord, then uttering it and then writing it). All these three processes should be carried out with a pure heart.

"Sathyam" indicates the true form of man

Total purity is essential for all Saadhanas (spiritual disciplines). To achieve this purity one has to understand the difference between Shreyas (spiritual well-being) and Preyas (mundane happiness). True humanness consists in knowing the nature, of the Aathma (the Indwelling Spirit). Vaak (speech), Manas (the mind) and Praana (the life-force) together constitute the Aathma. The three syllables contained in the Sanskrit word Sathyam indicate the true form of man. Sath represents food, ee represents water and Yam represents Surya (the Sun). The implied meaning of the term is that the Sun provides the water which helps man to grow food. When Sathya is interpreted in the reverse order, it means that the Reality is realised by the penance and control of the senses (Sath for Reality, Tha for Tapas--penance, and Ya for Yama and other forms of control over the senses).

Control of the senses and the desires arising from them is almost impossible. What can be done, however, is to turn all the desires towards the Divine. This will be rendered possible when one realises that all the sense organs---the eyes, the ears, the nose and the tongue---derive their functional capacities from the Aathma (Indwelling Spirit). It is the Chaithanya (the aathmik consciousness) that animates the sense organs and enables the eyes to see, the ears to hear and the tongue to taste. The role of consciousness is like that of the 'current, which enables a bulb to shed light. It is because this Aathmik consciousness is present in all beings, it has been described as Brahman.

Human body is an instrument to realise the Divine

Caught up in worldly desires, man does not realise his Divine nature. He identifies himself with the body, not realising that it is temporary and perishable. The human body is nothing but an instrument for realising one's inherent Divinity. Man tries to know all about the universe but makes no attempt to know who he is. Man is leading an artificial life because of his ignorance of his reality. Man's foremost endeavour must be to realise his divine nature. He is not a mere human being. He is truly Divine and has to realise this basic truth. Man has to realise that all the limbs in his body function because of the divine power animating them. Too much importance should not be attached to these limbs intrinsically. Are not blind persons able to live without eyes? Are not deaf and dumb persons able to get on without the powers of hearing or speech? What matters is how these organs are used.

The saint Suurdhas wails in a soul-stirring song, 'Oh Lord! Inspite of being endowed with eyes, people are not able to see your beauty. Inspite of having ears they don't hear your melodious voice." Men hear only useless gossip. They do not listen to auspicious and sacred things. Having eyes, they look upon people with hatred and jealousy. Monkeys, donkeys, dogs and pigs also have the same power of sight as humans. What is the difference between these animals and human beings? Animals eat, sleep and procreate. If men are also doing these things, what is the difference between them and human beings? Animals love their young ones, but that love is temporary but human love can last one's entire life.

How can one sanctify the body? Man has to understand what it is without which he cannot exist. He can get on without eyes or ears or other organs, but not without Praana or Aathma (life). This is called Praana prathishttha (the installation of the divine Life-Force in man). In the mirror of the human body, the image of the Divine is reflected. Man foolishly considers the mirror as the Chaithanya (Reality). It is this consciousness that accounts for all that one is able to do and not the physical body.

How, then, is this body to be sanctified? By involving the body in actions related to the Aathmik consciousness. This lesson was taught to Vibheeshana by Hanumaan. Hanumaan told him that by mere repetition of Rama's name, the vision of Raama cannot be experienced. Only by dedicating himself to the service of Raama, together with chanting His name, can he (Vibheeshana) experience Saavyuyam (oneness) with Raama.

Of what avail is it to recite all the 700 shlokas of the Geetha, if one does not practise even a single teaching of the Geetha? "Adhveshtaa Sarva bhuuthaanam" (Do not bear ill-will towards any living being), proclaims the Geetha. This is the primary injunction of the Geetha to mankind.

This is based on the dictum that one Aathma (Divine) dwells in all beings as the Antharaathma (Indweller). What use is there in reciting the Geetha if one has hatred towards others? You worship the Divine and hate the Divine in others. Your worship and your hatred cancel each other out and nothing remains to your credit. Follow Lord Raama's injunctions. The Raamaayana is regularly read and Raama is worshipped by the vast majority of the people in Bhaarath. There is a Raama temple in every village. But how many are living up to Raama's commands? Raama chose to go to the forest to comply with His father's promise. How many today obey their fathers injunctions? Raama sacrificed the Kingdom and all comforts for the sake of upholding Truth. He said his sole aim was to promote the people's welfare. He sought to serve the people in whom he saw the image of God. No penance, no pilgrimages to sacred rivers, No study of scriptures nor the recitation Of the Lord's name will be of any use For crossing the ocean of Samsaara Without service to sajjana.

Sajjanam refers to those in whom Sath, the Aathma, dwells. As the Aathma dwells in all beings, Sajjanana refers to one and all. When you serve Sath, which is the Reality in every being, you get the Awareness of Chith (Consciousness). With this Awareness, the heart is filled with Aanandha (Bliss).

Annamaachaarya hailed the feet of the Lord as those which had been washed by Brahma himself which are of Brahman Itself, which bear the burdens of the entire universe, and the burden of all human bodies. How is this done. The Divine is Puurna-Svaruupa (All-encompassing form). Just as the feet of the individual bear the burden of the human body, the subtle body of the Divine bears on its feet the entire universe. Without the feet the body cannot move.

Significance of greatness conferred on Lord's feet
Recognizing that the macrocosm and microcosm are constituted by the same five basic elements, man should realise that the Divine is present in everything. Hence, man should chant the name of the Lord from the core of his heart and take refuge in the feet of the Lord. Annamaachaarya declared: "Oh mind! Take refuge in the lotus feet of the Lord. They will relieve you of all your miseries and lead you to the Divine."

When Bharatha enthroned the Paadhukas (sandals) of Raama, Ayodhya was really protected by

Raama's sandals. Bhadhraachala Raamadhas also sang in the same strain. "Oh Raama! I am holding on to your feet. I will not let you move even one step until you assure me your protection."

Thyaagaraaja in a similar vein, declared that he would not allow himself to be tempted by the treasures offered by the Raaja of Tanjaavur and he preferred the lotus feet of Shri Raama to all the wealth of the world.

"Feet" do not mean sandals made in silver or 'gold. Feet refers to the Divine that sustains everything. Why is such greatness conferred on the feet? Viewing the matter from the point of view of science, it will be noted that blood flows from the feet upwards to all parts of the body.

It is this blood which sustains the entire body. The feet that bear the burden of the entire body are essential for life itself. When you seek refuge in the Lord's feet, you can secure a vision of the Divine form.

Yashodha catches Krishna through His footprints
Here is a small example from the early life of Lord Krishna in Gokulam to show what the Lord's feet mean. Krishna was known as one who used to steal butter from all houses and feed his friends and playmates too. As there were a lot of complaints about this naughty child, Krishna's mother Yashodha caught hold of him one day as he was running away and asked him: "Why are you stealing butter from other houses while I offer you so much at home? Your mouth always smells of butter. Give up this habit. Otherwise, I will tie you to a mortar to restrict your movement. How do you do such things, being so small a child?" He smiled and ran away.

Yashodha went from house to house in search of Krishna. He played a small trick. Yashodha could not move fast as she had a heavy body. She was in a fix how to trace him.

Krishna dipped his feet in milk in a house and ran from there, leaving behind the trail of his footprints caused by the milk. It was only with the help of Krishna's own footprints that she was able to catch him. In fact, because she was so eager to get at him, Krishna himself helped her to trace him. Yashodha was able to catch the Lord only through footprints of HIS Feet.

The Lord's feet are glorious in many ways. But they will confer blessings only if they are sought with real faith. The Lord's feet contain the Divine insignia, of

Shankha (Conch) and Chakra

(Discus). Shankha symbolises Shabdha Brahman (the CosmicDivine sound). The discus represents the Wheel of Time. The Sound and Time together represent the different cosmic aspects of the Lord. The entire universe originated from sound vibrations. These vibrations are related to Time. Sound and Time are inseparable and interdependent. It is a common practice among rural folk to advise anyone who has committed a wrong to hold the feet of the person whom he has wronged. Once a man holds the other's feet, it means that he has sought and secured the latter's forgiveness. Nowadays, with all the Courts and legal processes, no one attempts to hold the feet of anyone. In the old days in the villages, if a man fell at the feet of another, the latter had no options but to forgive the suppliant. Seeking the Lord's feet is seeking forgiveness

The inner meaning of seeking the Lord's feet is that thereby the Lord will forgive the sins of the penitent. But mere holding of the feet is not enough. One must be genuinely repentant and declare that he will not commit similar offences again. Only then he will secure atonement. '

Embodiments of the Divine Aathma! Different persons pursue different kinds of Saadhana. To realise the benefits of this Saadhana, they go to Aashrams. They adore elders and offer worship to them. As long as egoism remains in them, all these exercises are of no avail. Your egoism may even lead to your expulsion from the Aashram. Hence suppress the ego, bury the sense of possessiveness and develop attachment to the Aathma to realise your true humanness. Envy, hatred and anger are causing havoc among men. Even residents of the Aashram are filled with anger. Anger has been described as incense offered to sin. Therefore while you are worshipping the Lotus feet or writing the Lord's name, you have to get rid of these three evil traits.

Destroy the ego, do your duty and help mutually
At the outset, the ego has to be destroyed. Then anger will subside. Do your duty. Do not project your ego. Develop mutual helpfulness. Carry on your work with joy. Be friendly towards each other. It is only when you behave in this manner that you will realise the benefits of Likhitha

Japam and worship of the Paadhukas (Lord's Sandals). In the Sai organizations, the primary requisite is unity and mutual trust. Only with unity can you promote the well-being of the world. If there is discord within the organization, how can you serve others? Make forbearance your ornament. Through love, eliminate your bad traits. Leading members of the Sai organization, who undertake sacred activities such as Naama Likhitha Japam and Paadhuka Seva should develop sacred qualities. In Tamil Nadu, in numerous villages devotees are engaged in Naama Likhitha Japa and offering worship to Paadhukas. Together with these they should also purify their hearts. Today in many parts of the world Nature is causing various disasters such as earthquakes, famines, floods and volcanic eruptions. What is the reason? The spiritual lapses of man account for these calamities. Disturbances in the heart (human heart) are reflected in earthquakes. Fill your minds with good thoughts and engage yourselves in good actions. Chant the Lord's name. When the ether is surcharged with the vibrations of the Divine name, the entire environment gets purified. Those who breathe this sanctified air will have pure thoughts. Purify the atmosphere, which is now polluted. Discourse in the Puurnachandhra Auditorium on 7-10-1993, the day of Paadhuka Prathishttha.

Man should become the very embodiment of love. When he is filled with love the entire world will be transformed into a love-filled world. As long as he is filled with hate the world will appear as a hate-filled world. It is only when love is developed that the dualism of good and evil can be transcended and the joy of oneness with the Divine experienced. BABA
32. Bhaarith's glorious Vedhic heritage
There is no greater eye than knowledge.
There is no greater penance than Truth.
There is no worse misery than greed.
There is no greater happiness than sacrifice.
KNOWLEDGE is the real eye. Truth is real penance. Penance does not consist in forsaking food and drink and roaming in a forest, Seeking the eternal Truth is real penance. Desire is the main cause of grief. Desire will go on multiplying. As and when one is fulfilled, it gives rise to another and this goes on endlessly. True Bliss consists in controlling desires. Sacrifice gives the greatest and lasting happiness. That is why the Vedhas have declared that it is not by work, progeny or wealth, but by sacrifice alone, one can get immortality. Sacrifice is the life-force of a human being. The Vedha teaches Thyaaga, Yoga and Bhoga (sacrifice, spiritual practice and material pleasure). The word Vedha itself has many meanings. It means intelligence, knowledge, awareness, etc. To lead a meaningful life man has to follow certain. Niyamas (regulations of discipline). It is also necessary to know one's own Inner Reality. Mere intelligence and acquisition of knowledge are not enough. Knowledge should foster wisdom leading to awareness. This is what the Vedha teaches. The word Inaana, which is translated as wisdom, contains two syllables! Ina and na. That which is not true at all times--past present and future---cannot be termed Inaana. Adhvaitha Dharshanam (Awareness of oneness) is the real Inaana. The Truth is one, it is infinite and it is Brahmam. "Sathyam, Inaanam, Anantham, Brahma," is the Upanishathik declaration. Vedhas confer security on humanity. The Vedha should not be treated as mere Manthra. It helps to realise full knowledge and wisdom. The sages in ancient times had the inner vision and experience of the Divine and they gave expression to this revelation through the Vedhas. They are applicable to entire humanity for all times. They confer security on humanity and show the way to happiness and peace. The goal of human life is to sacrifice desires and realise the Divine. Since the Vedhas are Anantham (infinitely vast), it is difficult to master them within the short life-span of human life. That is why Vedha Vyaasa divided them into four sections. He compiled the Riks into one part and called them Rik Samhitha. He put all the Yajus together and named the collection as Yajus Samhitha. All the Saama hymns were presented in the Saama Samhitha. Other manthras were compiled in a fourth section termed Atharvana Samhitha. The Yajus Samhitha was further divided into Shukla Yajur and Krishna Yajur Vedha, bringing the actual number of Vedha samhithas to five. The division of Vedha Samhithas Each Samhitha was further divided into three parts, namely, Brahmana, Aaranyaka and Upanishath. The first part is full of manthras for rituals, and for doing acts of charity and other sastraic rites. Manthra has Life-Force in it and, when properly interpreted, every manthra is related to Divinity. The second part, Aaranyaka, relates to the chanting of manthra during Vanaprasthaashrama, when one finishes his Grihastha-ashrama (family life) and retires to the forest to lead a life of austerity. The chanting of manthras should always be synchronised with practising of the prescribed

Karma. By such practice one can realise the Divine. By merely listening to manthras and failing to practise, one can never get happiness or peace. In order to realise the Divine, you have to practise the precepts prescribed in the Vedhas. No doubt, even listening to the recitation of the Vedhas is itself capable of purifying your mind. It is Shabdha Brahman. Sound is the first attribute of God. Vedha Shabdha is all-pervasive.

Today a great deal of wickedness, troubles and turmoils are prevalent in the world because of the decline of the influence of the Vedhas. Water, air, food, noise are all tainted by pollution. We are forced to lead a polluted life. When the air we breathe is itself polluted, how are we to lead a pollution-free life? The environment and the elements should be pure to ensure purity of heart.

The cause of this pollution lies nowhere else except in our own actions. Whatever words we utter, they spread to the entire atmosphere. We can purify the atmosphere of the world by chanting the Vedhas and singing the glory of God.

Cherish the Vedhas for sublimating your lives

The Rishis in ancient times used to move to forests and chant the powerful Vedhic Manthras to purify the atmosphere of the whole world. These Vedhas are neglected today. The people of this great country of Bhaarith have not understood the infinite potency of the Vedhas. It is a pity they have not tasted the sweetness of the Vedhas. The Vedhas should be cherished for sublimating life and not to earn a living.

The Upanishaths, which are termed as Vedhaantha or the concluding part of the Vedhas, detail the method of achieving the Purusharthas (four fold goal of life), namely Dharma, Artha, Kaama and Moksha. These can be achieved by one's own efforts through Vidhya (acquisition of right knowledge), which is of two types: one is Para Vidhya (the Higher Knowledge) and the other Apara Vidhya (lower knowledge). Para Vidhya shows the way to Moksha (Liberation), while Apara Vidhya deals with worldly pursuits, which cause bondage.

For acquiring spiritual wisdom this worldly education is not necessary. Sathyadhrishti (the vision of Truth) is the only requisite for spiritual pursuits. Since ancient times Bhaaratheeyas have taken to spiritual pursuits as their goal in life.

Nine different appellations for the Vedhas

There are nine different appellations for the Vedhas. They are:

Shruthi, Anusmara, Thrayee,

Aamnaaya, Samaamnaaya, Chandhas, Svaadhyaaya, Nigama and Aagama.

Shruthi: The Vedhas were taught by teacher to disciple by oral recitation, adhering to the right swara and tune. There were no gadgets such as tape recorders or gramophone records in those ancient times. The students used to learn the text only by constant repetition with intense devotion day and night and get manthras by heart. Even if the words are missed the svara or tune of the chanting should be without the slightest blemish, since svara is its basis. Hence it is called Shruthi (that which is learnt by hearing).

Anusmara: Since the Vedhas were learnt by memorising and constant chanting, they got the name of Anusmara.

Thrayee: Originally there were only three Vedhas Rig, Yajur and Saama, which formed the basis of all rituals, the manthras for Yajna and musical notes. Hence they were termed as Thrayee (the three).

Aamnaaya: It means practice. The practice of chanting and memorising was followed even in the dream state and deep sleep state, apart from the waking state. So it is called: Aamnaaya.

Samaamnaaya: As the Vedha is preserved in the heart of the students it is called Samaamnaaya.

Chandhas: The Saama Vedha lays down the basic meter for the Vedhic manthras, meter which is Chandhas. Hence the Vedhas are termed as Chandhas.

Svaadhyaaya: The Vedhas were learnt by son from father or disciple from teacher. Thus it was passed on from generation to generation, from grandfather to grandson. Since it is preserved only by constant self-study and practice after learning, it is called Svaadhyaaya.

Nigama and Aagama: As the study of the Vedhas is related to inhalation and exhalation, it is called Nigama and Aagama. For example, when one inhales the air the sound is "So" While exhaling, the sound is "Ham" With every breath this Soham meaning "I am He," is being repeated. This goes on 21,600 times per day. This is verily the practice of the Mahaavaakyas of the Vedha, "You are That"---"Thath Thvam Asi." This goes on all through life by every human being in the breathing process. When breathing stops life will be extinct.

Transcend body-consciousness to realise Inner Self

Many sages and saints did penance for realising Divinity. They said,

"Vedaahametham

Purusham Mahaantham" (We have seen God Almighty). Where did they see Him? "Aadhithya Varnam Thamasaah-Parasthaath" (We have seen God beyond the darkness, of ignorance). This darkness is the identification of oneself with the body and attachment to the senses. To realise the Inner Self you have to transcend the body." consciousness and attachment to sensual desires.

Vedha teaches many things with emphasis on unity and purity. Some say that the Vedha discriminates between people, declaring only some that are qualified to chant the Vedha. This is totally wrong. In the Shanthi Shloka, the Vedha says, "Sahanau Vavathu; Sahanau Bhunakthu; Sahaveeryam karavaa Vahai; Thejasvinaavad-heethamasthu; Maa Vidhvishaavahai." What is the meaning of this? "Let us grow together; let us live together, let us study together, let us develop knowledge together, without conflict, with friendship, with broadmindedness." While this is the teaching of the Vedha how can any one say that it discriminates against some? The Vedha teaches a subtle form of equality and equanimity. Only a fraction of the Vedhas remains now. Each Vedha has many branches. The Rig Vedha has 28 branches, of which 26 have faded out of memory and only two remain now. The Yajur Vedha had 17 branches out of which only two are in vogue, while the Saama Vedha had 1000 branches of which 998 are lost. Even with this fraction of the original Vedhas existing now, the world is progressing at least to the present extent. Imagine how powerful this planet would have been if all the branches of the Vedhas were in vogue now!

This sacred land of Bhaarith, which was reputed to be the Thyaaga Bhuumi (land of Sacrifice) and Yoga Bhuumi (land of Spiritual communion), has now become a Roga Bhuumi (land of diseases). The reason is people are turning to Bhoga (worldly pleasure) forgetting Yoga and Thyaaga. People should learn to live in Yoga. The Vedhic injunctions have infinite meaning. All may not be able to comprehend the inner meaning of the teachings. The truth that the earth has a gravitational force was there since the world was created. But it was discovered only by Newton after some experiments. Similarly? the truth hidden in the Vedhas was perceived by the Rishis after intensive penance and Saadhana.

They have given to mankind the Eternal truth which was revealed to them. The vibrations of their spiritual Saadhana have spread throughout the Universe. They are not limited to Bhaarith or any particular place.

This can be practised anywhere in the world, whether in America or Australia. This is Sathya Svaruupa (Embodiment of Truth). It cannot change according to time or place. It is beyond time and space; that is why it is called the Transcendental Reality. Some people think lightly of the Vedhas and even make fun of them. Learning the Vedhas give immense benefits Embodiments of love! Even if you cannot chant the Vedhas, if only you listen to the sounds with devotion they will elevate you to a higher level. Though the child does not know the meaning of the lullaby sung by its mother, it is induced to sleep hearing the tune. Similarly, listening to the chanting of the Vedha with undivided attention will give you immense benefit. If you ruminate over it and practise it in your life, you can imagine the magnitude of the bliss you will attain. The hymns of the Vedhas constitute Naadha Brahman (God in the form of sound), which is highly potent. Devotees who go to a temple ring the bell. The general belief is that it is intended to attract the attention of the Deity. Does it mean that God is asleep and you have to awaken Him by ringing the bell? God is always awake and is listening to the prayers of everyone. It is just like a visiting card which you present to any important person whom you want to meet any favour or help. Ringing the bell is only to draw the attention of the Lord towards you. The sound of the Vedha is also like ringing the temple bell. Omkaara is the correct address of the Lord. Sound emanates from the Primordial Pranava, which consists of the three syllables A, U And M.

The correct address of the Lord is Omkaaram. The sound of the bell and the sound of the Vedhas also radiate Omkaara naadha. The uttering of Omkaara should be done in a sweet and smoothly progressive way starting with the sound of "A" which should come from the navel, and then the sound "U" from the throat, and finally conclude with "M" from the lips. It should resemble the sound of an aeroplane when it is far off, gradually increasing in volume as it approaches the aerodrome and finally subsiding after landing. (Svaami demonstrated the correct way of chanting the Omkaara). The Vedha teaches this very clearly. The Vedhas lift the individual to higher levels. People are not realising this truth. Many Vedhic scholars send their wards to convent schools and seek to impart to them a secular education without caring to pass on to them the sacred legacy of the Vedhas, which will protect them.

Because of lack of encouragement and proper propagation and promotion, knowledge of the Vedhas is declining day by day in this great country, which is the home of this sacred treasure.

Svaami expects the people to foster the Vedhas and is showing the way by making all the thousands of students of the Sai educational institutions, right from the primary school, to learn

Vedha chanting. You have watched the children of the primary school, ranging from 5 to 8 years, chanting the Vedhas at the commencement of this meeting. There is actually no compulsion to learn the Vedhas. All the students willingly come forward on their own to learn Vedha chanting.

There are Vedha paathashaalas (Vedhic schools) elsewhere where they impart this teaching, but the students discontinue the chanting later on. You should make the children learn the Vedhas with enthusiasm, without compulsion. They should be made to realise the greatness of the Vedhas by sweet persuasion.

The Vedhas have protected our country from ancient times. Since the Government has not cared to realise the beneficial influence of the Vedhas in contributing to the welfare of the nation, the country is facing a lot of troubles. The propagation of Vedhas should be taken up by the people.

The essence of the Upanishaths is given in the Bhagavath Geetha and the Brahmasuuthra.

Several saints have related stories to explain clearly the import of the Upanishathic truths. The Eeshavaasyopanishath is the first among the Upanishaths. It declares that God pervades the whole universe. Because people have neglected the study of Sanskrit they are unable to enjoy the treasures of knowledge contained in the Upanishaths.

Inaugural Discourse in the Puurna Chandhra Auditorium on 18-10-1993 at the Vedha Purusha Sapthaaha Inaana Yajna which was revived after three years.

33. The message of the Upanishaths

The Dashara celebrations in October, during which Bhagavaan revived the Vedha Purusha

Sapthaaha Inaana Yajna after a break of three years were made immensely significant for spiritual aspirants as well as Sai devotees in general by the series of discourses on the Upanishaths which He gave for seven days at the Puurnachandhra Auditorium. The discourses from 19-10-1993 to 23-10-1993 are given below in a condensed form.

ONE may study all the scriptures, perform all types of sacrifices, go on extensive pilgrimages, master the eight types of knowledge, but it is not easy to control the senses and the mind, direct one's vision inward and maintain equanimity of temper. In ancient times, the sages and seers maintained purity in thought, truth in words and righteousness in deeds. But in this Kali Age today, people have forgotten human values and exhibit animal qualities such as lust, anger, greed and hatred. Purity of heart and selflessness are the hall-marks of the human life which one gets after passing through several births. Foolishness, pride, covetousness and other such qualities are a hang-over from their previous lives as sheep, buffalo or cat. One who is in the habit of attacking and harming others out of hatred reveals the tendencies in his previous birth as a dog.

One who lacks steadiness of mind and constantly jumps from one thing to another, reflects the quality of the monkey from which he has evolved. It is to get rid of such bad qualities that Yajnas (Sacrifices) are undertaken.

Mind is the altar of the Yajna

In Thretha Yuga, Vishvaamithra took the help of Raama to ensure the conduct of the Yajna without hindrance from the demonic forces. His Aashram was called Siddhaashrama. Actually the heart of every human being is a Siddhaashrama. The moment evil thoughts or bad feelings arise in man, that is the beginning of all sins. When the heart is polluted with such sinful thoughts, one should seek the help of Aathma Raama, just as Vishvaamithra sought the help of Raama to put an end to the ogress Thaataki. If you think of God and pray to Him with sincere devotion, every deed done by you will be a Yajna. The mind is the altar of this Yajna. You must offer all the evil qualities at the altar of the mind. That is the ideal internal Yajna to be performed by every person as distinct from the external Yajna done ritualistically.

The Raamaayana as allegory

The allegorical meaning of the Raamayana story should be properly understood. Raama stands for Yajur Vedha, as he was the embodiment of Dharma. Lakshmana esteemed Raama's words as law and followed him. He was always chanting the name of Raama. He represents Rig Vedha.

Bharatha represents Saama Vedha, as he was always singing the glory of Raama. Shathrugna represents Atharva Vedha. Thus the four sons of Emperor

Dhasharatha of Ayodhya represent the four Vedhas. Dhasharatha's capital, Ayodhya, symbolises a place where no enemy can enter.

Dhasharatha symbolises rite karmendhriyas (five organs of action) and the Inaanendhriyas (five organs of cognition). The three queens of Dhasharatha--Kaushalya;

Sumithra and Kaikeyi-- represent the Saathvik, Raajasik and Thaamasik Gunas (qualities of Goodness, Passion and Inertia). If the inner significance of the Raamayana is properly understood, it will serve as a manual of ideal living for all mankind.

If the principle underlying the Yajna is understood, it will be realised that the Divinity pervading everywhere is within you too. "Antharbahischa thath sarvam vyaapya Naaraayanasthithah."

Through the conduct of a Yajna one can understand the immutable permanent Reality in a fastchanging world.

Fire has an important role in the Yajna. Fire for the Yajna is created by churning two wooden sticks placed together. The top stick is the mother and the bottom piece is the father of Agni (Fire). Immediately after birth, Agni devours both father and mother. Fire is the presiding priest or Brahma (for the Yajna). He takes the offerings and acts as a courier to convey them to the Gods. Yajna has, moreover, many significant inner meanings. Those who do not know them make fun of it or deride it.

Since people have forgotten the real significance of such holy rituals performed for promoting the welfare of mankind, humanity is suffering from all sorts of tribulations and miseries. In the ethical, physical, scientific and all other fields today man has given up his Svabhaava (true nature) and is keen only to earn Prabhaava (fame). Fame is like passing cloud. Today one may be a Prime Minister, full of fame and power. But when he steps down from that post no one will care for him.

Upanishaths proclaim the real nature of man

What is the true nature of man? A term for man in Sanskrit is Nara. Nara means Aathma (the Self). The five elements have come from Aathma. They are called Naaramu. The term Naaraayana has come from this. Nara does not refer to the physical form of a human being. He is the Aathma and should behave in keeping with his reality. A man without human qualities is like a flower without smell, a fruit without juice and a cow that cannot give milk.

The Upanishaths explain this truth. They stress the importance of man knowing his own Reality, transcending the body, the senses, the mind and the intellect. They proclaim that the real nature of man is love, compassion and selflessness. But people have forgotten their original nature and are nourishing unnatural qualities. How can Dharma be sustained in such circumstances? People are mainly engaged in selfish pursuits. They use their sense organs in wrong directions, instead of seeing good, hearing good, speaking good and doing good, which is the godward path. When there is no trace of any good quality in human beings, how can one expect purity of heart?

Power of the Divine

Yajnas with sacrifice as the basis provide the royal road to Self-Realisation as opposed to the perilous path of self-destruction, in which people are engaging themselves now. Yajnas are designed to invoke the power of the Divine for the welfare of mankind. Divine power is limitless and beyond the comprehension of the limited intellect of man, who is labouring under the delusion that he is all-powerful and can achieve anything. Even the great saint musician and composer Thyaagaraaja once doubted the power of God when he was subject to great misery and suffering, but recovered his faith immediately after he recollected how, without the power of the Divine, a monkey (Hanumaan) could cross the ocean or Lakshmana do service at Raama's feet or Bharatha worship His sandals or Lakshmi, the Goddess of wealth, serve at His Lotus Feet. He blamed himself for doubting the power of the Lord and regretted the lapse in his devotion.

The significance of the offerings made in the holy fire of a Yajna is that whatever is offered is converted into Amruth (Divine Ambrosia) and conveyed to the gods. When man sacrifices his bad qualities, he is transformed into the Divine. With this in view, the Upanishaths declare:

"Lead me from untruth to Truth, from ignorance to Knowledge, from death to Immortality."

Thus the Yajna helps man to progress to the summit of eternal bliss.

The Yajna is not for passing time. The cosmic energy issuing from the Manthras will go up in the fire from the Yajna hearth and spread all over the world and purify the atmosphere. Some agnostics may criticise this as wasting food, ghee and other valuable articles by throwing them into the fire. This is as foolish as the criticism of an ignorant person that a farmer wastes good quality seeds by casting them on his farm. He does not realise that one small measure of the seed will yield several bags of grain as harvest. The Yajna is done not for selfish purposes but for the welfare of the entire world. It reflects the noble ideal of service and sacrifice before self.

Excerpts from Discourse on 19-10-1993.

The quest for happiness

There is no penance other than Shaanthi (stillness of the mind). It is the ornament adorned by saints and it is what every one yearns for in his heart. Saint

Thyaagaraaja sang that there is no comfort or happiness without peace "Saaanthamu leka soukhyamu ledhu."

Sukham (the state of enjoyment of happiness) is like heaven. The pleasures derived by the senses from worldly objects are transient, while real happiness lies in experiencing the bliss from the Inner Self. People are unhappy because of Thrishna, or the insatiable thirst for worldly pleasures.

Desires are always multiplying endlessly. The only way to overcome misery or grief is to put a curb on desires.

Dhaya (compassion) is inherent in every human being. But few are prepared to share this with their fellow-beings. Man is deluded by the trivial pleasures from mundane things and is filled with greed and lust. This is the main obstacle in the spiritual path.

Basis of adhvaithik principle is Ekaathma bhaava

The Vedhas deal with rituals and worship, which imply a dualism between the worshipper and the object worshipped. Vedhaantha spells out the principle of Adhvaitha (non-duality). It is interpreted in different ways, but the real basis of the Adhvaithik principle is Ekaathma bhaava, that is the feeling that there is only one Aathma pervading everywhere and none else. "Adhvaitha Dharshanam Jnaanam" (Wisdom lies in the perception of oneness).

The Upanishaths preach this oneness, based on the concept of unity in diversity. Upa means

"near," ni represents "nishtha"

and shath means "sit". Upanishath means that one should sit near the preceptor to acquire the Supreme Spiritual Wisdom.

The Upanishaths originated during different periods of time. That is why we find that the teachings of the different Upanishaths are not based on the circumstances obtaining at one particular time, but they are applicable universally at all times as they teach only what is vital for the welfare of humanity.

"Eeshaavaasyam Idham Sarvam" says the Eeshopanishath. There is no place in the universe where God is not present. Just as air is everywhere even though we cannot see it with our eyes, Divinity is all pervasive. But for this Divinity, the Sun and the Moon cannot shine, rivers will not flow, crops will not grow. The Divine governs the whole universe. All things in creation are for the use of the entire world. No one can claim exclusive right over these gifts of Nature.

The Eeshaavaasya Upanishath teaches man how to combine Bhoga with Thyaaga (enjoy the world with an attitude of sacrifice). One imbued with the feelings of Thyaaga (sacrifice) will not revel in mundane pleasures. Sacrifice and sensual pleasures cannot co-exist just as water and fire cannot co-exist. What, then, is the inner significance of this directive that man should enjoy Bhoga (pleasurable experiences) with Thyaaga (renunciation)?

It means that though one is not interested in mundane things, he has to do his duty. He cannot escape doing karma. He should shed his ego while doing his work and should not consider himself as the doer. He should do his duty without any desire for the fruits thereof. Because man is filled with ego and is not interested in experiencing the real bliss, he suffers from Roga

(disease). When work is done with a selfless attitude there is no difference between bhoga and thyaaga. We find today in the world only rogis (persons afflicted with disease) and not bhogis or thyaagis. You should give up attachment to worldly things and direct your attachment to the Divine only. Sage Yaajnavalkya taught his wife Maithreyi this principle of oneness. The same Parabrahman (Supreme Self) is present in everyone in the form of Awareness.

Desireless action leads you away from misery

The Eeshaavaasya Upanishath teaches that this Sathyam (Truth) is changeless. It is the basis of the Sanathana Dharma that has been followed in Bhaarith. Man cannot live without Karma (action). But he should do it without the feeling of ego and desire for reward. When the seed is sown, the tree will grow and yield fruit whether you like it or not. The desire for fruit is the cause of misery. The Upanishaths teach the way of getting rid of the ego.

Prakrithi is like a mirror which reflects whatever object is placed before it. When you look into the mirror there are three entities--yourself, the mirror and the reflection. But if you remove the mirror, there is only one left and that is 'you.' The reflection is gone. Because of worldly feelings, you look at the reflection. Remove the worldly feelings, you see your Inner Self which is the Reality. When you get rid of the feelings of I and Mine everything becomes one.

The Upanishaths taught the difference between pleasure and pain. If you shed your ego and experience Divinity you will get rid of your pain and enjoy lasting bliss. The Upanishaths teach through stories the subtlest truths. You should understand their inner significance and taste the nectarine sweetness. This is possible only when there is Bhaava-Shuddhi (inner purity). Purity of heart leads to Siddhi---Self realisation.

Qualities that are Nature's gift to man

It is unnatural for man to behave like animals with selfishness, anger and jealousy. A compassionate heart is Nature's gift to man. It is a pity that man does not make any effort to realise that the Divine is closer to him than his own parents. One should search within, and not in the external, for God.

Love, Compassion, Self-Confidence and Sacrifice are the real human qualities. You are Amrithaputhra (Son of Immortality). Purity in thought, word and deed is a basic requisite for man. Under any circumstances, man should not allow this threefold purity to be affected.

Patience is another ideal quality one should develop. Whatever troubles or obstacles one may meet with while doing his proper duty, he should bear with them. One should not get depressed when others blame or abuse him but should stick, to the path of truth. The third quality is perseverance which is indeed a prime need for any one in any field but more so in the spiritual path.

Once you have taken up a vow to do a good thing, you should not go back on it under any circumstance. You should fulfill it even at the cost of your life. This is the hallmark of a true devotee. In ancient times, people had this determination and became good souls. The Paandavas had to spend their lives in forests feeding on leaves and fruits. Still they never gave up their adherence to the plighted word. In the Kali Yuga devotees have to face a lot of trials and challenges, but they should not waver even a wee bit in their devotion to God.

Just as gold has to be heated, hammered and subjected to many processes before it can be made into a jewel, devotees have to pass through ordeals ordained by the Divine.

The divinity in man

With Premabhaava (feeling of pure love) you can realise your oneness with the world. Every object has five attributes, namely Asthi, Bhaathi, Priyam, Name and Form. The first three--

Existence, Cognisability and Utility ----- are permanent and changeless, while Name and Form are subject to change. Human beings with different names and forms are just like waves on the ocean of Sath-chith-aanandha. They are also ame Sath-chith-aanandha. The essence is the same in all names and forms. The realisation of this truth is spirituality. This is the message of the Upanishaths. It does not matter if you cannot understand every word of the Upanishaths. It is enough if you realise the truth that you are embodiments of the Divine.

When you get some troubles, you cry in a state of despair and even blame God. There is no need for you to feel aggrieved at all. All troubles are passing clouds. The clouds cannot hide for long the effulgence of the Sun which is permanent. Similarly the Aathma cannot be affected by anything. If you identify yourself with this Reality you will have no cause for grief at all as you will be embodiments of bliss.

Excerpts from Discourse on 20-10-1993.

Descent of the Divine

The same Supreme Being who saved Prahlaadha by appearing from the pillar and punishing his demonic father, the same Supreme Being who came to the rescue of Kuchela, the same Being who descended from Vaikuntha to save Gajendhra, the Lord of the elephants, has now come to the world as Sath-chith-aanandhamurthi, presiding over the hearts of all as Puttaparthi Chakravarthi.

You should realise that I have come to remind you of your Reality, that in fact everyone of you is an embodiment of Sath-chith-aanandha.

Excerpts from Discourse on 21-10-1993.

Unity in diversity

Though the Upanishaths are termed as Vedhaantha (the end of the Vedhas) they are actually the Siras (head) of the Vedhas. The Eeshaavaasya Upanishath emphasises that man is bound by action and purity of heart is the basis for right action-- "Chitthasya Shud-dhyave Dharmah."

Right action has to be done for achieving purity of heart. When you get rid of bad feelings, evil thoughts and evil deeds, you can experience your Inner Self.

As long as one is puffed up with the pride of education, wealth, status and position one cannot comprehend the Aathma. You must turn your mind away from all these transient mundane pursuits and redirect it towards the Inner Self to realise the Aathmabhaava, which is eternal and changeless. This is the basis for all the changing phenomena of the mundane world. (At this stage, Bhagavaan materialised a gold chain by a wave of His hand and went on to explain that the basis for all gold jewellery is gold). The gold chain can be melted and turned into solid gold from which other ornaments can be made bearing different names and forms. Similarly, the basis for all the different forms and names of beings in the world is Divine. The Eeshaavaasya Upanishath stresses the unity in diversity. It teaches that the mind and the body will change but the Aathma is the unifying, changeless and permanent entity. Man, in his ignorance, considers all changing objects as true and does not look into the common basis which is changeless.

Excerpts from Discourse on 22-10-1993.

Man and the Divine

The Vedhic invocation says "Puurnamadhah Puurnanuidham," meaning "That is whole and this is whole." This implies that Divinity and humanity are not different. The same constituents are there in both. In fact there is only one Supreme Power which manifests itself in multitudes of forms.

If you take the Gaayathri Manthra, it starts with "Bhur Bhuvah Suvah," in which Bhur is the Bhuuloka (this world where we live), Buhvah is the other world and Suvah is the world of Radiation. All the worlds are within every human being. Man is an embodiment of the three phases of time (past, present and future) and the three powers of creation, preservation and dissolution. He is thus the embodiment of the Prajna (principle of the Supreme Consciousness).

The five vital airs, Praana, Apaana, Udaana, Samaana and Vyaana are the constituent elements of Naadha (the primordial sound). Bindhu represents steadiness of our body, mind and intellect.

Kala represents the Aathma. The Eeshaavaasya Upanishath deals with the different aspects of Naadha, Bindhu and Kala. It says that these Three are like a triangle with the Self as the apex and the body and mind as the two points at the base. The body is gross, while the Self is subtle and the mind is a combination of the two. Just as Naadha, Bindhu and Kala are everywhere, the mind is also all-pervasive as stated in the Eeshaavaasya Upanishath. The mind is the cause of pain and pleasure, happiness and misery, bondage and liberation. It should be properly directed towards Prajna (Awareness). The body is inert matter and cannot function without the Prajna principle, which is radiation. Praana (vibration) animates the whole body. All the three are constituents of Sath-Chith-Aanandha. Man experiences Aanandha in the deep sleep state--

Swapna-Avastha and perceives worldly things in the waking state-- Jaagratha-Avastha.

The body houses the immovable Aathma

The Upanishaths point out that there are three entities: the Kshara, Akshara and Kshraakshara (Immovable, movable and movable-immovable). The movable body houses the immovable Aathma. One who understands this principle of Akshara will have nothing to do with the world.

The body is given only for knowing the Aathma principle, but man is using it for other purposes and thus abusing it.

The human body consists of eyes, ears, nose, tongue, etc. These are but instruments that help one to make the journey of life. There are three elements in all actions' the Kartha (doer), Karma (action) and the Kaarana (purpose of the action). The Upanishaths declare that if all the three are in harmony one will achieve success. All the limbs and sense organs in a man can function only when the life force is there. That is Chaithanya Shakthi. It comes from the Self, which is Prajna, Aathma Shakthi or Radiation. Even scientists are aware that matter cannot move on its own without energy. But they are not able to recognise the Aathmashakthi which was recognised by the ancient Rishis. The moment one becomes aware of this truth he can be considered to be free from the bondage of the phenomenal world.

Socrates told his disciples that the Universe is governed by truth, goodness and beauty. These are the same as Sathyam, Shivam Sundaram, the terms used by the Bhaaratheeyas to describe Divinity from time immemorial. The truth that transcends the categories of time is the Real Truth. Man is an embodiment of this Truth. But people have forgotten this today. People relish only untruth. Truth is not palatable to them, while untruth seems sweet, though it is poisonous.

"Speak the truth, do righteous acts" is the motto of Bhaarith, as declared in the Vedhas. But people today kill truth and jettison Dharma. How then can they have peace?

The Kenopanishad proclaims that the basis of every action should be Truth which is Divine. The Rishis did not compile the Upanishaths as a pastime. They gave this valuable treasure for the welfare of mankind.

Devotees failure to know what Svaami wants

Several persons holding high positions come here to get Svaami's blessings for achieving higher positions or for other personal benefits. Big businessmen and traders come here to take Svaami's blessings and return. Those in the teaching, legal and other professions come here. Theists come here, participate in Bhajans etc., and go away. All of them come to Svaami to get their desires fulfilled. No one comes to know what Svaami wants. How many strive for Svaami's sake?

Everyone comes only with selfish motives. I want to point out that enjoying benefits and failing to show gratitude is grievously wrong. In ancient days the devotees of the Lord sacrificed their lives by engaging themselves this divine quality of selflessness. It is only by sacrifice you can achieve immortality. You should love all without distinction and serve society.

"Sacrifice and share Divinity with every one" is the message of the Upanishaths. You should not bother about your close relations alone, as these relationships are only temporary. You should develop Vishva Prema (Universal Love).

You may wonder why I am telling this repeatedly. Though I have been telling you all this for several years no one seems to change for the better. So I have to emphasise the need for your getting rid of too much attachment to your kith and kin. Love your children but do not get excessively attached to them. You must make use of your body for doing your duty, but do not get too much attached to it.

Act according to your role in life

Every person has to play his role in life. How this should be done is illustrated by a story. Once an actor went to the court of Bhoja Raja to exhibit his talents and get a reward. First he went in the role of a renunciant wearing saffron robes. When the king offered him some gold he declined to accept it. When questioned whether what he gave was not enough, the actor replied he would come again the next day.

The next day he came in the guise of a dancing girl and gave a fine performance which pleased everyone. When he was offered some gold coins in a plate by the king the actor said what was offered was not enough. When the king questioned him as to why he had refused to take anything on the previous day, but was asking for more that day, the actor replied that he had to behave in a manner befitting the role he took. The previous day he had come as a renunciant and had to decline the gold offered to him. But on that day he was in the role of a dancing girl and so could demand more money. The moral of the story is: Students should behave as students and devotees as devotees only. Every person in any field has to uphold certain values appropriate to the role he has taken up. When I say devotees should do selfless service to humanity as a way of serving God, it is only in your interest and for your spiritual uplift. Discriminate between what is permanent and what is temporary and pursue the path leading to permanent bliss. Do not hanker after trivial transient pleasures. Speaking the truth, do your duty. This is the message of all the Upanishaths.

Excerpts from Discourse on 23-10-1993.

Love is the vital force. Love is the governing principle. It is only when the precious diamond of love is shining in one's heart that sacred and divine thoughts about God will arise in the mind.

BABA

34. Significance of Yajnas

Neither Charity, nor the performance of sacrifices,

Neither penance, nor the highest knowledge,

Nor any other thing can be equal

To the power of control of the senses,

Whatever enquiry or investigation one may make.

FEW men in the world are able to recognise what is the primary goal of life. Many are not even worried about this inability.

What is life? What is its highest goal? Man has to enquire into these basic questions. Man's highest aim, however, appears to be to obtain food, clothing, shelter and progeny. All these are, no doubt, necessary to some extent. But these are related to mere living and have no relation to the supreme goal of life. Along with leading one's ordinary life, one has to take note of the great aim of life. Man must recognise the immense preciousness of human life. Every householder has to consider not only his duties as a householder living in the Grihasthaaranyam (forest of family life) but also about Brihadhaaranyam (the message of the Upanishath of that name). Those living in the jungle of the family, need to know about the life envisaged in Brihadha-aranyaka.

Brihadhaaranyaka Upanishath

What is this Brihadhaaranya? It is the Immense (Brihath) hermitage. This aashram is the combined expression of the mind, speech, and life. Thejas (effulgence), symbolises vaak (speech). Mind is represented by food Annamaya. Praana (the Life-Principle) is Rasamaya (essential sweetness). The effulgent speech, in association with the mind as food becomes the essence of the Life-Principle. This truth was proclaimed by the sages in the Upanishathik declaration: "Raso vai Sah" (He, the Divine, is all sweetness) the form of Brahman.

The Rasa principle is present only in Praana (the Life Principle). The cosmos is based on life.

There is, however, the aathma, which transcends the Life Principle.

The Brihadhaaranyaka Upanishath is the unified form of Vaak, Manas and Prajna. As the sages in the forest contemplated on this form and realised the bliss of experiencing the Divine, this got the appellation Aaranyaka (Forest). As fire arises in forests, Agni (Fire) got the name Aaranya.

Man's life originates in fire, grows on fire and ends in Agni. Born from the warm womb of the mother, sustained by the fire of his digestive organ, man ultimately ends on the funeral pyre. Fire is thus the basic cause of human birth and death.

Agni is an embodiment of the Divine. Fire is effulgent. It nourishes the whole world. But it needs to be kept under control. "There is nothing great without restraint." Rationale behind sacrifices

The ancients started performing Yajnas and Yaagas (sacrifices) to propitiate the Divine in the form of Fire. The sacrifices were performed not to secure personal benefits or to get desires fulfilled, or to get over difficulties. They embarked on sacrifices only to secure Aathmaanandham the (Bliss of the Spirit).

Once, Emperor Ianaka performed a big Yajna. Many scholars participated in the sacrifice, including scholarly women. Among such women were Maithreyi, Gargi and others. At that Yajna a pandith called Ashvala started putting questions to the sage Yaajnavalkya. "How many deities are there?" he asked. Yaajnavalkya, being a very shrewd person, took the cue from the word "here." He answered "There are 3306." The entire assembly was taken by surprise at this figure. They wondered whether there could be 3306 deities present at the Yajna.

What lay behind Yaajnavalkya's reply? He considered everyone present at the Yajna as divine.

"God appears in human form." Hence, in those days, men were not regarded as mere human beings at Yajnas and Yaagas. Every individual was considered as a manifestation of the Divine.

Ashvala then posed another question to Yaajnavalkya. He asked: Is it possible to reduce this number of deities?" "Yes, it is possible," said Yaajnavalkya. There was no mention of "here" in the second question. Yaajnavalkya answered: Thirty three deities." Asked whether he could state who these deities were, Yaajnavalkya said: There are eight Vasus, eleven Rudhras, twelve Aadithyas, Indhra and Prajaapathi. All these together make 33."

Yaajnavalkya reduces the number of deities to one

The assembly was satisfied with the answer. Then, Gargi got up and asked: "Venerable sage! Is it possible to reduce this number further?" "Certainly yes," declared Yaajnavalkya. "There are six: Agni (Fire), Bhuumi (earth), Vaayu (the Wind-God), Aadithya (the Sun God) Amarathvam (Immortality), and Adhvara." These six are the true deities, he said.

Ashvala got up and asked whether the number could be reduced further, Yaajnavalkya said the number could be reduced to three: The Past, the Present, and the Future. The answer was accepted by the assembly.

In answer to further questions whether the number could be further reduced to the most important deities, Yaajnavalkya said; "They are two: Food and Praana (Life)."

Asked whether the number could be further reduced, he said that it could be reduced to one-anda- half and he explained that the all-pervasive Vaayu (the Wind God) is known as Adhyartha (one and a half). Asked whether a further reduction was possible he said it could be reduced to one, namely, Praana (Life).

When enquiries from the scientific, the spiritual and other points of view are carried out to find out the ultimate divine entity, Praana, the presiding deity of Life, emerged as the only one.

Where does this Life Principle dwell? The answer is' it has no specific place or time. It is everywhere. The purpose of the Yajna is to propitiate this all-pervading Life-Force.

Yajna means acquiring the highest wisdom

What is Yajna? It is not merely offering oblations to the sacred fire, homam. Yajna means acquiring the highest wisdom by Yama and Niyama (control of the senses and practice of spiritual discipline). This wisdom is not related to worldly knowledge. All the knowledge acquired through the intellect is illusory. It is based on dualism and is tantamount to ignorance. It may serve to score debating points; such debates also promote discord.

The knowledge that transcends all controversies and is related to the eternal verities is the Aathma-Inaanam (Knowledge of the Self). It is for acquiring this supreme knowledge that the ancient Rishis performed Yajnas and Yaagas. Practices like reciting the Lalitha Sahasranaama cannot be considered Yajna in the true sense.

Only when one embarks on the internal quest for the realisation of the Self within can he acquire Aathma Inaana (Knowledge of the Self).

For this purpose there is no need to study any books. Only by direct experience and one's own spiritual Saadhana can this awareness of the Self be realised. Man has to understand that he is the cause of his own happiness or misery and that all that he seeks or loves are not for their sake, but for his own sake. Hence, he has to understand his own true nature. Realising the ephemerality of all worldly objects, man should recognise that enduring happiness can be got only by developing love for God.

A great sage like Yaajnavalkya declared that the whole cosmos is a manifestation of the Divine.

The Divine is omnipresent. This awareness of the Divine has to be experienced by everyone.

Sense of oneness is the message of Pranava

The Brihadhaarnyaka Upanishath pointed out that this oneness is proclaimed by the allpervading sacred Pranava "OM". This pervasiveness can be experienced in a myriad ways, above all, in the sound that can be heard when one is alone and closes his ears. Man has to realise the redemptive power of Pranava Manthra. It is the means to overcome the vicissitudes of life and realise union with the Divine. The body is like a water bubble that originates in water, grows in water and merges in water. The body is the water bubble and Naaraayana is the water. It has come from Naaraayana and has to merge in Him.

The Yajnas and Yaagas are designed to teach such spiritual truths. But human beings, caught up in the coils of worldly life, are a prey to all kinds of troubles and tribulations. Some of them are always prone to doing harm to others. They convert even the good to evil. For such persons there is no end but utter destruction. Everyone, therefore, has to know something about human life and the Divine life. There are many who cannot see anything good, but see only what is bad. There are others who always see what is bad, but consider it as good. Both these ways of looking at things are false. The man with a godly outlook sees the good always.

In human life, one should not have any kind of bad thoughts. Even when someone reviles you, you should practise self-restraint and remain calm. There is no power equal to such self-restraint.

Everyone should develop such tranquillity (or peace). The more peaceful you are, the greater your longevity. People today easily lose their peace. They get enraged on the slightest provocation. There are four types of men who view the good and the bad in different ways. Of these, worse than demons are those who deride all that is good and picture it as evil. These perversions are a reflection of the bad times confronting mankind. Such attitudes are indications of impending disaster.

Portents of the Kali age even before its dawn

Once Krishna and Balarama were engaged in a lively conversation. Balarama asked Krishna:

"How is it many untoward things are happening today? Apart from the differences between the Paandavas and the Kauravas, discord is rearing its head even among our own Yaadhavas. There are growing conflicts amongst them. Bitterness is rampant. Enmity is growing." Krishna smilingly replied: "This is a manifestation of the power of Kali. The Kali Age is dawning. These are its portents. These evil tendencies are an indication of the disasters to come.

All the evil tendencies that are manifest today are indication of the impending disasters. The future is in your hands. To avert disaster, all evil thoughts have to be eschewed. You have to develop always peaceful thoughts. When any thought of doing harm to somebody arises in your mind, examine whether it is right or wrong. If you wish to make any public statement examine whether it is true or false. Don't broadcast any kind of bazaar gossip. Investigate the truth. Do not be in a hurry. Wait till you have got all the facts. To draw conclusions in haste on the basis of imperfect information is a sign of stupidity.

A lesson to be learnt from the Mahaabhaaratha

Why do untoward events happen? Only to promote what is good. They have a cleaning effect.

Rise and fall are 'natural events. When any such thing takes place in relation to the Divine, it must be regarded as the prelude to something elevating and sublime. Here is an illustration from the Mahaabhaaratha. The battle between the Paandavas and Kauravas had gone on for nine days. On all the nine days, the Paandavas were the losers. Yudhishtira and Arjuna were dejected. At that time Krishna told them: "Why are you getting so impatient? Unrighteousness score some victories in the beginning. Gradually; it declines and the forces of righteousness, peace and truth gain the upper hand. Therefore, do not have any worry. Get up, Dhananjaya (Arjuna). Dharma is bound to win. Selfishness will be destroyed. Alas! the parents of a hundred sons will ultimately have not' even one to perform their obsequies. What a fate! What is the reason? It is the result of the crooked stratagems of evil-minded men. They are full of low cunning. They have the worst traits in men, Such persons bring ruin on great royal dynasties. Only a rain of arrows can bring about peace." Krishna thus roused the drooping spirits of Dharmaja and Arjuna. The Kauravas were unable to tolerate the popularity and good name of the Paandavas. The Paandavas were the very embodiments of Righteousness. They were totally wedded to truth. Were it otherwise, would valiant heroes like Bheema and Arjuna remain inactive when Dhruapadhi was sought to be disrobed? They allowed events to take their inevitable course. Hence, mishaps in life should be regarded as happenings which serve to further one's spiritual progress. Uniqueness of Sai Seva activities Today when the Sai Seva organisations are rendering glorious service all over the world, there are some. persons who, like the Kauravas, are consumed by envy. They have their abettors and accomplices like Shakuni, Dhuryodhana's uncle. Such men cannot be considered as educated or intelligent persons, If they were really educated, they would not indulge in such mean tactics. But what is the outcome of all this? The maligners will be defeated by their own weapons. Very soon the glory of Sai will spread to every part of the world. It will increase a thousand-fold. The reason. is the essential goodness of the Sai Mission. It is totally free from any taint. Every act is done out of the purest of motives. Everything that is said is based on truth. All activities are conducted without depending on any outsider. Hence, there is no room for fear.

After the harvest when the sheaves of grains are winnowed, the wind blows away all the chaff, leaving only the grains behind. Through this process, the true devotees will remain steadfast. The wavering puppets will drift away. This is the process of winnowing. Hence, adhere firmly to the truth of your convictions. Be prepared to meet any challenges. Life is a challenge, meet it. Be ready to face any situation. How is this to be done? Not by tit-for-tat or blow-for-blow. You have always to be truthful. Do not accuse anyone. You have no need to harm anyone. Adhere to the truth and esteem it as the life-breath of a true devotee. Strengthen your faith in God. Envious people invent all kinds of stories. They feed the flame of hatred in others. All these belong to the evil breed of Shakuni. And where do they find their moorings? In the company of evil-minded men like Dhuryodhana and Dhussasana. They will never go near righteous men like Dharmaja (the eldest of the Paandavas). There is only a bad end for such persons. The good will never come to grief. Good causes are bound to flourish. Hence establish your life in truth. Carry on the good work Embodiments of love! Good opportunities come rarely. Once lost, they may' not recur. Making good use of the present opportunity, see that the Sai organisations grow from day to day. Every street must reverberate with the name of Sai. Every heart should be purified. Every mind should be full of happiness. Love even your enemies. Treat even the one who hates you as friend. Then, there will be no need to accuse anyone. When you adhere to your truth and live upto it, you are bound to be successful. Truth is one. That is the truth which should be the sheet-anchor of your life. As many are gathered here, I wish to inform you that the programme for the Seventieth Birthday is being drawn up. Whatever may happen, these celebrations will go on. Sai's resolve will be fulfilled. Even if the heavens fall, Sai's resolve will not alter. We do not speak about these resolves, nor are they broadcast among the public. In the world only goods that are not easily sold, are advertised. Goods that have a ready market are not advertised. Important events for Seventieth Birthday During the next two years, many important events are going to happen. Programmes are afoot to help the poor and the needy. On November 18th, 70 marriages will be performed. People often talk about mass marriages. They are rather simple affairs. The marriages we intend to perform will be different. The weddings will be such that the married couples will say: "We never imagined that such a thing could happen in our lives!" Each bride will be given a wedding medallion (bottu) in a gold chain. The bridegroom will receive a gold ring. A set of cooking utensils will be presented along with some provisions. The brides will be given valuable Kanjeevaram saris. The couples will also be given houses in due course.

It is also intended to provide sewing machines to women who are confined to their houses and cannot support themselves by working outside.
All are our people. The Divine is in all. But owing to their past actions, and their misfortunes, some of them entertain silly ideas. They are transient and not lasting.
Even Dhuryodhana and Dhussasana praised Krishna .in the end. Therefore, do not have ill-will towards anyone. Love everyone and pray for everybody's well-being. To the extent possible, take part in the work of Sai Organisations. Today there is no nobler work in the world.

I shall not speak about the numerous other organisations in the world. But the purity that obtains in the Sai Organisations cannot be found anywhere else. Gossip mongers may talk as they please.

But so far as our organisations are concerned their watchword always is "Help! Help! Help!

Serve! Serve! Serve!" This is their primary aim.

I do not have any differences based on race, caste, or creed. The weddings will be performed without regard to any of these considerations. Every couple will be blessed with happiness and inducted into the right code of conduct for householders. Those seeking to get married should abide by the laws of the country.

35. Education should develop human values

Education confers beauty on man;

It is his secret treasure;

It confers pleasure, fame and happiness;

It is the' teacher of teachers;

It is one's kinsman-when abroad;

It confers supreme vision;

In a royal assembly it is learning alone,

Not wealth, that counts;

A man without learning is an animal.

STUDENTS and teachers! Today neither students nor teachers are aware of the true meaning of education. Education should foster morality, righteousness and character. Man today has acquired prodigious knowledge in the fields of science and technology. But this serves only to promote a material civilisation and teaches only knowledge of the external worlds to students.

What man truly needs today is not this external knowledge. He needs refinement of the heart.

This can be got only by internal culture.

It is not enough today to make a man a mere human being. He has to be transformed into an ideal human being. Education makes a man compassionate. That is the fulfilment of the purpose of education. Education should not be equated with book knowledge or the acquisition of skills for leading one's life in the world. The modern student is unable to determine what is the basis of his life and what is important in it. Hence, he loses confidence in himself.

Because they lack the patriotism, born out of love for the country, and the devotion to God, which instills a spirit of sacrifice, students today have lost all self-confidence.

Loss of self-confidence is the cause of all troubles

Most of the troubles tormenting the world today stem from loss of Aathma-Vishvaasa (selfconfidence).

Devoid of the fear of sin and love for God,

Mankind today is plunged in a grave crisis.

The eternal verities proclaimed in the scriptures have assumed bizarre forms. Sacred nature is divorced from humanity. The ancient wisdom is in eclipse. Perverted knowledge is growing. In such a situation, how can ethical and spiritual values appeal to youth?

The entire educational system should be changed. The true purpose of education should be understood.

Reading and writing cannot make a man educated.

Are those acquiring degrees scholars?

Without right knowledge and proper conduct,

Can one be deemed educated?

If learning for earning a living is esteemed as education,

Are not birds and beasts able to live without learning?

Education is the life-breath of human beings

Education should be the life-breath of human beings. By converting education into a means of earning a livelihood, people are forgetting the meaning of life.

Character determines life. It is pure and holy. Without character how can man lead a worthwhile and sacred life? For this reason, from ancient times, Bhaaratheeyas fostered a life-style based on ethics. Students are forgetting this ancient culture of Bhaarith. Pursuing worldly, ephemeral knowledge, they do not understand the nature of life.

Man should recognise the cosmic basis of education. Education today is based on mechanical skills. Students should strive to promote blossoming of the heart together with development of the intellect. Intellectual knowledge alone cannot suffice for the conduct of life on right lines.

It is true that Bhaarith is lagging behind in the economic sphere. But what harm does this do to the world? There is a greater danger from another source. This arises from the fact that people are immersed in material pursuits, ignoring moral and spiritual values. Unless this process is reversed, education cannot make headway.

Two hundred years ago, scientists in other countries started exploring the powers of nature and experimented with control of the five basic elements (ether, air, fire, water and earth). They invented dreadful bombs and envisaged terrible wars. This is a wholly misguided effort.

Role of science in promoting human welfare

The arrogant claim that they have achieved scientific progress is utterly unwarranted because this is not true science at all. Does knowledge of how to cause mass destruction merit the name of science? Cannot their scientific investigations be devoted to causes which promote human welfare and betterment?

All the scientific discoveries of today were excelled by the achievements of Hiranyakasipu. The powers obtained from them are prone to be misused. Deluded by their scientific and technological progress, the nations are losing their wisdom. What is the purpose served by these discoveries? While they promote temporary pleasures, they virtually destroy the sources of inner strength. The education that we must aim at is one which will direct the children towards the right path and promote the well-being of the nation. Only when mankind realises this need will world peace be a reality.

Man needs today a mind free from attachment and hatred, speech that is untainted by falsehood, and a body that is totally free from violence. Of these, truthful speech is most essential.

Unfortunately, man is not free from these taints. Hence, students should receive an education that produces purity of mind, speech and body.

Of what use is man's conquest of the external world if he cannot realise, his own true nature?

Scientists are only helping to satisfy man's selfish desires. They are keen on securing accolades for themselves, but are not concerned about, the welfare of society or the goals of life. How glorious will be their achievements if their discoveries are useful to the people and promote the prosperity and welfare of nations?

Today every step of man is marked by unrighteousness. Every word is tainted by untruth. His thoughts are not free from evil. All his desires are rooted in selfishness. Caste and religious conflicts are rampant. Parochialism is growing. In short, humanness has reached its nadir. How then, can man be called a human being, when there is no harmony in thought, word and deed?

Bad example set by elders make students go astray

Moreover, there are no ideal leaders today. Even exemplary parents are not to be found. Nor are there ideal teachers. In olden days, the leaders, the parents and the teachers led exemplary lives.

It is because such persons are absent today that students are without ideal examples to follow.

There is a Thelugu saying that the calf follows the cow. Because the elders set a bad example, the students also are going astray.

The students are not to blame. They are inherently good hearted and good natured. But they take to bad ways because of the elders. Therefore, the first requisite is for the national leaders and the parents to understand how the educational system should function. They should realise that education should aim at developing good qualities in the children and should not be regarded as a means to acquire wealth. Character is based on good conduct. Only a young man with good qualities can become a good leader. He must take part in social service as a preparation for leadership. Everyone should realise that his happiness is bound up with the happiness of society as a whole. Parents and teachers should develop such attitudes in the students.

Despite all his achievement in the physical world, how far has man been able to develop his human qualities? This is the question facing the world today. If people study the ancient history of Bhaarith, they will realise the importance which the ancients, attached to Truth.

Need for unity to protect national interests

There may be differences at the individual level, but when national interests are involved, these differences should be forgotten and all should act in unity. This was the attitude of Dharmaja in respect of his Kaurava cousins. At the individual level, Dharmaja said that the five Paandava brothers might be ranged against the hundred Kauravas. "But if the nation is in peril, we are 105 against the rest. It is our duty to protect the nation." Unfortunately, today, each party is ranged against the other and there is discord among the people. This should go. All should bear in mind the interests of the people. Education today is not inculcating in the students the spirit of compassion and kindness. Once Gandhiji told a foreigner that he was feeling sad because education was making students heartless and lacking in fellow-feeling. Students do not show any sweetness in speech. They have no sense of gratitude. Of what avail is such an education? The foremost quality students should have is humility. They must be free from conceit. They must be unselfish. Without these a student lacks lustre. Students today lack these qualities. They have little concern for the plight of their parents. But, there are also parents who pamper their children like Dhritharaashtra, the father of the Kauravas. If parents do not correct their children, who will correct them? How can parents cherish children who misbehave and earn a bad name? The birthday that should be celebrated is the day when good qualities are born in one. You must become ideal students. Students must work hard. They have to be grateful to their parents for all that they have received from the latter. Children who cannot please their parents, how will they serve the nation? The five life-breaths for a student Every human body is sustained by the five life-breaths--Praana, Apaana, Vyaana, Udhaana and Samaana. What are the five life-breaths for a student? They are: Truth, Righteousness, Peace, Love and Non-violence. All these five principles have to be rigorously observed to sublimate one's life. Each one should cultivate the qualities of compassion, patience and oneness. These qualities will promote the unity of mankind. These are based on the love-principle. Without love, there is no life. Love gives rise to truth. Love begets peace. When you have love, you practise non-violence. Love is the under-current in all these. Education has to be reformed. But Ministers are only trifling with changes. Reports of Committees are gathering dust in shelves. Educational reforms should be related to the five basic human values, without which education has no meaning and life itself is devoid of purpose. A student today has no conception of the value of Thyaaga (sacrifice). He has to learn to do his duty without expectation of any reward. This is a form of Yoga (Spiritual discipline). Knowledge is to wisdom as lightning is to cloud Dear students! Giving up the craze for going abroad after the completion of your studies, take a resolve to dedicate yourselves to the service of your village, your state and your nation. Act according to your conscience. In your heart shines Aathma-Vidhya (the knowledge of the Spirit). Knowledge should beget wisdom like the lightning in a cloud. Everyone of our students should stand forth as a shining example to others. The light of their example should spread all over the world and bring about spiritual unity among mankind. All changes in the educational syllabi or other changes in the economic and political spheres are of little value. There should be change in the mental attitude of the people, as the prelude to a change in the national scene. Transform yourself first and then preach to others. True science should foster the well-being of the people and promote unity amongst them. Unity will lead to purity and both will lead to Divinity. Today there is none of these. We have only Community (caste). It is this communal feeling that is the cause of conflict. Giving up all differences based on caste or creed, people should regard themselves as the children of one human family. There is only one religion, the religion of humanity. Students should develop this spirit of unity. Truth and Righteousness are inter-related Students! The future of the country, for good or ill, depends on you. The older generation cannot reform the nation. Only a disciplined and well educated younger generation can serve the nation well, as future leaders. Treat the whole world as a vast mansion. Strive for the well-being of all nations equally with Bhaarith. The Sri Sathya Sai Institute has been established to promote sacred ideals among students. Adhere to your principles and beliefs regardless of what others may say. Have the example of the Gopikas in mind. Their devotion to Krishna was firm and unwavering. Consider truth as your life-breath. If you speak the truth and practise righteousness, you will attain the highest state.

Truth and Righteousness are inter-related. Together they constitute humanness. Bear in mind the glorious example of Harishchandra, who sacrificed everything for the sake of truth.

Adhere to truth in earning a living or in experiencing anything in life. Ill-gotten wealth will be lost in the same way. Engage yourselves in some kind of socially useful activity in the educational, medical or other fields. Sacrifice is more important than earning money. Students imbued with this spirit of service may go to any country. Do not use your diplomas as begging bowls for jobs. Make proper use of your education to render service to the nation and to lead noble lives. This is my benediction to all of you.

Address to the Convocation of Sri Sathya Sai Institute held in the Vidhyagiri Stadium on 22-11-1993.

36. Purity, patience, perseverance: steps to Divinity

In this sacred land of Bhaarath

Forbearance is our best wealth;

Of all forms of rituals, the highest

Is the observance of Truth and Morality;

Of sweetness of disposition

The greatest is maternal love;

Jettisoning the national ideal

That honour is greater than life itself,

What a pity people have Fallen a prey to exotic practices!

What can I say about

The plight of Bhaarath!

Like the elephant unaware of its strength

Bhaaratheeyas have become docile today.

WHEN the heart is filled with compassion, the hands are dedicated to 'the service, of others, the body is engaged in constant help to others, the life of such a person is sacred, purposeful and noble.

The entire Cosmos is based on the bedrock of Truth. Wealth and Welfare and all comforts and pleasures are dependent on Truth. Wherever you turn, Truth shines effulgently. The Goddess of Wealth, Lakshmi, dwells in the abode of Truth. The world cannot exist without Truth, just as the rays cannot exist without the sun. Truth is the Cosmos and the Cosmos is Truth.

The entire Cosmos is permeated by the Divine Eeshaavaasyam idham Jagath. It is foolish to imagine that the natural, physical and mundane is unreal and them is something else that sustains

it. The Cosmos is Vishnu and Vishnu (the Supreme) is the Cosmos.

The Cosmos is a manifestation of the Divine.

The Universe is a Divine manifestation

Considering this universe, composed of the five basic elements, as a Divine manifestation, the ancient sages embarked on a spiritual enquiry and realised the Truth. It is because this profound and eternal Truth has been forgotten by man that the world is a prey to all kinds of troubles and difficulties.

Among the five elements, the primary one is the earth. It is all-pervasive. All the mountains, rivers, villages, towns, etc., are based on the earth. The scientists found that the earth is revolving round itself. In that case, all the objects on the earth should also be revolving. But that is not so.

The earth has a divine power of attraction. This power of attraction holds all the objects' together. Hence, the earth alone cannot be regarded as the basis for all the objects. If we enquire more deeply, it will be found that even the earth is supported by something else. The earth is based on a higher power, the Divine power.

The Divine remains steady and unchanging

Thus, the Divine is firm, pure and changeless. Without this Divine power, nature and the physical world cannot function well. If, for instance, the rails on which a locomotive runs, were also to move along with the train, the results would be disastrous.

Likewise, if, the road were also to move along with the car running on it, there will be accidents.

It is the car that moves and not the earth. In this manner, many objects are in motion in the universe, but the Divine remains steady and unchanging.

The next is the water element which is present everywhere. Whether we perceive it or not Life is impossible without water.

The next one is Fire. This fire element is present in every living being including humans, as Iatharaagni (the digestive fire). This fire is not only on the earth, but is even in space. When clouds clash against each other, fire is generated in the form of lightning. When two inert flintstones are struck against each other, fire emanates from them. Likewise when two sticks are rubbed against each other, fire emerges. Thus, fire also is an all-pervading power.

Then, there is Aakaasha (space or ether). It pervades everything. There is Vaayu (air). There can be no life without air. You experience the presence of air during a storm or a whirlwind. But air is present all the time everywhere.

When the five elements have such immense power, you can imagine what must be the potency of the Divine which sustains them. The five elements are Paramaathmasvaruupa (manifestations of the Supreme Omniself). No one can deny Its existence, whether one is a theist, an atheist or an agnostic. Today, these five elements are not being properly used.

Instead, they are very much misused. Their misuse is the root cause of all the travails of the world.

As the five elements are based on Truth, the ancient rishis observed restraint in speech so that they may adhere to truth.

Restraint in speech nourishes truth. Excessive speech is the cause of great unrest. It is essential, therefore, for everyone to recognise the basic role of the five elements and live in consonance with that awareness.

Religion is the reflection of belief

The mind demonstrates the nature of the five elements. Mathi (belief) has emerged from the mind. Matham (religion) is reflection of belief. Religion is not what it is normally understood to be. There are many engaged in destruction of religion. If religion is destroyed, belief or faith will be destroyed and then the mind itself will be destroyed. Religious hatred has to be got rid of, not religion as such. Adherents of all faiths recognise the power of the five elements and worship them.

Bhaaratheeyas have upheld unity in thought, word and deed by their conduct. The Vedhas have proclaimed that the Divine is present in all five elements. This truth is accepted by the adherents of all faiths. But while professing belief in this truth and proclaiming it, they are not acting upto it in practice. Only the Bhaaratheeyas practised this truth and experienced the bliss derived from

it. Bhaaratheeyas adored hills, birds and trees. Adherents of other faiths ridiculed such practices.

This is due to thoughtlessness and is not a sign of sanity. All people say that God is in all beings and all things. But to deride Bhaaratheeyas, who act on that saying, is sheer folly. How can one, who acts according to his words, be regarded as a fool? Should not the one who does not live up to his words be treated as a fool? Let the wise determine the right answer.

The Supreme Reality is one, which is God

Bhaaratheeyas are known to act upto their words. People of other faiths may profess one thing and practise differently. We need 'not criticize any religion.

All religions teach only what is good.

People should lead their lives on this basis.

If the minds are pure,

How can religion do any harm?

People are spoiling their minds. Religion is not at fault. Today what is needed is transformation of minds and not of men. When the minds are reformed, men will automatically change for the better. Men's lives are based on how their mind thinks. Today men should develop mental purity and sacred feelings.

The Supreme Reality is one. It is God. Men of all faiths--whether they are Hindhus, Christians, Muslims, Paarsis or others----have recognized that God is one. It is only when men develop feelings of forbearance, compassion and unity, that men will have fraternal feelings towards each other and foster equality and justice. It is only when men develop Ekaathmabhaava (oneness in Spirit) that bitterness and discord will cease. Men must act on the conviction that the same

Divine dwells in all beings.

From the body to the Omniself

The Cosmos is an organism with multifarious limbs. A human being has eyes, ears, mouth, etc.

All these organs are limbs of the human body. The body is a limb of society. Society is a limb of humanity. Humanity is a limb of Prakrithi. Prakrithi is a limb of the Paramaathma (Omni Self).

This shows the relationship between the sense organs in man and the Divine. Therefore, one should make proper use of the senses, comprehend the nature of the Divine that sustains them and lead a meaningful life.

There is the body. There is the world. There are forests, trees and many other things. In referring to all these, we use the word "is"---that it exists. This term "is," signifying existence, proclaims the fundamental fact about man. There is only one thing that exists. But man forgets this Divine Reality because of his selfishness and self-centredness. The latter reflect his egoism and ostentatiousness. It is only when the last two are extinguished, will man's inner Divinity manifest itself.

The bad traits which are found in man are the result of his food and other habits and do not arise from his Aathma. Vices like lust, anger, envy and pride are the outcome of bad food and improper associations and are products of external factors. They do not arise from within.

Qualities like love, compassion, consideration for others arise from within one's self. These are human values. Forgetting these values, following animal qualities, men are leading an animal existence. This is wrong. Men should lead lives based on their human estate.

Divine love is permanent and imperishable Wealth may come and go. Strength may grow or decay. All things in the world may pass away.

But there is one thing that is imperishable and unchanging. That is permanent Divine Love. All other forms of love are not real love at all. They are temporary, worldly attachments, based on physical, communal or other desires.

True love is related solely to the Hridhaya (heart). Man today is not cherishing such an unchanging and enduring love. He is wasting his life, pursuing temporary allurements.

Wandering about aimlessly in the pursuit of evanescent and trivial pleasures, man is immersed in all kinds of troubles. He can discover his true path only by seeking spiritual illumination.

Spirituality does not mean performance of ritual worship. It calls for the removal of the animal traits in man. Only then sacred feelings will arise in him. That is real spirituality. Regard all beings as children of God. Bear no ill-will towards anyone. It is because of hatred and ill-will that mankind is plunged in violence and bloodshed. Man's blood is inherently pure, divine and unsullied. To misuse that blood in wrong ways is a sign of animal or demonic nature.

Bhaarith today is in a crisis created by a myriad difficult problems. But not Bhaarith alone, all other countries are also facing similar crises. What is the reason? It is the total failure to remember the spiritual oneness of mankind. Only the sense of spiritual unity will generate universal love. That love alone will bind men together in unity. This love principle should emanate from the heart. Only then true unity will emerge.

Embodiments of Love! Do not be deluded by the belief that life has been given to you for eating and drinking and enjoying other physical pleasures. This is not the reason for human, birth, which is rare blessing. What is the difference between a human being and the animals? It is qualities like kindness, compassion, forbearance and sympathy which differentiate human beings from animals. But man tends to forget these inherent qualities out of absorption in selfish, mundane desires. Those wearing the glass of selfishness can only see selfishness all around them. A defective vision produces an apparent defect in creation. There is nothing wrong with srishti (creation). Every defect is related to the defective dhrishti (vision).

Perform duties but do not claim any rights Men must realise that true humanness will be achieved only when the five elements in the universe are properly used. The earth is a sacred base of the Supreme. The other four elements are super-imposed on it. Without the base, the other elements will be functionless. Hence all human beings living on earth should cooperate with each other, engage themselves in socially helpful activities and redeem their lives. Every man has duties to perform, but can claim no rights. Today people tend to assert their rights without regard to their responsibilities (or duties).

Duties and rights go together. Today men tend to assert their rights but have no regard for their responsibilities. Absolute unconcern for responsibilities has become a kind of epidemic in all spheres of life today. When you discharge your responsibilities, your rights will be automatically 'ensured.

In Bhaarith today everybody is clamouring about rights. What is the meaning of "right"? It is that to which you are entitled. How do you get it? Can you get the fruit without sowing the seed?

Without a tree can there be a fruit? But you aspire for the fruit without sowing the seed or rearing the tree? What folly is this? No one has any inherent claim to any right. He has only responsibility. Do your duty. Duty is God. Work is worship.

When you perform your duties, you will be acquiring the title to your rights. Every man should discharge his duties. Performance of duty is your yoga. It is your enjoyment. It is your sacrifice.

Discharge of duty is the basis for everything.
Have respect for the faiths of others also

If duties are performed according to one's respective role---as householder, student, renunciant or ascetic--the world will not suffer from lack of peace or prosperity. People are not attending to their respective functions. They are not carrying out the duties properly. Ignoring their duties, they interest themselves in the activities of others.

This attitude is prevalent in the religious sphere also. Members of one faith consider it supreme and deride the faiths of others. No one is qualified to make such a claim. Even as you prize your faith, you must realize that others are equally entitled to prize their faiths. You may esteem your religion greatly. Adhere' to it accordingly. But do not criticize or despise the religions of other people. Unfortunately men have lost this sense of respect for other faiths. If all people recognise this truth, there will be no room in the world for conflicts and discord. Man strives for peace in many ways. Where is peace to be found? It is not in the external world.

Peace must be found within. Outside you have only pieces. You must seek to manifest the peace within you. There are millions in the world who preach and propagate what is good. But not one in a hundred practises the good teachings. The world will pay no heed to those who do not practise what they preach. It is the liar who is haunted by fear. Whether others esteem or not, you must be content to act according to your conscience. The inner conviction that you are acting righteously is your best witness. There is no greater Dharma than adherence to Truth. You need have no fear as long as you adhere to truth. It is the liar who is haunted by fear. Therefore, go forward to render social service with faith and fortitude. Eschew religious hatred, which is the cause of conflict. Respect every religion. People today talk about protecting the nation. The nation does not need protection. If you protect and foster truth and righteousness the nation will be automatically protected. In the name of protecting the country, arms and bombs are piled up which are ruining the nation.

At the root of all troubles is human selfishness. Some amount of concern for selfish interests is justified. But when anything is carried to excess, it proves calamitous. Man is endowed with the discriminating power to control his desires. This power must be used to decide whether any action is right or wrong. "Be," "do" and "speak" what is good. All of you are embodiments of the Aathma (Spirit). You are all the manifestations of the Divine.

The Indwelling Spirit is one and the same in all beings irrespective of their external differences, like the current that illumines bulbs of different wattage and colour. Fill your hearts with love. Then you can experience real bliss. With a narrow mind and heart, if you indulge in magniloquent words, no one will care to listen to you. First of all "Be"-be good yourself. Then you "Do"--act likewise. Then "Speak"--tell others about what is good. Only thus you will be setting an ideal example.

Do not entertain bad feelings about anyone. They do you more harm than to others. As the saying in a Thelugu poem goes: "One's own anger is one's enemy and one's peace is one's friend and kinsfolk. One's happiness is heaven and one's sorrow is hell." Develop sacred arid pure feelings. We claim to celebrate the birthdays of people. But the birthday is truly celebrated when there is the birth of pure ideas in one.

You celebrate the birthday of Bhagavaan. But do you follow the teachings? You will experience the fruits of celebrating the birthday only when you follow the teachings. Jesus said: Love everyone." Christmas is celebrated, but how far does one practise love? None at all.

There is love in everyone's heart. Share it at least with ten persons every day. This is seldom done. People are more keen on receiving than on giving. They are willing to give away only things which they do not relish. There is no sacrifice in this. This was the message given by Vyaasa in his eighteen puraanas. "It is meritorious to help others. It is sinful to inflict harm on them."

You should not be concerned with how many have come for Svaami's birthday but how many are following Svaami's teachings. If every devotee is able to influence two persons, soon the whole world will be reformed. Pray for the welfare of all countries. Embodiments of love! There is only one thing you have to offer to Me today. Pray that people in all countries, may the entire humanity, should be happy and at peace. "Lokaas samasthaassukhino bhavanthu" (Let all the worlds be happy). Then alone there will be real unity. Do not wish merely for the peace and prosperity of India alone. Pray for the welfare of all countries. All are our brothers, whether they are in Pakistan or America or elsewhere.

Whether you believe it or not, realise that I am able to attract people from so many countries because of my all-embracing love. If every person observes three things, he will be one with Svaami. You will experience the Divine in you. As the following three are in Me, I can declare firmly about them. They are three P's: Purity, Patience and Perseverance. These three are in Me and around Me. Anyone with these three qualities will be unafraid wherever he may be. The most important quality is purity. Today everything is polluted. Water, air and all the five elements are polluted. As a result the mind of man is also polluted.

How is purity to be achieved?

Fill your minds with thoughts of God, dedicate all your actions to God and consider God as the inner motivator. Contemplation of God is not a matter for derision.

You need have no fear on that account. You must have full faith in God, who is the universal sustainer. He is the protector, but not the punisher. The punishment you get is the consequence of your own actions.

Therefore, chanting the name of God, doing bhajans and performing good deeds, engage yourselves in service of your fellow-beings. Nourish love in your hearts. Love will drive away all bad-thoughts. It will promote the spirit of forgiveness.

Birthday discourse in the Puurnachandhra Auditorium on 23-11-93.

When the sun rises, all the buds of lotus in the lake do not open out in full bloom. Only those which are full grown can blossom; so the rest have to bide their time and grow.

BABA

37. Let love prevail

Whom the Mohammedans adore as Allah,

The Christians as Jehovah,

The Vaishnavites as the Lotus-eyed Lord,

The Shaivites as Sambhu,

That God, who confers on all

Long life, health and prosperity,

Is one only--have this conviction.

The Lord is all love;

Love is His Divine form;

That-Love is the redeeming Manthra

For all beings in this world.

Without experiencing a fragment

Of that Love how can you experience

The Divine, Oh man?

EMBODIMENTS of Divine love! If one object has to combine with another, or one individual has to associate with another, love is the basis for the affinity. The entire world is filled with love.

The world is Love and Love is the world.

In every human being love is present as an effulgence which shines in his feelings. Love is life and life is love. Even as the power to burn is natural for fire, and the power to cool is natural for water, love is a natural trait for man. Without it he ceases to be human.

Love and life are inter-related

Love is an inborn quality in man. It is his lifebreath. We nourish a sapling with great love. When the sapling grows and later becomes a dry plant, we cast it away without any concern. How much love did we lavish on the sapling? We cherished it as long as it had life. After it became dry and lifeless, we had no love for it. From infancy we bear love for the mother who has borne us and reared us. But when she passes away, the dead body is burnt without any attachment.

What is it that was loved earlier? The living being was loved. Hence life and love are mutually inter-related.

Men today tend to forget the love-life relationship. Love today is mingled with self-interest. In the tree of every man's life there is the fruit of love. To enjoy this fruit, the rind that covers it has to be removed at the outset. The seeds in the fruit have also to be removed. The sweet juice in the fruit can be enjoyed only after the rind and the seeds have been removed. In the fruit of the tree of life, the rind is Ahamkaara (egoism). The seeds in that fruit are the selfish interests of man. Only when the ego and selfishness are eliminated, the sweet juice of love can be experienced.

The Upanishaths described this love as "the sweet juice that is amritham (nectarine) and the Supreme Brahman." This means that the juice (of love) is nectar itself, is verily the Brahman (Divine). It is life itself. It is the Divine Effulgence--Thejas.

This juice of love is equal to Brahman. It confers immortality on man and fills him with Divine bliss. Men today are unable to grasp the meaning of this Love Principle. It is essentially Divine in its nature. Hence, "Love is God; live in Love."

Most people, however, in their fascination for sensuous pleasures and worldly objects, are deeming the attachments to these as love. Immersed in selfish pursuits and interests, men seek everything for only selfish reasons and have no regard for the transcendental. Everything is desired for self-enjoyment and not out of love for the sake of love. We should love for the sake of the Divine, to realise the eternal. Love should be for experiencing the effulgence of Jnaana.

The martyrdom of Jesus

Love is thus, an amalgam of sweetness, effulgence and wisdom. Compassion is the reflection of love. Jesus is the embodiment of compassion. He looked with compassion at the poor and the miserable and gave them succour. In those days, people used to treat birds and animals without pity in the temple in Jerusalem. Jesus sought to put an end to these cruel practices.

From those times to the present, those who care for the well-being of all living beings and humanity were subjected to many trials and tribulations. Good people are always pursued by difficulties and troubles. The messiahs, the prophets, saints and God-men have always suffered from troubles and ordeals of various kinds. You should not bother about them. Have faith in God. When you live up to the truths you believe in, you will be indifferent to what others think.

Jesus was unaffected by the persecution to which he was subjected on a charge of treason.

Moreover, whatever attempts may be made to suppress good people, their goodness cannot be extinguished.

A fine diamond even if it is in a heap of garbage will not lose its brilliance or its value.

A pumpkin, even if it is grown beside a hedge, will not lose its sweetness.

A peahen's egg, even if it is hatched in a crow's nest, will not lose its colours.

Love is an expression of the Divine effulgence

Likewise, the glory and greatness of good men will suffer no diminution in whatever circumstances, or situation they may be placed. Such Divine effulgence is shining in every human being. Love is an expression of this effulgence. To manifest this love, men must be prepared to bear every kind of suffering.

Can the sweet juice of the sugar be had for Making sugar without the cane being crushed?

The human body is like the sugarcane filled with the juice of love. It is only when the body is subjected to hardship that the divine, sweet juice of love can flow from it. Without trouble to the body, pains to the mind, and control of the feelings, how can you expect to experience the Divine? Men today aspire for liberation without suffering from their part. God's love is not to be secured so easily. The precious gem of love can be got only in the bazaar of Thyaaga (sacrifice).

It is valued only in the Kingdom of Love. How can it be got in the market of cheap wares?

Devotee should first give up selfishness

Man's devotion these days is suffused with selfishness. Everything he does stems from selfinterest.

The first requisite is the giving up of selfishness. There must be a curb on egoistic conceit and possessiveness. The mind must be submerged in pure love.

You may have heard about the life of St. Paul. In the beginning he was bitterly opposed to Jesus.

He was ceaselessly criticizing Jesus. One day Jesus appeared in his dream and said: "Saul, are you not a human being? Is it proper for you to revile one who has done you no harm, has entertained no evil thoughts about you and has not led you to wrong ways? What harm have I done to you? Why are you abusing me? This is sheer folly. You are thereby demeaning yourself.

Beware, beware!" After uttering this warning, Jesus vanished. On waking up in the morning Saul (as Paul was known before his transformation) lamented that he had been false to this human nature by deriding and condemning fellow beings. He felt that Jesus was doing many good deeds. He was one who could not bear the sight of others sufferings. He was showering love on everyone. Saul felt that it was a sin to revile such a person. From that date Saul became a devotee of Jesus and came to be known as St. Paul.

In this manner, in the lives of many Avathaars one finds that despite all the love and blessings they receive and the benefits they derive from the Avathaars, some devotees turn against the Divine when their selfish desires are not fulfilled.

Three types of traducers of God

There are three types of traducers of God. In the first category are those who have no belief in God and always indulge in abuse of God. Without faith, how can there be any devotion? And without devotion, how can there be love? Without love, how can he be termed human? The words of such a person are worthless.

The second category of persons are those who adore God when their desires are fulfilled and deride God when their wishes are not satisfied. They imagine that they have a right to receive favours from God. Such petty-minded persons revile God. Their desires are sky-high. But their deserts are minimal. Their spiritual efforts are insignificant. Nevertheless, they criticise God when their insatiable desires are not satisfied.

The third category of persons are those who turn against God out of jealousy. They cannot bear the prosperity or position of others towards whom they think, God is partial. There is a remedy for almost every malady, but none at all for the disease of Jealousy. The envious indulge in calumny against God.

It is because of the ubiquitous presence of these three categories of anti-God men that spirituality and the divine feeling of love have become rare commodities today.

There is a Vedhic saying: "The knower of Brahman becomes Brahman himself." You are aware of the Godly man, Moses, described in the Bible. He was one who was ceaselessly praying to the Lord. He was a fervent lover of God. His intense devotion and love ultimately transformed his face and filled it with a divine radiance.

Likewise, the Gopikas, through their intense devotion to Krishna, became the living images of Krishna. Rathnaakara, who was a highwayman in his early years, acquired the radiance of Raama by continually chanting the name of Raama.

Develop the sense of oneness with God

Whatever the God you worship, adore Him with Thadhaathmabhaava (a sense of oneness).

Bodies may be two, but the heart is one. This is the feeling with which God should be worshipped. Only then you reach the state when you can declare:

"You and I are one."

How this state is to be realised is illustrated by a biblical episode.

Once St. John, while walking along, saw an angel reading a book. He asked who she was and what she was reading. She replied that she was an angel and that she was reading a book dealing with the doctrine of love.

He asked for the book and the angel gave it to him, but said: "You must eat this book. When you are consuming the book, its taste will be bitter. But after you have eaten and digested it, it will become very sweet." "Eating the book means absorbing the contents of the book, practising them and experiencing the bliss derived therefrom.

While reading and digesting "the book" the experience was bitter as declared by the angel. But, in due course, there was great transformation in St. John. His speech acquired a unique sweetness. His looks were sweet. Everything about him became sweet. What does this mean? It signifies the truth that you should completely identify yourself with the Divine love, which you seek from God. This love is not a purchasable commodity.

Today, devotion is treated as an exercise in shareholding, a kind of business partnership. But this is not right. The devotees should feel: "Everything is Thine." It is only when there is such a feeling of total surrender that the nature of Divine love can be comprehended.

Activities of "Messengers of Sathya Sai"

There is nothing more easy in the world than the spiritual path. It has to be followed in the form of Seva (loving service). To demonstrate to the world the beauty, the sweetness and the glory of selfless and loving service, the association called Messengers of Sathya Sai was formed (from among the old students of the Sathya Sai College for Women at Ananthapur). These girls, regardless of the families into which they got married and the countries where they had to live, pledged themselves to carry on their service activities. What this vow means should be properly understood. Men have greater freedom to act as they please. Married women have less freedom.

They come under the sway of their husbands and in-laws. Despite these constraints, these former students have not only carried on their service activities but also interested their husbands in them.

The service activities of the "Messengers of Sathya Sai" are beyond praise. There are boy students amongst us. Of what use are they? They enjoy freedom, but are making no good use of it. They take no part in service activities. They are self-centred. But the girl students are not like that. They are not concerned about publicising themselves. To mention some of their service activities: In many small hamlets, these girls are building the roofs for the villagers houses, working like men. They go to the foreign countries where their husbands are employed.

The annual report of the Messengers of Sathya Sai mentions that their members are rendering service in different countries like Kuwait, Australia, and New Zealand. Their varied service activities are highly commendable. I am confident that very soon their activities will cover the entire world and promote the welfare of every country. Whatever work they take up, they carry it out with firm resolve.

For instance, there are numerous primary schools in which men and women teachers work. But men teachers do not work with the same zeal and earnestness as women teachers. For one thing, women are by nature accustomed to rearing and teaching the young. The record of performance of the students is much better in schools taught by women teachers than in schools with male teachers.

Follow the women's example

For the past sixteen years, these ex-students of the Women's College have been rendering great service. For the past one week the old students present in Prashaanthi Nilayam have been eager to train themselves for security duties in the Nilayam. Male students have shown no such eagerness. It is unbecoming of men students to be indifferent to service activities. It is a pity that they have not been impelled to action although they have been listening to the reports of the services of the girls year after year.

There was an officer by name Raammohan Rao. He used to sport an impressive moustache. One day when he was going to his office, he passed by a man who was lying on the road, injured in an accident. He went on without rendering any help to the injured man, while some women rushed to his aid. In the office he reflected over his conduct and felt ashamed that he had failed to go to the help of an injured man while some women had gone to help him. Feeling that he had behaved in an unmanly way, he removed his moustache. When he went to the officers club the next day, the members noticed the change in his face and asked him what accounted for it. He confessed that he had failed to act as a true human being and had forfeited the right to call himself a man. From that day, he dedicated his life to social service. Service should be your watchword

All those who are in high positions will acquit themselves as true human beings only when they render selfless service to their fellow-men. Plunge yourselves in society and take part in service activities. When women are doing such splendid services, why should men lag behind? If men and women together render service, Bhaarath will be a gloriously prosperous nation. Not in Bhaarath alone, but in every country men and women should render service to those in need.

Many overseas devotees here are found eating and strolling about without doing any useful work. They should shed their laziness and take part in some worthwhile activity.

Service should be your watchword. The spirit of sacrifice is essential. To speak about devotion without a spirit of sacrifice is meaningless.

Many of the women carry on their service activities inspite of the troubles which they face from their husbands. This shows their spirit of sacrifice. The Messengers of Sathya Sai are doing signal service. They need not confine themselves to their own members. They should try to draw other women into service activities and strive to improve the living conditions of the poor people in rural areas.

Follow the message of Sai

If the name of Jesus is glorified all over the world today, it is because of His boundless love. He served the lowly and the lost, and in the end, offered his life itself as a sacrifice. How many of those, who call themselves devotees of Jesus, are following His teachings? Those who claim to worship Raama, how far are they following His example? How many professed devotees of Krishna are living up to His teachings? There are many who claim to be Sai devotees. How many of them are following the message of Sai? If everyone seeks the answer within himself, he will see that it is a zero. Anyone who claims to be a Sai devotee should dedicate his life to Sai ideals.

That is true devotion and real penance. That is the hall-mark of humanness. It will be reflected in love, which will find expression in compassion that generates real Aanandha.

The greatest quality in every man is love. When love is absent, evil qualities like hatred and jealousy rear their heads. Make love the breath of your life.

Christmas Day Discourse in the Puurnachandhra Auditorium on 25-12-1993.

1. Cultivate forgiveness and love

Charity is the ornament for the hand,
Truth is the adornment for the tongue,
The scriptures are the ornaments for the ears,
Of what avail are other ornaments?

EMBODIMENTS of love! Brahman is full of love and, in fact, is the embodiment of love. Your love should merge with this love. It is the only one and there is no second. It is the non-dual state. The essential nature of love is sacrifice. Under any circumstance it does not give room for hatred. It is love that brings even a person far away closer and more intimate to you. It is love that drives away the feeling of separateness and promotes the feeling of oneness. Love also.

raises a person from the animal to the human. Prema (Love) is the Praana (Life Force) of man red the Praana itself is Prema. One without love is like a lifeless corpse. Love is shown only to persons who are alive. No one will love a corpse. Love and life are therefore inter-related and intimately connected.

Three angles of love constitute prapatthi

In this worldly life love is manifesting in several forms such as the love between mother and son, husband and wife, and between relatives. This love based on physical relationships arises out of selfish motives and self-interest. But the love of the Divine is devoid of any trace of self-interest.

It is love for the sake of love alone. This is called Bhakthi (devotion). One characteristic of this love is to give and not to receive. Secondly, love knows no fear. Thirdly, it is only for love's sake and not for selfish motive. All these three angles of love jointly cannot Prapatthi (Surrender).

When one revels in this attitude of Prapatthi, one experiences the bliss of the Divine. For this, the prime requisite is Kshama (forgiveness).

Only a person who has this attitude of Kshama can be considered to be endowed with sacred love. This cannot be learned from textbooks. Not can it be acquired from preceptors not from any one else. It is to be cultivated by oneself in rimes of difficulties, trials and tribulations that one is forced to meet. Only when we face problems and difficulties that cause grief and misery this quality of forbearance and forgiveness has the scope for taking root. When you are confronted with problems and difficulties you should not get upset, and become victims of depression which is a sign of weakness. In such a situation, you should bring tolerance and an attitude of forgiveness into play and should not get agitated giving rise to anger, hatred and revengeful attitude. You are embodiments of strength and not weakness.

Therefore, in times of despair, you should be filled with the feeling of forbearance and be ready to forgive and forger. This quality of Kshama (forgiveness) is the greatest power for a human being. If one loses this quality, he becomes demonic.

Kshama is Sathyam, Truth

Kshama is Dharma, Virtue

Kshama is Ahimsa, Non-Violence

Kshama is Yajna, Sacrifice

Kshama is Santhosha, Happiness

Kshama is Dhaya, Compassion

Kshama is everything in the world.

Human beings should shine with human quality

The moment one is giving up this great quality, the evil qualities of anger, hatred and jealousy creep in, making him lose his human nature itself, driving him to indulge in wicked deeds of demonic nature and even to descend to animal nature. Human beings should shine with human quality Today we find jealousy and hatred dancing like devils all over the world. People with jealousy and hatred are pursuing the wicked path and bringing ruin on themselves. The best example for this is the Kauravas in Mahaabhaararatha. The brothers Dhuryodhana and Dhushshaasana were the embodiments of the twin evils of hatred and jealousy. Krishna told

Dharmaja, the eldest of the Paandavas, that the Kauravas who were surcharged with these evil qualities could never improve and imbibe human qualities. Karna who was embodiment of ego joined their company with Shakuni as the evil adviser adding fuel to the fire. Though

Dhuryodhana and Dhushshaasana were born in a notable royal broils they discarded the human qualities due to jealousy and hatred and brought ruin to the family and the clan. Krishna added that jealousy is a dangerous canker that eats at the root of the tree of life, while hatred is pest that attacks the trunk of the tree. Thus the tree of life is completely destroyed by both these pests. The Kauravas were victims of these two pests and sought their own ruin. Without harmony in sense organs life will limp

One may raise the question as to how to get over these dangerous pests of jealousy and hatred.

This is possible when you make all the sense organs function in unison. If you look at the functions of the sense organs you may notice that even if one organ stops functioning in harmony; life will be limping. When mind conceives a thought, all the organs are co-ordinating to get the thought executed. If senses do not follow thoughts, life will become miserable. When there is forbearance, all organs co-ordinate harmoniously and work in unison.

Once the organs of the body like eyes, ears, limbs became jealous of the tongue, saying that they make all efforts for securing food, but the tongue enjoys this. They struck work and never sent any food. Tongue is the one that tastes the food and passes only palatable items of food inside which is converted by the internal organs into energy giving blood. The tongue does not retain it.

But for this vital part played by the tongue, the other organs would not be able to function at all.

When the other organs became jealous of the tongue and stopped sending food with a view to harm it, they spelt their own ruin by such action, as they could not function when there was no food and consequently no supply of energy for these organs to function. Similarly jealousy on the part of a person ultimately results in his own ruin. Jealousy spells self-destruction

Students must have studied the drama of Shakespeare in which a character was always filled with jealousy and finally met with his own end as his own jealousy made him very weak and forlorn. Bhasmaasura got a boon from Lord Shiva after doing severe penance that the person on whose head he keeps his hand will be reduced to ashes. Finally, he himself brought his end by keeping his hand on his own head. Buddha was once confronted by a woman who was full of jealousy against Buddha because of his great popularity. When Buddha came towards her, she expressed her wish to attack him with a knife and kill him, but Buddha smilingly told her "I love you too demoness." This surprised the demoness who thought nobody would love her and changed her heart instantly; she became a dove and surrendered at His Feet. Anger begets anger and jealousy begets jealousy. The only way to conquer this is the sense of unity and love. Happiness and sorrow have to be experienced in the worldly life as they are inevitable like the sunset and sunrise. You think new year will give better experiences. It is not correct. It is the mind that is responsible for pleasure and pain. If your mind is good, you will find anything good. You are embodiments of the Divine which is nothing but bliss. While being so, is it not a folly on your part to say that you are suffering from pain and grieve over this? When Bhakthas pray to Bhagavaan sincerely making all their actions as offering to God, they will certainly receive appropriate grace from the Divine. There are nine types of devotion. Shravanam (listening to the glory of the Lord), Keerthanam (singing), Vishnusmaranam (remembering), Paadhasevanam (adoration), Vandhanam (saluting), Archanam (worshipping), Dhaasyam (obedient service), Sneham (friendship) and Aathmanivedhanam (Self-surrender). In whichever way you offer worship, God responds in the same way. Man conveniently forgets what he gets. Without God's Grace, living itself will be impossible for mankind. Even the troubles you may experience are the gifts of the Divine. When you surrender all your actions, you will surely receive His Grace. This is the purport of the Geetha Shloka "Sarvadharmaan Parithyagya Mamekam Sharanam Vraja." Take whatever is given by God as good for you. Some people want to have uninterrupted happiness. When you eat at 10 a.m., you do not go on caring every hour thereafter without break. You have to give a break for the food to be digested. So also when you experience pleasure, it has to be digested before you meet with another bout of such experience, just as you have to do some exercise for helping the food to digest, you have to go through the exercise of confrontation of pain after experiencing pleasure. Therefore, you must take whatever is given by God as good for you. The mother gets the pleasure of seeing her baby after going through severe pain. If you sit in an airconditioned room throughout the 24 hours of a day, you cannot feel the pleasure of it. Only when you come in after being away in the hot sun, you will enjoy the coolness of the airconditioned room. After the Mahaabhaaratha war was over, Krishna asked Kunthi the mother of Paandavas what she wanted. She requested that she should be blessed with troubles always as only then she would be constantly remembering God as they did when they were in the forest for 12 years. She said she was not thinking of God when she was enjoying the palace life as a queen earlier. Joy and sorrow go together. You enjoy the sweetness of chanting the Lord's name only when you are in distress. The life is a mixture of sorrow and joy just as day and night. If there is night, one cannot take the well-deserved rest after the day's hard toil. There is sweet juice inside the orange fruit. But it is covered by the bitter outer rind. It is the bitter rind that protects the juice inside. So we should put up with the bitter difficulties in order to enjoy real pleasure. Man is an embodiment of the quality of Kshama. There is nothing in this world that you cannot achieve with this quality. We are now bidding farewell to the year 1993 and welcoming 1994. There is an intimate relationship between the two. We give send-off to one while we welcome the other one. In the same way, we should bid farewell to bad qualities and welcome good divine qualities. You may offer all your bad qualities to God. There is nothing wrong in this. It is only God who can take them and bestow His grace on you to foster good qualities. For example, suppose you have a soiled, torn and mutilated hundred rupee currency note, no one will accept it. But, if the number is intact, the Reserve Bank will accept it and give a good note of same value in return. Similarly, God only will accept the bad qualities provided they are offered with sincere devotion and repentance and shower His Grace on you. Basing on this principle, the worshippers chant the manthra "Papoham, Prapakarmaham Papaathmaaham" etc., surrendering the sins committed by one to the Lord and praying for His pardon and Grace. Even the Christians follow this principle of surrendering to God saying, "I confess my sin and pray for redemption." Thus people offer all the bad qualities to God and receive good from Him.

True significance of Upavaasa and Upaasana

We have Upavaasa (living in proximity) and Upaasana (sitting near God), in our customs.

People generally believe that Upavaasa means only curtailing usual food and taking some tiffin like Chapaathi, Idlis etc. This is not correct. When you live near God, you will never feel hungry just as you get away from heat and enjoy the coolness when you sit near an airconditioner. When you sit near God, your bad qualities are kept off and good thoughts and divine qualities will come to you. This is the significance of Upaasana. People interpret it with distorted meanings.

The year 1993 was really an eventful one with lot of dreadful happenings all over the world and naturally the people are afraid what would happen in 1994, and whether it would be a better year.

It is not the particular year that is of consequence. Cultivate good thoughts, speak good words and do good deeds with the broad view that everyone in the world should be happy. Give up your evil thoughts, and evil qualities as they are the cause for all sufferings in the world.

The new year has set in at the right moment, for today it is Savithi (fourth day of the lunar fortnight). It may cause people some suffering akin to the suffering of child under the stepmother.

But in the wider perspective, moonshine is on the increase indicating the blossoming of the mind in a better way since moon is ruling the mind. Based on the thithi (auspicious day), we may expect this year to be better than the past year. There may be fire accidents in larger number, and certain conflicts may be there in the world. But we can hope that gradually human quality will be coming up and it will be a matter for delight, when there is transformation of mind to think that all are children of God. Such an attitude has to be developed to believe in the brotherhood of man and fatherhood of God. The bodies may be different but the soul is one. It cannot be fragmented.

Keep God as your guide and saviour

One moon is reflected in hundreds of thousands of pots. "Ekoham Bahusyaam" and "Ekam Eva adhvitheeyam" (There is only one Brahman which is reflected in the millions and billions of beings). There is no second. You place one before zero, the zero gets value. World is zero, Sun is Zero, Moon is Zero. Actually they are all round-shaped like zero only. All these get value because of the one God behind them. God is the only Hero and all else are Zeroes.

Keeping God as your guide and saviour, whatever work you may do will yield sure success. God is your only true friend. All other friends may be with you as long as you have wealth, but the moment you lose everything, the friends will desert you. God is only friend who will be ever with you. He is always with you, in you and beside you. Therefore, the only way for prosperity is to develop friendship with the Lord. Being a human, you should make others happy. This is love.

Your heart is full of love. You should share it with others. When you have some edible dish, you have to eat it and serve to others. Otherwise, it will get spoiled. You must share your love with at least five persons per day. You should practise, experience and share with others this Divine

Love.

On this New Year day, you should make resolve that you will start every day with love, spend the day with love, fill the day with love, and end the day with love.

There should be no difference of caste, creed, colour, religion or nationality. Love knows no distinction of any kind.

You must wish everyone to be happy. Fill the heart with love. The country will prosper and the world will prosper and everyone will be happy.

Discourse in Puurnachandhra Auditorium on 1-1-94.

All religions teach one basic discipline; the removal from the mind of the blemish of egoism, of running after little joys. Every religion teaches man to fill his being with the glory of God and evict the pettiness of conceit.

BABA

2. Spiritual significance of festivals

Like the oil latent in the thil seed,

Like ghee latent in milk,

Like the fragrance latent in a flower,

Like the juice latent in a fruit,

Like the fire latent in a faggot,

The Divine is immanent in every human being.

Just as the power of sight is present in the eye,

The power of hearing in the ear,

The sense of taste in the tongue,

Divinity is present in a subtle form as Chaithanya.

Remaining invisible in the visible phenomenal world,

The consciousness that shines in the cosmos

Is the form of the Aathma which sustains everything,

Like the thread in a garland of gems.

EMBODIMENTS of Divine Love! Man engages himself in many exercises in his life. No single achievement satisfies man or society. Man constantly strives to accomplish more things. Today men seem to revel in dissatisfaction. Youth today do not appear to be seriously concerned about how to face a rapidly changing world. The preparedness to sacrifice everything for achieving a noble objective is hardly present among the young. Success in life consists in recognizing the truth of one's being. But youth today do not make any effort to find the Truth that is the Eternal Reality. They are prepared to go through any amount of trouble to acquire knowledge that is related to the physical and the transient. They do not make the slightest effort to comprehend the Divine that is all-pervading, that will confer enduring bliss and make one's life meaningful and worthwhile. Festivals in Bhaarith have been designed to promote awareness of this truth. Their inner significance as well as their scientific basis have to be understood. Four important transits of the Sun in a year Every month the Sun moves into a new house in the Zodiac This movement is called Sankramana. In a year the Sun transits twelve houses of the Zodiac. Of these movements four are important. Makara Sankramana is the first one. It relates to the entry of the Sun into Makara (Capricorn) from Dhanus (Sagittarius). The second one is Thula Sankramana the entry of the Sun into the zodiacal sign Thula (Libra). The third is Mesha Sankramana--moving into the sign Mesha (Aries). The fourth one is Shashi Sankramana--entry into the Moon sign (Cancer). Of the four, the most important and sacred is Makara Sankramana. This marks the apparent movement of the Sun from the south to the north. The northward movement of the Sun is considered highly significant, both spiritually and scientifically. It has immense spiritual meaning. The inner meaning of the Sun's northward journey has to be properly understood. The north is represented by Himaachala. Hima means snow. It is pure, untainted and extremely cool. All these endow it with the quality of Prashanthi (perfect peace). Achala means that which is steady and unshakeable. Himaachala does not refer to the physical Himaalayan region. It represents that which is cool, peaceful and steady. From today the Sun is said to move towards such a state. The Sun symbolises the vision of man. The northward movement of the Sun is a call to human beings to turn their vision towards that which is cool, peaceful and unchanging. This means that men should direct their vision inwards. This is the lesson taught by the Sun. Uttharaayana is an occasion to develop inward vision Man's vision should not be confined solely to the external objects and worldly things which are transient and perishable. Man has been given this vision so that he may see the pure, sacred Divine consciousness abiding in his heart. The northward motion of the Sun--Uttharaayana--is the appropriate occasion for developing this inward vision. This is the royal road for the spiritual aspirant to realise the Supreme. It is not enough, therefore, merely to recognise the northward movement of the Sun in this period. Every effort should be made to direct the vision inwards towards the pure, sacred Indwelling Self. This is the period for cherishing sacred thoughts and performing holy deeds. The sages and seers of ancient times used to wait for the arrival of the Uttharaayana to embark on their sacred tasks. The great warrior, Bhishma, lay on a bed of arrows for 56 days on the battlefield, awaiting the arrival of Uttharaayana as the right time for giving up the ghost. The scriptures have declared that those who pass on during the Uttharaayana have no rebirth. This does not mean that one should hang himself in Uttharaayana in the hope of securing freedom from rebirth! The right way to give up one's life is to fill one's mind with holy thoughts and let the end come in the natural course. Sage Vaalmeeki wished to distribute the composition of hundred crore verses on the Ramaayana to the denizens of the three worlds in equal measure. After this was done, only two letters remained, which were offered to people in all the worlds for recitation. The two letters spell the names of Raama, Krishna, Hari, Eesha and Saayee. Man should abide by the laws of the Creator This illustrates how Bhaarithheeyas attempted to sanctify every holy festival by dedicating themselves to the chanting of God's name and to other spiritual activities. Youths today should realise that festivals in Bhaarith are not intended for feasting and pompous celebration but for concentration on devotional activities. For mankind, the Sun is the most important entity in creation. When the Sun himself is proceeding northwards, why should not humanity direct its vision Godward? Men today are a prey to many troubles because their vision is diverted towards ungodly objects. Man should abide by the laws of the Creator. Otherwise humanity is doomed.

Religious festivals are observed all over the world for the purpose of raising humanity to a 'higher level of consciousness and conduct.

Pushyamaasa brings with it a season of joy From this day, the Sun wears a peaceful and pleasing aspect. The nights get longer and the days become shorter. The day marks the beginning of the harvest season.
As the crops are brought home, the granaries are full and joy reigns everywhere. A cool breeze blows all the time.

Farmers sing with full-throated joy from their fields in the moonlight.
The cold dew drops on the fields shine like garlands of gems. The chrysanthemums are in full bloom.

This month, known as Pushyamaasa (according to the Hindhu almanac) is noted for the peacefulness, prosperity and joy which it brings with it. Hence it is regarded with special distinction. Unless men give up their bad thoughts and actions, the month, however great in itself, will be of no avail. The observance of Uttharaayana should be marked by spiritual transformation of the people and not by lavish feasting and revelry.
In connection with Sankraanthi, many auspicious functions are arranged. Newly wedded bridegrooms are invited to the brides houses. Sacred bulls are taken from house to house by traditional performers who relate the Raamaayana story with the bulls playing their own role in it. In this way, with songs, plays and discourses, they celebrate the festival. The songs and plays had a sacred role in the celebrations.

Unfortunately today music and sports have been commercialized.
There is a price for every game, whether it is cricket or football or any other game. The sacred character of the games and dramas of the past has been tainted by the money nexus.
It is clear that originally sports were promoted in the interests of health and strength. People took part in games for the improvement of their physique and to provide entertainment to the public.
There was a time when a musician, if invited to sing songs at a wedding in his locality, would readily oblige. But today the musician will ask, "How much will you give me for my performance?" Singers have become sinners. Their music does not confer joy on the listeners because they sing, not out of the fullness of their heart, but for the sake of money and name.

This was not the case in olden days. The performers with the sacred Gangi bulls used to gather in the centre of the village and provide entertainment as the members of one large family. Little children used to join in the fun, singing songs to gather all the children to watch the performance of the bulls.

Sports should form an integral part of studies
This month witnessed the annual sports meet of our students. I don't like to comment about students elsewhere, but I do wish to say something about the accomplishments of our students.

Indeed, the students participated in the sports and games with great enthusiasm. Sports form an integral part of the scheme of studies in our institutions, along with various academic subjects like Physics and Chemistry. That being the case, why does not everyone take part in them? Not only should there be participation, but there should also be an awareness of the philosophy and principles governing the sports and games. The aim in sports should not be victory by any means, fair or foul. Whoever may win, others should greet it with fraternal feelings. The rules of the game should be strictly observed. Prizes do not matter. What is important is the sense of selfsatisfaction derived from playing the game well.

Students enthusiasm in preparing for activities Looking forward to the sports meet, the students have been enthusiastically practising for nearly a month. In other universities, sports activities are supported by grants from the U.G.C. or other agencies. In the Sathya Sai Institute, no request is made to any outside agency for funds to pay the teachers salaries or to meet medical or other expenses. Education is provided free of fees, from kindergarten to Post-graduate studies. No fees are collected for sports, library, or other amenities. Not did the Central Trust or the College offer any funds for the sports programme. We do not desire to proclaim to the world the spirit of sacrifice and dedication of our students. We only express our own satisfaction with the performance of our students.

In the preparations for the sports and cultural meet, all the expenses have been met by teachers and students out of their voluntary contributions. No one knows, not even the Registrar or the Vice-Chancellor, how this is done. It is rare to find students of such an exemplary nature, who cooperate with each other in a spirit of brotherhood. In all the three campuses--Brindhaavan, Ananthapur and Prashaanthi Nilayam--the dresses and other materials required for their programmes were got from their own resources.

 Kudos to primary school children
 Special mention should be made about what the Primary School did.
 If we make an earnest and truthful enquiry into what is happening all over the world, we will find that where women are in charge of schools, everything is done well. The children are well taught. The teachers concentrate on their duties, without diversions of any kind. Consequently, whatever they do is pleasing to the eyes, the ears and the heart. Look at the way the teachers look after little children in the primary school. You all know what trouble it is to look after a single child in the home.
 You can well imagine what an ordeal it is to look after eleven hundred young children. There are a large number of children between the ages of four and five. What discipline they displayed in their performances in sports! Their eating, dressing and other activities are regulated from a tender age. The world outside does not know what is being done here. Even many in Prashaanthi Nilayam do not know the facts.
 The teachers, the Warden and the Principal are engaged in teaching work all during the day They work all through the night, preparing the dresses for the sports events. All the dresses worn by the children were stitched at night by the teachers. My heart melts when I look at these teachers.
 Their eyes are swollen owing to sleepless work. When you see the children perform in their multicoloured dresses, the scene looks like a glorious garden blooming with flowers of all kinds.
 When the children come out in formation for their mass drill, you cannot see who is directing them. Every movement of theirs is regulated by themselves in perfect co-ordination and harmony Imagine what it costs to make these dresses. They are made from expensive material and each dress differs from another. All these are made by the teachers themselves. The children feel that Svaami has given them free education and they must show their gratitude to Svaami at least once a year by such activities, whatever sacrifice they may call for.
 Decline of discipline as students go to high schools
 This disciplined training which the children receive in the primary school sustains them till they go to the Higher Secondary School. There, the temperature (the degree of enthusiasm among them) goes down a little. What is the reason? The encouragement and inspiration they receive get reduced. But, even in the Secondary School the teachers work day and night. Thereby, they maintain the standards built up in the primary school. But by the time the students reach the Institute (University) level, the "temperature falls below normal." The discipline deteriorates.

 The reason is the failure of the Institute authorities to take sustained interest in the students. The teachers are mainly concerned with carrying out their teaching duties; and are not concerned about the welfare of the students as a whole. They do not try to preserve what had been built up earlier.
 Nevertheless, most students who have come from the primary school adhere to the discipline they have learnt and by and large, continue to observe it. It is association with students who have come from outside which erodes their discipline and spoils them.
 It is the duty of every Institute teacher to see that the discipline inculcated in the primary school is maintained in the Institute. Look at the manner in which pay-scales are being laid down by the University Grants Commission and the manner in which dearness allowance is being fixed. This is contributing to the rise in prices.
 Employees in general should consider whether they are doing work commensurate with the emoluments they are receiving. There is more emphasis on rights than on responsibilities. If people in general discharge their duties properly, the country would make remarkable progress.
 Students devotion to Svaami
 From this new year people should develop a broad outlook and consider the interests of others as much as of their own. In our Institute the situation is very good. Our teachers and students mingle with each other in friendly spirit and the teachers coach the lagging students outside their class hours. Whether you believe it or not, there is no University in India which maintains such discipline and educational standards as our Institute. We do not publicize our performance. For instance, in the last All-India Xth standard examinations, our students got high ranks at the national level.
 The student who came first in the country received an award from the Centre. Svaami asked him to go to Delhi to receive the award from the President. But the boy said: "I did not study for getting the President's or the Prime Minister's award. I studied to earn the approbation of Svaami.

Svaami's satisfaction is enough for me. That is the biggest award."

Such is the high-minded attitude of our students.

The children's hearts are pure, unsullied and sacred. If these qualities are praised, it is not for proclaiming them to the public, but to infuse enthusiasm in the students and encourage them to do better. When some students came to Svaami and exclaimed: "I have secured 'Q' grade," Svaami told them, "The 'Q' grade has been given for your studies, not to you. It is only when you put into practice what you have studied that the 'Q' grade or degree will belong to you." Many persons attach the degrees to their names. The degree will be really theirs, and not to the studies they made, when they act upto that knowledge represented by the degrees. One is a hero in learning and a zero in practice. What is required is the application of the knowledge acquired in daily life. Only then the degrees really become yours.

Knowledge and service should go together

What service are you able to render to the rural population by your knowledge? You are concerned more about your careers and the earnings which may be got from your degrees. This should not be the main concern of students to-day. You must consider how far your knowledge is of benefit to society. You must ensure the peace and security of society. That should be the principal aim of the students.

Students! You have done well in your studies as well as in sports.

What Svaami wants from you is that you should conduct yourselves when you go out into the outside world in the same spirit of discipline and devotion, which you display here. You must realise that it is only in our

Institute that the students have the opportunity to have continuous contact with the Chancellor

Himself from day to day. You must make good use of it and hold yourselves forth as models for the world.

Spiritual practice is as important as education

Students should realise that spiritual practice is as important as secular education. You should realise how much you owe to God for all the benefits you enjoy in life which are really gifts from God, including the air you breathe and the water you drink. Should you not be grateful to God for all this? Without gratitude, life is meaningless. Be loving even towards those who harm you.

Control your anger and other evil tendencies. I conclude My discourse with an advice to the Principals and Wardens of all the four campuses to co-ordinate their sports programmes in the coming years to avoid duplication of the same items. I call upon all teachers and the Vice-

Chancellor and the Registrar to involve themselves in sports activities and encourage the students in every way.

As regards the Sathya Sai Super-Speciality Hospital, there is no hospital like it anywhere in the world, giving totally free treatment. Not are there doctors rendering free and dedicated service as in our hospital. Svaami is spending crores on the hospital. The money is spent with scrupulous care. Not a naya paisa is wasted. Many devotees, seeing the good work that is being done, are sending voluntary donations according to their capacity All this money is being spent by the Sathya Sai Trust with unexcelled concern for economy and integrity.

Unscrupulous and envious traducers are levelling charges of misuse of the funds by the Trust.

This is a grievous sin. Svaami examines every bill, minutely before making payment. The doctors for their part are looking after the patients in a spirit of dedication and team work. This spirit of unity should prevail in all our Sai institutions and organizations. The character of their work reflects on Svaami's name.

Discourse on 14-1-1994, in the Puurnachandhra Auditorium.

The human body, so filled with skills, so capable of great adventures, is a gift from God to each of you, It has to be used as a raft on which you can cross this never calm sea of change that lies between birth and death, bondage and liberation. Pursue nobler ends; have grander ideals; sensory pleasures are trinkets, trivialities.

3. Food, the heart and the mind

EMBODIMENTS of Divine Aathma! It is essential to observe thc principle of moderation in food habits, work and sleep. The Buddha, preached the same principle of moderation to his disciples.

"Be always moderate, never indulge in excess," proclaimed the Buddha. In fact, moderation is the royal road to happiness.

The modern man, who flouts the principle of moderation in every aspect of life, endangers his health and well-being. The food consumed by man should be proper, pure and wholesome. But nowadays people eat whatever they get and wherever they get it, and thereby spoil their health.

Food plays a major role in the preservation of health. Care should be taken to see that the food consumed does not have much fat content, for the fats consumed in large quantity are detrimental not only to one's physical health but also to one's mental health. Meat and alcoholic drinks take a heavy toll on man's health, causing many a disease in him. The efficacy of cardiac surgery

This international symposium has for its theme "The Heart and its Ailments." Also on the agenda are discussion about the preventive aspects of diseases as well as the treatment and cure of heart diseases. Questions are raised about the efficacy of Cardiac Surgery and its related effects.

The heart is a special organ in the human system. It is pulsating ceaselessly unlike the other organs. Heart surgery is a highly complex operation, as the surgery has to be performed without arresting the heartbeat. At the same time the functioning of the lungs has also to be kept up.

Medical men of genius invented the heart-lung machine in 1956 to carry on the activities of the heart as well as the lung during cardiac operations. The machine takes upon itself the function of the heart and the lung ensuring purification of the blood and keeping up circulation of the blood.

The details of the functioning of this heart-lung machine are well known to the doctors. The tube which is fitted connecting the heart and the machine should be airtight and should be fixed with great care, for any lapse in the fitting of the tube may cause air bubbles which will endanger the patient's life. Unfailing power supply is most crucial for the success of the operation as any interruption in power supply will stall the operation. Therefore we have to depend on generators for ensuring uninterrupted power supply during the course of the operation.

Questions are posed whether heart surgery ensures a permanent cure. Cardiac surgery is helpful in so far as it enables the patient to carry on his daily activities and lead a normal life. But, it is wrong to conclude that surgery is the only way of curing heart diseases. Some of the diseases can be cured even by medicine. In my opinion, it is the primary responsibility of every individual to prevent becoming a victim of heart disease by regulating his food and other habits. Prevention is better than cure. There will be little room for cardiac ailments if one's food habits are properly controlled and regulated.

Research has revealed that non-vegetarian and alcoholic addicts are more prone to heart ailments than vegetarians. If the vegetarian food that is consumed should be a balanced and wholesome, it should contain liberal doses of vitamin C and vitamin E, which are available in vegetables like carrots. The presence of these vitamins prevents heart ailments in a large measure. Every effort should be made to keep the human body healthy. Health is wealth. Wealth cannot be enjoyed by a person with poor health. Health is more important because it gives physical and mental strength to a person.

Birds and beasts do not suffer from cardiac and digestive ailments to which man is prone. The cause can be traced to the natural food which the animals consume, unlike human beings who consume all sorts of fried and cooked items of food being slaves to the palate. Modern man consumes many artificial foodstuffs and a variety of alcoholic drinks, which are injurious to health. Birds and beasts lead natural lives, while the artificial life styles of man today takes a heavy toll of his health. When man observes moderation in diet he can be saved from most diseases. In the entire range of God's creation man alone is endowed with the faculty of discrimination. It is this faculty which sets him apart from animals. Man should exercise his discretion and discrimination in regard to food habits.

How to bring about mental transformation?

The progress of the universe is bound up with the progress of man. Any amount of development in the areas of scientific, economic and social spheres will not be of much use without mental transformation. How can we bring about this transformation? It is by restraining passions and emotions. Since mental tension is most detrimental to man's health, man should learn the art of controlling his passions and emotions, which cause stresses and strains. It is also essential to keep our mind serene and peaceful while eating food. We should not indulge in discussion of topics which will cause agitation and excitement and disturb our mental peace while we are taking food. Mental tension is responsible for ill health. We should also avoid viewing TV, video, etc., while eating food, as they may cause mental disturbances.

Today there is pollution in everything such as the air we breathe, the water we drink, the sounds that are jarring to the ears and the food we consume. Because of this all round pollution, man's health is affected. Apart from this, man's mind is also polluted making him susceptible to diseases. Man should make an earnest endeavour to lead a serene and pure life. He should realise the truth that troubles and turmoils are temporary, like passing clouds. There is no scope for agitations to arise if one realises this truth. One who realises this truth will not allow his mind to be swayed by the passions of anger, cruelty, etc. Passions yield only temporary satisfaction, but cause serious emotional disturbances. Hence, it is imperative on the part of man not to yield to any unbecoming passions while taking food. The observance of the three P's, namely, purity, patience, and perseverance, vouchsafes permanent happiness and good health free from diseases.

The three root causes of cardiac ailments
It is not only unbridled passion which damages the health of man. Living on ill-gotten money also causes ill-health to some extent. Living on earnings got by unjust means causes many unknown diseases to take root in us. It is said;
As is the food, so is the mind;
As is the mind, so are the thoughts;
As are the thoughts, so is the conduct;
As is the conduct, so is the health.

Man today is a victim of worry. What is the cause of this worry? Lack of contentment is the cause. The rich man is not contented is spire of the accumulation of wealth. Worry causes hurry and both together bring about ill-health. So, Worry, Hurry and Curry (fatty foods) are the root causes of cardiac ailments.

The consumption of large quantities of fat is the cause of cardiovascular diseases. Doctors advise against the consumption of fatty food stuffs which cause increase in weight resulting in susceptibility to cardiac diseases. The presence of toxins also inflicts equal damage. So one should eat in moderate quantity the right type of food and avoid intoxicating drinks to safeguard his health. The intake of food should be gradually reduced after crossing 50 years.

Some people consume food indiscriminately unmindful of the caloric content of the food taken.

For example, people eat pappads (thin circular flour preparations) fried in oil which have high calorie content. People also consume ghee which is also a high calorie food. A single pappad has 100-150 calories of energy. A single spoon of ghee has 100 calories of energy. Even when the quantity of food intake is reduced, reductions in the calorie content is not ensured.

There are some doctors who advise their patients against smoking and addiction to alcohol, but they themselves smoke and drink! This gap between precept and practice raises doubts in the minds of patients about the value of the medical advice given by them. Such doctors, who do not observe harmony in speech and practice, mislead the patients. Triple qualities that a doctor should reflect Embodiments of Love! You have high degrees such as MD, FRCS, MRCP, etc, as a result of your sincere striving. But it is a mistake to think that these degrees are yours. In fact these degrees have been conferred on you for your study, skill, memory power and knowledge. These degrees will truly belong to you on the day you apply this knowledge in practice. Unfortunately, in this modern age all activities and professions are tainted by a commercial outlook and greed for earning money. Even the sacred profession of a doctor has degenerated into a business. A doctor should reflect the triple qualities of sacrifice, love and compassion in treating his patients.

But some doctors do not have these virtues at all! They misuse their divine and sacred knowledge for the sake of money. Money is important, but we must exercise discretion in this regard. You can charge the correct fees from the wealthy, but be kind and considerate while dealing with the poor. Try to give free treatment to the poor. You should not treat a millionaire and a pauper alike! It is said, "Vaidhyo Naarayano Harihi" (The doctor is equal to God). As the Lord has love and compassion, doctors too should have these divine virtues of the Lord. A doctor devoid of these virtues is not a doctor at all!

Doctors should win the hearts of the patients by talking to them with compassion and concern.

Diseases are half cured when the doctors talk to the patients with love and consideration. The sick and the diseased respond favourably to your treatment once you start talking to them with love and with a smiling face. But, if you wear a grim expression, the patient loses heart. Doctors should administer the injection of courage and encouragement as calcium administered to the weak. It is essential that doctors should have the sterling virtues of love and compassion.

Compassion is more important than money.

Svaami's example to lead a healthy life

How to lead a healthy life? Let Me tell you about My own health. I am sixty eight years old, and believe it or not, My weight since my 14th year of age has been constant at 108 pounds only. It never went up to 109 pounds not came down to 107. You can lead a healthy life once you achieve this kind of balance and moderation. I never eat even a little bit excess. I observe the principle of moderation whether I am invited for food by a millionaire or a pauper. Even though I am sixty eight years, My body is in perfect trim! I do not suffer from aches and My heart is as sound as a rock. There is none who can work like Me and exert himself as much as I do! The secret of My sound health is My regulated food habits. This is how one has to achieve the unity and harmony of food, head and God.

Spirit of sacrifice of some doctors

The foremost quality of a doctor is the spirit of sacrifice. We have organized this Symposium to explore ways and means of rendering help to the sick and the diseased. We have in India some doctors who lead lives of sacrifice like Dr. Venugopal, Dr. Bhan and Dr. Sampath from the All India Institute of Medical Sciences. These doctors, who are committed to the cause of service, come to our hospital without even charging the travelling expenses. Their sacrifice contributes to the sanctity, of this Institute of Higher Medical Sciences. There is an atmosphere of infective joy and good cheer which pervades our hospital. Everybody is in smiles--the patients, their relatives the nurses, the doctors, everyone! They are all like flowers in full bloom. It is not the same with most other hospitals.

The essential mark of a hospital is its cleanliness. Clean toilets are an index of the cleanliness of a hospital. Our hospital is as clean as a mirror, as it is kept always clean by the team of dedicated seva dhal volunteers who relentlessly work hard with a spirit of service and sacrifice. It is not the service of one, but the service of many which has contributed to the rapid development of our hospital! A single flower cannot make a garland. All the people--the patients, doctors, workers---work in a spirit of harmony and unity. It is this sense of unity which contributes to purity and this purity of heart secures divinity. This hospital is a direct proof of the presence of purity, unity and divinity. It is our fond hope that such purity, unity and divinity should prevail in other hospitals as well! Unity is most essential in all fields of activity--moral, scientific and spiritual. Purity vanishes in the absence of unity. Divinity will be absent when there is no purity and unity.

Humanity will be healthier if doctors resolve to offer two days of free treatment every week.

You can work wonders with purity of heart

Some doctors wonder how we are able to give free treatment, free operations and free meals to our patients. To be frank, there should not be any room for wonder in this regard. You can work wonders with purity of heart. Any work which is started with purity of heart is bound to succeed.

Money flows if your work is suffused with love and sacrifice. People will provide munificent funds to support any noble endeavour. The land of Bhaarath has been a Punya Bhuumi (Land of sanctity), Thyaaga Bhuumi (Land of Sacrifice), Yoga Bhuumi (Land of spiritual austerities), and Karma Bhuumi (Land of righteous action). In fact, there is no dearth of money in India.

Doctors should first and foremost have faith in spirituality. Faith in spirituality alone can bring about transformation of humanity. Spirituality is not the celebration of festivals, not even performance of rituals. True spirituality calls for earnest endeavour to eradicate all animal qualities. Today humanity has descended to such a degrading level that men see evil in good, without trying to see good in evil.

Doctors who are eminent experts in their fields have come to participate in the symposium here.

Sincere efforts should be made to put your great talents and skill to good use. The climes and countries from which you have come may be different. But all of you have one thing in commonnoble feelings. These noble feelings are God's gift to man and come by Divine grace.

Treat the patients as your own kith and kin. The help which you extend in good faith to your patients will be rewarded in course of time. It is My wish and blessing that you will have useful discussions and come out with ways and means of helping mankind to be free from heart ailments.

Discourse at the inaugural session of the Second International Symposium on Cardio-vascular Diseases held in the Sathya Sai Institute Auditorium on 21-1-1994.

Foster love, live in love, spread love--that is the spiritual exercise which will yield the maximum benefit.

4. Bhagavaan's valedictory address

EMINENT DOCTORS! Though axed and maimed by man, trees selflessly serve him by providing him fruits and shade. Rivers carry water to quench man's thirst and to cleanse his body. The cow also selflessly serves man by providing milk. Man should in the first place realize the truth that he has been endowed with the human body not for seeking his selfish ends but for serving others. The wealth one possesses, the scientific skill one acquires, and the medical knowledge one obtains, are all secured from society. Since man has gained his wealth, knowledge and expertise from society, he has to discharge his debt to society by doing some good in return to it.

The ideal of gratitude has been handed down the ages as a heritage in India. A man without this supreme virtue of gratitude is worse than a cruel animal. Having received his wealth, education and skills from society, if he does not serve the cause of society, his health, education and skills are a sheer waste. It is only by serving society that these acquire splendour and significance.

The relationship that should exist between wealth and deeds can be likened to the relationship between rain water and the ocean. Water from the sea, vaporized by the sun, forms clouds in the sky which in turn come down as rain on earth. The rain water flows as streams which in due course form mighty rivers and merge in the ocean. Similarly, actions should spring up as clouds from the ocean of righteousness and confer the rain drops of love.

The drops of love gather into rivers and merge in the ocean, which is the source.

Inventions of new machines in the field of surgery

Tremendous advances have been made in the field of medicine and surgery. The invention of the heart-lung machine marked a notable break-through in the field of surgery. The heart-lung machine is like a mother. It performs the functions of the heart and the lung without being aware of it. It does not know in the least that it is pumping, purifying and circulating blood. Like the mother, it is innocent and pure. The mother is unaware that she is sustaining the baby in her womb by nourishing it with substance from her own body.

It is a wonder how the different organs of the body discharge their different functions. The heart performs its functions with utmost regularity and rhythm. It pumps the blood at the right time in the right direction. The lungs and digestive system in the body perform their functions perfectly.

In this marvellous creation of God, the functioning of the body is the most wondrous. Doctors are aware of this wonderful mystery called the body. Endowed with this knowledge of the human system, doctors perform their services. They should have the awareness that the service which they render to others is nothing but service done unto themselves.

Team-work of the organs in the body

Doctors today have access to the latest techniques and most sophisticated instruments, unknown to their ancestors. At one time, by-pass surgery was breathtaking, but now it has become a familiar exercise. Doctors will come out with techniques far better than by-pass surgery in the years to come. The valves in the human heart perform most intricate and complex activities. All the organs in the body perform their functions with the finest coordination, displaying most astonishing unity, harmony and adjustment.

The body and the mind work in perfect unison in the human system. Man should first understand the impact of the mind and the body on human life. The mind exercises supreme influence not only on the health of the body but on the universe too. Man is not merely a human being, he is the embodiment of Divinity. All acts of service done to others are to be treated as service rendered to God.

Every physician should try to trace the cause of diseases. Doctors should make earnest efforts to educate the people in health and hygiene and impress on patients

how food habits and lifestyles affect life and cause diseases. No treatment ensures permanent cure.

All treatments enable people to prolong their lives. But realizing the impermanence of life, every person should strive to sanctify his life. All techniques like by-pass surgery are only artificial means of extending the life span of man. They bear testimony to the doctor's skills. It must be remembered that the heart is the creation of God while art is the creation of man. There is, however, close connection between God's creation and man's

It is activity that confers authority

It is the duty of the doctors to use their knowledge in the service of mankind. Take for example,

Dr. Bhan. As he has been conducting operations sincerely in our hospital, he has improved his surgical skill and has become a senior doctor. Acquisition of skill and perfection in one's work delights one's self. Education gains significance only when it is rested on the touch-stone of practice.

One must continuously work. It is activity that confers authority. A doctor gains happiness in proportion to the work he puts in. The genuine doctor is one who delights in work. For example,

Dr. Venugopal performs ten to twelve operations even without taking coffee. When I ask him to rake coffee or take rest he says, "No, Svaami. This work is a source of happiness to me." It is his dedication to work and continuous application which have made him a master of his job. It is the application of his knowledge that lends joy to him.

Our hospital is an infant of two years. Within a short span of time it has become one of the best hospitals. It owes its magnificent success to the coordinated efforts of doctors, nurses, technicians and volunteers. The group from Hyderabad led by Dr. Somaraju also does tremendous work. The team from Delhi does invaluable work. Unity is strength. The doctors in our hospital perform their work with all love and sincerity. They work without any publicity.

The other day Dr. Somaraju performed an intricate operation by making use of balloon technique. Our doctors are making an earnest effort to cure heart ailments without resorting to operation. One single flower cannot make a garland. Many flowers are needed to make a garland.

It requires a thread also. All these doctors are like the fragrant flowers and Bhagavaan is the invisible thread which binds them together into a beautiful garland. Since all the doctors and staff work together, this hospital has earned great name and fame. The love of doctors and love of Svaami have contributed to its tremendous success.

Faith in God is essential for all actions

Without faith in God, we cannot perform any action. It is Divinity which pervades everywhere and works nonstop. All these doctors have been working as instruments. It is the infectious joy of doctors and patients which makes the hospital unique. Dr. Rajiv Mahajan, though not a doctor, exerts himself for the sake of the hospital. He comes three days in a month to check the requirements of the hospital. It is his love which prompts him to do all this for the hospital.

Though we ourselves sometimes do not bother about the hospital, he himself comes and does the needful.

This hospital owes its progress to the sacrifice and service of many. But the most important of all is the will of God. Dr. Neelam Desai said, "The wings with you and the bodies with us." All these doctors work with the feeling that they are instruments in the hands of the Divine.

Many of you, while glorifying this hospital say "Your Hospital." This hospital belongs to all of us. It is "Our Hospital!" You are always welcome to this Hospital!

Discourse at the Valedictory function of the Second International Symposium on Cardiovascular diseases on 23-1-1994 at the Institute Auditorium.

What exactly is your duty? Let Me summarise it for you. First, tend your parents with love, reverence and gratitude. Second, speak the truth and act virtuously. Third, whenever you have a few moments to spare, repeat the Name of the Lord, with the Form in your mind. Fourth, never indulge in talking ill of others or try to discover faults in others. And, finally, do not cause pain to others, in any form.

BABA

5. Disease and Divinity

You can reset a tree to make it grow straight,
You can straighten even a granite stone.
But you cannot easily set right
The mind and rid of its vagaries.

IT IS the mind that makes a man. The mind is a conglomeration of thoughts. Thoughts are reflected in actions. The consequences of actions are being experienced as pleasure and pain by man. Therefore, man should have noble thoughts, which will spur him to good and noble activity.

Each one should enquire for whose sake he or she is living. When any one poses this question to oneself, the answer is: "I am living for myself and not for others." He justifies his answer by saying: "I am eating to appease my own hunger. I am taking medicine to cure my illness. It cannot be cured by anyone else taking the medicine."

When two persons are sleeping in the same cot, they do not get the same dreams but have different dreams. Basing on these facts man feels that he is living for himself. Later on, when he grows up he seeks a job on the ground that he has a family to look after and support. The same person, who once said he was living for himself, later on pleads that he is living for his family.

When invited by a friend to accompany him to Bangalore for an interesting sports event, he says that he has to attend his office and cannot rake leave and hence he is unable to accompany him.

He thus cites his duty as a reason for his inability to enjoy the sports. But when his wife or child is sick and in a hospital he rakes leave even on loss of pay and goes to attend on them. The same person, when he is hungry and just sirs for taking his dinner, leaves the meal served on the table and rushes out when he hears that his son or daughter is involved in an accident. Even hunger is forgotten. The person, who was proclaiming that he was living for himself only, now starts caring for his wife and children. Man's own welfare is bound with that of society. When the village is in the grip of an epidemic like cholera or plague, the same person comes forward to do his best to combat the spread of the disease, because this may affect his own family too as they are part and parcel of the village. Thus man is born in society and grows in society. It is the bounden duty of every one to feel that his own welfare is bound up with the welfare of all others in society. Today we are faced with the menace of fluorosis. If you enquire into this, we come to know that the problem of fluorests is not only prevalent in India but in many other countries of the world such as Indonesia, Germany, China, USA, Iran, Iraq, Turkey and Libya. Because of their affluence people in countries like U.S.A, are able to take steps to overcome the evil effects of this disease to a great extent. The ill-effects of polluted drinking water. Many diseases are caused by drinking water that is polluted. If there is only one milligram of fluoride in a litre of water, it is safe. The presence of more than one mg in a litre may cause sickness. If there is 4 or 5 mg of fluoride in a litre, it affects the teeth and is positively injurious to health. In several States in India such as Himaachal Pradesh, Utthar Pradesh, Madhya Pradesh and Raajasthan this disease is widely prevalent. In Aandhra Pradesh, it is rampant in Shrikaakulm, Guntur, Medhak, Nalgonda and Mahboobnagar districts. Recently it has been found to be prevalent in Kudapa, Kurnuul, Ananthapur and other places. It is found on investigation that the fluoride content in water varies from 15 mg to 10.5 mg in these areas. The fluoride that is contained in underground water sources varies from 1 mg to 300 mg per litre. In many areas they have established Aluminum factories. Fluoride is made use of to a large extent in these factories. This mixes with air and the polluted air affects the people. It enters the stronger portions of the body such as bones and teeth. A portion of this fluoride is excreted through urine. The ignorant are not aware of the serious damage caused by this fluoride to their health. Fluorosis causes pain in the joints and affects the bones at the back, etc. The affected persons stiffer from severe pain in joints. Some germs such as bacteria also enter the system and

cause a lot of damage to the human body. Viruses also cause diseases. Polluted food also accounts for the spread of these disease carrying germs. Meat, fish, black and red salt, black coffee and tea also cause spread of fluorosis and aggravate it further. To the extent possible you should change your food habits. Chewing betel leaves also causes tooth decay. Certain drugs sold in the market also aggravate this disease. Ways and means to combat fluorosis. There are some types of antidotes that can be consumed with food to prevent fluorosis. You should take sour things like lime, orange and tamarind in greater quantity. You can also take more of tomatoes, potatoes and vegetables with Vitamin C. You should also take more of carrots to build the bones. Intake of such food items in a liberal measure will help to combat the incidence of fluorosis. Besides these, consuming of green leaves which contain a lot of calcium will also help in keeping off fluorosis. Food is the main factor in maintaining good health or causing diseases. In these days, though there is plenty of milk, curd and other dairy products available with the villagers in their houses, they are in the habit of selling these products and buying some useless and harmful things that affect their health adversely. Consuming of curd will help one to a great extent to combat the onset of this disease. Modern youth take black tea and coffee (without milk though milk is available) thereby inviting the disease. Some take black and brownish salt which contains more fluoride. They should avoid this and take only white purified salt. It is only by propagating such practical preventive steps that Government can play its role in checking the spread of this disease. Thought of Divine essential to combat disease. Apart from the exercise of such care in the food consumed there should be also Dhaiva chinthana (contemplation of the Divine). Because people don't drink of God they are subjected to a lot of misery. Without divine thought, man is harbouring two bad qualities. One is he hides many defects and evil qualities within himself. The other is he magnifies even minor faults in others. Because of such evil qualities among human beings diseases are also on the increase. Only when human effort is there, with God's grace, good results will be attained. The Sanskrit saying declares "Dharmaartha Kaama Mokshaanaam Aarogyam Muulam Uthamam" (For the attainment of the four Purusharthas, good health is essential). Even though one may have all the wealth in the world, if his health is impaired, he is miserable. Good health is the most important acquisition one should aspire for. Whether a villager or an urban dweller, good health is very essential for anyone leading a meaningful life. To enjoy good health, one should have water, food and air free from pollution. Now all these three are polluted. Apart from these, man's mind is also polluted. To purify the mind, one should nurture noble and sacred thoughts of service to others. One who does not hurt anybody and has feelings of love and compassion to fellow beings is the greatest of men. That is why sage Vyaasa gave the essence of the Eighteen Puraanas he composed in the aphorism; "Help ever, hurt never." You should make every effort to avoid harming others in any circumstance. You are only hurting yourself when you hurt others. You should not use harsh words. When you develop human values, you can be free from diseases and even enjoy good health with God's Grace. To enjoy good health you need control in living. Once a poet gave the reason for the-lack of Dharma in this country in the form of a song. Because there are people who have bad thought, hear bad things through their ears, see bad things with their eyes, spread scandals through their tongue, there is no Dharma (righteousness) and no peace. Human beings are embodiments of Divinity. They should live up to their Divine nature and not descend to the level of animals. We should see that by our action no harm is caused to society. The incidence of fluorosis is a threat to public health and affects society in general. But, there are easy methods to combat this menace by taking preventive steps. In our Institute, Venkateshvara Rao has done detailed studies in this field and has found out methods of conducting numerous experiments to control this disease. This can be controlled to a great extent by using sour things such as tamarind, lime, oranges, etc., in larger quantities in food. The villagers should consume lot of greens which contain a good amount of iron. The Government has embarked upon measures to control the spread of this disease. The people, for their part, should co-operate with the government. Then the results will be good.

My opinion is that it is not good enough to provide for treatment for this disease. It is prevalent even in the affluent countries like U.S.A. With all their money power they are not able to eradicate the disease. So you should realise that God's grace is very essential. Along with medicine you need discipline and control in living. Pure engineers, officers, scientists have all gathered here. They must educate the people to avoid meat eating, which causes fluorosis. Water and other substances coming from underground have a lot of fluoride content. In some places there is as much as 8 to 10 mg of fluoride in one litre of water. Divine vibrations in Prashanthi Nilayam Whether you believe it or not, in Prashanthi Nilayam, which is situated in Ananthapur District, there is no trace of fluorosis. Here, there is a lot of Divine vibrations as all good and sacred things are being done. People of different religions and Nationalities are assembling here in thousands. But all are engaged in divine activities and constant remembrance of God. Here there is not more than 1 or 1.5 mg of fluoride in a litre of water. The Collector of Ananthapur district is making a lot of effort to combat this disease. It is necessary to combine divine activities along with the other steps to combat this disease. Discourse at the inauguration of the National Symposium on methods to combat Fluorosis, held in the Sathya Sai Institute Auditorium on 29-1-1994. You love the God in all beings and the God in all beings responds with Love. BABA 6. Start propagation in primary school Engaging oneself in arduous penance, Undertaking pilgrimages to sacred shrines, Dipping in holy waters, mastering the scriptures, Meditating on the Lord, and going in raptures, All these can seldom help a human To cross the ocean of life mundane. Service to mankind is the only course of action Which will help one to achieve liberation. EMBODIMENTS of Divine Aathma! It is the duty of Everyone born as a human being to engage himself in service to mankind, which is the only sure way to cross the ocean of worldly life and attain liberation from the cycle of birth and death. Be the master of your body and mind The human body is a prey to 386 types of diseases. These are caused by three main factors that are related to physical health. They are Vaatha (Wind), Piththa (Bile)

and Sleshma (Phlegm).

Wind is the cause of 80 diseases, while 84 diseases arise from bile disorders and 222 from phlegm. For the disease of fluorosis, which is the subject of this symposium, bile and phlegm are the causes. While there are curative medicines for several diseases, there are some diseases which are incurable.

In this world, there are several types of people- those who are affluent, those who are virtuous, men of mighty strength and valour, persons of high literary attainments, eminent scientists. But persons engaging themselves in spiritual pursuits are very rare to come across. Such noble persons, who dwell in the realm of the spirit instead of the sphere of mundane affairs, will not be affected by any diseases of the body or the mind. They will be leading a noble and pure life. The body is a physical entity while the mind is subtle. There is another which is invisible and eludes the grasp of the ordinary individual. That is the Aathma. The attempt to comprehend the unknown and invisible Aathma is called Aathmaanveshana. When one makes efforts to realise the sweetness of the Aathma he is said to taste it--Aathmapreethi. When he experiences the bliss of the Aathma he is said to be an Aathma Inaani (a Realised Soul).

The body, the mind, the intellect and the senses are only your instruments. Then, the question arises, "Who are you?" The answer is: "You are the master who makes use of these instruments."

When you refer to "My mind, my body, my senses," do you enquire "Who am I?" Though you may go on saying, "This is my body; my mind, etc.," which implies that you are different from these, yet you identify yourself with the body and become a slave of the senses instead of being their master. You are the Aathma, the Supreme Master. You have the potential to realise this through the discriminating power of the intellect. Once you recognise this truth, you will also understand human nature, which is a combination of values like Truth, Righteousness, Peace,

Love and Non-violence and you will then rid your animal qualities. Then you will also realise the cause of diseases and the method of curing them.

Aadhaaram and aahaaram are essential for life

The disease of fluorosis is caused by contamination in food, air and water. Earth, fire and ether are the elements constituting the essential basis for human life. Water and air constitute the Praana

Shakthi (Life-Force). While ether, earth and fire are the muula

(basis), water and air are essential for Praana (life). Water and air provide the food for the sustenance of life. While the three elements earth, fire and ether form the Aadhaaram (support), the other two--water and air form the Aahaaram (food). You get water and air from the Bhuumi (earth). It is the nature of Brahman and is all powerful. The astronauts who travel in space-ships to explore space have to carry water and air with them from the earth for their survival. They have to take things from the earth while they travel to the moon to bring a few samples from the moon.

Billions of dollars are spent on these exercises.

What we should attempt really is to explore the means of cultivation of human values and realising the divinity within everyone. The sun shines with intense heat and wonderful effulgence. By the help of the sun's light, the moon shines. It cannot shine by itself, as it has no effulgence of its own. The relationship between the Buddhi (intellect) and the mind is also similar to this. The mind is made up of thoughts and fancies. It is dangerous to act as a slave of the mind. By following the mind, one becomes a Pashu (an animal). By following the Buddhi, one becomes a Pashupathi, the Lord of all living beings.

Pay the greatest attention to the health of children

You have discussed in great detail the incidence of fluorosis and the application of technology to combat this evil disease as a natural outcome of food and other habits. The main constituents of the body should be in proper balance. Any imbalance will affect the health and curtail the life span. The longevity of a person depends on regulation of food and other habits.

Affluent and educated people are able to have recourse to advanced methods of treatment for curing diseases. What about the poor and illiterate villagers? They suffer a lot owing to fluorosis which affects the movement of the joints and weakens the bones. In some cases, hands and legs are bent out of shape and the victims can hardly do their daily work. A large percentage of people in Bhaarath are unable to work efficiently because of various physical disabilities. The greatest attention should be paid to the health of the young who have many years of life before them.

We have to start investigation in the primary schools where children are susceptible to attacks by diseases such as fluorosis. You have to devise methods simple enough to be followed by them.

One simple method is to mix lime and sand in water in a Proper proportion and stir it up slowly taking 15 minutes for the process. Allow it to settle down for 5 to 6 hours. You will see the sand deposit at the bottom. If this is done before bed-time, the water will be clear by the next morning.

The water thus purified can be used with good effect. You can make use of alum also for this purpose. It is very difficult to get pure alum today. Everything is adulterated: milk, oil and other edible products. If you can teach the primary school children now about cultivation of honesty and good habits, the future of the country and the world will be better as these children are going to be the leaders, pleaders and teachers of the

Regarding the treatment of fluorosis, you should think of long-term solution also along with temporary remedial measures. Yellow and black spots on the skins are signs of a person suffering from fluorosis. Doctors should concentrate on fluorosis-affected children as they may grow weak because of the disease. Ensure effective implementation of decisions taken

This disease is prevalent in all countries, but in certain districts of some States of Bhaarath it is rampant. The decisions you have taken at this Conference should not be confined to the paper on which they are recorded. You should implement them and achieve results. What is needed is the will to work with a spirit of dedication in order to relieve the distress of the suffering masses.

The participants who spoke earlier, expressed their gratitude for the hospitality and good food and comfortable accommodation provided for them here. We do have our share in looking after the welfare of society. We can be happy only when society is happy. You should go from village to village and rake concrete steps to eradicate this disease of fluorosis, offer simple methods of treatment to those already affected and teach the villagers the preventive precautionary measures like regulation of diet and drinking only boiled water etc. Our Prime Minister and the Chief Minister of A.P are extending enthusiastic support for this programme. You should also act with full initiative and interest so that you can achieve the desired results. Having taken up a job you should not slacken your effort in completing it, facing any obstacles you may come across boldly.

Work done for the welfare of the world is thapas (true penance), while work done for selfish purpose is thamas (useless).

Bhaarath is a Punyabhumi (sacred land). It is a Yogabhumi (Land of sense control) and Karmabhumi (Land of action). The present generation of people want to make it a Bhogabhumi (Land of worldly pleasures). That is why people suffer from diseases.

Secret of Svaami's youthful radiance

Students here expressed their wonder as to how Svaami, though 68 years old, looks young and is energetic. Really the reason for this is the imbibing of the three P's by Me, namely, purity, patience, and perseverance. If you follow these three tenets you will not be afflicted by any disease.

I am keeping Myself active day in and day out for the sake of the welfare of the world and no disease has affected this body at any time during the past 68 years. My teeth are quite healthy and strong even at this age. I can masticate anything. My eye sight is very sharp. People get short sight or long sight even at the age of forty and wear glasses. I take no medicine as no disease affects Me. Even while I take on the diseases of others. I pretend as though I take the pill offered by doctors to satisfy them. But actually I throw it away and sip only water. I eat the barest minimum to sustain the body. I take just one small oil-free dry chapaathi. I have never taken sweets even from my childhood. Doctors say you need vitamins and proteins for maintaining bodily health. I am always in Aanandha (bliss) and that is the vitamin and protein for Me.

Happiness lies in union with God. When you think of God you are bound to be happy.

Chant prayers even while taking medicine

You must tell people to think of God and chant prayers even while they take' medicine for the disease. This must be taught mainly to school children so that they may grow up as good enlightened children.

There was a professor in Kaashi who used to do prayer and worship at the altar in his house. An atheist friend of his who visited him remarked that he was wasting so much time in prayer. The professor replied that the prayer to God will never go waste. He added: "I waste only one hour per day, even if according to you God does not exist. But if God exists, you are wasting your whole life-time."

You have to educate the children to consume lime and tamarind in larger measure, explaining the reason for this, in order to prevent the affliction by the disease of fluorosis. Teach them by songs in popular runes so that it will have an effective appeal. Even atheists who deny God will be moved by music as human beings. When you pray to God too, it is more effective if you express the prayer in musical runes as this will touch and move the heart. God loves music. He is termed as Gaanapriya and Gaanalola (one who loves music and revels in music). Inspire the children to sing Bhajans. They will attain happiness and satisfaction. Discourse at the valedictory function of the National Symposium on Fluorosis on 30-1-1994.

Living becomes a glorious experience only when it is sweetened by Tolerance and Love. Willingness to compromise with others ways of living and cooperation in common tasks, make living happy and fruitful. Certain modes of behaviour have been laid down and proved beneficial by centuries of practice. These have to be observed with modifications to suit the conditions of today.

BABA

7. Imbibe Bhaarith's ideals

Do not be conceited because of your studies,

What is great about your learning?

The hall-mark of education is humility,

Realising that what is yet to be learnt is limitless.

Shed your ignorance and pride, O witless one!

Learn to be humble in pursuing knowledge.

STUDENTS! TEACHERS! Today men have invented many types of machinery by their experiments and researches. Science has been pursued with relentless energy. But, being unable to experience peace or happiness, they have become strangers to both. Despite his acquiring the sacred human birth, man is immersed in the pursuit of transient worldly pleasures, forgetting his Divine destiny. Concentrating on scientific investigations, inventing all kinds of mechanical gadgets, man is content to lead a proud but purposeless life.

To understand the basic purpose of life, you do not have the right type of education now. Mere worldly knowledge will not promote the cultivation of spiritual and moral values. This secular knowledge does not serve to reach you the secret of human life. If one wishes to bring down a tree he must attack the roots and not the branches. For man to attain his real destination and secure enduring peace and joy secular education is of no avail.

Greatness of Bhaarith culture

Bhaarith in ancient times lived a life of morality and integrity and enjoyed peace and happiness. Students today, disregarding morality and their obligations to society, go astray and ruin their lives. Bhaarith have forgotten the essentials of their culture, based on morality and integrity. They cast away their great scriptural texts as trash.

Western nations took these, learnt the profound truths contained in them and developed their technical and military skills and sought to give them back to Bhaarith. The weapons developed in Germany were based on the texts of the Atharvana Vedha.

Bhaarith today are cultivating a passion for exotic things, ignoring what is good in their own heritage. Students should strive to understand what is great in their own Bhaarith culture and heritage. Ignoring their own cultural greatness, Bhaarith are going abroad to earn money as an end in itself. No doubt money is necessary, but, is it necessary to go abroad for this purpose? This cannot be the true aim of education.

Students should recognise the truth of the saying, "The mother and the Motherland are greater than heaven itself." One who does not believe in this cannot be called a truly educated person.

Making use of the education acquired by you, you should serve your country in such a way that it stands out as an example to the world. What perversity is it to neglect one's own house and try to beautify your neighbour's house?

Students today are losing their love for the Motherland. The man who cannot proclaim that "This is my native land, this is my mother tongue," is a living corpse. He is no human being at all.

People are giving up love for the Motherland and fostering greed for money.

Selfless unity is the message of the Vedhas

From ancient times, Bhaarith has held forth to the world great ideals. Spreading the message of spirituality to many countries, Bhaarith proclaimed the message-

Lokaas samasthaas Sukhino

Bhavanthu (May all people be happy). Bhaarith never permitted the concept of selfishness to prevail. Selfless unity was the message proclaimed in the Vedhas: "Let us live together; let us grow together. Let us share our knowledge with others, let us live in harmony and friendliness."

Today in Bhaarith there is no spirit of harmony

In ancient India, students, together with secular knowledge, sought spiritual knowledge, regardless of the sacrifices involved, and led purposeful lives. They conducted many investigations to comprehend the mysteries of creation and the secret of human existence. All experiments today are based on yanthras (mechanical devices). But in the olden days, they conducted the enquires with the help of manthras. The truths which they discovered, they proclaimed to the world in strident terms.

 "Less speech, more happiness"
 It is the duty of Bhaaratheeyas today to learn something about the great spiritual heritage of Bhaarith. The ancients practised economy in speech. Students today tend to be loquacious.
 Excessive speech harms the mind. "Less speech, more happiness."
 The ancients practised three kinds of silent penance to control speech. The first was Vaakmounam (silence of the tongue, the second one was Mario-mounam (silence of the mind) and the third was Mahaa-mounam (Supreme Silence).
Vaak mounam (Silence in speech) meant confining one's speech to the limit and the needs of the occasion. By this discipline, excessive talk was avoided. As a result, the power of their speech was conserved and enhanced. Discipline in speech also resulted in truthfulness. Truth speaking served to purify their thoughts. By this means they acquired Siddhi (Realisation of truth) and Inaanassiddhi (acquisition of the highest' wisdom). Therefore purity in speech is vital. It has to be achieved by restraint in speech.
 Then, there is Mario mounam (Silence of the mind). The mind is a bundle of thoughts and fancies. These thoughts have to be reduced gradually. When thoughts are reduced, the mind naturally comes under control, like a clock that is unwound. When the activity of the mind is reduced, the power of the Aathma manifests itself.
 As a consequence Buddhi (intellect) becomes more active than the senses. When control of speech and control of the mind have been achieved, the state of Mahaa-mounam (Supreme Silence) is easily realised. Students should strive to reach the third stage by the disciplines of the first two stages.
 I have often told you, "Talk less and study more." What is meant by "study?" Study or education is the process of divinising one's Self. This calls for the cultivation of values in education. This "Education (is) for life." "Life (is) for love." "Love for man." "Man is for Service." "Service for Society." "Society for nation." "Nation for world." "World for peace." Education is for life and not merely for earning a living. This life is for love. Love is God. Live in love. This love should be for all mankind. Today this love is absent. What passes for love is something artificial. Love should emanate from the heart.

 Man exists for service
 What is the purpose of being a man? It is not for leading an animal existence. Man exists for service. Every man has to return to society by way of service what he has received from it. That service should be rendered selflessly in a spirit of sacrifice. Service is thereby converted to spirituality.
 Service is to society Society exists for the nation. The nation is a limb of the world. The world should strive for peace. That is the meaning of the benediction Om Shaanthi! Shaanthi!
Shaanthi! Why is this Shaanthi (Peace) uttered only three times and not more times or less rimes? This refers to peace in three aspects. Aadhibhouthika (physical), Aadhyaathmika (mental) and Aadhidhaivika (spiritual). Peace relating to the body, the mind and the Self are invoked by this benediction. Such profound meanings are implicit in the pronouncements of Bhaarith's sages.
 All these are designed to remind us of God and make us seek God-realisation. People imagine that God is an entity far beyond human conception and grasp. That is not true. Divinity is nearer than anything else in the world. If you consider It remote, It will appear distant, but if you regard It as near It will be near. As long as man is conscious of the body, he cannot comprehend a formless Divinity. Hence, he must adore the Divine in human form.
 If, for instance, a buffalo or a fish thinks of God they can conceive of God only as a huge buffalo or a gigantic, fish. Man also conceives the form of God only in terms of his own human form and attributes. As long as man is attached to the body, he cannot realise God. Only when he sheds his attachment, can he experience the Divine.
 Man must worship God in human form
 As long as he thinks of his body and has human form, man cannot think of something which transcends form and body That is the reason why God incarnates in human form. To man He must appear as human. Only then relationships can be established between the Divine and human beings. If God comes in any other form, man cannot fix his thoughts on Him. Hence, you have to conceive of God in human form and worship Him.
Shri Raama, who was the embodiment of Dharma, incarnated in human form. Because the Avathaars (Divine advents) come in human form, human beings could have intimate relationships with them and adore them.

The Vedhas declared that the Vedhaaham etham Purusham Mahaantham Aadithyavarnam

thamasah parasthaath (The Supreme Divine, with the effulgence of the sun, dwells beyond darkness). God is beyond Thamas (darkness). He is not outside. He is within you. You are He.

While He is himself the Divine, man seeks the Divine in a forest or through meditation. What folly is this? The Vedhas deride man for failing to see God even while seeing Him.

"Pashyannapi na pashyanthi muudho" (The fool fails to see even while he is seeing). When God comes in human form, moves freely amongst you, talks with you, jokes with you, eats with you and drinks with you, even then you fail to recognise God. You pursue your own types of devotion. This is not correct. You must worship the living Divinity, not the lifeless. Honour every human being who is in human form. See the Divine in every man.

Develop control of senses first

The cosmos is Vishnu svaruupam (a manifestation of the Divine). God is with you, in you, and around you. He is not elsewhere. Develop this firm conviction. It is a piece of self-deception to imagine that God is somewhere away from you.

At the outset, you have to develop control of your senses. This control in the form of mounam

(silence) influences your speech. Jayadheva went into rapture over the power of the tongue to chant sweetly the name of the Lord. Sweetness in speech makes all the differences between one man and another. The supreme greatness of the Lord's name has been commended in the present

Age of Kali (Discord). It is an abuse of the tongue to make it recite anything other than God's name.

Students should realise the supremacy of Aathma-Vidhya (the culture of the Self). It is the key to all knowledge. What is the use of all the secular knowledge which is concerned with acquiring a mess of potage?

The great scientist, Einstein, regretted in his last years that his scientific findings had led to the production of the atom bomb. Sir Isaac Newton ended his life in a hospital with a mental affliction. True knowledge must secure mental peace and enduring joy For this contemplation of God is essential.

Academic education has its uses. But it is not the summom-bonum of life. Adore the light of the Divine within you. Each student is like a petromax light. This light has to be kept burning by pumping kerosene from time to time. The soot has to be cleaned by a pin now and then. It needs kerosene. Only when all the three are present, the light will Butn brightly Your Shraddha (earnest devotion) is the kerosene. Your love is the pin. Your spirit of sacrifice is the pump. In addition, a wick is needed. That wick is the Lord's name. With the aid of the three accessories, when you chant the Lord's name, your devotion will shine effulgently This effulgence is the light of the Divine within you. You proceed from peacelessness to Paramjyothi (the light divine in the heart) through peace and an illumined mind. The heart of everyone is the scat of the Lord.

In this way students should cultivate the discriminating faculty through education, cherish humility and foster faith in the Divine. This is the royal road to realisation of oneness with the Divine.

Discourse at the Sai Institute Auditorium on 3-2-1994, after the distribution of prizes to winners in the sports and athletic events held for Secondary School students.

8. Sathya and Dharma : bases of life

Truth is God.

Truth is the source of wealth and prosperity.

It is, again, Truth that sustains virtue in the world.

WHERE there is Truth, there dwells Lakshmi, the goddess of Prosperity. Truth is changeless and eternal. It is vital to man's life. If, in the midst of misery and suffering in the world, there is goodness, it is because of Truth.

In ancient times, Kings ruled over their kingdom on the basis of Truth. They were ready to sacrifice everything, even their lives, for upholding Truth

Harishchandhra stands as the supreme example. He sacrificed his wife, son and the entire kingdom for the sake of truth. He even offered to perform the low task of a caretaker in a crematorium. Because of lack of Truth, there is no peace and security in the world. Truth always protects a nation.

Today we are not adhering to this Truth. Man is dallying with untruth forsaking the path of virtue. He is ruining his life immersed in falsehood and unrighteous actions. Man has lost respect for Truth today Love is a forgotten value. People deem righteousness as an irrelevance in the modern context. Everything that man does today, all his plans and projects are self-centered.

Even spirituality is practised to gain social recognition, more ostentatious than genuine. All human activities are based on attachment and hatred. Selfishness and jealousy dominate the modern man. Human values have lost their hold and hence there is no peace and security.

Truth is the foundation to build man's character
There can be no peace when mankind forgets Aadhaara (the base) and concentrates on the aadheya (superstructure). Man is swayed by the delusion that life is meant only to enjoy; eat, drink, and sleep. With this view, he acquires wealth and increases his possessions. He makes no attempt to understand the purpose for which he is born in this world. Though he attempts to pursue right action, he fails because of his greed, ambition, lust and other temptations.

Truth is the foundation on which the character of man is built. When Truth is not respected, the mansion of life collapses like a building that has a weak foundation. Man does not realise this and pursues a life of sensuous pleasures, ignoring Truth which is the Life Force that sustains his entire being.

This is due to the delusion caused by Maaya. Maaya is a strange phenomenon that envelops man in spite of all his precautions. It is like a shadow that chases one wherever he may be. The shadow's size depends very much upon the direction of the light. When one moves towards the light and comes under it, the shadow disappears and there is no Maaya--only Truth remains.

All worldly knowledge and physical prowess are of no avail if there is no spiritual strength. This is illustrated by the lives of Hiranyakashipu and Hiranyaaksha in the Bhaagavatham, of Karna and the Kauravas in the Mahaabhaaratha and of Raavana in the Raamaayana.

It is doubtless essential to acquire skills of various kinds. But the purpose for which they are to be used should also be understood. They have to be used for the realisation of the four main goals of human life, described compendiously as the Purusharthas. The four goals are: Dharma (righteousness), Artha (wealth), Kaama (desire) and Moksha (liberation).

Understand the true meaning of Purusha
First of all, the term Purusha has to be properly understood. In common parlance, it is applied to a male person. But Purusha refers to the Jeeva, the Aathma, Praana and the Brahman. It is the Chaithanya (awareness or consciousness) in every being, as distinct from Prakrithi, which represents the body (and the phenomenal universe). Prakrithi represents the feminine principle, while consciousness represents the male aspect. Purusha, however, applies to both man and woman. Among the Purusharthas, Dharma comes first. Dharma is commonly understood as referring to activities like going on pilgrimages, offering charity and performing good acts. But these activities serve only to provide mental satisfaction.

They do not lead to the Divine. Dharma is the very embodiment of Divinity. All efforts to achieve oneness with the Divine can alone be termed Dharma. Artha is ordinarily understood as referring to wealth. But what is the wealth that one should really seek? It is the wealth of Inaana, the wealth of Brahma Inaana (Divine Wisdom). Pursuit of this knowledge is the real quest for wealth, not the pursuit of money and possessions. It is Inaana Aishvarya that one must seek. Only that knowledge will lead man to the goal of human life.

Kaama is not mere fulfillment of worldly desires, which are transient and momentary. The desire should be for Moksha, which means liberation from attachment to all worldly objects and cultivating attachment to the Divine. Attachment to the worldly objects is moha. The renunciation of these attachments, which is Kshaya, leads to Moha-Kshaya or Moksha.

The speciality of Shivaraathri
It is in order to rid oneself of evil tendencies that sacred days like Shivaraathri are observed.

Nights follow days and days succeed nights. This is an everyday occurrence. What is the speciality of Shivaraathri? As the night precedes the New Moon day, it will be pitch dark everywhere outside, the heart will be filled with bright effulgence on this sacred night. Light represents mangalam (auspiciousness). That is why the day is observed as Shivaraathri. When Hanumaan set the entire city ablaze, the darkness of the night gave place to brilliant light. But at the same time the heart of Raavana was full of darkness. The significance of Shivaraathri is that though the entire world is dark outside, if one keeps his heart filled with divine thoughts, he will be filled with effulgence. Every year in the month of Maagha, the fourteenth day of the dark fortnight at midnight, when worldly objects concentrate on the Divine, they experience Divine feelings. This is associated with the Shivalingam that transforms the minds of the people.

The proper way of observing Shivaraathri
The significance or keeping awake on this night is that it should be spent in the awareness of the Divine. It is necessary to keep awake the whole night with the name of the Divine on one's tongue without stop. But people tend to give more importance to the aspect of merely keeping awake throughout the night in some form or another. They spend the night in witnessing cinema shows or indulging in other unholy activities such as playing cards. This is not the proper way of observing Shivaraathri. It is also customary to observe upavaasa (fasting) by giving up their usual food. The proper way to spend the night is by constant remembrance of Aathmathathva (the Inner-Self) by chanting the Lord's Name.
To proceed on one's life's journey successfully is like driving a car safely. This requires right understanding of how to handle the switch, the steering wheel, the gears and the brakes. One should also follow the Vedhic Maxim; "Sathyam Vadha, Dharmam Chara." It is an injunction to man to speak the Truth and practise right conduct. This will help him to be true to his conscience.
Those who practise Dharma and speak the Truth always in course of time become Divine. They merge in the Divine like the river merging with the ocean. Truth and Righteousness are at the root of human existence. No one should think it is difficult to adhere to truth. In fact it is easier to speak the truth while it needs a lot of cleverness to tell an untruth and sustain it.
Dharma, Karma and Marma
Dharma (Righteousness) is the root of human life. Its importance is not realised just as people looking at the fruit of a tree do not recognise the roots from which the tree and its fruits derive their sustenance. The tree has grown because of the water supplied at its root. People want to enjoy the fruits of life without watering the roots of Dharma which nourish the tree of life. The Bhagavath Geetha speaks about aathma-phala-thyaaga (renouncing the fruits of one's action).
Karma is the tree and the fruit you see in the tree is the result of your karma. What is it based upon? That is the marma (the secret). It is the unseen Dharma that is the secret. It is the unseen root of the tree. The meaning of this marma is that we should follow Dharma which determines the nature of the fruit borne by the tree.

To use another analogy, the mansion of life may be said to have four walls. These are dharma, karma, marma and janma (birth). Brahma is based on these four walls.
The Brahmathathva (the Brahman principle) is within you. There is no need to search for it outside. All that is needed is to make an enquiry about the Self within. How the Divine works Take for instance, your body How many realise the miraculous working of innumerable organs within the body? Everyone must understand how organs like the heart function and see that no excessive strain is placed upon them. The heart and the lungs are discharging their functions ceaselessly and regularly with rhythmic precision. All the limbs are doing their functions in an orderly way; apparently up to the Geetha dictum "Karmanyeva adhikaarasthe" (You are entitled only to perform your duty). They are carrying out their respective duties without any concern for their rewards. This is, indeed, the lesson to be learnt from the ways of Nature. It has been well said- Nature is the best teacher. Look at the way the heart functions; the impure blood comes through one channel, it is purified and is pumped to all parts of the body through another channel. This is the process by which the body is kept hale and healthy. This is how the Divine works. Whatever doctors may say, the wonderful activities going on within the body ceaselessly and automatically are manifestations of the power of the Divine. Students today do not realise the inner meaning of some of the rituals practised by the ancients and preserved even today They have been prescribed for specific purposes and are full of meaning. They are intended to achieve physical, mental and spiritual purity.
In this context I would like to relate an incident. The grandson of an old gentleman watched the latter sipping a few drops of water from the palm after uttering a manthra. The lad, who was dipping his pen from time to time in an ink bottle to do his homework, asked his grandfather why he was drinking the water in small droplets instead of drinking it all in one gulp. The grandfather asked him why he was dipping his pen into the ink bottle frequently instead of pouring the ink on the paper! Just as the pen has to be dipped for writing a few words at a time the water has to be taken with the words of the manthra each time. The lad learnt a good lesson from the example of his action.

You must have full faith in God and should not let anyone disturb it. If an atheist asks you why you believe in God you should firmly tell him that it is none of his business to question the devotee's belief which is purely a personal matter between him and his God. No one has a right to question another man's belief. Have firm faith in God. God's ways may not be easy to comprehend. But whatever God does is only out of His boundless love to help the devotees. Some do not understand this and attribute partiality to God. This is due to ignorance. True devotees should not give room for such doubts and undermine their faith in God. They should always try to strive to seek the One Divine in the many. Scientists employ all kinds of yanthras (instruments) and declare that they have not found God anywhere. But the saints, seeing God with the inner vision, see Him everywhere. They use the power of manthra to see God; they see God through the lens of Love. When some people ask you, "Can you show God?" you should reply: You are God; that is why you are able to talk and act." There is nothing in the world other than God! To know divinity you should know the sacredness within you. Keeping salt in your mouth, you can't taste anything that is sweet. Only when you cast off the salt and wash your mouth can you experience the taste of the sweet. Worldly desires are like salt. Discard them. Then you can realise Divinity. You must shed the evil qualities of jealousy, hatred and anger and divest yourself of the ego. If you rectify your defects and cleanse your heart, you can realise Sathya and Dharma as the basis of your life. This is the Life Principle and with this you can lead a purposeful life. Making use of your intelligence as whip and the mind as the yoke, you can drive the chariot of life, with the senses as horses, to the right destination. Adhere to your Dharma. You must understand your Dharma without which you cannot act in the right manner. You are the master with the intellect and mind as instruments. The mind is compared to the moon and the intellect to the sun. When the sky is clouded in the rainy season, the moon is hidden from our view by dark clouds. Similarly, our minds may be clouded by bad thoughts. But when the discriminating intellect represented by the sun comes into play, you have the effulgence that dispels the darkness. Man is unlike animals whose vertebral column is horizontal. Man can stand erect on his two legs. Animals have instincts but no mind or intellect. Man has the power to discriminate between good and bad. Embodiments of Love! Purify your minds. Shed jealousy and hatred. Chanting God's name will confer bliss on you. You are unable to understand the inner feelings of joy that the chanting of the Divine name will yield. You should identify yourself with the Divine vibrations which are like electric waves creating boundless energy. "Be human" The word "human" is full of significance: 'H' stands for "high human values." 'U' stands for "understanding of human sanctity." 'M' stands for being "mindful of one's duty." 'A' stands for "aanandham." 'N' stands for the "name of God." So you should go on chanting the name of God repeatedly throughout this precious night. Discourse in the Puurnachandhra Auditorium on 10-3-1994. Try and prevent the five sins that the body commits: Killing, Adultery, Theft, Drinking intoxicants and the Eating of flesh. It is great help for the highest life, if these are kept, as far away as possible. BABA 9. God realisation by sense-control EMBODIMENTS of love! Wherever the mind wanders, there the three worlds can be experienced. Where the mind is absent, there is total void. The Bhaaratheeya festivals have been designed to control the tendencies of the mind. It is easy to correct the mind. A tree can be made to grow straight, A stone can be shorn of its roughness, But can one straighten the mind? Everyone should understand the rationale of every sacred festival. Today is the holy day of Shivaraathri. Based on the science of numerology, every letter of the alphabet has a specific numerical value. "Si" bears the value 4. "Va" has the value of 5, "Ra", a value of 2. When the values of the three are combined, you have a total of 11. This eleven represents the eleven Rudhras (negative or destructive principles). Role of Rudhras in man's life What are the functions of these Rudhras? The Rudhras, in association with the Buddhi (the intellect), enter the minds of people and cause them various types of difficulties and worries. Of these difficulties, three types are predominant in the world. They are Aadhibhouthika

Aadhyaathmika and Aadhidhaivika.

Aadhibhouthika refers to difficulties caused by the five elements (ether, air, fire, water and earth) and the five sheaths (relating to food, life, mind, awareness and bliss). These sufferings are caused by human beings, animals, insects or other creatures.

Aadhyaathmika refers to sufferings caused by Vaatha (wind), Pittha (bile), and Kapha (phlegm).

Aadhidhaivika refers to the calamities caused to man by floods and drought, storms and earthquakes and similar natural disasters.

Of all the sufferings endured by human beings, those coming under these three categories are most prominent. All other calamities are encompassed by these three.

For all these sufferings the eleven Rudhras are the cause. The whole world is permeated by the Rudhras. Only Aadhidhaivika has an element of security.

Whatever emanates from Rudhra is fraught with fear. The name itself testifies to the dangerous power implicit in it. Rudhram means that which induces fear. The eleven Rudhras are dreadful in form. These dreadful entities enter the minds of human beings and subject them to all kinds of afflictions.

Rudhras and sense-control

The Mahaashivaraathri festival has been designed to subdue these eleven Rudhras. This means that by the control of the senses the Rudhras can be controlled.

Indhriya nigraha (control of the senses) is not that easy. Even if evil impulses coming from external sources are controlled, those arising from within cannot be easily controlled.

But if, at least on one night out of 365 days in a year, the senses are brought under control, then peace may be experienced and the quest for liberation may be initiated. When the entire night is dedicated to the chanting of the Lord's name, one's mind, speech and senses all get centred on

God. This is itself a form of sense control. At least on one day in a year all our thoughts and words should be centred on God. When this is done, people can realise the Supreme as described in the terms, Sathyam, Shivam, Sundharam. Socrates' disciple, Plato, used the terms, Truth, Goodness and Beauty to describe this state of Self-Realisation. In the experience of oneness with the Divine, there is Shaanthi (peace) Chith (Awareness) and Aanandha (Bliss).

The Lord is experienced as Sath-Chith-Aanandha. What is Sath?

Sath is Being, that which is eternally present. This means that even when an object is not there, its qualities are present. In Vedhaantik parlance, these qualities are described as Asthi, Bhaathi and Priyam (principles of Existence, Cognisability and Utility). Asthi means existence (the quality of permanence). This may be likened, say, to sugar. In whatever manner sugar may be used, by dissolving it in water or mixing it with flour, its quality of sweetness remains. It is Sath in the sense that it has the unchanging quality of sweetness.

Chith is awareness (or consciousness). Chith is like water. When Sath (as sugar) is combined with Chith (as water) you have neither sugar nor water, but syrup.

The combination of Sath and Chith results in Aanandha (Bliss). When the unchanging, eternal Divinity unites with the changing and inert Prakrithi (Nature), you have Aanandha. The significance of Mahaashivaraathri is that it is an auspicious occasion when Sath-Chith-Aanandha can be experienced.

While the Rudhras are inflicting sufferings on mankind in various ways, by the control of the senses, if humans turn their minds towards God and devote themselves to Godly pursuits, they will find their path to Moksha (liberation). Moksha means getting rid of Moha (the delusions relating to the physical).

In this manner every one has to understand the true significance of sacred festivals like Shivaraathri.

Importance of Shivaraathri

Among these festival days, Mahaashivaraathri is of exceptional importance. Today God is in close proximity to man. At midnight (on Shivaraathri), Divine vibrations are close to every human heart. At such a time, when people are engaged in holy tasks, they get suffused with the Divine vibrations.

People should realise that there is nothing closer to them than the Divine. Even one's mother may occasionally be remote from the child, but the Divine is never far from anyone at any time. This means that everyone is Divine. But each one must strive to recognise this indwelling Divinity that is the eternal Reality. Most people waste their lives in the observance of external rituals and forms of worship. Together with external observances, people should also try to achieve internal purity. How long should one waste his life in external forms? All knowledge and skills are of superficial value and effect no internal change.

The seed and the fruit

Embodiments of the Divine Aathma! Time is passing. You are forgetting your obligations. Your life has been given to you to fulfill your duties. Do your duty. For years you have been listening to Svaami's teachings. You are meeting many noble persons. You are performing various kinds of Saadhana (spiritual exercises). What is the bliss you have derived from all these? When you put this question, there is no answer. Are you going forward at least in any one aspect of spirituality? Are you able to concentrate your mind on a single sacred act? What is it you have accomplished? What are you seeking? What is the inner significance of the fruits you seek?

There is no meaning in your quest. You seek the fruits of good actions, but you indulge in bad acts. If one seeks the fruits of good deeds, he must do good deeds. Bad actions can only yield bad results. There is a Sanskrit saying, "Man desires the fruits of meritorious deeds, but performs no meritorious acts. Man wants to avoid the fruits of sin, but indulges in sinful deeds."

What kind of results can one have if from dawn to dusk he engages himself in untruthful, unrighteous and evil actions? To the extent possible, one should try to practise at least a few sacred teachings. Otherwise, one will be overtaken by death with the passing of time and the wastage of the body. All your achievements amount to nothing. It is your primary duty to practise one or two of the sacred teachings.

You have been in the Aashram for many years. You have listened to many discourses. But you have derived little benefit from all this. You must ponder over this seriously. Then only you will reap the benefit of participation in sacred festivals. Strive to eradicate the evil tendencies in you. On this sacred occasion, you must strive to eradicate the evil tendencies in you. When your conscience tells you that something is wrong, you should refrain from doing it. You betray your true humanness when you fail to act upto the dictates of your conscience.

When one's words are in accord with one's thoughts, they become truth. When the spoken word is translated into action, it becomes Dharma (right action). The basis for both Truth and Right Action is the Antharaathma (Conscience), the Indwelling Spirit. The thoughts that emanate from the Indwelling Spirit should find expression in speech. If the inner feelings are different from what is spoken, can the words be treated as truth or untruth? Clearly, it is untruth. When one's action is not in accordance with his words, it is Adharma (unrighteous action). Truth and Righteousness are expressions of the promptings from the depths of one's Conscience. Today people are prone to disregard the voice of conscience.

I have had frequent occasions to refer to the lessons to be learnt from the great epics. In the Mahaabhaaratha, we have the heroic figure of Bheeshma. He was a great sage, a Jnaani (man of supreme wisdom) and a person of unshakable determination. He stood foremost in honouring his plighted word. Such a person knew quite well that what he was allowing the Kauravas to do was manifestly wrong. He knew that the Kauravas were indulging in evil deeds. He was aware that they were following unrighteous and untruthful ways. Nevertheless he was too weak to correct them or prevent them from pursuing their evil courses. Not was that all. He accepted the role of Commander-in-Chief of the Kaurava armies. This was a blemish in his character. He was unable to act upto the dictates of his Antharvaani (conscience). Therein lay his weakness.

Compare Bheeshma's failure with the conduct of Vibheeshana. He was of demonic lineage and lived and moved among Raakshasas. He was aware that what his elder brother (Raavana) had done (by kidnapping Seetha) was wrong. Knowing this, he warned Raavana in various ways. He repeatedly told Raavana: "This is wrong. You should not do this. It is not good for you."

Vibheeshana felt that it was his duty to warn Raavana (against his evil ways). Ultimately, failing to convince Raavana, he chose to give up his brother and seek asylum with Raama.

A comparison of Bheeshma and Vibheeshana

When we compare the attitudes of the two, we find that Vibheeshana is greater than Bheeshma.

Despite his knowing the wicked ways of the Kauravas, Bheeshma was unable to intervene.

Vibheeshana, on the contras, chided Raavana. He turned away from the wicked and found refuge in God. Thus, in the practice of sacred actions, Vibheeshana emerges as a greater figure than Bheeshma. This is the lesson taught by the epics.

Are you giving any thought to such sacred lessons? You read books, but do not care to practise their teachings. You listen to discourses but do not live up to them. You have to put into practice the teachings which you learn.

What, then, is the meaning of spirituality? It is not the reading of scriptures or the performance of rituals. It is to live up to truth one has learnt. Unfortunately today, because of the influence of Kali, this does not happen. Control of senses is a form of sacrifice. At least on this auspicious day; people should concentrate their minds on God with purity and devotion. The control of the senses is itself a form of Thyaaga (sacrifice) which leads to Immortality. Sacrifice of wealth or possessions is no sacrifice at all. It is the sacrifice of the senses (the desires caused by them) which is the highest sacrifice. The Vedhas refer to the sacrifice of Thanu, Mana, Dhana. Thanu refers to the body. Mana refers to the mind. What is Dhana? It is the wealth of the senses with which man is endowed. It is the senses that have to be sacrificed, not the body, which is made up of the five elements and contains all kinds of refuse. It is the attachment to the body that has to be given up. The hold of the senses has to be reduced. What is the value of all the pleasures you profess to enjoy? If you cannot sacrifice these trivial and transient pleasures, how can you experience the Bliss of the Eternal? If people cannot give up petty addictions to coffee or betel leaves, how can they acquire control over the senses? This can be done only by spiritual Saadhana. In Svaami's view, giving up is easier than holding on to things. It is easier to give up a handkerchief than to hold it in the hand. Examine the sacrifices you are making in everyday life. You breathe in and breathe out. The exhalation is essential for purifying the lungs. Part of the food consumed is discharged, as excreta. Without this elimination, the stomach will be upset. These examples show that giving up is as necessary as acquisition. Our well-being is related to thyaaga (sacrifice). It should be recognized that festivals are intended to promote the spirit of sacrifice and not for indulgence in revelry, which leads to illness. Sacrifice promotes Toga (communion with God). God looks for your devotion and for your abilities. He looks into your Chittha (mind) rather than at your Vittha (wealth). He judges you by your virtues and not by your caste. He is concerned about what you think than about the religion you profess. He is intent on attracting your heart and not your wealth. But, today, people imagine that God can be propitiated by the offer of money. This is due to the devotee's ignorance. God cannot be secured by "force" However, money has a useful role to play in the service of worthy causes. God has no part to play in this. People try to influence the Divine by some kind of force. God cannot be secured by "force." He is amenable only to the "Inner source." Many good deeds are being done all over the world. People should participate in such good activities, render help to others and regard them as spiritual exercises. As I am always in a state of bliss, I make no distinction between a happy and auspicious event and one that is unhappy or inauspicious. These distinctions are made by persons attached to the body-mind complex. A donation from New York Last night I received a communication from New York to the following effect: "The welfare activities carried on by Svaami, the service programmes launched by Svaami, the uniqueness of the Hospital established by Svaami, have been hailed by people all over the world. Bhaaratheeyas have not fully appreciated their value. In appreciation of the unique services rendered by Svaami, without any kind of publicity or propaganda, we wish to make our humble contribution to this cause and our offering, as the first instalment, this token remittance." The donors, who wished to remain anonymous, have sent Rs. 100 crores. Out of this amount, Rs. 50 crores are to be kept in fixed deposit, from the interest on which the recurring expenses of the Super-Speciality Hospital will be met. Rs. 25 crores are offered to the Institute of Higher Learning for the promotion of human values in education. The balance of Rs. 25 crores has been offered to the Sathya Sai Central Trust for whatever incidental expenses it may have to meet in carrying on its activities. This amount has been described as the first instalment. The donors have declared that they consider it as their good fortune to have been allowed to make this donation. This is true sacrifice. Many who make petty gifts advertise their donation in loud terms. The New York donors desired to remain anonymous. "Name is not important. Service alone matters. And even here, what Bhagavaan is doing is sacred service." This is their declaration. We do not ask for even a naya paisa from any one. What is the reason? You see here the response to our selfless service. Hence, engage yourselves in selfless service. The reward for it will come of its own accord. Do not have any doubts on this score.

Whatever you undertake to do, do it with all your heart and to your full satisfaction. That satisfaction will give you all the reward and recompense. It will confer all strength. This is the quality you have to cultivate.

Acquire this true wealth. Without goodness, all other riches are of no avail.

Lead a life of firm, unwavering faith

Embodiments of Love! Many sacred events like this are happening all over the world. The glory of Sathya Sai has spread to every part of the world. Unfortunately, Bhaaratheeyas alone appear to live under the shadow of a lamp, as it were. The entire world is enjoying the light going out from here. For this, the faith of the people outside is mainly responsible. Here, the faith comes and goes. Faith here swings like a pendulum. This is not good. You should have a steady mind.

Every one should develop this kind of faith. Only when there is faith, love will sprout.

Where there is confidence, there is love.

Where there is love, there is peace.

Where there is peace, there is truth.

Where there is truth, there is bliss.

Where there is bliss, there is God.

Hence, if there is no confidence, how can there be love? When you see some miracle, devotion arises. But, the next moment, there is a change. This is not the right kind of faith. Faith should be unaffected by tips and downs. It should not be like passing clouds. Today many lack steadiness.

People should have a rock-like faith that remains unshaken, whatever may happen. Take the example of Harishchandra. His adherence to truth remained firm, despite all the troubles to which he was subjected, including the loss of his kingdom, his wife and son. He was reduced to the position of a watchman in a burning-ghat. But he remained steadfast.

It is in this spirit that you should enter on any task. Harishchandra did not worry about the sacrifices he had to make for the sake of truth. Accept whatever the Lord gives as a benediction.

Esteem it as a gracious gift from God. Because of his firm faith, Harishchandra ultimately got back his wife, son and kingdom. Therefore, you should have a faith that is unwavering and unshakable. Lead a life of firm faith.

The holy night of Mahaashivaraathri is intended to serve as a sacred occasion for turning the mind firmly towards God. You are surrounded by Rudhras and all your happiness and sorrow are earned by them. When you bring them under your control, your life becomes secure. You will be successful in every endeavour.

Do your duty: realise God

Men are wasting their precious lives in the pursuit of fleeting and petty pleasures. Make the best use of the opportunity you have now got. That is true devotion. You alone are responsible for your condition because of the way your mind works. Do your duty, recognise the truth of your being, and you will be able to experience your divinity. You have to purify your heart to experience the Divine. You may have desires, aspirations and yearning for happiness. But there is nothing equal to the bliss of experiencing the Divine and you will secure this bliss, wherever God may be.

Life one long series of worries from birth to death.

But all worries can be overcome by the love of God.

Cultivate this love at least from now onwards.

Turn your minds towards God. Limit your worldly desires. Why waste all your life in the endless pursuit of wealth?

Svaami's Sankalpa

The communication which I received yesterday made Me ask why so much money had been sent. Svaami decided that it should be spent on projects of permanent value. Svaami's will is adamant. No one can alter it. Svaami's glory, fame and sacredness have not been achieved by publicity. They are the results of Svaami's actions. I have no concern with publicity. Action alone counts. What is achieved by publicity, will disappear through publicity.

Sai will not be affected by propaganda. The world may be affected one way or the other by propaganda. Sai will not be affected at all. Conduct is most important. All Sai institutions must conduct themselves properly. Propaganda by practice is what matters. At least in future, set an example to others by your actions and give a lead to the people. This is what I desire, nothing else.

The nation has to be improved. Render service to the country. Whatever you may do, consider it as service to Sai. Cultivate this spirit of sacrifice. When you are here, you display your spirit of sacrifice. But after you leave, you develop desires. This is not good. You must exemplify, the same spirit wherever you may be. Wherever you may go, you must have the spirit of service.

You must redeem your life through selfless seva.

True saadhana is to seek God within you Embodiments of the Divine Aathma! The whole of last night you were all immersed in the blissful vibrations in Prashaanthi Nilayam caused by the chanting of the Lord's name. You must see that the Nilayam in each of you is always filled with these divine vibrations. What is this Nilayam? It is your body, which enshrines the Aathma. There are the divine vibrations always in you. They constitute your Life-Force. The body is inert by itself. It is the divine vibrations that animate it. Both the body and the Vital Force derive their power from the energy radiating from the Aathma (the Indwelling Spirit). You are thus a composite of the body (material substance), the Life Force (vibrations) and the Aathma (Radiations). Seek God within you. This is true
saadhana.
 You are indeed full of love. Why don't you share it with others? Love will grow the more it is shared. The heart is like a perennial spring. The more you draw from it, the more it will flow with love.
 Discourse in the Puurnachandhra Auditorium on the morning of 11-3-1994.
 10. Foster love: eschew hatred EMBODIMENTS of Divine Love! Though three ornaments of a permanent nature are available for man in the shape of charity for the hand, hearing God's glory for the ears and speaking the truth for the tongue, man is engaging himself in the pursuit of all transient and useless worldly things. He should strive to achieve that by getting which everything else is achieved.
 The first step is to understand the link that connects any two individuals. It is nothing but love. It is on the basis of love that the entire society is closely knit. What is a country? It is not the land but the society that makes a country or a nation. When the nation is prosperous and progresses with healthy growth, the needs of the individuals are also fulfilled.
 The individual is dependent on society. He is born, brought up and sustained by society.
 Therefore, it is the duty of every individual to render selfless service for promoting the common well are of society.
 All are the children of Mother Earth and should follow the selfless activity of the earth, which rotates on its own axis and goes round the sun at 66,000 miles per hour. By this constant motion we get day and night and variations in the seasons without which we cannot have food crops

which sustain mankind.
 Character is more valuable than knowledge
 As children of the earth, people should learn the lesson of thyaaga (selfless activity) from Mother Earth. Without sacrifice it is difficult to sustain life itself.
 Some say knowledge is valuable. But, character is more valuable than knowledge. One may be a learned scholar, one may hold high positions of authority, one may be very wealthy or be an eminent scientist, but if one has no character all the other acquisitions are of no use at all.
 Sacrifice, love, compassion, and forbearance are the sterling human qualities that should be fostered, shedding jealousy, hatred, ego and anger, which are animal qualities. What is the use of being born as a man and leading a life of birds and beasts?
 Man should maintain equanimity in pleasure and pain, loss or gain.
 Without pain you cannot enjoy pleasure. Sorrow is verily the royal road to joy. Sufferings are the stepping stones that lead man towards virtuous conduct. One should neither be elated by pleasure not dejected by pain.
 You must understand the wonderful human life created by God. God created everything in the world and entrusted man with the responsibility to look after them.
 God allowed man to use things in the world as he wished, but on one condition. He has to suffer the consequences of his actions, good or bad.
 It is a folly to expect good results from bad deeds
 So, you have to do good deeds if you want to experience good results.
 Doing bad deeds man wants to enjoy good and beneficial results. It is a folly to expect good results from bad deeds.
 Nature is like a mirror, which reflects only the object before it. In every human being, good and bad are co-existing. One should strive only to do good deeds which alone will lead one to liberation or Moksha. Moksha is not an object that can be acquired from outside. It is a way of life itself. When you follow your inherent nature and cultivate good feelings you can attain liberation from worldly bondage.
 This year is called 'Bhava.' You should foster good Bhaava (attitudes and feelings) in this year.
 Your guna (character) depends on the food you consume. You should not be carried away by the vagaries of the mind. Such a great and powerful warrior as Arjuna told Krishna that the mind is wavering in nature and difficult to control. "It can be controlled by practise and detachment," said Krishna. The leaves in a tree moves when the wind blows. Just as the wind causes the leaves to move, the company one keeps influences a man's mind. You should flee from evil company Though inherently the heart is good, by evil company it gets polluted with such bad qualities as anger, jealousy and hatred. You should use your body, mind and intellect for the benefit of society at large and not for selfish purposes. The mind is like a mad monkey, while the body is like a water bubble which may burst at any moment. Therefore, you must follow only the Conscience. You cannot realise your Divinity as long as your mind is filled with evil thoughts.

Disregarding all bad qualities and bad thoughts, you should develop good thoughts based on unsullied love. Start the day with love, fill the day with love and end the day with love. This is the way to God. The primary requisite for cultivating love is to get rid of doubts and disbelief
and develop confidence.
Man has to go back to his source, that is God Where there is confidence there is love; where there is love, there is peace; where there is peace, there is bliss; where there is bliss, there is God. It is only because you are confident that she is your mother, you have her. If you doubt this, there is no scope for such love. Confidence is the basis for love and steadiness of mind. But, what we find everywhere today is mental restlessness.
Most of you have come here from far off places, seeking mental peace.
After coming here, you indulge in mixing with evil people, which makes you lose even the li. trio peace you had. You should question yourselves as to the purpose for which you have come here.
If you want to lead a meaningful life, you must know wherefrom you have come and the destination or goal which you want to reach. Right from the time of birth you are asking the question, Koham (Who am I?). One's entire life is spent without getting an answer for this question. When you say "This is my mind, my body," you are different form your mind, body and senses. You are the master. The body, mind and senses are just instruments. The answer to the question Koham comes from within as you are breathing 21,600 times every day. As you inhale, you make the Sound So and when you exhale, you utter the sound Ham. Together, Soham means, "He is me." This is the great truth proclaimed by the Vedhas: "Thath thvam asi"
(You are that).

You may study the process of water from the ocean going up as vapour through the sun's energy, forming clouds which come down as rain. The rain water is conveyed by rivers back to the ocean after undergoing several changes in the process. The intellect is the Sun. Truth is the cloud, drops of love are the rains. These flow in the river of Bliss which merges in the ocean of God. Just as water from the ocean comes back to the ocean after going through different stages of transformation, man has to go back to his source, that is God.
The eternal truth proclaimed by Upanishaths
If a piece of charcoal is kept apart from fire, it cannot burn. Both must be brought close together and you must use a fan to make the charcoal catch fire. Love is the fan which will make you glow with divine effulgence. This is the truth proclaimed by the Upanishaths, which say: "You are God." You think you are only the body: The body is inert without the soul which is the Life Force.
You need not go anywhere searching for God. Divinity is within you.
Just as there are many limbs in the body which are activated by one heart inside, the same God is the Life-force for all beings. The entire Universe is a reflection of the Supreme Being. Your Bhaava (attitude) is the cause of your suffering or happiness. With whatever feeling you see an object, the same is reflected back. Dhrishti (vision) determines your view of Shrishti (Creation). When you see the world through coloured glasses, you will see everything in the colour of the glasses you are wearing. Whatever happens, you should take it as a gift of God. Love is God. Live in Love. This is the proper way of worshipping God. All forms of worship and penance are only for control of mind. They will not give you the realisation of God. God is within you, around you, beside you.
He is the only true friend. You develop friendship with worldly people, who may desert you when you are bereft of your wealth, power or status. God alone will be with you always.
Desire is an unnecessary burden in life's journey
As the Geetha declares, "Adhveshtaa Sarva bhuuthaanaam" (the devotee dear to the Lord is one who does not hate any being). You should not harbour hatred towards any one but keep away from bad company. You should not cultivate relationship with evil persons as this will spoil the purity of your mind. The mind is the cause of bondage or liberation.
You turn it toward God and cultivate detachment. If you turn towards the world you develop attachment. Desire is an unnecessary burden in your life's journey. You must reduce your desires to a minimum, as it may not be possible to give up desire totally.

If you analyse the difference between God and man you will find that life plus desire is man and life minus desire is God. Confine your desires to primary necessities for sustaining life such as food, clothing and shelter. When you have excessive desire you become restless. Whatever the nature of your work, if you dedicate it as an offering to God, you will have no worry at all. This is real saadhana.

Even when you are engaged in your daily chores, you can convert them into worship of God.

While you are sweeping the floor, you can deem it as clearing your heart of all impurities. All work should be done with a pure heart filled with devotion, just as cooking must be done in a clean vessel. Whatever good you may do without a genuine feeling of love is of no use. It is love in a pure heart that transforms work into worship.

Get rid of animal qualities of jealousy and hatred?

I would advise all, and especially the overseas devotees who have come here from far off countries, to subject themselves to a process of self-enquiry. Is it right to call yourself a man? It is only a half-truth. You should be able to assert: "I am a man. I am not an animal." You will have to get rid of the animal qualities of ego, jealousy and hatred and develop human qualities of love, truth, sacrifice and happiness. Consider pain and pleasure as passing clouds. Happiness can be attained only by union with God. Worldly pleasure is transient.

By nourishing good feelings in the heart you can transform yourself from bad to good. This is called Samskaara. It is akin to converting paddy into rice to make the grain fit for preparing food.

There may be many paths for the same goal. You get confused because many preachers say many different things. You must choose one path, one road. God is one and he can be realised by love. Fill your hearts with love and distribute the love to others considering that all are sparks of the Divine.

You must feel the Divine within you and develop divine qualities. Then only you can shine as a true human being. You should cultivate harmony in thought, word and deed which is the hallmark of a human being. Prema (Love) is the only weapon by which you can attain Godliness and make your life purposeful. God is like gold, the possession of which will enable you to make any jewel you want. Through unblemished love alone you can achieve the grace of God and enjoy blissful peace.

Surrender to God who knows how to shape you

People coming to Me frequently tell Me: "I want bliss," "I want peace," "I want liberation."

When you want a jewel to be made out of the gold that you hand over to a goldsmith, he will have to melt it in a crucible, hammer it, cut it and weld the pieces to make the required ornament.

By these processes only it can be made into a beautiful chain.

Similarly, you must hand over your mind to God and allow God to do what is necessary. But, now-a-days, the devotees are laying down conditions to God while seeking His Grace! You must surrender to God and submit to His Will. God knows how to shape you.

If you want to send a book by parcel, you have to pack k properly. In order to make use of the book you have to remove the packing. God has given you peace with a packing. When you remove the packing of 'I' and 'want', you get peace. You have to shed your ego and desire in order to enjoy peace which is inherent in you. When a sculptor wants to make a wooden statue of Krishna, he chisels the wood to get the shape of the statue. So also you have to shed your evil thoughts and feelings and surrender to God unconditionally without any reservation whatsoever.

To overcome the bad influences of the thanu, mana and dhana (body, mind and wealth) the scriptures prescribe cultivation of sathsanga. What is sathsanga? It is generally believed that it refers to the company of good people. But this is not correct. Sath means Truth, which is Aathma or God. So sathsanga means the company of God and not of people. Divinity will manifest within you if you follow any one of the nine types of devotion. In a nutshell, the precepts to be followed are; See no evil: see only good. Hear no evil: hear only good. Speak no evil: speak only good. Think no evil: think only good. Do no evil: do only good. This is the way to God.

Do not lend your ears to evil talk

If any one starts talking ill of others, go away from that place without lending your ears to such evil talk. In the Raamaayana, Kaikeyi was influenced by the words of her servant Manthara who instigated her to stop the crowning of Raama and arrange for his banishment as she had some grouse against Raama. Because Kaikeyi lent her cars to the evil counsel of Manthara, she manoeuvred to send Raama to the forest. Thus both these women earned a bad name for themselves for all time. Among men, you have the example of Dhuryodhana in the Mahaabhaaratha who always bore ill-will towards the Paandavas and nourished always bad thoughts leading to evil designs. Similarly, Keechaka looked at Dhraupadhi with evil eyes and was killed by Bheema. Raavana did evil deeds. Manthara committed the sin of speaking ill of Raama. Kaikeyi lent her ears to evil talk, Keechaka committed the sin of casting evil looks on Dhraupadhi. Dhuryodhana nurtured bad feelings and Raavana indulged in bad deeds. These are examples to prove how the acts of speaking evil, listening to evil words, thinking evil and doing evil deeds cause one's downfall. Spiritual saadhana consists in speaking good, thinking good, seeing good, hearing good and doing good. Excessive talking must also be avoided as it is waste of energy. When one gets weak due to wastage of energy, he is prone to get angry and develop hatred. You must, therefore, use the God-given energy for good purposes. Energy is a divine gift. By curtailing unnecessary talk and keeping silent, you can conserve energy. "Talk less and work more" is the golden rule to be adopted. Keep close connection with God alone. Many foreigners come here and involve themselves in unnecessary relationships with people. Some person says "I have come alone," when he first meets Me. After some time he brings a lady with him and says, "She is my wife." Why should you cultivate such attachments and relationships when you have come here for spiritual pursuits? All these relationships are temporal. You must cut off these connections and establish connection only with the permanent and eternal entity; the Supreme Lord. God is omnipresent. He was there before your birth and He will continue to be there after your death too. Therefore you should make efforts to keep close connection with God alone. Do your duty with a feeling of dedication, leaving the results in the hands of the Divine. Then you can always be happy. Your behaviour and character are very important and these should be reflected in your adherence to discipline and good manners. To-day, the nation is in turmoil due to lack of discipline. You should follow the maxim: "Help ever-Hurt never." People don't understand My ideal of perfection, which consists of purity, patience and perseverance. Patience means being in a state of Shaanthi (Peace). I am always happy and peaceful. Even when some people wish me "Happy birthday" I tell them that I am always happy and the wishes should be addressed to those who are not happy. Another feature of patience is not being elated by praise or depressed by calumny. I am not affected by pleasure or pain. It is the perfect state of Samaadhi (Sama + dhi), which means equanimity in pleasure and pain. Perseverance is most essential. Perseverance is most essential for the accomplishment of objective. By perseverance Nara can become Naaraayana, that is man can become Divine. People lacking this quality cannot achieve anything. Their efforts are like trying to retain water in a pot with several holes. If you direct all your actions towards God, you will become one with God. This should be done on the basis of Prema (love). A man living without love is as good as dead. You are having love towards your father, mother, wife, children and others. There is nothing wrong in this. But you must see God in every one of them. This is the essence of the well-known prayer to God: Thvameva maathaacha Pithaa thvameva Thvameva bandhuscha Sakhaa thvameva Thvameva Vidhya dhraavinam thvameva Thvameva Sarvam mama dheva dheva. This prayer addressed to the Supreme Being means- "You are the father, mother, friend, and relative. You are knowledge and wealth. You are everything. Oh my Lord!" We should see God in every being. The whole Universe is a manifestation 'of Brahman. As a human being, you have come from Naaraayana. You are divine but you are not realising it. When you do namaskaaram with folded hands in obeisance, it means that you are offering your five Karmendhriyas (organs of action) and five Inaanendhriyas (organs of perception) to the Divine. Offering namaskaaram itself emphasises unity. If you have unity and purity, divinity will blossom there. But you have only enmity and community now. You have to practise speaking sweetly and softly and avoid unnecessary connections and relationships with all and sundry. The easiest Saadhana is to reflect on God with love that is expanding and embracing one and all. It is the only way to realise the Divine.

Discourse at Kodaikanal on 11-4-1994, Thelugu New Year's day. Whatever I do it is for you, not for Me. For what is it that can be called Mine? Only you.

BABA

11. Time is God : make best use of it

EMBODIMENTS of Love! Nature is the best teacher for mankind to learn, the noble and sacred lesson of selfless sacrifice. Look at the trees which yield fruits for the enjoyment of others, without any trace of selfishness. The rivers flow for the benefit of others, providing water for quenching their thirst and helping them in many ways. Cows give delicious milk to the people without even a trace of selfishness. Similarly, a good person is one who strives ceaselessly to render help to his fellow beings.

Ugaadhi or New Year day is a festival that teaches lessons in selfless service. It is not intended for feasting. It is sacred day when wholesome wisdom should dawn and enlightenment should blossom in the hearts of people.

There are four yugas (aeons), namely, Kritha Yuga, Thretha. Yuga, Dhvaapara Yuga and Kali

Yuga. The Kritha Yuga commenced in the month of Vaishakha. Thretha Yuga in the month of Karthika, Dhvaapara Yuga in the month of Maargashirsha and Kali Yuga in the month of Chaithra. As the present Kali age started in the month of Chaithra, the first day of the Chaithra month is called Yugaadhi. The aeons are only measurement of time. Time is God. God is called Kaala-svaruupa (the very embodiment of Time). Hence, we must respect Time and spend it in useful pursuits. Wasting of time is ungodly

Every created thing is born of Time

This world is termed as Jagam. Ja means taking janmam (birth) and gain stands for going.

Jagam means that the world is a place where beings are born and die. In this changing world,

God is the changeless entity. God is all-pervasive and can be experienced anywhere. He is worshipped as Kaala kaalaaya namah, Kaala svaruupaaya namah and so on. Without Time, there is no world. Without the world there is no creation, without creation there is nothing. Every created thing is born of Time.

This New Year Day proclaims the truth that God is the Master of Time. Unfortunately, man fails to understand the power of God. He wastes three quarters of his time in unworthy earthly pursuits. Spiritual pursuit is the right way of making use of time. It calls for numbing good feelings and doing good deeds without selfish motive, extending love and compassion towards - all beings. This is real saadhana. Sa means Aathma and dhana means wealth. By utilising your time in spiritual pursuits, you can enjoy spiritual wealth. But, man wastes all his time in unholy thoughts and evil deeds without understanding the divinity within him. One should understand the value of time, each moment of which vanishes faster than lighting.

If you want to sanctify your hard-earned human birth have to cultivate divine thoughts.

Behave in a manner befitting your status

This is the age of Kali, which is often described as Kalaha Yuga (the age of discord), in which there will be misunderstanding and quarrels between husband and wife, father and son, preceptor and disciple. Giving up the quarrelsome attitude, people must cultivate love and compassion and shine as embodiments of love which they really are. The heart is termed as Hridhaya, in which dhaya (compassion) is in-built. Only when one has dhaya towards others, can he be deemed fit to be called a human being.

We find today people indulging in creel deeds, devoid of even a trace of compassion, and behaving worse than birds and beasts. Even trees and rivers help mankind selflessly. But humans are not behaving in a manner befitting their status as superior beings. They do not have the attitude of helping one another.' Trees are helpful even when they become dead and dry, serving as firewood. Trees are the best example of Thyaaga bhaava (the attitude of Sacrifice). They are the greatest teachers of the quality of sacrifice. But, human beings, who get all the benefit from trees, are not having the same spirit of sacrifice. They are attached to their bodies and spend their energy and time to provide comforts for the body How long will the body last? It is a bundle of diseases, a repository of filth and foul excreta. It cannot help one to cross the ocean of samsaara

(worldly life). It is subject to changes such as childhood, adolescence, youth, adulthood, old age and finally death. One does not know when, where and how death will occur. M:m neglects svadharma (his rightful duty) and relies on this transient body, behaving like a beast. He does not make any effort to realise that in the changing body there is the changeless and eternal Aathma (Spirit). This Divinity is the same, in all beings and changeless through all the stages of life.

Man is in quest of happiness that eludes him

Everyone wants to achieve happiness and makes all sorts of efforts for this purpose without knowing where to find it. He thinks he can get happiness when he gets a job to earn his livelihood and pursues his studies only with this end in view. After he gets a job, he is still not happy. He wants to get married. He marries and sets up a family. Even then there is no happiness. He wants progeny. He gets a child. Still he is not happy. He wants promotion so that he can earn more to maintain his family: He gets it. Even then he is not happy. And he goes on like that in quest of happiness that eludes him. Happiness is not there in all these attainments or possessions. It is only in the heart within. He is himself the embodiment of happiness. Yet, without realising this, he goes on seeking happiness elsewhere.

"Nithyaanandham paramasukhadham." Permanent bliss is only within and once you realise that you are the blissful Aathma and not the transient body, you will always be happy Some people raise the question, "Where is God?" God cannot be seen outside. You must direct your vision inside. Then you will realise that the entire world is a reflection of the Aathma within you.

"Puurnamadhah Puurnamidham

Puurnaath Puurnamudhachyathe

Puurnasya Puurnamaadhaaya

Puurnameva avashishyathe."

'That' (Brahman) is Whole. 'This' (creation) is also Whole. From 'that' Whole 'this' Whole has emerged. Even though 'this' Whole has come out of 'that' Whole, yet 'that' Whole remains WHOLE only.

What does this mean? From whatever source a thing is born, it retains the quality of the source in full. For example, this tumbler is made of silver. It retains the quality of silver fully. This tumbler is made of stainless steel and it retains the quality of stainless steel in full. A pot is made of clay and it retains the quality of clay Similarly, man has come out of God and, therefore, he has the divine quality in him. God is Paripuurna Svaruupa (Total personality). You should engage yourself in wholesome divine pursuits and fulfill the purpose of this valuable human life. You should thus reflect your divinity in the human form.

The lesson taught by Ugaadhi

Ugaadhi teaches man the lesson that he should perfect himself as an embodiment of divinity.

You should not waste time, because a moment gone, will not come back. You are only looking after the needs of the body; eager to make it last longer. But you forget that Time is God. There is nothing that can supercede this. So the Saadhana you should do is to utilise your time in doing good deeds for the benefit of the society at large and not to satisfy your self-interest. Don't waste your energy in unnecessary talk or gossip. God has endowed man with all the organs of perception and action, not for selfish activities, but to do godly deeds and help others. In the Purusha Shuktha it is declared that "Braahmanasya Mukhamaaseeth" (Brahmana came out of the face of Cosmic. Purusha). The reason for this is that all the organs of perception which help man to acquire knowledge, namely, ears, nose and tongue are in the face. Braahmana does not mean one that is born in the Braahmana community. It refers to one who has knowledge of Brahman-----"Brahmajnaani Braahmanah."

True meaning of real saadhana

Since the organs of perception are in the face, Braahmana is described as "The face of the Supreme Lord." Through these organs you can see, hear and speak.

You must see no evil but see only good.

You must hear no evil, but hear only good.

You must speak no evil, but speak only good.

You must do no evil, but do only good.

This is real saadhana. You need not do japa, dhyaana and thapas. Your monkey mind wanders elsewhere when you sit in meditation. Then it becomes only a waste of precious time. Do your duty as dedication to the Divine. You can thereby transform work into worship.

For saadhana, the nine-fold path of devotion has been prescribed for humanity: Shravanam

(hearing God's glory), Keerthanam (singing His Glory), Vishnunaamasmaranam (remembering the Lord's name constantly), Paadhasevanam (serving the Lotus Feet of the Lord), Archanam

(offering worship), Vandhanam (prostrating), Dhaasyam (doing service as a servant to the Lord), Sneham (worshipping as a friend), Aathma-nivedhanam (total Self-surrender). You must listen to the glory of God being chanted, and do service to humanity, chanting His name and singing His glory. You should have the attitude that all are embodiments of God, that the whole Universe is a manifestation of God. In Vandhanam you should dedicate all the ten organs of perception and action as an offering to God. This is symbolised by bringing both your palms together and offering namaskaaram. All the ten fingers represent the ten Indhriyas (sense organs). Namaskaaram also implies that "nothing is mine." The limbs are intended for service to others only. Dhaasyam means that you should render service to humanity considering the persons whom you serve as masters. Sneham means friendship. It is not the type of friendship that you generally cultivate by saying "hello." You must keep the heart hollow so that it will be filled only by Divine thoughts. All human relationships are based on the body, while the relationship with God is from heart to heart. It alone is permanent and unchanging. The entire creation came from the One Spirituality means seeking to realise the oneness of all beings. There is only One. All came out of this One only. The entire creation itself came from the One. This truth is proclaimed in all religions. For instance, the name of Yesu (Jesus) itself spells out this truth. Ye means one, su means good. There is only one good. In the term Allah, A stands for Aathma, la for layam. Invoking Allah signifies merging in the Aathma which is the One God. Names and forms are momentary and transient. Aathma (Divine Self) is permanent and changeless. In Vedhaantha it is called Sath-Chith-Aanandha. Sath is changeless while Chith is subject to change. To give an example, sugar is changeless and retains its sweetness in whichever way it may be used, while water is subject to change. If the two are Combined, you get syrup, which is comparable to Aanandha. Thus the combination of the changeless and changing entitles gives happiness or Aanandha. (Bhagavaan sang a Meera Bhajan and explained how Meera in this song, directs her mind towards Krishna and appeals to him to enter her heart and experience-her pure love). It is only by fostering love you can win the grace of God. The Prema Rasa (sweet juice of love) will be drained away if you have holes in your heart (spiritual heart) in the form of bad feelings and evil thoughts. If you plug these holes by curbing the evil qualities, the juice of love will be retained to some extent. Service to the Lord brings lasting happiness. You should avoid following the body or the mind and follow only the Conscience. The purpose of life is to help others and not to indulge in sensuous pleasures. From dawn to dusk, you are engaged in acts for the sake of maintaining your bodily comforts. What have you achieved by this? Only mental unrest and physical weariness or illness. Your aim must be to achieve Divinity. Thyaagaraaja questions his own mind in a song whether wealth or service to the Lord will give sukham (comfort) and comes to the conclusion that service to the Lord brings lasting happiness. Service involves thyaaga (sacrifice). You should sacrifice that which you consider very dear to you. Sacrifice brings about real communion with the Divine while carnal pleasure results only in disease. Control of the mind alone will lead to union with the Divine. This day is celebrated as Yugaadhi as Kali Yuga started on the first day of Chaithra. It represents both Sukham and Shubham (comfort and auspiciousness). Power or wealth cannot confer both. You must use the time well for the benefit of all. As you think, talk and act, so will be the results. Think of God and do good deeds by way of service to society, chanting the name of God. Embodiments of Love! Love is God. Start the day with love. Fill the day with love and end the day with love. Live in love. There is no need to fear. It is only a mental creation. Foster love. Then only Divinity can be realised. Discourse on Thamil New Year Day, 14-4-1994, at Kodaikanal. When the sun rises, all the buds of lotus in the lake will not open out in full bloom. Only those which are full grown can blossom; so the rest have to bide their time and grow. BABA 12. Shri Raama : the ideal for humanity Sweeter than sugareane juice, Sweeter than honey, Sweeter than nectar itself is the name of Raama. As you chant the name you taste the nectarine Sweetness in abundance. EMBODIMENTS of the Divine Self! The sage Vaalmeeki, who was pure, holy and utterly selfless, wrote the Raamaayana in hundred crores of stanzas for the redemption of mankind. But the Dhevas and Rishis, realising the supreme greatness of the Raamaayana, sought from Vaalmeeki a share in his great work. Responding to their appeal, Vaalmeeki distributed the shlokas (verses) among the denizens of the three worlds. After the distribution of the slokas in equal shares among the three one shloka of 32 syllables remained. After distributing in equal measure 30 of them, two syllables remained.

These two syllables were the letters RAA-MA, which he gave to the dwellers of the three worlds.

The same two syllables are found in the names of Krishna, Hari, Jesus, Allah and Saayee. Thus Vaalmeeki offered to the residents of all the three worlds the two-syllable name of the Lord equally.

Raama, the supreme exemplar of many roles in life

Raama is closest to mankind. Wherever they may be, to whatever land or clime they may belong, people everywhere have to undersold the Raama principle. Raama was an ideal son. Every family requires an ideal son. On the eve of the coronation he chose to go to the forest as an exile in accordance with the command of his royal father. In carrying out the injunctions of the father, Raama stands out as the supreme exemplar.

Raama, moreover, was an ideal brother. He exemplified harmony and love among brothers. He treated his brothers as his own life-breath and showered his love equally on all of them. Thus Raama is an example of fraternal love for every family.

Raama was an ideal husband. Raama's adherence to the principle of monogamy has to be properly understood. Vaalmeeki understood it very well. One word, one arrow, one wife was the rule for Raama. What is the reason? In the body there are many organs. But all of them are animated, nourished and sustained by the heart alone. In the same manner the wife, for the husband is only one and the husband for the wife is only one. To demonstrate to the world this ideal of monogamy, Raama set the example.

Raama was an ideal friend and ideal enemy

Raama was an ideal friend. There cannot be a greater friend than Raama. There are in the world fair-weather friends who display their friendship when one is wealthy or wielding power. But if wealth and position are gone, not a single friend will show his face.

Raama, however, was not such a friend. He was loving, considerate and affectionate equally in weal and woe, in times of joy or sorrow. Guha was an ordinary boatman. Raama hailed him as his fourth brother and showered his love on Guha. Raama treated in the same friendly spirit everyone who came to him for any help or to find an asylum. He thus stood out to the world as an ideal friend.

Raama was not only an ideal friend; he was also an ideal enemy. In the world, it is common to see men resorting to all kinds of deceitful devices to foil their enemies. But Raama never stooped to such unworthy practices. Raama adhered to the noble heroic path even in dealing with his enemies.

For example, when Raama was engaged in battle with Raavana, Raavana could not stand up to the arrows of Raama. All the weapons of Raavana were destroyed. Raama noticed that Raavana was tired and weaponless. In such a situation it was not proper to kill the enemy. There is no heroism, in killing a weak or powerless man. The enemy should be destroyed when he is strong and powerful. Recognizing the plight of Raavana, Raama laid down his arms and told Raavana,

"O Raavana! you are tired and without weapons. You are not in a fit condition to carry on the fight. Go home, take rest and return to battle tomorrow. We shall resume the fight tomorrow."

By displaying this kind of magnanimity towards his enemy; Raama demonstrated that he was an ideal enemy.

Raama was, first of all, an ideal son. In any country, anywhere in the world, every family needs an ideal son. Hence Raama's story does not have a message for the Bhaaratheeyas alone. It has a lesson for all countries and for all mankind.

The significance of Raama's example of an ideal brother should be realised. Today brothers fight among themselves, go right upto the Supreme Court and even lose their lives in their bitter quarrels. Out of love for petty, money and possessions, today people are prepared to sacrifice all fraternal feelings. Raama's way was different. He regarded his brothers as part of his own being and would not cause the slightest pain to them. Thereby he took his brothers to the supreme state.

Today brothers take their litigation to the Supreme Court! This is not right at all.

Raama, the ideal husband

Raama was an ideal husband. When Seetha was abducted, Raama felt the loss as if he had lost half his body. He looked upon his wife as ardhaangi, one half of himself. When Raama appeared grief-stricken over the absence of Seetha he wanted to merely show to the world what the loss of a wife means. He never thought of a second wife. Raama felt, "it is my duty to protect my wife."

Every husband in the world should have a similar conviction.

Today in the world, friends turn into enemies overnight. This is not right at all. Friendship should be enduring and last for all time. Normally it lasts as long as one has wealth and strength. But God's friendship is not like that. God is always with you, in you, behind you, around you. This is the kind of friendship that every man should experience.

Let love rule the world

Hanumaan was a servant. He exemplified the ideal of a servant.

Raama embraced Hanumaan and said- "Dear friend, Hanumaan! You in your physical form belong to a different species. You are a monkey and I am a man. But the love principle is one and the same in both of us." Caste and creed may vary. But the love principle is one. In all beings, in all countries, in all individuals love animates every one. Today the reign of this love principle has to be established all over the world. God is the Indweller in the heart. The heart is full of love. That love must be shared with others. It is only when the love is shared that the old saying about equal-mindedness in joy and sorrow, in gain and loss, will be realised.

Here is an illustration of this truth- Many people in Ayodhya knew that Raama was leaving for the forest. One aged and poor Brahmana exclaimed: "I hear Raama is going to the forest for fourteen years. I do not know whether I will live so long." Feeling thus, the old Brahmana, Thrijata by name, came all the way on foot to have a last glimpse of Raama. Eyes are given to man not to look at the world but to see God. Hence, the power of sight should be dedicated to God. With that aim, the old man, after enduring many hardships, came to Raama. What was Raama doing at that moment? The one who was to be crowned at one moment was getting ready to go on exile to the forest that very moment. Will any human being be able to bear such a reversal of fortune with equal-mindedness? Will he be able to look upon both in the same manner? Anyone other than Raama would be plunged in grief. But Raama (before leaving for the forest) was engaged in giving away to the poor all his jewels and possessions. What should have been a moment of distress was turned by Raama into an occasion for joy in distributing all to the people. Nothing is lasting in human life. No one can tell when life will come to an end, where, in what circumstances. Life may end in childhood, adolescence, middle age or old age. Death is certain. Hence man must learn to give up attachment to possessions.

Raama and the old Brahmana

Raama was giving away all his things. When the old Brahmana approached him, he was distributing his cows and furniture. When Thrijata saw this he exclaimed: "What an embodiment of sacrifice is the Lord! He is truly immortal, because of his acting up to the Vedhic dictum that immortality can be achieved only through sacrifice and not through good deeds, progeny or wealth. He is the embodiment of bliss. He is the very form of Dharma." Looking at Raama, he exclaimed- "Raama! You are indeed the embodiment of Dharma!"

Dharma (Righteousness) is the life-breath of everybody. For this Dharma, sacrifice is one element. For Dharma and Thyaaga (sacrifice), Prema (Love) is the basis. Hence Dharma, Thyaaga and Prema are essential for every human being. They are the three forces which activate the body, the mind and the Aathma (Divine Self).

Seeing the aged Brahmana Raama beckoned to him to come near him. He asked him: "O noble Brahmana! What for have you come?" The old man replied- "Svaami! I am advanced in years. I learnt that you are going to the forest for fourteen years. I do not know whether I may live that long. I wish to gaze your splendrous face for once, experience your love for at least a brief moment, touch your sacred feet, and redeem my life." Raama asked him: "Have you no other desire?" "I do not have any other desire. I have difficulty in living. But I am reconciled to what I deserve according to my Karma. I am not concerned about it. I am only keen to have a vision of you, to speak to you and touch you."

Three problems that haunt a man

Then Raama asked him what the benefit was from these three.

"Dharshanam paapa naashanam"

(vision of the Lord destroys all sins). "Sparshanam karma vimochanam" (touching the feet of the Lord frees one from the bondage of Karma). "Sambhaashanam sankata naashanam"

(conversing with the Lord dispels all distress). The old man said:

"Svaami! Man is haunted by three problems - sin, consequences of his deeds and sorrow. To get rid of these things, I need a vision of you, contact with your feet and conversation with you."

Raama was supremely pleased with the Brahmana's words. He drew him close to himself, embraced him and asked him: "Does this give you joy?" Shedding copious tears, the old man said- "I do not know what is heaven. I have no idea what is Kailaash or Vaikuntha. But in your embrace I have experienced all these. This is my heaven. Give me.

some alms. I shall return to.

my place." Raama said- "Child! When you have offered me your love,

I must offer my love to you in return. That is the way of love--give and take. As I have received your love, you must accept something from me".
The old man carried a stick in his hand. Raama said "Child! Through my touch, you have received considerable strength. Your old age has disappeared. Cast your stick as far as your strength will permit. All the wealth and the cows in the area covered by your throw will be yours.
Raama's touch had endowed the old Brahmana with immense strength. He felt that he should act upto Raama's command. "My life will be meaningless otherwise," he thought, "Although I have no desire, I shall obey Raama's command." With this feeling, he hurled the stick with all his might. Thanks to the power of Raama, the stick traversed the banks of the Sarayu and returned to where Raama stood. Several mansions, buildings and cattle were within the area which came to the Brahmana as Raama's gift.
Raama's supreme quality is sacrifice
The Brahmana said to Raama: "O Lord! When I came solely to have a vision of you, why are you Burdening me with so many possessions?" Raama replied, "O noble Brahmana! This is the fruit of your good deeds in your previous life, this is not the reward earned in the present life.
Imagine how many came to see me from afar while I was preparing to leave for the forest? It is your wish which stirred my love. But for the laws relating to the governance of a kingdom, I would have given this entire kingdom to you. My love for you is my greatest gift."
So saying, Raama gave the land to the Brahmana. Then the Brahmana said: "This is a supreme example to all the people. Even at the moment when He was leaving for the forest and the whole of Ayodhya was plunged in grief, Raama displayed His love by giving away all His. possessions.
His supreme quality is sacrifice!"
Raama's entire life was filled with ideals of every kind Thus, the Raama principle teaches us the supremacy of the qualities of charity and sacrifice. The Raama principle does not embody just one or two great qualities.
Raama's entire life was filled with ideals of every kind.
To convey the great lessons of Raama's life-story to mankind, the divine incarnates from time to time and from age to age. When does the Lord incarnate? The answer is given in the Geetha: "To protect the good, to punish the wicked and establish Dharma, the Lord incarnates from aeon to aeon." When the pure, the saintly, the Godly and the good are oppressed, the Lord incarnates to protect them and to punish the wicked. To relieve their suffering and to confer bliss on humanity, the Lord makes his descent on earth. When wickedness grows and the forces of evil rear their heads, the Lord comes down to put them down and establish righteousness among mankind.

Today falsehood, injustice and wickedness are rampant in the world.
Humanness has been reduced to dust. Behind the human form, there are no human qualities. Human values have been given the go-by. Love does not prevail between man and man. If love is lost, what remains?
Love is life. A man without love is a living corpse.
Therefore cultivate love. Share it. Live in love. This is the need of the Kali age. There is another episode in the Raamaayana, which indicates what love the people of Ayodhya and Mithila bore to Raama and Seetha. The people of Ayodhya set out in their thousands to witness the wedding of Raama and Seetha in Mithila. The whole of Mithila was rejoicing over the auspicious occasion. Women were summoning all women and children to witness the sacred wedding. They were telling the other ladies: "Sisters! What a unique opportunity to witness the glorious wedding of Raama and Seetha!"
Symbolic meaning of wedding of Raama and Seetha
The wedding of Raama and Seetha is not a wedding of one young man and one young woman.
This wedding is a union of Prakrithi (Cosmos) with the Purusha (Supreme Lord). An old lady sang a song calling upon all women to join the company of people going for the wedding. She described the decorations in Mithila, the divine beauty of Raama and Seetha, the splendid scene in the palace and depicted the memorable scenes they would witness at the wedding. (Svaami sang the song in his own mellifluous voice with such verve and charm that the entire wedding scene seemed to appear in all its splendour before the gathering). A similar appeal went forth from the men's side to all men, describing the wedding as an occasion that would eradicate all the beholders of their sins. "Come, all ye for the glorious wedding of Kaushalya's son" was the refrain of the song.
The whole world seemed to rejoice at the wedding of Kaama and Seetha, because it had its cosmic significance. It represented the union of Prakrithi (Seetha) with Purusha, the Super

Absolute. Every being in the cosmos, whatever may be the gender, in external form, is essentially feminine. Prakrithi (Nature) is feminine. She represents one half of the Lord-- Ardhaangi. The Paramaathma (the Supreme Overself) is the Purusha (the Supreme Godhead).

Together, Prakrithi and Purusha represent the concept of, Ardha naareeshvara--the Divine conceived as half-male and half female. This union of male and female is found in every human being. Every one should understand this aspect of the Raamaayana story.

Raamaayana should not be considered as-a sacred epic for Bhaaratheeyas alone. The term Raama means "One who delights the heart" "Ramayathi ithi Raamah." Whomsoever you may worship it is the one Divine who delights the heart. There is only one God and one Goal.

God is one

When you consider mankind as one species, God is only one, by whatever name you may describe Him, as Allah, Jesus, Raama, Krishna or Buddha. The Bhaaratheeyas hold to the belief that God is one, though the wise may call him, by different names. All religious scriptures and godly men have in all ages worshipped God as one. Therefore, no one should have feelings of differences or even entertain ill-will towards others, Cultivate the feeling of fatherhood of God and brotherhood of Man. Bear no ill-will towards anyone. Help ever; hurt never.

Raama showered his love on everyone. Love is the most important factor in life. Love is God.

Live in love.

Discourse on 20-4-1994 at Kodaikanal.

13. Sacred role of mothers

EMBODIMENTS of Divine Love! All that you see, hear, think and do are due to the power of Brahman (the Absolute). The feeling that you are the doer and the possessor is the source of all troubles. It is only when man realises that everything is permeated by the Divine that he will be able to experience the Divine bliss. The phenomenal world enables man to participate in mundane activities related to the physical, the social and the natural. But human life should not be confined to these alone. The sensory life is based on the inner life. Life and the world are like two sides. The world is external and life is internal. The phenomenal universe is based on the inner subtle entity.

The phenomenal cosmos is a vast, boundless mansion. But every mansion has to stand on an appropriate foundation. Without a strong foundation, the mansion will collapse. For the vast physical, gross and mighty mansion of the world, the subtle, infinite and powerful mind is the foundation. Consequently, man can be powerful only to the extent his mind is powerful. Society benefits equally from the powers of man's mind. Not is that all. The entire human race benefits thereby. There is thus the interdependence of man, society and humanity for their security.

Without the mind, one ceases to be a man

When the mind is good, man can divinise himself. Only the one endowed with a mind can be called a man. Without the mind, one ceases to be a man. It is only when the subtle, invisible, inner base of the mind is in a proper condition that a being that has donned the human form can attain his true state.

In the world to-day various changes are taking place. There is no shortage of wealth and property. Not is there any dearth of amenities for comfortable living. There is no lack of facilities for entertainment or recreation. Nevertheless, modern man is oppressed by frustration, depression and disappointment. What is the reason? It is the failure to use the divine power of the mind properly that accounts for the frustration and the lack of peace of man to-day. The differences between man and man are growing continuously. These differences lead to disastrous conflicts.

Hence, the first requisite is to strive for the proper use of the powers of the mind. The mind of man today is that of an intoxicated person because his mind is giving free rein to the senses.

The world today is filled with two kinds of intoxication. One is intoxication arising from wealth.

The other is the intoxication of power. These two are not different from each other. They are like the two parts of a seed. Through wealth one secures positions of power and power is used to acquire wealth. Man's life today is based on these two- power and pelf. Man's conceit grows beyond bounds even when he has only one of these two. The stare of those who have both needs no description. Forgetting humanness, cherishing animal qualities, man develops a demonic nature. Man today makes no efforts to realise the greatness and power of the mind. Instead, he is submerged in worldly activities and wastes his life.

Education should serve to refine man's nature Man's heart, which ought to be filled with compassion that is natural to it, is today full of cruelty and bitterness. Education, which should serve to refine man's nature and make him a hero, is failing in its purpose because in his conduct man is a zero. An education which does not develop humanness is an utter waste. The educational system should ensure that along with knowledge right conduct is also developed. Raavana and Dhuryodhana achieved unrivalled eminence in scholarship. But it was of no avail because of their polluted minds. They ceased to be human.
 True education should produce a blossoming of human qualities. It should not be merely for earning a living, but should result in a ripening of the heart, filling it with love.
 What happiness can one achieve if all his education makes him concerned Only about filling his stomach and makes him forget the Supreme Lord?
 The goal of human life should be, to strive for that which will give enduring happiness and not transient pleasures. The yearning for this sacred goal should be developed while one is still, young and has a pure, untainted, innocent mind. Of what use is all your book knowledge if you have not learnt to lift your hands in prayer to God? You salute persons of no account for selfish reasons.
 What is in a name given to the physical body?
 People should cultivate faith in the Divine. It is the duty of parents to imbue their children with faith in God from childhood. Here is a story to illustrate this need: Rithudhvaja and Madhaalasa were a pious couple with intense faith in God. Madhaalasa was a woman of noble character. She excelled every one in virtue, wisdom and sacrifice. She was the embodiment of holiness. The couple had a son, to whom the father wanted to give a name that would be in accordance with his Kshatriya lineage. After considerable cogitation, he gave the boy the name Vikraanth. Madhaalasa burst into laughter when she heard the name. She was unhappy over the excessive interest taken by the king in naming the child. She felt that some name should be given for the physical body for worldly purposes. But to show excessive interest in it was meaningless. Later a second son was born, who was named Subaahu (which meant one with fine arms). Madhaalasa again laughed at the naming of the child. The king felt insulted by Madhaalasa's behaviour. Sometime later a third son was born. Rithudhvaja told Madhaalasa:

 "You don't like the names given by me for our sons. You better name the third son yourself."
 A name has to be given to anyone in the world as a mark of identity. In keeping with this need, Madhaalasa named the son, Alarka. The king was angry on hearing the name. He burst forth: "Is this the name that should be given to the scion of a royal family, a warrior's son and belonging to a line of courageous Kshatriyas? What a shame! I will not call him by this name."
 No names are given for the Aathma Alarka means a mad dog. The king asked: Is my son to be called a mad dog? Madhaalasa approached the king and said: "A person who does not know his real nature, who has no awareness of his divinity and who does not know his oneness with the Divine is worse than a mad dog. What value should be attached to the names of persons who have not recognised their true nature? What significance can names have for foolish persons who are not aware of the oneness of the universe and who do not contemplate on divinity? The body is human in form.
 But they are not mere men at all. They are the embodiments of the Aathma, the Formless and Attributeless Self. They are pure and unsullied. It is sheer ignorance to give names to the Aathma." In view of this belief, Madhaalasa started teaching her children from an early age their essential spiritual nature and their inherent divinity Today, the mothers are responsible for the good or bad behaviour of their children. It is a matter for shame for any mother to say "My son will not heed my words." If the mother had brought up the son on right lines from the beginning, he would not behave like this. The snake-gourd has to be made to grow straight by tying a stone to it from its tender stage. Likewise, the stone of discipline and devotion should be attached to a boy from his infancy. Mothers experience the disobedience of their children because of their failure to inculcate discipline in the early years.
Madhaalasa began teaching her sons from their childhood in this manner: "Child, you are not a son not am I a mother. Both of us are manifestations of Sath-Chith-Aanandha. We are like the waves on an ocean, not different from each other. All have arisen from the ocean of Sath-Chith-Aanandha. It is folly to think otherwise." Placing the children in the cradle of Omkaara on the cushion of

Thathvam Asi, Madhaalasa

named the child, Erotica (Awareness, Aathma, Prajna or Brahman) and called upon all the Dhevas to swing the cradle.

To be a true human being respect your parents

In this manner, the mothers of ancient times taught the truth about their divinity to the children and made them aware of their true nature. Thus the sacred stories of Bhaarith were taught to the children, who learnt to respect their parents and elders. If one does not respect his parents and revere his preceptor, can he be termed a human being? To be a true human being one has to respect his parents and kith and kin in childhood, revere the teacher in boyhood, please elders in his manhood, and worship sages in old age. Ignoring these duties, youth today are running wild.

They should realise the preciousness of human life as Thulasidhas described it. At the outset, mothers should teach the children the immense value of human life.

Alas! They themselves do not know its value. How are they going to teach others? Hence, the parents themselves should learn the value of human life. They should have faith in the divinity of human life.

Today, because fear of sin and love for God have become rare, morality in society is absent.

Even when people seem to offer Namaskaar (salutation with folded hands), it does not stem from the heart and is only an artificial gesture. How long can such artificial expressions sustain a man?

What is needed is a pure mind, filled with sublime thoughts. It should be selfless. When the mind is selfish, the man becomes selfish. A man with a polluted mind displays vicious looks. His speech and actions are impure. If the heart is pure, everything else will be pure.

Aathma is like a flame in the body

The Aathma is like a flame in the body. When it is covered by the ten senses, its light filters through holes, as it were. And when it is covered, in addition, with the blanket of Abhimaana

(attachment to worldly objects), the effulgence of the Aathma (Divine Self) is not visible. When attachment is given up and the body consciousness goes, the Self is revealed in all its brightness.

King Vikramaadithya once encountered a Brahmana who had been repeating manthras and performing yaagas for years to get a vision of God. Vikramaadithya prayed with all his heart for one brief moment and had the vision of God. The Lord told Vikramaadithya that God does not respond to mere mechanical repetition of manthras or performance of rituals. "I respond to the call of a sincere devotee even when he says Maadhava only once with a pure heart."

The rituals done by people without feelings from the heart are dry and lifeless. They are like the mirage in a desert where you see water but it cannot quench your thirst. Even while singing

Bhajans, you should utter the names from the depth of the heart, not concentrating on Raaga and Thaala (Tune and Beat).

A young student, who had spoken earlier, referred to Shirdi Sai taking two rupees from devotees.

The two rupees represented faith and devotion. When both join, it can grow into a big tree and yield the fruit of Divine Grace.

Today is observed as Children's Day all over the world. Parents should not hesitate to correct the children when they go wrong. Here is an episode from the Raamaayana which illustrates how a devotee who seeks nothing but the love of God is rewarded by the Lord in ample measure.

How Raama rewarded His devotee

Raama was giving away all his possessions before leaving for the forest. An aged Brahmana, who was staggering on his feet, came to Raama seeking His dharshan. When Raama asked him what he wanted, he replied that he didn't want anything and he came only to have a look at Raama as he was not sure he would live till Raama returned from the forest after 14 years.

Raama was so much moved by the pure heart of the Brahmana that he insisted that the old man should receive some gift from him. Submitting to Raama's will, the Brahmana agreed to receive the gift. Raama then asked the Brahmana to throw a stick as far as he could. All the land covered by the place where the stick landed would be his. The old Brahmana said: "Though I have no desire I have to obey the command of my king." He threw the stick chanting the name of Raama.

It covered a large area, which Raama gifted to the Brahmana. The Brahmana, whose name was Thrijata, said: "Oh Raama, why should I have this land? My gathi (fate), sthithi (position), mathi

(mind) and sampathi (wealth) are all yours only. That is why I came to see you." Raama said,

"Such persons as you are the pride of our society."

To-day, in the Kali Yuga, it is extremely rare to find such persons. Selfishness and greed are rampant everywhere. Parents have a duty to shape their children as ideal sons of the nation.

Students who have acquired proximity with Sai should develop more and more spiritual wisdom.

Get rid of negative thoughts first. Then try to develop good thoughts. You are living in Svaami's Aashram. How far are you following the code of conduct relating to Aashram life? There is no use in keeping only the body in the Aashram, and letting the mind roam elsewhere. You should have only Dhaiva Chinthana (thoughts of God) in your heart.

Discourse on Easwaramma Day, 6-5-1994, in Sai Ramesh Mandap at Brindhaavan.

Service without idea of self is the very first step in the spiritual progress of man.

BABA

14. See the One in the many STUDENTS! You should know at the outset the aim and significance of education. Education is for elevation from the mundane level to the divine.

Generally, you repeat the prayer: "Thvameva maathaacha pithaa thvameva thvameva bandhuscha sakhaa thvameva." This prayer smacks of dualism.

Why should you go on establishing such different relationships with God? The fight way is to say "I am you; You are me." This is true spiritually. That is why the Vedhas proclaim "Thath thvam Asi, Ayam Aathma

Brahma, Aham Brahmaasmi." "I am the Aathma and Brahman" is the essence of Vedhic teaching. This is the easiest path to realisation.

You should consider the Divine as One only which is manifest in many forms. All the forms are creations of the mind.

Arjuna asks Krishna in the Geetha- "Chanchalam-hi-manah Krishna! Pramaadhi Balavadrudahm Thasyaham Nigraham Manye Vaayoriva Sudhushkaram" (The mind verily is restless, oh Krishna! It is turbulent, strong and obstinate. I deem it as hard to control as the wind). If you go on cultivating relationships of various types, the mind is set wavering endlessly:

To set it at rest will be extremely difficult. This is not the right type of devotion.

Developing vision of unity is not difficult

Narasimhan (in his speech earlier) said that it is difficult to comprehend the oneness in the many.

In My (Svaami's) opinion, there is nothing easier than this. Japa, Puuja, Yajna and ritualistic worship are more difficult. You consider it hard to see unity in the diversity in the world because you do not have the proper vision. Supposing you want to pick up your kerchief, you can do so easily if you open your eyes and look for it. If you are blind, it will be difficult to pick it up.

Similarly, a person in ignorance will be in frustration and confusion. The easiest path is to feel "I am you, You are I," so that there is no other object.

You are the "Seen" Everything that you see is the seen. When the vision is concentrated on the Aathma within, both are one. When you get the feeling "I am you" there is no scope for any worry. This is the easiest royal path to comprehend the Reality.

Without understanding this, people waste their lives in the process of meditation and other futile pursuits.

You are going on adding to your objects of attachment from the moment you are born in the world. First, you have mother and father, then brothers, sisters, relatives and friends. After marriage, another set of relatives and friends are added through your spouse. Thus attachment goes on multiplying.

On the other hand, if you go on detaching yourself from various relationships one after other,

your attachments get reduced and you develop detachment or Vairaagya leading to liberation.

Attachment and detachment relate to external objects. Divinity is in closest proximity to you, but it takes time to understand divinity.

Three teachers in everyone's life

There are three teachers for everyone. The first are the 'Parents.' They sacrifice their lives to give comfort to their children. Parents teach their children in a practical way by taking good care of them. The second teacher is the 'Preceptor' who guides the student in exercising his discrimination and taking the right path towards realising the divinity within him. The third teacher is your own 'Conscience.' This is divine and always helps one to take the correct decision. When anyone tries to commit a sinful act or speak an untruth, the Conscience revolts and warns him that he is not right.

In the Raamaayana, we have the example of Raama who went to the forest in obedience to the command of his father. This caused sadness to the people of Ayodhya. Even great sages like

Vashishta were in grief. Raama was the embodiment of righteousness and the repository of all good qualities. Though he was still young, his administrative skill was unparalleled. Bharatha and Shathrugna, on arrival at Ayodhya, learnt about Raama's departure to the forest and felt so.

shocked and grieved that they did not wish to stay even for a moment in Ayodhya and decided to go to the forest to request Raama to return to Ayodhya and take up the rulership of the kingdom as he alone was the right one to rule. All the people of Ayodhya followed them. Even Vashishttha accompanied them to reinforce their efforts to being Raama back to Ayodhya. All of them entreated Raama to return to Ayodhya and take over the reins of administration of the kingdom.

Sage Jaabaali, who was a Inaani, argued like an atheist. He said that one has several fathers and mothers during one's various births in previous lives and such relationships are only temporary like passing clouds. "In your case," the sage said, "your father is already dead and gone. There is no point in your adhering to the command of a person who is no more. By your not agreeing to rule the kingdom, you are causing a lot of distress to the people who may be led astray. You should not ignore the wishes of the living multitude in trying to honour the words of a dead person. So I entreat you to accede to the requests of the people and return to Ayodhya to take over the reins of the ruler."
Raama always honoured the plighted word
Raama replied calmly; "Oh Sage! I thought you are a very learned savant and scholar wellversed in the scriptures. It is not becoming of you to argue in this manner. I consider it rather unbecoming on your part to ask me to ignore the command of my father because he has passed away I have promised to carry out his command. I have given my word and I am still alive. How can I go back on my word? It is better to give up the body than to go back on one's word. One should be ever grateful to one's parents, whether they are alive or dead. An ungrateful son should be considered blind and worthless. Many pray to the Sun as Himagnhaaya namah. When the sun rises, the snow melts away. (Hima means snow). He is also worshipped as Thamoghnaaya namah, that is, one who is the destroyer of Thamas (darkness). Darkness cannot coexist with light. He is also called Krithagnagnhaaya namah. He is the destroyer of a person who has no gratitude. It is the Sun that gives light to the eyes to see. The sun renders blind those who are ungrateful. I shall be the worst sinner. All people will follow me and become sinners. Do you want me to set such a bad example? It is ridiculous to think that I will go back on my word."
On hearing these words of high wisdom uttered by Raama, Jaabaali prostrated before him and begged his pardon. He said, "Oh Raama! I am not against Truth! There is nothing that is not known to you. I had made use of this argument only to support the people of Ayodhya, who love you and want to return to Ayodhya to rifle over them."

Raama explains to rishis the essence of Divinity
Raama always set a fine example for the people to follow. He sent Seetha to the forest on hearing an ordinary citizen talking disparagingly about Seetha being taken back by Raama even after she had been in the custody of his enemy, Raavana, for some months. Raama did this out of respect for popular opinion. Raama has established such an ideal for society to follow at all times. That is why He is hailed as Purushottama (the noblest of all Purushas). In justifying his action in following the command of his father he explained to the Rishis elaborately the essence of divinity. In the Geetha Krishna says:
Kavim puraanam Anushaasithaaram
Anotaneeyaan samanumaredhyah
Sarvasya dhaathaaram Achinthyaruupam Aadhithyavarnam Thamasah parasthaath.
(The Being who is wise, ancient, the ruler, smaller than the smallest, the sustainer of all, inconceivable form, resplendent like the sun and beyond the darkness of ignorance).
There is no Kavi (poet) other than the Lord. All that is in verse form is not poetry. "Thrikaala vaakyam kavi" (The Poet is one who has a vision of the past, the present and the future). Man knows only the past and the present. How can one know the future? How is the Divine Poet able to see the future too? Because God is Omniscient and beyond time and space. He is not affected by the passage of time. He is changeless and permanent. No one has the ability to punish the mind Puraana is ordinarily construed as meaning very old. But here it refers to the Consciousness which is pervading the whole body (city or pura of nine gates). It pervades everything.
Anushaasithaaram (One who enforces the law).
When a criminal is punished by a court after being found guilty, he is kept in prison. It is only the body that gets punished. But the real culprit is the mind. No one has got any right or ability to punish the mind which really causes the convict to commit the crime. The mind can travel anywhere even when a person is in prison. The Government or Police have no control over the mind. It is only the supreme power of the Divine that can have control over the mind.

The effulgence of the Lord is equal to that of one crore of Suns. The Lord's face is beaming with the brilliance of the Sun. On being struck by the radiant effulgence in Raama's face, Shabari became ecstatic and described it as that of the blemishless full moon. The faces of present-day men look like a jungle with dense growth of beards and sideburns. Brilliance is absent. Raama's face was spotless because his heart was pure and was filled with feelings of sacrifice. He never did anything for himself. Whatever he did was only for Lokasamrakshana (the welfare of the world). Raamo Vighrahaavan Dharmah (Raama was the embodiment of Dharma). If one follows Dharma, he is protected by the same Dharana. Raama sacrificed all his comforts and enjoyments of royal life and endured the privations of forest life. Raama is to be taken as the ideal for the students. They should respect and obey their parents' words. The Guru, teacher, comes only after the parents. Total renunciation leads to Self-Realisation. It is only when you reach the highest level of Sarvasangaparithyaagi (one who had renounced all worldly attachments) that one can attain Self-Realisation. Prahlaadha had realised Puurnathvam (complete identity with the Para Brahmam, Supreme Power). He was bereft of all earthly attachments. Saint Thyaagaraaja sang "Cheemalo Brahmalo" (the same Hari is in an ant and in Brahmam). When you acquire this Abhedha bhaavam (non-duality), you reach the highest stage. But when an ant crawls over your body,, you don't hesitate to kill the ant. You worship the figure of a snake in the belief that God is in it, but when a live snake comes before you, you hasten to kill it. This is indicative of the way of the world. As long as you are leading the ordinary householder's life, you have to practise morality, respecting parents, loving friends and serving society. Discourse to students in Thravee Brindhaavan on 13-5-1994. Keep away from the ten-fold sins--the three physical, the four verbal and the three mental. Physical tendencies are: injury to life, adulterous desire and theft. The verbal sins are: false alarm, cruel speech, jealous talk and lies. The mental attitudes are: greed, envy and the denial of God. BABA

15. The power of faith COMPLETE faith is most essential if you want to experience Divinity. There should not be even an iota of doubt. One living without faith in the Divine is like a lifeless corpse. I would relate a story to illustrate the power of faith. A young boy used to go from his village to school which was in a nearby town. He had to cross a forest en route to the town. Generally he used to return home well before sunset. One day; it so happened that he had to leave the school late in the evening and darkness set in. The boy was afraid to walk through the forest in darkness and told his mother that he was afraid to walk in the night without company. His mother said: "Why are you afraid? Whenever you are in need of company, shout aloud calling your brother. He will help you." The boy asked her: "Who is my brother?" The mother replied: "He is none other than Lord Krishna. God is mother, father, teacher, brother, relative, friend and all. Whenever you are in trouble don't hesitate to call on him for help." The boy had full faith in his mother's words. In these days, even if God himself tells, nobody believes. That is why Jesus declared: "If I were to be a child everyday for a while, with full faith in my mother, how happy I would be!" God is searching for a real devotee. Another day the boy was returning home from school late at night in the darkness. He shouted: "Anna Krishna" (Brother Krishna). After a few moments Krishna appeared before the boy in the form of a lad and told him- "Why do you fear when I am here? I shall escort you home." He accompanied the boy to the village outskirts and disappeared. The boy told his mother how the brother helped him true to her words. The mother said: He helps not only you, but everyone who seeks his help." From that time onwards, the boy used to call the brother whenever he needed his help and Krishna never failed to respond. Gradually he picked up courage.. When you have full faith, God will surely help you and make you fearless. People who have faith in God will never be let down. But those who have no faith suffer. You need not search for God. It is God who is searching for a real devotee. The mind's speed is unparalleled. It is only because of lack of control of mind one gets into bad temper, which causes loss of discrimination and spells ultimate ruin. It is imperative that one should control the temper and avoid getting angry. One who yields to anger is bound to suffer. Let me cite an incident from the life of Babu Raajendra Prasaad, the first President of India.

Raajendra Prasaad had a very good servant by name Rathna who was exemptionally faithful and served him for a long time to the satisfaction of his master. One day he was asked to clean his room. Raajendra Prasaad had kept a pen given to him by Mahaathma Gaandhi, in one of his books. When the servant was cleaning the table the book fell down and the nib broke. He became nervous but told his master the truth begging his pardon for his mistake. On hearing this,

Raajendra Prasaad shouted at him in rage and asked him to get out and not to show his face again as the pen was a highly valuable gift from Mahaathma which he had broken.

Then the servant pleaded that he could not survive without him and sought his forgiveness. But

Raajendra Prasaad was in no mood to listen to him and went out bidding his servant to get out of his sight.

During the night, Raajendra Prasaad could not sleep as the memory of his having driven away his servant was haunting him. When he got up next morning he missed his usual morning coffee which Rathna would usually serve him. He reflected over his behaviour and felt sorry for having sent out such a faithful servant for no big fault. He realised that it was his own mistake to have kept the pen carelessly in a book instead of keeping it in a safe place. He sent word to Rathna and took him back seeking his pardon saying: "Rathna you are a good boy. It was my mistake to have kept the pen in the book. So you must excuse me for my rash action." He asked him to continue to serve him till the end of his life.

Anger comes from temper inside and one who yields to this bout of temper is bound to suffer.

You should control anger and avoid talking or acting while in an angry mood.

Another instance of how anger gets the better of even a very good person can be cited from the Mahaabhaaratha.

Krishna seeks the help of sage Dhuurvaasa

Ashvathaama prayed to Kaali to help him to keep his vow of killing the Paandavas before sunset next day and got a sword from her. Dhraupadhi heard about this and said- "The Paandavas are the five life-principles and I am the sixth. How can I live after they are gone?" So saying, she prayed to Krishna as He was always their saviour whenever they were in trouble. Krishna appeared before her and asked her why she had called Him. She explained how Ashvathaama

had obtained a sword from Kaali with Her blessings for his killing the Paandavas before sunset next day Krishna said: "The word of Mother Goddess has to be fulfilled. At the same time the Paandavas have to be protected as they are my devotees. I shall have to devise a master plan." He summoned sage Dhuurvaasa. Though God can act on His own, sometimes He uses others as instrument. Dhuurvaasa was glad to have dhharshan of Lord Krishna and asked Krishna as to why he was called.

When Krishna said his help was needed, he remarked that everyone needed God's help and it was strange that God was seeking his help. Dhuurvaasa said: "Lord, I shall surely follow your command."

Krishna disclosed His Master Plan. He asked Dhuurvaasa to prepare a pit large enough to hide the Paandavas therein. He said: "You should spread some branches of tree to cover the pit and sit on the top of the pit. Ashvathaama will come to you. You may tell the truth, but change only the tone." Ashvathaama came in the afternoon and prayed to Dhuurvaasa in all humility to disclose the whereabouts of the Paandavas, as he was a Thrikaalajnaani (one who knows the past, the present and the future). Dhuurvaasa said in an angry tone: "The Paandavas are under my feet."

As everyone knew the effects of Dhuurvaasa's rage, Ashvathaama did not dare to proceed further and incur the sage's dreaded wrath. He slipped away from the place.

By that time the sun had set and the Paandavas were saved.

God's signs of pretending to get angry are only for the good of others and to protect humanity.

God has to act in different ways in different situations. God has no anger in Himself. When He takes human form He has to act as a human.

Some of the discourses in Thrayee Brindhaavan in May 1994, when Svaami narrated at length some stories.

16. Share your love

EMBODIMENTS of the Divine Aathma! Human life is noble, sacred and precious. The way to realise this truth is to feel that you are a part of the Divine. Only human beings are endowed with the faculty to experience this truth. It is, therefore, the duty of every human being to strive for the realisation of this truth.

The human body is constituted by the Pancha Bhuthas (five elements), Pancha Koshas (five sheaths)--Annamaya (food), Praanamaya (Life-force), Manomaya (mental), Vijnaanamaya (intelligence) and Aanandhamaya (the sheath of Bliss). While other living beings have only the first three sheaths, the human species alone has all the five. Man is encompassed by attachment to worldly desires, which produce delusions of various kinds related to the three gunas (Sathva, Rajas and Thamas). To attain liberation man has to rid himself of these desires. The mind is the cause of both bondage and liberation. It is only by controlling the mind that man can achieve liberation.

Everyone is proud about the body, the mind and the intellect, forgetting the indwelling Aathma, which is the basis for all of them. The Aathma has no birth or death. It is the root of a tree, which sustains the branches, the leaves, flowers and fruits. It is the basis on which the superstructure of life rests.

The meaning of true renunciation

The Vedhas have declared that man can attain immortality by thyaaga (renunciation) and not by any other means, actions, wealth or progeny. What is it that has to be renounced? One has to renounce one's bad qualities. Men today are only human in form, but are filled with beastly qualities. To manifest their inherent divine nature, men have to cultivate love of God and fear of sin and adhere to sanghaneethi (social morality). When people have fear of sin and love of God, they will not indulge in immoral acts. Thereby morality in society will be automatically ensured.

It is meaningless to be born as a human being and lead an animal existence.

God can be known only by experience and not by experiments. Saadhana is needed for this purpose. Men who are engaged in exploring space do not make the slightest effort to explore the Divine within them. Of what use are experiments aimed at exploring space, while there is no genuine cultivation of human qualities and the practice of such basic virtues as showing reverence for the mother, the father and the preceptor? Everyone should act upto the motto- "Help ever- hurt never." Every educated person should engage himself or herself in selfless service to society, with humility and a pure heart.

All academic distinctions or even observance of spiritual practices are of little use if there is no love in the heart. The heart is called Hridhaya. It is made up of the two words, Hri and Dhaya

(compassion). The Lord is described as Hridhayavaasi (the Indweller in the heart). Love and Compassion are inherent in every person. Each has to share his love with others. Failure to share one's love is gross ingratitude to society, to which one owes everything. One should give one's love freely to others and receive love in return. This is the deep significance of human life.

Discourse in the Sai Ramesh mandap, Brindhaavan, on 5-6-1994.

Man's life is meaningful only because he can use it to see God. The goal of life is the final merging in the sea, God. You should not fill life with the world; that will make it a vanity fair, an insanity fair.

BABA

17. Purity in thought leads to Divinity

EMBODIMENTS of Divine Love! For the development human personality, the development of the mind and the refinement of the heart are essential.

All actions of man originate in the mind. The mind functions through thoughts. Hence, thoughts are the root cause of man's actions. Humanness is the outcome of thoughts. When the thoughts are pure, the mind is also pure. With a purified mind, man's conduct becomes pure. Thin, for the purity or impurity of one's actions, thoughts are primarily responsible.

It is easy for man to stand but it is difficult for him to run. But, in the case of the mind, staying still is difficult, but running is easy. This is the difference between man and his mind. The mind runs about swiftly. This is based on the power of the thoughts. When a stone is cast in a well, a series of ripples start from the point where the stone fell. From there, the ripples go upto the edge of the well and cover the entire well.

In the same manner, when the stone of thought is cast on the lake of the mind, the ripples started by it fill all the senses and limbs in the body. When the thought is a pure and sacred one, the ripples emanating in the mind fill all the senses and limbs in the body; from head to toe, with pure reactions. This pure thought, entering the eye, purifies the vision. The same thought entering the ear, makes it listen to sacred sounds. Entering the mouth, this pure thought brings about purity in speech. Permeating the hands, the sacred thought induces them to engage themselves in sacred acts. The sacred ripples from the mind entering the feet, induce them to go on pilgrimages. If the thoughts are impure, they travel in ripples to the senses and induce to indulge in unholy acts.

Hence, the well-known saying "The mind is made up of thoughts and aberrations." It follows that people should not give room for bad thoughts, bad associations or bad relationships.

Good company redeems one's entire life

All that is good or bad in man is based upon his good or bad behaviour. This conduct is traced to the mind, which itself is dependent on thoughts. Therefore, to have good thoughts you must cultivate good company Good thoughts appear small in the beginning like one's shadow at noon.

But as the day advances, the shadow lengthens.

Likewise, the influence of the good thoughts also grows as time passes. In due course it acquires a magnificent form. It attains a highly sacred place. It confers divine bliss and redeems one's entire life.

Thus, sathsanga (company of the good) is supremely important.

Good company, by promoting good thoughts, leads to the highest achievements in life. Bad company, on the contrary, is like the shadow caused by the morning sun. At dawn, the shadow produced by the sun is long. As the morning progresses, the shadow gets shorter and shorter. Ultimately, it gets limited to one's feet.

This is how the effects of bad company operate. At the beginning the gains seem to be large. But as time goes on, the gains vanish. Human values get destroyed.

Why Sathsanga is important

The power of thoughts is immense. Thoughts survive unchanged the death of a man. Therefore, everyone should foster noble thoughts. Bad thoughts should not be allowed to enter the mind.

Bad company should be avoided as much as possible. The reason is: For Yogis meditation is important. For those who wish to sacrifice, wealth is important. For devotees, singing (poem) is important. For the sick, medicine is essential.

The company of the sick will make you sick. The company of Yogis will make you a Yogi.

Through yoga, you realise the Divine. Through yoga you control the mind. Hence, the importance of Sathsanga.

What is Sath-sanga (the company of the good)? Does it refer to the company of persons performing bhajans or to a group of devotees? Or does it refer to association with persons engaged in social service activities? No. Sath refers to that which is everlasting. What is it that is permanent? It is Divinity. Sath-sangam means cultivating the company of the Divine. Where is the Divine? It is within each body. The body consists of Angas (limbs). These limbs are associated with Jangam (the Life-Force). The Life-Force exercises the power of discrimination to determine what is right and what is wrong. Today, this discriminating faculty is not used properly, with the result man becomes a victim of the evil forces of Sangam (lust, anger, greed, pride, etc).

Sath-Sanga really means the company of Sath (good). In another sense, good company means the company of good thoughts, good feelings. So company does not refer to individuals.

For friendship or enmity, one's thoughts are the root cause. Who is an enemy? Who is a friend?

One's thoughts are one's friends or enemies. Hence it is said- "The mind is the cause of mankind's bondage or liberation."

Samaadhi is a state of union with Sath

What does Samaadhi mean? Is it a state of trance? No. Is it a state of emotional utterance? No. Is it absorption in one's self? No. When people refer to a man in trance or in unconscious state as one experiencing Samaadhi, they are thoroughly mistaken. It may be a case of hysteria or of epilepsy. It may be the result of some strong emotion, or one caused by excitement. The true meaning of Samaadhi is: it is a state of union with Sath. Samaa (equal) + Dhi (mind), equal mindedness is Samaadhi. The proper term is Samadhi, not Samaadhi. To treat alike pleasure and pain, heat and cold, darkness and light is true Samaadhi. This is the quality of Sath. It has no pleasure or pain. It is all-pervading. (Bhagavaan recited a poem in which the Gopikas describe Krishna as the Unknowable Infinite Divine, who is inscrutable and whose ways are baffling).

The question is often asked: "Where is God?" And the usual answer is that "He is in Vaikunttha or in Svarga (Heaven), or in Kailaasha." Not at all. The Lord has nothing to do in these places.

The Lord is in Naraka (Hell). As the denizens of Hell are perpetually suffering and calling out to God, the Lord remains there. It is among those who seek peace that the Lord dwells. A hospital is needed to tend the sick. Where there is no ailment there is no need for a hospital. Likewise, the Divine doctor goes to those who are in pain and distress. "Vaidhyo Naaraayano Harih" (Naaraayana or Hari is the doctor). Therefore, where there is humanity there is the Divine.

Descent of the Divine in human form

The Divine descends to the earth in human form, declare the scriptures, to allay the sufferings of those who are sick of body or of mind. Man today seeks to have a vision of the supra-human transcendental Being. This is sheer folly, because as long as one has the feeling that he is a human being he can aspire to see God only in human form and is not entitled to see His transcendental form. When one transcends the sense of his humanness, he acquires the privilege to envision the Transcendental Divinity. That is the reason why Raama and Krishna came as Avatars in human form. To claim that when you close your eyes and meditate you see an effulgent light is only a delusion. There are innumerable things that are not visible to your naked eyes and which are beyond your ken. How do you expect to see them or know them? You know only the human form. So, at the outset, try to understand humanness. You must understand the Life Principle that animates the human. From the Life-Principle you should seek to enquire into the nature of the Divine.

Aathma is present in all Dheha + Aathma is Dhehaathma (body + Spirit). Jeewa + Aathma is Jeewaathma (Life + Spirit). Parama + Aathma is Paramaathma (the Supreme + Self). Although Dheha (the body), Jeewa (the individual) and Param (the Supreme) are different terms, Aathma (Spirit) is common and is equally present in all the three. The Aathma is all-pervading. That is termed Sath (Being). It may be likened to sugar which retains its sweetness in whatever way it may be used. Chith (Awareness) is subject to change and movement. Even if it is carried to a high level, it tends to come down. When you mix sugar in water, you have neither sugar nor water, but only syrup.

When Sath, which represents the Divine and Chith, which represents the Life Principle come together, you have Aanandha (Bliss). This is Sath-Chith-Aanandha. It is like an ocean in which a myriad creatures come into existence and disappear like waves. Their names and forms vary but essentially they are the same as the ocean. They are all living beings which have emerged from Sath-Chith-Aanandha. When I begin my discourse with the words Divyaathma svaruupulaara (Embodiments of Divine Aathma), I intend to convey that the same Divine Spirit is in every one of you. Just as the ocean, the wave and the foam contain the same water, the Spirit that is present in the body; in the individual being and in the Supreme is one and the same. To experience this spiritual oneness, your way of life should be holy. This can be accomplished only by entertaining sacred thoughts which lead to good conduct. Deem yourself as Divine. The Divine can be experienced by human beings only as manifested in the human form. Raama and Krishna are worshipped in the forms painted by Ravi Varma. If the Kodhanda (Raama's bow) and the flute (in the hands of the Krishna figure) are taken away, only the simple human figures remain. The human being is referred to as Nara. Ra means that which is perishable. Na means Not. Nara refers therefore to that which is imperishable in man, the Aathma (Spirit), Naaraayana, a manifestation of the Divine Spirit. Consequently, sorrow should be alien to him. He should shed no fear. Deem yourself as Divine. Live with this firm conviction. The divinity in every being should be revered. You have to recognise unity in diversity. "Beings are many, but breath is one." This may be experienced by everyone in the process of inhaling and exhaling. (Svaami demonstrated how with every breath, everyone repeats the manthra, So-Ham---"He am I" or "I am God"). Do not give room to any bad thoughts. The body is a temple of the Divine and no evil thoughts should be allowed to enter it. Man should strive to reach the sublime, regardless of difficulties, and troubles. Embodiments of the Divine! Develop good thoughts and feelings of sacrifice. Cherish divine spiritual thoughts. Cultivate friendliness. To hail God as father and mother and not to have fraternal feelings towards one and all is treason to God. You should cultivate unity as the children of God and live in harmony in the company of the good and the godly. Share the nectar of love that is in you with one and all. Do not bear ill-will towards anyone. Speak sweetly to everyone. Chant the Lord's name which will help you to cross the ocean of mundane existence. Discourse in Sai Ramesh Hall on 26-6-1994. "My country is India. My religion is the religion of India. My ideals and traditions have been born in India." You must develop such thoughts in your mind. You must develop great respect and attachment to the culture that has flourished in this country from time immemorial. You will have to dedicate your life for the future of this country. BABA

18. Cherish the sweetness of sacrifice
 The cosmos is governed by the Divine;
 The Divine is controlled by Truth;
 That Truth is subject to noble beings;
 The noble are Divinity itself
 EMBODIMENTS of Divine Love! The entire Cosmos, consisting of animate and inanimate objects, is dependent on God. The Divine is governed 'by Truth, That Truth is governed by Uthamaadheenam (noble beings). The noblest being is Divine. Every human being is inherently noble. It is this nobility that constitutes his divinity. The Divine manifests Himself in human form. There is no need to search for the Divine as a distinct entity somewhere else. Man must strive to realise the Divinity within him. From the earliest times, the sages looked upon human life as madhuram (sweet). This sweet life is associated with Maadhava, the Divine and not anything else. We must see that this Sweetness is properly cherished. Only when this sweetness is safeguarded will man be true to his human nature. Without this sweetness, man ceases to be human. To experience this sweetness the spirit of sacrifice is essential. This nectarine sweetness is the outcome of thyaaga (sacrifice). As the Vedhas declare: "Not by deeds, or progeny, or wealth is immortality gained. It is realised only through sacrifice." Whatever good deeds one may do, whatever wealth one may acquire, without sacrifice the Divine cannot be experienced. Bliss-filled sweetness pervades man from head to foot It is out of the feeling of sacrifice that the nectarine sweetness arises in man. That sweetness is Divinity itself. Krishna is extolled as "Madhuraadhipathe! madhuram! madhuram!" (Lord of Madhura, who is all sweetness). When the Lord is described as the "Master of Madhura," what is this sweetness? The heart is sweet, the feeling is sweetness. The love (one feels) is sweet. The action (of the devotee) is sweet. The aanandha (bliss) is sweet. The Aathma is sweet. This blissfilled sweetness pervades man from head to foot. Unfortunately, man today makes no effort to recognise the sweetness that is in him. All his thoughts, feelings and desires are directed towards the external world. Not even a small fraction of it is turned towards the heart within. Bhaaratheeya culture contains illustrations of this sweetness. There is nothing in the world sweeter than the love of a mother for the child. For the well-being of the child the mother is ready to sacrifice her all, including her life. Such nectarine sweetness is manifest only in the mother who is the embodiment of the Divine. Hence, the Upanishathic injunction: "Maathru dhevo bhava!" (Esteem the mother as God). Likewise, the heart of the father who fosters the child, and develops his personality, is also sweet. The Upanishath, therefore, enjoins everyone to treat the father as God. Mother and father are equal to God. Therefore, at the outset, one has to honour one's parents. The mother is the visible manifestation of God. If ignoring the divinity of the mother, who is visible and adorable, one seeks to worship what is invisible, it must be regarded as a sign of ignorance. God is subtle form. He is invisible and is infinite and immeasurable. The mother is a visible and tangible proof of Divinity. When a child is born, the first person it beholds is the mother. The mother bears patiently many travails for the sake of the child. It is sweet to love such a mother. You may have love for God. But if you have no love for the mother who is physically present before you, how can you love the invisible Divine? One's foremost obligation is to revere one's parents. People tend to worship stones, but do not revere living beings. Worship of inanimate idols has been in vogue from ancient times. But people are forgetting to revere their living parents. One's first and foremost obligation is to revere one's parents who are in flesh and blood, who are verily your life itself. In the Raamaayana, there is the following illustration-Before leaving for the forest, Shri Raama approached his father, Dhasharatha, and said: "I am not sorry I have to go to the forest. Not does it pain me that you have given this command to me. I am to uphold your plighted word. Of what use is a son who does not uphold the word of his father? I derive the greatest sweetness from carrying out my father's word of honour." It follows from this that children should respect and carry out the words of parents. That alone testifies to the true quality of a son. Life acquires sweetness when parents are revered. Love is the primary source of sweetness for man. There is nothing greater in this world than love. Life acquires sweetness when one reveres one's father and mother. Here is another example from the Raamaayana. Immediately after Raama broke Shiva's bow, Emperor Janaka

declared that he would offer

Seetha in marriage to Raama. Janaka brought Seetha to the assembly hall. Raama, however, without any hesitation, but in sweet firm words, declared that he would not agree to the wedding without the approval of his parents. Raama said that he owed his body to his parents and that he would abide by their wishes. He declared that till his parents arrived (in Mithila) he would not even set his eyes on Seetha. "I will consent to the marriage only after their approval." In this manner, Raama rejoiced in setting an example to the world of ideal conduct for all to follow at all times. Sage Vishvaamithra also waited for the arrival of Raama's parents.

In another episode in Raamaayana, sage Vashishttha accompanied Bharatha to meet Raama in the forest. Intervening in the argument between Bharatha and Raama (over the issue of Raama's return to Ayodhya to take over the kingdom), Vashishttha said: "It is your right and duty to rule over the kingdom. You are the eldest son of Dhasharatha. You are endowed with all the talents. You are well versed in the scriptures relating to Dharma (the code of Right Conduct). You have won the affections of the people. You are committed to the well-being of the people." Vashishttha appealed in this manner to Raama to assume the reins of rulership.

Speaking sweetly, eschewing harshness of any kind, Raama replied; "Guruji! Without honouring the plighted word of the father, if I disobey the command of my deceased father, I will be rendering my life worthless. My primary duty is to carry out my father's injunctions. I may even transgress the command of the preceptor, but I will not go against the command of my father."

Thus, carrying out the commands of his father, Raama spent fourteen years in exile and demonstrated to the world the joy and fulfilment to be derived from such an exemplary life.

Qualities that constitute sweetness in man
Human life should be sweetened by honouring one's pledged word.
Sweetness in life consists in setting an example in righteous living to those around one. There is sweetness in doing a good turn to one who has done you a good turn. Gratitude is sweet. These qualities constitute the maadhuryam (sweetness) in man.

You should be grateful all your life to one who has helped you. You are the big man that you are today because of all the love and care bestowed on you in your early years by your parents.

Therefore, to experience the love of your parents you should show your gratitude to them. This is a debt you owe to them.

Alas! in this Kali age children show no regard for the parents. This is the disastrous sign of modern times. In any circumstance you have to show respect and love your parents. You owe everything to them, from your flesh and blood, to the food you consume and the garments you wear. To remember with gratitude the parents who are no more is an act of sacrifice.

It is a pity that people today are not aware of the supreme greatness of sacrifice. There is sacrifice in every aspect of life. The joy to be derived from sacrifice is incalculable. One has to learn the supreme value of sacrifice from one's own parents who sacrifice so much for the sake of their children. It is your duty to keep your parents happy as long as they live.

The four types of human beings
People today become scholars and acquire great wealth. But all that they achieve as a result is conceit--the arrogance of study and riches. People cherish the sweetness of wealth and not the sweetness of love. Love alone constitutes true wealth. There are no riches above love. Through love you must develop the spirit of sacrifice. Fill everyone of your actions with love. Human life should be filled with love and sweetness, which are shared with others. Otherwise, it ceases to be human.

There are four types of human beings: the Divine in the human, the demonic human, the human man and the animal man. The four qualities of the divine, the demonic, the human and the animal are present in human beings in varying degrees.

"Brahmaratho Dhaivah" (The man who is installed in human is divine). This implies that the man who is wedded to truth, who performs righteous actions, who renders help to others, who thinks about the well-being of others, who indulges in acts of charity and beneficence, is filled with Divine qualities. He is immersed in the knowledge of the Brahman.

"Sathyadharmaparo marthyah" (He is a human being who adheres to Truth and Righteousness).

A true human being should uphold truth and right conduct. If truth and righteousness are safeguarded, the nation will be safe and secure. It is not the army or bombs that will protect the nation. Only Truth and Righteousness will protect the nation.

"Madhya paana ratho dushtah" (The demonic human being revels in intoxicating drinks). Eating meat and drinking liquor are demonic vices. Those indulging in drink lose all sense of propriety, have no compassion or love and become demons. A selfish man manifests his animal nature
"Inaana shuunyah pashubhis samaanah" (One who lacks wisdom is equal to an animal).

Inaana is the capacity to discriminate between right and wrong, the permanent and the transient.

Animality in man is indicated by the absence of this inaana. A real human being has to have this power of discrimination. He should know what to say, when and to whom, and he should know how to behave towards elders, towards friends and different kinds of people. A person who is ignorant in these matters is only an animal. Inaana, in its deeper sense, means Aathma-Inaana (knowledge of the Self). This is absent in modern man. One who is selfish and self-centred is manifesting his animal nature. Only when self-interest is coupled with concern for others can one be truly human. Without manners one cannot be a man. Without good behaviour one is not a boy. Without discipline one cannot be a devotee.

A previous speaker had said that the hand-kerchief lent beauty to Bhagavaan Baba. This is absurd. The true nature of beauty was described by the poet Mallamma in Kannada. She said that to a pond the lotus lends beauty. The moon imparts beauty to the sky. For a devotee, the vibhuuthi on his forehead confers beauty. Without virtue, life ceases to be beautiful. Virtue implies conduct which evokes the approbation of others. It must be exemplary and confer delight on others. It should not cause harm to others or appear ludicrous. It should bring a good name.

Let your speech be always sweet People should ponder over what is their aim in life, whither they are going and what they should achieve before embarking on any activity. In this context, the Raamaayana furnishes a lesson for all. Dhasharatha, without any concern for the future, granted two unconditional boons to Kaikeyi in return for the help which she rendered to him. Out of thoughtless love for her, he gave two boons saying that she could have what she wanted, whenever she might choose to ask. She chose the time and the boons she wanted. She asked for the exile of Raama and the crowning of Bharatha. The lesson to be learnt from this is that when you give your word, you must be aware of all its implications. Promises made thoughtlessly lead to grievous situations. One has to stand by one's word.

Truth endows one's life with sweetness. Loving words sweeten life. Let your speech be always sweet, whatever be the circumstances. Just as sugarcane has to go through crushing and other processes before you can get candy from it, the body has to go through certain ordeals to manifest its sweet nature. These are termed: Samskaara---the good thoughts, good feelings and good actions which bring about refinement. Love is essential for their refinement. Hence, love is the means to realise the nectarine sweetness of life.

Discourse in the Sai Ramesh Hall, Brindhaavan, on 3-7-1994.
No one who has trodden spiritual path, and engaged himself in the spiritual process has escaped calumny and cruelty. Mohammed, who sought to establish the primacy of the One Formless Absolute, had a large share of persecution, defamation, and privation; Jesus, who attempted to rebuild mankind on the basis of Love, was crucified by little men who feared that their tiny towers of hate and greed will be toppled by his teaching. Harishchandra, who had resolved never to waver from Truth, was submitted to ordeal after ordeal each more terrifying than the previous one.

19. Role of teachers, parents and Governments EMBODIMENTS of Divine love! Teachers! Students! Educationists!
Despite all the knowledge one may have acquired, if one has no concern for the welfare of the world, all that knowledge is worthless. Without good qualities, all knowledge is useless. Without refinement in daily actions, vast scholarship will not confer renown. Conformity to rules, without morality, will not enhance one's worth. Will anyone respect you in the world if you display the arrogance of power, overstepping the limits? Going astray from Dharma, if you preach Dharma to others, Will you be deemed human at all? If you have not cherished fear of sin and not entertained Love of God in your thoughts, what have you achieved so far? Leading a truly human life, be human at least from now onwards.

Embodiments of love! What we need today is not a new system of education. Not do we need a new social system. Such changes will not serve to solve the problems we face. We need today men and women who are pure in mind and heart. In a society lacking in purity of mind and integrity of character, noble-minded human beings will be few. Without spirituality there will be neither purity, not morality not integrity. Where there are no men and women of noble character, the state will not flourish. Bhaarith is like a multi-petalled rose. No country in the world has so many races, creeds and languages as the sacred land of Bhaarith. Bhaarith shines forth as a multi-racial garden with its many races and creeds and languages and cultures. The different creeds and cultures are like so many flowers in a garden. The varied manners and cultures contribute to the many faceted brilliance of the nation. The magnificence of this diversity is beyond description. Bhaarith is like a multi-petalled lotus. Bhaarith is the home of people who cherished Love as the way of the Spirit and Truth as the breath of their life. Unfortunately, lost in the pursuit of worldly, physical and material objects, the people have forgotten their basic divinity as human beings. It is in this context that the educational system has to be examined. Teachers have to consider the fundamental features of this system. From early times, the ancient system of education developed a broad outlook and promoted virtues and morals which served to foster noble ideals in society. What are the changes we witness today in the educational set-up? Who is responsible in this sacred land of Bhaarith for moulding the young children of today into ideal citizens of tomorrow? It is only when this question is properly examined that we will find the right solution for our problems, Is the responsibility that of the parents? Or is it that of the teachers who enrich the intellects of the students? Or that of the national leaders who profess to strive for the progress of the nation? Or is it that of the administrators who are in charge of educational institutions? Or is it that of the writers who are producing the literature for the students and the public? The question may be asked whether all of them are discharging their respective duties properly Let them examine their hearts and furnish the answer. Only then we shall find the solutions to our educational problems. Who is responsible for the indiscipline? Among students discipline has almost totally declined. What is the means to restore this discipline on right lines? Is any one trying to find out the cause of indiscipline or the means to remedy the situation? Without seeking to find out who is responsible for this indiscipline, it is wrong to blame the students. They are not to blame. The truth is: The students are not being taught the greatness of the culture and ideals of Bhaarith through suitable books and writings. Are we teaching to our students the exemplary lives of those who struggled for freedom and gave even their lives for the sake of the country? Are we imparting to our students inspiration from the lives of great leaders like Baala Gangaadhara Thilak, Laala Laipat Rai, Bipin Chandra Pal and Nethaji Subhash Bose who asserted the nation's right to freedom? Are we teaching to our students the message of great men who proclaimed the supremacy of morality and character? Students should be taught to develop good qualities. We do not impart to our students the lessons of our great epics like the Ramaayana and the Mahabharata. Are we teaching to our students the story of Shri Rama, who sacrificed his all to fulfill the promises of his father? Are they told about the sacrifice of Dharmaja who went into exile and lived on roots and leaves to uphold Dharma? Do they learn about the devotion of Shravanakumar, who did not spare himself in the service of his parents? Are the students taught anything about Ekalavya, who was prepared to offer anything desired by the preceptor as the debt he owed to him? Are we teaching our students the story of Prahlada, who rejoiced in chanting the Lord's name and demonstrated the infinite power of the Divine in coming to the rescue of the devotee? Are we imparting to them the great message of the Bhagavad Geetha, which is relevant not only to Bhaarith but to the entire world? Are they receiving the message of the Buddha, who proclaimed the truth that there is no greater virtue than refraining from harming others? Are they taught the significance of the compassion of Jesus? Are they told about the message of Prophet Mohammed? Are they taught the hymns of Naanak which glorify the unity of all faiths? Do they learn about courage and sacrifices made by great heroines like Jhansi Lakshmi Bai, Padmini and others? It is because such examples of noble conducts are not being taught to our students that their sense of patriotism is on the wane. Love of the country is turning into indifference. We have to develop in the students deep love for the country. Students should be taught how to use in a worthy and ideal manner their talents and abilities. Students today, without developing good qualities, are wasting their lives by bad association and giving free rein to their energies.

Character alone is enduring. Students are going astray because their virtues are not cultivated.

All are to blame and not one single agency

Who are responsible for this? In the home, the parents are responsible, in schools and colleges, the teachers, and outside, the Governments which have failed to provide a proper system of education and the administrators who have not recognized their obligation to train young people on right lines. The responsibility thus rests on all of them and not on any one single agency. In the homes, the parents should teach the children to cultivate good qualities and noble ideals.

Bookish knowledge alone is not enough. It is superficial and not practical. Students need also general knowledge and common sense.

The teachers, for their part, should impart to the students knowledge and skills which will enable them to lead ideal lives. Students today are getting involved in all kinds of petty agitational movements. Morality and discipline are not to be found. Educational institutions are growing in numbers but the quality of education is declining. The reason is that proper text-books are not made available to the children.

Morality and character are confined to books.

The hearts are filled with foul things.

The hands are used for selfish purposes.

This is the progress made in education today.

One repays with harm the good done to him.

One betrays the man that feeds him.

Students mock at teachers.

This is our progress.

Students should cultivate human values. The teachings of great and noble souls should be taught to them. Education should not be to get degrees to earn a living, but should be a preparation for the good life. Education should be for elevation. Teachers should teach students discipline, observance of humility and respect, and instill in them the spirit of service to society and the sense of fellowship.

There is only one religion, the religion of Love

Differences of caste and creed should be eradicated from the minds of students. They should feel the sense of human unity, with faith in God. All religions teach essentially the same truths.

Hence no religion should be despised. Because of the Government's policies, a wrong attitude has been developed towards religion. The concept of a Secular State is bandied about.

Secularism really means that you should have equal respect for all religions and beliefs. No one can be asked to renounce his faith in the name of secularism. There is only one caste, the caste of Humanity. There is only one religion, the religion of Love. There is only one language, the language of the Heart. Imagine how our students would be able to serve the nation in the future if these basic truths were taught to them. Hence, at the outset, teachers should set the example.

Parents should exemplify ideals. The Government should be exemplary in its actions. It is because teachers, parents and rulers have failed to set the right example that today our educational system is in shambles.

Teachers should combine practice with precept, like the physical instructor who demonstrates the exercises the students should perform. In the hermitages of the ancient preceptors, this was how the Gurus taught their disciples.

The six qualities that emanate from the mind

The distinction between the body and the mind should be understood, in this context. The body can stand still easily; but cannot run so easily. In the case of the mind, to keep it still is difficult, but it can be always fleeting. From the body arise the six enemies of man: lust, anger, greed, delusion, pride and envy. Man today is a victim of these enemies. But from the mind, many good qualities can emanate. Good qualities, good feelings, adherence to truth, devotion, discipline and discharge of duty are the six qualities that emanate from the mind. These are the traits that uphold humanness. Man is called Manuja, the one who has come from Manu, the primal author of the Dharmashaasthra (the Code of Conduct for all mankind).

These are the qualities that have to be cultivated and practised today. They are the property of man along with his mind. A good mind is a god-mind. The degeneration in education is indicated by the change in addressing a student as "good boy" in olden days, to "Bye-bye" at present.

Teachers! Inspire your students by your example. Give no room for anger, jealousy or hatred within you. Teach the children the three P's: Purity, Patience, Perseverance. Armed with these three qualities, they can protect the nation better than any army or atom bombs. When Truth and Righteousness are protected, the nation will be secure. Truth is God.

This is true for all countries, everywhere, without regard to nationality or creed. Both Truth and Righteousness transcend barriers of space and time.
 Students have 1 taught the path of spirituality. They have to acquire faith, which generates love.
 Self-confidence is the basis and Self-Realisation is the roof. That is the ultimate destiny of man-- the full realisation of his human potential by practising human values.
 Unity of head, food and God is vital for all When all concerned- from students to educational authorities-- function in this spirit, they can achieve all that they want. Teachers should not be content with merely teaching the children.
 They should contact the parents and ascertain how the children are behaving at home. Most Bal Vikas Gurus are working in rural areas. It is not enough to relate stories and reach songs and bhajans to the students. They should tell them about health, and food. For instance, in areas where fluorosis is rampant, they should teach the children how to treat the contaminated water before drinking. The teachers should reach them how to purify their heads and food to realise God. The unity of head, food and God will make them ideal citizens of Bhaarath. Unity is vital for all, wherever they are and whatever their country, religion or sex.
 Love should be the unifying force. Utilise the three days of the Conference for exploring all problems relating to your work in small groups and come to practical decisions.
 Teachers! Promote the sense of human unity among all people, without regard to race, religion or caste. Make Bhaarath the leader of the nations. The entire existence of Bhaarath is based upon spirituality. If spirituality goes, Bhaarath will cease to exist. If Bhaarath goes, the whole world will go. Faith in God is the life-breath of Bhaarath. With this faith, Bhaarath can face any challenge, Imbibe the children with confidence and courage. Unify them through Love and Love alone.
 Discourse in the Sai Ramesh Hall, Brindhavan, on 19-7-1994.
 Listen to all such things as will draw you towards the principle of Godhead; then, think it over in silence, make it over in silence, make it part of your consciousness. This process of Manana makes you a man; that is the test of man--Mananahood!
 BABA
 20. Spiritual orientation to education TEACHERS! Embodiments of Love! Educationists! students! You see light from a bulb. You enjoy the breeze from a fan. You experience the cool air from an airconditioner and warmth from a heater. But what makes them all work is one and the same electric current.

 Likewise, what you hear, what you see and think all appear to be externally different sensory experiences, but it is the intellect that enables the impressions received through the senses to be experienced.
 Right education leads to refinement of conduct. With refinement of behaviour, one's life gets sublimated. Good intellect alone can lead to happiness which is the source of peace. Proper education brings about association with good people. The company of the good is peace itself.
 Good education redeems one's life and ensures liberation as a consequence.
 When one receives education that is based on truth and eternal values, He will be able to achieve liberation without having to go through the process of submergence in Samsaara.
 Therefore, come forward to get the benefit of such education.
 Humility is an attitude of mind free from egoism
"Vidhyaa dhadhaathi Vinayam" (Education confers humility).
 Humility does not mean mere bending of the head. Only an attitude of mind free from egoism, ostentation and attachment can be called humility. Today neither teachers not parents are able to teach such humility to the children because they themselves have not cultivated that attitude.
 The water you can draw from a tap depends on the nature of the water in the tank. Today teachers and parents have not filled their minds with sacred divine feelings. How can they be expected to infuse the children with such feelings?
 Here is a piece of burning charcoal. If you take proper care of it, it will keep burning. But if you neglect it, it will soon get covered up with ashes. In the heart of every human being, there is Inaana-Agni (fire of wisdom). That fire signifies a pure heart. Today we are not able to see that fire because the heart is enveloped by the ash of worldly desires.
 When the ash is blown away, the fire will be visible. Men tend to forget the noble and ideal sentiments in their hearts because they are covered by worldly material and sensual desires.
Shri Krishna declared: "Adhyaathma-Vidhyaa Vidhyaanaam" (Among various kinds of knowledge, I am Knowledge of the Spirit). Bhaarath has given birth to countless noble souls who possessed such spiritual knowledge. People today have forgotten the message of such noble beings. Today, the noble, sublime and inspiring teachings of these high-souled sages should be imparted to our boys and girls.

A sculptor converts a block of stone into a beautiful idol. Language expresses the feeling in appropriate speech. Character takes a man on the righteous path. It is the teacher who moulds the children into exemplary human beings.

The real teacher teaches others how to live

The ignorant and the blind declare that a man, who cannot earn a living otherwise, becomes a teacher. On the contrary, the teacher is really the one who teaches others how to live.

Those good men and women who Teach children how to act righteously in the future ahead of them, And promote the spirit of equality and affection,
Are alone real teachers.

Today we treat teachers as mere employees and slight them.

Teachers, in her, are the people who indicate the royal road for human life. Teachers illumine the nation by promoting great ideals.

They are responsible for the blossoming of ideals in the young. They awaken in children the Prajna (integrated awareness) which is subtle and hard to recognise. They draw out the latent potentialities in the students. If they are encouraged to make the effort, students can accomplish anything.

Teachers are beacon-lights in idealism. It is only when the light, of the teacher shines effulgently that the light among students can-shine. The light from a teacher can light several lamps.

Recognise the importance of spiritual education

Teachers! You have to strive ceaselessly to impart to your students your sacred thoughts, your exemplary conduct and your ideals. Teachers are like guide-posts. It is only when you play this role well that you will have done your duty by the boys and girls to divinise their lives. Although secular education may appear necessary for mundane existence, the importance of a spiritual basis for it should be recognised. However, the responsibility for imparting a spiritual orientation to education rests not only on teachers, but also on the parents as well as the authorities.

In this context, students have to cultivate three qualities. "Sarvaloka hithe rathah" (One must cherish the well-being of everyone in the world). "Sarva Inaana rathah" (One must be interested in all knowledge). "Sarva sadhguna rathah" (One must foster all good qualities). Without good qualities, without seeking the welfare of the country and without good thoughts centred on God, how can one be a true human being?

It is only when the individual is good that society will progress. When the society improves the nation will progress. The welfare of the individual, society and the nation is based on the observance of human values.

From ancient times the sacred land of Bhaarath has been standing forth as a leader among nations by its spiritual wealth, ensuring their peace and security. It proclaimed the great message:
"Let all the people of all the worlds be happy."

Students should be taught to use properly, all the talents and qualities given by God to them.

Without-good qualities life is worthless. By their bad qualities students today misuse their knowledge. They should cultivate humility which can confer many benefits.

They should learn the lessons which Nature provides by way of selfless service. Every element in nature--the earth, water, the sun--demonstrate the selfless service it is rendering to man. Man, who is a child of Nature, has become a stranger to compassion and other natural qualities. By filling a prey to all kinds of desires, man has strayed away from the right path. He has not only to acquire knowledge, but wisdom. He has to combine good qualities with good practices. Book knowledge has to be translated into good deeds.

Demonstrate your unity and divinity

Teachers! You have the responsibility for reshaping the future. There is a big difference between the conference you have held here and conferences elsewhere. At other conferences, the tendency is to regard them as occasions for picnics and sight-seeing. You, who have come here at great expense, from long distances, should demonstrate your unity and divinity Do not entertain any differences of race, religion and community. Foster the Caste of Humanity, the Religion of Love and the Language of the Heart.

Teach your students that it is the same Aathma (Spirit) that dwells in all beings. You must emulate the example of the ancient rishis who were the preceptors in the Gurukulam. You must ensure by your conduct the esteem and respect of your students, who are highly intelligent. To mould the students into good citizens is a spiritual saadhana. A bad teacher will spoil the lives of many generations of students.

Dedication shown by the Gurus In fact, our teachers are very good persons. They undergo considerable trouble in rendering service. Many ladies, who have to attend to their daily chores at home, are carrying on their educational work out of their devotion to Svaami. They are treating it as a spiritual exercise. No other institution in the world can claim to perform the kind of selfless and dedicated service which the members of our Samithis, our Seva Dhal and Baala Vikaas teachers are rendering.
Whatever their difficulties, they are coming here at their own expense and bearing their food expenses. The Sathya Sai Trusts do not provide any funds, for them, nor do they seek any aid from the Trusts.
Whatever trouble you may face, you must learn to feel happy in any circumstance. If you are stung by a scorpion, you must console yourself that you were not bitten by a snake, and when you are bitten by a snake, you must console yourself that it has not proved fatal. Even if you are not able to own a vehicle, be happy that you have got your legs intact to enable you to walk.
Even if you are not a millionaire, be happy that you have enough resources to feed yourself and your family. This is the way to experience joy even while in adverse circumstances.
Ceiling on desires is a must for leading a peaceful and meaningful life.
You must curb the desire to seek more and more wealth and turn your effort to realise the Reality within. In pursuing this effort, you must avoid waste of food, money, time, energy and knowledge as all these are Forms of God. Unnecessary talk should be avoided as this results in waste of energy and reduction of memory power.
Teach children to talk softly and sweetly Besides observing the ceiling on desire, students should also practise the discipline of seeing no evil, hearing no evil, thinking no evil and doing no evil. Only when children are taught these good disciplines in the formative stage, they will grow as good persons. By leading a life without discipline, students will practically be like cars without brakes which will spell danger to the occupants. Sense-control is an essential requisite for students who are in the vulnerable stage of succumbing to the temptations of sensual pleasures.
You must teach them how to talk softly and sweetly while adhering to truth. Some mothers complain that their children don't listen to their advice and retort-

"Don't talk. I know." For this situation, the mothers alone are to be blamed because this is the result of their having allowed indulgence to their children in the earlier stages. From childhood, good things should be taught to them. When they send their wards to school, their responsibility does not cease. They should take cam to ensure that not only they study properly, but develop good behaviour, respect for parents and elders, speaking the truth and avoiding unrighteous actions.
Discourse to the Valedictory Session of the National Baal Vikaas Conference in Sai Ramesh Hall on 21-7-1994.
21. Experience the fullness of love Does life consist in working for a living, eating and sleeping, wasting one's time in meaningless gossip?
Was previous human birth given by God for this purpose? No.
At least from now on lead a truly human life and achieve fulfilment.
At the tip of the tongue dwells the Goddess of Prosperity.
At the tip of the tongue remain friends and kinsfolk.
Bondage resides at the tip of the tongue.
Death lies in wait at the tip of the tongue.
EMBODIMENTS of Divine Love! Through the power of Vaak (speech) one can acquire a kingdom or great wealth. Friends and relations can be got through speech. Through speech one gets bound and loses his freedom. Even death is brought about by speech.
Speech is the life-force of human beings. Speech is the backbone of life. It is all powerful, Jayadheva addressed his tongue as follows- "Oh tongue! You know all about the sweetness of speech! You enjoy truth and goodness; chant the sweet and sacred names of the Lord. Govindha!
Daamodhara! Maadhava! Don't indulge in reviling any one. Speak, sweetly and softly."
The reasons for declining discipline
"Anudvegakaram Vaakyam Sathyam Prithihithamcha yath" (Let your speech be truthful, pleading and good and free from resentment) says Krishna in the Geetha. Unfortunately, because such sacred and sweet speech has become scarce, society is riddled with bitterness and discord.
The permissiveness of a crazy civilization has destroyed discipline and morality and turned society into an inferno. Society today is divided in a myriad ways and there is no peace. On account of differences of caste and creed, linguistic and parochial loyalties and desires of various kinds, violent conflicts have turned the social scene into a graveyard. Human life is vitiated by selfishness and the pursuit of ephemeral pleasures, forgetting what is eternal and true. Selfishness is rampant. Even affection for parents and children is tainted with selfishness. Man today has become a plaything in the hands of selfishness.

On the one side, man has achieved astonishing progress in science and technology, especially in the fields of electronics, synthetics, atomic power and exploration of space. On the other side we witness political and economic crises, caste and communal conflicts and students agitation. Today, moral values are steadily declining among men. In the moral, ethical and spiritual spheres, men's attitudes are deteriorating alarmingly. Even well-versed scholars and eminent public figures are caught up in the coil of bitter controversies because of narrow-minded thinking. Unity among the people is being shattered by the ideological and sectarian differences among persons who are well educated and intellectually eminent. Intellectuals who promote discord are on the increase, but there are few who promote unity in diversity. At the root of all these tendencies is the fact that mankind has still not got out of the animal stage.

Men have to realise that essentially they are divine in origin. The individual selves have come from the ocean of Sath-Chith-Aanandha, like waves from the ocean. It is only when this truth is realised that men can experience true bliss. The need for men and women with sacred ideals To transform the world from its present state, there is no need. for a new social system or a new religion or creed. What is essential is a body of men and women with sacred ideals. When there are such godly souls the country will enjoy divine dispensation. But such godly persons can survive only in a society in which there is purity of mind and good character. For these two to blossom, the basis is morality. But morality cannot flourish without spirituality. Hence the mansion of the good society has to be built on the foundation of spirituality, with the pillars of purity and character, and with morality as the roof. The reputation and gloat of Bhaarith have been founded on spirituality from ancient times. Bhaarith achieved this name and fame because of noble men, women of great virtue and exemplary children. Their ideals still shine today. Harishchandhra, Nala and others are still remembered for their adherence to truth. Heroic women like Saavithri, who by her devotion and determination brought back to life her dear husband from the hand of Death, and Seetha, who faced all ordeals in Lanka as a captive, ensured the welfare and prosperity of the country by their exemplary character. Today morality and character are at a discount. Money alone counts. But money and all that it can give will not confer peace. Peace can be got only when man manifests his inner divinity. The Divine is the Indweller in every being. Hence no one should have ill-will towards anybody. Man, however is dominated today by selfishness. His thoughts, his looks, his words and actions are all tainted by selfishness. He is a slave of his senses. In short, humanness is in ruins. Manifest the compassion that resides in the heart. The first requisite is sense-control. Man is today enveloped in evil qualities like jealousy and hatred. Man has to manifest compassion, which resides in the heart. Once Saint Thyaagaraaja, for a moment, developed doubts about Raama's prowess and later realised that Raama could not have commanded the allegiance and devotion of men like Lakshmana and Bhaarith if he was not all-powerful. From this one episode, you have to understand that if Sai did not have unique power, would He be able to attract persons from America, England and other countries? If there is no power in Sai how do you imagine devotees from any countries to come to Him? Are they such innocents? Or are they witless persons? Not at all. They are all persons of great intelligence. Intelligence alone is not enough. They have to be filled with divine feelings. It should be realised that the divinity in human beings cannot be measured in terms of worldly goods. It has to be measured in terms of Love. Mankind has to understand this Love Principle. When there is Love, there will be no hatred. Without hatred, there will be no threat to peace in society. To ensure peace, society has to promote Love. This means that the mind has to be filled with loving thoughts. The significance of Gurupurnima The moon is the presiding deity for the mind. Today, it is Purnima (Full Moon day). What does Purnima signify? It means the completion of the full circle by returning to the starting point.

One half of the circle is represented by worldly life. It is like the letter "C". This is equated with science, which is incomplete knowledge. The full circle represented by the moon represents the state of the mind when it is filled with Love.

Gurupurnima is observed today. Guru means Big. Guru has also another meaning: Gu means darkness and Ru means dispelling. Guru metres one who dispels darkness (the preceptor who dispels the darkness of ignorance). Gurupurnima is the day on which one celebrates the dispersal of the darkness of ignorance from the mind. Hence, people should fill their minds with the all-embracing Love Principle. To experience the fullness of Love, you have to fill your hearts completely with Love. That will be the result of total devotion. But today devotion is not total. The benefit also is partial. Part-time devotees cannot expect total reward. The Lord confers full grace on those whose hearts are totally filled with devotion.

Spiritual aspirants may follow any one of the nine paths of devotion and realise the Divine.

Among these, the attitude of friendship towards God is one to be cherished because God is the only true and enduring friend for everyone.

The destiny of the world is based on Bhaarath

In the process of achieving oneness with the Divine, the first stage is for everyone to consider himself as a messenger of God. Every Indian should propagate Baba's message of spirituality.

All of you should take note of this supreme fact: If spirituality goes in Bhaarath, Bhaarath will be mined. When Bhaarath goes, the whole world will go. The destiny of the world is based on Bhaarath.

It is because spirituality was being forgotten that Bhaarath became a prey to all kinds of ills.

Love has virtually disappeared. Humanness has decayed. Humanness can exist only when the minds are holy. Man is called Manuja, which means one who is descended from Manu, who gave to mankind the Dharmashaasthra (the Code of Righteous conduct). The courts today do not follow the code of Manu. Justice has become a creature of time, circumstances and money.

Dharma transcends the limitations of space, time and circumstances. Today we have forgotten

Manu.

We have also forgotten Kautilya. He was the author of Arthashaasthra (the laws of economics and statecraft). Our economy today is in utter disorder. Kautilya's teachings have to be relearned.

Failing to uphold the ideals of great men like Harishchandra, who sacrificed everything for truth, the people today are becoming slaves of the senses.

Children should be taught to respect all religions

Teachers! Teach your young pupils the ideals of Bhaarath's great sages, heroes and heroines, who upheld the highest virtues and set an example to the world. They should be taught to behave as ideal sons like Shraavanakumar. One good son can redeem a whole family. Ekalavya exemplifies supreme devotion to the Guru. Prahlaadha should be held out as supreme example of total faith in God. Teachers should instill such devotion to God in the young.

In the name of secularism, governments should not interfere with the practise of their respective religions by the citizens. No one should criticize the creed of others. The divinity that is adored by all religions is one and the same, though different names may be used. In the name of religion, violent conflicts are encouraged. Children should be taught to respect all religions.

Teachers should also make the children realise the true purpose of education. Education should be a preparation for righteous living and not for earning money. Good qualities are more valuable than money. Sathyabhaama was made to realise that the name of the Lord and a thulasi leaf offered to Him were more valuable than all her jewels when weighed in the balance against Krishna.

Teachers should practise the precepts which they teach to the children. If they teach the children not to quarrel or not to smoke, they should also refrain from such conduct.

Teachers! You have put up with many inconveniences and difficulties during the past three days out of your devotion to Svaami. You regarded this as spiritual exercise. The body is intended to serve as an instrument for realising righteousness. There is no gain without pain. Sacrifice is the means for attaining immortality. Love and sacrifice are like two eyes for man. Whatever sacrifice you make, treat it as an offering to God. Then work will be transformed into worship.

All that Svaami wants from you is only your Love.

Discourse on 22-7-1994, in the Sai Ramesh Hall, Brindhaavan.

The character of the children must be made strong and pure. Give them all the confidence and courage they need to become good, honest, and self-reliant children. It is not enough if they learn something by which they can make a living. The manner of living is more important than the standard of living.

 BABA
 22. Devotion is pure love for God
 What harm can Kali do to one Whose heart is compassionate,
 Whose speech is adorned by Truth,
 And whose limbs are used to serve others?
 EMBODIMENTS of love! Any human being who has compassion for others, who adheres to Truth and who dedicates his body to the good of others will experience no serious trouble. The primary reason is one's devotion to God.
Bhakthi (Devotion) is not something which man can acquire by himself. It is indeed the inherent principle animating man. Devotion manifests itself as love. This love is the supreme treasure of man. It is this treasure which enables man to live in this world. But few persons recognise this truth.
 Time moves like a whirlwind. The allotted span of life for the body is melting away every moment like a block of ice. However, even before recognizing what is his duty, man departs from this world. What is the aim of human life? What is a man's duty? It is to discover this truth that God has endowed man with a body. "Paropakaara artham idham shareeram" (This body is given for rendering help to others)
 We live in society, depending on it for our needs. But, forgetting what they owe to society, people lead selfish, self-centred lives. Service to society is the primary, Karma (duty). Concern for the welfare of all is Bhakthi (devotion). "Let all people be happy." Awareness of this feeling is Inaana (true knowledge).
 Devotion is a fragment of the Divine
 Without recognizing the duty to serve society, without concern for the welfare of society, how can the all-encompassing desire for the happiness of all, which is devotion, arise in anyone?
 These three are intimately related like flower, render fruit and ripe fruit. The ripe fruit of devotion confers the wisdom which eliminates differences. Devotion is a fragment of the Divine.
 Without devotion, awareness of the Divine cannot be experienced. Equally, devotion without consciousness of the Divine can only breed Ahamkaara (egoism).
 Different people experience the bliss derived from devotion in different ways. One devotee begins with repeatedly reciting the word, Dhaasoham, dhaasoham (I am His servant), expresses his devotion as a servant of the lord. In course of time, by frequent repetition of this word and reminding himself of the Lord, he reaches the stage where the 'daa' drops away and only 'soham' remains. He begins to realise that he and the Lord are one. Starting as the servant of the Lord, he realises his identity with the Lord.

 Another devotee, starting with a consciousness of the material body, contemplating on the Self, merges in the higher Consciousness. How is he able to experience this subtle consciousness to the physical body? Without this earthly body, the Chinmaya (subtle Self) cannot be experienced.
 How did the transformation take place? How did the realisation come that the Divine and the individuals self are not different, but are inextricably linked to each other? This is because the Divine and the jeeva (the individual self) are united like substance and shadow. That is why Vedhaantha declares "Eeshvaras sarva bhuuthaanaam" (Lord dwells in all living beings).
 Krishna described Arjuna as friend and devotee
 Recognition of this truth is the essential mark of devotion. Bhakthi is derived from the combination of the verb "Bhai" with the indeclinable "thi": Bhakthi means seva (service). It also means friendship coupled with fear. Without fear friendship cannot be firm. In the Geetha, Krishna refers to Arjuna as friend and kinsman. "Besides being a friend, you are also my servant," said. Krishna. Thereby, Krishna regarded Arjuna as a devotee. When one is a devotee he is reverential and submissive. If one is treated solely as a friend and not a devotee, he is likely to behave as he pleases. To maintain the balance between the two, Krishna described Arjuna as friend and devotee.
 In this relationship, there is equality and oneness. For this to be achieved, one has to get rid of Dhehabhraanthi (the identification with the body). The ancient sages observed rigorous penances to get rid of Dhehabhraanthi and in due course experienced Aathmabhraanthi (identity with the Self).
Dheha-prema and dhaiva-prema
 In this context, the twofold nature of Prema (love) has to be understood. One is Dheha-Prema (love associated with the body). The other is Dhaiva-Prema (Divine love). Dheha-prema relates to experiences associated with the physical, the sensory and the natural. It is the identification with the body that accounts for all sufferings and miseries. It is portentous and produces inauspicious results.

Divine love on the contrary, is sacred and leads to auspicious and enduring well-being. Grief and trouble are alien to divine love. Divine love sustains itself and is lasting. Bodily love depends on others and is evanescent.

Every man should seek to acquire this divine love. The body, however, is an impediment in the way. The entire world is caught up in the vast net of Anuraaga (attachment). This attachment is an amazing Maaya (delusory) phenomenon. There is no connection between the body composed of the Panchabhuthas (five basic elements) and the transcendental Aathma (Self). But the delusory power of Maaya in the form of attachment brings about a link between the two. If this were not the case, what is the relationship between one person and another? Who is a wife and who is a husband? Who is a mother and who is a son? All these relationships have been brought about by Anuraaga (attachment born of desire) and not by love. There is no attachment between mother and son before the child is born. But after birth, Vaathsalyam (maternal affection) arises.

This affection is based on bodily relationship and is by its nature temporary.

Attachment to the body is a kind of disease

Divine Love exists before birth, after birth and continues forever. No effort is made by men to understand this true and enduring love. Attachment to the body is a kind of disease which has to be treated by three kinds of remedies. One is observing dietary restrictions while taking the medicine. If diet regulations are not observed, the medicine alone will not cure the disease. Diet control without the medicine will be equally ineffective. Both diet control and medicine are equally necessary for curing the disease. With regard to the disease of attachment to the body, one has to abide by divine injunctions and practise love for the Divine to get rid of the ailment.

Observing the Divine injunctions without love for God will not be efficacious. Equally, devotion without observance of the Lord's commands will be useless. Love is the medicine and God's injunctions are the diet restrictions. It is by the presence of both, that Divinity in man can be made to manifest itself.

For all the troubles, chaos and discord present in the world today, the root cause is attachment to the body which breeds selfishness and self-centredness. Concern for the body is necessary upto a point. But excessive attachment to the demands of the body is harmful, because the body is essentially fragile and liable to break up any moment at any place. The body, of course, needs to be protected and allowed rest and recreation. But all these should be only for the purpose of enabling it to discharge one's duty.

"Discharge of duty is Yoga," says the Geetha. What is this duty? It is assumed that duty relates to one's professional or occupational responsibilities, as lawyer, doctor, etc. This is not duty at all because these actions are performed for selfish reasons, to earn money. The Sanskrit word Karthavyam means that you are not free to act as you please and you have to respect the rights of others on the same basis as you expect others to respect your rights. The terms duty or right should not be misused.

True devotion knows no differences. Equally, in respect of the term Bhakthi, devotion is equated with performing puujas, observing rituals, going on pilgrimages, etc. But these are not the true insignia of devotion. The true mark of devotion is pure love of God. Without this pure love, bhajans, worship and the like are artificial exercises and are valueless. They may appear to be devotional acrs, but they do not contain the essential sweetness of devotion. They resemble plastic flowers and fruits. A life without love is like a barren wasteland. True devotion knows no differences. It sees unity in diversity. Today, devotion is marked by various differences. Though God is one, He is worshipped in many forms. Can this be called devotion? No. The one God is broken into fragments. On the other hand, man has to unite the fragments and see the One. The Upanishaths proclaimed the unity suffusing the multiplicity as the Aathmik Principle.

Today you have a myriad individuals, but the Spirit that dwells in all of them is one and the same.

"Ekovasee Sarvabhutha antharaathma" (The Indwelling Spirit is one in all beings). God is one but is called by different names. It is our of self-interest that God is worshipped under different names and forms by different people.

What has to be recognized today when people talk about devotion is the oneness of the Divine.

The love of God should be developed. Love for all other worldly things is bound to change. Only love for the Divine can be unchanging.

The Bhaagavatham proclaims the glory of Divine love. Bhaagavatham is described as a sacred book on Bhagavaan (Divine). Another interpretation is that the Bhaagavatham deals with the greatness of devotees of the Lord. Yet another explanation is that the Bhaagavatham describes the intimate relationship between God and devotees. It is this relationship that should be developed by all devotees. People feel distressed when some one among their kinsfolk is ill. If such is the affection they bear towards relations who are associated with them for brief periods, how much more love should one have towards the eternal Lord? Best way to serve God is to love all, serve all. One should regard love for God as the greatest treasure one can have. When you love God, you will have love towards all because the Divine is in everyone. Therefore bear in mind: Love all; serve all. The best way to serve God is to love all and serve all. Your devotion will get diluted if you entertain differences between people. Devotion to Raama or Krishna becomes meaningless if you do not practise their teachings. The worship of the Lord should be accompanied by leading a Godly life. Only the bliss can be experienced. Today people carry on routine reading of scriptural texts like the Geetha or the Bible. This serves no purpose unless they lead pure and sacred lives. They should fill their hearts with love of God and share that love with others. There can be no greater demonic quality than hatred towards God. The Divine is both protector and destroyer. For Prahlada, who was a staunch devotee, the Lord was a protector. To Hiranyakashipu (Prahlada's father), who hated God, the Divine became the destroyer. God showers His grace according to one's deserts. He is the embodiment of Love. One's bad qualities prevent one from realising the grace of God. The fault lies with the individuals and not with God. Hrishikesh sevanam Bhakthiruchyathe (Service to the Lord is called devotion). If you fill your heart with love of God, you will secure all powers. Therefore, live in love. Redeem your lives through love. Let love become your life-breath and the sole goal of your life. Discourse in the Sai Ramesh Hall on 21-8-1994. Develop Prema (Love) towards the Lord, the Parama-Prema (Highest Love) of which He is the embodiment. Never give room for doubts and hesitations, for questions, to test the Lord's Prema. BABA

23. The glory of Krishna Avathaar

EMBODIMENTS of love! It was the middle of the Dhvaapara Yuga. Unable to bear the atrocities committed on good people by demonic rulers, the Goddess of Earth prayed to the Lord in many ways. Offering solace to the grief-stricken Goddess, the Lord said; "Dhevi! You may return to the earth. I shall do what needs to be done. You will be relieved of your Burden." Encouraging her in this way the Lord sent Mother Earth back to the world. Thereafter, the Lord summoned all the Dhevas (denizens of the celestial world) and directed them to take birth as Yaadhavas. The originator of the Yaadhava clan is Yayaathi. His eldest son was known as Yadhu. The descendants of Yadhu came to be known in course of time as Yaadhavas. Among the yaadhavas, there was a chief known as Aahuka, who was a righteous person, wedded to truth. The characters figuring in the Krishna legend belong to Aahuka's lineage. Aahuka had two sons Dhevaka and Ugrasena. Kamsa was the son of Ugrasena. Dhevaki was the daughter of Dhevaka. Kamsa had no sister of his own. He had great affection for his cousin Dhevaki, whom he treated as his own uterine sister. The warning to Kamsa from the ethereal voice In the Yaadhava clan, there was one Vasudheva, the son of Shura. Vasudheva was one of the satraps in the Yaadhava kingdom. He was known as one who stood by his plighted word. Ugrasena and Kamsa, after a great deal of search, picked upon Vasudheva as a suitable bridegroom for Dhevaki. Vasudheva already had a wife by the name Rohini. In those rimes, there were no restrictions regarding polygamy. Because he had no child through Rohini, Vasudheva agreed to marry Dhevaki. After the marriage, Kamsa got ready his chariot to take Vasudheva and Dhevaki to their home. Kamsa drove the chariot himself with a heavy heart, overwhelmed by the prospect of separation from his beloved cousin. Dhevaki was as dear to Kamsa as his life-breath. At the time of her leaving her paternal home, Dhevaki was presented with many precious gifts by Ugrasena, besides a retinue of elephants, horses and guardsmen. While the chariot was proceeding in a grand manner, all of a sudden a loud voice was heard from the sky: "You fool! You do not know what is in store for you. The one who will slay you for all your misdeeds will be born as the eighth child of your sister." After saying this, the ethereal spirit vanished.

The moment Kamsa heard these words, he flew into a rage. He jumped down from the chariot, seized Dhevaki by the hair, unsheathed his sword to cut off her head. Vasudheva, who was the very embodiment of peace, truth and righteousness, held Kamsa's hands and asked him why he was worried so much over the prospect of death. "Death is inevitable, whether today or in time to come. Whatever you may do to protect yourself, death will come in its own time even if you hide yourself in a forest. All beings that are born are destined to die. Kamsa! The ethereal voice declared that death will come to you from the hands of the eighth child (of Dhevaki) and not immediately. There are many years ahead before the eighth child. It is not proper that you should lose your temper. Release the girl whom you had loved as your sister. I shall hand over to you every child that is born to her." When Vasudheva gave his pledge, Kamsa realised the truth of his words and released Dhevaki from his hold.

Kamsa returned to his palace without getting back into the chariot. Sage Naaradha's advice to Kamsa Vasudheva and Dhevaki reached their home with heavy hearts. As days passed by and Kamsa was immersed in worry about the prospect of death, Sage Naaradha came to him one day. After talking about world affairs in general, before leaving, Naaradha told Kamsa-"You are verily a fool. You are not aware of your real plight. The ethereal voice said that (Dhevaki's) eighth child will be your slayer. But you cannot know from which of her children death will come to you. You cannot rake a chance with any of them." From that moment Kamsa's distress and fear increased. He commanded Vasudheva to hand over to him every child. He killed six of the newborn children as they were handed over to him.

When Dhevaki was enceinte for the seventh time, Sriman Naarayana made all arrangements to carry out His promise to Mother Earth. To promote the welfare of the world, to establish Dharma among mankind, to uphold truth and to instill devotion to God in humanity, the Divine process had to be set in motion. The Dhevas took birth as Yaadhavas. Vishnu summoned His allpervading Yoga Shakthi (The Cosmic Energy), and said "Go forth immediately and enter the womb of Yasodha." Summoning Aadhishesha (the Divine Serpent) the Lord directed him to go to Gokulam and enter the womb of Rohini (Vasudheva's elder wife). "I shall be entering the womb of Dhevaki." Krishna's birth in prison

In Dhevaki's seventh pregnancy, the Lord had the foetus transferred to Rohini's womb and Kamsa was informed that Dhevaki had an abortion. Krishna made His advent in her eighth pregnancy. Apprehending danger from Kamsa, Vasudheva arranged to send Rohini to Nandha's home. Rohini was a sister of Yasodha.

Expecting mortal danger to himself from the eighth child of Dhevaki, Kamsa kept Vasudheva and Dhevaki in a heavily guarded prison. He kept the key of the prison lock with himself.

Dhevaki gave birth to a son on an Ashtami (eighth day after the New Moon) in the asterism Rohini. The Child that was born was the Lord Himself with all His effulgence and all the insignia of Vishnu. On the child's chest was the Srivathsa mole. The Kausthubha ornament shone brilliantly. Dhevaki and Vasudheva folded their hands in adoration, blinded by the effulgence of the Divine Child. They felt that their lives had been redeemed by the birth of the Lord, whom they saw with their own eyes. Approaching the baby and caressing his palms and feet, they prayed to the Lord: "Thanks to our good fortune, you have taken birth as our son. But we are not in a position to protect you. You must use your divine potency to get away from this prison by any means. The ways of the Divine are marvellous and mysterious Vasudheva sat beside the child and started praying. Immediately a basket appeared before him. Placing the Divine child in the basket he looked at the prison door. He saw that it was open. The ways of the Divine are marvellous and mysterious, felt Vasudheva. He stepped out of the prison. He found all the guards sound asleep. As he came out, there was a heavy downpour. The Yamuna was in spate. He prayed to Naarayana to see that there was no impediment in the way of his mission to protect the Divine child. The Yamuna gave him passage. He reached Nandha's house. The same day Yasodha had given birth to a child. Yasodha was unconscious. The child was none other than Maayaadhevi. When she was born, both Nandha and Yasodha were in a state of trance. Leaving the infant Krishna by the side of Yasodha, Vasudheva returned to Mathura with the other child. When Vasudheva left Nandha's house, the child left beside Yasodha uttered a cry. Yasodha and Nandha did not know whether the newborn was a boy or girl. On hearing the child's cry, Yasodha looked at it and found that it was a boy. Vasudheva took the female child back to his prison. There the child started crying. On hearing the cry, all the guards woke up. They returned the prison gates closed. They informed Kamsa about the birth of the child. Kamsa, who had been anxiously waiting for the news, rushed to the prison. Seizing the new-born child from Dhevaki's hands, he flung it up in the air to slay it with his sword. The child, Maayaadhevi, spoke from above, "You fool! The boy who is going to slay you is already born. He is growing up in a certain place. You cannot escape your destined end." Saying this, Maayaadhevi vanished. Kamsa's nightmare about his killer From that moment, Kamsa was engaged in finding out the whereabouts of the child that was to be his slayer. He released Vasudheva and Dhevaki from prison. Once, Vasudheva and Nandha, as satraps in Kamsa's kingdom, came to Mathura to pay their annual tribute to him. While they were returning, Vasudheva and Nandha were lamenting over their plight. Vasudheva observed that in Repalle (Nandha's place) some inauspicious events seemed to be impending. "In Gokulam also some untoward events are likely to happen. Nandha, do not stay in Mathura for long. Leave the place immediately." On hearing this warning, Nandha immediately returned to Repalle. In Repalle, demoniac elements were all the time moving about actively. The first of them was Puuthana. She lost her life while giving suck to Krishna. This Puuthana in a previous life was Rathnaavali, the daughter of Emperor Bali. The Lord as Vaamana appeared as an extremely handsome young lad at the sacrifice being performed by Bali. Rathnaavali was charmed by the beauty of Vaamana and felt how much she would have enjoyed rearing him if he had been her son. As she was having these thoughts, she found that Vaamana had placed his foot on Bali's head (after he had measured two footsteps). Enraged at this sight, she was filled with desire to kill him. Because she desired at first to fondle Vaamana as a child and later to kill him, she was born as Puuthana and came to Krishna to feed him and kill him. In the end, she lost her life. The Lord has His own ways of fulfilling the desires of people. Hence, it is essential to have good thoughts and good desires. Child Krishna proves that He is Divine When Krishna was three years old he saw an old lady carrying a basket of fruits from the jungle. Krishna told her he would like to have some fruits. The old woman said he could get them only if he paid the price Krishna innocently asked the meaning of the word price. The woman said that something should be given in return for the fruit. Krishna went in and brought a palmful of rice. The woman placed the rice in her basket and gave Krishna some fruits. She was charmed by the beauty of the child. As she was returning to her cottage, she felt that the basket was getting heavier. When she placed it down in her hut, she was amazed to find that all the rice grains had turned into precious gems! She thought the child must be divine. Otherwise how could the rice turn into gems? Considering herself supremely lucky, she invited her neighbours to see the miracle. Krishna was pleading with Yasodha that he should be allowed to go to the forest with other cowherd boys. Thinking that if he was put to sleep he would forget his desire to go to the forest, Yasodha gave him milk. Krishna was no ordinary child. While drinking the milk, he pretended as if he was sleepy. He made a pretence of yawning to indicate his drowsiness. In that wide open mouth of Krishna, Yasodha saw all kinds of things---all the worlds in motion and many deities. She could not make out what it meant. "Is it a dream or Vishnu's Maaya (illustrious power)? Or is it some fantasy of mine? Or is it real? Am I Yasodha? Have I gone somewhere?" These thoughts racked her mind. "My son is an infant. How can all the worlds appear in his tiny mouth? It must be my imagination." Such doubts arise in the minds of those who are caught up in the delusions of the body complex. How child Krishna fought with the demons Yielding to his entreaties Yasodha allowed Krishna to go to the forest with the cowherd boys. Almost every day Krishna encountered some ogre or ogress and slayed them. His playmates used to describe to their elders these exploits of Krishna, how he fought with the demons and finished them off. Yasodha, however, used to say: "God is taking care of my child. Otherwise how could he overcome these encounters?" The cowherd boys observed: "When he himself is God, why does he need anybody's protection, oh mother!" Yasodha felt that the boys were naive in their judgment. "Will God come to one's rescue so easily? It is only because of my prayers, my child is protected." With this belief, Yasodha used to perform various rites, when Krishna returned from the forest, to express her gratitude to Providence for saving him from the evil eye and other dangers.

There was great rejoicing among the Dhevas (celestial beings) when they heard about the slaying of many demons on earth by Lord Naarayana in His incarnation as Krishna. On hearing these stories, Brahma wanted to verify the truth about Krishna's prowess red the miracles attributed to him.

Brahma verifies Krishna's prowess
That same night Krishna gave a directive to his mares. "Today do not rake the cows for grazing. Let us rake the calves. Come with the calves together with your respective musical instruments. We must spend the day with music." Most of them came with flutes on which they could play well, holding a stick in one hand and a flute in the other. Only two boys brought two mud-pots to be used as drums. Playing on the mud-pot is known today as Ghatavaadhyam. This art is as ancient as the Dhvaapara Yuga.

The cowherd boys gathered on the bank of the Yamuna with calves. Some of them played on their flutes, some drummed their mud-pots while Krishna danced to the music. When Krishna stopped dancing, others started dancing. After sometime, Daama, one of the two intimate friends of Krishna (the other being Subaala), told Krishna that he was feeling hungry and would like to have some palm-fruits from palm trees a little far away. Balaraama, who was close by, said he would fetch the fruits. Balaraama went near the trees and shook them. All the fruits dropped brown. At the time of the naming ceremony of the child Balaraama, the sage Garga referred to the strength of the baby and said that the name Balaraama would be appropriate for him. At that time, a huge donkey appeared there. All were frightened. The donkey was getting bigger and bigger. Balaraama seized the donkey by the forelegs and dashed it to the ground. It died on the spot. The cowherd boys hailed Balaraama as a hero and danced in joy.

Biding his time, Brahma created at that moment a huge cave. He took into the cave all the calves, while the cowherd boys were immersed in merriment. Missing the calves, the boys started searching for them, shouting "Krishna! Krishna!" Krishna knew what was 'afoot and directed his mates to search for the calves in the cave nearby. They all went into the cave. Immediately the mouth of the cave closed in. The boys and the calves were caught inside. They were there for a whole year.

Brahma realises the inscrutable ways of the Lord
Krishna wanted to teach Brahma a lesson. He took the form of all the calves and all the Gopaalas imprisoned in the cave. In the evening Krishna and Balaraama took the calves and the boys back to their homes. This went on day after day for a whole year. The elders assumed that the calves and the boys were their own. Brahma wondered what was happening? Had Krishna managed to free the boys and the calves from the cave? When he went into the cave he found all of them inside. He was amazed to find that the same boys and calves were inside as well as outside. He then realised the inscrutable way of the Lord. "How can anyone know you, oh Krishna You are subtler than the atom and vaster than the vaste in creation. You dwell in all the myriad species in all the world, how can anyone know you?" He prayed to Krishna to forgive him and released the calves and the boys from the cave.

This episode reveals that the Supreme Lord can assume countless forms. He can assume the form of the entire cosmos. That is why the Upanishath declared- "The entire cosmos is dwelt in by God." All are forms of the Divine.

How is this possible? By the power of the Will of God. If a man, while asleep, experiences all kinds of things in the dream, including his own movements, while in fact he is motionless on his bed, what is it that is beyond the power of the Supreme Lord? Seeing the Divine in-human form people can have doubts whether the incarnation can have such miraculous powers when he has the same body as themselves. They do not perceive the oneness of the Aathma. It is difficult to recognise the Divine in the human form.

Krishna's leelas were intended to reveal His Divinity
Not recognizing His Divinity many people reviled Krishna calling him a philanderer and a thief.

These accusations do not detract from His greatness. They are born of delusion. Men make the same mistake about themselves, forgetting their inherent divinity and identifying themselves with their bodies. Krishna appeared in human form to teach mankind to transcend their body consciousness.

Krishna's leelas (sportive miracles) were intended in one way or another to reveal His divinity.

Once Balarama teased Krishna by declaring: "You are not Yasodha's son. You may ask why I say so. This is because Nandha and Yasodha are of fair complexion and you are dark. You are not their child. You must have been born somewhere else."

What Balarama said was true and Krishna knew it. But assuming an air of innocence, Krishna went to Yasodha and complained "Mother! Balarama is saying that I am not your son. Tell me the truth." Yasodha replied: "Krishna! What does Balarama know? He is an innocent boy. You are very cute. You are highly intelligent. Don't pay any heed to his words. You are truly my son.

The colour given by God is permanent. Colour as such is not important. Many people paint themselves in different ways to conceal their identity. All these are momentary. The colour given by God cannot be changed by anyone. God likes the dark complexion. You have got the colour of the Divine."

Gopikas' spiritual love for Krishna

The Gopikas used to describe Krishna in many ways. Their love for Krishna was entirely spiritual. Their feelings were absolutely pure.

While Pareekshith was listening to Shuka's narration of Krishna's leelas, many doubts occurred to him. Shuka resolved all the doubts. "Pareekshith! You are viewing things from a worldly point of view and missing the truth. No one can determine the form of the Divine. He can assume any form at any time. But, when he has to demonstrate the nature of Divinity to mankind, He has to come in human form. But man, because of his polluted mind is unable to recognise the Divine in human form."

Even Yasodha, despite many occasions in which Krishna demonstrated His divinity, continued to regard him as a human child and frequently thanked the Lord for saving her child from many dangers. But Krishna tried to change her view by the words He used on different occasions.

Once when Yasodha asked Krishna whether it was true, as alleged by Balarama, that he was in the habit of eating mud, Krishna replied: "Mother, am I a child, or a naughty boy or madcap to eat mud? People are mad about me. I am here to cure the world of its madness." From these words Yasodha began to realise that Krishna was no ordinary Child but a manifestation of the Divine.

The ways of the Avathaar

There are many subtle truths relating to an incarnation which cannot be easily understood.

Merely to describe the various sports and exploits of Krishna as a child is only a pastime. God's ways are infinite and inscrutable. No one can determine or dictate to God how He should act. He can transform anything in a moment.

It must be clearly understood that Krishna was such a manifestation of the Divine. The name Krishna has to be properly understood. "Krish" + "Na" = Krishna.

This means that He is one who cultivates (Krish) the heart. "Karsh" + "Na" is another derivation, which indicates that Krishna is one who attracts--Karshathi-ithi-Krishnah. Krishna attracts people not only by the matchless beauty of His form. He attracts people by his music, his dance, his sports and his words. Krishna, by His winsome ways, could turn the anger of the Gopis towards him because of his pranks, into an enjoyable joke.

Not was that all. Krishna, in fulfilling the pledge He had given to Mother Earth, rid the world of many wicked rulers and sought to establish the reign of Righteousness for the protection of the good.

The Divine incarnates from age to age for the purpose of protecting the virtuous, punishing the wicked and establishing Dharma. Krishna is said to have destroyed many wicked persons. But this is not quite correct. It is their own wickedness which destroyed these evil persons.

Today if the Divine wants to punish the wicked and protect the righteous, there will not be even one wholly righteous person. All will qualify for punishment. It is not a question of destroying the wicked. The task today is to transform Adharma (unrighteousness) into Dharma (righteousness). How is this to be done? Through love alone.

Men's thoughts determine their destiny

Krishna also changed the hearts of many people through love. It may be asked: "Is it not Krishna who killed Kamsa?" Not at all. This is the text-book version. In truth, it was Kamsa's own heated bhrama (delusion) which killed him. He was always haunted by the fear of Krishna. His death was a result and a reaction of that fear.

Men's thoughts determine their destiny. Hence, men should cultivate good thoughts and eschew all bad feelings.

God has no dislike for anyone. He envies no one. He has no ill-will towards anyone. Not does He have favourites. The grace one gets is the result of one's own feelings.

"Bhaavaatheetham

Thriguna rahitham" (The Divine is beyond feelings and attributes).

He is "Ekam Sathyam

Vimalam Achalam" (the One, Truth, Pure, Immovable). He is

"Sarvadhee Saakshibhuutham"

(Eternal Witness in all minds).

When devotees complain now-a-days why they are being punished by the Lord in various ways, they do not realise that it is not God who is punishing them. Their own fears and fancies are the cause of their troubles. He alone is a true devotee who recognises that his sufferings are the consequence of his own bad thoughts and actions.

One such devotee was Kunthidhevi, sister of Vasudheva (and mother of the Paandavas). She was Krishna's maternal aunt.

Kunthi's strange prayer to Krishna

Krishna was leaving Hashtinaapura for Dhvaaraka. He was bidding farewell to all his kinsfolk and taking leave of Dharmaja and others. Everyone silently accepted his decision. The chariot was ready for Krishna's departure. But the Divine can change his mind at any moment. After taking leave of all others he went to Kunthi. Kunthi told him-"Krishna! All the troubles we experienced were due to our delusions. If Dharmaja had not been lured by the game of dice, would we have been subject to exile in the forest and all the troubles we went through? Hence my children were the root cause of all our troubles. You are always our protector. During all our troubles I always remembered you. In the world people remember God only in times of trouble and not when they are happy Therefore, Krishna, as long as I have a body, give me always difficulties. However, having had you with us all these years, we are deeply distressed to see you part from us. I have no power to change your mind. I only pray do not forget this aunt of yours."

After that, Krishna went to Uthara (Abhimanyu's wife). Hearing that Krishna was leaving for Dhvaaraka, Uthara ran towards Krishna and fell at his feet. "Lord! Since Abhimanyu's death, I have been trying hard to bear the pain that is gnawing at my bosom. There is a fire burning in my womb. I cannot divine the reason. You should not leave at all for Dhvaaraka now. You must stay

You have been the protector of my forebears for many generations. You were the saviour of the Paandavas. The child in my womb is the only hope of the Paandava clan. If anything untoward happens to that child, the Paandava dynasty will be extinguished. Therefore, you must not leave." So saying, Uthara firmly clung to Krishna's feet.

Krishna was immediately moved by Uthara's deep devotion. The journey to Dhvaaraka was given up. Krishna made a promise to Uthara. "I will not leave for Dhvaaraka till your child is born," assured Krishna. At that moment, Dharmaja and his brothers, Dhraupadhi and Subhadhra praised Uthara's devotion to the Lord. Though young in years, Uthara was pre-eminent in her devotion. This was because when she was enceinte, Krishna entered her womb to protect the foetus from the Brahmaasthra (a terrible missile) of Ashvathama. She had a vision in a dream of Krishna entering her womb. From that moment she was ceaselessly chanting the name of Krishna and seeing Krishna in every person and every object.

Because of this, when the child was born, Krishna named him Pareekshith as he rested everyone till he recognized Krishna.

Divine madness of Gopikas has a lesson for all

It is clear that the leelas (miracles) of God are inexplicable and infinite. It is ludicrous to seek the whereabouts of the Divine, who is omnipresent. Uthara was one who recognised the omnipresence of God. Recognising her supreme devotion Krishna was prepared to change His plans. People should realise that God responds only to deep and genuine devotion. Verbal supplications will not suffice. The devotee must acquire the yearning that will melt the heart of God. Even butter which is so soft melts only when heat is applied. Likewise, the warmth of Bhakti (love of the Lord) has to be applied to the butter of the human heart to make it melt. It was their intense devotion which made Krishna dwell in the hearts of Gopikas. They became

God-intoxicate. Once when Krishna disappeared from their midst they started searching for him everywhere, among the trees and the bushes of Brindhaavan, oblivious to everything else. Their appeals to the creepers to tell them whether their Krishna was hiding amongst them might seem hysterical. But it would be a good thing if such hysterical love of God filled people's hearts today. The world will be a calmer and better place.

Craze for God removes the craze for wealth
Some people talk caustically to Sai devotees saying: "You have gone crazy over Sai Baba." This craziness is sublime madness. There are all kinds of lunatics in the mental hospital, many of whom pose difficult problems for the doctors. If some God-mad devotee sits in a corner chanting God's name, what a relief he would be to doctors! If you develop this kind of sublime madness, you will be supremely fortunate indeed! Everyone should be crazy about God. Only then they will get rid of the mad craving for wealth and the things of the world. The craze for money is the cause of all the ills in the world. With the result that the desire for God declines. Because of the craze for riches, all other evil qualities like pride, greed, envy and hatred have grown among mankind. Wealth is, indeed, needed, but it is the wealth of Divine Grace and the treasure of Divine Love. That alone is lasting. All other things are transient. Once Yasodha appealingly asked Krishna why he was going to the Gopika's houses to steal their butter when there was so much butter in their own house. The Child Krishna replied: "Mother, I am not stealing butter but the hearts of the Gopis." (Svaami sang a beautiful song relating to this episode). "Their hearts are pure and full of devotion," said Krishna. "Their butter is filled with the devotion with which they churn the buttermilk. Their bangles keep time as they sing Krishna's name while churning. The butter that is got contains the essence of the Vedhas." Krishna asked Yasodha whether this kind of churning was taking place in her house. Krishna Avathaar is hailed as Purna Avathaar. In this manner, every word of Krishna was replete with spiritual significance. The Krishna Avathaar is hailed as Purna Avathaar, compared to all previous Avathaars. Vyaasa could obtain peace of mind only when, on the advice of Sage Naaradha, he began to write about the glorious incarnations of the Lord (described in the Bhagavatham). All his earlier writings, including the codification of the Vedhas and the writing of the puraanas, could not confer peace on him. Embodiments of Love! No amount of scholarship will give you peace, unless you are filled with the love of God. Discourse on Gokulashtami Day in Sai Ramesh Hall, Brindhaavan, on 28-8-1994.

24. Let Truth prevail
God creates the entire Universe from Truth.
Finally everything merges in Truth.
This pure and unsullied Truth
Alone pervades everywhere.
EMBODIMENTS of love! Without Truth, the world cannot exist. The entire world rests on Truth.
Everyone has to seek this Truth. It is because man has forgotten this Truth that there is no peace and security in the world.
Truth is the eternal witness and it cannot be hidden by any one not can it be altered. It is independent and cannot be affected by time and space. In ancient times, the people flourished as they followed truth unflinchingly. They were prepared to sacrifice everything for the sake of truth. Harishchandhra sacrificed everything his kingdom and family too, to uphold Truth. He is still revered as Sathya Harishchandhra.
God and Truth are not distinct. God is the very form of Truth. It is the duty of humans to keep Truth as the ideal and adhere to it at any cost. Truth is the abode of God. It is the basis of all knowledge and wisdom.
The Vedhas are based on Thath. All real enjoyment of happiness, wealth and comforts is based on Truth. But, for the sake of transient worldly pleasures, sacred Divine Truth is forgotten. The ancients used to shun untruth as a poisonous snake. In the modern age, people are drawn to falsehood and not Truth. They make no effort to realise that they are themselves embodiments of Truth.
Integral relationship between man and God
Just as the eyes, ears and other limbs are parts of the body, every individual is a part of society.
Society is a limb of humanity. Humanity is a limb of Nature and Nature is a limb of God. Man has to realise the integral relationship between himself and God.
Sin is not something outside man. Man's actions determine whether they are good or bad. They are based on thoughts arising in the mind. Through sublime thoughts one can reach the highest state of Saakshaathkaara (direct perception of God). For attaining this state of Realisation, one need not undertake penance in a forest. It has to be realised within oneself. The body, the mind and the intellect are only instruments. Man is their master. When the mind is infested with bad thoughts, one indulges in bad deeds. When one follows Truth, he can become Divine. One cannot visualize Truth or God until he achieves harmony in thought, word and deed.

Goal of human life is progress from human to Divine

Embodiments of the Divine Aathma! As long as you disregard truth, you cannot have even a trace of Bliss. Time is fleeting. You have to start enquiring into the purpose of this human life now itself. It is not for leading an animal existence. The goal of human life is progress from the human to the Divine.

Today while Science is making rapid strides, morally man is going down. Selfishness and selfinterest dominate everyone of man's activities. It is only by sacrifice that man can manifest his humanness and rise to divine heights.

The unlimited proliferation of desires is the root cause of man's misery and ruination. If you follow two main principles, you can reach the goal of human life.

"Sarva jeeva namaskaaram

Keshavam Prathi gachathi." The reverence shown to all beings reaches God. "Sarva jeeva thiraskaaram Kesahvam Prathigachathi." Similarly, insult to any beings amounts to insult to God. If you hate anyone, it means you are hating God. You must understand the Omnipresence of the Lord.

In the Bhagavath Geetha, Krishna declares that sacrificing the fruits of your actions is the best and easiest way of realising God. There is no Thyaaga (sacrifice) these days. People are interested only in Bhoga (worldly pleasure) which leads to Roga (disease).

Sacrifice is the means of attaining liberation. You should, therefore, serve society, help the poor and needy in distress, and thus manifest the human quality of compassion. By doing seva to people, you are doing seva to God. Even Aadhi Shankara, who was supreme exponent of Inaana

Maarga (the path of spiritual wisdom), in his later days came to realise that the Bhakthi Maarga (path of devotion) is the best path for mankind to realise God.

Seek to be good man and become a Godman

Instead of talking about a hundred precepts, you should practise at least one of them. Persons who are drawing high salaries are agitating for more and more, but they should undertake some self-examination as to whether they are doing enough work to justify the salary they draw. You must understand that it is the people's money that you are enjoying. You should have your conscience as your witness and judge in deciding whether you are doing right or wrong. God is watching all your actions. You must do things to satisfy God from whom you have come and to whom you have to return.

People tend to make even the worship of God as a business proposition now-a-days. Even spirituality is commercialized. Seek to be a good man. You can then become a Godman. Never become a bad man. This cam be achieved only by chanting the name of God constantly.

Discourse in the Sai Ramesh Hall, Brindhaavan, on 4-9-1994.

Love God, though tribulation may be your lot. Love Him, though you are refused and rebuked; for it is only in the crucible of travail that the metal is purified and cleared of dross.

BABA

25. Spiritual significance of Ganesha worship

EMBODIMENTS of love! Charity is the ornament for hands. Truth is the ornament for speech.

Hearing the scriptures is the ornament for ears. Where is the need for other ornaments?

There is no greater experience than the feeling that one is Aathma--Aham Ethath. "Aham ("I") is defined as Aathma, the Self. The word Ethath means all these. It covers all the objects in the Universe which are physical and subtle and also the Sun, Moon, stars and planets. It signifies that you are not the physical body You say body" which implies that you are not the body. What is this body constituted of? It is a combination of Pancha bhuuthas (five elements), Pancha

Praanas (five vital airs), and the Pancha Koshas (five sheaths). The entire universe is the body of the Supreme Lord. It consists of all the moving and static things. In Vedhaantik parlance, it is deemed to be Inaana (superior wisdom) when you say am not the body."

One should be extremely fortunate to realise this. Whatever you see in the external world is Dhrishya (that which is seen). The Sun, Moon, stars, the five elements which are constituents of the universe are all Dhrishya. You are seeing your body too as you see other things. So the body is also Dhrishya, that which is seen by you. Who is then the seer? The seer is Dhrashta. The body is the object and you are the seer. Without a seer there is no question of anything being seen. Some people talk about Shuunya (emptiness or nothingness). Unless this has been seen, how can they talk about Shuunya?

The great message of Ganapathi

Knowledge of the seer and the seen is the great message of Ganapathi, whose advent we are celebrating today. "Ga" means Buddhi (intelligence). 'Na' means Vijnaana (wisdom). 'Pathi'

means master. So, Ganapathi is the master of all knowledge, intelligence and wisdom. There is also another significant meaning for the word, that He is the Leader of all the Ganaas who are celestial. He is also called Vinaayaka, which term means that he is one who has no master above Him. He is the Supreme master. He is beyond the mindless stare. One who has stilled the mind cannot have any master.

Without understanding this truth, we think of the physical form of Vinaayaka with the elephant head and human body. Whenever people want to commence any undertaking or start learning music or the fine arts or any branch of knowledge, they first offer worship to Vinaayaka.

He is also called Lambodhara, which means Guardian of Wealth--Lakshmi Svaruupa. Here Lakshmi represents all wealth and prosperity and not only Dhanam (money) for which there is a separate deity called Dhanalakshmi, one of the eight Lakshmis. Here wealth means Sukha and Aanandha (pleasure and bliss). What is the use of having all other things when one has no pleasure or bliss?

Ganapathi endows us with supreme intelligence

Ganapathi is one who gives us spiritual potency and endows us with supreme intelligence. These two are termed as Siddhi and Buddhi respectively. Siddhi and Buddhi are described as his two consorts. As He is the Adhipathi (master) of Siddhi and Buddhi, he is regarded as their husband in mundane terms. Vinaayaka has no desire and hence there is no need for Him to have wife and children. He is worshipped by people in this country since very ancient times. There is historic evidence that the worship of Vinaayaka has been in vogue even in other countries such as Thailand, Japan, Germany and U.K.

Adoration of Vinaayaka as Prathama Vandhana (First deity to be saluted) has been mentioned in the Vedhas. Ganapathi Thathva finds a place in the Vedhas and Upanishaths. Reference to Him is made in the Gaayathri also. He is one who instills purity in body, and fearlessness in the mind.

It is said- "Thanno Dhanthih Prachodayaath," giving importance to his tusk.

Some people, out of ignorance, comment upon the big animal form of this Primal Deity and question how one with such a huge form can ride on a small Muushika (mouse) which is depicted as His vehicle. Muushika is symbolic of the darkness of ignorance, while Ganesha signifies the effulgence of Wisdom that dispels the darkness of ignorance.

Significance of steam-cooked offering

Even the offering that is made to Ganesha has great significance because it is prepared with gram flour and jaggery or pepper and enclosed in an outer covering made from flour paste and then cooked in steam without using oil. This is supposed to be a healthy and delicious food item according to the Ayurvedhic system. Modern doctors also recognise the importance of such steam-cooked idlis (rice cakes) which they recommend as post-operative diet for patients as it is easily digestible. Jaggery too has the property of controlling gas formation and this food item gives relief from eye troubles and prevents gastric disorders.

In the ancient traditional mode of observing these festivals, great emphasis was laid on good health as the pre-requisite for spiritual pursuits with a healthy mind. For achieving the four goals of human life---Dharma, Artha, Kaama and Moksha (Righteousness, Wealth, Desire and Liberation)-- one should have basically a healthy body. If you want to earn wealth by righteous means and cherish desires which lead to liberation, you should have sound health.

Vinaayaka is also called Vigneshvara as He removes all obstacles coming in the way of devotees who pray to Him sincerely. He is worshipped by students with books so that all that is contained in the books may get into their heads. Now-a-days people are only after Dhanam (money). Whatever scholarship one may attain, whatever power and position one may enjoy, one cannot be happy without the peace of mind that is got by pure devotion. One may have immense physical strength, one may pursue the path of meditation and penance, one may acquire profound knowledge, but all these attainments will be of no avail unless one acquires knowledge of the eternal--Sathyam, Inaanam, Anantham Brahma.

Symbolic significance of elephant head

The symbolic significance of Ganesha's elephant head has to be properly understood. The elephant has profound intelligence. For example, yesterday Sai Geetha, (Bhagavaan's elephant) came running when it heard the sound of Svaami's car approaching. Though many cars were following Svaami's car, Sai Geetha could unmistakably identify Svaami's car from an uncanny recognition of the sound of the car. That is why it is termed Gaja Thelivi (elephant intelligence).

One having a sharp brain is described as having the intelligence of an elephant. It has Medha

Shakthi

Moreover, the elephant has large ears and it can hear even minute sounds. Shravanam (hearing

The glory of the Lord) is the first step in spiritual saadhana for which ears should be sharp. After hearing one has to ruminate over this and put it into practice which are termed as Shravana.

Manana and Nidhidhyaasana. The elephant takes the Dhuushana and Bhuushana (praise and blame) equally. When it hears something bad, it moves its body this way and that way and shakes off the unwanted things while it retains good things quietly.

Only Vinaayaka reaches the lessons that are essential for mankind.

You should not stop with installing the idol and doing puuja for a few days. You should make efforts to become a Naayaka or Master over yourself. You have the nine-fold path of devotion.

Shravanam (hearing),

Keerthanam (singing His glory), Vishnor naamasnam (thinking of and chanting the name),

Paadha Sevanam (serving at His feet), Vandhanam (obeisance), archanam (worship), Dhaasyam

(serving Him as a servant serves the Master), Saakhyam (befriending God), Aathma nivedhanam

(surrendering body, mind and soul). The elephant signifies combining of the first and the last, that is Shravanam and Aathma nivedhanam, so that all the other paths in between are covered fully.

When a man is born he does not have round his neck any necklace of pearls or gems or any possessions. But he is endowed by Brahma with the garland of the effects of his past actions, good or bad, which hangs invisibly around his neck. If you do good you will enjoy good results and if you are bad you will not escape suffering the consequences thereof.

The lessons of sacrifice that Vinaayaka taught

The teaching of Vinaayaka is one of sacrifice. You may not heed the contents of the Puraanas, but you should not miss the vital principles which they convey to mankind.

When Vinaayaka was writing the Mahaabhaaratha to the dictation of Sage Vyaasa, the latter laid down the condition that Vinaayaka should go on writing non-stop whatever Vyaasa said. But Vinaayaka also stipulated a condition that Vyaasa should never stop his dictation but should go on without a break. While he was writing, Vinayaka's pen broke and he did not hesitate to break one of his tusks to use it as a pen. That is why he is called Ekadhantha or one with a single tusk.

This is a shining example of the spirit of sacrifice that Vinaayaka exhibited for the welfare of humanity. That is why the Vedhas proclaim that it is only by sacrifice one can attain immortality

Bhakthi is greater than Inaana

Prema and Thyaaga (Love and sacrifice) constitute Bhakthi (devotion to God). There is nothing superior to this. Aathma Inaana (knowledge of the Self) is essential. This was the main teaching of Aadhi Shankara throughout his life, as he was preaching and following the Vedhic dictum-

"Ekaathma Sarvabhutha-Antharathma"; "Ekam Sath Vipraah Bahudha Vadhanthi" (The one Aathma is present in all beings. The one Truth is described in many ways by the wise). He was also preaching that Inaana was nothing but Adhvaitha Dharshana (vision of Non-duality). But, during his last days, Shankara realised that Bhakthi was greater than Inaana. In his famous Bhaja

Govindham, Aadhi Shankara emphasises that only the path of devotion will help you to get over the cycle of birth and death.

There is no path superior to that of Bhakthi. Bhakthi does not mean doing puuja, bhajans, going on pilgrimage to holy shrines etc. Bhakthi means diverting the pure and unsullied mind towards

God. People do not know the real meaning of Prema. The love you have for other beings is only temporal. God is the only one that is eternal. Love of God is Bhakthi. All other love may be termed as Anuraaga, which results in bondage, while love of God leads to liberation.

One may raise a question whether it is possible for everyone to realise the goal through the love of God. One may not achieve this instantaneously, but can do so. progressing step by step. By Bhajans and other forms of worship one may advance towards the goal of final emancipation.

There is no meaning in saying that one is searching for God. It is God who is searching for a true devotee. This is as true today as it was in the past. God is neglected by people when He is easily attained. What is easily obtained at home is not relished so much as what you get outside, though it is not wholesome.

Significance of offering your hair to God

In olden days, people going on pilgrimage to Thirupathi used to climb the hills step by step chanting the name Govindha, Govindha, as they climbed each step. Thus the pilgrimage was performed with sincere devotion and Naamasmarana. But, these days people go by buses and cars, gossiping all the while, and indulging in unholy pursuits. The tonsure ceremony in which one shaves his head completely and offers his hair to the Lord of Thirupathi signifies your giving up your Thamo Guna (ignorance and lethargy) which is symbolised by the hair on the head. The hair is black. Giving up the hair indicates giving up Thamo Guna. You have to assimilate Sathva Guna.

All acts of worship have a spiritual significance. Now-a-days, people do not understand their inner significance, but give up not only their hair but also waste a lot of money and return home without being any the wiser for the trip. You may install idols and worship them. But do not forget the inner significance of all worship.

All external activities are necessary only to help you to get into the spirit of non-duality and experience unity in diversity. Love and sacrifice are very important. Where there is pure, unsullied, selfless, sacred and sublime love there is no fear at all. Giving and not getting is the underlying principle of spiritual saadhana. Your heart is full of love, but you are using it only for selfish purposes instead of diverting it towards God. God is in the heart and not in the head. The heart is Prema mayam (full of love). On these festival days, you should remember that God is one, and all religions uphold the same principle of "One God, who is omnipresent." You should not have contempt for any religion, as each is a pathway to God. Fostering love towards your fellow-beings, receive the noble love of the Divine. This is the goal of life.

Discourse in the Puurnachandhra Auditorium on 9-9-1994, Ganesh Chaturthi Day.

We are developing in each department of life, but it is a pity that we are not developing the unique qualities of human beings. Develop the Aathmik awareness, the consciousness of the Divine and the acquisition of Divine attributes. Expand love and understanding.

26. Onam: the message of sacrifice

Trees yield fruits for the benefit of mankind without any selfish motive.

Rivers carry water for helping others.

Cows yield milk for the good of others without any trace of selfishness.

The human body is given for the purpose of helping others.

EMBODIMENTS of love! The entire cosmos is a stage for the play of the Divine. There should be no feeling of hatred among human beings because both in the individual and the society the Divine Consciousness is present. This Divine Consciousness which is termed as Chaithanya is not without purpose. The primary purpose of human birth is to manifest the Divinity within. When man is filled with ego, he indulges in wicked thoughts and actions, while he will do good deeds when he is conscious of the Divinity within. Human life is made up of virtue and vice, hatred and love. The root cause for all troubles is Raaga and Dhvesha (attachment and hatred). This has plunged humanity in misery since time immemorial. Man should learn to balance his feelings. Good and bad always: co-exist. Without pain one cannot have the enjoyment of pleasure. Without darkness one cannot feel the value of light. Man should learn to enjoy the dualities of good and bad, pain and pleasure, in moderation. Food consumed in excess causes indigestion. If it is inadequate it results in starvation. Man can even have ego in a limited measure. If he balances his feelings he can have peace and happiness. Kashyapa and his two wives, Dhithi and Adhithi, were the parents of Asuras (demons) and Dhevas (demigods). Indhra, the king of Dhevas went to war with the king of the Asuras, as it was common practice in those days for one king to invade the kingdom of another to acquire additional territory. Mahaabali vanquished Indhra in the war and proceeded to annexe the territory of Indhra and occupied his capital Amaraavathi. Kashyapa had gone to the Himaalayas to do penance. Lamenting over the defeat of her son, Indhra, Adhithi was in great grief. When she was wailing, Kashyapa came to her. Instantly; he was able to recognise the cause of her grief by divine insight, which he had acquired as a result of his penance. He consoled his wife Adhithi saying that nothing happens in the world without God's will and people should go on doing their duties. He asked her to pray to Lord Naarayana and taught her a Vratha (ritual) to be followed strictly, known as Payovratha (milk ritual). It has to be observed from the twelfth day of the bright half of Kaarthika (Shuklapaksha Dhvaadhasi). She observed the matha as pre-scribed. A devotee's sincere prayer will never go waste. Since she carded out the vratha with a pious heart, Naarayana appeared before her and informed her that He would

Himself take birth in her womb and help Indhra. Adhithi was very happy and true to the word of the Lord, she gave birth to a son of uncommon effulgence on the twelfth day of the bright half of the month of Bhaadrada.
 That child was Vaamana muurthi. Even as a child He demonstrated His Divine power by doing marvellous deeds.
Vaamana approaches emperor Bali
Mahaabali was performing an Ashvamedha Yajna (horse sacrifice). He had previously performed a hundred such yajnas. He declared that he would give anything that anyone sought from him during this yajna. Vaamana came to the Yaagashaala. As He was approaching them, the sages assembled there perceived the extraordinary effulgent form of the young lad. Mahaabali went forth to receive the Brahmana boy with all traditional honours and gave him an eminent seat befitting the status of a holy person. Bali told him: "Master, it is my good fortune that you have chosen to honour me with your presence. Whatever you desire, I am here ready to fulfill the same." Vaamana smiled and said: "You need not give me anything very great. It is enough if you give me that extent of land covered by three foot-steps of mine."
 On hearing him, Bali's preceptor, Shukraachaarya, who could have vision of the future, told Bali that the one who had come to seek a gift from Bali was not an ordinary Brahmana boy but Lord Naarayana Himself who had assumed this form. He advised Bali not to promise the lad anything.
 But Bali was a king who would never go back on his word and told his Guru that he would never break his promise. He was determined to give Vaamana whatever he wanted since breaking one's word was a sin and he had to keep his pledge. Shukraachaarya insisted that he should not fulfill the demand of Vaamana as He had come to deprive Bali of all his possessions. He said Vaamana was not really in need of anything as everything was in his hands. Bali, however, determined to honour the word given to Vaamana, begged pardon of his Guru for disregarding his advice. Earlier, while Bali was embarking on the war with Indhra, he had prostrated at the feet of his preceptor, Shukraachaarya, and on his advice he performed the Vishvajith Yajna from which he secured very powerful weapons. It was only because of Shukraachaarya's help that he was able to conquer Indhra. On this occasion, Bali was not prepared to heed the advice of the same preceptor. Shukraachaarya cursed Bali, saying: "As you have not heeded your Guru's words you will be reduced to ashes." Bali was firm and replied- "I am prepared to face any consequence, but will not go back on my word."

 So saying, he told Vaamana to measure the three feet of land as desired by him. All attempts of Shukraachaarya to dissuade Bali from offering the land desired by Vaamana proved futile. Bali told his Guru: "Praana (life) and Maana (honour) are the two eyes of a person. Even if life goes, honour should be protected. Granting that the person that has come now is the Lord Himself, I should be the most fortunate one as the Lord who gives everything to mankind, is seeking something from me."
Bali was an example of supreme sacrifice. He sacrificed all his possessions and himself too to God. Bali said: "The hand of the Lord, which gives Abhaya (graceful benediction) to all has been stretched to take something from me. The Lord's hand is below while my hand is above. This must be the fruit of my penance in several births. I am prepared for anything." This was the spirit of Bali. Bali was also a very good ruler, who was much concerned about the welfare of his subjects. He was the son of Virochana and grandson of Prahlaadha. They were both devotees of Naarayana. Is there any one who has perished having believed in God? There might be people who have perished without belief in God.
 Only by sacrifice one can attain immortality Prahlaadha was happy and appreciated the good fortune of his grandson Bali when Naarayana himself sought a gift from him. He blessed Bali that he had kept up the noble tradition and name of the family. It is only by sacrifice that one can attain immortality and not by any other means.
Shukraachaarya's anger was growing because of his selfish motive that he should continue to be the preceptor of the Asuras. He did not want Bali, to give the gift sought by Vaamana as he was sure that the last vestige of power of the Asuras would be destroyed by Vaamana. Earlier when a fierce battle was raging between Indhra and Bali, Indhra used his Vajrayudha (thunderbolt) against Bali. The latter hinted. There was one Asura, Namuuchi by name. The Vajrayudha could not be effective against him. An ethereal voice said, "Namuuchi is very powerful. As he has Brahma's boon, nothing will affect him. Only a weapon that is neither wet nor dry will be effective." Indhra looked at the ocean and recognized that the foam was neither wet nor dry. He applied the foam to his weapon and attacked Namuuchi. Namuuchi fell down.

Ekaagratha is mightier than any weapon

Indhra is hailed as the chief of the gods. In the Purushasuktha, it is said that out of the face of the cosmic Purusha emerged Indhra. Indhra is one who is the Lord of the senses. In man, the mind is the master of the senses. No one can estimate the power of the mind.

Brahmaasthra and Vajraayudha are not more powerful than Ekaagratha (concentration) which is mightier than any weapon. For this, sense control is essential. There is always a battle raging in the body between vice and virtue and only the one that has Ekaagratha can come out victorious.

Bali is the symbol of Thyaaga (sacrifice). He controlled everything by his spirit of sacrifice. The Gaayathri manthra begins with the utterance: "Bhur-Bhuvas-Svaaha." These represent the three worlds which are in the body itself. Bhur represents Prakrithi (Earth), which is the physical body. Mind is Bhuvarkala. Prajnaana (spiritual awareness) is Suvarloka. Body represents materialisation as it is made up of the five physical elements. The mind is Vibration and Prajnaana is Radiation. If you enquire into their inner significance, all the three are in your body itself. The battle between Bali and Indhra represents the mind battling to control the senses.

When the mind is controlled one attains Divinity. This is the spiritual state. Bali performed many sacrifices to attain this state.

Bali means tax. You pay taxes to the Government for electricity, water, drainage, etc. What tax did Bali pay? He gave all his possessions, body, mind and soul, to the Lord. The Lord's first foot covered this world and the second foot covered the other world. How huge the Lord's feet would have been to cover the whole world? How can such a huge foot be kept on Bali's head for the third step of land? The inner significance of this action is that Lord entered Bali's body, mind and soul. Once the ego or body consciousness is surrendered, there is no bar to one's realisation. It is the body consciousness that stands in the way and makes you forget God. Vaamana opened Bali's eyes to help him realise Divine. The imprisoned man had to be freed. Bali offered his body, mind and soul, to the Lord.

Bali performed supreme surrender to the Lord

Kerala is a sacred land where Bali performed this action of supreme surrender to the Lord. He had good relationship with this people and they loved him in turn, and had faith in him. That is why Kerala is still fertile and prosperous. The Lord goes about freely in this land.

Bali sought a boon from the Lord that he should visit Kerala every year, on this day of Shravana asterism in the month of Shraavan. This day is celebrated as Onam by Keralites. They have been following this faithfully, since ancient times. This day is considered most important for the people of Kerala. They prepare many dishes and eat together on this holy day.

We should appreciate the spirit of sacrifice of the devotees from Kerala who sacrifice the comforts of their homes and the company of their near and dear ones and make a pilgrimage to this place, to celebrate this festival in the immediate presence and company of Svaami. They do not mind the inconveniences and lack of comforts here. They reflect the spirit of sacrifice demonstrated by Mahaabali even to-day. It is My blessing that you should enjoy this and should never give up your love of God. God's love is permanent while all other love among human beings is only transient and temporary.

Because this faith is imprinted strongly in the minds of Keralites you are making your trip to this place leaving your own native place with your unstinted devotion to Svaami. It is My wish that other States should emulate your example. People may brand Kerala as dominated by Communist doctrine but I am sure the people of Kerala are filled with pure devotion to God, whatever may be their political afflictions. I bless you all to cherish this pure love and devotion always.

Discourse in the Puurnachandhra Auditorium on 16-9-1994, Onam Day.

Adoration of God has to be through one name and one form; but, that should not limit your loyalty to that particular form only.

27. Divine potencies in man

Oh man! if the Divine Lord is not visible to you, Just as the stars cannot be seen in daylight, Because you are blinded by ignorance, Do not deny His existence.

EMBODIMENTS of Divine love! From the most ancient times, men have been engaged in the search for God. The questions, "Who is God?" and "What is the means to realise God?", are not of today. They have been there from the earliest times and have agitated mankind ceaselessly.

A few yogis, who comprehended the nature of the Divine and who felt that the purpose of human existence is to seek the Divine, undertook various spiritual exercises to discover how to achieve this objective. The purpose of human life is to realise the Divine. It is, in this context, that human birth becomes the rarest among all living beings. The ancient sages, recognizing this truth, pursued different kinds of penances to experience the Divine. Some of them, feeling that the task was beyond their powers, gave up the quest in the middle. Some others, recognizing that this was the sole purpose of human life persevered in their efforts with determination. When man sets his heart upon achieving anything, there is nothing impossible for him. But, immersed in worldly pleasures, man becomes a prey to weakness and forgets his Divine nature. Few care to enquire into the real value of these mundane pleasures or their ephemeral nature.

What is the difference between man and birds and beasts? Can eating, drinking, sleeping and ultimately dying, be the be-all and end-all of human life? All these are common to animals and human beings. What, then, is the difference? Although man is endowed with intelligence, discrimination and wisdom, without endeavouring to know the truth, man regards physical phenomena as the only reality, the Divine as remote from him, and forgets the main goal of life.

Ancient sages experienced the effulgent Divine
The ancient sages, however, regarded realisation of the Divine as their main goal and practised various austerities. There after, they went out into the world and proclaimed: Oh man!

Vedhaaham etham Purusham mahaantham" (We have experienced the effulgent, all-pervading Supreme Divine). Where did they experience Him? They declared: We have found Him beyond the darkness, beyond the mind and the senses, in our hearts."

Man is a combination of the body, the mind and the Aathma (Spirit). He is thus the embodiment of these three. But, forgetting the mind and the Aathma, when man identifies himself solely with the body, he reduces himself to an animal. When he forgets the Aathma and the body and identifies himself with the mind alone, he becomes a Dhaanava (demon). When one forgets the body and the mind and adheres only to the Aathma, he gets divinised.

Bhakthi and Prema are synonymous

The body is the instrument of action. The mind is the instrument of cognition. The Aathma is steady and unwavering. Corresponding to these three, are Karma, Upaasana and Bhakthi (action, ritual worship and devotion). What is the difference between Bhakthi and Upaasana? In both of them, Prema (love of God) is inherent. Bhakthi and Prema are synonymous. Contemplating on God, forgetting the world, living in a state of Aanandha is Prapatthi (total surrender to God).

Bhaaratheeyas have been celebrating the Navaraathri festival from ancient times as a mode of worship of Dhevi, the Divine, as Mother. They worship Dhurga, Lakshmi and Sarasvathi during these nine days. Who are these three? They are three forms which have fascinated man. Their esoteric significance is represented by three: sakthis (potencies).

They are: Karma, Upaasana and Inaana. These potencies have been given other names.

The concept of Prapatthi (total surrender) is related to Self-Realisation (Oneness with the Divine). God, in fact, dwells in every human being as the Aathma. The body is the sacred abode of the Aathma. Hence the scriptures declare- "The body is the temple of God in which the individual Spirit dwells as the Ancient One." Just as the diamond is found in clay and not in a rock, the Spirit (as consciousness) resides in the earthly body. The body is of the earth, earthy.

The Aathma is consciousness. Humanness is the coming together of the mundane and the spiritual consciousness. It is a combination of good and evil. It is a mixture of the transient and the eternal.

Hence, for what is shubha or ashubha (auspicious or inauspicious), for Sathya or Asathya (truth or falsehood), for Kshaya and Akshaya (perishable or imperishable) the prefix "a" accounts for the difference. For instance, Asathya (untruth) is that which is not Sathya (true). Anithya

(transient) is that which is not Nithya (permanent). By understanding these distinctions, men have sought to realise the Divine.

Misuse of the body by man today

The human body is precious. Man today is not realising what he owes to his body. The body that is composed of the five elements, which has been given to man to understand his true nature, to recognise the truth about his immortal Spirit, and to experience the eternal within him, is being used for the enjoyment of physical pleasures. The body surely has not been given for this purpose. The body is a Kshethra (shrine). The Indweller is the Kshethrajna (Knower). The relationship is that of shareera (body) and the shareeri (Indweller). Instead of recognizing this integral relationship, man is concerned with only the body and seeks to realise the Divine. How is this possible? The first requisite is for man to acquire the firm conviction that the Divine dwells in his heart.

There is no need to search for the Divine elsewhere. There is no need to go to a forest and lead an austere life to experience the Divine Who is within each one. When man turns his vision inward he can experience eternal Bliss. The source of Bliss, the Spirit, is within himself. God is nearer to everyone than one's parents, spouse or children. Kith and kin are outside one, but God is within the body. Forgetting the God who is nearest and closest to them, people are trying to seek for an invisible God elsewhere "Dhaivam maanusha ruupena" (God appears in human form). It is sheer human fancy to imagine that God is effulgent light or that he has four arms with conch and discus, and dwells in some remote place. A man who is attached to the body can never experience a formless, incorporeal God. Only when he gets rid of the body consciousness can he recognise the transcendental Divine. Hence, as long as one has attachment to the body, one must adore God in a physical form. God is the indwelling Spirit in all beings.

It is a waste of time to try to secure in one way or other a direct vision of God. God is manifesting Himself in the heart of everyone. "Ekaathma Sarvabhuutha-Antharaathma" (The One Supreme Spirit is the indwelling Spirit in all beings). The Sath (Absolute Reality) is One only, through the wise call it by many names. We have to endeavour to experience that Divine.

The significance of Dhurga, Lakshmi and Sarasvathi has to be rightly understood. The three represent three kinds of potencies in man. Ichchaa Shakthi (Will power), Kriyaa Shakthi (the power of action), and Inaana Shakthi (the power of discrimination). Sarasvathi is manifest in man as the power of Vaak (speech). Dhurga is present in the form of dynamism, the power of action. Lakshmi is manifest in the form of Will power. The body indicates Kriyaa Shakthi. The mind is the repository of Ichchaa Shakthi. The Aathma is Inaana Shakthi. Kriyaa Shakthi comes from the body, which is material. The power that activates the body that is inert and makes it vibrant is Ichchaa Shakthi. The power that induces the vibrations of Ichchaa Shakthi is Inaana Shakthi, which causes radiation (of energy). These three potencies are represented by the manthra: "Om Bhur-Bhuvas-Suvah." Bhur represents Bhuloka (the earth). Bhuvah represents the Life force--also means Conscience in man, Suvah represents the power of radiation. All the three are present in man. Thus, Dhurga, Lakshmi and Sarasvathi dwell in the human heart.

Physical forms of subtle potencies within man

Men are prone to exhibit raajasik qualities like anger and hatred. They are the menacing manifestations of Dhurga. The extolling of the Divine in song and poetry and the pleasing vibrations produced by them indicate the power of Sarasvathi. The pure qualities that arise in man such as compassion, love, forbearance and sympathy are derived from Lakshmi.

When people worship Dhurga, Lakshmi and Sarasvathi externally in pictures or icons, they are giving physical forms to the subtle potencies that are within them. The unfortunate predicament of man today is that he is not recognizing the powers within him and developing respect for them. He goes after the external, attracted by the physical forms. The relationship between the material and the subtle has to be understood.

The remedy for man's ills is contained within himself. But man seeks remedies from outside.

Here is an illustration of what happens in the world. A hotel and a drug store are adjacent to each other. When a hotel server gets a headache, he goes to the neighbouring drug shop for a pill to cure his headache. When the drug storekeeper gets a headache, he goes to the hotel for a cup of coffee to cure him, instead of taking one of his own pills.

Turn the vision inwards to experience the Divine

Likewise, people today tend to ignore the divinity within them, but hanker after many external objects. There is no need to go in search of the Divine. Men must develop firm faith in the Divinity within them. All that is needed is to turn the vision inwards to experience the Divine within.

Men engage themselves in many outward Saadhana (spiritual practices). These must be internalised. All scholarship is of no avail if there is no realisation in the heart. The scholar may expound the texts, but lacks the internal experience. One who has mastered the Vedhas may be able to explain the words, but cannot recognise the Vedha Purusha, the Supreme Person hailed by the Vedhas.

When a person goes to a temple, he closes his eyes in front of the idol, because what he seeks is an internal vision of God and not a sight of the external form of the idol. God is Omnipresent as proclaimed in the Geetha. God is One, though names and forms may differ.

All education today is related to the physical world. It will not serve to reveal the Divine. It was this which impelled Shankaraachaarya to teach a pandith who was learning by rote Paanini's

Grammar that at the moment of death only the Lord's name (Govindha) will save him and not the rules of grammar.

Though this teaching has been propagated for centuries, very few practise it. Many read the Raamaayana as a daily ritual. But how many carry out the commands of their fathers? How many practise the virtue of fraternal affection and love proclaimed in the Raamaayana? Is there anyone standing for the gospel of Dharma (Duty) as upheld by Shri Raama? Of what use is it endlessly to listen to discourses without putting anything into practice? The Geetha is being read and expounded all the time. Is a single precept from it being put into practice? Not at all. The Geetha shows the path to God realisation. But simply reciting the Geetha is valueless. Follow the Geetha and tread the path indicated by it. Only then you will reap the reward.

Love is God. Get immersed in that Love

What is meant by practice? Direct your sacred love towards God.

There is no need for any severe spiritual exercise. Love is God. Live in love. Get immersed in that Love.

What should be pure love has been polluted today by all kinds of attachments. Pollution today is all pervading and has spread to the hearts of people. Purity has become scarce. Prema (Love of God) is all-powerful. Prahlaadha demonstrated this all conquering power of love for the Lord. He survived every kind of ordeal by his faith in Naarayana.

Embodiments of love! Though people live in the phenomenal world and carry on their activities, they should perform all their actions as an offering to please the Lord.

What is it you should do during these ten days of the Navaraathri festival? Convert your Ichchaa

Shakthi (Will power) into a yearning for God. Convert Kriyaa

Shakthi into a force for doing divine actions. Convert your Inaana Shakthi into the Divine Itself.

"Sathyam, Inaanam, Anantham, Brahma" (The Divine is Truth, Wisdom and Infinite), proclaim the scriptures. These three are in man. You can experience the entire cosmos within your heart.

The marvellous powers in man, the power of sight, etc. are all derived from God.

Human birth has to be redcmmed by contemplation of God. Man today is misusing his precious body. Instead of filling it with the nectar of love, he is filling it with worldly trash. Man should be the master of his senses, instead of being their slave.

Discourse in the Sai Ramesh hall, Brindhaavan, on 9-10-1994.

You must see, hear, study, observe, experience and reflect; only then can you understand Me.

BABA

28. Turn your vision towards the Divine

Wherever the mind wanders

There you see the three worlds;

Where the mind is absent

There is only a void.

EMBODIMENTS of love! Wherever the mind moves, there the three worlds can be perceived as one. Wherever the mind is not present, there nothing seems to exist.

From this, it is clear that the mind is at the root of all perception and is the cause as well as the witness of all that is perceived.

The term Manishi (man) is derived from the word mind. All the three worlds are contained in man. In this vast cosmos, among innumerable living beings the human being stands foremost.

Although it has been proclaimed that in all living beings the Divine exists as the Indwelling

Spirit, not all living beings can recognise this truth. Only human being has the capacity to recognise it. This unique ability invests human birth with its rare quality, as proclaimed by the Vedhas.

The difference between human and the animal

Moreover, in every living being, there are five sheaths Annamaya (food), Praanamaya (vital),

Manomaya (the mental), Vijnaanamaya (Awareness) and Aanandhamaya (Bliss). But while other creatures are not aware of the existence of the power to discriminate between the transient and the permanent, man alone can recognise the existence of this faculty. The second is Vijnaana

(the ability to acquire the highest knowledge). This knowledge is not limited to the physical, but embraces also spiritual knowledge. This faculty is radiant in man,

Now, to the third faculty:

Every living being including man is born with Moha (attachment).

But man alone has the capacity to realise that he can attain liberation by getting rid of this Moha.

Thus there is a significant difference between human beings and all other living creatures. But the veil of Maaya (illusion) envelops man and makes him go astray.

What is this Maaya? It is the combined expression of the three gunas--Sathva, Rajas and Thamas (the pure, the emotional and the lethargic). The Vedhas have declared that it is only when man overcomes the three gunas that he would be able to get rid of Maaya (the illusion which makes one see the unreal as real).

What is Moha? There are three kinds of acquisitions wealth, wife and progeny--which serve to promote Moha (delusion). When attachment to these triple possessions is given up, Moha will go and Mukthi (liberation) will be easily secured.

Man constantly strives in various ways to elevate his status and condition. As he succeeds in one effort, he seeks success in another, and so it goes on. But, what is the hall-mark of a true human being? Human life is bound up with gains and losses, ups and downs. Man has to face them.

Incidentally he has to suffer blows of one sort or another. Only he is a true human being who overcomes these challenges with fortitude.

There should be limits to every desire

What is the reason for the vicissitudes in a man's life? The cause is to be found in man's desires.

Doubtless, desires are inescapable. One man, for instance, seeks to achieve some ideals. Another may seek to do well in his studies and secure a good job. Yet another may desire to acquire a good name and bring up a good family. There is nothing wrong in such desires. But what we are witnessing in the Kali Age is the limitless growth of desires. As a consequence, man falls into bad ways. There should be limits to every desire. There should be a limit even to the pursuit of power and position. It has been well said: "Nasshreyo niyamam vinaa" (there can be nothing great without restraints). Without such restraint man is bound to go astray:

The Vedhas declare that wherever the mind wanders, there the three worlds will be perceived.

What are these three worlds? All are familiar with the pronouncements in the Geetha and in the Gaayathri Manthra. The three worlds are: Bhur, Bhuvah, Svah (the Bhuloka, Bhuvarkoka and Svarga). These three are present in man: Aadhibhouthika, Aadhidhaivika and Aadhyathmika.

These were worshipped as three Goddesses--Dhurga, Lakshmi and Sarasvathi--by our ancients.

Every form is that of Dhurga---the deity that is associated with Shakthi (Energy). There is infinite power within man, power that is beyond Comprehension and which is Divine. But he makes no effort to recognise it. If man did not have this power, how could he have gone to the moon? What is the power that makes the earth revolve round itself. It is not any machine or manthra. The power is within the earth itself. This energy, present in man and in other objects, has been characterised as Cosmic energy. What is this Cosmic power? The sun derives its energy and effulgence from this Cosmic source. It is the same Cosmic source that accounts for the power of the human mind and the marvellous power of the eye to see the most distant stars.

Cosmic energy that is present in man

With this power of sight, man is able to see the entire creation. There is no greater power than this. Thus, man is endowed with all powers. But this boundless power is being recognized and exercised by each one according to the level of his development. The same electrical energy is used for a variety of purposes for hearing, lighting, operating a fan, etc. Likewise, the divine

Cosmic energy in human beings is used by different persons for varied purposes. This energy is latent in all beings. Because of his ability to manifest this divine, boundless Cosmic energy, man is described as a manifestation of the Vyakthi (Divine). Humanness consists in the manifestation of what is hidden and invisible in man.

This energy in man is a Aadhi Shakthi (primordial power). It is termed Om. This power permeates the Prakrithi (physical world) of matter. This is known as Bhur. There is another power which animates this material substance. This is the power of vibration. It is termed Praana Shakthi (the Life Force). It is this Life Force which activates every part of the human body. This is termed Bhuvah. Lakshmi symbolises this power Lakshmi is the embodiment of that power which enables a human being to see, to hear and to do many things. Lakshmi represents the power to see what is good, to hear what is good, to speak sweet words, to entertain good thoughts and to do good deeds. The Lakshmi Principle accounts for all the good, happy, auspicious happenings in the world.

The third form of energy is symbolized by Sarasvathi. She is regarded as the Vaak-dhevatha (Goddess of Speech). Lakshmi is Praana-svaruupini (the embodiment of the Life Force). Dhurga is Shakthi-svaruupini (the embodiment of physical energy). These three in their unified expression represent the Aathmik principle.

Sankraanthi, Sihvaraathri, Navaraathri

Today is an auspicious festival day for Bhaaratheeyas. There are three sacred festival nights for Bhaaratheeyas: Sankraanthi, Shivaratahri, and Navaraathri. Each of these has its special significance. Sankraanthi enables man to turn his vision towards the sublime. It is the day when the apparent Uttharaayan kaala (northward motion of the sun) begins. The day is considered auspicious for man to embark on his journey towards the goal of a purposeful, sacred and blissful life. The north is described as Himaachala. From ancient times, the Himaalayas were regarded as the abode of the Eeshvara (Divine). Himaachala symbolises a heart that is pure and cool as Hima (ice) and steady as a Achala (mountain). The message of Sankranthi is that people should direct their vision towards Himachal in this symbolic sense. It does not mean looking at the north with the physical eyes. It calls for enquiring into the truth of the Spirit with the Inaana dhrishti (inward eye of wisdom). Sankraanthi signifies this internal vision. The next is Shivaraathri. Darkness prevails at night. But during Shivaraathri, the night is not dark but full of light. That light is experienced by contemplating on the glorious form of Shiva, meditating on the Divine, reminding oneself of unity with the Divine and attaining a stare of pure holiness.

Then comes Navaraathri. This festival is intended to make man realise his true worth as the most precious object in creation. All things in the world derive their value from the labour and skill of man.

Raaga and Dhvesha

Navaraathri means nine nights. What does the nine signify? There are nine Grahas (planets) according to Astrology. The human body has nine openings. If a deep enquiry is made, it will be found that mankind is dependent on the grahas (planets). Although astrologers speak about nine planets, in reality there are only two planets that matter. They are Raaga (attachment) and Dhvesha (hatred).

Today animals also sustain themselves on food. They eat as much as is required to appease their hunger. Man, however, does not act this way. He has limitless desires.

He wishes to accumulate riches to last for generations so that he may live in comfort. In Bhaarith, there is no need for anyone to starve. There is enough for all. But some hoard food in excess. This mal-distribution accounts for food shortage. The accumulation by the few is responsible for scarcity for the many.

Hence, equitable sharing and distribution are essential. This must be brought about by social action inspired by a sense of justice.

Students should get rid of the idea that education is for earning a living. They must realise that they owe a duty to their Motherland and the world.

Students should realise that true education should inculcate In them the following qualities:
 Good thoughts, good speech, good actions, respect for truth, Discipline, devotion and dedication to duty.

Students today are lacking in discipline. They must cleanse their minds of impure thoughts. They must pledge themselves to serve the nation.

The vision and the world

In the worship of the deities during Navaraathri every day one of them should be worshipped, not externally but with one's heart and soul. Bodily actions are ephemeral. The body derives its value from the spirit within. Hence it should be regarded as a sacred temple.

Today, students develop many undesirable qualities like pride, envy and hatred even before they join college. With such polluted minds they view the world in dark colours. This may be illustrated by an episode from the Mahaabhaaratha.

One day, Krishna summoned Dhuryodhana and Dharmaja and asked them to make a study of the people in the kingdom. He asked Dhuryodhana to find out how many good people existed in the country. He asked Dharmaja to find out how many bad people were there in the kingdom.

Dhuryodhana went round and reported that he could find no good man anywhere. If there was any good man, that was himself, he said. Dharmaja reported to Krishna that he could find no bad man anywhere in their Dhaarmik (virtuous) kingdom. He could find some badness only in himself.

The inner significance of this episode is that one sees only a reflection of one's self in the outer world. It is the vision that accounts for the difference, just as the colour of the glass one wears alters the colour of the world one sees through it. Change your outlook and the world will appear differently. Hence everyone should fill his mind with good thoughts. Meaning of offering Kumkuma to Goddesses During the Navaraathri festival, for the purpose of eradicating one's demonic tendencies, the deities were worshipped with Kumkuma (sacred red powder). The red powder is symbol of blood. The meaning of this worship is offering one's blood to the Lord and receiving in return the gift of peace from the Lord. There are four kinds of tendencies in man: the animal, the demonic, the human and the Divine. Of the three constituents of man--the body, the mind and the Aathma when man ignores the mind and the Aathma and identifies himself with the body, he manifests only his animal qualities. When the body and the Aathma are forgotten and only the mind alone is predominant, one becomes demonic. When the body and the mind are forgotten and one is immersed in the Aathmik consciousness, one becomes Divine. If, in this manner, one explores the potentialities in man, it will be found that they include everything. Man, therefore, has to know himself. There he will find everything. Arjuna saw the Cosmic Form of the Lord (as described in the Geetha). All the worlds were seen in that Cosmic form of Krishna. That Lord resides in every human being. He is nearer than one's closest kith and kin and is dearer than anyone else. He is the sole saviour and refuge of man. The means to progress spiritually Therefore, the Navaraathri festival is observed, by contemplating on God for ten days, cleansing one's self of all impurities, to experience the Divinity within. The penultimate day of the festival is dedicated to what is termed Aayudha Puuja (worship of weapons). The weapons to be worshipped are the divine powers in man. When the Divine is worshipped in this way, one is bound to progress spiritually. On the contrary, the usual practice now is to treat the Divine and the devotee as separate from each other. This is wrong. The Divine is omnipresent and is in everyone and in every object. This truth has to be realised from the message conveyed by the process of inhaling and exhaling that goes on in everyone 21,600 times in a day. Each act of respiration proclaims the message: So-Ham (I am He). With every breath, the message is proclaimed: "I am God." Realising this oneness, all actions should be done as an act of dedication to the Divine. What bliss can be experienced in such a state of mind! It is essential to celebrate festival in this sacred spirit. It is not enough to do this for only ten days during the Navaraathri festival. It should become the rule all through one's life, even as one draws one's life-breath till the end. Students today strive to achieve wealth, strength and friendship. But in addition to these three, they should also strive to develop divine qualities. Only then, they can lead ideal lives. Students! Embodiments of Love! Bhaarith has been from ancient times teaching many esoteric truths to the world out of its abundant spiritual wealth. You must pray for the welfare of all the worlds and not only for your own personal good. I expect all of you to pray for the happiness of all, with your thoughts centred on God. Discourse on Vijayadhashami day, 14-10- 1994, in Sai Ramesh Hall, Brindhaavan. Youth is the stage in life when the slightest turn towards wrong will spell disaster. BABA 29. Chant the Name : sing His glory When one gives up what has to be renounced, When one knows what needs to be known, When one reaches what should be one's goal, How can the Bliss that is got therefrom be described? What have to be given up are these worldly thoughts; What has to be known is the truth, about life; What has to be attained is the Brahmic Consciousness; What greater bliss can there be than this? EMBODIMENTS of love! Belittling human life as trivial and transient, people are forgetting the effulgent Divine that is eternal. Man is no ordinary being. The term Nara applied to man, means Aathma (the Spirit). Man is the embodiment of triple entities. He has one form in the waking state, another in the dream state and a third in the deep sleep state. Although the waking state is described in many ways, the presiding deity of this is called Vishva. Tiffs Vishva is made up of twenty-five constituents--the five basic elements, the five praanas (life-breaths), the five sense organs, the five Koshas (sheaths), the mind, the intellect, the Will and Ahamkaara (Ego) and the Jeivi (Indwelling Spirit). Together, these twenty-five represent the Lord of the waking state. This Vistula, making use of the sense organs in the waking state, experiences the cosmos as pervaded by the Divine. Dream experiences are mental creations of dreamer

In the dream state, the presiding deity is called Thaijasa based on Thejas. Thejas has only 17 constituents. The five sense organs, the five life-breaths and the five sheaths and the mind and intellect.

In the dream state, the individual is creating his dream experiences, including joy and sorrow.

The dream experiences are mental creations of the dreamer. In the deep sleep state, Prajna is the divine entity. In this state there is only one faculty present: the Prajnaa-shakthi (the power of Awareness). This awareness represents the Supreme Brahma Principle. The scriptures declare "Prajnaanam Brahma" (Awareness is the Supreme Absolute). In this state, the five elements, the five-breaths and the five sheaths are absent. With the mind and the intellect also absent, the individual is in a state of Supreme Bliss--Sath-Chith-Aanandha (Being-Awareness-Bliss).

Man is thus not one entity but a threefold personality in the three states of consciousness.

However, not recognizing the unifying factor, man revels in multiplicity, becomes a victim of his own self-deception through Maaya (delusion) and forgets his true nature.

Man is described as Thungabhadhra, the river of Life

It is because man becomes a slave of his senses that he descends to the animal level instead of rising to the state of the Divine Master, Pashupathi. Man is like a piece of sugarcane, which has many knots. These knots in man are the evil tendencies like lust, anger, greed, attachment, pride and envy. These tendencies assume various forms such as love of wealth, attachment to wife and children and the like. Because of these attachments, he forgets his true nature. The scriptures describe man as Thungabhadhra. This name is familiarly associated with that of a river. But, in reality Thungabhadhra is the River of Life. 'Bhadhra' means that which is auspicious. 'Thunga' means that which is immense and immeasurable. Thungabhadhra refers to the body which is capable of conferring limitless well-being on mankind. By misusing such a body man is ruining his life and destroying his true humanness.

The body is intended for rendering help to others and not for self-enjoyment. Unfortunately because of the perversions of the mind, man loses himself in worldly pleasures. He is a slave to the vagaries of the mind and ignores the counsel of the Buddhi (intellect).

Man should remember that the same Divine Prajna (Awareness) is present in all human beings.

This truth is accepted by all faiths. It may be asked why God is not visible if He is all-pervading.

The-answer is that though God is omnipresent, He can be experienced only by those who have a pure heart. Just as a cow's milk can be got only from the udder and not from any other part of the cow, God's image can be visualized only by those with a heart full of love and which is pure and free from selfishness. God cannot be perceived by those with impure minds and polluted hearts.

The sun cannot be seen when he is covered by a cloud. But when the wind sweeps the cloud away, the effulgent sun becomes visible. Likewise man has to drive away the cloud of ignorance enveloping his mind by meditating on God. In this Kali Age there is no greater or easier means of realising God than chanting His name.

Four ways of chanting the Lord's name

There are four ways of chanting the Lord's name. One is through Keerthana (song). Then there is Sankeerthana (community singing). Another is Dhyaana (meditating on the Divine). The fourth is contemplation of the form of the Divine. In all these, meditating on the name is basic.

By meditating on the Lord, Chaithanya and Meera experienced the ecstatic vision of the Lord within themselves. Both of them were immersed in the feeling of devotion to the Lord.

Those who experienced the Lord by chanting the Divine name are Naaradha, Thukaaraam, Thulsidhas, Raamadhas and others. In reply to a question from Naaradha, Krishna declared that He is present wherever His devotees sing His glories. The singing must not be merely a musical exercise but express genuine devotion.

Some devotees sing songs about the leelas (sportive miracles) of God. Jayadheva, for instance, sang only about the sports of Krishna and was oblivious of all other things. He totally identified himself with Krishna.

Raadha represents Ruupa sankeerthana (singing the glory of the Lord's form) of Krishna. She saw Krishna in every object. The heart is moved only when the words of the poem or song are rendered melodiously. (Here Bhagavaan demonstrated how the manner of singing makes all the difference in the appeal of the song: "Raama Nannu Kaapaadu"--- O Raama, Save Me).

By devotional singing one can get merged in the Divine. That is the reason why the Lord is described as Gaanalola or Gaanapriya (Lover of song or one who is charmed by music). It will be befitting if a devotee combines the reciting of the Lord's name with singing and praying for merger with the Divine.

 Now these three are considered as distinct from each other. This is not correct.
 God is one: names are many Devotees are inclined to worship the Lord under different names.
 They consider the names different from each other. They forget that they are all equally, embodiments of the Divine: Sath- Chith-Aanandha. (Being-Awareness-Bliss). There should be no feeling of high and low. Only the one who has the feeling of oneness can be called a renunciant. It is wrong to make a distinction between Raama and Shiva as some small-minded devotees do. Vaishnavaites and Shaivites who go to the Thirumala temple hail the Lord as Venkataramana or Venkateshvara respectively, as if the two names are different, though they represent the same deity.
Thyaagaraaja pointed out that the word Raama is made up of the vital syllables "Raa" and "Ma" in the Naaraayana and Shiva manthras respectively. In this manner devotees should seek unity in apparent diversity rather than seek to divide what is one.
 The nature of the Divine can only be properly understood, by those who are filled with devotion.
 All should be filled with love. Love cannot flow from the manthras of those who are steeped in selfishness and self-pride. Love flows from those who are humble. It cannot arise in those who are conceited and pompous. The love of God can arise only from loving thoughts. There must be yearning for God, just as one has to experience hunger to think of food. There is hunger for God in every one, but the disease of self-pride prevents one from feeling that hunger. The denial of God is a kind of disease. The unbeliever is afflicted by a variety of diseases like pride, envy, anger and greed.
 One should be pure to be attracted by the Lord
 There are some who have one foot on faith and the other on disbelief.
 For sometime they live with devotion and then they get lost in worldly concerns. The result is they have the worst of both worlds. One should not attempt to ride two horses at the same time. Stick to one thing and pursue it with determination. There is no such perseverance today because men are attracted by various worldly pleasures. It is not good to be lured by such attractions. Man should be attracted only by the Divine. Krishna has been described as one who is alluring in every way--by his looks, words and action. One should be pure to be attracted by the Lord. A sensuous person is like a rusty piece of iron, which cannot be attracted by a magnet.

 In the world today man is caught between the forces of evil and the forces of good, similar to the war in the Mahaabhaaratha between the wicked Kauravas on the one side and the virtuous Paandavas on the other. Krishna was on the side of the Paandavas, though He did not take part in the fighting. God is always on the side of the good and the virtuous.
 "See good, be good, do good, that is the way to God." Make every effort to experience the Divine.
Bhajans are supremely valuable People may say that when you go to Sai Baba, there is nothing but bhajan. Realise that there is nothing greater than bhajan. What bliss is there in bhajans! What a demonstration of oneness is it when a myriad throats join in uttering the name of God! The vibrations emanating from them make the heart vibrant. If you sing alone in your shrine, the vibrations return to you as reaction.
 But in community singing, what you have is not a reaction but a wave of vibrations. They enter into the atmosphere and purify the polluted air. The atmosphere today is polluted by bad thoughts and feelings. When you sing the glory of God, the bad germs in the air are destroyed and the air gets purified by a treatment with anti-biotics as it were.
Bhajans are therefore supremely valuable. It has been said that in the Kali Age there is no greater spiritual practice than chanting the name of the Lord. Let one remember the name of Raama at the time of passing, whether he is a millionaire or a pauper, whether he is a scholar or an illiterate. Sing the name of the Lord and redeem your lives!
 Discourse in the Sai Ramesh Hall in Brindhaavan on 23-10-1994.
 30. Education and culture Wealth is worshipped as God,
 Selfishness has become the basis of life,
 Pomp and show have become the fashion of the day,
 Ego is ruling supreme in everyone,
 Ambition makes men ignore righteousness.
 There is no humility and no regard for truth,
 Education is sought for earning money,
 Hypocrisy has become the order of the day.
 How can the sons of Bhaarath Maathaaji
 Hope to progress in the right path?
 Spiritual education is the urgent need
 Of the hour to reform our children

And turn them in the right direction.

STUDENTS, teachers and educators! What do you mean by education?

What type of education should you have? What kind of education will set an ideal? What is the outcome of education?

One must enquire deeply, investigate and get the right answer to these questions. People feel that education helps in materialistic pursuits and rest content with this. This is a not a right attitude.

Education should promote culture. It is not by education alone but by culture that one gets refined.

Culture promotes refinement. It is termed as Samskaara which consists of Sadhguna (good character), Sadhaachaara (good practices) and Sadbhaavana (good feelings). For a person to be deemed educated, his behaviour should be good, his actions useful to society and his feelings should be compassionate and kind. "Sarvabhuutha Hithe Rathah" (One should have concern for the welfare of all beings).

What is education without culture?

It is not enough if a student is endowed with scientific and worldly knowledge. He should have essentially moral and spiritual knowledge also.

The aim of education should be to bring about an all-round development of the personalities of the students. Education should make all virtues emerge and shine forth in students. Indian culture essentially aims at developing human beings with such a personality.

What is education without culture? It is like a kite cut off from its main thread. It is not possible to predict where this kite would land--whether on thorny bushes or on dwelling places. It is difficult to predict how such education is going to affect and harm society. It may also be compared to a house without light; bats and poisonous reptiles enter into such houses. Education without culture makes man forget his true human nature and take to evil ways. Such education is like a counterfeit coin. Even beggars refuse to accept a counterfeit coin. Even parents would hesitate to love a son without culture. Refinement and culture are the very life-breath of human life.

Knowledge with humility makes one blossom

It would be wrong to call it education if it merely teaches the meanings of words. The basic aim of education is to make men of character and virtue. Many people think that knowledge is power.

It is not so. In fact, character is power. Education should confer humility Education without humility, action without discrimination, scholarship without wisdom, words without truth, friendship without gratitude, music without melody, politics without morality and integrity can never shine in society. One's personality blossoms only when one has humility along with knowledge.

Education should be useful to society. It should make citizens follow the path of morality and righteousness and make their lives happy.

Human life is very sacred and valuable. Today people are not aware of the uniqueness of human life. They have forgotten human values. That is the reason why one comes across various agitations and strikes in society today What is the reason for the country getting poverty-stricken, for suffering from fear and anxiety, for not recognizing the sacredness of spirituality, for losing morality and integrity? The reason is that man is not living as a human amidst his fellow beings.

He is living like an animal or like a demon. Today, the cloud of ego and pomp is covering the sun of Aathma and hiding its natural splendour.

Selfishness is rampant. The true meaning of word Svaartha is that one has to know Sva (Aathma). Understanding the Sva (Aathma) is Svaartham (Sva+Artha). The syllable Sva in Svaartham does not refer to the body; but the soul. The Aathma (spirit) is pure, unselfish and eternal.

That was the reason why the ancient rishis described the Aathma in such glorious terms, but today man is misunderstanding the meaning of the word Sva, identifying it with the body instead of the soul.

Man today is treating the body as the source of all happiness. Such happiness is not true and permanent; it is momentary. Educated persons are not striving to earn spiritual, permanent and real happiness.

We need a fusion of knowledge and action

We are acquiring knowledge, but do not put it to proper use.

Knowledge without action is useless. Action without knowledge is foolishness. There is a divorce between knowledge and action today We need a fusion of knowledge and action. Students should cultivate patriotism and a spirit of service. It is conspicuously absent today.

In India today there are 200 Universities and 9000 colleges. About a crore of students have been enrolled in these colleges. Universities are becoming factories which manufacture graduates.

These students are let loose on the world after graduation. No one is bothered about the future of these graduates and how they will benefit the nation? What is the use of having education which does not benefit society? No one seems to bother to examine all these matters, whether Government, society, educational authorities, Vice-Chancellors or other administrators, etc. This is a sad state, which ails the system of education today. It is making man a slave of the senses. How can such people serve the society? Wherever you look at the students you find sacrifice conspicuous by its absence. Universities are busy developing different types of subjects to be taught, but are not aware of the Real Subject which they should reach. What is that subject which is the very basis of all other subjects? Aathma-Vidhya (Spiritual knowledge), is the basis of all education. It is like the ocean while all other types of education are like rivers which must merge in the ocean. Today, education without a spiritual base is causing harm. The essence of Spiritual Education is faith and dedication. They are like the two bunds of a river. Only when the river of life flows between these bunds would the river be safe. If there are no bunds, the waters would flow over villages and towns and cause vast destruction. It is the absence of spirituality which is responsible for all the problems, violence, agitation and strike. Education should foster the two bunds of dedication and faith in students. From self-reliance to self-realisation Education should inculcate in students the spirit of self-reliance and self-confidence. The first thing in life is self-reliance, second is self-confidence, third is self-sacrifice, fourth is selfrealisation. With self-realisation life finds its final fulfilment. Sage Vaalmeeki has compared Raama and Raavana in his epic, the Raamaayana. Raama is described as a great Inaani and Raavana as a fool. Raavana had mastered 64 types of worldly knowledge whereas Raama had mastered only 26. Why was such a highly educated person as Raavana called a fool by Vaalmeeki? It is because Raavana lacked three important qualities which Raama had. They are working for the welfare of entire humanity, possessing the supreme knowledge and having great virtues. Raavana was only a slave of the senses. Knowledge bereft of noble qualities and virtues becomes only bookish knowledge which is of no use to society. What is it that made Raama God? It is imbibing of the six qualities, namely character, compassion, non-violence, control of the mind, control of the senses and fame. Students should imbibe these six qualities which make man God. Students should never indulge in violence. Hurting or harming any person essentially means hurting and harming oneself. It is in this context Vyaasa stated that the essence of the eighteen Puraanas is "Help ever, Hurt never." Spread Bhaaratheeya culture In today's system of education the teachers are not teaching this basic virtue. The Raamaayana, Bhaagavatha and Mahaabhaaratha are like three important life-breaths for Indian culture. Today's students do not know these three texts without which a person cannot be called Bhaaratheeya. Instead, students indulge in reading cheap novels, which contain bad ideas. Students going out from Sri Sathya Sai Institute of Higher Learning should take an oath that they would plunge into society and spread Bhaaratheeya culture from house to house to all people. Indian culture is the very backbone of our life. If you cannot spread this culture your studies have no meaning. I desire only one thing from you. You should enjoy peace yourself and spread peace all around. That is the gratitude which you have to show to the Institution which has given you free education and which has showered so much of love on you. Strive to bring about unity; there is no greater strength than unity. Whatever you have learnt should be made relevant and useful to society. The gap between learning and practice should be bridged. Knowledge from books and laboratories should be made relevant and useful to society. Work for the honour and glory of the society and the nation. Carry on your secular life with spiritual outlook What are you planning to do after you obtain the Degree from the University? It is no use going in search of a job from office to office with your Degree certificate or registering your name in the employment exchange. If the Government starts colleges without being able to give jobs to the graduates, it leads to all sorts of problems arising out of unemployment. The colleges must be operated, keeping in view the demand for graduates. Our University spends Rs. 60,000 per head on Arts students, Rs. 90,000 per head on Science students, but we do not charge any fees. What benefit do we get out of this? The only benefit is to make your lives exemplary to the world at large. We want you to carry on your secular life with spiritual outlook and attitude. With the education obtained in the Institute, if you have determination, then is nothing which you cannot achieve. During your student days do not enter into politics. After completing your education, you may enter into politics and practise the values which you have learnt as a student and serve the society and the nation.

We got Independence, but unfortunately after Independence unity is lost. Independence without unity does not benefit the nation.

Today in the Convocation you have taken an oath administered by the Vice-Chancellor. Oath taking is like giving a promise. You must take the oath wholeheartedly. It would be a great sin if you conduct yourselves in daily life contrary to the oath.

Students! Whether you are aware of it or not, Mother Bhaarith is pining for you. You are not even recognizing the fact that you are born in the sacred land of Bhaarith. Mother Bhaarith has hidden an enormous treasure for you--the treasure of knowledge and spirituality.

You may return to your places and conduct yourselves in keeping with human dignity and the type of training that you have obtained here. Do not get a bad name either for yourselves or for your parents. You should be free from ego, jealousy; arrogance and be full of humility, nobility and sacredness. Service to society and the nation must dominate your thought, word and action.

Benedictory address to the Convocation of the Sri Sathya Sai Institute of Higher Learning on 22-11-1994.

The children must have reverence towards their religion, their culture, their educational attainments and their country. They must learn well their mother-tongue, so that they can appreciate the great poetical works and epics written by the Seers of their land.
 This will give them valuable guidance in the stormy days ahead.

BABA

31. The Avathar and the devotees
 More effulgent than the Sun, Purer and Whither than snow,
 Subtler than space,
 The Supreme Self pervades everything,
 From the minutest particle.
 Holding everything within Him,
 Illumining everything By His Consciousness.
 The Divine (Brahman) is in you
 And you are in the Brahman.
 There is no difference Between you and Brahman.

What greater truth can I convey
 To all of you assembled here?
 EMBODIMENTS of the Divine Aathma. When the Lord (Naaraayana) incarnates in human form, He cannot avoid abiding by the regulations set by Him. You should not forget that even if the Lord is the Director of the "Cosmic drama, in His human form he is playing a specific role. If He does not act according to the role assumed by Him, either overdoes or underplays the role, departing from what is appropriate, He will be falling in His purpose.

When the Divine assumes human form, He has to serve as an example by ideal actions.
Hiranyaaksha and Hiranyakashipu, impelled by their hatred, embarked on many enquiries in search of Naaraayana. They felt after their prober that Naaraayana was not in any of the five elements. But the tide of time and circumstances led to situations in which they faced the Lord in His most dreadful forms and met with their end.

When Krishna made His advent on earth, He also had to play His part according to His role.

While Sishupala was railing at Krishna, He allowed him a long rope and destroyed him, when the appropriate time came. The Bhaagavatham relates the story of how Krishna retreated repeatedly in His encounters with Jaraasandha. How can the All-knowing, All-powerful, Omnipresent Lord flee from anywhere? Where can He hide Himself? This is utterly fanciful.

When one has faith in the ways of the Lord and abides by the will of the Lord, the Lord can be understood and experienced.

For instance, there is the example of Dhruvapadhi in the Mahaabhaaratha. In the court of Dhuryodhana, although she was humiliated and dishonoured by Dhuryodhana and Dhushshaasana, Krishna, in accordance with the role He had to play, did not intervene, as both of them were destined to meet with their death at the hands of Bheema.

During Krishna's life-time, He was the target of attacks and accusations by many wicked persons. But the Divine has no likes or dislikes. The wicked persons suffer from the consequences of their own actions according to their deserts.

What one gets in life is dependent partly on what he has earned by his actions. This is called Praarabdham (fate). This is by its nature temporary. What is got as the fruit of a past action will not last long. Forgetting this fact and forgetting also his Svabhaavam (true nature) man is carried away by the transient and acts according to his whims.

When an actor in a play is assigned a certain role, he studies the entire play, but while acting his role, he has to play his part alone in each scene as required in the play and not all the roles that he knows. He has to suit his actions to the demands of his role in each scene in the play

Likewise, the Lord, when He has assumed a role in the Cosmic play, has to act in each situation according to what is appropriate to it and according to the rules of the game.

Mankind's fall from righteous conduct

From ancient times, in accordance with the spirit of Bhaaratheeya Culture, Bhaaratheeyas have been according the Highest place to Thyaaga (renunciation or sacrifice). They adored Dharma (Righteous Conduct). They were pledged to upholding justice. They adhered to Truth. People today have ignored these values of Bhaarith's ancient culture. They have fallen a prey to worldly and sensuous pleasures, believing that only earthly existence is real. People in the world today are taking to evil ways and cherishing evil thoughts the like of which have never before prevailed. Men are consumed by a limitless passion for wealth and power. No doubt money is necessary for meeting one's daily needs. But even here there should be a limit.

The vast ocean, when it swells beyond its bounds, causes disaster. The food that is required for sustaining the body is conducive to health only when it is consumed within limits. Over-eating poisons the physical system. Food may give satisfaction or cause illness. By his food habits man is becoming a prey to disease. Food is essential, but it must be taken within limit for it to be wholesome. Likewise wealth is essential but within limits. When there is excessive wealth, many dangers ensue. With excessive wealth man turns arrogant and loses the sense of discrimination between right and wrong. He becomes a Dhuryodhana who exemplified greed rather than a Karna (who was noted for his generosity). Wealth and sacrifice should grow together Together with the growth of one's wealth, one's spirit of sacrifice should grow commensurately.

Increase in wealth should bring about an increase in generosity. These days wealth increases but not magnanimity.

Of what use is wealth if one cannot be happy? Even if a river is overflowing, A dog can only lap a little of it. For a greedy man, there is no contentment Even if he has large hoards.

Today, when a man's riches increase, he becomes increasingly miserly. As a result, he forgets his true nature.

When money earned by honest means does not always confer happiness, how can you get happiness through money earned by dishonest means? Hence, it should be realised that excessive wealth can never confer peace or happiness. When you have large wealth, offer it for good causes to help others. Thereby you will derive satisfaction.

In the pursuit of power men sacrifice morality

The second evil is the passion for power. From the villager to the topmost man in a city, everybody is after power. Power carries with it limits and obligations. There are five kinds of power--the power of knowledge, intellectual power, the power of fame, the power of character, and the power of sacrifice. Only the person who has all these five attributes should aspire for a position of authority.

These days men conduct themselves in positions of power without any understanding of how to exercise authority. Every man aspires for positions of power from that of Panchaayath President to the head of the government of the country. In the pursuit of power, men are prepared to use any means, sacrificing morality and justice. All sorts of corrupt practices are being resorted to for securing power. Law and order are being undermined.

In this manner, the true nature of man is being forgotten. This is a highly dangerous situation.

Those who seek positions of authority should recognise their obligations. They should exercise power with due regard to the restraints to be observed. "Nasshreyo Niyama Vinaa" (Nothing great can be achieved without restraint). Thus both wealth and power have to be used with restraint. But these restraints have been violated at present. Divine bids for proper time to play His full role

All the troubles and disorders the country is experiencing today are due to these violations. Men are failing to recognise the nature of the Divine. Even though the Divine has come down as an actor on the world stage, He is biding for the proper time to play His full role. A fruit takes time to ripen. When the fruit is ripe it falls down of its own accord. Likewise when the time is ripe for one to reap the fruits of his actions, he must be ready to gather them according to the nature of the actions. It is one's own actions which lead to bad or good results. That is why the scriptures have declared that man's mind is the cause of his bondage or liberation.

Hence, the mind has to be turned towards the sacred path. It should be concentrated on actions of service to others. It should be devoted to concern for the welfare of the world. Only then the purity of the mind expresses itself.

For all the confusion and conflict prevailing in the world today, it is the feelings and thoughts of people that are responsible. To rake offence when some one criticizes you or to think of retaliation when one does some harm to you, is not the right way of reaching to them. Consider whatever good or bad that happens to you as the consequence of your own actions. Do not attribute them. to acts of the Divine.

God is like a postman. The postman delivers one letter to one address and the people in the house rejoice over the good news contained in it. He delivers another letter at a second house and there is lamentation over the sad news contained in the letter. Is the postman responsible for the joy or the sadness of the recipients, of the letters? No. It is the content of the respective letters that is responsible. What you experience by way of joy or grief is a consequence of your own actions.

God is only a witness.

Earn God's grace by getting rid of ego

In human society today, egoism is rampant. Ostentation is ubiquitous. Can peace and security be ensured in such a milieu? Can God's grace flow in such a state? No. Whatever one's scholarship or wealth, as long as there is Ahamkaara (egoism) God's grace will not flow. Grace, like water, flows from a higher to a lower level. God's grace will be showered on those who have humility and discipline. Humility is essential for securing God's grace. Revere elders. Be content with what you have. Develop goodwill towards 'all. Bear no iii will towards anyone. When you desire that all should love you, you should equally love all.

The history of Bhaarath bears testimony to the pacific attitude of Bhaaratheeyas. They defended themselves when the country was invaded by outsiders, but they never embarked on wars of conquest. The ancient Bhaaratheeyas never resorted to wrongful or unrightful policies.

Adherence to peace and truth was natural to them. Unfortunately today; in the pursuit of power people are giving the go-by to morality and integrity. In western countries many leaders resorted to violence to capture power. In Bhaarath also, there have been many examples of Muslims who killed or imprisoned their own fathers or kinsmen to seize the reins of power. This greed for power converted men into demons.

But look at what happened in the Raamaayana. To carry out the promises of his father, Raama renounced the kingdom and chose to live in exile for fourteen years in the forest. He did not aspire for power or position. He cherished Dharma (the code of right conduct).

Raama's example for cherishing Dharma

Shortly after their entry into the forest, one day, when Raama and Lakshmana were sitting under a tree, they heard the neigh of horses and cries of elephants. Raama asked Lakshmana to find out the masons for the unusual presence of horses in the forest.

Lakshmana climbed to the top of a tree and surveyed the scene. He noticed the advancing of a huge army, but only the flag fluttering high over the haze could be seen clearly. Lakshmana concluded from the emblem on the flag that it was Bharatha who was coming with the army.

Lakshmana got down and asked Raama to get ready with his bow and arrows. "What for?" asked Raama. Lakshmana said that at the instance of his mother, Bharatha was coming with his army to seize them. Amused at Lakshmana's naivety, Raama told him smilingly: "Bharatha is not such a person. He will do no such thing. He is coming to see us because he did not find us in Ayodhya when he came back to the city." Lakshmana retorted: "If he is coming to see us, why should he bring the army with him?"

Raama said: "To allay the feelings of the people, Bharatha is coming with all the citizens.

Lakshmana! You have failed to realise that no one born in the Ikshvaaku line will ever shed blood to ascend to the throne. Those who seize the throne by the sword cannot be righteous rulers. No such Kings will ever be born in the Ikshvaaku dynast. The rule of conduct for the Ikshvaaku Kings is to inherit the throne by righteous means and rule with the consent of the people. The spirit of service should inspire who seek positions of authority. Without knowing how to serve, one cannot become a true leaden" Raama allayed Lakshmana's apprehensions in this manner.

Meanwhile, Bharatha came running towards Raama, crying "Oh Brother!" and fell at his feet.

Watching this scene, Lakshmana regretted his misjudgment and sought Raama's forgiveness.

Thus, from ancient times, the rulers in Bhaarath never resorted to violence or unrighteous means to ascend the throne. They were dedicated to the practice of Dharma.

"Sathyam Vadhha:

Dharmam Chara" (Speak the truth, follow Righteousness). These were the two basic tenets of the ancient Bhaaratheeyas. They esteemed them as their two eyes.

Today the rule has been reversed---Sathyam Vadhha (Kill truth) Dharmam Chara (Imprison Righteousness). Today it is the reign of falsehood. Unrighteousness is the prevailing moral code.

It is because of these tendencies. Bhaarith today is a prey to disorder.

Every individual should try to practise and protect truth and righteousness. This is the bounden duty of every citizen of Bhaarith. This is the service they have to do to the nation. The nation will not be protected by an army or by the most modern weapons. If the people safeguard truth and righteousness, the latter will protect the nation and the world.

Svaami's encounter with intellectuals

Once, more than two decades ago, Sri K.M. Munshi convened a conference of intellectuals in Bombay to be addressed by Svaami. The so-called intellectuals today seldom have any intelligence. They are filled with conceit. The intellectuals in the gathering were proud and arrogant, gloating over their scholarship and book knowledge.

Bhagavan was the Chief Guest at the meeting and Munshi was seated next to Svaami. Munshi requested Svaami to clarify the doubts of intellectuals regarding spirituality and right conduct.

Many questions were put to Svaami and Svaami answered all of them clearly and convincingly.

One member of the audience asked Svaami whether it was not necessary for India to equip itself with atom bombs in view of the fact that both affluent America and Communist Russia had huge piles of atom bombs. Svaami replied- "What folly is this! When there are millions in the country who lack food, clothing and shelter, the provision of these necessities is the most urgent task and not the manufacturing of atom bombs. Of what use are bombs when you cannot feed the people?

Crores are being wasted on armaments. I cannot agree to such wastage."

Then another member asked- "How are we to meet an attack from outside?" Svaami replied:

Our country's name is Bhaarith. For this country the Mahaabhaaritha is the authentic guidebook. The heroes in this epic are the five Paandava brothers. Among them, Arjuna and Bheema are incomparable warriors. Nevertheless, they submitted themselves to Dharmaja, the eldest of the brothers. If India upholds Dharma, America and Russia will have to respect Bhaarith. Confronted by Dharma, anyone however powerful, will be cut to size. Therefore, the most vital thing for Bhaarith is Dharma."

When Svaami gave this reply, the entire gathering cheered Svaami for fifteen minutes.

Thereafter Svaami told them. "It is not enough to clap your hands; open the taps of your minds.

Take to the path of Dharma. There is no use merely applauding my words."

There are many in the country who worship the Raamaayana as a sacred text. How many of them honour the words of the father? Of what use is it to recite the Raamaayana without following its precepts? You have discourses on the Geetha in every street. But is anyone acting up to even one of its reachings? If you go on learning for years, when are you going to start practising the lessons? The endless study of books is sheer folly; to put into practice a single word is better than such studies. Today Bhaarith is full of such foolish persons.

Love is Sai's most potent weapon

Many of you have been coming here for over twenty or thirty years. You have listened to Svaami's discourses many times. Svaami has been repeatedly declaring that immortality can be achieved only by sacrifice and not by deeds, wealth or progeny How many are making any sacrifice? How many are purring Svaami's teachings into practice?

Why are you gathered here?

It is all useless unless you practise at least one of the reachings. What is My directive? What is it that will please Me? What is it that I desire? Only one thing: Love, Love, Love. That is Sai's most potent weapon. Was any invitation sent to any of you to come here? So many of you have gathered here attracted solely by the power of Svaami's love. Them is nothing that cannot be achieved in the world through love. Some things may be achieved by other means, but through love even the Divine can be held in the palm of one's hand.

Saavithri, Chandhramathi, Seetha and Dhamayanthi stood out as exemplars of Indian womanhood. People read books about them, but do not follow their example. The reason is that people are swayed by evil thoughts. These bad qualities are due to bad habits relating to food and recreation.

Eschew meat, liquor and smoking

Today, let it be anyone, whether one deems himself a devotee or not, he should give up meat caring. Why? Meat eating promotes only animal qualities. It has been well said that the food one consumes determines one's thoughts. By caring the flesh of various animals, the qualities of these animals are imbibed. How sinful is it to feed on animals, which are sustained by the same five elements as human beings! This leads to demonic tendencies, besides committing the sin of inflicting cruelty on animals. Hence, those who genuinely seek to become devotees of God have to give up non-vegetarian food. Calling themselves Sai devotees or devotees of Raama and Krishna, they fatten on chicken. How can they be deemed Sai devotees? How can God accept such a person as a devotee? Therefore, whether they are devotees in India or outside, they should give up from this instant meat eating.

Next, there is the question of drink. The water that one drinks is life-giving. It issues from the head of Shiva. It is sacred. Instead of such wholesome drink, it is wrong to drink intoxicants. It makes a man forget his true nature. Alcoholic drink is utterly obnoxious. It degrades the addict. It makes him forget God. The drink addict is not conscious of what he says or does. The very sight of such a person is revolting. The drink evil has ruined innumerable families. Alcoholics have caused misery to their wives and children by wasting all their money on liquor. Of what use to the world are such derelicts?

In addition to liquor, many are addicted to smoking tobacco. Today cigarette smoking is the cause of many diseases like asthma, lung cancer, cocoonaphilia and heart ailments. The evil effects of smoking can be easily demonstrated. If a whiff of cigarette smoke is blown at a handkerchief, the cloth turns red at the spot. If smoke can cause such damage to a piece of cloth, how much damage will it not do when it gets into the blood stream? It ruins one's health and shortens one's life-span. Therefore, those who aspire to become true devotees of God have to give up meat, liquor and smoking. Each one has to reform himself. Drink addiction is the cause of many evils. But no Government can stop this. The change must take place at the individual level. This can take place only through a mental transformation and not as a result of preaching by others. Each one has to recognise the truth and reform himself.

Embodiments of Love! You are deeming this day as the sixty ninth birthday of Svaami. I have no desire to celebrate such birthdays. As I was coming I was greeted by many wishing Me "Happy Birthday" I am always happy Why should anyone wish "Happy Birthday" for Me? Be happy yourselves. Your happiness is My happiness.

Today, as an offering to Svaami, give up meat eating, consuming liquor and smoking. By renouncing these three, you will benefit yourselves as well as society and the nation. Svaami's sole aim is to promote the welfare of the family, the society and the nation. If you wish to carry out Svaami's aim, renounce from this moment itself these three bad practices. Do not put it off to tomorrow. Take the resolve from this moment. Expecting that you will carry out Svaami's wish and thereby promote the well being of your family and the nation, I bless all of you.

Discourse in the Puurnachandhra Auditorium on 23-11-1994, Bhagavaan's Birthday.

32. The devotion that God loves Clay is one, but pots are multifarious;
Gold is one, but jewels are varied;
Milk is one, though cows are of many colours.
The Supreme is One, but wears many vestures.
EMBODIMENTS of Divine Love! Although clay is one, the products made out of it are varied in form and name. Gold is one, but many different ornaments are made out of it. Milk is same, though it may be derived from cows of different colours. Though the Divine is one, He manifests Himself in various forms with different names.

From the fathomless ocean, countless waves arise. Though the waves appear as different from each other, the ocean is one. Likewise, though living beings appear in the Universe in a myriad forms, all of them are waves that have emerged from the ocean of Sath-Chith-Aanandha (Being-Awareness-Bliss).

The joys and sorrows man experiences in daily life, his attachments and aversions, his pursuit of sensory pleasures, are all due to the vagaries of the mind. As long as man is subject to the feeling of duality, he cannot be free from attachments and hatred. There can be no escape from dualism as long as man does not recognise his inherent divinity.

Freedom from dualism

There are today few who recognise unity in diversity, though there are any number of intellectuals who are engaged in promoting divisions and differences. The world today needs righteous men who will promote unity.

The mind is the cause of differences and only by control of the mind can differences be eliminated. How can man discover his oneness with the Divine without seeking to know his true nature? Nine forms of devotion have been indicated for man to realise his divinity, starting with Shravanam (listening to the glories of God) and culminating in Aathma nivedhanam (total surrender to the Divine).

Of these nine forms of devotion, the greatest is total surrender. But who is to surrender, what and to whom? When this question is pursued, man discovers that the entire tuff verse is made up of the Pancha bhuuthas (five basic elements), which are manifestations of God. Man is also a manifestation of God. God is not separate from man. But man is unable to recognise this because of his identifying himself with the body, which is only an instrument.

When he gives up this feelings, he will experience the Self.

Elevate every object to the level of the Divine

Men are of three types. First, Bhakthi rasa-aathmakam (emotional type), The second, Kriyaaathmakam

(active type). The third, the rational type. The emotional type of persons are engaged in activities like worship of idols, bhajans etc. They offer worship to an idol or picture in the faith that God in a certain form has shown to mankind the means to liberation. However, you may worship a picture as God, but not God as a picture. You may see God in a picture, but the picture is not God. No object exists with a form without the immanence of the Divine in it.

Hence every object has to be elevated to the level of the Divine. Treat every object as a manifestation of the Divine. But do not reduce the Divine to the level of material objects. The process of devotion, beginning with adoration of physical objects, ultimately leads to the realisation of the Divine. Without this emotional yearning for God active pursuit of the Divine is not possible.

When devotion develops, one resorts to the path of action. And then, one starts enquiring into what is transient and what is permanent, what is real and what is unreal. While this discriminating faculty is essential for the spiritual aspirant, it is being abused in the name of rationalism. The process of enquiring has assumed bizarre forms. Today many young persons are misled by so-called rationalism to deride spirituality. Few persons attempt to get at the correct meanings of things. By misinterpreting things and creating confusion, many are taking to wrong courses.

Human life is precious, sublime and meaningful. But by involvement in purely worldly pursuits, the greatness of human birth is forgotten. Without values, life is meaningless. When there is purity in thought, word and deed, human values are practised. The unity of the three H's is essential--Heart, Head and Hand. But today this unity is absent among people, with the result that men are becoming inhuman.

Man has to understand the inherent divinity

Because man has not been able to shed the animal qualities inherited from his past, he does not behave like a true human being. Hence, man has to endeavour to understand his true nature, his immense potentialities and his divine qualities.

He must realise that whatever he perceives is essentially Divine. All his actions should be dedicated to the Divine. Thereby work will be transformed into worship. In essence, there is no difference between work and worship. But, unfortunately; in these degenerate days even worship is turned into some form of undesirable activity. Today devotion is used for deriving sensory enjoyment. It is used more as a source of fleeting pleasure than a fountain of enduring bliss. God will not approve of such part-time devotion. The Divine is omnipresent and is watching everyone of your actions, wherever you may be. 'People in their ignorance imagine that God takes no notice of them. Divinity cannot be understood as long as this ignorance prevails.

Many people imagine that they are caught up in the coils of Samsaara (worldly life) and are the victims of worldly existence. This is a ridiculous idea. It is not family life that binds you. It has no arms to clasp you. It is you who are endowed with hands, eyes and ears. It is you who are holding on to worldly life and suffering the consequences. This is the truth in the false and the unreality in the Real. This accounts for the fact that in the world today the false is deemed true and the truth is considered as untrue.

All that exists in cosmos belongs to God

How can man realise the Truth? Only when he experiences the Adhvaithabhaava (non-dualism).

As long as he is steeped in dualism (that he and the Divine are different), he is bound to be racked by the opposites: joy and sorrow, the real and the unreal.

All that exists in the cosmos belongs to God. But man imagines that he is the owner of various things and is a prisoner of the conception of "mine" and "thine." In reality all are only trustees of the property belonging to the Divine. This means that everyone has to consider himself as a trustee for the world's goods. A bank cashier handles an enormous amount of money. None of it belongs to him. He cannot use it for himself, but has to ensure its safety and right use. Likewise, all are trustees responsible for the proper use of the goods entrusted to them. No one can claim ownership.

Hence one's life should reflect the unity of thought, speech and action. Devotion should also be the unified expression of love for God, action in the service of God and total surrender to the will of God. These are intertwined like the braid of a woman's tresses.

Bhakthi (devotion), Upaasana

(worship) and Inaana (awareness of the Self) together demonstrate the oneness of the Divine.

This truth is common to all religions like Christianity, Zorastrianism and other faiths. True spirituality emphasizes the truth that is common to all religions. One should not hate any religion or ridicule any form of worship. One must recognise the unifying truth in all religions. God is not separate from you. However, by regarding God as separate from him, man resorts to various kinds of worship. In the present day world this type of Karmopaasana (worship through action) is necessary. But one should not be engaged all his life in this form of worship. Gradually one should reach a higher level. Only then humanness gets divinised.

Every human has latent tendencies of a sage

What is important today is not what particular faith one professes, whether he is a Christian, a Buddhist, a Muslim or a Hindu. The real question is how far he is a true human, being. Develop therefore, your human qualities. What constitutes humanness? It is good conduct alone. The Indian epics hail man as Manuja. One who belongs to the lineage of the sage Manu. As such every human being has the latent tendencies of a sage. Unfortunately, instead of these traits, only vicious tendencies are to the fore. Man must recover his spiritual heritage. He must cultivate sublime and divine feelings. However, owing to misdirected education men are taking to evil ways. Compared to the behaviour of the educated urban population, there seems to be more goodness and virtue among unlettered hill tribes. Injustice and wickedness seem to flourish in the places where you have educational institutions and courts of law.

Men should concentrate on their natural spiritual tendencies rather than succumbing to the allurements of worldly objects. For this purpose, association with good people is essential.

Eschew totally the company of bad people. Good company does not mean participating in bhajans and religious gatherings. Sathsang truly means cultivating the company of one's Sath

(conscience). It means being immersed in the contemplation of God. Carry on your daily, duties with your thoughts centred on God. Deem every action as an offering to God. That is the way to perfect one's human nature and sanctify one's life.

Likhitha japam purifies the mind

As this may not be an easy process, the method of Likhitha japam has been recommended for purifying one's mind. Likhitha japam is a form of spiritual exercise in which one is engaged in writing the name of the Lord). Likhitha japam should be performed in a spirit of devotion. A wealthy man, who had no peace of mind & spire his riches, went to a sage for advice. The sage suggested to him that as a way of reducing his insatiable desires, which were the cause of his worries, he should write the name of the Lord some crores of times. Unused to such an arduous exercise, the rich man found a shortcut to achieving what the sage had suggested, by resorting to mechanical devices for multiplying the number of times he wrote the name of the Lord. This is a total travesty of the spiritual exercise suggested by the sage. It is tantamount to cheating God.

This sort of deception and hypocrisy is rampant today. It is not quantity that counts. Even the writing of a few names with sincere devotion is better than filling pages mechanically.

In Thamil Naadu, numerous devotees have written with true devotion the name of Sai Raam

many crores of times, thinking of the name in their minds, spelling it by mouth and writing it by the hand. The unity of mind, speech and action has produced purity in thought, word and deed.

Any spiritual exercise like Likhitha japam should be done wholeheartedly. Only then it becomes sanctified and godly. All actions should be performed in this spirit of dedication and in accordance with the dictates of one's conscience.

The name of the Lord is like a precious jewel which must be considered valuable and cherished as a gem. Thulsidhas sang in praise of the Lord's name (Raama's name) as the most invaluable gift given to him' by his guru. The Lord's name should be recited with deep feeling so that it gets firmly entrenched in the heart.

The example of Hanumaan

Hanumaan is the supreme exemplar of true devotion. At the time of Raama's coronation in Ayodhya after his return from Lanka, Raama gave presents to all those who had helped him in the battle against Raavana. When it came to Hanumaan, Raama could not find anything that was worthy of the unparalleled devotion of Hanumaan. Praising Hanuman's unexcelled services, Raama said that the only fitting reward for such a devotee was to give himself to Hanumaan. He embraced Hanumaan most lovingly Seetha saw this and felt Hanumaan should not be left unrewarded for his great services. She took out from her neck the pearl necklace she had received from her father Janaka at the time of her wedding and gave it to Hanumaan.

Immediately after receiving the necklace, Hanumaan removed one pearl after another from the necklace, crushed it between his teeth, placed it close to his ear and then threw it away Surprised at his strange behaviour, Seetha asked him why he was treating the pearls in that manner.

Hanumaan explained that he had no use for any object that did not chant Raama's name. Seetha asked him how he could expect to hear Raama's name from an inert object like a pearl.

Hanumaan immediately pulled out a hair from his arm and kept it close to Seetha's ear. The hair was chanting Raama's name!

True devotion means that even the blood stream should proclaim the Lord's name. Because Hanumaan was such a devotee he could be the foremost servant of Raama. He was totally free from egoism, pride and envy. In Lanka, he did not boast of his prowess, but was content to declare himself a humble servant of Raama. This humility is the true mark of a devotee.

When a person is asked "Where do you live?" the correct answer is: "I am dwelling in the (Indwelling Spirit)." This is the truth to be learnt from all the scriptures and epics. Everyone should realise the oneness in spirit of all mankind, which is proclaimed equally by all religions.

Sometime ago a devotional exercise called Likhitha japam (writing the names of the Lord as a form of worship) was started in Tamil Nadu. It was a collective (Samashti) exercise. Large numbers of devotees assembled at one place and wrote the name of the Lord as a (spiritual exercise). The joy to be derived from such a collective effort is indescribable. The community bhajan in which all join to sing in unison is an equally blissful experience. This community singing was started by Gum Naanak. During community singing divine vibrations emerge sanctifying the whole atmosphere. The same result cannot be expected when one sings alone.

Community singing promotes unity which leads to purity and divinity. Today there is no unity, purity or divinity. What mankind needs today is unity based on the spiritual oneness of humanity.

Worship of the Lord's feet

Today we are celebrating the Paadhuka Festival (a festival for worshipping sandals blessed by the Lord). What is the significance of worshipping the Lord's feet?

There is the devotee's yearning for touching the Lord. How is this to be done? The easiest way is to touch the feet of the Lord. A spiritual significance is attached to the touching of the Lord's feet which sanctify the earth by walking on it. Scientifically also there is meaning in Paadhasparsha (touching the feet). The blood circulates from the feet to the head.

When one touches the toe of the Lord's Feet, he can experience a current present in the toe. That is a divine energy.

From a mundane point of view the body appears as a physical form.

But from the spiritual point of view, there is an aura around every body. It has Thejas (effulgence) from which arises Ojas

(spiritual energy). This energy produces vibrations. That is why it is declared: "Dharshanam Paapa naashanam" (Sight of the Lord destroys all sins).

"Sambhaashanam Sankata naashanam"

(Dialogue with the Lord destroys all sorrows). "Sparshanam Karma vimochanam" (The touch of the Lord frees one from the consequences of one's actions). When the devotee touches the Lord, it is like the linking of the negative and positive wires, which generates divine energy. This connection should be from heart to heart. Only then the Divine energy will flow (from the Lord to the devotee). Then the Lord and the devotee become one. Because the spiritual significance of these practices is not properly understood people fall a prey to confusion.

Men should go away from the worldly path

Men should go away from the worldly path like the fish which swim against the current in a river. That is the way to realise the Divine. If you allow yourself to be carried away by the worldly current, you can only meet with a sad end. Whatever the world may think, keep your eye on the spiritual goal. When people ask for liberation, they should understand that liberation means oneness with the Divine. Become aware of your divinity. Then worldly thoughts will not enter your mind. To realise this oneness with God, one has to chant the Lord's name incessantly.

You must pray for the vision of the Lord's feet in your heart. There should be no room for evil thoughts and feelings.

Lakshmana's unalloyed devotion to Raama

It was because of the unalloyed devotion of Lakshmana that Raama considered him greater the Seetha or anyone else. He declared: "It is impossible for me to find a brother like Lakshmana."

This was a tribute to the way Lakshmana served Raama and Seetha for thirteen years in the forest. During all these years Lakshmana had never looked at the face of Seetha but revered her feet everyday. When the jewels dropped by Seetha were shown to Lakshmana he could identify only the anklets and not any of the other jewels worn by her.

(Bhagavaan recited the shloka from the Raamaayana in which Lakshmana explained how he could only Seetha's anklets because he saw them every morning when he prostrated at her feet). Can such reverence be found among the youth today? One feels ashamed when one listens to their talk. Young people should follow the ideal exemplified by Lakshmana.

Devotees should not feel satisfied with what they deem as their devotion. They should find out whether the Lord has appreciated their devotion. God should acknowledge your devotion.

Krishna acknowledged Arjuna's devotion to Him only when the latter declared: "Karishye Vachanam Thava" (I shall abide by your words). If one does not pay heed to the Lord's words and does not act up to His injunctions, to claim that one is devotee is only a pompous boast.

Activise your devotion. Let your actions be pure and sacred.

Old devotee's example for dedicated service

For one to come to this godly path, one has to contemplate on God incessantly. Today in Thamil Naadu the Likhiitha japam movement and the worship of Paadhukas (sandals sanctified by the Divine Feet of Bhagavaan) have grown by leaps and bounds. An 85-year-old devotee is striving to achieve even greater progress in these movements. In devotion it is not age that counts. What matters is the determination and the dedication. At this age, he comes almost every week to Prashanthi Nilayam without regard to the strain involved. His sole concern is service to Bhagavaan. All devotees should become exemplars like him, of dedicated service. When that happens the world will be an earthly paradise.

This old devotee has been able to bring together large numbers of people to get involved in this form of collective worship by his example and enthusiasm. The saint Thyaagaraaja had great difficulty in chanting the name of Raama 96 crores of times. But in Thamil Naadu today the Lord's name has been written 108 crores of times (one crore is ten million). Countless devotees have been engaged in writing the name of the lord, without wasting their time in useless gossip or meaningless activities. What a sacred pre-occupation is this! Do not waste your time in useless pursuits. Instead devote all the time available to remembering and writing the Lord's name.

Discourse in the Puurnachandhra Auditorium on 18-12-1994.

33. Spread the message of Love

The Cosmos is controlled by the Divine;

The Divine is governed by Truth;

Truth is governed by noble beings;

The noble are the Divine Itself.

EMBODIMENTS of Divine Love! The entire visible cosmos is under the control of the Divine.

The Divine is governed by Truth. That Truth is subject to Utthamaa-dheenam (noble beings). A noble person is the embodiment of God.

The human body, made up of the five basic elements and endowed with the five sense organs, is not different from the mind. The mind wears the body as a vesture.

The mind, for its enjoyment, uses the body as an instrument. It is the cause of all experiences. A body without a mind is as illusory as a crop on a barren field.

In ordinary life people regard the body as permanent and for the sake of its pleasures undertake all kinds of efforts. This is a sign of ignorance. A body without the mind is as useless as a school without a teacher and a temple without a deity. The body should be regarded as an instrument for right living.

Men are developing their intellectual abilities but are using their intelligence for wrong purposes.

Knowledge without right action is useless. Mere action without knowledge is foolishness. Hence it is necessary to combine knowledge with cultivation of character.

The most important faculty in man is Prajna-Shakthi (the power of integrated Awareness). It is from Prajna-Shakthi that other powers like Ichcha-Shakthi (will power), Medha-Shakthi (intelligence), Vaak-Shakthi (the power of speech) and Vichaarana-Shakthi (the reasoning powers) are derived. This integrated Awareness is sustained by thoughts.

Good company and good thoughts

The most important requisite for man in the world is truth based on thought. True thoughts constitute the proper wealth for man. But, alas, modern man makes no efforts to cultivate good thoughts. The absence of good thoughts weakens the will power.

With a weak will man cannot accomplish even simple things. To achieve anything worth while in life man has to strengthen his will power.

It is well known that humanness thrives on good company and good thoughts. What good thoughts can achieve is illustrated by the life of a poor boy in Tamil Nadu, Muthuswamy Iyer.

His father died at a very young age. The forlorn widow summoned the young man and told him that there were many poor people in the world who were suffering many hardships because they were not able to get justice. "Somehow you must pursue your studies so that you may one day provide help to these unfortunate people," she said. The mother's words strengthened the determination of the young lad. He pursued his studies diligently though he lacked many necessities. In the evenings he used to study under street lamps, as there was no light at home.

He was solely inspired by his mother's good advice. As a result of this hard work, he graduated and secured a law degree. He dedicated himself to the service of the weak and helpless. His zeal and devotion resulted in due course in his becoming the first Indian Judge of the Madras High Court. Consider the lowliness of his birth and what eminence he achieved! It was entirely due to the noble thoughts he cherished and his strength of will.

Noble thoughts strengthen will-power

In many foreign countries, young men who started their lives as dish washers, or newspaper vendors or shoeshine boys, achieved eminence as writers by dint of hard work and noble aspirations. Their achievements are entirely due to their ennobling thoughts which strengthened their will-power and inspired in others confidence in their abilities.

In Britain there was a poor youth named James MacDonald who used to help school children by writing the addresses on letters for them. As he wrote each address he used to tell the boy, "God bless you." He also used to tell them, off and on, "God is great." Often he had to go without food, but his heart was filled with noble feelings. Such a lad one day became the Prime Minister of Britain. Only his noble thoughts could have raised him from his poor state to the office of the Prime Minister:

Good fortunes grow according to good thoughts

Man's bad or good fortune is related to his thoughts. Sowing the seed of thoughts man maps the fruit known as Karma (deeds). Sowing the seed of karma, man maps the fruit called Abhyaasa (practice). From Abhyaasa, man reaps the fruit of Seela (character).

From Seela one reaps the fruit of Adhristam (good fortune). Thus fortune is based on character, which is based on good practices arising out of good deeds based on good thoughts. Thus according to the development of good thoughts, one's good fortune will also grow.

Unfortunately; men today are deluded by bad thoughts and are engaged in evil deeds. They enjoy bad company and as a result come to a bad end. Everyone of you can experiment in a small way with the gradual elimination of bad thoughts. You will discover for yourself how your willpower grows with the diminution of bad thoughts. Man has forgotten that the spiritual path alone will rescue him from the grip of insatiable desires, endless worries and numerous troubles. He is indulging in various malpractices.

As desires multiply; the will-power weakens and vice versa. You can find out for yourselves how when addiction to coffee, tea and smoking is reduced, the willpower gets stronger. The results can be verified with just one week of practice. By addiction to various deleterious practices, man's will-power and other faculties decline in strength. The will-power should be strengthened by giving up bad habits and it should be directed towards social service.

Jesus and social service

Jesus exemplified the spirit of social service. The inspiration for this came from his mother

Mary. From his childhood Mary taught him such good qualities as truth, kindness, compassion and justice. In his twelfth year, Jesus and his parents went to Jerusalem for a festival. In the crowds the parents lost trace of Jesus and searched for him everywhere. Not finding him anywhere, Mary sat under a tree and prayed to God to come to her help. At that moment, a thought flashed in her mind that Jesus was perhaps in a nearby temple. And Jesus was there sitting in a corner of the temple and listening to the words of the priest. Mary affectionately rushed towards him and embraced him. "Child, what agony I went through on your account," she said. Jesus told her: "Mother! Why should you have any fear? Those who believe in the world will have fears. But why should anyone believing in God fear at all? I am in the company of my Father. Why do you fear? You taught me that God is everything for us. How, then, can you worry like this?"

Jesus had learnt his lessons from his mother and developed his spiritual faith. After they returned from Jerusalem, Jesus felt that service to his parents was his foremost duty, because he owed everything to them. In this spirit, he used to assist his father in his carpentry work. Joseph passed away when Jesus was thirty. He sought his mother's permission to devote himself to the service of the needy and the forlorn. After leaving home, Jesus had himself baptized by John. Then for forty days Jesus observed severe austerities without food and drink. At first he considered himself as Messenger of God. After the penance he realised he was the Son of God. He began his ministry with a group of fishermen as his first disciples. He taught them that they should first seek the Kingdom of Heaven. To enter that Kingdom they had to cultivate loving hearts. Then, their hearts would become the Kingdom of Heaven. Jesus further declared to them: "I and my Father are one."

Foster love in your hearts and redeem your lives
What is it that men should acquire today? It is the broadening of the heart so that it may be filled with all-embracing love. Only then the sense of spiritual oneness of all mankind can be experienced. Out of that sense of unity will be born the love of God. This love will generate pure bliss in the heart that is boundless, indescribable and everlasting. For all forms of bliss, love is the source. A heart without love is like a barren land. Foster love in your hearts and redeem your lives. Whatever your scholarship or wealth, they are valueless without love. Without devotion all other accomplishments are of no avail for realising God. Men aspire for liberation. True liberation means freedom from desires. Today men cannot go to forests for penance or engage themselves in meditation and other spiritual exercises. The easiest spiritual path for all people is to dedicate all their actions to God.

Today we celebrate the birthday of Christ. It is said that when Jesus was born in a manger, three kings were led by a star to Jesus's place of birth. In fact, they were not kings but three shepherds. One of them, seeing the infant Jesus observed: "This child will be a lover of God." A second one said: "No, God will love him." The third one said: "Verily he is God Himself."

Oneness with God
The true significance of these three statements is - "To love God is to be His Messenger." To be loved by God is to be a son of God. The final state is to be one with God. As Jesus said: "I and my Father are one." Thus all persons are messengers of God. This means that they should divinise themselves. When can men call themselves "Sons of God?"

Recognise what pure actions are done by God, selflessly for the sake of all. There is no trace of self-interest in Him. Everything He does, says or thinks is for the good of others. On the other side, everything men do, speak or think is born out of selfishness. Men have become puppets in the hands of selfishness. Men can describe themselves as "Sons of God" only when they are completely free from selfishness and become Godly. To call yourself the "Son of God," you have to manifest the qualities of the Father.

In the Prahlaadha story, consider the emergence of the Lord from a pillar. The significance of the destruction of the pillar is a prelude to the manifestation of the Lord. The illusion relating to the body has to be destroyed for the Divine to manifest Himself. The body is no doubt essential upto a point. It has been given for the performance of right actions and to discover the secret underlying action. Kaaya (body), Karma (action), Marina (mystery) and Dharma (righteousness) together signify the purpose of Janma (human birth).

Today men are not aware of righteousness or the role of Karma. Of what use is human existence?
Do not give room for the waywardness of the mind. Purify the mind and direct it towards the righteous path. It is a straight and narrow path. In the spiritual field there is no royal highway. The path is narrow because the goal is infinitely precious. Crowds swarm a fish market but only a few go to a diamonds shop. The road to God is for the few who are genuine saadhaks (spiritual aspirants).

The birthdays of saints and prophets are being celebrated these days with feasts and festivals. This is not the way to celebrate them. The followers should live upto the teachings of the great Masters.

Uniqueness of Christmas in Prashaanthi Nilayam

Christmas is celebrated today in many countries. In every country small groups of people go to their respective churches, listen to the sermon and return to their homes. In some places people eat, drink, and make themselves merry.

But nowhere in the world can you find Christmas being celebrated with the solemnity and holiness obtaining in Prashaanthi Nilayam. Here are gathered men and women from all countries. There are many denominations among Christians and the members thereof celebrate

Christmas in their separate ways. Only in Prashaanthi Nilayam do Christians of all denominations and men and women of other faiths join to celebrate Christmas. Here are devotees from Germany, Russia, Argentina, America and many other countries. They speak different languages. Prashaanthi Nilayam has become a mini-world. All of them work in unison. You witnessed last night the beautiful play by children from so many countries. They conveyed the Divine Message so effectively. Here is a concrete manifestation of the Brotherhood of Man and the Fatherhood of God.

People talk about brotherhood, but there is often no fraternal feelings among brothers even in one family. That is not the case here. Here you see brotherhood in action, from heart to heart and love to love.

Holy festivals are conducted in such an ideal manner only in Prashaanthi Nilayam. Devotees should set an example of ideal living to the whole world.

Messengers of Sathya Sai

Today; the former girl students of Sathya Sai College at Ananthapur, who have formed as association called Messengers of Sathya Sai, are observing their annual day. They are doing good service. They carry out the commands of Svaami in the spirit and the letter. They are spread all over the world---Switzerland, Australia, Canada, Germany; Japan and other countries. They come to Prashaanthi Nilayam from these far off places out of their devotion to Sai. They are bringing their husbands and children also out of their deep love for Svaami. They go out to villages and do various kinds of service there. They serve the blind and deaf and dumb children and make them self-reliant and useful citizens. They are carrying on their work wholeheartedly.

For the expenses of their travel from far off countries they save money from their domestic budgets. This is a sign of their dedication to God's work.

In this manner the old students of the Ananthapur College are leading exemplary lives wherever they are. In addition to all their multifarious household duties, they carry on their social service activities.

In this cosmic university all are students. Hence everyone should render social service to the extent of one's capacity and spread Svaami's ideals among all. There is nothing selfish in Svaami's message. Hence anyone can spread it selflessly.

Carry the message of unity to every home

Sow the seed of love in your hearts and it will grow in due course into a big tree. God is one. Do not entertain any differences of creed or caste. Carry the message of unity to every home.

Embodiments of love! Regard Love as your life-breath and as the sole purpose of your existence.

Discourse in the Puurnachandhra Auditorium on 25-12-1994, Christmas Day.

You tell Me that you have read the Bhaagavatha Vaahini and all the other Vaahinis that I have written for you. Good! But let Me ask you, have you put even a single direction given in them into daily practice? Question yourself calmly and decide to benefit by practising the process mentioned in them.

1. The Power of Divine Love

STUDENTS! To see an effulgent light you do not need another lamp.

Likewise to know the selfluminous

Aathmik Knowledge there is no need for any other knowledge. Every human being has in him the knowledge of his true form. Owing to his failure to know this stupendous fact, man pursues all kinds of worldly knowledge.

All the diversity you see in creation is a manifestation of the Indivisible One. The cause is the same for both differences and oneness. All the changing entities are based upon the One that is unchanging.

Creation has to be viewed as a Cosmic Stage. God is the director and dramatis personae in this play. He assigns all the roles of the characters in the play. All creatures in the world are manifestations of the Divine. The good and evil in the world are expressions of the Divine consciousness. Man should not be misled by these expressions.

Behind all the various actions of the actors, the Divine director is at work. It should be realised that though names and forms may vary, languages and nationalities may be different, the human race is one in its divine essence.

All are sparks of the Divine. The Lord declared in the Geetha: "All beings in the world of the living are aspects of my Eternal Self."
Manifest God's love God is the embodiment of Love. Love is His nature. His love pervades the cosmos. This love is present in one and all. Just as God manifests His love in the world, everyone should manifest his love.

Prema (Love) has been described as beyond speech and mind, It is said to be Anirvachaneeyam (indescribable). This love cannot be got through scholarship, wealth, or physical powers. God, who is the embodiment of love, can be attained only through love, just as the effulgent Sun can be seen only through its own light.
There is nothing more precious in this world than Divine love. God is beyond all attributes.

Hence His love also is beyond attributes---Gunaatheetha. But, human love, because it is governed by Gunas (attributes), results in attachment and aversion.
Love should not be based on expectations of a reward or return. Love based on such expectations makes it a business deal.

Love is not an article of commerce. It is not like a loan and getting it back. It is a spontaneous offering. Pure love of this kind can emanate only from a pure heart.

Prema should be like a mariner's compass. Wherever the compass may be placed, the needle will point only to the north. Likewise, man's love, in all circumstances, should be directed towards

God. That alone is true love. It should be unaffected by pleasure or pain. It makes no difference between "mine" and "thine." Love has to be acquired only through love and not by any other means whatsoever.

No one can describe the nature of Divine love. It is beyond the reach of poets. The one who is immersed in the waters of Divine Love will be unable to speak to anyone. When he is only upto neck-deep in the water he may be able to say a few words.

Those who speak about God in the world do so only from superficial experience, but those who are wholly saturated with God's love will find no words to describe their bliss. That is why the Vedhas declared that the Divine is beyond the reach of the mind and speech.

Transcendental love

Divine love transcends the three qualities of Sathva; Rajas and Thamas. It is beyond the dullness of Thamas, the passionate form of Rajas and the coolness of Sathva.
God's love is pure, unsullied and utterly selfless. Everyone should make an all-out effort to experience this love.

The ancient sages identified this Love with the Aathma (Supreme Self). The Self and Love are not different from each other. The Self is love and love is Self.
In every human being this love is present. But, not recognising this, man is a prey to greed, hatred, pride and envy, Man can get rid of these evil traits only by developing the Love principle that is inherent in him.

Love is present not only in human beings, but also in all creatures, birds or beasts. Nor is that all.

It is in fact all-pervasive. Love pervades everything in creation. Man's humanness is vitiated
when he fails to recognise this love.

Today men worship wealth and power, which are transient and ephemeral. They must fill their hearts with love, which is greater than all the wealth of the world.
What use is there in imparting knowledge to those who have no love in their hearts?

It is not got by education,
Nor by knowing the rules of logic,
Nor by secular studies,
Nor by professing any religion,
Nor by Vedhik speculation.

It is present only
In a heart filled with compassion.

Every man should have a compassionate heart. Without compassion, all wealth or scholarship is of no use.

Acquire Divine Love

Students! You may seek various positions in life. You may desire to earn wealth. But Divine love, which is the source of everything, should be acquired first. Grasp the significance of this truth. Everyone should experience and manifest this love. Men today have become playthings in the hands of demonic forces like egoistic pride, envy and ostentation.

Can they be called human at all?

People talk about Bhakthi, Yoga and Inaana. What do they mean by these terms? Does Bhakthi mean getting involved in bhajans and enjoying the tune and beat of the songs? Does Yoga mean sitting in a corner and exercising breath control? Does Inaana consist in reading some books and getting by rote a few shlokas? What is Sanyaasa? Is it wearing the ochre robe? Bhakthi (true devotion) means getting rid of the vices of attachment, hatred and envy and manifesting pure love. Anyone who loves pomp, who is filled with pride and is consumed by envy cannot be a devotee by any test. Devotion will go nowhere near him. The devotee has to overcome hatred, envy and attachment and experience the peace and bliss of love. That devotee will then acquire the attributes of the Divine. Yoga, Inaana and Sanyaasa

As regards Yoga, people speak about Hatha Yoga, Kriya Yoga, Transcendental Meditation and some new-fangled ideas. All these are not Yoga. "Yoga is control of the vagaries of the mind."

True yoga is control of the senses. One should treat alike both praise and censure, pleasure and pain. This kind of self-restraint is yoga.

What is Inaana? "Adhvaita dharshanam Inaanam" (To see the One without a second is the supreme knowledge). To recognise the Ekaathma-bhaava (the same Aathma dwells in all beings) is true knowledge.

True sanyaasa (renunciation) consists in the transformation of one's qualities and not in a change of garb. The mind must change, not the apparel. A true sanyaasi (renunciant) is one who has mastery over all his senses and has given up all desires. Sanyaasis today have more desires than householders. Why have these desires? For whose sake? Not for the sake of the body, which is a perishable leather bag filled with nine holes. He is a sanyaasi who seeks the feet of the Lord, giving up all attachments to the body, which is subject to disease and decay. He must treat life and death, pleasure and pain alike.

Students, however, should learn to lead ideal lives even in the mundane world in which they have to get on in life. Most of them, boys and girls, are carried away by the attractions of the phenomenal world and go after worldly comfort. While utilizing their education for earning a decent living, they should share the fruits of their knowledge with others. Education should inculcate in them good thoughts, good character, truthfulness, devotion, discipline and dedication to duty.

Inaana cannot be secured without Bhakthi

Aadhi Shankara proclaimed the supremacy of the path of knowledge for the realisation of the Self. In his "Aanandhalahari" he declared that Aanandha (Bliss) is man's goal and it can be secured only by God's grace. He firmly asserted that Brahman alone is real and there is no second. Even for such a staunch exponent of Monism, devotion became necessary. Without cultivating devotion, Inaana (Knowledge of the Divine) cannot be secured.

What is the cause of the erosion of wisdom among the people today? It is the sway of bad thoughts and evil impulses over-them. Capping all these bad qualities is egoism. The individual human being is such a pitifully petty creature in this vast cosmos that he has no basis at all for getting conceited. Egoism is demonic quality. Those who are proud about their wealth or power should realise that both these are maladies presaging ruin. Learn to give respect and receive respect. This is the first lesson students have to learn. When you revere and love others, they will also love and respect you. Practise humility and reverence, which are the hallmarks of true scholarship.

Students! By your conduct you have to demonstrate the basic difference between the Sathya Sai Institute and all other universities in the world. The teachers should also set the example in this respect. If the teachers and higher authorities go astray, how can the students be expected to behave properly? All teachers and administrative officials should act in harmony and unity.

Without unity and cooperation, they are no better than wandering buffaloes.

Students! The first and foremost thing you have to observe is respectfulness. This is the essence of education. Cultivate reverence and behave without pride and ostentation. Give no room for jealousy. Do not feel envious when some one is better than you in scoring marks or in sports.

Even if you live for only three days, you should lead ideal lives. Better be a swan for a brief while than live long like a crow.

Today is a sacred festival day. It is a day for the celebration of plenty and prosperity. This day of Sankraanthi brings with it an abundance of crops and wealth. This Pushya month brings with it a cool breeze, a bright sun, golden fields and trees echoing the songs of birds. The earth shines in the glory of Nature.

People admire the beauty of Nature, but are not aware of the beauty in their hearts. Make your heart beautiful by adorning it with the sacred love of God. Spread the Lord's name

Students! Members of this august gathering! From today harness the enthusiasm of youth for carrying to every street and alley, the glory of the Lord's name! The entire atmosphere is surcharged with electro-magnetic waves. Because of the pollution of these waves, the hearts of human beings also get polluted. To purify this atmosphere, you have to chant the Lord's name and sanctify the radio waves. There is pollution in the air we breathe, the water e drink and the food We consume. Our entire life has been polluted. All this has to be purified by suffusing the atmosphere with the Divine name. Chant the name with joy in your hearts.

Discourse in the Puurnachandhra Auditorium on the morning of 14-1-1995.

Sugar-dolls are valued for the sugar, not the shapes they are given by the manufactures. Their sweetness makes men purchase them. Elephant, dog, cat, rat, jackal or lion -- it does not matter. That is a matter of individual fancy. Each is sweet, that is the essential thing. The sweetness draws Maanavas (human beings) towards Maadhava; the Pravritthi (deed) towards Nivritthi (dedication); the Ananda towards Sath-Chith-Aanandha (Highest Bliss). When the appetite for these grows, all low desires and hungers cease. BABA

2. Prema and the triple purity

EMBODIMENTS of Divine love! He who recognises that the Aathma in him and in all beings is one and the same, dwells in the constant presence of God, whether he is a householder or a renunciant, whether he is alone or in a crowd. Everyone has to recognise the divinity that is inherent in all human beings.

The sage Naaradha declared: "Prema amrithasya svaruupah" (Love is the embodiment of ambrosia). In the mundane world, man considers the four Purushaarthas (the four goals of life) as the means to Moksha (Liberation). This is not correct. Dharma (Righteousness), Artha (material wealth), Kaama (the satisfaction of desire) and Moksha (Liberation) which are considered the four aims of human existence, are not all. There is a fifth aim for mankind which transcends even Moksha (Liberation). This is Parama-prema

(Supreme love). This Love

Principle is Divine.

Love and God are not distinct from each other. God is love and love is God. It is only when the truth of this Love Principle is understood that the meaning of human existence can be realised.

Says a Thelugu poem:

The Sai Lord is the embodiments of Love,

Who taught the Love principle,
Proclaimed the equality of all beings,
And revealed the preciousness of humanness.

In a home where three persons live, if they have harmony amongst them and cooperate with each other, verily that home is heaven itself, where divine bliss reigns. If, on the contrary, the three persons lack harmony and adjustment, dislike each other and behave as enemies, there can be no hell worse than that.

Ancients considered triple unity as a form of yoga Heaven and hell are dependent on the conduct of people. The body is a home wherein reside three entities called manas (mind), Vaak (speech) and limbs (organs of action). True humanness consists in the unity of thought, word and deed. In Vedhaantik parlance, this unity was described as Thrikarana Shuddhi (triple purity). True moksha (liberation) consists in giving expression in words to the thoughts which arise in the mind and to practise what one says. The ancients considered this triple unity as a form of yoga. "Manasyekam, vachasyekam, karmanyekam mahaathmaanam" (Those whose mind, words and deeds are in complete accord are high-souled beings). "Manas-anyath, vachas-anyath, karmanya-anyath dhuraathmanaam" (The wicked are those whose thoughts deviate from their words and actions).

Hence every man should strive to achieve unity in thought, word and deed. That is the hall-mark of humanness. This profound truth is proclaimed by the Vedhaanthik pronouncement that the body is a temple in which the eternal Aathma is the Indweller. The Veda is dualistic. Vedhaantha is monistic (Adhvaita). The essence of Vedhaantha is the triune unity of thought, word and deed. In this unity, true bliss can be experienced. It will also demonstrate the spiritual basis of divinity.

Vedhaantha is of no avail if precepts are not practised

There are today countless numbers of scholars who expound the Vedhaantha and they have numerous listeners. The outcome of it all is precious little. This is because there is no practice of the teachings of Vedhaantha. All study of Vedhaantha is of no avail if the precepts are not practised.

People have to find out what are the easy methods of putting into practice the precepts of Vedhaantha. The easiest way is to cultivate harmony in thought, 'word and deed. Here is a

Thelugu poem:

Can the world's darkness be dispelled
by talking about the glory of light?
Can a diseased man's afflictions be relieved by praising panaceas?
Can a destitute's poverty be relieved by listening to the greatness of wealth?
Can a starving man's hunger be appeased by descriptions of delicacies?
Rather than listening to a ton of precept, it is better to practise an ounce of teaching.

What we have to practise today is something very easy and very subtle. The spirit of service is the royal path to be followed. How is this spirit of service to be cultivated? The Geetha lays stress on the word Suhrith (friend). Who is a true friend? Can he be utterly selfless? Will he help you without expecting any return? Whether it be one's mother, husband, wife or son, they love you for their own selfish reasons. A totally selfless friend cannot be found in the world. It is hard to find anyone who renders service totally without self-interest. God alone is totally selfless as friend and benefactor. God has been described as Suhrith--a friend who is your alter ego. God seeks no reward of any kind There is no trace of self-interest in Him.
God alone can be utterly selfless and loving, expecting nothing in return.
Follow the royal road of God's injunctions
If you ask a friend where he is residing, he will give a certain address.
But this address relates only to the residence of the body. But the true residence of one is his Aathma (the Self). This Aathma is the embodiment of Love. Therefore, you have to dwell in Love and live in Love. You must dedicate your life to that love. If you devote your life to the pursuit of impermanent things, you will only get ephemeral things. You must seek what is lasting and permanent. What is it? It is the Bhagavath-Aajina (injunction of the Lord). When you take to the royal road of following God's injunction, you will realise all your desires.
You must remember, however, that these desires only bind you the more you cherish them. The bonds get reduced when desires are reduced. There must be a limit to desires.
Similarly there must be restraint in developing attachments. There is grief when a person dies in a family. Is death the cause of grief? No. It is the attachment to the dead person that is the cause of grief. The process of getting rid of attachment has been described in Vedhaanthik parlance as vairagya. Gradually attachments should be eliminated. In the journey of life the less luggage you carry the greater the comfort you will experience.

It may be asked: "How is it possible to reduce attachments and desires in worldly life?" The answer is' "Carry on your business or other activities in a spirit of dedication to the Divine." All actions should be done with the conviction that they are dedicated to the Lord. This is an easy path to follow. Consider all actions as actions performed-by the power of the Divine, whether it be seeing or hearing or speaking or doing. Without the power of the Divine, can the eyes see or the ears hear?
Divine potency is the source of all talents
The primary requisite for man is to realise the divine potency in him that is the source of all the faculties and talents in him. This is true whether one is an atheist, a theist or an agnostic. No one in the world can get on without this energy. It may be called by different names. Names are not important. The energy is one. It is this divine energy which directs mankind on the right path.
Men should strive to recognise the presence of the Divine even in small things.
In his speech earlier today Anil Kumar spoke about the Sai Organizations. The Sai organizations are carrying on their activities with devotion and dedication. But they do not try to find out what should be the ideal to be achieved. "Are you engaged in this work for your own satisfaction or for the satisfaction of the Divine?" This is the question they should ask themselves.
In this context an incident from the Bible may be recalled. Once a devotee went to Jesus and asked him: "Oh Lord! What is the power by which one can protect oneself?" Jesus replied "Son!
When you love God, that power itself will' protect you."
In the Bhagavath Geetha, Arjuna asked Krishna, "What should one do to earn the love of the Lord?" The Lord replied "You simpleton! You imagine you are loving God. The truth is God is seeking a true devotee." Crores of people all over the world are in quest of God. But where are they searching for Him?
In my view, the 'very ideal of a quest for God is mistaken. There is no need for you to search for God. God is 'omnipresent. He is everywhere. Devotees imagine they are searching for God. This is not true. It is God who is in search of devotees. "Where is the-devotee to be found who is pure in thought, word and deed?" God is searching for such a devotee.
You need not search for God. God is nearer to you than your mother and father. You yourself are divine. How can you go in search of yourself? This is the mistake you commit. When everything is permeated by the Divine, who is the searcher of the Divine? It is because the world has lacked men who could proclaim this Vedhaanthik truth with authentic experience that it has sunk to such degrading levels.

 Best way to love God is to love all, serve all It is needless to search for God. Verily you are the Divine. Strive to realise this truth. There is a simple and easy way. Have the faith that every human being is an embodiment of the Divine.
 Love everyone. Serve all. The best way to love God is to love all serve all.
 You must love everyone because God is in everyone. Every human being is a manifestation of God. On the cosmic stage every man identifies himself with the form and name given to him.
 But he does not realise what is his true form and name.
 Last night you witnessed the film in which Anjalidevi acted the role of Sakkubai. In the film she appeared as Sakkubai and not Anjalidevi. But both are one and the same person. God takes on a human form and appears as a human being. But when the human being recognises his basic divine nature he becomes the Divine. As long as one-thinks he is a mere human, he remains a human. But 'when he considers himself as Divine' with deep conviction, he will be transformed into the Divine.
 See the cosmos through the glass of spiritual oneness Hence, thoughts and feelings determine what you are. Change your thoughts. If you give up your worldly outlook and view the world from the spiritual point of view, the Vishvam (world) and the Vishnu (Divine) will become one. Therefore, change your viewpoint.
 Instead of altering his dhrishti (vision) man wants to change Shrishti (creation). No one can change creation. It is one's vision that has to be changed.
 If you wish to experience oneness,, you have to see the cosmos through the glass of Ekaathmabhaava (spiritual oneness). Otherwise, the world will appear as a bewildering multiplicity
 because you will be seeing it through the glasses of the three Gunas-Sathva, Rajas and Thamas.
 Put aside these three glasses. Wear the glass of Ekaathma-bhaava, the feeling of unity in Spirit, Love is one. "The Supreme is One though, the wise call it by many names.
 The Divine has to proclaim this unity when God comes in human form and lives and moves among human beings. The Divine has no likes or dislikes. He has no distinction of "mine" and "thine" He is beyond praise or censure. How, then, should the Divine (in human form) conduct Himself? Everyone should understand this.

Svaami and devotees Many bemoan the fact that Svaami does not speak to them despite their frequent visits. "Is Svaami angry with us?" they ask. These are not mental aberrations.
 They are due to total ignorance. Such questions arise in their minds only when they have not understood Swami's real nature. I have no antipathy towards anyone. I do not hate anyone. All are mine. And I belong to everybody. But in dealing with devotees, I have to behave like a doctor who prescribes a specific diet for each patient. For instance, there is a patient suffering from diabetes. He should not consume sweets. If a devotee feels, "I enjoy sweets, why should the Sai Mother prohibit me from eating sweets?", the answer is that it is for his own good. If Svaami did not have the patient's well-being in view, He would let him suffer by giving him sweets. It is out of love for the devotee that the Sai Mother denies sweets to him. Svaami adopts these different regimens in the interest of curing the devotees' ailments.
 There are others with a different kind of grievance. For instance, the students often complain that Svaami does not talk to them because He is angry with them. I have no anger towards anyone.
 Whether you believe it or not, I do not know what anger means. But, occasionally I appear as if I am very angry. This is unavoidable because without such assumed behaviour on my part, the students will not heed my words. I tell them to behave in a certain way. Some students heed my words and try to act upto them. Some others go against my injunctions. In such a situation, I have to ensure respect for my words. Of what use is it to speak to those who attach no value to my words? I don't intend to devalue my words.
 Truth is the life of the plighted word. My words bear the imprint of truth. I cannot depart from truth. I don't speak to those who attach no value to My words. This should be realised by those who complain that Svaami does not talk to them. When people heed My words, I am ready to help them in every way and confer happiness on them. I do nothing for my own sake. This is My truth.

"Everything I do is for your sake"

The Super-Speciality Hospital has been built at the cost of many crores. Was it for my sake?

Similarly, the University has been established by spending crores of rupees. For whose sake? Is it for my sake? This magnificent hall (attached to the mandhir) has been erected to protect devotees from heat and rain. Am I sleeping in this hall? Everything I do is for your sake. I am surprised that you do not recognise this. Can devotees be so lacking in intelligence? There is no trace of selfishness in Me anywhere. I have no fear of any sort. Only the guilty man is racked by fear. I have done no wrong to anybody and so I have no fear. But I am subservient to devotees.

Not realising this truth some people imagine that Svaami is angry or ill-disposed towards them.

Get rid of such mistaken feelings. Be convinced that whatever Svaami tells you is for your own good and act upto it. I gain nothing-by your good behaviour. I don't lose anything by your misconduct. Because I love you, I do not want you to suffer from the consequences of your misconduct.

Understand God's love

Turning to God's love, let me make it clear that 99 percent of devotees do not understand what this prema means. This love is construed in a worldly sense. This leads them astray. The attachment between husband and wife, mother and child, between friends, between kith and kin, all are loosely described as Prema (love), but these attachments are the result of temporary relationships and are by their nature transient. Prema is Thrikaala-abaadhyam (Love is that which lasts through all the three categories of time---the past, the present and the future). Such love can exist only between God and the devotee and cannot apply to any other kind of relationship.

It is not easy for you to comprehend' the true nature of God's love. You are aware only of worldly attachments which are subject to ups and downs. What is liable to such changes cannot be called love. True love is unchanging. It is Divine. Love is God. Live in love.

Embark on this path of love. You are liable to feel elated over trivial pleasures or depressed over petty losses. God's love is permanent and unvarying. Try to understand that love. How is it to be done? By cultivating the feeling that whatever happens to you, whether pleasant or unpleasant, is for your own good. When you have that firm conviction, the value of God's love for you goes up.

Most people feel the boundless joy of God's love as long as they are in the presence of Svaami.

But this feeling evaporates once they are in the environment of the outside world. You must see that the same sacred environment exists wherever you may be, by carrying your devotion wherever you go and spread the Divine message to every nook and corner of the country. Chant the name of the Lord wherever you are--in the village, in the street, in every home and in your speech and songs. This is the way to ensure that your love of God remains unshaken and unabated.

God derives no benefit from this, as He has no desires. He wants nothing. It is only for your own good. "Uddhareth Aathmanaa Aathmaanam" (Elevate yourself by your own self-effort). Failing to recognise this truth, many people imagine that Sai Baba is holding Akhanda bhajans and celebrating various festivals to glorify his name. They are utterly foolish persons. Sai Baba seeks nothing from anyone. You improve yourselves. Become better. Experience your bliss. Make your lives sublime. Utilize these festivals and devotional activities for this purpose.

Sathyam, Shivam, Sundharam

Embodiments of love! As love is verily your form, manifest it in every way. Share it with others.

The Lord is the Hridayavaasi (Indweller in the Heart).

Sarvabhootha-dharam Shaantham

Sarvanaama-dharam Shivam

Sath-chith-aanandha Roopam Adhvaitham

Sathyam Shivam Sundharam

(The sustainer of all beings, Peace incarnate The bearer of all names, Goodness incarnate Embodiment of Being-Awareness-Bliss, the One without a second. He is Truth, Goodness and Beauty).

The Greek philosopher Plato--who was the teacher of Aristotle, under whom Alexander studied declared three things as fundamental verities-Truth, Goodness and Beauty. These are the same terms as Sathyam, Shivam, Sundharam, used by the Indian sages to describe the Divine.

Thus in all religions and philosophies through the ages, these three have been declared as the forms of the Divine. Love is the form of the Divine. Dharma (Righteousness) is the form of the Divine.

"Mother and motherland are greater than heaven"

The first impulse that emanated from man was Prema (divine love). All other things came thereafter. Every child that is born develops immediately love for the mother. Every child tries to recognise at the outset the mother and the father. In the same manner every individual should recognise the land of his birth and his Samskrithi (cultural heritage). One's nation and one's culture should be revered as one's parents. The nation is one's mother. One's culture is the father.

This profound truth was proclaimed by Raama when he declared: "The mother and the Motherland are greater than Heaven itself." Love the mother. Love your country's culture. These are the two primary duties of every man. They should be the main aims of life.

When people follow this path of truth and righteousness, love will sprout naturally in their hearts. All knowledge and scholarship are of no avail if there is no practice of virtue. Practise at least one of the teachings and experience joy.

Embodiments of love! Devotees from East and West Godhaavari, Guntur and Krishna districts rejoiced in the celebration of what they described as the Golden Jubilee of the Sai Movement.

There is no need to seek a reason for experiencing joy. "Sarvadha sarvakaaleshu sarvathra

Harichinthanam (Always, at all times and in all places contemplate on Hari). Make every moment a holy day. Invest every word with the power of a manthra (sacred formula). Sanctify the ground you tread on. Make this the mission of your life. Without wasting a single moment, use all the time you can find to spread the message of the Lord's name to every nook and corner of India.

Desires can be reduced by chanting God's name
Today we are witnessing corruption, violence, wickedness and malpractices everywhere. The basic reason for all these is selfishness. Insatiable desires are at the root of these evils. By chanting the Lords' name, desires can be reduced, while legitimate wishes get fulfilled.

Sakkubai prayed and yearned to go to Pandharpur for dharshan of Paanduranga. She endured all kinds of troubles and indignities and earned the Lord's grace. How can you get God's grace without undergoing trials? You know what severe processes gold goes through from the crucible onwards before an ornament is made. There can be no happiness without pain. When you desire the welfare of someone, you must be prepared to let him face the ordeals which are necessary before he can experience what is good for him. Pleasure and pain go together in this world. In the Geetha the Lord says He is both the Kshethra (the body) and the Kshethrajna (the Indwelling Knower).

What people have to learn today is to give up attachments to the things of the world and seek the love of God. When one cultivates the love of God, renouncing worldly things becomes as simple as leaving hold of a hand-kerchief. Clinging to property is difficult. Giving it up is easy when people have understood the meaning of God's love.

Let people, wherever they may be, in villages or towns, cultivate faith in God, develop love and share it with one and all. Then they will experience ineffable bliss. Liberation will not come though meditation or penance. Love is the only means. When you render service with love, it will become meditation, penance and all else. Love is the fifth

Purushaartha, the supreme goal of life. Love is also the panacea for all the ills that afflict society today. Hate is the cause of all ills. Hence hatred should be banished, as declared by the Geetha.

Don't give room for any evil feelings in your heart, which is the seat of God. Dedicate your minds to God. In due course, you will merge in-the Divine and become one with God.

Discourse in the Puurnachandhra Auditorium on the evening of 14-1-1995.

This is the proper plan of study: Reading, Reflection and Regular Application in life. Study is Work. Inquiry into the value and applicability of what is studied is Worship.

The experience of the validity and value of the practice is Wisdom.

BABA

3. Noble mothers breed noble sons

EMBODIMENTS of love! This entire cosmos is under the control of God. God is subject to Truth. Truth is governed by the noblest persons. These noble beings are embodiments of the Divine.

Students! Today you must all become messengers of peace and security to the world. To prepare yourselves for this role you have to cultivate the spirit of sacrifice.

Only the individual who cherishes sacrifice and renounces pleasures can be qualified for a life of sacrifice. It is only when the distinction between this renunciation (of pleasures) and acceptance (of a life of sacrifice) is rightly understood can one experience the joy of sacrifice.

Even if the soil is fertile, if the seed is of poor quality, it cannot grow into a good tree. On the other hand, if the seed is good but the soil is unfertile, a strong tree cannot grow. If children are to become culturally refined young persons, the parents should have the refinement of culture.

When the parents observe exemplary conduct based on culture, the children will also imbibe these practices. As Dr. Sushila Nayyar observed (in her speech earlier), students have to cultivate simple living and high thinking. Students must learn to lead simple lives. At the same time their ideals must be of the highest order.

There are many examples of people who have led simple lives with high ideals.

Puthlibai and Gaandhi

Gaandhiji's mother, Puthlibai, was a lady who believed in the two principles of truth and right conduct. She adhered to the practice of taking her morning breakfast only after hearing the first call of the cuckoo. One morning, the cuckoo's call was missing for a long time and Puthlibai did not take her breakfast. Seeing this, the young Gaandhi went to the backyard, cooed like cuckoo and came and told his mother that she could now take her breakfast.

Puthlibai, who could easily guess the trick her son was playing, felt very sad about his behaviour. She thought: "What sin have I committed that such a son should be born to me? There is no use blaming you for what is the result of my own sin. How sinful am I that I gave birth to an untruthful son." Unable to bear her grief, she slapped the boy on the cheek and went inside.

That very moment Gaandhi took a vow "I must never again utter an untruth in my life. What life is it that causes grief to a mother? In a country in which everyone is enjoined to revere the mother and father as God, I have caused grief to my mother by an act of deception." From that day he resolved only to speak the truth and never indulge in falsehood.

Mothers of those days were women of great piety and noble character. They practised virtue and set an example to the children. Only from wombs of such noble women were born sons of high character.

The mother of Aadhi Shankara, Aryaamba, was a high-souled woman. Hence, Sankara could achieve greatness and world fame. Vivekaanandha was another illustrious figure Adhering to the instructions of his mother, he led an exemplary life and achieved name and fame. Their lives shine in the pages of history as examples for mankind.

As is the seed, so is the tree. Similarly some are born with noble character and some are born differently. These differences are the result of their careers in previous lives.

Chaithanya's yearning for the love of the Lord

Once Chaithanya went to Puuri and prayed to Lord Jagannaath-Oh Lord of the universe! Lord of Life! Master of my body! Lord of Creation! I am not concerned with surrender and salvation. I am incapable of doing Yoga or Dhyaana. Nor am I interested in mundane pleasures. I only desire one thing. Give me the all-consuming love for you. With that love I can accomplish everything.

Without your love, of what use are all the pleasures of the world, all the talents and powers one can command? Of what avail is scholarship or intellectual brilliance? I must earn the love of the Lord. Confer that love on me, Oh Lord!"

By revering their parents and following their noble examples, many great men achieved glory and fame in the past. If today we do not have high-minded youth, it is the parents that are responsible. In this context, let me relate the story of Eeshvar Chandhra Vidhyaasaagar, the great scholar of Calcutta, who was inspired by his mother to educate himself for a career of dedicated service to the people. His mother, told Eeshvar Chandhra: "True education must lead you to God.

Academic education must help you to serve society and promote the welfare of mankind. You must be an example to other men and lead an ideal life." Despite their poverty, the son followed the mother's advice and by his own diligence got a degree. In due course, he got a job, pursued higher studies and attained a position of eminence. Having accumulated some money he approached his mother and asked her whether she wanted anything. She said: "I have no desires.

I only want you to earn a name as a man of good character, dedicated to the service of the nation."

The three wishes of Vidhyaasaagar's mother

The son pressed her again after some time to indicate what she wanted by way of jewels or clothes. She told him: "I am now past the age for wearing jewels or flaunting gaudy dresses.

However, I desire three ornaments about which I shall tell you later on."

After a period, having saved some more money, Eeshvar Chandhra asked his mother "What are your three desires?" "The first one," she said, "is a primary school for the children of our small and backward village. The second one is a small village hospital for the local population. My third desire is that you should not sell your knowledge, nor feel proud about it. Cultivate humility and consider yourself the servant of all. Service is the pathway to leadership. These are the three ornaments I seek."

Carrying out his mother's wishes, he established a primary school in the village, a hospital for the villagers and dedicated his entire life to the service of his fellowmen.

He became famous as Eeshvar Chandhra Vidhyaasaagar, known for his knowledge and spirit of service. He became well known as a speaker who attracted large audiences of men and women. His talks were ennobling and inspiring, summoning the people to a life of sacrifice and service'

A young officer learns a lesson

Once, a senior officer was keen to listen to Vidhyaasaagar's speech and set out for the place of the meeting by train with a suitcase. On alighting at the station, he called for a porter to carry his suitcase. As no one appeared, an old man who had got down from the same train offered to carry the suitcase. From the simplicity of the old man's dress, the officer took him for a poor villager and allowed him to carry the suitcase upto the place where he was to stay. After depositing the suitcase, when the old man was about to leave, the officer offered him a rupee for his labour. The old man declined the money and said that what he had done was in a spirit of service and not to earn money. After thanking him the old man (who was none other than Eeshvar Chandhra) told the young officer before leaving: "Your practice does no credit to your education. After so much education you are not able to attend to your own needs. You have made yourself unfit. Humility is the ornament for education. Education without humility is no education at all. Self-conceit is also not an index of good education. Arrogance and attachment are bad qualities, which you must get rid of."

Later in the day large crowds were assembling at the place of meeting. All were eagerly waiting to welcome Vidhyaasaagar. As Eeshvar Chandhra got up on the stage, he was profusely garlanded. The young officer was in the audience. He saw the speaker on the stage and wondered whether he could be Vidhyaasaagar: "Is he the same man who carried my suitcase in the morning?" He felt ashamed of himself. "What a shame that I should have treated with disrespect such a venerable person out of my pride and arrogance!" The officer felt that he had learnt a good lesson that humility is the true hall-mark of real education.

Eeshvar Chandhra Vidhyaasaagar was in the habit of examining his faults, if any, and trying to correct them. But students today entertain bad thoughts or do wrong things and justify their behaviour by the specious argument that "to err is human." They should realise that because they are human they should observe right conduct. They should not take to bad ways. Bad conduct is utterly unbecoming of one who calls himself human. The natural qualities of a human being are good thoughts and good conduct. Students should strive to live in this manner.

Parents are responsible for children going astray

The world has witnessed any number of great personalities who have led ideal lives. Today mothers who 'brought up such noble beings are becoming rare.

Parents often tend to encourage the improper behaviour of their children rather than correct them.

Parents today are primarily responsible for their children going astray.

Here is another story of a mother and son who came as refugees from Burma. The son starved himself to feed his mother from the food he was getting by begging.

One day when a house owner offered to give him food as he was starving, the boy said he would not eat the food there, but must carry it home. He fell down in front of the house and the owner heard the feeble words coming from the boy's lips: "First mother, then myself." With those words, he breathed his last.

Such examples of filial and maternal affection are becoming rare these days because of the trends in modern education. Maternal love has vanished. Filial duty is absent. What a testimony to the tragic results of modern education! There is no reverence for elders, no recognition of obligations to parents. Selfishness has become the bedrock of life. The nation is a prey to all kinds of ills because of this all-pervading selfishness.

Education should make students service-oriented

There was a time in the past when men were prepared to sacrifice their all for the sake of the people and the welfare of the nation. Today this spirit is absent.

Selfishness is rampant. The educational system is responsible for this situation. Education should make students serviceminded, not job-seekers. Parents have also a duty in this regard. They must reform their children by setting the example themselves.

You must be prepared to make any sacrifice for the sake of the nation. Welcome sacrifice, banish pleasure-seeking. Discover the joy to be derived from sacrifice. When Bhaaratheeyas got their independence, Nehru was the prime Minister and Vallabhai Patel was the Home Minister. Dr. Sushila Nayyar was then the Health Minister. It was at that time she came to see me in Delhi. Later in 1962, she came to Puttaparthi together with Vinoba Bhawe. Since then she has been associated with 'Svaami, Vallabhai used to tell Sushila Nayyar: "Sushilaben! You lead a simple life. As a minister you should appear more impressive." Patel used to tease her in this manner. Vallabhai's daughter used to live with him. She was an exemplary daughter. She used to spin the yarn from which the clothes were made for her father and she used to make a sari for herself out of the old dhotis of her father. The national leaders of those days were ideal leaders. They fought for the freedom of the country. In those days, it used to be said that the white rulers were oppressing the black natives. Alas! Today the black natives are oppressing the black natives. In those days there were men who were prepared to sacrifice their all for the nation. Today we have men who are prepared to sacrifice the nation for their self-interest. What kind of leadership is this? Whither have the ideals fled? What we need is devotion to God, which will fill us with the spirit of sacrifice. Only then can real humanness prevail. Sacrifice is the key to immortality. Today people seek nectar in intoxicating drinks. Is this a mark of culture? No. Sense-control comes first. Life is a challenge. Meet it. Students should become crusaders for peace. Students should become crusaders for peace in a country riddled with conflict and disorder. Sanctify your education by a life of dedicated service. I told the girl students yesterday that Duty and Discipline should be like two body-guards for Devotion. All of you should set an example to the nation in leading a life marked by Devotion, Duty and Discipline. I bless you all that you should become worthy servants of the nation. Dedicated services of Sushila Nayyar I have seen Sushila Nayyar on several occasions. Recently she came to Brindhaavan and stayed there for two days. After the passing of Gaandhiji, she has been working in Gaandhigraam with dedication. She has faced many trials and tribulations. Whenever she comes to Svaami she experiences peace and joy. She is working hard to promote the activities in Gaandhigraam. Svaami's grace has been available to her in plenty in this mission. She need not worry on this account. She is far advanced in age (96). Despite the infirmities of age, she is actively engaged in social service. What ails our young people that they are not attracted to social service? The only service they are rendering is to feed themselves. But the body is given for the pursuit of Dharma (Righteousness). if it is not used for this purpose, why have it at all? Don't bother to fatten your body. Rather, you should wear it away in the service of others. It is through such service that you should redeem your lives. Develop devotion to God through meditation and contemplation. Take a pledge to render service to your fellowmen. Discourse in the Puurnachandhra Auditorium on 15-2-1995. 4. Idol worship and God Omnipresence One kind word pleases everybody. Why, then, should you be miserly in soft speech? By pleasing words all beings are happy. Therefore speak lovingly always Why be chary in the use of kind words? EMBODIMENTS of Love! Pleasing speech confers immense joy on man. There is no scarcity of pleasant words. Hence everyone should speak sweetly to all. "There is an atomic particle subtler than the atom. There is something vaster than The vastest you can imagine. The atom is in the immense and The immense is in the atom. The Aathma is in the atom as the Spirit" says a Thelugu Poem. The entire phenomenal universe is a manifestation of the atom. The water you drink, the air you breathe, and the sounds you hear are all composed of atoms. The five basic elements (space, air, water, fire and earth) are all made up of atoms and pervade the universe. The Cosmos is the embodiment of the five elements. For this reason, the ancients regarded the universe as a manifestation of God. Long before men started exploring the secrets of the atom and discovering the nature of atomic energy, even before scientists began to understand the nature of spirituality, Bhaaratheeyas worshipped the Bhuumi (Earth.) as divine. Because the five elements were present in the Earth, they adored the Earth as Bhuudhevi, the Earth Goddess. Moreover, they worshipped water as Ganga, Dhevi, recognizing the divine element in water. The Fire God comes next. The fourth is Vaayudeva (the Lord of Wind).

The fifth is Shabdha

Brahman, the Divine as primal sound. Thus, all the five elements were considered manifestations of the Divine and worshipped as such by the Bhaaratheeyas,

Outsiders who did not understand the profound significance of the worship of the elements, treated them with levity.

The worship of forms or idols

Every atom has a form. There is no object in the universe without a form. The form is Vigraha (an expression of the Divine Idol). Members of other faiths considered idol worship as irrational.

They ridiculed idol worship as a form of superstition, but they made no attempt to explain the worship of the formless.

Every person begins to learn about all objects only in relation to their forms. People could not conceive of God as omnipresent, who is in every object and in every individual. Some were able to conceive that the atom is present in every, object and everywhere. But it was only in the seventeenth century that atomic physics came into existence. But long before this, the child Prahlaadha realised the omnipresence of the Divine. He told his father: "Do not have any doubts that the Divine is present here and not there. He is omnipresent. You can find Him wherever you seek Him."

What Prahlaadha declared millennia ago, the scientists of today are discovering, namely, that the energy that is present in the all-pervading atom is divine.

I point my finger at the mike and tell you: "This is a mike." After you have seen the mike, you don't need the finger to point it out. I point to a flower and say: "This is a flower." After you have seen the flower, there is no need for the finger to point it. Likewise, idols were used to point out

God. Until God-realisation comes, idols are essential. After God-realisation there is no need for idols.

Why worship idols?

If a girl before her marriage is asked to describe her future husband, how can she do it? She can describe the husband only after the marriage. Likewise, after worshipping an idol and gaining experience of divinity by such worship, one would be able to describe one's experience of God.

Before worshipping God and gaining spiritual experience, how can anyone say anything about the nature of Divine? Hence, it is necessary to develop faith in idol worship. It should be realised that every object is a manifestation of God. Every atom is divine.

Respect for the National Flag

Some people ask whether it is not foolish to worship an inanimate inconscient figure as God.

This question is born of ignorance. Today ninety crores of Bhaaratheeyas hoist the National Flag and revere it. Before the Flag could attain this status, many sacrificed their all for the freedom of the country. Many suffered long terms of imprisonment. They went through all this suffering so that they could have their own flag in a free country. On August 15th and January 26th, the National Flag is hoisted all over the country and revered as the symbol of national freedom. In the same manner people in other countries revere their respective national flags. Moreover, people respect even their party flags. Is this flag animate? Has it any vitality or power in it?

When you enquire like this you discover that it is the faith in the flag that makes it adorable.

Likewise, if the question is asked whether a stone idol that is worshipped has any life or consciousness in it, they will find the answer from the example of the honour done to the national flag.

How does a square yard of cotton cloth made into a flag acquire its value? The value is derived from the fact that the flag is a symbol of the victory achieved in the freedom struggle. That victory has no form. The flag demonstrates the achievement of that victory. Without the flag how do you demonstrate the victory in the freedom struggle?

Take another example. There is a 100-rupee note. It is lifeless. But you take good care of it because it represents wealth. All people seek wealth. Money as such has no qualities like goodness. But the possessor of money has qualities. Money is a symbol of power.

The fragrance emanating from a flower has no form, but the flower has a form.

Take love, for instance. It has no form. But the mother who exhibits love for her child has a form. If there is no mother, how can there be love?

Every form deserves to be worshipped

The idols that are worshipped are the answers to those who go about asking, "Where is God?"

The truth is, God is present in every atom. Every atom represents the power of the Divine. Every atom deserves to be worshipped. All objects in Creation have to be respected. Men have to cultivate this feeling of reverence for all things.

But, believing that the physical body is permanent and is all in all, men are wasting their lives in the pursuit of the ephemeral and the transient. There can be no action without the body. Without action there can be no fruits, Hence the body is at the base of everything. The body is a Vigraha (embodied form). The mother is a form. The preceptor is a form. All are forms. The term Vigraha also means an idol that is an object of worship. But these Vigrahas have a certain value. It is through them that we can realise the Divine. It is impossible to conceive in this world any kind of Aaraadhana (worship) without a form. Worship of the formless is misconceived. It is these misguided persons who preach against idol worship. In every religion there is a distinct form for worship. For example: Prakrithi (Nature). Nature has the power of attraction. It contains all the five elements. It is from Nature that we get our food. Nature is the source of all minerals. Nature is the sustainer of man in ordinary life. That being the case, what is wrong in adoring Nature? Should we not be grateful to that which provides so many things for our needs? That gratitude is a form of worship. Every man is composed of the five elements. Man cannot exist without these elements. Is there no obligation to express one's gratitude to them? Nature has the power of attraction. This is called magnetism. Nature has immense magnetic power. Every object is affected by this magnetic power. The object also gets magnetized in the process and acquires magnetic power. The power of idols. Today scientists are trying to understand this power of attraction in Nature. Take, for instance, a temple. Thousands of people go to the temple for worship. The magnetic power in the earth extends to the idol in the sanctum. The thoughts of the worshippers are also attracted by the idol. Thereby the power of attraction in the idol gets intensified. The rituals performed for the idol also enhance its power of attraction. This process can be noticed if a couple of nails are kept near a magnet. After two days it will be found that the nails also have been magnetised. In the same manner when worshippers go to a temple the power goes forth from thousands of worshippers, the power or a action in the idol gets immensely intensified. The idol surcharged with this power is able to energize the worshippers. Thus, in the world there is no object without this power. Atomic energy is present everywhere. It is only when the true character of this atomic power is understood that the power of the Divine can also be understood.

"Shankara" is made up of the two words, 'Sham' and 'kara.' What does 'Sham' mean? 'Sham' is that which is all-pervading like air. The air is filled with bliss.

Shankara is one who offers this bliss to all. Nithyaanandha (everlasting bliss), Brahmaanandha (Supreme Bliss) and every kind of bliss is conferred by Shankara.

"Eeshvara" is the embodiment of wealth. There is the term "Eeshvara." It refers to one who is the embodiment of Aishvaryya (every form of wealth and prosperity). Aishvaryya is not confined to material wealth alone. It includes also the wealth of health, of intelligence, of physical prowess. Aishvaryya represents this omnibus opulence, including Aanandha (bliss). Eeshvara is the one who confers every kind of opulence.

What is the form of this Aanandha? Experience alone is the form of this bliss. This bliss can be experienced only by God-realisation and not by any other means. Bliss is all-pervading, but it not visible. For that reason, its existence cannot be denied.

Eeshvarathva (Divinity) is all-pervading. By losing faith in the Divine, turning into unbelievers, moving away from bliss, men are becoming a prey to worry. This is totally wrong. A life without faith is like water poured on a sieve. Bliss must be secured through faith.

The Divine is omnipresent. All of you are forms of the Divine. All of you are endowed with electromagnetic energy, atomic power, heat and other forms of energy. The magnetic energy is the most important power in man. From this magnetic energy comes electrical energy. The strength of the electrical energy is related to the strength of the magnetic energy. When the electrical and the magnetic energies come together, the divine power operates. This divine power does not come from outside. It is within human beings. Our very form is divine. That is why I address you all as "Embodiments of the Divine Aathma." By failing to recognise this truth, people are going in search of God here and there. God is everywhere. Make every effort 'to recognise this fundamental truth. Meaning of "the search for truth"

People talk about Sathya-anveshana (the search for truth). What is this search? Truth is everywhere. Consider this example. Your eyes see the mother, the child, the wife, the cook, and the daughter-in-law. The eyes are the same but they see different persons with different emotions. The search for truth means seeing everything in its own true, specific nature. All the persons may be feminine and the eyes that see them are one and the same. But to find out the truth one has to determine how he should view each person in relation to that person's state.

Consider, again, the role of the tongue. The same tongue may indulge in falsehood or stand for truth. The same tongue may revile at others or praise them. The tongue's role in the quest for truth is to determine when a lie may be uttered or the truth should be spoken, when blame or praise is justified.

Truth resides in you. It is the appropriate application to specific objects which determines what is true.

Hence, if you want to discover the Divine who is omnipresent there must be a change in outlook within you. When you realise your own inherent divinity, you will be able to recognise the divinity in others.

Significance of idol worship

Idol worship should not be regarded as a meaningless exercise. It is a good practice because on the basis of the idol the higher consciousness is attained. In a home, there are pictures of grandparents and great-grandparents. The present generation has not seen them. But they offer garlands to the pictures and revere the ancestors. Is there life in the pictures? Do they exhibit any love? Do the pictures by themselves reveal any relationship? Not at all. But the pictures are revered out of the feeling that they represent one's ancestors. If such a loving feeling did not exist, the pictures will not be kept in the house. Likewise it is the attachment for an object that inspires respect and reverence. This is termed devotion. This devotion should be shown towards all objects because the Divine is in everything, in every atom. It may be difficult to cultivate such devotion. But once its rationale is properly understood, the practice of devotion will become easy.

There have been controversies and doubts about this in the past. For instance, a school of philosophers known as Chaarvaakas used to deride idol worship. But later on, they also recognized its value. They realised that everything in the world has a form, from the atom onwards, and that everything with a form was Vigraham (an idol) fit for worship. What is the form of water? Here in this tumbler is some water and its form is derived from the tumbler.

Likewise air acquires the form of the balloon in which it is confined. Similarly when the body is filled with Divine energy, the Divine acquires the human form. The all-pervading Divine thus acquires the form in which it manifests itself. Perform your worship to the Divine with awareness of the truth that the Divine is omnipresent and is therefore worshipped. And then you are bound to have a vision of the Divine.

The truth about the omnipresence of the Divine was evident to the Gopikas who sang in praise of Krishna:

O Krishna! How can anyone know your mystery?
 You are subtler than the atom and vaster than the vastest thing in the world!
 You are present in myriads of beings in this vast universe in innumerable forms.
 How can we ever know you?
 "You are a thief among thieves, a good man among the good. You manifest the qualities of the object in which you dwell. You are everything."
 Infinite forms of the Lord

Those who have studied the Vibhuuthi Yoga in the Bhagavath Geetha will know the infinity of forms which the Lord assumes. All forms are His. If one has faith that the Lord is present in the atom, one will have a vision of the Lord even in the atom. But if you make a distinction between different objects, treat some as pure and others as impure, you will not get that vision. Till the realisation that everything is permeated by God comes to one, he must worship an idol as a sacred symbol. A sculptor creates an idol out of a rock. Because of the form given to it, it is installed in a temple and worshipped. In fashioning the idol, the sculptor chisels away many chips of stone. The chips may proclaim verily their kinship with the idol worshipped in the temple. They may say: "You and we are one. The only difference is, you have a form and we have none."

Thus, the Divine exists both in the form and in the "formless". It is because this concept of the Universe is not understood that faith has declined.

Faith is at the root of spirituality. If you believe that God exists, He exists. If you have no belief, so far as you are concerned God does not exist.

When you believe in God, you develop faith in the divinity of all things. Faith is the basis of worship. Worship leads to oneness with the Divine. The sense of separateness will persist as long as there is no God realisation. Separateness ends with Realisation. Science and Vedhaantha say 'the same in substance. Scientists are tending to realise the basic unity of the energy that fills the universe. Vedhaantha describes that Unity as Brahman (the Supreme all-pervading Absolute Consciousness). The terms used are different, but in substance they are saying the same thing; namely that the One subsumes the many.

With regard to divinity, there is no meaning in making a distinction between the Divine with form and the formless divinity. How can you conceive of the Formless Divine? You cannot avoid idol worship until you have experience of the Divine within you. Raamakrishna Paramahansa once told a disciple--who asked why he (the disciple) was not able to see God--whether he yearned for God with the same intensity with which he sought many worldly things. If he did so, he would certainly have a vision of God. When a similar question was put to Buddha, he said that without indulging in speculation about God if one practised truth, righteousness and non-violence he would have the highest experience.

The ways of Svaami Many people who have some questions regarding Svaami do not realise the ways of the Divine. They look at all things from the worldly point of view. They should look at things from the Divine point of view. Change the angle of your vision. When you practise seeing the world from the point of view of the omnipresence of the Divine, you will get transformed. You will experience the power of the Divine in everything in creation. You cannot hide anything from God. Many imagine that Svaami does not see what they are doing. They do not realise that Svaami has a myriad eyes. Even your eyes are divine. But you are not aware of your true nature.

When you have faith in yourself, you will have faith in God. Realise that there is nothing beyond the power of God. Love God with that supreme faith. Then you will be drawn towards God. It needs purity. A magnet cannot attract a piece of iron covered with rust. Similarly God will not draw to Himself an impure person. Hence, change your feelings and thoughts and develop the conviction that God is everything. God will not give you up when you have this conviction.

Today is Shivaraathri, the Night of Auspiciousness. This is the occasion for cherishing auspicious thoughts and praying for auspicious action and conduct in life. You must get rid of narrow and petty feelings. Men today have lost the spirit of sacrifice. Three things are essential for every man love of one's country, sacrifice and following the godly path of spirituality. One is a true human being only when he has these three qualities. To know is the function of the mind. To act is the duty of the body. To remain as the Eternal Witness is the function of the Aathma. Mind, body and Aathma together constitute humanness. The Divine is present in all three. God has provided everything for man's good in the world. But there is one condition that has to be observed. The results of your actions will be according to their nature, whether they are good or bad. Men today want to reap the fruits of good deeds without performing good deeds. This is impossible. Nor can they escape the consequences of their evil actions. God is only a witness.

At least from now on, develop good thoughts, do good actions and redeem your lives. You have to start with the Karma Maarga (the path of Action), and end with Inaana Maarga (the path of knowledge). In between there is the Upaasana Maarga (the path of Worship). This is the path you have to follow today. For this you have to get the conviction that God is omnipresent. When you have that conviction, you will not indulge in falsehood or practise deception, you will not abuse others or cause harm to them, you will acquire all virtues. This is the purpose of observing Shivaraathri as a Sacred Night. The night vigil should be dedicated entirely to contemplation of God.

Develop the firm conviction that God is within you and that you are Divine. Love is God and God is Love. Live in love and make your entire life a saga of love. Discourse in the Puurnachandhra Auditorium on 27-2-1995, Shivaraathri Day.

5. God: The trinity and the cosmos EMBODIMENTS of love! The tongue is the cause of prosperity or poverty. The tongue is responsible for promoting friendship and kinship, for attachment and bondage, and for death and liberation.

It is essential to keep the tongue under control. The manner in which the tongue is employed determines one's fame or ignominy. The tongue determines your friendships and relationships.

The entire creation is based on three processes: Shrishti (creation),

Sthithi (sustenance) and Layam (dissolution). The cosmos is kept going by these three Karmas (processes). Should there not be a director for these processes? You cannot have in this world a Karma (an action) without a Kartha (a doer). The doer and the deed go together. Who is the doer? What is the action? What is the fruit of the action? It is only when these three are properly understood can the secret of creation be recognized. Three Divine agencies It is easy to criticize the Lord's leelas, but it is difficult to understand their inner meaning. Our life should be devoted to understanding the ways of the Lord. In this understanding, the first aspect to be recognized is Shrishti (creation of the cosmos). What is involved in this process should be understood. For instance, if a giant bridge has to be constructed, a large number of engineers and other personnel are required. Besides a chief manager, there will have to be engineers and men working under him. It is only their combined effort that can build a bridge. In the same manner, for the creation, protection and mergence of the cosmos, three principal agencies are required. The principal authority responsible for creation is known as Brahma. He is in charge of all that is related to creation. Next comes protection. What has been created has to be fostered and protected. The authority responsible for this function is called Vishnu. After growth inevitably there comes the stage of dissolution. There is an authority responsible for laying down the rules for dissolution and enforcing those regulations. This authority is called Eeshvara. Thus there are three authorities who share functionally the responsibility for creation, protection and dissolution. There must be someone who presides over these three functionaries, like the Prime Minister in a Cabinet. Brahma, Vishnu and Eeshvara are presiding deities for three different functions. There is a supreme authority presiding over these three. This supreme authority was called by Bhaaratheeyas as Bhagavaan. Members of different faiths have given different names to this authority. The term is most widely used in this context today is God. Bhagavaan refers to the One who governs all the three functions of creation, protection and dissolution. "G-O-D" combines the three aspects In the word GOD, you have three letters: G.O.D. "G" refers to Generation (or creation). "O" refers to Organization (that is, keeping creation going). "D" stands for Destruction. GOD combines the three aspects of generation, organization and destruction. When people refer to God, they regard Brahma, Vishnu and Shiva as each a God. God is the one who wields authority over all the three. This Divine entity pervades the entire universe in the form of atoms. "Subtle as the atom, vast as the vastest in creation, the Aathma pervades everything as atom" says a Thelugu poem. Hence, the Divine is called Aathma. This Aathma pervades everything and is present everywhere. This all-pervading Aathma is the Eternal Witness. This role may be illustrated by a simple example' There is light here. There are some who are reading under it, some who are sleeping, some who are talking and some others who are moving about. The light has no connection with all these different activities. The light is only a witness. Likewise, the Sun is shining. Using the sunlight different people are carrying on different activities. The sun is totally unaffected by either the good or bad actions that are being done by different persons. Each is accountable for his actions. But the sun shines as a witness to all that is happening. Without the sun none of these actions is possible. The sun is thus the agency that enables the actions to be done but he is not the dispenser of the fruits of those actions. He is only a witness. The doers have to reap-the consequences of their actions. Brahma, Vishnu and Eeshvara are responsible for enabling the actions to be done, for furthering their fruition and for determining how-the fruits should be enjoyed. These three deities have to be propitiated for favours in these respects. That is what has been done on Shivaraathri night. Nine forms of propitiating the deities How are they to be propitiated? The methods are indicated in the nine forms of devotion: Shravanam (hearing), Keerthanam (singing), Vishnusmaranam (remembering the name), Vandhanam (prostration), Archanam (worship of images), Paadhasevanam (worship of the feet), Dhaasyam (service), Sneham (friendship), Aathmanivedhanam (total surrender). Today we have to acquire the favours of these deities. With their friendship we can face any troubles just as, if we have friendship of a person in power, we can overcome troubles in life. These deities will help to alleviate the consequences of our actions if they are properly propitiated. For this purpose, the chanting of the Divine name is essential. Equally meditation and penance are necessary. All forms of worship are designed to please the deities. These deities lay down regulations for observances by the world in respect of their specific functions. These regulations are like the traffic rules and guideposts and the road signs that indicate to people using the roads how they should behave.

For instance, there is Brahma. As Creator he lays down the laws relating to actions and how the consequences of these actions affect people in their lives from birth to death. In addition, he also effects changes in the administration of these rules. On the basis of this function, the Brahmaprinciple is operative everywhere. The very term 'Brahma' means 'pervading.' The pervasiveness of the Brahma-principle is cosmic.

Vishnu also means that which is all-pervading. The Vishnu-principle permeates everything.

Wherever the creation principle of Brahma is present, there the sustaining principle of Vishnu is also present.

Where there is protection there is also punishment. This means where Vishnu is present, Eeshvara is also present.

Omnipresence of the absolute

Where is the Supreme Divinity? It is omnipresent. But not recognizing this truth, people pray to God in various ways. These prayers are not to God. They are prayers addressed to the guardian deities of the Lord. These guardian deities examine the merits of each case and make their recommendations to God.

Hence, God is a permanent Witness. He has no attributes. He has no specific form. He can assume any form. The attributeless Divine has attributes also. A pot is made from clay. The clay is formless, but the pot with form is made from it. There is no pot in the clay, but there is clay in the pot. Likewise, the Divine is everywhere. The Divine is in forms and is formless. He is with and without attributes.

How do men relate to God? There is Chittha in man (the heart). There is a recording deity known as Chithraguptha. The good and bad actions done by everyone are duly registered in the heart and taken into reckoning by Chithraguptha. The results of these actions are given a concrete form and the fruits are made available to each according to his deserts. The Divine cannot offer what is not there. He will not take away what is one's due. He lets the respective deities carry out their functions according to the rules. Hence He is called the 'Embodiment of Dharma.' The Lord will not interfere in the functions of the different deities. He lets Brahma, Vishnu and Eeshvara carry out their respective functions according to the cosmic laws. As He remains a Witness, He is described as the 'Embodiment of Dharma and Truth.'

Today everyone interferes with every other's function. This causes the breakdown of the natural order. This is described as the reign of unrighteousness and untruth. This is the difference between the reign of Dharma by the Divine and reign of Adharma by the mundane rulers.

The Divine is verily the form of Dharma (Righteousness). Hence Raama is described as "Vigrahavaan Dharmah" (The embodiment of Righteousness). Even if you are unable to worship the form of the Divine as Righteousness and Truth, adhere to Righteousness and follow Truth. "Sathyam vadha, Dharmam chara" (Speak the truth, observe, righteousness)---these are the Vedhik injunctions.

Surrender to God

The cosmos is governed by the three principal deities. I am letting you into a secret. So far as Creation is concerned, propitiate Brahma and establish links with the deity. As regards protection, establish links with Vishnu (by propitiating Him). With regard to destruction, establish association with Eeshvara (Shiva). However if your heart is totally pure, you can establish direct connection with God. You need not approach the lesser deities. For this, there is a way. That is the way of total surrender. Through surrender you can establish a direct link with God, heart to heart.

All the bhajans and chantings that are done now are related to the lesser deities. The Divine mystery is incredibly marvellous. It is not easy for ordinary mortals to comprehend these mysteries. People ask questions from time to time about Svaami's actions. "Why is He causing this trouble? Why is He acting in this manner?"

The answer may be got from a puraanic story. The Bhasmaasura story

Once Eeshvara gave a boon to Bhasmaasura as desired by him, namely that whatever he touched should be reduced to ashes. Immediately on getting the boon he lost his sense of gratitude to Eeshvara. He wanted to place his hand on Eeshvara himself!

Eeshvara could not protect himself.

He went to Vishnu, who has the duty of being a protector. Even as protector Vishnu had to observe the laws of Dharma. He could not punish Bhasmaasura straightaway. He staged a drama. He assumed the form of a most beautiful damsel, Mohini. On seeing her, Bhasmaasura's passion was aroused. He ran after Mohini. Mohini told him, "You perform all that I do, I shall marry you." Bhasmaasura readily agreed. He had no sense of discrimination or of gratitude.

Mohini started dancing and Bhasmaasura kept pace with her. In the course of the dance, Mohini placed her hand on her head. When Bhasmaasura did the same, he was reduced to ashes. His hand was his undoing. This episode shows that even in discharging the duty of protection, the divine has to observe the code of Dharma.

It should be recognized that the ways of God are governed by Shaasanam (cosmic laws). Even the Divine cannot act against these laws.

God cannot act against the cosmic code

Men today violate the code of moral behaviour. But the divine cannot act against His own moral code. So, on different occasions, God waits for the appropriate time to enforce the code. On that account, you cannot say God is powerless or incompetent. God is omnipotent, but that does not mean He can act arbitrarily. He acts according to the cosmic code.

God is not like a lecturer who teaches a lesson and leaves the classroom. God is like a physical director who teaches by his own example. That is why I say: "My life is my message." God teaches by demonstration.

Today some people carry on propaganda to cast aspersions on the actions of the Divine by misrepresentation and misinterpretation. They declare: "God punishes you, God persecutes you."

This is totally misconceived. It is not God's business to punish you or harass you. The punishment and the persecution are consequences of your actions. God is the giver of the fruits of your actions. He is like a postman who delivers letters in different homes. In one house the letter brings grief. In another the letter causes joy. Is the postman responsible for joy in one home or the grief in another? It is the message contained in the letters that is responsible for the different reactions.

In the same manner, the Lord is an impartial witness. He, merely hands over the fruits of each one's actions according to their deserts. In case the consequence is unpleasant God may interfere to get the pain reduced by proper propitiation. That authority He has. The three presiding deities over creation, protection and dissolution are the trinity--Brahma, Vishnu and Shiva. But there is a fourth entity--Shironaayakam (the Overlord), who is above these three. He is God. He can overrule the Trinity. How? By mitigating the magnitude of the consequences of Karma. He can counteract any kind of situation. That is the Divine prerogative of God. He can create anything, protect anything. He creates and brings about its dissolution.

Therefore, God should be regarded as having control over Generation, Organization and Destruction. To realise God, you have to surrender yourself completely. When the surrender is total, a direct link with God is established.

Without such surrender propitiating the lesser deities is a waste of time.

Bad associations cause doubts

When one surrenders, according to the circumstances, the devotee becomes subject to some doubts and mental agitations. For instance, in the Raamaayana, when Raama and Lakshmana were going in search of Seetha, suddenly Lakshmana felt tired and told Raama that he was fed up with the search for Seetha and would like to go back to Ayodhya to have a more comfortable time. Raama smiled and said: "Let us proceed. I shall explain everything later." How did

Lakshmana, who previously had declared that Raama was everything to him and that he would not live without Raama even for a moment, suddenly develop this attitude? How did this concern for bodily comfort arise?

After they had walked some distance, they sat under a tree. That moment Lakshmana felt the pangs of repentance. He realised his mistake, clasped Raama's feet and said "Brother! Forgive me for what I had said. I cannot understand how this bad thought came to my mind. What is the reason?" Raama then replied "Lakshmana! The region through which we passed recently was the haunt of Shuurpanakha. Shuurpanakha used to rest under the tree there. That place was surcharged with all her evil qualities. Those vibrations aroused in you the bad thoughts. The moment you came out of the place, your inherent good nature asserted itself."

The lesson of this incident is that people will have to be careful about their association with certain places or persons. Eschew bad company. Be away from places where evil qualities are rampant. The vibrations from a place affect persons who frequent them.

Divine vibrations in Prashanthi Nilayam

Here you have Divine vibration. Elsewhere you have demonic vibrations. Recognise the difference between these two kinds of vibrations. Realise that association with good people ultimately leads to God-realisation. You must understand that God's grace is related to your good actions. When your conduct is good, God's grace comes direct to you.

People ask, "Where is God?" But, even without knowing it, a so-called unbeliever believes in God.

Once, Prime Minister Nehru visited Madurai in South India. He was not interested in spiritual matters. God had no meaning for him. His agnosticism was a product of the environment in which he grew up. The local leaders took him to Meenakshi temple, whether, he was inclined to visit the temple or not. During the visit, the leaders who were with Nehru praised the ornaments worn by the Goddess and told him that the diamonds and gems in the jewels on the idol were worth crores of rupees. After listening to them, Nehru remarked "Why is it that these valuable gemstones are placed on a valueless idol?" After that he was returning from the sanctum. He did not notice the door and he hit against it and stumbled. At that moment, he cried out: "Oh! my God!" This shows each one has his own God and refers to Him as "my God."

Thus, even without being conscious of it, all have some faith in God. The reason is that God is in everyone. That divinity manifests itself without one's knowledge. Faith in God is natural to man.

Doubts about God are artificial exercises of the mind.

Spirituality calls for the removal of the animal qualities in man and developing his divine qualities. This is the duty of all spiritual aspirants. Qualities like slander, back-biting and speaking ill of others are sub-human qualities. You must learn to respect the divine in everyone, while carrying on your duties.

Total surrender is essential for Divine realisation

The path of direct realisation of the Divine consists in total surrender to the Divine, as exemplified by Lakshmana in his surrender 'to Raama. He told Raama that after his surrender he had nothing that he could call his own and he existed only to carry out Raama's will in every matter.

Thyagaraja, who once for a brief while entertained doubts about Raama's capacity to relieve him of his troubles, later extolled the limitless power of Raama, which enabled Hanuman to leap across the ocean and which accounted for Lakshmana's total surrender to Raama. (Svaami sang the keerthana of Thyagaraja in praise of Raama's prowess, which evoked the adoration of Lakshmana, Bharatha and others).

Likewise, how can anyone determine "Sai-shakthi?" Here are people from Argentina and Australia. Are they dull-witted? Are they not intelligent and affluent people? What is the meaning of their coming to Svaami? If Svaami did not have the power why would they come?

This one fact is enough to show how they recognise the truth about Svaami.

To recognise divinity there is no need to master the scriptures, or study the Upanishaths. A single visible experience is enough.

The nature of divinity cannot be described or defined. It is beyond description. What is needed is development of faith in the Divine, through weal and woe. In the pursuit of the Divine, perseverance is essential. The quest should not be given up in any circumstances. Either God should bless you or you should forget yourself in thinking of Him. People today lack such determination and perseverance. Part-time devotion can only receive part-time grace.

Adore God with firm determination. The right time for starting on this quest is when you are young as students. Remain unflinching in your faith.

You did bhajans all thorough the night. But that is not enough.

Contemplation of God should be kept up always at all places. Whatever work you do, dedicate it to God. Divinise every word and action.

Discourse in the Puurnachandhra Auditorium on the morning of 28-2-1995.

6. Uphold the ideals of Sai Institute

The one whose heart is compassionate

Who is adorned by the Jewel of truth in speech,

Whose body is dedicated to the well-being of others

What can Kali do to him?

EMBODIMENTS of Divine Love! For every man, the body, the tongue and the heart are the elements which constitute humanness. This is the purport of the Sanskrit shloka.

A sacred and pure heart, speech wedded to truth, and a body dedicated to the service of others, with these three attributes a man can have no trouble from Kali

(presiding deity of the present aeon). Purity of the heart, truthfulness in speech and a service devoted body constitute what is called Thrikarana shuddhi (the triple purity of body, speech and heart). Sai seeks from you good qualities, Friendliness towards mankind, The spirit of sacrifice, Eschewing of selfishness and Rendering service to society. This is the offering Sai desires from you. And this is verily the wealth you should offer to Sai. (Thelugu Poem). This is the wealth Sai expects. Good qualities, friendship towards all, selfless service to society are what Sai seeks from you. Students! Teachers! Educationists! In this world of moving and non-moving objects, man is carrying on his life with two desires. One is Preyas (material prosperity). Although there are all kinds of objects in the world, man seeks first of all things which will please his senses. Deriving pleasure from time to time through sense-organs is described as Preyas. This Preyas is not enduring. It is like a mirage. Sensuous pleasures are momentary and leave trail of pain behind, However, most people seek only such fleeting and unreal pleasures. From the learned to the illiterate, all seek only these sensuous pleasures. Indulgence in sensual pleasures leads to bad practices and bad conduct. "Constantly entertaining bad thoughts, playing a game of blind man's buff, Strutting about with a perishable body, as soon as one's accumulations From past lives are exhausted, giving up this make-believe existence, The poor player meets with his death, carrying with him the consequences Of his good and bad deeds," says a Thelugu poem. Is this the life one should lead? Can this be the purpose of life? This verily is not the life a true man should lead. One would manifest his full personality. How is this personality to be developed? The first requisite is elimination of the ego. Only when the ego is destroyed, does a man's personality blossom forth. Shreyas and Preyas Man today seeks primarily sensual desires. Secondly, he desires Shreyas. Shreyas means overcoming the demands of the senses and achieving that spiritual bliss which is represented by the term Sath-Chith-Anandha (Being-Awareness-Bliss). All actions aimed at Aathmik (Spiritual) bliss are related to Shreyas. The one who seeks Preyas (sensual pleasures) is concerned with the body, while the one concerned with the Aathma seeks Shreyas (spiritual well-being). Today ninety nine percent of the population are involved in sensual desires and not in spiritual bliss. Education today is mainly concerned with sensory pursuits. All occupations are related to the achievement of sensual desires All enjoyments are related to the senses. Even the acquisition of wealth is for enjoying trivial sensual pleasures. The involvement with Preyas thus is connected with pleasures of the body, the mind and the senses. There is doubtless need for some concern about physical comforts. "Even the body is essential for the realisation of Dharma," says the scripture. The demands of the body have to be satisfied. Society has to be served. Family responsibilities have to be discharged. The body is the basis for all these. But this should not be the ultimate goal of life. The former relates to the external phenomenal world and is concerned with worldly desires. Together with this, there should be the yearning for a higher Shreyas (spiritual life). The pursuit of Preyas (worldly desires) is negative, The quest for Shreyas is positive. Without association with the positive, Preyas is of no use, however much there may be worldly goods. It is only when one yearns for Shreyas (spiritual bliss) that even Preyas leads to fulfilment. Worldly knowledge is not to be ignored or neglected. It is undoubtedly necessary. Secular knowledge is for the enjoyment of this world. Brahma Vidhya is for the enjoyment of other worldly bliss. While acquiring secular knowledge, be keen about realising spiritual truth. Conflict between sensual desire and spiritual yearning Good qualities are the key to experiencing spiritual bliss. Love towards all one's fellow-beings and service to society are essential. These three contribute to the sublimation of human existence. There is a conflict between sensual desires and spiritual yearning in human beings. The senses are so powerful that they are able to delude by their attractions even profound scholars. In spiritual parlance this power is described as Viruddhashakthi (negative force). In science this is called magnetic force. The magnetic power (or the power of attraction) is present in all objects in the world. All the thoughts in a man's mind have this magnetic power. From magnetic energy is derived electrical energy. Electrical energy is the source for the power of light and for atomic power. Atomic energy is present in thoughts and in speech. Thus, magnetic energy is the basis for all forms of energy. It is the energy that accounts for speech, for singing and all other activities. The power of this energy was recognized from ancient times. India is the nation that recognized the divine source of this energy, experienced its power' and propagated the truth about it to the whole world. You must feel elated that 'you have taken birth in such a glorious land. You must feel proud that you are a son of Bhaarath. The glory of Bhaarath For this land of Bhaarath, the great Himaalayas are the frontiers. The Himaalayas convey the message of peace and security for every man. The Himaalayas proclaim the message of purity and irremovable firmness. The land of Bhaarath is watered by the life-giving rivers Ganga, Yamuna and Sarasvathi. These are the arteries of the nation. And then, you have the Bhagavath Geetha, the Upanishaths and Brahma Suuthras. These three sacred texts teach the philosophy of work, worship and wisdom. The Raamaayana and the Mahaabhaaratha teach how to sublimate human life. In the Raamaayana, Raama is an ideal hero. The Raamaayana teaches that every individual should lead an ideal life. It is said about the Mahaabhaaratha that what is not in it cannot be found elsewhere. Bhaarath is made up of the two words 'Bhaa' and 'Rathi'. 'Bhaa' means effulgence, illumination, enlightenment. 'Rathi' means taking pleasure. Bhaaratheeyas are a people who delight in illumination and enlightenment. The concept of Bhaarath is thus full of significance. Bhaaratheeyas, who are the inheritors of a great heritage, are today leading meaningless lives, lacking peace of mind, as they have become slaves of the senses. Every student should understand what is his duty even now, because life is fleeting and one's days are numbered. Students! Do not get involved in metaphysical riddles as to whether the world is real or only Brahman is real. Try to realise the truth about yourself. Ask yourself the question: "Am I real or not?" The answer comes' "I am real." How long are you real? As long as life lasts. What is

Reality or Truth? The answer is' That which remains unchanged through the three categories of time, past, present and future is truth. The world is constantly changing. If that is the case, how can you say that the world is not unreal? You are part of the world. The world contains you. "I" and "mine" There are two words. 'I' and 'Mine'. 'I' is associated with the concept of Ekathvam (oneness). 'Mine' is social concept. 'I' represents the individual. Who is this individual? It is not connected with the body. 'Mine' is a collective concept. You describe many things as 'mine'. But 'I' stands alone. Being associated with the One, it stands for the Aathma. Ekaathma--the Aathma is one. 'Mine' is associated with the things of the world. Where does the 'I' (Nenu in Thelugu and Aham in Sanskrit) exist? Wherefrom did the Aham originate? Vedhic scholars and spiritually realised persons declared that the source of Aham is Hridhaya. What is the meaning of Hridhaya? In the worldly sense it refers to the physical heart in the body. But this is not what the term Hridhaya signifies. Hridhaya and 'I' are one and the same. The Shrutis gave the name Hridhaya to 'I'. Where is this Hridhaya? It is assumed that it is in the body. Where is the 'I' presumed to exist in the body? 'I' is not part of the body. You say, "This is my body." 'My' is separate from the body. 'My' therefore, is not a part of the body. It follows that 'I' is not part of the body. If you understand the nature of 'I', you will understand the whole world. 'I' is in all beings. Everyone uses the 'I' to identify himself or herself. The 'I' is the omnipresent indwelling entity. When the Hridhaya is identified with the 'I' it is equally allpervading. Mind merely follows Hridhaya like a shadow. Man today has a narrow conception of the 'I' and Hridhaya because he misconceives the relationship between the Upaadhi (container) and what is contained (the indwelling Aathma). How is this misconception to be removed? At the outset, there should be an enquiry into the nature of Hridhaya. All you students are here (in this hall). If Hridhaya referred to the physical heart, your Hridhaya should be here. But when you think about your parents, in one moment your thoughts turn to Hyderabad. Another moment, you think about Madras. What is it that goes to Hyderabad or Madras? What is that experiences these feelings? You may think it is the mind. The mind is Jada (inert). When you understand the mind properly, you will realise it is .not the mind that is involved, it is the Hridhaya that is at work, and the mind merely follows it like a shadow. There can be a shadow only when there is a real object. The mind is only the shadow of 'I'. Wherever the 'I' goes, the mind follows. When the 'I' is still, the mind will not move.

Understanding this truth is real education for students. This is what is involved in Sathya anveshana (quest for truth).

The quest for truth should embrace all things. For instance, when you see a flower, you should try to know its name, how it came into existence, etc.

The heart and the senses

You hear some good news which delights you. You also hear some sad news, as well as some harsh abusive words You hear words of praise and blame. All the words were heard by the ears.

But when happy news was heard the heart felt elated. When sad news was heard the heart shrunk in sorrow. The heart got enraged when the ears heard harsh words about you. You were filled with joy when you heard words of praise. What is responsible for these varied responses, though all the words were heard by the same ears? The ears are inconscient by themselves and incapable of any reactions. The responses of joy or sorrow are related to the contents of the messages conveyed by the ears. Thus, the senses are by themselves jada (inconscient). How can the operations of these senses be deemed as Sathya (Truth or Reality)? How can the experiences resulting from these negative senses be considered as Truth? When the senses are unrealisable, the reactions produced by them are equally unreliable.

It is enquiring along these lines that man can overcome sorrow.

The basic cause for the occurrence of feelings like hatred, jealousy and anger is the body constituted by the five elements. As long as the body remains, it will be subject to these types of feelings. For instance, all experiences derived through the senses and the mind occur during the waking state. How long do they last? When you go to sleep none of these experiences is present.

Even the mind is absent, as it were. There is no consciousness even of breathing. In the dream state you are not aware of the life process. But there is a kind of perception in that state. Is that perception by the physical eyes? You are lying in bed with closed eyes. Which are the eyes that perceive in that state? What is the body that moves about in that state? What is it that receives impressions from outside or experiences grief? It is clear that the experiences in that state are different from the experiences in the waking state. The experiences in the dream state are real as long as the dream lasts. The experiences in the waking state are real in that state. There are no dreams in the waking state and there are no perceptions of the waking state in the dream state.

But you are present in both the states.

In both the states the "I" is one. The experiences in both the waking and dream states are of the same "I", only the states are different. Hence, the Reality or truth is that which remains in all the states. The "I" was present in the dream state. It is now present in the waking state. This continuity in the past and the present characterizes the Aathma. It is wrong to identify the "I" with the body.

"I" is subtle and incomparable

Over the ages, by identifying the "I" with the body, its true nature has been grossly underrated because of ignorance, perversion and false attachments. The truth is this "I" is subtle and incomparable. It is beyond change. This is the characteristic of divinity. Men have to recognise their inherent divinity.

In the conflict between the Prego maarga (materialistic path) and the Shreyo maarga (spiritual path), people are deluded into following the former. They are ready to sacrifice their lives for sensory pleasures. Should they not dedicate their lives for higher truth?

Be exemplars of Shreyo Maarga

The power of Shreyas (spirituality) can confer boundless bliss. Hence you should pursue Shreyas rather than Preyas. Those who are after sensuous pleasures do not readily listen to the words of those who advise them to give up their evil ways. On the contrary, they try to drag others down to their level.

The one who pursues the spiritual path not only benefits himself but promotes the well-being of others. He is like the incense-stick which consumes itself in the process of spreading its fragrance while burning.

Hence, our students should be exemplars of the Shreyo Maarga. Learning for Shreyas or a spiritual upliftment, is true education. Students should avoid imitating the silly practices of persons who sport a long hair or go about in "bell bottoms" and "drainage pipes." Students should use their discriminating power in deciding how they should

act. They should try to spiritualize their will power. They should realise the infinite powers latent in man. It is these powers which have enabled men to invent the most wonderful kinds of machinery. Men are, therefore, more valuable than the most precious things in the world. It is man who imparts value to things by the changes he makes in them, as in the case of diamonds or a work of art. In the spiritual field, man is enjoined at the very outset to know himself. He should not be a slave of the senses. Nor should he follow others like sheep. "Be a ship and not sheep." A ship serves to carry others and cross the Ocean. Consider the miraculous manner in which various organs in the body, the heart, the lungs, the stomach, the eyes and the tongue, function. Can this marvellous human machine be made by any human being? Students should realise how the divine functions in the body; making the organs carry out their different functions. What the scientists have discovered is an infinitesimally small part of what exists in God's creation. Realise that time lost is lost for ever. Students should realise that time lost is lost forever. Hence time should not be wasted. Moreover, you should realise the power which time wields over men. For instance, it was the impending bad time in store for him and his family which led a lover of righteousness like Yudhishtira to engage in a game of dice in which he lost everything. Seetha similarly was a victim of the misconceived desire for the elusive golden deer. When disaster is impending, the intellect gets clouded. The lesson from such episodes is clear. Avoid wrong actions and eluding desires. Don't harbour evil thoughts. Consider the body as a vessel, wisdom as a rope 'and use the vessel to draw the nectar of divinity from the well of spirituality. Not otherwise can immortality be attained. Students! After the end of the academic year, you will return to your homes and spend your vacation well with your parents and brothers and sisters. This is good. But you must be always on your guard during these two months. Some of your old friends may try to influence you. Don't succumb to their pressures. Try to live upto what you have learnt here. When the Asuras and Dhevas churned the Ocean of Milk, first came poison. They did not give up the churning till they got the Amrith (nectar). Regard your heart as the Ocean of Milk and the intellect as the Mandhara Mountain. Using your yearnings as the churning ropes, carry on the churning by reciting the Lord's name. Do not mind if the first thing to come out is poison. Go on churning till you get the nectar of divine bliss. When you study the Geetha, you will note that it begins with Vishaadha Yoga, the Yoga of sorrow. But ultimately, Arjuna experiences the Vishvaruupa, the Cosmic Form of the Lord. Utilize your holidays in the best manner possible. Lead exemplary lives so that you may justify your studies in this Institute. Unfortunately many students misuse their great opportunities. Experiencing the Divine is more valuable than all the wealth of the world, as Saint Thyaagaraaja pointed out. Try to render whatever social service you can selflessly and with dedication. You are bound to get God's grace. Yearn for God's "grace" and not the worldly "grass." Dedicated service of all Vice-Chancellors. Now about our Institute. Since its inception we have had four Vice-Chancellors. All of them have served the Institute without any desires in a spirit of dedication. The first Vice-Chancellor was Prof. Gokak. After his first term, when he was due to retire, the University Grants Commission allowed him to continue for another term to build up the infant University. This extension was given as a special case. After two more years he was given another special extension on the same grounds. As long as he remained he served the Institute honorarily without any remuneration. Then came Prof. Saraf. He was a member of the U.G.C. Board. He had held important positions in the Government. He also served the Institute with dedication, deeming Svaami's grace as the highest reward. The third Vice-Chancellor was Prof. Sampath. He had been Director of the Indian Institute of Technology at Kanpur and was Deputy Director of the Madras Institute of Technology. He is an authority on Computers. In my view he is a computer himself. He also served the Institute honorarily. If Vice-Chancellors were to be paid on U.G.C. scales, they would have to be paid Rs.15,000 or so per month. None of the Vice-Chancellors received any salary and they served the Institute in a spirit of selfless service. Because of Government regulations they had to retire at the end of their term.

Then came Dr. Hanumanthappa. He used to look after the Commerce Department when the Sathya Sai College was started in Brindhaavan. At that time he was an M.Com degree holder.

Later he did his Ph.D and was appointed Vice-Chancellor of the Bangalore University. He served there for many years and was eager to serve Svaami's University. He completed two years as Vice-Chancellor on March 4th. He also served the Institute in an honorary capacity expecting no remuneration.

In this way, our University from its inception has benefited from the dedicated services of Vice-Chancellors who had no self-interest. Although they served honorarily, our Trust felt that it has an obligation towards them. The Trust has established a tradition of honouring the Vice-Chancellors in an appropriate manner.

Uniqueness of Sai Institute

This University has been fostered and developed by a succession of Vice-Chancellors in different ways. Our University does not collect fees of any kind from the students. You are aware about the agitation of the students in Delhi and Madras against the raising of fees. The colleges had to be closed on account of the agitation. The present scenario in the educational field is like this' the teachers agitate for higher emoluments; the students demand a reduction in college fees.

How is it possible to meet both the demands? There has to be a balancing of the teachers' claims and the demands of the students.

In our University we have got over this problem by taking no fees from the students. Elsewhere heavy donations are demanded even for admission to the K.G. Class. Here everyone is admitted free, without regard to creed or nationality. No fees of any kind are collected from the students.

The Trust is managing the Institutions with due regard to these factors.

Unlike students in other Institutions, our students are extremely well behaved and there, is no danger of any kind of indiscipline. Students who are so well looked after here should conduct themselves well when they go out into the world' so that they bring a good name to the Institute.

They will be guilty of treachery to the Divine if they appear to behave well when they are here and misbehave when they are outside. Apart from betrayal of God and their teachers, they will be guilty of betraying their own selves if they do so. Do not be guilty of this self-destructive crime.

Instead, you must proceed from self-confidence to Self-realisation. Svaami's only desire is that students should be taught on proper lines so that they may lead ideal lives.

Dr. Hanumanthappa honoured Our Vice-Chancellor has completed two years of service. He has contributed to various developments in the Institute. We (in the Trust) have a duty to honour him. (Svaami then fastened Gold Wristlets around the wrists of Dr. Hanumanthappa as the audience cheered).

Students! It is a reward for all the good you had done in many previous lives that you have been able to get an opportunity like this. I adjure you not to waste this opportunity (as unfortunately many have done before). You may act as you like, lead the kind of life you want, but you should not go against what you have learnt here. Those who live upto the ideals of the Institute are near and dear to us wherever they may be. Those who betray the ideals of the Institute are as good as dead. 'Do not lead unworthy lives like street dogs. Be grateful to your Alma Mater. I do not seek anything from you. But you have to cherish the sense of gratitude for what you have received here. I bless you all.

Discourse in the Institute Auditorium at Prashanthi Nilayam on 5-3-1995.

Love is God; God is Love.
Live in Love; This is the way to God.
BABA

7. Think God, Love God

EMBODIMENTS of Divine love! "Maanam hithvaa priyo bhavathi" (The man without egoistic pride is liked by everyone). "Krodham hithvaa na sochathi" (The man without hatred is free from grief). "Kaamam hithvaa aarthona bhavathi" (One who has given up desire is free from worries). "Lobham hithvaa sukhee bhavathi" (Overcoming greed a man becomes happy).

When you rid the mind of impurities, humanness turns divine. The world is confronted today with many problems. On the one side there is fear of war. On another side, there is fear of famine. On a third front there is the lust for power. On the fourth side, selfishness is rampant.

There is discord between man and man, between one caste and another. What is the reason for this? Society is riddled today with conflicts because morality has been banished and humanness has been forgotten.

Desires are dreadfully dangerous

No man filled with greed, fear and anger can achieve anything in this world. Greed comes first.

Excessive desires degrade man. You cannot give up desires entirely. But there should be a limit to them. When they exceed the limits a man goes astray. Desires are dreadfully dangerous. Today's enemy may become tomorrow's friend and vice versa. But desires are perpetual enemies.

They haunt man ceaselessly. The Geetha declares desire as the Nithyasha-thru (eternal enemy) of man. Hence desire has to be kept under control.

Becoming a prey to peacelessness, man seeks the Divine by various means. But why is he unable to realise his desire? What is the cause of his sorrow? Is it due to unfulfilled desire or the failure of his efforts? Is he miserable because he has not got various possessions, or failed to win a lottery? Lamenting over such trifles, man today is forgetting his divinity.

These are not real troubles at all. The real cause of sorrow is attachment to the body, identifying one's self with the body. All sorrow arises from the feelings of "I" and "Mine". It is essential' at the outset to reduce dheha-abhimaanam (attachment to the body).

Desires are a source of pleasure for man, but they are also the cause of his grief. The mind has to be brought under control. Even thousands of men cannot hold back a fast-moving train. But the train comes to a stop the moment the brake is applied. The same applies to the vagaries of the mind. When the mind is controlled, all sorrows will cease.

The Divine Aathma, which dwells in the heart of every human being, is not recognized by man because it is covered by the clouds of desire. The splendour of the sun is revealed when a wind drives away the clouds that hide the sun. Likewise, when the wind of love blows away the clouds of desire in the heart, the ego ("I"-ness) and possessiveness (sense of "mine") are driven out and the effulgence of the Aathma within is revealed in all its glory. Man has to restrain the feelings of Ahamkaara and Mamakaara ("I" and "Mine").

Uncontrolled desire can bring down anyone, even the deities presiding over human destiny.

However intelligent, scholarly or powerful a man may be, he may succumb to desires. Hence everyone has to be vigilant in controlling desires.

Attachment brings sorrow

Even a man of great prowess like Arjuna became subject to the feeling of attachment--"my relatives," "my teachers," etc. He was a prisoner of the feeling of "mine." Sva, Svajana, my people, my kinsmen--this sense of attachment made him throw away his Gaandevee (bow) on the battlefield, overcome by grief. This kind of attachment may plunge anyone in feeble-minded grief at any place, at any time and in any situation. Hence it is essential to keep all attachments under control.

Prema (Love) should be shown not only towards God but towards all beings in creation. Love is a powerful force. No other power excels it. Misunderstanding the nature of love, men are falling a prey to suffering. This is 'the result of misguided expressions of what is considered love.

Men today worship God for the fulfillment of desires relating to this world and the other. This is not true love. People pretend to love their kith and kin and friends out of purely selfish considerations. This is only attachment and not love. Only that can be described as love which offers itself without any expectation of recompense. In the Geetha, Bhagavaan has been described Suhrit (a true friend). Without expecting any return, accompanying you like a shadow, God fulfills your desires. Even a mother in loving her son, may have expectations that he would take care of her in her old age. God has no such expectations. Suhrit defines the utterly selfless love of the Lord.

The nature of Divine love is not rightly understood by most people. For instance, even a great woman like Dhiraupadhi did not understand the ways of the Lord.

Once, during their exile, while she and Yudhishtira were strolling in the Himaalayas.

Dhiraupadhi asked Yudhishtira with tears streaming from her eyes, "Dear Lord, you have taken such good care of your subjects, you fed the starving and relieved the needy, you always adhered to Dharma. Why should you be subject to this present suffering? You are the very embodiment of Righteousness. We are leading the life of a destitute here. Why should this happen to you? Have we forfeited God's grace? Is there anything wanting in our devotion?"

Dharmaja's advice to Dhiraupadhi

Smilingly, Dharmaja replied, "Dhiraupadhi! Look at the Himaalaya mountains. How beautiful are the peaks! I am filled with joy looking at those mountains. They do not serve me in any way, but still they fill me with joy. The beauty of Nature gives me joy. Beauty is bliss. That bliss is nectarine. There is no joy equal to the enjoyment of the beautiful.

When you look at a flower, you derive ineffable joy, though the flower renders you no service.

Nature is the vesture of God.

When you behold Nature, you experience bliss. I love Nature for the joy it gives. I derive joy from seeing it and for no other benefit. Likewise, God should be loved in a selfless spirit. I love Krishna regardless of what difficulties I have to suffer, because that is the way I love him. I have no interest in the transient pleasures and possessions of the world.

True bliss transcends the fleeting pleasures experienced by this perishable body. Dhraupadhi!

Do not seek these pleasures relating to the body. Seek the Divine feet of the Lord, which will confer enduring bliss. Do not grieve over petty difficulties. Concern yourself with the means to experience God. All other things are valueless."

The bliss from experiencing the Divine has been extolled by the Vedhic seers and sages from ancient times. It is holy, eternal, ineffable and infinite. It is the bliss of oneness with God.

The Yugas and the Divine

To enable mankind to realise this infinite bliss, the Lord makes His descent from age to age. The Kritha Yuga began in the month of Vaishakha. The Thretha Yuga began in the month of Magha.

Dhvaapara Yuga began in the month of Maargashira. In the Geetha, Krishna declared that among the months He is Maargashira. Kali Yuga started in the Chaithra month. This is according to the lunar calendar.

What is the meaning of Yuga? Yuga means divinity. The divinity of the Yuga is derived from the Divine. Thus the Yuga originates from the Divine and merges in the Divine.

Yugakrith is one of the names of the Lord. It means that the Lord is the creator of the Yugas (aeons). Yugaadhi refers to the commencement of the particular Yuga. The Lord is also the sustainer 'of the Yuga. He is the very embodiment of Time. That is why He is the master of Time and hence He is worshipped as Samvathsara. "Samvathsaraaya namah" (Salutations to the Lord of the year).

The Yugaadhi day; which is associated with such sacred significance is being observed as merely the beginning of a new year. The day should be regarded as Divine in origin.

Naamasmarana is the best panacea for Kali Yuga

The Kali Yuga is considered a dreadful aeon and the presiding deity, the Kali Purusha, is viewed with fear as the source of difficulties and trials. This is not so.

Naamasmarana is a mitigating factor at all times. For the Kali Age, there is no greater panacea for all troubles than chanting the name of Hari. This truth is forgotten by people today. Instead of Hari's name, they dote over Siri, the Goddess of wealth. The worshippers of wealth far exceed the worshippers of Hari. People should remember that if God is the source of all things, He alone should be remembered at all times.

The year that commences today is named Yuva. Yuva means those in their youthful age. It implies that it is a transitional stage between childhood and old People are worried about what is in prospect for the world in this new year. Those who make all kinds of dire predictions for the year are not doing any good. The new year Yuva, according to astrology, commences in Shani

(Saturn). But Guru (Jupiter) is well disposed. He is the ruler for this year. When the ruler is good, why worry about the ministers? He presides over all the other planets. Hence, there is no room for any fear. The world will no doubt experience some troubles, ups and downs. Such things have happened in previous Yugas also, as in Kritha Yuga, Thretha Yuga and Dhvaapara

Yuga. Were there not wars in Dhvaapara Yuga? There is no need to attach special significance to the Kali age. There were wicked men even in Kritha Yuga and there are good men in the Kali age. It is not the Yuga that matters. It is the heart that is important. If people's hearts are pure, what does it matter what the Yuga is? People must strive to purify their hearts. The heart is called Hridhaya. Hridhaya signifies a compassionate heart. People must transform their stony hearts to compassionate hearts.

Portents for the year 'Yuva'

The year Yuva will experience a mixture of good and bad events.

There will be some serious mishaps. There will be grave disorders. There will be many political crises. Hence each one should concentrate on protecting oneself by purity of heart and mind. Your preceptor or your deity or your scripture will not serve to take you to your goal. You have to make the journey yourself. Others can serve as guide-posts but they cannot take you to your destination.

Each one, therefore, has to chalk out his own path to reach the goal, "Strive to safeguard your Aathma." If you adhere to righteousness you can face any ordeal. Strive to earn God's Grace.

Young people must be very much on their guard this year. They must control the vagaries of their minds and not give way to anger and envy. Anger and envy are pernicious diseases. Envy has grown to alarming proportions. It is less curable than cancer. Men often ask: "Who is God and who is Yama (the Lord of Death)?" The answer was given by Purandharadhaasa in one of his compositions. "Who is Raama for you and who is Yama? For the unbelieving Raavana, Raama became Yama. For the believing Vibheeshana, Raama was God. For Shurasena who had no belief, Krishna was Yama. To Akruura, who was a believer, Krishna appeared as God. To the believing Prahlada, Naaraayana was the saviour. To the unbelieving Hiranyakashipu, Prahlada's father, Naaraayana became the destroyer. Raama and Yama are not distinct from each other. According to one's beliefs, Raama becomes Yama and Yama becomes Raama. One's feelings make all the differences in the role of God as protector or slayer. There is a Thelugu poem'

To those who say 'Yes', He is 'Yes',
To those who say, 'No', He is 'No'.
'Yes' or 'No' comes from others' mouths, but He always remains 'Yes, Yes, Yes.' (S.S.--Shri Sathya Sai).

For God there is no 'Yes' or 'No' These are echoes of your own feelings.

Therefore, whatever the year and whatever the difficulties you confront, develop compassion in your heart. Develop your meditation on God. With faith in God you can achieve anything.

Ingratitude is the worst sin
Many strange things are likely to happen in this new year. Ingratitude is rampant. Not only are people forgetting all the good that is done to them, but they are doing harm to those who have helped them. History provides a bitter example of such ingratitude. You are aware of Ghori Mohammed who invaded India several times and plundered the country. At last in one encounter with Raana Prithviraaj, he was defeated and captured by Prithviraaj. Prithviraaj pardoned him and let him off. Later on, by nefarious methods Ghori caught Prithviraaj. Then he decided to put an end to Prithviraaj's life. At that time, the Divine intervened, in answer to Prithviraaj's prayers, and an arrow released by Prithviraaj went straight to Ghori's neck and severed his head. Thus the evil-doer was punished by the Lord.

The lesson is clear. Don't harbour ill-will towards anybody. Don't do any harm to others. Get rid of doubts and develop faith in God. People today are filled with doubts of every kind.

By truthful speech, by generous hands, by listening to what is ennobling, people must overcome the untoward happenings of this Kali age. It is by these means that human life can be redeemed.

The purpose of life is to experience unity in diversity
What is the purpose of life? It is not eating or sleeping. It is to lead an ideal life. Every human being has to accomplish certain aims in life which are in tune with humanness. You have to realise that the Lord is the Indweller in all beings and experience unity in diversity. The entire creation is present within the human body. This is the mystery of creation. The human body is a marvellous creation. Every organ in the body discharges its specific function and nothing else.

Only the Divine can create such a wonderful organism. The Aathma is the Master within the body. Never betray the Master. Be grateful to God for endowing you with such a marvellous body.

India was the teacher for the whole world from ancient times in the spiritual field. It gave to the world the glorious universal message. "Let the peoples of all the worlds be happy."

Indians today have forgotten this ancient message and have not recognized their own inherent divinity. The ancient sages knew what power there was in the human being because of the presence of the Divine within. They radiated effulgence as a result of their Yogic power. All of it comes from God. The power of the Divine is infinite and indescribable.

People should pray for the blessings of Divine grace. They need not worry about the prospects in the new year. With God's grace they can overcome any situation. People speak about the affliction caused by the nine planets. In fact, people are plagued by only two planets--Ahamkaara and Mamakaara (egoism and possessiveness). To free themselves from these two all that men require is divine grace.

Young people should participate this year in sacred activities. Try to solve social problems.

Cultivate unity. Give up pride and ostentation. Develop the courage to face any situation, the courage that is based on faith in God. Strive for the welfare of all people in all countries.

Humanity is one irrespective of race, creed or colour. Dedicate this year to the development of a universal outlook.

All bodies belong to the Divine Mother
This is the lesson Raamakrishna Paramahansa taught towards the end of his life when he was suffering from cancer. He could not take any food. At that time, Svaami Vivekaanandha came to the Master and asked him why he should not pray to the divine Mother to enable him to take food. Raamakrishna Paramahansa replied: "I did ask the Mother and she gave me her answer, when I am taking my food through so many mouths, does it matter if I don't eat through your mouth?" Raamakrishna felt ashamed on getting that answer. The lesson he learnt was that all bodies belong to the Divine Mother.
In the Geetha, Krishna says that the divine as Vaishvaanara enters all bodies and helps to digest every type of food. Only the Divine can perform this kind of function. Whatever the kind of food you eat, it is digested, converted into blood and circulated to every part of the body. Only the power of the Divine can do this. Develop faith in this truth. Very soon you will experience the bliss of God-realisation. The experience will come only if you act in the appropriate manner.
But, failing to act, people blame God for their troubles. God is utterly blameless. Only your lapses are reflected in your actions. There are no flaws in God and no one is competent to blame God.
God-realisation is not a time-bound process. Some one went to Ramana Maharishi and asked him how long he should sit in meditation. The Maharishi said that he should meditate "till he is not aware that he is meditating at all." Similarly the love of God should become a spontaneous act. With such love, one can face any situation in life with confidence derived from the consciousness that the Divine is within.
Duty of youth
Do not worry about the predictions made for this year in the almanacs. If you put your faith in God, you can overcome all troubles. Youth in particular should cultivate this faith. It is a pity that Indian Youth today are lacking in love of the Motherland. Becoming bookworms is not education. It is more important to put into practice at least a fraction of what you have learnt.
Think God. Love God. Realise that there is no truer friend than God. Merge your love in His love.
Discourse in the Puurnachandhra Auditorium on 1-4-1995, Yugaadhi Day.

Love.. Love...Love First...Love, as long as life lasts. For myself, I can say. I shower more blessing on those who decry or defame me than on those who worship and adore me! For, those who spread falsehoods about me derive joy therefrom; I am happy that I am the cause for their exultation and joy. You too must accept this line of argument and be very happy when someone derives joy by defaming you. Do not respond by defaming that person; then the chain of hatred will bind both down. Life will become a tragedy.
BABA
8. Install Raama Raajya in your hearts
What can Kali do to the one Whose heart is filled with compassion,
For whose speech truth is the ornament,
And whose body is dedicated to serving others?
EMBODIMENTS of Divine Love! A tranquil mind, a truth-filled speech, and a body dedicated to service one who has these three qualities is described as the embodiment of Thriputhi (the triple purity). Such a one is the noblest of human beings.
Tulasidas was the great one who proclaimed that human life is redeemed when every talent and every moment are utilized by humanity for realising the Divine. To God all objects in the universe are alike because they are manifestations of the Divine. The scriptures declared about this Divine manifestation "Sarvam khalu idham Brahma" (All this verily is Brahman). Hence, whoever worships the Supreme Lord should also worship Prakrithi (Nature or the Phenomenal universe). He should love Nature and adore Nature. Nature is not different from Paramaathma (Supreme Self). Nature is the effect and God is the cause. Nature is the expression of this relationship between Cause and Effect.
Goodness is a synonym for God. Hence, it is only by contemplating on the qualities of God that human existence finds fulfillment. The body of a human being who does not think in this way is merely a lump of clay.
God's words, actions, thoughts are always pure, selfless and infinitely precious. The truth of this is illustrated by an episode from the Raamaayana.
Dramatic acts of God to prove His omnipresence
Once, while proceeding to Mithila, Raama sat on a stone in the sage Gautama's ashram. That very moment, a woman emerged from the stone. However, Raama did not feel proud that by a mere touch of his feet, the stone had turned into a woman. On the contrary he felt sad that his feet had touched the wife of a great sage and thereby he had committed a wrong, This shows that God dwells in the minds of sages.

God indulges in dramatic acts like these to demonstrate His omnipresence in the universe and. to teach the world the greatness of Nature. Another episode reveals another aspect of the Divine. For all the mighty deeds done by Hanumaan and great help rendered by him, Raama asked him:

"Hanumaan! What reward can I give you? Apart from expressing my gratitude to you I cannot give you any fitting recompense. The only way I can show my gratitude to you is that whenever you think of me at any time in your life, I shall appear before you."

Raama was showing his gratitude to Hanumaan in this manner. This indicates that the primary duty of man is to be grateful all his life to the person who has done him a good turn. Man has to realise his divinity and look at all Nature from the Divine point of view. Instead, man looks at everything only from the mundane point of view. The body is indeed perishable. But it is also the means for realising the imperishable Truth. This means, all speech should be about the Divine. All actions should be godly. Every thought should be about God.

That is the appeal which Thyaagaraaja made to his mind: "Oh mind, think always about Shri Raama." (Bhagavaan sang in His own mellifluous voice Thyaagaraaja's song in which he said:

"Oh Kaushalya, what penance did you perform to enjoy the privilege of calling Shri Raama affectionately as a mother and showering your kisses on the divinely beautiful child Raama."

What penance did Dhasharatha perform to call Shri Raama to come to him?") Thus Thyaagaraaja was chanting Raama's name all the time and singing his glories. This is an example to the world.

Raama the ideal exemplar of righteousness
Raama is the supreme exemplar of how people should conduct themselves in the world, how a country should be governed, how the integrity and morality of human beings should be protected. High-minded actions, ideal qualities and sacred thoughts are basic foundations of character. Raama is the very embodiment of these three attributes. This means that every human being should cultivate sacred thought, right actions and good qualities. Raama demonstrated by his words, thoughts and actions how such a life can be lived. Raama acted upto the ancient injunction: "Speak the truth. Practise Righteousness." Eschewing harsh words, Raama pleased everyone by his sweet speech. He countered harsh speech by others with his composure, patience, sweetness and smile. He never pried into affairs of others, never took notice of their faults, never indulged in ridicule, and never caused any pain to others by the way he spoke to them. It is essential for everyone to follow the example set by Raama and cultivate his many noble qualities and do righteous actions. People should entertain sacred thoughts.

One should never go back on the plighted word
Man is an image of the Divine. The Lord has declared in the Geetha: "My Spirit is the indwelling Spirit in all beings." God is the indweller in all human beings. Today, in the pursuit of power, men are prepared to commit any kind of crime and to inflict any kind of harm on people to achieve their ends. Raama, on the contrary, gave up the kingdom and to honour the pledge given by his father, chose to face the ordeals of life in the forest as an exile. He demonstrated to the world that one should never go back on his plighted word. Raama gave up the throne and became a denizen of the forest. In life, it is not difficulties and calamities that are important. The supreme importance of Truth was that Raama wanted to hold forth to the world. One should never go back on one's pledge even at the cost of one's life. Today, however, men go back on their words from moment to moment. They indulge in falsehood at every step. Promises are forgotten. How can the Raama-principle flourish in such a human environment? The Raama-principle is remote from such an atmosphere.

God will be in proximity only to those persons whose thoughts, ideals and deeds are in accord with Raama's. Raama was a man of his word, but man is the very reverse. It may be asked- "In this situation how is it possible to say that in human beings there is divinity?" Not at all. In such human beings there is either animality or demonic nature. Whatever saadhanas (spiritual practices) one may perform or however much one may recite the Lord's name, God will not judge one by these criteria. What is the transformation in one's heart? If there is no transformation of the heart, of what avail are spiritual saadhanas? Indwelling divinity within the shrine of the body Man is not a mere creature of flesh and blood. He is the embodiment of the Aathma. It is only when man recognises this truth that true spirituality will be evident to him. Concentrating all the time on the physical body as the only reality, time is wasted on external observances. The body should be regarded as a temple of God. To consider it otherwise is a sign of foolishness. Only he is a true human being who recognizes the indwelling divinity within the shrine of his body. The scriptures have declared: "In the temple of the human body dwells the individual Self which is the eternal Self."

In this context, it may be noted that even scholars and intelligent persons tend to get confused over this matter. People who go to endless trouble to acquire positions, power or reputation do not care to devote even a small fraction of that effort to earn God's grace. The lesson taught by the story of Raama is different. Thulasidhas said: "Raama! I am helpless, poor and crippled."

Why did he say he was a Angaheena (cripple)? He had hands and legs, head and everything else.

Nevertheless he declared that he was a cripple. What is the inner meaning of this? "What is the use of having hands when I am unable to serve you, oh Raama! What is the use of having eyes, when I am unable to see you? So, I am verily blind." Thulasidhas declared that limbs that are not used in the service of the Lord are as good as lost.

Purandharadhaasa also sang in the same manner. "Alas, even when they are endowed with eyes, they do not see your glorious form! Even when they have ears, they do not listen to the songs in the praise of the Lord."

Men use their eyes to look at the attractions of the world and not the charm of God. As long as man is fascinated by Prakrithi (the phenomenal world), he cannot comprehend the Divine. Even the most eminent persons are subject to this weakness. This is the mark of the powerful influence of the Kali age.

The way to God

Men, however, should strive to get rid of the attachment to the body by persistent efforts. The yearning for God should be nourished. Qualities such as backbiting, spreading scandal and searching for the faults in others are not human but demonic. People should cultivate good thoughts, good words, good hearts and good conduct. This is the way to God. That man is redeemed who follows this path.

History is full of examples of men who used force and fraud to come to power. There are examples from the communist countries. In Muslim countries also there are examples of persons who did not disdain to imprison or kill their kith and kin to seize power. But Bhaarath has generally been free from such deeds. This is the result of Raama's glorious example.

The glory of Raama's sandals

Once, while moving about in the forest, Raama and Lakshmana sat under a tree. At that time, they heard the neighing of horses and the cries of elephants at a distance. Raama asked Lakshmana to find out how horses and elephants happened to appear in the forest. Lakshmana climbed a tree and noticed Bharatha coming with a huge army. Immediately he exclaimed "Brother! Get ready for battle. Take up your bow and arrows." Raama smiled at Lakshmana and said, "Why are you so excited? Do not be hasty. Calm yourself. What has happened?"

Lakshmana replied, "Bharatha is coming with an army to kill us." Raama said "Lakshmana!

What a serious mistake you are making! It is impossible for any action of the Ikshvaaku clan to think of such a preposterous idea even in dream. Because we two were not present in Ayodhya when Bharatha and Shatrughna returned to the capital, they are now coming to see us." Raama sought to pacify Lakshmana.

Lakshmana replied: "What is this forbearance and sympathy on your part? If they merely wanted to see us, will they come with a huge army? No. they are coming only to slay us."

Raama said "Lakshmana! You are too much dominated by Raajasik tendencies. You seem to be attached to kingship. Why worry? Bharatha is coming. I shall ask him to crown you as king. You may go with him."

Even as Raama was speaking thus, Bharatha came rushing towards Raama, fell at his feet crying: "Raama! Raama! Raama!" and said: "I am not competent to rule over Ayodhya. To reign over the kingdom Raamachandhra alone is worthy as the eldest son of Dhasharatha. You alone are fit to rule over the kingdom properly and establish Raama Raajya. Please return to Ayodhya." Thus pleaded Bharatha.

As Bharatha was entreating in this manner, Raama looked smilingly at Lakshmana. "Compare your feelings with the expressions of Bharatha," he said.

Sage Vashishtha also joined in the appeal to Raama to return to Ayodhya. But Raama did not yield to Bharata's entreaties and, acting according to Vashishtha's directions, offered his sandals to Bharatha and asked Bharatha to perform the coronation for the Paadhukas (divine sandals).

You must recognise the inner significance of this episode. People generally regard the sandals as objects to be despised. But Raama taught a different lesson about them. Raama treated the kingdom and the sandals on par. "I don't want a crown. Enthroned my sandals."

Acting on Raama's injunctions, Bharatha performed the coronation of Raama's sandals and spent his time peacefully, contemplating on Raama.

Raama's teaches lessons to Bharatha

Raama taught Bharatha how government should be carried on. "Have as your ministers only persons of character and virtue, who are tranquil in mind and devoted to truth. Don't have as ministers anyone lacking in these four qualities. Moreover, they should possess self-confidence, practise righteous conduct, and be capable of giving proper advice. These are essential prerequisites for wise administrators. Give no place for selfish persons. There should be no room in the government for persons animated by self-interest. Nor is that all. Don't allow anyone given to vices like gambling and drink to wield authority. Entertain only those who command the esteem of the people and who are respected and loved by the people. You must have daily conferences with three or four such ministers. Your talks should be in private and no outsider should know anything about them. It is only when such secrecy is observed that the nation will prosper. You will then be able to ensure peace and prosperity to the nation. Moreover, you must send out as envoys to other countries ambassadors who are totally loyal to the king and not timeservers who practise duplicity. Only such men can convey to the king truthful information."

Raama did not stop with that. I request the women devotees not to take it amiss. Raama told Bharatha that he should not permit women to take part in affairs of state. Women have their estimable role in household affairs, but they should be kept out of state politics. "Don't employ women as ministers. The reason is: a nation's honour is based upon its women. It is only when women maintain their respect and honour that the nation will be respected. It is not proper for women to cheapen themselves by roaming in public places."

How to establish Raama Raaiya?

Such were the sacred precepts of good administration which Raama taught to Bharatha. How does the situation in the country today compare with Raama's conception of an ideal government? The state of things today is 100 percent contrary to the ideas and ideals of Raama.

How, then, can Raama Raaiya be established here?

If we desire to establish Raama Raaiya, there should be harmony in thought, word and deed.

This applied not only to Bhaarath but to the entire world. All countries should have governments which conform to this principle of triple purity. Only then, the people also will reflect the character of the rulers.

Today, the people reflect the vices of the rulers. If a minister prefers one bottle, the man in the street asks for two (drinks). How can such citizens establish Raama Raaiya? They can do so only if there is a complete transformation in their mental attitudes. Despite all the teachings they have listened to, their minds remain in the same state. Without a mental change, they are not entitled even to utter the name Raama. What, then, is the meaning of talking about Raama Raaiya? It will be only Raama Raaiya in name, but in reality it will only be Raavana Raaiya.

Declining trend in respect for parents

If you really value Raama's ideals, you should practise them. You may say that the high ideals of Raama are beyond your competence. But there is one thing which you can do: Raama carried out the words of his father Pithruvaakya paripaalana. How many today respect the words of the parent? If the father asks the son, "Son, where are you going?" The son replies: "Shut up and keep quiet in your place."

Few have any respect for the words of the father. There is no need to speak about respect for the mother. Such unworthy sons are ruining the world. Mothers are shedding tears over the behaviour of such sons.

This state of things should change. The sacredness of parents should be restored. Young people should cultivate pure thoughts and lead unselfish lives. Children who disregard their parents will be treated likewise by their children in due course. Partly the parents are to blame for the way they pamper the children. The children of today are worse than even Raavana's children, who obeyed him to some extent.

People who acquire knowledge or wealth are making no use of it to help others. They are following a dog-in-the-manger policy. This is not the way to follow Raama's example.

True meaning of devotion lies in practice

Today people celebrate Raama's birthday as a festival, but do not practise Raama's ideals.

Enshrine Raama's ideals in your heart. Without it, there is no meaning in celebrating Raama's birthday. You must follow the example of a noble and ideal person. This is the meaning of devotion.

People talk about devotion. Does mere participation in bhajans constitute devotion? No. It is all a stunt. True devotion calls for the practice of at least one of the teachings that you learn. By following at least one good lesson, a man should lead an ideal existence.

Remember that the lessons taught to Bharatha by Raama are ideal lessons. After instructing Bharatha regarding the principles of good government, Raama told Bharatha: "You must revere the parents, the preceptors and all elders. If any person misbehaves within your kingdom, do not punish him. Banish him. That will be punishment enough."

Here I wish to explain what is meant by punishment. There is no need to beat or abuse the earring person. Stop talking to him. What is the use of talking to a person who is going astray? I do not want to waste my words on such a person. I attach great value to my words. They may not know it, but I know their value. None of my words has any selfish motive. Everything is for the welfare of all. If one has no such broad outlook and is only concerned about his personal interests, what is the use in talking to such a person? As long as one remains self-centered, he cannot understand the Divine.

The reign of Dharma is Raama Raaiya

At the outset, understand what is Raama Raaiya. It is the reign of morality, of truth and virtues.

Raama Raaiya means that which engenders happiness (Raamayathi). There should be no ill-will towards anybody. No one should be harmed. That is Raama Raaiya. When such feelings arise among the people. Raama Raaiya will come into existence of its own accord.

It is with such feelings that Thulasidhas extolled Raama. His Raamaayana is suffused with his deep devotional experience. He exclaimed: "Raama! I have no abilities of any kind. I have practised no system of yoga. I have not developed any method of meditation. I have no possessions of any kind. I have only one thing and that is my love. I love you for love's sake."

Spiritual practices of various kinds, including japa, yoga and the like, will not lead you to Godrealisation.

I do not suggest that you should discontinue these exercises. The devotional activities are better than many other useless pastimes. But, if you want to get near to God and to experience God, you have to transform the heart. As you sow, so shall you reap. Sow the seeds of love and reap the fruit of love. Sow the seed of immortality and reap the fruit of immortality.

Today you want sweet fruit, but you sow poisonous seeds. This is thoughtless action.

Some people say that they are too weak to scale spiritual heights. But you have the strength to commit sins and do wrong actions. The strength required for good or bad actions is the same. In fact, it is more difficult to commit sin than to be good and meritorious. To utter an untruth is difficult. To speak the truth is easy. Speaking the truth calls for no effort. But to declare what is not true as true calls for considerable ingenuity. Uttering an untruth is therefore more difficult.

Equally, cheating is more arduous than being honest.

Many devotees tell Svaami that they are caught up in the coils of Samsaara (family and worldly life) and are unable to break away from it. But what is the truth? Is it you who are clinging to Samsaara or is it Samsaara that is holding you in its grip? Has Samsaara any hands to hold you?

You have hands and you are holding on to worldly life. Samsaara is not holding you. It is a paradox for you to say that Samsaara is holding you in its grip when the truth is otherwise.

It is excessive attachment that is the cause of man's troubles. Do everything as an act of offering to the Divine. Without faith in God man ceases to be human.

Diversion of mind in religious gatherings

Devotees who attend bhajans turn their looks this side and that side without concentrating on the bhajans. If they are not interested in the bhajans why should they come at all?

Once Raamakrishna Paramahansa slapped Rani Rasmani at a gathering of scholars and worshippers. All people were astonished at Raamakrishna's action. Raani Raasmani felt humiliated. Raamakrishna explained that he found Raani Raasmani thinking about her court affairs while sitting in the religious gathering. This was highly improper and hence he slapped her. It was equally improper for devotees to sit in bhajans and divert their thoughts to worldly matters. Sitting in good company, how can one entertain bad thoughts? People speak about Sathsang. What is Sathsang? It is not mere assemblage of ten devotees. 'Sath' refers to that which exists in all the three categories of time--past, present and future. The term applies to the Divine. Sathsang, therefore, means association with the Divine. God is pleased only with inner feeling. Each word has profound and sacred meaning. But common people do not relish such interpretations. They enjoy what is trivial and pleasing to the ears. I do not want to please people in this way. The truth has to be taught. Some day or other people will understand it. Worldly sayings may please people for the moment, but they are of no value spiritually. God is pleased with the inner feeling and not the external show. But most people are interested only in the external and do not bother about the inner feeling. If you break the branch of a tree and plant it in the sand, will it grow into a tree? It must be planted in soil where it can strike roots. Similarly, the feeling must arise in the heart and get deeply rooted in it. Then the fruits will appear in the external world. Therefore, cultivate the feeling inside and enjoy the fruit outside.

Such wise teachings were taught to the people in the reign of Bharatha and Raama. When we speak of establishing Raama Raaiya, let not Bhaaratheeyas imagine that it is relevant only to Bhaarith. The whole world needs the advent of Raama Raaiya. What this means is that the rulers should have three qualities. They are: Sathpravarthana (righteous conduct), Sadhaalochana (good counsel), Sadhguna (good qualities). There should be a combination of all the three.

Today good counsel is a rarity. As for good qualities, the less said the better High-souled persons, who represent harmony in thought, word and deed, should fill the seats of power. There should be no place for the wicked who think one thing, speak another thing and act in a different way.

Devotees should till their minds with sacred thoughts. At least from now on, banish all bad thoughts, Turn your minds towards God. At least install Raama Raaiya in your hearts. When this happens, the world will experience Raama Raaiya. Fill your minds with the ideals of Shri Raama and try to put them into practice as much as possible. This will cost you nothing. You do not have to perform any asanas or go to the forest for practice. Staying in your homes, attending to your duties, purify your hearts.

Discourse in Sai Ramesh Mandap, Brindhaavan, on 9-4-1995, Shri Raama Navami Day.

A loveless heart is a dry desert. Love is the foundation of life. The air that is inhaled and exhaled has to be loved in order that it may rep1enish and revive.

BABA

God, man and the Cosmos
Trees yield fruits for the benefit of others,
Rivers carry water for the use of others,
Cows give milk for the good of others
The human body is given for serving others.

(Sanskrit shloka)
FOR the benefit of others, trees yield fruits. Likewise, for the benefit of others in the world, rivers carry water. Cows, without consuming their milk, take the trouble to produce milk for the benefit of others. Man also, without considering his own personal interests, should use his body for the benefit of others.

"Shareeram Aadhyam Khalu Dharma Saadhanam" (The body is the primary requisite for the achievement of Dharma). The body has to discharge a variety of functions for the sake of the family, the society and the nation.

"Aham Eva Akshaya Kaalah" (I am the indestructible Time), says the Lord in the Geetha. This Time is not a momentary phenomenon. It is the embodiment of eternal and infinite Time. The sages called' this Time as Vathsarah. This name signifies the presence of the Divine as the Time-Spirit in all human beings. Moreover, God is the basis for all that happens, either through instrumentality or by direct intervention. He is the basis for what is permanent and .what is temporary, for birth and death, for joy and sorrow. For this reason the Divine Time-Spirit has been called Hethu (the Cause). Hethu means that God is the primal cause of everything. He is also the eternal witness. He is Pramaanasvaruupa (validating authority) for everything. Hence He is described as omnipresent, having His feet, etc., everywhere. Time is the basis for everything.

Samvathsara (year) is also called Vikshara. All objects in the world are subject to the process of creation, growth and decay. But the name Kaala-Svaruupa was given to the Divine, who is not subject to birth, growth or decay. This changeless Divine is called Vikshara. Since the year is associated with Vikshara, God is Samvathsara Svaruupa (the embodiment of Time and its periods).

Sathya and Dharma in Bhaaratheeya culture
For the proper utilization of Time, which is Divine, the Vedhik texts laid down basic injunctions for mankind. Among these, foremost are "Sathyam Vadha: Dharmam Chara" (Speak the Truth.

Follow Righteousness). This aphorism has a pre-eminent position in Bhaaratheeya culture.

Likewise, we have the injunctions' "Esteem the father as God: Revere the mother as Divine." The Vedhas proclaimed these aphorisms to be followed by the whole world.

Sathya is the basic goal of human life. Bhaaratheeya culture has revealed how this goal is to be reached. Bhaaratheeyas today have forgotten this culture. From immemorial times, Bhaaratheeyas were engaged in the quest for Truth. Everything is encompassed by Truth.

The quest for Truth is linked with the pursuit of Inaana (spiritual wisdom). For the acquisition of wisdom, purity of Buddhi (intellect) is essential. If the intellect is not pure, the senses are likely to go haywire. Purity of the intellect is in fact, essential for every purpose. Saadhanas performed without purity of the heart will be utterly useless, like food cooked in unclean vessels.

The glory of spiritual bliss

Bhaaratheeya culture and the Vedhik texts have proclaimed the glory of Aanandha (spiritual bliss). The Aathmik principle can be understood only in relation to this concept of Bliss. What is the Aathma? Who has seen it? What is the proof for its existence? To answer these questions, here is an illustration. Today is Friday, the 14th April. Who told you these particulars about today? The day did not announce this when it began. You derive this information from a calendar or an almanac. In the same manner the proofs for great spiritual truths are provided in the declarations of the Vedhas. It is only Aathmathathvam (spiritual principle) that reveals the oneness of the universe. The entire cosmos has emanated from the Aathma.

The human being is called Nara in Sanskrit. Nara means Aathma (the Self). Nara is made up of two syllables. 'Na' and 'Ra.' Ra (rah) means that which is perishable. Na-Ra means that which is not perishable. This means that Nara (man) is subject to change in bodily form, but is essentially immortal. He is full of bliss.

But today people are oblivious to this true nature of man. Human values are also forgotten.

People are behaving either like animals or like demons. It is only when people recognise their real human nature and pursue spiritual values, they will realise their sacred divinity.

For all these, devotion is fundamental. Does devotion mean meditation, japa, or observing various austerities? Na Anything done with expectation of reward gets tarnished by the desire for fruits and cannot be deemed real devotion. Devotion has been defined as desireless love for the Lord. Any prayer to God for fulfilment of a desire cannot be called devotion. God should be loved for His own sake. Love should be fostered for its own sake.

True devotion is a combination of selfless service and love. This is illustrated by an episode from the Mahaabhaaratha.

Dharmaja's love for Krishna

Dharmaja, the eldest of the Paandava brothers, ceaselessly adored Krishna. While living in the forest or when he was in Dhuryodhana's court witnessing the dishonouring of Dhraupadhi, or when Abhimanyu was killed in battle, or when the infant Upapaandavas were killed (by Ashvathaama)--in all these situations Dharmaja used to love Krishna with perfect calmness. He used to feel' "Krishna! These joys and sorrows are twins that always go together. Hence there is no need to get elated or depressed. I cannot swerve from my allegiance to your divinity. My love for you is for your own sake and not for the sake of the world. My love is the bond that links you and me. It is like a bridge that connects the OmniSelf and the individual Self."

Such sacred and divine love is being abused today and consequently the results are bad.

You hail this year as new, but it is not new at all. Nor is Maanava (man) a new arrival on earth.

Maa-nava means that which is not (Maa) new (Nava). When man himself is not new, how can the year be new? Time is divided into night and day, weeks and years on the basis of the revolutions of the earth and the moon in relation to the sun. In truth, man should regard every moment as new, every day as new. Man is governed by these changes, but God is unaffected,

God is changeless.

It is only when such sacred truths are understood properly that real devotion will arise in people's hearts.

Fill your hearts with love

For the growth of crops water is essential. But the crops cannot go upto the sky in search of water. For the sake of the crops, the clouds come down and provide water for them. When you pray to God for His own sake, He will take care of everything. Flowers do not invite the bees, but the bees go to them in quest of honey. When we develop the nectar of love in our hearts, God will come to us, like the bee, to drink the nectar. If, on the other hand, you have a plastic flower, no bee will come near it. Likewise only when we fill our hearts with the nectar of love will the Divine enter it.

Today there is perpetual discord between man and man, community and community, village and village, caste and caste. What is the reason? The absence of unity and feeling of common bond.
This accounts for the divisions among people. People should realise that it is the one Divine Self that resides in all beings.
I often tell the students that the one truth proclaimed by all the 18

puraanas (epics) is:
"Paropakarah Punyaaya: Paapaaya parapeedanam" (It is meritorious to help others; it is sinful to harm other's). The term paropakaara should be properly understood. It is not merely rendering help to others in one form or other. The term para-upa- kaara means: Bringing (Kaara) to the proximity (Upa) of God (Para). Purely mundane forms of help cannot be described as paropakaara. They are gross, external and worldly. True paropakaara consists in bringing your life close to the divine. That is punya (merit). Punya does not mean going on pilgrimage or giving gifts. Punya means taking your life close to God. This calls for Ekaathmabhaava (the recognition of the Divine in all beings). Para-peedanam means failing to see the Divine in all beings. That is Paapa (sinful).
Growth of selfishness
Man has progressed a great deal in the physical and scientific fields.
But with regard to morality and spirituality man has declined considerably. The reason is the deep-rooted growth of selfishness over the centuries. The entire human life is permeated with selfishness. This selfishness should be brought under restraint. Only then human life can be meaningful. Man should look at the world from the Divine point of view. Life is full of ups and downs. All these are transient. Man should use what is temporary (the body) as the base for realising what is eternal, the Aathma. These are inter-related.
People should endeavour to understand the Aathmik principle. What is the Aathma? Where is it?
These questions were raised by a king. Where is God? Where does He cast His looks? What does

He do? Few in his court could answer these questions. He then summoned a sage and asked him:
"Where is God?" He replied, "Like butter in milk, He is everywhere."
"Where does God cast His eyes?" asked the king. "In which direction does this lamp shed its light?" asked the sage in return. "It sheds its light in all directions," answered the king. The sage observed- "Likewise, God is effulgent and sees everything everywhere. There is no particular direction for God's vision. He is all-seeing and omnipresent."
The king then asked: "What work does God do?" The sage said: To answer this question I have to assume the role of the preceptor and you should accept the role of the disciple. Are you prepared for this? The King said "Yes." the sage said: "In that case, you better come down from the throne and sit down, while I sit on the throne." When the king sat down the sage remarked:
"This is what God does. He brings down the mighty and elevates the humble, He can make the poor rich and the rich poor. He can do anything. He is all-powerful, all-knowing, and allpervading."
These are true characteristics of God. He is all-pervading like butter in milk. He is all-seeing like the light of a lamp which sends out its rays all around.
God is also all-powerful.
He can do anything.
Faith is essential for everyone Everyone should have this faith in the Divine. Faith is essential for anyone, whether, he is a theist or an atheist. People may judge things as good or bad according to their own predilections.
But for God all things are the same. In this world nothing will appear bad if one views it from the Divine point of view. Seen from the worldly point of view, there will be differences of good and bad.
To experience the Divine, one has to perform good deeds. The Divine is present in every being as Chaithanya (consciousness). This consciousness is also described as Sath-Chith-Aanandha (Being-Awareness-Bliss). Sath means Truth, that which is true and unchanging in all the categories of Time---past, present and future. Truth can be cognised only by truth. Chith means total awareness. To have total awareness you have to have a total vision. You must have complete love to get that vision. To see an object in its totality, and not partially, is total awareness. It is only when there is total awareness of Truth, you can experience the Aanandha

(Bliss Divine). Aanandha is that which is unchanging. To experience Aanandha you have to fill yourself with bliss. How is this to be achieved? Where is Aanandha? Is it in this phenomenal world? You imagine that if you get a certain object you will be happy. But after getting it, how long does the happiness last? The source of enduring bliss is within you. A student thinks that he will be happy if he passes his examination. After passing the examination, he wants to continue his studies. After completing his studies, he is again unhappy because he has no job. After getting a job, he is anxious for a promotion. And so on, at every stage happiness is only momentary, but desires are endless. Bliss cannot be found in worldly objects. The source of enduring bliss is within you. There is no meaning in searching for it elsewhere. Turn your external vision inwards. Close your eyes and try to see within. In this process, bliss will emerge from within you. Some teachers declare: "Give up the world and take hold of God." Do these teachers follow what they preach? No. They are very much in the world and still preach in this manner. It is not possible to give up the world. The world also is a manifestation of God. Unfortunately, people go on looking at this Divine manifestation but do not see it as such. All that you see is a form of the Divine. Do not see it as different from God. Sun presides over the intellect and moon over the mind. In this world, you have to give due recognition to the physical and the phenomenal. From the worldly point of view today is the beginning of a new year in Tamil Nadu. This relates to the sidereal year. The lunar new year began on April 1st. The lunar and sidereal years are not opposed to each other. The moon is not a self-luminous planet. He shines as a result of the sun's light. When sunlight does not fall on the moon, there is darkness on the moon's surface. The moon is the presiding deity for the mind and the sun is the Lord of the eyes. The Vedhas have declared that "The moon came from the mind of the Cosmic Person and the sun from his eyes." The sun and the moon are not separate. The same light comes from both. This truth has to be recognized. The sages have declared that the sun presides over the Buddhi (intellect) and the moon over the manas (mind). If you succumb to the mind you will be deluded by Maaya (worldly illusions).

Follow the Buddhi and you will become a Buddha (The Enlightened One). Buddhi (intellect) is in close proximity to the Aathma (Self). Hence the effulgence of the Aathma falls directly on the Buddhi. The mind receives the light indirectly from the Buddhi. It is Jada (inconscious). It is enveloped in the darkness of ignorance. Man today is inclined to follow the mind rather than the intellect. Hence he is caught up in ignorance, because the mind has no luminosity of its own. It is only when the light from the intellect illumines the mind that man can make a safe journey. "Buddhi-graahyam atheendhriyam" (The intellect has been described as capable of going beyond the reach of the senses). Hence man should be guided by the intellect. Below the intellect is the mind. Below the mind are the senses. Below the senses is the body. Consider the relationship between the body and God. The hands, the eyes, the ears, the mouth and the nose are organs in the body; all these are limbs of the body. The body is a limb of Society. Society is a limb of humanity. Humanity is a limb of Prakrithi (Nature). Nature is a limb of the Divine. This is the integral relationship between the human body and God. Dehi (the indweller in the body) and God are one. The body is a moving temple. Without the indwelling spirit, the body is only a corpse fit to be burnt or buried. Man has to be sustained by faith in the power of God. Without that faith Kama, despite all his prowess, died ingloriously. Arjuna was victorious because of faith in Krishna. Man should recognise the divinity within him and should be guided by the Divine charioteer. Develop love for God. That love will take you to God. Observe three maxims in life: Love of God, fear of sin and morality in society. Then, in all situations, God will stand by you. Every moment is auspicious if you dedicate your actions to God. If your mind is pure, other things do not matter. Discourse in the Sai Ramesh Mandapam on 14-4-1995, Tamil New Year Day. 10. Fill your hearts with love of God. HUMAN life is extremely precious. There are five sheaths in the human body. Annamaya, Praanamaya, Manomaya, Vijnaanamaya and Aanandhamaya Koshas. Of these five sheaths (the food, the vital, the mental, the integral awareness and bliss sheaths), man has in a large measure the Vijnaanamaya Kosha (integral awareness) This Vijnaana (Awareness) is not present in other beings. For this reason man is regarded as supreme among all living beings. He has qualities and capacities not present in other creatures. Hence human birth is considered exceptional.

Moreover, man alone has the capacity to recognise the past, the present and future and to take note of changes occurring over time.

There is one common quality present in all living beings: Moha (attachment). This quality is present equally in human beings. But man alone has the competence to overcome this Moha and attain Moksha (liberation). The Maaya (illusion) which envelops man drives him to take to wrong courses. Maaya has three qualities. Satwa, Rajas and Thamas (purity, passion and inertia).

Through these qualities man tends to forget his divinity and humanness and behave like an animal. The three qualities of Maaya and the three forms of Moha combine to make man a demon. The three forms of Moha are: desire for wealth, attachment to the wife and attachment to children. These three make man a slave to Moha. The man who conquers these three desires can transcend Moha. When Moha declines, Moksha becomes attainable. Liberation is the elimination of Moha (attachment). Everyone should strive to bring under control these three desires.

Population and spirituality
In earlier times, the world's population was around 100 crores (one billion). At that time the number of persons engaged in spiritual pursuits or in the quest for liberation was sizable. Today the world's population has grown, the seekers of liberation have dwindled. With the growth of population, spirituality should also grow alongside.

Man has two essential organs: Head and heart. Pravritthi (interest in the external) arises from the head (the mind), while Nivritthi (interest in the internal) arises from the heart. What we are witnessing is an excessive growth of thoughts arising in the head. This means that involvement with the external world is growing from minute to minute. But internal feelings are not developing with steadiness and purity. Aeons change. The world is changing. But man's heart is not getting transformed. Man is growing, but his heart is not expanding. It is only when the heart widens that humanness will find fulfilment.

Why is the heart of man not broadening at the present time? The reason is the secular education that is prevalent today. This educational system is diverting man's attention towards the external world. The student concentrates his attention on worldly and technical knowledge. He devotes no attention to knowledge of spiritual and ethical importance. True devotion, should be firm and unwavering. All pose as devotees. All appear to be spiritual aspirants. But when you enquire into their actions, you find they are shallow and pretentious. The proverb says: "When troubles come, think of Venkataramana (God)." Similarly these so-called devotees think of God when they have troubles, but forget Him when the troubles are over. True devotion should be firm and unwavering, unselfish and free from any expectation of reward. Devotional activities should be unaffected by any kind of troubles and tribulations, by censure or praise. That alone is Bhakthi (devotion). It is when a man develops such devotion that he would be able to experience the Divine. Students today are completely lost in studies which are worldly- and ephemeral. Spiritual knowledge is ridiculed. Spirituality is treated as a kind of hysteria. Once an ochre-robed person, was going in a bazaar. School boys and college students followed him, talking flippantly about him. He took no notice of them. He was proceeding from one village to another. The students indulged in all kinds of abusive language with a view to provoking the mendicant. But the mendicant walked on and sat under a tree on the outskirts of the village. The students went on railing at him and exhausted all their stock of abuse. As they were silent the mendicant asked them, "Children, have you any more words to be used against me? Come out with them even now, as I have to go to the next village." One insolent youth among them asked: "What will happen when you go to the next village?" The mendicant replied "Child, I will do nothing. Praise or blame attaches only to this body and not to my Self. But, there are in the next village a large number of people who have high regard for me. If you indulge in your abuses of me there, the villagers will trash you. To save you from this experience I am informing you in advance." On hearing this, the students had a change of heart. They felt: "In spite of all the abuses we levelled at him, this noble being was totally unaffected, did not lose his temper and taught us the right behaviour." They prostrated at the feet of the mendicant and craved for his Kshama (forgiveness).

To forgive is Divine Forgiveness is a quality that every man should possess. That forgiveness is Truth itself, it is Righteousness, it is the Vedha. It is the supreme virtue in this world. Hence, all people should develop the quality of forgiveness. People should remain unaffected by what others may say. A true man is one who overcomes the ups and downs of life with fortitude. One should not recoil before reverses of fortune. One should bravely face them and overcome them.
 Whoever aspires to win the grace of God should cultivate at the outset the quality of Kshama. It is a divine quality. Man is permeated from head to foot by the six mortal vices' lust, anger greed, attachment, pride and envy. His heart is the source of qualities like sympathy, compassion, non violence and peace. The very term, Hridhaya, means the place-- Hridh--which has Dhaya (Compassion). People get agitated over trifles. They should not dissipate their energies in this manner. There are innumerable talents latent in man, of which he is unaware.
 Win God's grace through love Naaradha wanted to teach Sathyabhaama the supreme greatness of some human qualities of which she was not aware. He brought about a situation in which Krishna was to be weighed in a balance and reacquired by Sathyabhaama by offerings in the other balance. All her jewels and wealth could not tilt the balance in her favour. Ultimately she prayed to Rukmini to come to her rescue. Rukmini came, prayed to Krishna, saying that "if it is true that God submits himself to a devotee who offers with love a leaf, a flower, a fruit or some water, let my thulasi leaf turn the scales against Krishna."
 The esoteric meaning of this prayer is that the body should be considered as a leaf, the heart as a flower, virtue as fruit and the tears of joy flowing from the devotee's eyes as the water offered to the Divine in a spirit of complete surrender. Tears should be shed only for God and not for anyone else. Whatever one's grief one should not shed tears. Tears may flow out of joy or enthusiasm or ecstasy, but not from a feeling of sorrow.
Naaradha enacted the entire scene to demonstrate to Sathyabhama what glorious qualities Rukmini possessed and the greatness of her devotion. He told Sathyabhaama: "The Lord will not succumb to wealth. He will yield only to goodness. Rukmini is a supremely good woman.

Follow her example." In this manner Naaradha humbled Sathyabhaama's pride.
 Man is endowed with limitless, latent abilities, which will manifest themselves at the appropriate moment. Every devotee has these unseen and unknown abilities. Man contains within himself all the powers and all the substances that exist anywhere in the cosmos. All objects in the world, including gold and diamonds, derive their value from man. Man is more valuable than all the things of the world. Unfortunately, today⁵ the human being, who is inherently divine, is devalued and degraded. Human values are born with man. They are not got from outside. Man in his ignorance is not aware of these values. When man sheds his ignorance, he will experience his divine nature.
 Image of God can be seen in the mirror of Nature People want to see God. How can they do it? Are they able to see themselves? They need a mirror to see themselves. Nature is the mirror in which the image of God can be seen. A mirror needs a mercury coating to be able to reflect an object. To see God in Nature, the mirror has to be coated with the mercury of love. Prema (Love) is vital for everything. Today, in the place of love we have hatred and aversion instead of compassion.
 What is the inner significance of describing God as Hridhayavaasi (Indweller in the heart)? He resides in the form of Dhaya (compassion) in the heart. If there is no compassion it is no heart at all. I advise, the students to avoid excessive speech and not to give way to anger.
 Everyone should realise that God is with him, beside him and around him all the time.
Mukundan (who had addressed the gathering earlier) said that "If you take ten steps towards Bhagavaan, he takes hundred steps towards you." But whither should you take these ten steps?
 No one seems to think about that. If you take ten steps towards evil, falsehood, injustice and wickedness, will I take hundred steps in that direction? No. Your steps should be in the direction of what is good. What is good? The steps should lead upwards spiritually. So, if you ascend ten steps, I shall help you to climb a hundred steps. You should move in the right direction, not the wrong one. To the extent you yearn and pine for God, God will pine for you a thousandfold. You can have no conception of Thaapam (God's pining). Your pining is Thamas, God's pining is thapas (penance). The difference between the two should be understood.

Kuchela and Krishna

God offers you in return manifold what you offer to Him. This is what

Kuchela told his wife. He went to Krishna to ask for many material gifts. But on seeing the Divine face of Krishna, he forgot all his desires. On his return to his native village he found that big mansions had sprung up at the spot of his old dwelling. Kuchela's wife came out, finely dressed and wearing many ornaments, and greeted her husband with the remark: "Lord, see what wonderful things Shri

Krishna has given to you?" Kuchela looked at everything and said: "I did not ask Bhagavaan for anything. I did not speak to him about our domestic situation. Is it necessary for me to say anything to the omnipresent, all knowing Lord?" Kuchela then described in detail to his wife how Krishna had received him in His palace and how He hugged

Kuchela to His bosom and showered His love on him. "How can I describe His loving kindness?

Is there anyone like him who can confer all prosperity on one after receiving fistful of parched rice? He is Love incarnate and Love is He." (Svaami recited a Thelugu poem).

Today the devotee behaves differently towards God. He goes with a mountain of desires to the temple and offers a small coconut. This is not what you should offer to God. What you should offer is a pure, unsullied heart. If you offer little, God gives you much in return. This means that some kind of offering should be made to God.

Dhraupadhi offered a grain of rice to Krishna with devotion and Krishna, in return, appeased the hunger of thousands of Dhurvaasa's disciples. God needs nothing for Himself. Whatever you offer is for your own sake.

What God seeks is a heart filled with love

Today, Kerala celebrates the beginning of the new year. Keralites prepare a variety .of dishes (aviyal, poriyal, etc.) to be offered to God as prasaadham. The offering is only placed in the shrine. But it is all consumed by them later. If God were to consume the offering, it is unlikely that any Naivdhyam (offering) would be made at all. What you have to offer to God is your heart. What God seeks is a heart filled with love. There is nothing greater in the world than such a heart.

We are celebrating the advent of the new year. But what we should celebrate is the coming of every new moment. A year is made up of seconds, minutes, hours, days and months. Why wait for a whole year? Greet every new second as a .new moment for celebration. Contemplate on God: every moment as your life-breath. To make God approach you, you have to engage yourself in the service of others, in conferring joy on them, and in activities which will please

God. Subject all that you do to the test of divine pleasure.

Although the new year is celebrated by Andhras, Tamils, and Keralites on different dates, the year is only one. How often have these festivals been celebrated?

What has been achieved thereby? Nothing! How far have people earned God's grace? How are they enjoying it? Without seeking answers to these questions, people cannot have God-realisation, however long they may be with Bhagavaan. The Gopikas prayed for proximity to Krishna in whatever form He manifested Himself--as a flower, or a tree or a mountain or the sky.

They were totally innocent of spiritual exercises of any kind. They dedicated all their actions to Krishna. Developing such love in your hearts, You should sow the seeds of love in the hearts of people who are bereft of love today. Water the hearts with love, grow the plants of love and enjoy the harvest of love.

Discourse in the Sai Ramesh Mandap, Brindhaavan on 1.5-4-1995.

Joy is your birth-right; Shaanthi is your inmost nature. The Lord is your Self and support. Do not discard it; do not be led away from the path of faith by stories invented by malice and circulated by spite.

11. Nearness to God

Vedhaaham etham Purusham Mahaantham

Aadithyavarnam thamsah parasthaath

(Purusha Shuktham).

IN ANCIENT days the sages, who were doing Thapas and finally had a vision of the Reality, declared that they had realised-the Divine, whose effulgence was that of the sun, beyond the darkness of ignorance. They also taught that God is the embodiment of Truth and had to be experienced as such. They declared that one who does not see this truth is akin to an animal. That is why there is the saying that one who is revelling in untruth is only .an animal.

Truth issues from Prema. In this world there is nothing greater than prema. The more you love, the more blissful you become. Divinity is the embodiment of love.

Love shines as the eternal truth in every one's heart. However, it will be dormant in the heart of the selfish. Prema shines only in the heart of the person who is selfless. Love cannot co-exist with ego and pomp. Love is the royal path that can take you to the highest state of the Divine. This love has to be experienced and shared with all. When love is directed towards the ephemeral world it is Anuraaga (attachment). When it is directed towards God it is true love.

Worldly experiences confer only temporary happiness. Love towards the Paramaathma (the Supreme Self), who is eternal and changeless, will confer eternal bliss. Every individual should know the difference between Prema and Anuraaga. Many people profess that they love God.

But, in reality; not even one in a million loves God in the true sense of the term. They may love God for securing some selfish material benefits. This is not true devotion at all.

True devotion is unpolluted by selfish motives

What is devotion? It is not merely offering several types of worship or going on pilgrimage.

Unalloyed and true love for love's sake alone constitutes devotion. True devotion is the love flowing from a pure heart unpolluted by selfish motives. Love is the intimate bond of relationship between the devotee and the Lord. There are nine types of devotion. But they are not equal to Prema (Pure Love).

All the 18 yogas mentioned in the Bhagavath Geetha, such as Inaana Yoga, Karma Yoga, Vibhuuthi Yoga etc., are contained in Bhakthi yoga. There is nothing beyond this. Do you want to realise God? Do you want to tread the spiritual path and redeem your life? Then, it is enough if you pursue the Prema Marga (path of pure love).

There is no power greater than Prema (love) in this world because it is selfless and pure. Though several yogas are available for practice, each and every yoga contains an element of selfishness.

But prema, is free from selfishness. It is only because of the absence of such selfless love that chaos, conflicts and confusion are prevalent in the world. One who is interested in the welfare of humanity should practise this principle of true love. The life of an individual bereft of love is a sheer waste.

Sages spent their time in the forests amidst wild animals. They lived amicably side by side with them. The animals did not harm these sages. What is the reason? The sages had no weapons at all. They had the sole weapon of love. With this weapon they were able to tame the wild animals.

But, in these days, while calling themselves human beings, men are behaving worse than animals. The reason is rank selfishness. Whatever they think, say or do, selfishness is the basic motive. The result is they are not able to enjoy peace.

From truth to peace

How is peace to be got? When you plant the seed of Truth in the heart and make faith take deep root, with the rain of chanting God's name, peace blossoms, yielding the fruit of Liberation.

Therefore, every human being should sow the seed of Truth in his heart. The deeper the root of faith goes down, the stronger will be the tree of life. You must provide water for the flourishing growth' of the tree by means of Bhajana and Dhaiva Chinthana (singing the glory of God). Only then the flower of Shaanthi (peace) will bloom and from this the fruit of liberation will be attained.

Human life has four stages. It can be described as a four-storeyed mansion. Any structure can be safe and sound only when the foundation is strong. Brahmacharya (Celibacy) is the foundation for the structure of life. The first floor is the stage of Grihastha (householder leading a married life). The second floor is Vaanaprastha (preparatory to renunciation) and the third floor is Sanyaasa (Renunciation).

This year is called Yuva (Youth). Youth should develop strongly the foundation of celibacy so that when they reach the other stages they can be ideal persons. They should develop Prema towards God. This is the only way to build their strength.

People think that the world is separate from them. The entire universe is in the heart of each individual. "Vishvam Vishnuvaruupam." The universe is but a manifestation of the Divine, which is within the heart of every individual. Vishnu is the cause and the universe is the effect.

All the three worlds are within everyone

There are three states of consciousness in man--the waking state, the dream state and the deep sleep state. All the three states are in every individual. The three governing powers in these states are Vishva, Thaijasa and Prajna respectively. The Gaayathri manthra "Om Bhur Bhuvas Suvah" is related to these three. We think that Bhuuloka is the world that we live in, Bhuvarloka is svarga and Suvarloka is beyond that. This is not correct. All the three worlds are in our heart only. The outside world we see is the material world formed of inert matter.

You may ask how this can be called inert when there is a lot of movement. The world that you see is Bhu and the power that causes the movement is: Bhuvah or Praana shakthi (Life-force) which can be termed as Vibration. It is the force of vibration that activates all the limbs of the body. When air is pumped into a tyre we see this force in play which causes the tyre to bloat.

Praana (Life-force) is Bhuvah. Because of the Prajnaana, which is inside, the Life-force is able to cause vibration and activate the limbs. The source of prajna is Suvaha (Radiation). When you analyse in this manner, it will be seen that Bhur-Bhuvah-Suvah represents the forces of Radiation, Vibration and Materialisation.

It is the existence of these potencies in man that makes human birth very precious. But its value is now being mined by people getting immersed in fleeting sensual pleasures. Humanness is entirely forgotten. It cannot be acquired by learning from a teacher or studying text books. It is born with the human being. It is there in everyone. People are not able to understand this truth today.

Reason for codification of Vedhas by Vyaasa

The Vedhas are infinite and human life is limited. How to master the infinite within the short span of one's life? Keeping this problem in view, Sage Vyaasa codified the Vedhas into four major divisions and named them Rig, Yajur, Saama and Atharva.

Vedhas. Rig Vedha is Manthra-Svaruupa (consisting of Mantras). The Yajur Vedha is a compilation of rituals and the Sama Vedha is a compilation of riks set to music. In order to maintain the health of the individual and ensure the protection of the country, the Atharva Vedha was compiled. Sage Vyaasa, who codified these four Vedhas and wrote 18 puraanas, finally gave one stanza as the essence of all the puraanas, namely, "It is meritorious to render help to others. It is sinful to cause harm to them," "Paropakaarah punyaaya paapaaya parapeedanam." The inner meaning of the declaration by Vyaasa should be understood by everyone. Para means Brahma, Upa means nearness and Kara means go. So this term Paropakaara means travel towards the Aathma and go nearer the Paramaathma. Chanting the name of God or doing other forms of worship will not help you to go near God, though they are good deeds. It is only by selfless service you can get nearer to God. This is real Punya.

"Paapaaya Parapeedanam." According to worldly interpretation, this means that it is a sin to hurt others. But there is an inner meaning for this. Para means Aathma. Peedanam means 'hurting.' The same principle of Aathma is in everyone. You should not hurt the Aathma. What is meant by this is that you should realise the oneness of the Aathma in all. If you do not realise this and act contrary to the principle, it is 'hurting.'

When there is Prema there is no grief

You are considering the bodies which are different in form as different from you. To do so is sin.

You must only see the Aathma in all. There are many bulbs of different shapes and sizes here in this hall. But the electric current that makes them shine is only one.

The Aathmathathva, the principle of Aathma, is the one current that activates all the bodies which are like bulbs of different hues and shapes. "To see diversity is sin" says Vyaasa. He taught the world to see the One in the many. You should follow this principle and develop Prema, the principle of love, towards all. When there is Prema there is no grief.

You need not waste time in trying to study all the sacred texts, as they are innumerable and your life-span is very short. All that is needed is to cultivate the Premathathva (Love principle). There is no greater power than this in the world. It is the supreme among all virtues.

Real love is beyond the three categories of time past, present and future. Love towards God, the permanent changeless entity, alone is fit to be called Prema.

The meaning of Gaayathri Manthra

In the Gaayathri Manthra, the unity of body, mind and soul is depicted in the first line as "Bhur-Bhuvah-Suvaha." The next line "Bhargo Dhevasya Dheemahi" means "Throw away the darkness." "Dheeyo yonah Prachodhayaath" means: "Let the effulgence of the Divine dispel the darkness of ignorance." Gaayathri is pervading everywhere. It consists of three deities, Gaayathri, Saavithri and Sarasvathi. Of these, the first one is master of the senses. The second is the teacher of truth and the third is the master of speech. Hence it is Trinity of the senses, the mind and speech. Gaayathri is hailed as Chandhasaam maathah (the Mother of all Vedhas).

Gaayathri has five faces and is the embodiment of all deities--Sarva dhevathaa Svaruupam.

Sthothra (description of the glory), Dhyaana (meditation) and Praarthana (prayer) are all contained in the Gaayathri Manthra. When does a prayer become meaningful? It is only when you stabilise your mind and turn it towards God. The basis for this is to meditate, pray and experience. It is essential to achieve harmony in thought, word and deed. Gaayathri is teaching this great lesson.

Significance of Upanayanam

Every small word or phrase in a manthra has immense inner meaning. It cannot be dismissed as superstition. Modern education has ruined our ancient Bhaaratheeya culture. You should know the meaning of the manthras. People want the fruits of meritorious deeds but they indulge in sinful action. How can you get good results when your action is faulty or sinful? Youth today must pledge themselves to speak the truth, develop love and have unshakable faith in God. They will then be able to establish peace in the world. This is the significance of Yagnopaveetham (the sacred thread ceremony). Upanayanam is a Samskaara (sacrament) that makes a boy fit for pursuing the highest wisdom. There is no difference between one child and another at the time of birth. All are born out of the mother's womb only. This is the first stage of life (sudra). The second stage is getting the upadhesha of Gaayathri at the time of Upanayanam, when the boy becomes a Dhviya (twice-born). He is then purified.

The third stage is Vipra, when one has mastered the study of the Vedhas. The fourth stage is Braahmana when he actually realises the Brahman through the knowledge of the Self. One becomes a Braahmana not by birth but only when one realises the Supreme Brahman. One becomes a Braahmana by action and not by birth.

Prahlaadha said that a father can be proud of his son not at the time of the son's birth but only when the son attains fame as a good man. It is only then that his birthday can be celebrated.

Those of you who have had this sacred teaching of Gaayathri today are very lucky. On this very auspicious day; you have all taken a second birth. You must forget the past. The present is very important. From today onwards you must develop love of God and get a good name. Though God is the Creator of all beings, you must understand that while God created mud and water, it is the potter that is responsible for creating a pot by mixing the mud and water, similarly God has created chaithanya (consciousness) and jada (matter). Your father and mother have together given you your body and brought you up. It is, therefore, your duty to make your parents happy.

If you don't please them, or if you ignore them, you cannot be happy. You must develop love for your parents, study well, imbibe the sacred culture of Bhaarith and lead noble lives as ideal sons of your parents.

Gaayathri will protect your body, make your intellect shine and improve your power of speech.

That is why Gaayathri is considered to be very important for this second stage of your life, which you are entering today. How should you live? You should live in accordance with the Upanishathic prayer' "Sahanaa Vavathu Sahanou Bhunakthu Sahaveeryam Karavaavahai" (Let us grow together, live together and develop love together). From such living, you get divinity.

Unity leads to purity and purity to divinity. Where there is no unity, you get enmity and hatred.

All mothers are Goddesses

Today is Eswaramma day, the day of the Maathru Dhevatha (Mother Goddess). All mothers are goddesses. That is why in Bhaarith, people follow the maxim: Esteem the mother, the father, the teacher and the guests as God. Once when Seetha was teaching how to worship God, Raama intervened and said: "Oh simple-minded one! Who is greater in the world than the mother and the father? They know our difficulties and needs. They are able to understand our feelings. They are able to fulfill all our wants. Having such known entities who take interest in your welfare, why should you go after unknown entities?" At all times, the parents are there looking after you, You have to worship them. The mother can be compared to the earth and the father to the seed.

Unless the seed is sown in the earth the plant will not sprout. You cannot ignore the father and mother who are responsible for your birth and growth. Even if you become the Prime Minister you must remember you owe your birth in the world to your mother. You must develop humility and discrimination as a mark of education. You should not discard love of God at any time. If you forget God, you are not human but demonic. Money, beauty and youth will not last long.

Nowadays, people are not getting rid of attachment and arrogance even in old age. I composed a drama when I was young under the title, "Cheppinatlu Chesthaaraa?" (Do you do as you say?)

Now I have to ask: "Cheppinatlu Chesinaara?" (Have you done as I told you?). If you go on concentrating on your family alone till death, what is it you derive finally? None of these people will come with you on your final journey. It is the love of God that will come with you even after death. Develop love and sanctify your life with that Prema principle. Chant the Gaayathri morning, noon and evening. You do so many things. Why don't you chant this Gaayathri? I bless all of you that you may sanctify your life in this way, making it useful and meaningful.

Discourse in Sai Ramesh Hall, Brindhaavan on 6-5-1995.

12. Restoration of Moral Values

Knowledge enhances man's status;

it is a Hidden Treasure.

Knowledge confers Joy, Fame and Happiness;

it is the teacher of teachers,

It is one's kinsman in travels abroad;

it is a third Eye for Man.

Even kings adore Knowledge' and not Wealth;

without Knowledge one is an animal.

(Sanskrit Shloka)

STUDENTS! Teachers and lovers of education! In this work-a-day world, knowledge is the adornment for man. It is hidden wealth. It is the basis of fame, happiness and comforts. It is a teacher for teachers. It serves as a relation when one goes abroad. It is like a third eye for a man.

Such sacred knowledge qualifies the person for honour at the courts of kings. It is more precious than riches. A man without such sacred knowledge is verily like an animal.

Embodiments of love! Just as when a child is born, he is able to recognise his mother, likewise every student should recognise his motherland and its history and culture. The Motherland is the land of his birth. The nation's culture is like one's father. Without understanding the country's culture one cannot understand the true state of the nation.

Bhaarith's culture is unexcelled. Bhaaratheeyas were known for their adherence to Truth and Dharma. Justice was their life breath.

Bhaarith's culture represents the eternal verities which are unaffected by the ravages of time or the vicissitudes of history. Students should realise that if they cherish Truth and Righteousness, the nation will get automatically protected. Success seeks Truth and Righteousness and not wealth or possessions. Decline in human values Students acquire human values, in addition to their scholastic, intellectual and other attainments.

It is the decline in human values that accounts for the degradation of human-beings in the country today.

Technology has made great strides in modern times. The advances in other fields need no mention. The revolutionary advances in technology have brought about many changes in national life. The most important change is the decay of morals. All spiritual and ethical values have been undermined. Moral standards have collapsed.

Hence, students today should be more concerned about good qualities than about knowledge.

Society can progress only through men of virtue. Every student should have the welfare of society in view and have service as the ideal.

What is education? It is not mere acquaintance with books. Can mere ability to read and write be regarded as education or even the acquisition of degrees? True education is associated with the ideal goals of life. Today all ideals have been perverted. "Qualities like compassion and goodness have been replaced by unrighteous conduct. The ancient teachings have been given up.

Education has gone astray," says a Kannada poem.

India gave the message of peace to the world in ancient times because of its spiritual leadership.

Then, as well as now, the Bhaaratheeya message has been "Let all the people everywhere be happy."

Who are to blame for failure of educational system?

Who are responsible for the failure of the educational system? The parents at home, the teachers in schools and colleges, the leaders of society have failed to set the right examples and hence the students have gone astray. The parents at home tell the children one thing and act differently themselves. Teachers likewise teach one thing and act differently themselves. Leaders also preach one thing and practise another. Students are intelligently observing these double standards. They are induced to take to wrong courses by this divorce between words and deeds.

Obviously, the elders are setting a bad example. The parents are not anxious to see that their children develop good qualities and lead ideal lives. Their affection for children is natural but it should not be, as in the case of Dhritaraashtra, such as to encourage the children in evil ways. It is only if children are corrected and punished for their misconduct that they will learn to behave properly in society.

Every student today wants to lead a comfortable life. But they have no idea what comfort really means. They argue that comfort consists in eating, drinking and leading a free and easy life. But spending one's time in this manner is unworthy of a human being.

 The preciousness of human life has to be realised. To lead an animal existence is unbecoming for any student or anyone else.
 The first need is self-restraint and control of the senses. Only then can true bliss be secured. This alone will confer true freedom.
 Freedom emanates from Spirit
 Freedom does not mean living as you please. Sva-Thanthra (True freedom) emanates from the Spirit. The goal of self-realisation can be attained only through selfcontrol. Knowledge of the Self, control of the senses and Self-realisation constitute true freedom.
Bhaaratheeyas got freedom (from foreign rule) but have not achieved national unity. Unity is essential for achieving anything, as has been declared in the Vedhik saying' "Let us live together, strive together, impart to others what we have learnt and lead a life of harmony and unity."
 India has never lacked, from ancient times, people of knowledge, ability, heroism and courage.
 But, because of absence of unity among them the country became a prey to foreign conquerors.
 Students should therefore learn the lesson of unity. The Nation's progress and good name are dependent on the behaviour of the students. Hence, their conduct should be exemplary. Today's students are the future leaders of the country. From now on, you should develop good qualities and cherish ideals of service to the nation. Become heroes in action and plunge into society for service, with self-confidence.
 Today, people talk about egalitarianism, a new social order and so on. There is no need for a new social system. We need only boys and girls of high character. Only they can save the country and not those who indulge in subversive activities. Humanity is one. If you strive to serve the country unitedly, Bhaarith will make enviable progress. If all the ninety crores of people in Bhaarith act as one, Bhaarith will stand forth as an ideal nation.
 The ancient virtues
 There are many things about Bhaarith's achievements in the past which you should know. What did humanness mean in the ancient times?
 Forbearance was esteemed as the highest quality.
 Adherence to truth was the strictest form of penance.
 Maternal love was deemed the sweetest feeling.

Charity was esteemed greater than life itself.
 (Thelugu poem).
 All these have been forgotten, alas, under the regime of our rulers today. Bhaaratheeyas are unaware of their own past greatness and strength.
 What glory was there in the past! What spirit of sacrifice! What sense of justice! What devotion to Dharma! All this is forgotten today. Why? Because of limitless selfishness. Only when selfishness and hatred are given up can we enjoy peace. Humanness calls for harmony in thought, word and deed. Today this harmony is totally lacking.
 Pursue studies with welfare of society in view
 The educational process should aim at developing character and not merely intellectual abilities.
 Of what use is it to get a Doctorate without character? Education should have a practical bias which will make the student useful for himself and society. Students! Pursue your studies with the welfare of society in view. Develop love towards the Motherland, realising that the mother and the Motherland are greater than heaven itself. You owe so much to Bhaarith. Do your duty to Bhaarith.
Bhaaritha-Maatha (Mother Bhaarith) is greatly concerned about the state of her children. You must be good and become ideal students. You must win fame for the country. You must share in the prosperity of the nation with all others. To whatever country you may belong, cherish 'love for your country. "All are one. Be alike to everyone." Don't give room for differences of race, creed or nation. There is only one race, the race of humanity. There is only one caste, the caste of spirituality. There is only one language, the language of the heart. There is only one God, the Supreme Divinity, that is present in all beings and permeates the entire cosmos. The Divine is present in every atom. Everything in the world is composed of energy and matter. Einstein called it "Supreme Power." Bhaaratheeyas described it as Dhivya-Shakthi (Divine Energy).
 In every human being this divine energy is present. It is this which makes man live and survive.
 Students! There are many here who have come to study science. Scientists have invented many new kinds of machinery and instruments. But the scientists have not recognized that there is one machine which exceeds all other machines put together. The scientists have produced satellites which go round the earth and spacecraft that can land on the moon.

They are harnessing solar energy. They have made atom bombs and hydrogen bombs. There is one machine that is more powerful than all these. That is the human body. Man is the maker of all these machines. The marvellous powers of the human body are not fully recognized by any one. You should examine your own potentialities. It is man's potent power that has created all the wonderful machines. All the powers in the world are within you. The outside world is a reflection of your inner being.

Students should recognise this truth. Various scientists are being praised. But all powers are within you, electrical power, magnetic power, the power of light and fire and radiation. Every human being is a computer. Every individual is mini-generator. Every person is a lamp and a radio station.

Tension and temper destroy humanness

Our ancients knew the secret of enjoying peace. Today even a tiny tot suffers from "tension."

Where there is tension there is temper. Tension and temper are jointly destroying humanness.

How can peace be found? Peace has to be found within each of us. You are the embodiment of peace and truth, You are the embodiment of love. Instead of realising the truth about themselves students are engaged in studying various subjects, thereby missing the main object of education.

Just as the most complicated and expensive machine cannot work without electric power, the human machine cannot work without divine energy.

Students! You have a powerful machine in your body. Activate it with Divine energy. You have all the power you need within yourself. Being unaware of it, you misuse it You should not waste time, which once lost cannot be recalled. Utilise all your learning for the service of society.

Experience the life Divine, by putting into practice a fraction of what you learn from the Geetha.

Practise any one of the human values. Prema is the basis for all -the values. Action with love is right conduct. Speak with love and it becomes-truth. Thinking with love results in peace.

Understanding with love leads to non-violence. For everything love is primary. Where there is love there is no place for hatred.

Cultivate humility and discipline

Make right use of the period of youth. Banish conceit. Respect your parents and elders. Cultivate humility and discipline. A boy is judged by his behaviour and a man by his manners. A devotee is judged by his discipline. In these summer classes you must try to understand how to realise Divinity, how to lead a spiritual life in the work-a-day world, and how to render service in the best way possible and how to lead an ideal life.

The poet Eliot defined culture as "a way of life." But Bhaaratheeya Culture has far wider connotations. Life itself is culture. What is done from moment to moment is an expression of culture. Having been 'born in this sacred land of Bhaarith you should learn to behave in such a way that you please Bhaarathmaatha. Mother Bhaarith is deeply distressed not only over the conduct of students but all others in this nation. No section of the people is behaving properly.

Even in the field of spirituality, the Motherland has cause for grief. The garb is changed, but not the qualities. Treat the Motherland as the mother and our culture as the father. Students today have no patriotism. Students must be prepared to give even their lives to protect the integrity and honour of the motherland.

We are unaware of the significance of being Hindus. What does Hindu mean?

H for Humanity
I for Individuality
N for Nationality
D for Divinity
U for Unity

It is when all the five qualities are present, we have a real Hindu. Of these humanity is most important.

Students! Make best use of the next ten days and try to practise what you learn. You have listened today to the addresses of the Chief Minister and the Education Minister of Karnaataka.

You must try to imbibe the ideals they have set forth before you and live upto them. The Chief Minister has been deeply concerned about the state of the nation and of Karnaataka for many years. Even now he is keen to do some lasting good to the country. Well-meaning persons are always confronted with obstacles. Those troubles only serve to ennoble them, just as a diamond gets added value from more cuts.

Students should face all the challenges of life and serve the country well.

Discourse at the Inauguration of the Summer Course in Indian Culture and Spirituality in the Brindhavan Campus Auditorium on 20-5-1995.

13. Experience the Divine

STUDENTS! To illumine a lighted lamp, you don't need another lamp.

Likewise, it is foolish to try to illumine the effulgent Aathma by the light of any other knowledge. It is a sign of ignorance to embark on a search for the Aathma principle which is all-pervading, effulgent and unchanging.

No individual tries to search himself in the world outside. Similarly, is it not sheer ignorance to search for the Aathma when he himself is the Aathma?

Bhaarath has been propagating this sacred truth over many aeons. Bhaarath is the birth-place of spiritual enquiry, generosity and righteousness. It was the home of peace and non-violence.

Nowhere else in the world can be seen that interest in the pursuit of Truth which Bhaarath had.

The seven great sages were born in Bhaarath. It is the land which gave birth to the Aadhikavi aalmeeki and the great codifier of the Vedhas, the sage Vyaasa. It is the sacred land where Lord.

Krishna delivered His message. It is the sacred land where Raama established Raama Raajya. It is the most sacred land of the Buddha. From ancient times, Bhaarath has never been bereft of people revelling in righteousness and charity and dedicated to the contemplation of God.

Like food for body; God is vital for mind

In the contemplation of God there can be no difference of caste or creed, no distinctions based on age or language. It is open to everyone. Like food for the body; God is vital for the mind. In the practice of devotion there may be some ludicrous exercises. But even in such exercises, there is a spiritual under-current.

For instance, a student may pray to God for passing in his examination. A litigant may pray for success in his dispute. Why go so far? Some people pray even for securing a seat in a bus! In this manner Bhaaratheeyas have looked to God for help in trivial and serious matters. This may be regarded as a form of craziness or a kind of religious delusion, or even foolishness. Whatever people may say, each one is entitled to his madness. Each has a right to his beliefs, his faith and his appetite. No one has the authority to deny their right. Their beliefs are their business.

However, beliefs may require some basis. The discovery of a bridegroom does not decide the marriage of a bride. Finding some money will not ensure the launching of a business. Other accessories are needed for the purpose. By merely learning the alphabet, one cannot start writing letters. Letter-writing calls for knowledge of words and sentences. Likewise, knowledge of worldly matters will not enable the understanding of God. Spiritual knowledge is also necessary.

The acquisition of spiritual knowledge calls for enquiry into truth. To start with, every man has to understand the nature of the universe. He should also understand the life principle. Only those who understand the nature of living beings in the Universe can know the secret of the Divine.

Science and spirituality

From ancient times, wise sages and scientists have been investigating the secrets of the Universe.

Galileo discovered some facts about the movement of planets. The earth is going round the sun at the rate of 18000 miles per second. It completes the round in 365 days. Who is responsible for the earth's motion? Why is it rotating? On what basis is it revolving? We find that night and day are caused by the earth revolving on its axis. The earth's motion round the sun is the cause of seasons, which enable man to raise food, etc. Whatever the Divine does, whether it is something small or great, it is for the good of mankind. There is a power at work about which we are ignorant. This was described as the Ajnaatha Shakthi (the unknown power). The ancients called it Dhivya Shakthi (power of God).

Another scientist, exploring the secrets of Nature, came to the conclusion that understanding the powers of Nature means understanding God. The great scientist, Einstein, discovered the convertibility of matter and energy and declared that energy is convertible into various forms but cannot be created or destroyed.

Students who perform experiments in the laboratory should bear in mind an important truth.

They know that water is made up of hydrogen and oxygen. But who created hydrogen and oxygen without which there can be no water? Likewise nothing can exist without a basis.

Science is concerned with substances that are liable to change. Spirituality is concerned with the basic unchanging entity.

The term spirituality is bandied about in various ways. We talk about culture and spirituality.

Culture was defined as "a way of life." In Sanskrit parlance, it is called Samskrithi or the refinement of behaviour. It was declared that for this refinement of behaviour spirituality is the means.

What is spirituality? People regard various rituals and forms of worship as spirituality.

Spirituality is concerned with the spirit of love. Science is engaged in "split of love." The splitting process in science results in changes. The "Spirit of love" in spirituality is permanent and unchanging. Hence, culture grows out of the spirit of love. There can be no culture without love. Spirituality implies a power that is associated with love.

Einstein felt that the unchanging power that underlies energy may be described as divine. But he could not go any further.

Discovering God

However, many spiritual seekers undertook various exercises to discover God. At one time, some aspirants approached Buddha and asked him whether he had any awareness of God. On this issue, Buddha remained silent. Later on he told his disciple "Son, there is no meaning in having controversies over the unknown. Don't go into such questions.

Divinity is not perceptible. It is beyond human comprehension, not within the reach of the mind or speech. However, the Divinity that I know has three forms: Truth, Righteousness and Non-violence. I consider these three as the embodiments of Brahma, Vishnu and Maheshvara. First of all, follow the truth and act according to Dharma. Lead a life of non-violence. This is true spiritual saadhana."

Truth is God. The Vedhas declared' "Speak the truth; follow Righteousness." There is no greater divinity than these two. Where truth reigns, there Divinity is present. Where Righteousness is prevalent, there the Divine exists as Dharma.

One who adheres to Dharma is embodiment of God

It was because Raama stood by the plighted word, pursued Dharma renouncing the Kingdom and choosing to live in the forest, that Vashishta hailed him as .the very embodiment of Dharma.

To honour the promise given by the father, the son was prepared to undergo such an ordeal. He sacrificed everything for truth. He ceaselessly practised Dharma. He was regarded as God incarnate. Any one who adheres to Dharma, whoever he may be, is verily the embodiment of God.

In our own times, some people approached Raamakrishna Paramahansa and put him the question' "Svaami! Have you seen God?" "Oh yes, I have seen Him." They then asked: "In what form did you see Him?" "I saw Him just as you are seeing me," declared Raamakrishna Paramahansa. "How is that possible?" they asked. "This is possible. You do not have that intense yearning needed to see God. You take endless trouble to acquire possessions. You shed tears over petty matters, you weep night and day for the sake of riches. Have you shed a single tear for God?" There is a poem of Jayadheva in which he declared that if a fraction of the trouble which people take for the sake of the family and wealth, were to be devoted to God, they would have no fear of death). Raamakrishna Paramahansa told them: "You are totally absorbed in worldly desires. How can you experience God?"

The apparent and the invisible

Atheists, the Chaarvaakas and the scientists want to have direct perceptible proof for the existence of God. They ask: "How are we to believe in something which is not visible to the eye, and cannot be grasped by the hand?"

Scientists who demand such proofs should be considered extremely foolish. For instance, you see an individual. His height is 5 feet 6 inches. You can measure it. His weight is 63 Kgs. as shown by the weighing machine. His complexion is fair. He has a bald head. All these are evident to the eye. Is this the truth about him? Yes, so far as the external measurements and appearances are concerned. But the man has qualities which are not apparent and beyond measurement. He has kindness, determination, spirit of sacrifice, compassion, all of which are not visible to the eye and. cannot be measured. You cannot notice them even if he is dissected.

On this account can it be said that he does not have them? It is these qualities which make him a useful being. It is the invisible qualities which lend meaning to the visible features. It follows that what is not apparent provides the proof for what is apparent.

You fool! Realise that

What is not apparent is

That which makes you suffer

The consequences of past actions.

To consider apparent as the only reality is foolish

To deny what is not perceptible by the senses as nonexistent is foolish. Equally, to consider the apparent as the only reality is foolish. For example, you see a tree full of branches. The scientist sees it and says that is the truth. But the spiritual Inaani looks at the roots, without which the tree cannot exist. The one who looks at the branches will not see the roots, the one who looks for the roots will not bother about the branches. The question arises: Which are more important, roots or branches? If the roots are there, the tree will remain even if the branches are cut. But if the roots are gone, the tree will not survive. It is the unseen roots which enable us to see the branches.

Likewise, there is an invisible Divine power which underlies all that is seen in the phenomenal

Universe. It is because of that power that we are able to perceive the universe.

Here are some more examples- You have the fragrance of a flower. Fragrance has no form but you enjoy it. Can its existence be denied because it is not visible or can be touched or tasted?

Likewise, love has no form, but the mother who shows love has a form. Fragrance has no form but the flower which exudes it has a form. Similarly, Aanandha (bliss) has no form, but there is a form for the Divinity that confers bliss. What is that form? It is a form beyond comprehension by the senses. It may be associated with anything.

Yet another example. Air has no form. What is the form of water? Water is visible. Air has no form but you can experience its presence. When does air acquire a form? When a football or a balloon, is filled with air, it acquires their form. Water assumes the form of the container.

Likewise, whatever the form in which the devotee worships the Divine, God appears in that form. What is the reason for this? The feelings of the devotees endow the form for the Divine.

This is called Bhaavarupam (the form caused by the feeling).

Dhyaana (Meditation) is the means by which the form is experienced. Whatever the feeling about the form which the devotee cherishes, God assumes that form for him. The Lord appears in the form that you envisage.

Divinity cannot be defined in this way or that. That is why it is said that God has a myriad feet, a myriad eyes, a myriad heads and He encompasses everything in the cosmos. He is omnipresent.

No one is entitled to ridicule worship of Nature

Everything in the universe, from sub-atomic particles to the biggest star, has a form: It was this fact that impelled the ancients to worship the Bhu-maatha (earth as a Mother). Some scientists ridiculed this adoration as a superstitious worship of mud and stone. They asked what is the meaning of worshipping mud and stone? The answer is: "That mud is the source of our food.

The air (over the earth) is enabling us to breathe and live. The sun is enabling the crops to grow.

Hence, no one is entitled to ridicule the worship of Nature. It is proper to worship those who help us. What help are the five basic elements rendering to mankind? Without these elements, there will be no world' at all. What, then, is the loss in adoring them?"

Some others ask: "Apart from the five elements, you are worshipping stones. How can these stones be treated as God?" The answer is 'You crazy one! Everything is an embodiment of God.

Why should not they be worshipped?" "They have no qualities. They have no consciousness.

Why do you worship something which is inert and inconscious?" Inanswer to this, mention may be made of an appropriate example. On August 15th the National Flag is hoisted and it is honoured in various ways. Why is the flag respected? It is a piece of cloth, made up of threads. It has no virtues. It is inconscious. It sways if there is wind. Otherwise it is still. Why is respect shown to such an object? Because it is regarded as a symbol of the freedom that we gained after a struggle. Divinity has to be regarded in the same manner. You have to place your faith in some symbol. In every country, its national flag is honoured. If a flag can be honoured though it has no consciousness, what is wrong in worshipping a stone idol if it has no consciousness? The Divine consciousness is universal.

Devotee's devotional feelings are imprinted in idols

In our daily life, there is an object of general worship. It is wealth.

People offer worship to Lakshmi, the Goddess of Wealth and prosperity, in elaborate rituals.

People even consider a hundred rupee note as sacred and press it on their eyes before placing it in the pocket. What is this hundred rupee note? It is made from some pulp. What virtue or merit is there in it? Both theists and atheists value the note for its value as currency.

People worship the photo of the father or the grandfather after they have passed away. The reason is that the picture is a reminder of one's ancestor. Similarly, the worshipper of a stone idol is entitled to say: "Doubtless, it is a stone. But the stone bears the image of the God I worship."

The devotee's devotional feelings are imprinted on the idol.

If one goes about enquiring in this manner, he will realise that God is present in everything. No one is qualified to criticize another's beliefs and practices. You may keep out of them if you like.

But you have no right to interfere in other's beliefs.

The quest for truth

Although there have been a variety of beliefs, the ancients laid stress on what they called the quest for truth. What is the rationale of this quest? The reason is that Truth is one. Here is an example. With the same eyes a man sees his mother, his wife, his sister, his child, aunt and several others. The eyes that see are one and the same. But the perspective from which the mother, the sister and all the others are to be seen calls for anveshna (enquiry into the truth about what is seen). The mother has to be viewed as a mother, that is, with filial feelings. This is the search for truth. You cannot treat all alike. You can see them with an equal eye, but the feelings will vary.

Likewise, we have the five senses, each has its own functional role. Enquiry into truth calls for an understanding of what is true and false. A distinction has to be made between an apparent fact and the real truth.

For instance, seeing a flat piece of ground one may say the earth is fiat. In a limited sense this is a fact. But when the nature of the earth is explored, it is proved to be a globe. Moreover, apparent facts are liable to change. A man who is seen wearing certain clothes, today; may be seen in a different dress tomorrow. Facts relate to momentary appearances. Truth relates to the unchanging reality. It is changeless in all the three categories of time--past, present and future.

That is Divinity. What pertains to the individual is subject to change. But what is opposed to both the permanent and the changing is false.

Brahmam is only one without a second

In spirituality, you have insight into such truths. This has been termed "the secret of truth." Why should there be any secrecy about truth? There is a secret within this secret. That is why the Vedhas declared: "The Truth is one, it is described variously by the wise." The Vedhaantha declared: "Ekameva adhvitheeyam" (Brahmam is only one, without a second). Why did they not stop with saying that Brahmam is only one? Why should they go on to say that there is no second? It is to emphasise the oneness of Brahman that the second statement is added. By stating that "God is only One and not two," all room for doubt is eliminated. In this manner the scriptures reveal profound truths.

The scientists also conducted numerous experiments and came to the conclusion that there is a unique power, without calling it God. People can call it by any name. But the substance cannot be altered. There is water in this tumbler. That water is given different names in different languages. The names vary but the water remains the same. Likewise, different people adore the Divine under different names and forms. But one thing is common to all of them. God exists.

There is only one God. He may be worshipped in different names and forms.

Without God there is no universe. It is essential to enquire into the nature of God to strengthen one's faith. For instance, when you examine a piece of cloth you find that it is made up of threads, which are made out of cotton. Cotton is the basis. Threads and cloth are changes in form.

Purity and truth

A child believes whatever the mother says because of faith in her words. The faith may be ascribed to innocence. But in that innocence there is Amaayakathvam (the transcending of ignorance). Jesus used to say: "How happy would I be if only I could be a child for some time in a day!" In that childlike innocence there is freedom from all the lies and deceits of the world.

That is purity of mind. In that purity dwells truth. Today we are discarding that purity and leading a polluted life.

Students! Don't get involved in controversies about Divinity. Recognise that there must be a basis for everything. Nothing can exist without it. What the scientists have found so far is an infinitesimal part of the totality of knowledge. They are making much of it. But he who knows everything remains calm and quiet. The argumentative man knows little.

If you mean to be a true scientist, you must first learn to control the senses and develop love.

There is nothing greater than love. Develop Love. It has to emanate from the heart. It expresses itself as kindness and compassion. Today people behave without compassion.

God has been described as the Hridhayavaasi (Indweller in the heart). It has been said that a heart filled with compassion is a shrine of the Divine. When you develop that compassion, you will have the vision of God.

The Divine is omnipresent. He is inside, outside and everywhere. God is in the air you breathe and the words you utter. The Divine is in sound as Shabdha Brahman. The radio waves are allpervading.

They represent Dhivya Shakthi (power of the Divine). It is the same power that manifests itself as magnetism, electricity and atomic energy. You have to realise the limitless Divine powers latent in the cosmos.

The Bhaagavatha extols the indescribable and marvellous powers of the Divine. The stories of the Lord confer bliss and immortality. Need for discrimination Students! You are not being respected for your education, nor for your personality. You are being respected for your conduct. When a man's behaviour is good, he is respected without any enquiry. Did not Raama confer His grace on Shabari and Jataayu without their asking Him? But Raama did not respond to the entreaties of Dhasharatha. Even the sages in the forests who were earnestly praying to him were not recognized by Raama. The Divine alone knows when and whom to bless, for what reason and where and in what form. You have to seek the Divine's grace in the right form, at the proper time and place. This calls for discrimination regarding time and circumstances. This is mostly absent today. This discrimination is called "Constant Integrated Awareness." It is described as "Prajnaanam Brahma," the humanness that is the Divine Itself. The four great pronouncements in the Vedhas are: "Prajnaanam Brahma," "Ayam Aathma Brahma," "Aham Brahmaasmi" and "Thath Thvam Asi." They proclaim the oneness of the Aathma and the Omni-Self. I once asked a student: "Who are you?" When a question is asked the reply must be well considered and must be related to one's practice, reflecting one's deep conviction. Remembering what Svaami used to say, the student replied- "I am you and you are me." I thought this boy had gone very far! "Is it so?" I asked. "Yes!" he said. "In that case, you go to that shed and give dharshan to the devotees and come back," I said. Who will see him? If you say: "I am Svaami and Svaami is I," will anyone look upon you as Svaami? If that feeling is fully and genuinely within you, you will appear so to others. But if you only mouth the words but don't live up to them, it is no use. Practise and realise the truth. Supremacy of Bhaagavatham Today the Vice-Chancellor requested Me to speak to the students about the Bhaagavatham during the summer course. A knowledge of the Bhaagavatham is essential for the boys because it expounds the childhood deeds of Krishna. By understanding the Bhaagavatham well, you will become baagavuthaam (better human beings). All the fruits of saadhana are contained in the Bhaagavatham. Ba=Bhakthi, Ga=Jnaana, Va=Vairaagya, Tha=Thathvam, Mu=Mukthi (devotion, spiritual wisdom, detachment, philosophy and liberation). Bhaagavatham is the quintessence of all the Shaasthras, it is the goal of all paths. I have decided to give in the next ten days all the essential stories in the Bhaagavatham in a manner appealing to the young. It is not enough to listen to these stories. You must put into practice the lessons they convey. Therefore, eat and digest the Bhaagavatham, purify your hearts and serve society. Discourse on the afternoon of 20-5-1995 in the Kunwar Ba Auditorium, Brindhaavan. 14. Immortal devotees of the Lord THE inextricable relationship between the devotees and the Lord, a relationship maintained by unassailable and unflinching faith on the one side and a continuous and loving care for the devotee on the other, was the central theme of the series of discourses given by Bhagavaan during the ten-day Summer Course to students held in Brindhaavan from May 20th to May 30th. Bhagavaan took up for each discourse one episode from the Bhaagavatham to bring out illuminating lessons about the nature of devotion and significant role of the Divine in coming to the rescue of the devotee. Produced here are stories narrated by Bhagavaan from 21-5-1995 to 29-5-1995. The Krishna Avathaar (From the first discourse on 21-5-1995) There are four qualifications needed by anyone to understand the underlying significance of the Bhaagavatham, which describes devotion as a bridge between the Divine and the devotees. They are: 1. Flee from evil company. 2. Seek the company of the pious. 3. Indulge always in meritorious deeds. 4. Discriminate between the eternal and the transient. Shuura, a king of the Yaadhava dynasty, had two sons, Ugrasena and Dhevaka. The former had a son, Kamsa, and the latter had only one daughter, Dhevaki. Kamsa had great affection for Dhevaki and considered her as his own sister and celebrated her marriage to Vasudheva with great enthusiasm. When he was driving the chariot of the newly-wed couple to take them to the bridegroom's place, an ethereal voice declared that the eighth child of Dhevaki would kill him. Kamsa, on hearing this voice, immediately unsheathed his sword and decided to kill Dhevaki on the spot to prevent the predicted catastrophe. Then at once

Vasudheva gave Kamsa his assurance, that he would hand over all Dhevaki's newborn babies to Kamsa and appealed to him to spare

Dhevaki. Kamsa relented and allowed them' to go. The pious Vasudheva kept his word and handed over each child as it was born to Kamsa. On learning from Naaradha that the threat to his life might come from any one of Dhevaki's children, Kamsa killed six of them.

The Magadha Emperor, Jaraasandha, gave his daughters in marriage to Kamsa, who harboured increasing hatred against the Yaadhavas, from whom he apprehended the threat to his life, and also because, according to Naaradha's words to Kamsa, the gods were to incarnate as Yaadhavas with the advent of Krishna. God made His master-plan to punish the wicked and help the pious and pure devotees.

Vasudheva's other wife, Rohini, was staying at Nanda's house away from Kamsa's tyranny. The Lord by His Maaya Shakthi (deluding power) transferred Dhevaki's seventh child to Rohini's womb. He was Balarama (who was always with Krishna after he grew up). He was also called Sankarshana (transferred from one womb to another). The Lord incarnated as Krishna, the eighth child of Dhevaki, and both Dhevaki and Vasudheva had a vision of the effulgent form of the Lord, who directed Vasudheva to take the new-born child to Repalle (Gokulam), a village on the other bank of the Yamuna. According to the Divine Plan all the warders were fast asleep and the doors and gates of the prison, in which Kamsa has confined Vasudheva and Dhevaki, opened of their own accord, and the river in flood gave way, while Aadhishesha protected the child from the torrential rains as he was being carried in a basket by Vasudheva. No power can stand against the Divine Will. The child was exchanged with that born to Yashodha, without anyone knowing about it, due to Yogamaya. The child brought by Vasudheva to his cell started to cry and immediately the warders woke up and informed Kamsa, who rushed to the prison. He seized the baby and lifted it up to kill it but the Baby escaped from his clutches, went up in the air, and announced that the slayer of Kamsa had taken birth and was alive somewhere else. Enraged by this, Kamsa started killing all newborn babies. He sent his demons to Repalle also, but Krishna, even as a tiny babe, destroyed all of them.

Yashodha had vaathsalya (maternal love) for Krishna at the physical level, while the Gopikas of

Gokulam had real devotion which was symbolically demonstrated by Krishna, who used to go after their butter rather than receive that offered by his mother

Yashodha. Butter here signifies the spiritual heart of the devotee, which Krishna shared as the Divine. Krishna demonstrated to the innocent devotees of Repalle. His Divine Power in several ways.

Ambarisha's devotion (From the discourse on 22-5-1995) Ambareesha's father was Naabhaaga, who was rewarded by Lord Shiva for his attitude of detachment to worldly things.

Ambareesha was pious and devout and adhered firmly to the truth. He performed a Yajna (ritual sacrifice) with such great devotional fervour that Lord Naaraayana was pleased and blessed him with Sudharshana, which means good vision, and which manifested as a wheel of prosperity, peace and security to his kingdom. On sage Vashishtha's advice, Ambareesha performed another

Yajna called the Dhvaadhasi Vrata. An important rite to be observed in this vratha was that the king must start a fast on the day prior to Dhvaadhasi (the twelfth day after new moon) and break it at the start of Dhvaadhasi and feed all the people. As the moment of breaking the fast was drawing near, the mighty sage Dhuurvaasa arrived and was received with all honours by

Ambareesha. Dhuurvaasa agreed to the king's request to be his honoured guest, and asked the king to wait till he finished his bath in the river and returned. As the auspicious moment approached when the king had to break his fast to fulfill the vow of the Yajna, Dhuurvaasa did not turn up. On the advice of the sage Vashishtha, the king broke his fast by taking a thulasi leaf with water, and waited for the arrival of sage Dhuurvaasa to offer him food.

Dhuurvaasa, who was well known for his short temper, felt that Ambareesha had violated the respect due to a guest by breaking his fast before the guest had taken his meal, and in his rage created a demon to kill Ambareesha. Lord Naaraayana's Sudharshana (discus) intervened, destroyed the demon, and started chasing Dhuurvaasa himself.

Dhuurvaasa went to-Brahma and Shiva for protection. Both pleaded their inability to save him. He went to Lord Naaraayana himself, who said that He could do nothing as He was bound by the blemishless devotion of Ambareesha and suggested to the sage to seek the pardon of the king. Dhuurvaasa went to Ambareesha, who prayed to Lord Vishnu to recall the Sudharshana and save Dhuurvaasa.

The lesson of this episode is that God regards Himself as a servant of His true devotee. Students need to learn the lesson that it is not enough if they do good work, but should do so with humility and devotion. Ambareesha was the embodiment of humility.

The saga of Dhruva
(From the discourse on 23-5-1995)

Dhruva was a young lad of five years, who did penance with single minded devotion and determination and was blessed with the vision of Lord Naaraayana. Uthanaapaadha, the elder of the two sons of Manu, who gave to mankind the Dharma Shaasthra (the Code of Righteousness), had two wives, Suruchi and Suneethi. Uthama was the son of Suruchi, the younger queen while Dhruva was born to Suneethi. Once both of the boys were playing in the garden. Spotting their doting father sitting on the throne, they rushed forward to sit on the king's lap. While Uthama sat on his father's lap, the fiveyear old Dhruva was prevented by Suruchi, who said that only her sons had the right to sit on the king's lap. Dhruva went to his mother Suneethi and sat weeping. When he started criticizing his step-mother for her action, his mother silenced him and said, "Desist from criticizing anyone. If you criticize others the defects pointed out by you will come to you. Accept everything as something good."

So saying she advised Dhruva to go to the forest and do penance to secure the Grace of Lord Naaraayana, who was the only hope for the helpless. Dhruva obeyed his mother implicitly and proceeded to the forest without any fear and with full faith in his mother's words that God was the only refuge for the forlorn. Having noticed this wonderful determination of the young boy who was ready to brave the perils of the forest with firm determination, sage Naaradha appeared before him and tried to dissuade him from undertaking a severe penance to earn the Lord's Grace. But Dhruva refused to go back and expressed his confidence that he would surely succeed in winning the Lord's Grace with his mother's blessings and his unshakable faith. This is the ideal that today's students should learn. Naaradha was pleased with the young Dhruva's firm faith and initiated him in the chanting of the twelve-lettered manthra, "Om Namobhagavathe Vaasudhevaaya."

Dhruva did intense penance, giving up food and drink, and was reduced to a skeleton. He transcended his Annamaya Kosha (food sheath). He was saturated with the Lord's name, which he chanted with each breath ceaselessly. His Manomaya Kosha (mind sheath) was also dedicated to the Lord, driving away all other thoughts. His entire being was filled with bliss in the contemplation of the Lord. This is another ideal taught by Dhruva to students that meditation must be with total concentration on the Divine Form.

Lord Naaraayana appeared before Dhruva, whose radiance went on intensifying as the Lord was approaching him. Looking at the majestic form of the Cosmic Lord, Dhruva burst into ecstatic praise. He exclaimed, "O Lord! Till now you were in me and you have come out to grace me. Are you going to leave me?"

Lord Vishnu, who was astonished at the amazing wisdom of such a young child, patted him on his cheek and asked him to say what boon he wanted. Dhruva said, "Oh Lord, after having your Dharshan (audience) and getting your Grace, I don't want anything else." The Lord replied, "Dhruva, you undertook this penance with one thought, namely, to sit on your father's lap, but now you speak differently. Your words and action are contrary to your thought. You must go back to your father with my blessings. He will receive you with full affection. You must rule the kingdom and then come to Me." The Lord also assured Dhruva that after ruling the kingdom for a long time he would occupy a most exalted position in the firmament as a star around whom the constellation of the Seven Rishis (sages) and other galaxies would revolve.

Dhruva, on his return to the kingdom, was received with ceremonial honours by his penitent and joyous father. Dhruva consoled his father by reminding him that all are forms of Naaraayana.

Uthanaapaada entrusted the kingdom to the six-year old Dhruva, saying that a boy who could get the Divine vision and grace at that tender age, could rule the kingdom. He retired to Skanda Aashrama, (hermitage) seeking realisation of the Divine.

Dhruva ruled for a long time very wisely and well, maintaining justice and peace. When his sojourn in the world came to an end, a celestial chariot came to take him to God's Abode. He told the charioteer that God was everywhere and so the question of taking him to God's place did not arise. So saying, he sat down closing his eyes in meditation and merged in the Divine.

The infinite power of Bhakthi (true devotion to the Lord) must be understood by all. It contains all the six qualities, namely, Bhukthi (food), Rakthi (charm), Yukthi (knowledge of how to love all), Anurakthi (great attraction), Virakthi (cessation of desires) and Mukthi (Liberation). When from the word Bhagavaan (the Lord), the root word, 'Bhag', (relating to the Divine) is taken and combined with 'kthi', which is common in all the six qualities, it becomes Bhakthi.

The story of Dhruva must teach the students the value of determination and devotion to God.

The example of Jadabharatha (From the discourse on 24-5-1995) Priyavratha was the son of Svayambhuva Manu and brother of Uthaanapaadha. Having realised the futility of mundane comforts, which are transient, he renounced his kingdom at the early age of 19 years and left for the forest in pursuit of realisation of the Aathma. He had strong belief in the truth that the human body is given only for realising and experiencing the bliss of Aathma.

The students of those days sacrificed all comforts to pursue their studies, unlike those of the present day who hanker after materialistic pleasures. Priyavratha developed the steadfastness and mental tranquillity and purity of heart. Emperor Manu, his father, was worried and tried to wean him back to the kingdom. He declined, stating that without realising his own nature and reality he could not satisfy the people. Manu sought the advice of the sage Naaradha, who prevailed upon Priyavratha to agree to rule the Kingdom as a command from God.

After a few years, Priyavratha again felt that association with people and worldly objects constituted obstacles to spiritual saadhana. So he renounced the kingdom and returned to the forest. King Rishabha took over the reigns of the kingdom and ruled with a sense of detachment, while pursuing his spiritual saadhana for the realisation of Truth. Bharatha, the son of Rishabha, was a righteous prince. He would not embark on any work without praying to God and seeking Divine Grace. Our country:

Bhaarith is named after this king Bharatha. Even though he was not attracted by worldly pleasures, he had a special attachment for a deer, which he was bringing up with great affection. At the moment of his death he was thinking of this deer and was born as a deer and later on had a human birth.

Students should be careful to remember the Divine name and form always, so that even at the time of death one will have the Divine name on the lips and merge with the Divine.

In his new birth, Bharatha was immersed in Aathmik consciousness from the very beginning and was totally oblivious to his physical existence. In this state he was caught by a band of brigands to be offered as a human sacrifice for their deity Kaali. He was totally unaffected by what was being done to him. Just as the brigands were about to cut off his head, Goddess Kaali Herself appeared and rescued him and bade him continue on his righteous path.

Just then the king Sindhu Saveera (Rahugana) was going that way in a palanquin accompanied by some of his attendants. The servants carrying the palanquin were tired and asked Bharatha to help them in carrying it for sometime to relieve their strain. Bharatha took this also as a divine dispensation and assisted in carrying the palanquin. As he was very compassionate by nature, he was careful not to trample on any insects on the ground and swayed continuously and walked slowly while carrying the palanquin. The king became angry at the slow and swaying movement of the palanquin and asked his servants why they were going slow. He peeped out of the palanquin and found that Bharatha was the cause for the slow movement and rebuked him for walking like a corpse. Bharatha replied calmly: "It is not me alone. All of us are corpse. It is only the power of the Divine that is making us function." The King was on his way to meet Kapila, the great sage, to have Aathmik Knowledge. He was astounded at the wise reply of Bharatha. He got down and sat there listening to Bharatha's exposition about the Aathma.

Because Bharatha had obtained the knowledge by his own experience, he was able to influence several kings and scholars with his expositions. Some of his teachings were'

One should have sense control by which alone one could avert the danger of attachment to the physical.
To have no attachment for mundane comforts.
To reduce desires for worldly objects. Man must not try to propitiate God for achieving paltry worldly desires.
One cannot escape the consequences of one's action despite intense meditation, pilgrimages or rituals.

 As is the heart so is one's experience.
 Everyone should, on his own, forge a path to get over his destiny.
Manu and the kings in his lineage were examples of enlightened beings described in the Bhaagavatham.
 Students should learn to serve society selflessly without expecting any' return. They should combine spiritual saadhana with academic studies.
Thrishanku and Vishvaamithra
 (From the discourse on 25-5-1995)
Thrishanku, of the Lunar dynasty; was a noble, pious king, but developed an irrational desire to go to heaven in his human body. His preceptor, Brahmarishi Vashishtha told him that his desire was like seeing to pack an unsuspecting dead body and taking it to heaven. Thrishanku was adamant, but Vashishtha refused to help him in his unholy desire. The king approached the learned sons of Vashishtha, who had immense spiritual powers. They refused to help one who had defied the advice of his own preceptor, their father. Finally the king approached sage Kaushika, who harboured an ill-feeling towards Vashishtha because of an earlier encounter with him. Kaushika agreed to take up the case of Thrishanku as a challenge. He performed a Yajna for the purpose of sending Thrishanku bodily straight to heaven. At the conclusion of the Yajna, the gods did not come down to accept the offering. Enraged by this, Kaushika concentrated all the powers acquired by him by his penance on his Brahmadhanda (flagstaff) to transport Thrishanku to heaven. But Indhra, the Lord of the celestial ones, blocked his path and Thrishanku came hurtling down, towards the earth. On seeing this, Kaushika stopped him in the middle of the firmament and proceeded to create a parallel heaven, with all its paraphernalia. Even today, it is known as Thrishanku Svarga (In western astronomy, this is known as the constellation Southern Cross, consisting of four stars).
 Consequences of breach of promise
 King Thrishanku had a son by name Harishchandhra (not Emperor Harishchandhra who sacrificed everything for truth). This Harishchandhra had no sons and prayed to Lord Varuna (the Rain God) for a son, with the promise that he would sacrifice his son later to the same God.
 He got a son, Raahul. As he became attached to the son, he did not keep his promise and was afflicted by a strange disease.

Raahul, being afraid of the consequences of his father's failure to keep his promise, fled to the forest. He got the idea that his father's illness could be cured if someone else was offered to Varuna in his place. Seeing a Brahmana couple with three children, he asked them to offer one of the sons for sacrifice in return for a large herd of cows and other wealth. The Brahmana was attached to the eldest son and would not part with him. His wife was attached to the youngest son and would not let him go. So it was the middle son who was offered and preferred to die as an offering to God, rather than live without the love of father and mother. Raahul was taking this boy with him when on the way they passed through Kaushika's Aashram. The Brahmana boy, Shunassepha, sought refuge with the sage. Pledging to protect him, Kaushika asked one of his sons to go with Raahul, saying that the human body has to be offered in service to others. His sons ridiculed the idea and declined to comply with Kaushika's proposal. Thereupon the sage taught Shunassepha a manthra to propitiate Lord Varuna. The boy chanted the manthra and Lord Varuna appeared before him and chided Harishchandhra for agreeing to offer his son to Varuna and then going back on his word and offering someone else in his place. He said because of his breaking the promise, he would be consumed by the disease afflicting him.
 Students should learn from this the lesson that they must not develop excessive attachment to anything and should always keep their plighted word.
 Sage Kaushika himself was a victim of an unbecoming desire (when he was an emperor) to possess the wish-fulfilling cow of sage Vashishtha. Foiled in his attempt, he embarked on severe penances to acquire the title of Brahmarishi on a par with Vashishtha. He forfeited the fruits of his penances several times before he could earn ultimately the title of Brahmarishi from Vashishtha himself.
 The all conquering faith of Prahladha
 (From discourse on 25-5-1995)
 This is the story of Prahladha, who remained utterly unshaken in his faith in Lord Naaraayana despite the ordeals to which he was subjected by his father, Hiranyakashipu, who hated Naaraayana as the slayer of his brother. Hiranyaaksha, the younger brother of Hiranyakashipu, was killed by Vishnu in his incarnation as Varaaha (Boar). In order to acquire invincible power, to perform a rigorous penance. While he was away doing penance, his wife, Leelavathi, was taken by sage Naaradha to his Aashram to protect her and the child she was carrying, from the onslaught of dhevas. He imparted to her the knowledge of the exploits of Naaraayana. Though she did not pay much attention to the teachings of Naaradha, the child in the womb absorbed them and started meditating on the Mahaa manthra, "Om Namo Narayanaaya" while still in the womb.

Brahma was pleased with the penance of Hiranyakashipu and granted him the boon that he would not meet with his death either during day or night, either on earth or sky; either from man or beast or from the gods. With this boon, he became lord of the universe and decreed that he alone should be worshipped.

When Prahlaadha was five years old, he was entrusted to the care of two teachers, Chanda and Amarka, both sons of the sage Kripaachaarya, with strict instructions to impart all demonic traits to the child and banish Vishnu's name from his mind. The teachers taught him about

Artha (wealth), and Kama (desire) but abstained from teaching about the other two goals of human life, Dharma (Righteousness) and Moksha (Liberation). But in spite of their best efforts, the teachers could not create a single negative thought in Prahlaadha's mind. He persisted in his own belief that Lord Naaraayana was the Supreme Master of the world to be worshipped by nine modes of devotion, beginning with listening to the glories of the Lord and culminating in total surrender of the self.

Hiranyakashipu tried all means of gentle persuasion to coax Prahlaadha to accept him as the supreme master and forget Naaraayana. Prahlaadha told his father that though he had mastered the entire external world he could not master his senses. Enraged at this son's unshakable devotion to his arch-enemy, Hiranyakashipu decided to put an end to Prahlaadha by all possible means. Prahlaadha was totally devoid of body consciousness and was always in a state of bliss chanting the name of Hari. He survived all tortures inflicted on him and came out unscathed. In utter exasperation, Hiranyakashipu finally asked Prahlaadha: "Who is this God that protects you?

Where is he?" Prahlaadha, who had realised the omnipresence of God, told his father that God was everywhere in the cosmos, from the tiniest microcosm to the mighty macrocosm. He added'

"One who is a slave to his senses cannot see Him. As long as you have ego and attachment you cannot see Hari, though He is within and outside every being."

Hiranyakashipu then asked

Prahlaadha: "Is He in this pillar?" When Prahlaadha said, "Yes, He is," Hiranyakashipu smote the pillar with his mace. The pillar split into two and there emerged from it the Lord in the dreadful form of Narasimha (half-lion and half-man). He seized the demon by the throat, placed him on his lap and tore his entrails with his nails.

Though everyone trembled at the sight of the awe-inspiring form of Narasimha, Prahlaadha stood beside the Lord cheerfully, in adoration. When he was asked by the Lord if he had no fear, Prahlaadha replied, "To me You are only the embodiment of Love. I believe in your Divine form of Love and not this physical form." Lord Narasimha then commanded Prahlaadha to take over the reigns of the kingdom, transform the demons into virtuous beings and then come back to His divine Abode. Prahlaadha requested the Lord to pardon his father and take him to heaven. The Lord granted the boon. Prahlaadha ruled over the world for a long time with justice and righteousness.

Students must imbibe at least one quality of the great devotee,

Prahlaadha, and practise it in daily life. You should always remember God and chant His name and have his Form in mind in any situation.

Krishna and the gopalas

(From the discourse on 26-5-1995)

Balarama and Krishna were in the habit of taking the other cowherd boys with their cows for grazing in the forest near Gokulam. Once the Gopaalas engaged in merry making, in dancing and singing, quite unconcerned about the time, while the cows were out grazing. Suddenly they found that the cows had disappeared and they went in different directions to search for them.

They found the cows grazing at a distant place and saw a fire blazing all around. The cowherd boys could not approach the cows. They cried in desperation, "Krishna, Krishna." When Krishna called the cows by their names, they responded, running towards him, crying "Amma." The cows could always recognise Krishna's voice and understand his call. The cowherd lads were terribly shaken by the sight of the advancing fire. Balarama and Krishna told them: "Why fear when we are here?" Krishna asked them to close their eyes and not to open them until he gave the order.

They always implicitly obeyed the command of Krishna, in whom they had full faith.

When Krishna asked them to open their eyes they did so, and found themselves in the same place where they had been dancing, and it was cool all round. The fire had disappeared. Immediately they fell at the feet of Krishna and hailed him as the Supreme Lord.

When such miracles were performed they used to hail Him as God, but after some time they would revert to their old habit of calling him their friend. Even now people consider the Avathaar (divine advent) as God only when miracles happen, but at other times they consider

Him an ordinary being.

Krishna wanted to teach the Gopaalas about the Aathma. It was the rainy season, and dark clouds were hovering over the sky. There was lightning followed by thunder. Krishna said that the dark clouds represent the Thaamasik (ignorance) quality in man, thunder the Raajasik (passionate) quality and lightning the Saathvik (enlightening). Because of Thamoguna you are not able to see the vast sky which is the Divine. Just as lightning shines in a dark cloud, Inaana (wisdom) shines beyond the cloud of ignorance.

A lesson for pandiths

On another occasion, Krishna gave the Gopaalas a sublime experience. The cowherd boys had taken the cows to the forest to graze. When they felt hungry, they asked Krishna and Balaraama to give them food. Krishna said, "When you have the all powerful Being with you, why do you worry about food? There is a Yajna being performed by some pandiths nearby. All of you may go and tell them that you are hungry. They will feed you." Accordingly they went to the place and asked for food. The pandiths told them that they could serve food only after the Purnaahuthi (completion of the sacrificial ritual). The lads returned disappointed and informed Krishna about it. Krishna asked them to go to the wives of the pandiths who were cooking the food, and not to the pandiths who could not recognise the nature of Divinity. Krishna asked them to go behind the yainashaala (hall of ritual) and ask the women to serve food. They went there and informed the ladies that they were Krishna's friends. While the pandiths could not recognise the greatness of Balaraama and Krishna, the ladies asked them with great devotion

as to where Balaraama and Krishna were. When told that they were nearby; the ladies took all the food in their vessels to the place where Krishna was. They forgot body-consciousness and were in ecstasy at the sight of Krishna. They made all the cowherds sit and served the food. The pandiths came in search of their women and found them serving food to Balaraama, Krishna and their friends. The pandiths later realised that the God to whom they had been making their offerings at the Yajna was Himself there in the form of Krishna. Krishna showed the form of Naaraayana to the pandiths, who prostrated before Him. What was the use of doing yainas without realising the God who was in human form available close by?

Nothing in the world is yours and you are just a trustee for the wealth which belongs to the Divine. Developing the feeling of "mine" and "thine" people get attached to the unreal and the transient and forget the eternal.

Devotion of the Gopikas

The Gopikas were examples of true devotion. Krishna was five years old when He did the Rasakreeda (sporting with the Gopikas). There is nothing sensuous in this; it is the sacred Aathma-thathva which the Gopikas experienced, that is oneness with the Divine. They enjoyed the music of Krishna's flute as Naadha-brahman (the Cosmic Absolute in the form of sound).

Krishna gave them the essence of the music of the Vedhas in his music and talked to them in the language they could understand.

The Gopikas had only the name of Krishna on their lips and the form of Krishna in their hearts.

When Uddhava was sent by Krishna to teach them the shaasthras (spiritual texts) they said they had only one mind and that was given to Krishna and that they had no room in their mind for anything else. Uddhava read out the letter to them which Krishna had sent. The letter said 'I am always with you and around you. I am the Indweller of your hearts. Uddhava will pass on the message. Practise it." The Gopikas had no patience to learn any lesson from Uddhava. Finally they said they wanted one message to be sent to Krishna and that was 'Let Krishna come and make the flower of our hearts blossom." Uddhava went to Krishna and extolled the pure unalloyed devotion of the Gopikas.

You should understand the real devotion of the Gopikas. You should have full faith in and single-minded devotion to God.

Akruura's vision of the Lord

(From the discourse on 28-5-1995)

Everyone in the world loves objects or persons or even God, for his or her own selfish purpose.

No one loves God for God's sake. Man exists in three states waking, dream, and deep sleep. In the waking state all his senses and mind are at work, while in the dream state only the mind is active, and in deep sleep everything merges in the Self and one enjoys bliss. Man should make efforts to experience the reality beyond all the three states.

Naaradha told Krishna in advance about the impending visit of Akruura and mentioned that Akruura would perceive Him as Naaraayana and Balaraama as Aadhishesha. Akruura arrived shortly afterwards with an invitation to Krishna and Balaraama to attend the Dhanur-Yajna to be performed by Kamsa. Akruura was very devoted to Balaraama and Krishna and so he informed them that Kamsa's invitation was only a part of his nefarious scheme to lure them to Mathura and kill them.

The Gopikas and Gopaalas tried their best to prevent Akruura from taking Krishna and Balaraama in his chariot. They were not worried about 'any harm that might be caused by the evil-minded Kamsa. Their fear was that Krishna might not return from Mathura. Krishna told them, "We must go to Mathura to fulfill our mission. You are not the body. The Indweller in the heart is directing the whole show. That is the Aathma. You are in Me. I am in you. Understand this truth and you will know everything."

After thus pacifying the Gopis and Gopikas, Krishna and Balaraama left in the chariot driven by

Akruura. In the evening Akruura alighted near a river to perform his ablutions. While having a dip in the river he had the vision of Lord Vishnu reclining on Aadhishesha, the hydra-headed

Divine Serpent. On hurrying back he saw Krishna and Balaraama sitting in the chariot unperturbed. Krishna asked Akruura what he had seen to make his face so radiant. Akruura was thrilled at the experience and praised them. He requested them both to stay at his house, but Krishna politely declined, promising to visit him after finishing his mission in Mathura.

The next day, while they were walking along the road, they spotted the royal washerman and asked him for some royal clothes. The washerman rudely replied that the royal clothes could not even be touched by low-born cowherds. Infuriated at this, Krishna struck the dhobi, who fell down. They took some of the royal clothes, and went on their way.

Later they met an old hunch-backed lady, Kubja, who was providing scents and perfumes for Kamsa. She had a beautiful face but an ugly body, bent over in three ways. Seeing the two brothers, she was overjoyed and gave away all the perfumes to them. Though God never asks anything from anyone, if someone offers something He returns it a hundredfold. Krishna planted

His foot on her feet, caught hold of her chin and lifted it up. Lo and behold! Her crooked back was gone! She shed tears of gratitude to Krishna for restoring her beautiful shape and prayed to Him to visit her house to accept her prayerful offerings. Krishna promised to do so after finishing His mission.

Parents freed

Kamsa heard of these exploits of the young lads and tried to send an elephant in rut, to kill them, but it was the elephant that was killed. Next Kamsa had two of his best wrestlers challenge them in combat. The wrestlers met with their end and realised that the Divine had come in the form of Krishna and Balaraama. Then Kamsa ordered his troops to close in on them. But Krishna, in a trice, jumped on the platform where Kamsa was seated and rained severe blows on him till he dropped dead.

After the death of Kamsa, Krishna and Balaraama went to the prison where Dhevaki and Vasudheva were confined, and freed them. Krishna reinstated Kamsa's father on the throne.

Later Krishna went to Akruura's house. Akruura referred to the inexplicable ways of the Lord in His various incarnations and said that he was greatly blessed by Krishna's visit to his house. He hugged Krishna, who was well aware of Akruura's boundless devotion.

Students should develop devotion to God, such as this. Whatever you do must be done as an offering to God; that in itself will be a penance to win the grace of God. Creation of Dhvaaraka city by Lord Krishna

(From the discourse on 29-5-1995)

People are generally hankering after academic education and worldly attainments, but forget the Super Power, who is the Basis for all knowledge and the entire cosmos.

After Kamsa was killed, Nandha and Yashodha made arrangements for the education of Krishna and Balaraama in the traditional manner, by sending them to a Gurukul. In those days, even princes had to go to the aashram of a guru to study, and no distinction was made between the rich and the poor or high and low among students. Even though Krishna and Balaraama had exhibited superhuman powers in vanquishing Kamsa and other demons, they had to learn the regular lessons in Brahma Vidhya from sage Sandheepani, in his aashram in the forest.

They had to go to the forest and gather firewood for the Guru's household. All the students had to share the work in the aashram among themselves equally without any distinction. At the end of the educational course the students used to give Gurudhakshina (offering to the preceptor).

Krishna and Balaraama asked their preceptor what he would like them to give. The teacher, who was quite aware of the Divine powers of Krishna, told Him that since He was the incarnation of the Supreme, He could do anything, and so he would like to have his son, who had died some time earlier, restored to life, as his wife was very much attached to the son and was in great grief after his death. Krishna and Balaraama chanted some manthras and brought the Guru's son back to life. The Guru was immensely pleased and expressed his gratitude to Krishna and Balaraama.

After they returned to their kingdom from the forest, Jaraasandha, the ruler of Magadha, who had given both his daughters in marriage to Kamsa, and bore a grudge against Krishna, invaded the Yaadhava kingdom and caused considerable destruction. Krishna's strategy was to weaken Jaraasandha after each encounter and finally destroy him. The followers of Jaraasandha harboured hatred towards Balaraama and Krishna and were harassing the Yaadhavas during yajnas. Krishna wanted to settle his people in a secure place. He had an island city constructed by Vishvakarma, the architect of the gods. That city was Dhvaaraka, a city of unmatched splendour and beauty. The Yaadhavas began to lead happy lives in the new place.

Here, students must understand the difference between the Yaadhavas and the Gopikas. The Yaadhavas considered Krishna as their relative, and were proudly proclaiming Krishna as their own kinsman. Because of their pride, they finally perished in mutual strife after Krishna's exit from the world. In contrast, the Gopikas considered themselves as Krishna's worshippers, and were humble and devoted to the Divine.

I conclude the series of discourses on the Bhaagavatham with a stirring appeal to students to learn the following lessons:

Students should learn humility and obedience and serve society. If you have God's Grace, you can progress fearlessly in the world. For this, faith in oneself or self-confidence is the foundation.

You should cultivate Ekaathma-bhaava or oneness of the Aathma dwelling in all beings, as taught by Prahladha's example.

Students should have determination, like Dhruva, to follow the righteous godly path.

You should follow the discipline necessary to maintain the balance in life.

Everything should be within limits, and excessive desires should be curbed.

Following examples of great devotees as a guide, you should strive as exemplary individuals leading ideal lives.

I want each one of you to grow into a strong, steady and straight person. Your eyes should not seek evil sights; your ears should not seek evil tales; your tongue should not seek evil speech; your hands should not seek evil acts; your minds should not seek evil thoughts. Be pure and be full of Love. Help those who are in a worse condition and serve those who need your help.

BABA

15. The quest for Aathma Inaana

THE universe is full of energy or power. The Divine power is all pervasive. Just as sugar is present in sweets, the divine is present in everything. That is why God is called the Rasa (essence) of everything in the Universe. Though the Divine is in everything and everywhere it is not easily cognisable. The seed sprouts and grows into a tree. The child grows into an adult. This is evidence of Divinity, which is the life force stimulating the growth.

You enjoy the sight of the mighty mountains, the big rivers, the vast ocean and the dense forests.

Who is the creator of all these beautiful manifestations in Nature? God is the basis for all these.

Though it is not possible for most people to realise the existence of God as the eternal truth, yet a few have acquired this highest wisdom, the wisdom of the Aathma. Having experienced the Divine they have given to the world the bliss that they have enjoyed.

Physical knowledge does not help you to march towards the goal of realisation, though it may make you a scholar. The Rishis did penance by way of spiritual saadhana to realise the Divinity within.

There are certain qualities which are necessary to acquire Aathmik knowledge. One should adhere to truth, right conduct and have a spirit of selfless service. He should have the attitude of caring only for the welfare of humanity and strive to make them happy by serving them. The purpose of education is only to breed such good qualities. Education should foster human values. Students should acquire spiritual knowledge along with secular knowledge. They should delight in the well-being of all creatures-- "Sarvabhootha hithe rathah." They should also cultivate total awareness. Paripurna Inaanam (total knowledge) is essential to acquire the qualities of good conduct, unity and purity which leads to Divinity. Education should foster human values such as Truth and right conduct. Buddha taught that truth, right conduct and non-violence constituted the most sacred qualities. You consider Ahimsa as merely not hurting others. This is not the whole truth. Speaking too much, working too much, harping on the mistakes of others are all acts of himsa (violence) and should be avoided. These result in the wasting of energy, which causes harm to oneself. You must observe restraints in eating, talking, sleeping, working, and all actions in daily life. Human beings make attempts to know God. They are confused about the meaning of the words used in spiritual parlance, like Jeeva and Dheva, Aathma and Paramaathma (Divine Self and Supreme Self). Vedhaantha has explained these terms, but still they are not fully clear to many people. Unless you have the right attitude you cannot understand the Divine. God has been described as smaller than the smallest atom and bigger than the biggest thing in the Universe. Anu is Atom and signifies the Aathma. Anu is also Brahman (the Supreme Absolute). This Aathma is in every being, however tiny it might be. Divinity is the same in all. For example, one may take water from the river Godhaavari in a small tumbler or a big vessel. Whatever the size of the container, the water is the same in taste and quality. If you understand this principle you can easily understand the truth that the minute atom and the mighty Universe contain the same Brahman. The divinity is the same in all. God is everywhere. Once a disciple asked a sage about this. The sage asked him to get a cup of water and some sugar. He asked the disciple to mix the sugar with the water. Then he could not see the sugar, which was dissolved in the water, nor could he feel the sugar with his hand. But he was sure he had himself put it in the water. In order to know the truth of its existence in water, he was asked to taste a little of that water when he could experience the sweetness of sugar. It was pervading in the entire quantity of water. In the cosmic context, the Aathma is the sugar which is present in every being. Just as sugar cannot be seen or felt while in water, you are not able to see or feel the Aathma. Sugar has no form in the water. So also the Aathma or Paramaathma cannot be seen, but has to be experienced. This is cosmic consciousness and is infinite. It is in the form of consciousness in human beings. In the Geetha, Krishna says "Beejam maam Sarvabhoothaa-naam" (I am the seed in all beings). The seed is Anu and the tree is Mahath. The Anu is contained in the tree and the tree is in the seed too. Divinity as the seed is there invisible under the earth and is also pervading externally in the tree, branches, leaves, flowers, etc. When you are asked: "Who are you?", you may first give your name, then your profession and address, etc. All these descriptions pertain only to the body and physical features. They are subject to change. You may change your name, profession and nationality. But the Aathmik principle in everyone is changeless and eternal. Things pertaining to the world are like rivers while the Divine is like the ocean. The moment rivers merge in the ocean they lose the names and forms. If you worship the mother you worship God. You have to acquire Aathma Inaana (knowledge of the Spirit) along with worldly knowledge. People refer to Brahma, Vishnu, Maheshvara. No one has seen their real forms. Brahma is the creator. The essence of creation is in everyone. The physical bodies of your parents have this essence and they are both the cause of your birth. They bring you up and protect you. This is their aspect of protection. If you worship the mother, you worship God. The child has to be given education and brought up properly. This is done by your father and so he is 'Vishnu' the sustainer. Maheshvara is a giver of boons. He grants boons easily as He did to Bhasmaasura who immediately sought to use his power against Maheshvara himself. Power has to be used with discrimination. By respecting the teacher who imparts this discriminatory knowledge you respect Maheshvara. That is why the Vedhas declare "Treat the mother as God, the father as God and the Preceptor as God." This is the basis of Bhaaratheeya culture.

A true son should seek the truth. He should not leave this pursuit for selfish reasons. That is why

"Sathyam vadhah: Dharmam chara" (Speak the Truth; follow Righteousness) has been the sheetanchor of Indian culture. You should not sacrifice the truth for the sake of name and fame. You should have unshakable faith in the Divine.

One should know the basis for whole creation

Scientific knowledge is subject to continual change, while spiritual knowledge is changeless and will help you to realise the Eternal Truth. Today man does everything out of selfish motive to satisfy self-interest. The scriptures declare. "Dharma muulam Idham jagath" (The whole cosmos is rooted in righteousness). This is the Truth. The planets, the sun, the moon and the stars are all moving in a set pattern according to their Dharma. You must understand this harmony and unity.

In the world today there are more than 550 crores of people. Not one is identical with another.

Who is the author of all this complex but orderly creation? It is difficult to comprehend the Creator. Scientists have explored a small part of creation. But they have made no attempt to understand the Creator. One should know the Muulaadhaara (the basis) for the whole of creation.

Students should not waste time or energy in wrong pursuits. They should cultivate Sath sanga not in the worldly sense. Sath is a part of Sath-Chith-Aanandha, the attribute of the Divine. You must always internally be in the company of God, who is the embodiment of Bliss. Sath is Truth.

Chith is Awareness and Aanandha is Bliss. The significance of this can be understood by a small example. Sweetness is the essence of God. We sing in the bhajan "Madhuraadhipathe Madhuram Madhuram" (Oh Lord of Mathura You are Sweet). Sugar is sweet. God is like Sugar.

Sath may be compared to sugar. Chith can be compared to water, because it is everywhere. It is necessary for the sustenance of life whether one is a prince or a pauper. If you mix sugar and water you get syrup. Likewise the syrup of Aanandha comes out of the combination of Sath and Chith.

Students! Always think of the Lord. Don't give room for selfishness. Engage yourself in service to humanity with a sense of sacrifice. This is the lesson you should learn from the ten-day course that you have attended now.

You must understand that matter combined with energy is God. Make use of the things in the world with the awareness that it is all God's creation and you should be grateful to the Divine for everything. Have everything within limits, including your desire for comforts. Even the five elements should be used within limits. Otherwise they will spell danger.

Students! Work for the peace and prosperity of society without selfish motives. You have to put these things into practice and shine as ideal students.

Discourse in the Institute Auditorium at Brindhaavan on 30-5-1995.

16. Health, diet and Divinity

Not by penance, nor by baths in sacred waters,

Nor by studying of Scriptures, nor by Japa

Can the Ocean of worldly existence.

The cycle of birth and death--be crossed.

It can be done only by service to good people.

(Sanskrit Shloka)

MAN seeks to cross the ocean of Samsaara by penance, pilgrimages to sacred shrines, scriptural studies and exercises in meditation. But all these are of no avail without service to good people.

All these spiritual exercise are comprehended by seva (service).

For the achievement of the four Purusharthas (main goals of life)--Dharma, Artha, Kaama, and Moksha (Righteousness, wealth, desire and Liberation), health is essential. Without good health a man cannot accomplish even the most trivial thing. Hence, health is wealth. However, because of the influence of the present Kali (evil). Age, man is a prey to all kinds of ailments and has no peace of mind despite the possession of every conceivable kind of wealth and comforts. There is no dearth of doctors. In spite of the availability of so many amenities, why is man afflicted with disease? Indeed, more than physical ailments, mental diseases are growing limitlessly. Mental sickness caused by tension and worry gives us so many bodily ailments.

Man today is afflicted with discontent. As one set of desires are satisfied, other desires go on cropping up. If desires are reduced, contentment will grow.

Moreover, because of the perversions of the Kali Age, the five basic elements--ether, air, fire, water and earth--are polluted. The water we drink is impure. The air we breathe is polluted. The food we consume is polluted. As a consequence the mind gets polluted.

Understand the relationship between matter and mind

Today man has to understand the true relationship between matter and mind. When one is asked about the mind, he says, "Don't mind." When he is asked about matter, he answers' "It doesn't matter." By this sort of casualness, man is failing to understand mind and matter.

Only when man understands the nature of the mind can he recognise the true nature of humanness. What is the mind? It is not something negative. It is positive. It represents the power of the Aathma, the power of Sankalpa (Will). It can travel any amount of distance in space. It is capable of exploring the powers of the atom. The mind is capable of recognizing the truth that is valid for the three categories of Time--the past, the present and the future. The mind is therefore very essential in man's daily life. It is the source of all strength. Man today is indifferent to the importance and the powers of the mind.

Search for happiness within yourself

Man is seeking happiness from birth to death. The search starts with education. But education does not confer happiness. He desires a job, but that does not make him happy. He then seeks marriage as the means to happiness. Happiness eludes him because the wife claims equal rights.

Then he declares' "My life is a total darkness." What is the reason for this feeling? It is the ego that is the cause. As a man grows, his egoism also grows. One after another, desires go on increasing. Their fulfilment does not bring him the happiness he seeks.

Where is this Aanandha (bliss) to be found? It does not exist in material objects. It is not to be found in physical pleasures. The truth is man is the embodiment of bliss. He is searching for it outside himself. This is the mark of ignorance. When he is the embodiment of bliss, how can he secure bliss outside himself?

Today, inspite of all his wealth, man is unhappy. He is perpetually racked by lack of peace.

Devotees come here from all parts of the world. Each of them asks: "I want peace." Here are three words: "I", "want", "peace". "I" is ego. "Want" is desire. Remove the ego and desire, you will have peace. Ego and desire have enveloped peace. When the covering is removed, peace will manifest itself.

Man can lead a blissful life only when he enjoys health. Wealth can offer comforts but not peace.

Wealth can provide a multi-storied mansion but not sound sleep. Wealth can provide bodily comforts, but physical comforts do not produce bliss. Air-conditioners and Dunlopillo mattresses may give comfort to the body. But when there is no peace of mind, of what use are these comforts? The body is like a water bubble, the mind is like a monkey; don't follow the body or the mind, follow the conscience.

Man today is not following the conscience. He is sticking to the body and mind which are useless. He must enquire into the problem, "Who am I?" He will discover that the body; the senses and the mind are all the instruments and he is their master. The master has today become a slave of his body and mind, which should be his servants. You are the Soul. Make it the basis for all your actions.

Realise the human values first

Today man is forgetting his essential humanness. The first requisite is for man to realise human values: Truth, Righteousness, Peace and Love. For a bulb to burn, you need a connecting wire, a switch and electric current. For man, that current is Truth or God. It is energy. This divine energy has to flow through the wire of Dharma (Righteousness) reach the bulb of Shaanthi (Peace) and produce the light of Prema (Love). Love is God. Live in Love. Love is everything.. Without love, life is a living death' for man.

Love expresses itself in many forms in relation to different persons, but is essentially one. Today love is tainted by selfishness, whether in relation to the mother, the spouse or the children or others. Man's selfishness is polluting the entire society. Attachment to others is natural. But there should be a limit to it. When this limit is exceeded, it becomes a disease. This is true in every case. Because of man's excessive desires, he is prone to diseases of every kind.

The most common source of illness among people today is tension. What is the cause of tension?

It is indulgence in excesses of various kinds. Men must learn to moderate the hectic pace of living. Hurry causes worry and worry causes disease. "Hurry, worry and curry (fatty food)" are the causes of heart diseases. Therefore the first requirement is control of food and head (the mind). When you control these two, there will be no room for illness. Importance of the eye

Today the new operation theatre has been inaugurated in our hospital. Doctors know that in the eye there are billions of cells which react to light rays. If any of these cells are affected, the vision is affected. For man the eye is the most important organ for comprehending the Universe.

Hence the eye has to be regarded as a sacred instrument. You cannot change creation, but by changing your vision you can get the proper view of creation.

Here is an illustration. Once there was a king, who developed an acute stomach trouble. All the medicines administered by doctors were of no avail. He then approached a great yogi, who told him that for his stomach ailment he had to treat the sight. He should see nothing but green everywhere. The yogi left and the king ordered that all places in his kingdom should be painted green. Sometime later, the yogi returned and found that people were engaged in splashing green paint everywhere. When asked for the reason, they told him that they were carrying out the King's orders. The yogi went to the king and told him that to see everything green, all that was needed for him was to wear green glasses. It was absurd to attempt to paint everything green.

Similarly if we change our vision, we will experience peace. When people view the world with the vision of love, they will have peace. All diseases will be cured. Most diseases have their origin in the mind. Everything has a psychological basis. When a person feels that something is wrong with him, he develops an illness. A healthy mind is needed for a healthy body. But it is not enough to be physically healthy. Man needs Dhaiva-anugraham (God's grace) also. To acquire God's grace you have to cultivate the love of God. Love has become today a kind of show. Genuine love should emanate from the heart. Start the day with love, spend the day with love, end the day with love, that is the way to God. If you develop love, disease will not come near you.

Realise the value of health

I am 70 years now. I can see even an ant that is far away. It is not due to divine power. It is physical power. What is the reason? Diet control. My weight has remained the same for over sixty years---108 lbs only. Proper balance must be maintained throughout life. There must be balance in respect of knowledge and several other things. Students pollute their knowledge by seeing bad things, listening to bad things and by bad thoughts. Their minds are perverted by addiction to films. They should learn to lead pure lives. Only then will they experience bliss and health.

Embodiments of the Divine! Realise the value of health. Self-restraint is essential to maintain health. Regulate your habits and develop good manners, which are the mark of a true man.

Similarly the good devotee is one who does his duty. Duty is God.

Everyone has to develop the manners required in daily life. The manners should be such that they confer self satisfaction.

You should conduct yourself properly not for the sake of others but for your own sake. When there is self-satisfaction there will be self-realisation. For all these you must have selfconfidence.

Most people today have no confidence in themselves and are perpetually racked by doubts. In Jesus's time there was one 'Doubting Thomas.' But today all are 'Doubting Thomases.'

Everyone is doubting every other.

For every man two things are essential: Arogya (good health) and Aanandha (Happiness). Health for the body and bliss for the spirit. With these two wings you can soar to any height. You need both the things, for which you must secure God's grace. To get God's grace, you have to engage yourself in sacred action. Bear in mind the three P's--Purity, Patience and Perseverance. With these three you are bound to acquire good health and bliss.

Bhagavaan's example

You may believe it or not. But the truth is that these three are responsible for my Aarogya (health) and Aanandha (bliss). I am always happy. I would like to run but there is no place where

I can do so. I can lift anybody at this age. This strength is present potentially in everyone. But it is being wasted. If the energy in everyone is properly conserved he can do anything.

The Hospital here began in a small way with a single room. Over the years it was expanded. Dr.

Rajeshwari, mother of Srinivas, (former Warden of Brindhaavan Hostel) worked hard to develop the hospital. She devoted all her earnings to the expansion of the hospital. She worked ceaselessly day and night. Ultimately she passed away in the hospital itself. The hospital was her home.

Thereafter, Dr. Savithri has been carrying on the work. Savithri has been working tirelessly. She attends to everything herself. By her work for patients she is becoming a patient herself. She must take care of her health. Only when the doctor is healthy, the patients can be well cared for.

As is the doctor so is the patient. Hence Savitri must take care of her own health. This is all the more necessary because the hospital is growing day by day. Srinivas is rendering every help for the hospital. There are others who are also serving the hospital in various ways.

Free medical aid

The Whitefield hospital which began in a single room, has now grown into a big complex. The doctors have to meet the growing demands on their services, The numbers of patients coming to the hospital are growing all the time. All services are totally free. Not a paisa is collected from the patients. Such free medical treatment is not given anywhere in the world. This applies to the Super Speciality Hospital in Prashanthigram. Elsewhere hospitals have become big business. In fact, in every sphere commercialization is rampant. Education is a business, music is a business, health is a business. The whole world has become a market place. Welfare services should be free for all. There are numerous people who cannot afford the costs of medical treatment.

Doctors should render free service to such persons. My words should not be misunderstood.

Even in the earning of incomes there should be a limit. Many doctors lack determination. They join a hospital on a good salary. But after a month or so, when another hospital offers a higher salary they go over to the new hospital. How long are you likely to stay in the other hospital?

When you go like this, you forfeit the confidence of hospital managements. Even workers behave in this way. They shift from place to place. The right thing is to stick to a job for three or four years. Then your work will secure automatic recognition. Doctors should inspire confidence in patients

Doctors are obsessed with salaries. They should be more concerned about patients. When they concentrate on their patients, they will develop into excellent doctors. Inspire confidence in the patients. Then any medicine you give will work wonders. The patients will hail such a doctor as a "good doctor." A "good doctor" in due course becomes a "God doctor." "Vaidhyo Naaraayano harih," it is said. The doctor is Divinity itself. Doctors should render service in this spirit.

Service is God.

Very good work is being done in our hospital as well as elsewhere. Bhaarith would not be what it is without good people. Without meritorious people can the world experience light? There are good and bad people in the world. All should become good and develop into Godly men. The same Aathma is present in everyone. Doctors should look after the patients with the same care they would show to their kith and kin. Then all would experience equal happiness.

Discourse at the Sri Sathya Sai Hospital, Whitefield on 3-6-1995.

17. Significance of worship at the Lord's Feet

GOD is immanent in the entire cosmos like oil in sesame seed and butter in milk. Just as the seeds have to be crushed to get the oil and the milk has to be curdled and churned for getting butter, saadhana has to be done to realise God. Nine forms of devotion have been indicated in the Bhaagavatham. If one follows any of these paths, he can experience the Divine.

Prior to the commencement of this meeting, the Jyothi (sacred lamp) was lit by Svaami. No other thing signifies divinity as this sacred effulgent flame. It always goes upward. It can be kept anywhere. Everywhere it is lit it dispels darkness. Since ancient times the people of Bhaarith have been observing the sacred custom of lighting a lamp at the commencement of any auspicious ceremony. They have been worshipping the jyothi as it dispels darkness and is a symbol of the effulgence of wisdom. Such a sacred custom, which is immemorial part of Indian culture, is ignored today. People indulge in practices which are contrary to such traditions. If you understand the significance of this custom and the spirit behind the lighting of the lamp, you can understand Divinity.

In order to light the jyothi you need four things - a container, oil, wick and a match-stick (fire) to light it. For dispelling the darkness outside, you need these four. Similarly for dispelling the darkness within you, you need the Jyothi of Wisdom. Raavana was a highly learned person, who had mastered all the Vedhas and Vedhaangas (ancient sacred texts). In spite of such erudition his heart was in pitch darkness (plunged in lust). This brought about his downfall. His son, Indhrajit, was also very powerful and was noted for his valour and his capacity to wield missiles charged with the power of Manthras. But these were of no avail against the power of the Divine.

Likewise, Hiranyakashipu, who had mastery over the elements, was a victim of his ego.

Inner purity is the greatest wealth

Only by the light of the Divine lamp inside can you blossom as a worthwhile person. Inner purity is the greatest wealth that one can acquire. The inner purity is the wick in the container of the heart. Devotion is the oil and Divine Grace is the fire with which the lamp of wisdom can be lit.

The prime requisite for achieving Divine Grace is to have harmony in thought, word and deed.

The Lord has inscrutable ways when He wishes to protect His devotees. An incident in the Mahaabhaaratha can be described to prove this, in which Krishna made Dhraupadhi fall at the feet of Bheeshma and secure his blessings for saving the Paandavas from the pledge Bheeshma had taken to kill the Paandavas or die in battle the next day.

Bheeshma lost the fight stricken by Arjuna's arrows.

One cannot apprehend the ways of Divinity. It is only by unsullied devotion and adherence to Truth that one can realise God, who is embodiment of Love and Truth. If you follow truth you can sanctify your life.

To earn the grace of the Divine, the easy way is surrendering at the Feet of the Lord. The feet, which were washed by Brahma, the creator, the feet which were worshipped by Bharatha through Raama's sandals, which ruled the kingdom of Ayodhya for 14 years, should be your object of worship.

Real significance of the feet

There is so much power in the feet of the Lord which you cannot understand. The feet form the basis for not only the physical frame of the body; but also for spiritual and ethical purposes. The significance of each limb of the body is explained in Vedhaantha. The five senses of the body.

represent the five elements (sound is ether, touch is air, vision is fire, taste is water and smell is earth). In the Purusha Shuktha the body of the Divine is described in detail. The four varnas in society are represented by four parts of the Cosmic Person

Brahmanas, Kshathriyas, Vaishyas

and Shuudhras (the working class). It is the feet that support the entire body, comprising the other three classes. So the feet are an important part of the body. The real significance of the feet is not properly understood by all. The Vedhas proclaim the unity of all classes of people by describing them as limb of one body. The Vedhas declare that

"Ekaathma Sarvabhootha

antharaathma" (same Aathma is present in all beings).

The Vedhas proclaim the importance of the feet. Even in ordinary life we advise a person who has harmed another to fall at the latter's feet and beg his pardon to escape legal action. There is a close link between the different parts of the body. When one walks on the road if the eye sees a thorn, the legs avoid trading on it. When the foot is injured, the eye sheds tears. There is such close co-ordination in the physical body. Similarly in the body of the Divine, the Brahmanas, Kshathriyas, Vaishyas and Shuudhras form an integral part. If a Shuudhra is in trouble, the Brahmana should be concerned. When such feelings develop in the world, there will be peace and harmony in society. Everyone should realise this and foster unity.

Do all saadhanas with purity of heart

Embodiments of love! The Prema thathva (Love Principle) is within you. What you are practising now as love is not real love. It is only affection out of Anuraaga (attachment to the body). Real love is unchanging. The feeling of love to the Divine is real devotion 'emanating from the heart.

You are doing a lot of saadhana. You should do this with purity of heart. The greatest saadhana will be chanting the Name of the Lord and doing service to one's fellow beings, who are the embodiments of the same Aathma that is in you. Whatever you do, do it as an offering to the Divine. What is the use of sending thousands of rupees and carrying the Paadhukas (divine sandals) if you do not understand their inner significance and have purity of heart? The external objects serve as symbols for beginners, just as a child learns words with the help of pictures.

After understanding the significance, you must concentrate on Divinity without external aids such as these Paadhukas.

Worship the Paadhukas thinking all the while of the Lord's Form. Develop Love of God and share it with all.

Discourse on the evening of 8-7-1995 at Sai Kulwanth Mandap, Prashaanthi Mandhir.

We are flowers of the same creepers. Our minds are the flowers that grow on the creeper of the heart. The flowers may be different but the creeper is the same. We are the children of the same race!

We all belong to the race of humanity but not to the race of birds and beasts. Since we belong to the illustrious race of humanity, we must conduct ourselves in a sublime manner; we are waves, born in the ocean of Sathchithaanandha. Since we are born of the same race, we should radiate the oneness of humanity without harbouring hatred against any one.

18. Manifest Divine Qualities

Why should one be born at all on earth

If he will not lift his hands in prayer to Siva,

Chant the name of Hari with his tongue,

And is not filled with compassion and love for Truth?

He is a curse for the mother who bore him.

This is a poem by Pothana. It was blossoming from the flowers of his heart. It is the essence of the three yogas (Karma, Inaana and Bhakthi). It signifies the Karma-thrava (the three-fold action) in thought, word and deed. It shows the royal path to Liberation.

"Chethulaaranga Shivuni Puujinchadeni" (If one will not worship Shiva with his hands) refers to the Karma-maarga, the path of action. This is the first among the three yogas expounded in the Upanishaths. This is the first chapter in the Bhagavath Geetha.

"Noru novvanga hari Keerthi nuduvadeni" (If one will not chant the glories of Hari with his tongue) refers to the second step. This is the Bhakthi yoga preached in the Vedhas and the Upanishaths. This is the Bhakthi yoga extolled in the Geetha.

"Dayayu Sathyamu thaa thanuvedeni" (If he does not cherish compassion and Truth) refers to the primary duty of man to cherish in thought, word and deed, truth and compassion.

Only he is a true man who has all three qualities. The Upanishaths define man as one who has full faith. Today, people instead of adhering to this sacred path, are ruining their precious human life by taking to wrong ways.

True ornaments of man

"Truth is the ornament for the neck." "Charity is the ornament for the hand." "Listening to sacred scriptures is the ornament for the ears." What other ornaments does a man need if he had these three? So says a Sanskrit saying.

The ornaments which people wear today are a source of fear. But if the ornaments of truth, charity, and listening to sacred discourses are worn, there is no cause for fear. This is called Abhaya (fearlessness). The most important element in man's existence is sankalpa (firm thought). As are the 'thoughts, so is the speech. As is the speech so are the actions. The harmony of these three will lead to the experience of Divinity. Words come out of the heart. They should be filled with compassion. The heart is the abode of compassion. It is the source of love. Hence whatever emanates from the heart should be filled with love. That love should express itself in speech. The flow of love in speech should find concrete expression in action.

The heart is the seat of the Paramaathma (Supreme Self). The Ganga that flows from it is the river of Truth. Actions are the harvest that is reaped from the field watered by Truth. Hence, it is said that the high-souled beings are marked by harmony in thought, word and deed.

Unfortunately, today people think in one way, speak in another way and act differently. As a result, humanness has been degraded today. To raise it to its proper level, the triune unity of thought, word and deed is essential. This is the penance for our times. This is the means to realise peace. This is the truth. This is everything.

Manifest Divine qualities

The cosmos was born out of Truth and merges in Truth. This is the Truth that is a manifestation.

God is Truth. The human form is an expression of the Divine. Having emanated from the Divine, man should manifest his Divine origin by manifesting his inherent divine qualities. But, man is behaving in a demonic manner.

Man has to rise above the animal nature. He has to express his divine potencies. For this, man has to acquire Aathmik knowledge (Knowledge of the Divine Self). Aathma is the all-pervading Universal Consciousness. It is immanent in everyone. Only as long as this consciousness is present in the human body it is called Shivam. Once the consciousness leaves the body it becomes Shavam (a corpse).

To experience the Divine within you all you have to do is to dedicate all your actions to the Divine. No other spiritual exercise is necessary. This does not mean you should give up other forms of worship like japa. The basic equipment is that whatever spiritual exercise is done it should be performed whole-heartedly, with full concentration.

For instance, we have Likhitha Japa. (Bundles of notebooks in which devotees had written the name of the Lord thousands of times had earlier been placed at the Lotus Feet of Bhagavaan).

Today people write the names without thinking aloud the name of the Lord in their minds and uttering the names with their mouths. As you start writing the Name, you must first reflect on the Name in the mind and utter the Name by the mouth, and then write the name with your hand.

This is Likhitha japa, the penance of writing the Lord's name. Some people, to complete the writing of the name a crore of times, resort to devices like using carbon paper to multiply the number of names written or cyclostyling what they have written once. This cannot be described as Likhitha Japa. The name should get inscribed in the heart. It then becomes a kind of negative from which any number of prints can be taken.

Dedicate all deeds to God
 Whatever you do, deem it as God's work. This can be applied to every ordinary act in daily life, whether it is sweeping the floor, or preparing chappathis or cutting vegetables. Everyone of these acts can be turned into a spiritual exercise by the spirit in which you do it. To perform every act as an offering to the Divine is true devotion.
 India and the world are today suffering from disorder and violence because people have lost Aathma-Vishvaasa (faith in the Self). They are fostering attachment to the body and ignoring the Spirit. Man should not follow the senses which are wayward, the body which is perishable, or the mind which is fickle. He must follow the conscience, which tells him what is right or wrong.
 From ancient times, Bhaaratheeyas have adhered to the four goals of human life: Dharma, Artha, Kaama and Moksha (Righteousness, wealth, desire and Liberation). But all the goals were linked to Dharma (Righteousness). Wealth should be acquired by righteous means. Desires should be related to what is righteousness. When wealth and desires are associated with Dharma, Moksha (Liberation) is easily attained.
 "Go back to your source"
 Many devotees come to Svaami and pray to Svaami to show them the way. What is it that is to be shown to them? I tell them, "You crazy ones! There is no need for any new path for you. You go back by the way you came. You came from the Aathma. You go back to the Aathma."
 Here you have come from your respective places. You may spend a few hours or a few days here
 You will then return to your homes. You go on pilgrimages. But whatever places you may visit ultimately you return to your Svasthanam (native place). The true Svasthanam is the Abode of the Spirit---Sva + Sthaanam. People who are not aware of the spiritual basis of life take to wrong courses.
 Embodiments of love! Undergoing many hardships, you have come here out of your devotion and faith to experience the bliss of staying here in spite of many inconveniences. You must carry with you the same blissful feelings when you go back to your homes. Today each of you is experiencing separately. But when you go back, by recalling this experience you feel the presence of all the others in your hearts.
 Install the Divine in your hearts and carry on your duties with devotion and dedication.

Remember the ultimate message of Vyaasa that the whole purpose of life is to render help to others and avoid the sin of doing harm to others.
 Righteousness dwells in your heart
Shri Narayana Rao (who had spoken earlier) urged that Righteousness should grow in the world.
 Where is this Righteousness? It is in your conduct, your thoughts, words and deeds.
 Righteousness dwells in your heart. When the impulses arising from the heart are expressed in words, that is Sathya. To put into action your words is Dharma. For all these Love is primary.
 Love in action is Righteousness. Love in speech is Truth. Love in thought is Peace. Love in understanding is Non-violence.
 When you realise that God is in everyone, you will practise non-violence. God is one, though He may be worshipped in different forms and under different names. You may call him Raama or Krishna, Allah or Jesus, Hari or Saayee. Any Name can be uttered by any one.
 Embodiments of love! If you want to transform the world, to promote all-round prosperity in the country, to make the prayer that "all people should be happy" become a reality, develop faith in the Self. Never forget God. Without God there is no universe. Let the non-believers have their way. But they have no right to question the beliefs of others. To ask for physical proofs of the existence of experience like bliss or love or for subtle things like the fragrance of a flower is impracticable. To deny the reality of love on the ground that it has no recognizable form is meaningless. Love may have no form. But the mother who exhibits love has a form.
 All beings are manifestations of the Cosmic Divine. The forms are different but the spirit that animates them all is One, like the current that illumines bulbs of different colours and wattage.
 Cultivate this feeling of oneness and do not be critical of any faith or religion. Dedicate your lives to the service of your fellow-beings. Thereby you will be redeeming your lives.
 Discourse in Prashaanthi Mandhir on the morning of 9-7-1995.
 Take up the Name of God, any of the innumerable ones, any that appeals to you most and the form appropriate to that Name and start repeating it. From now on, that is the Royal road to ensure joy and peace, that will train you in the feeling of brotherhood and remove enmity towards fellowmen.
 BABA
 19. Acquire friendship of God
 Destroying pride man becomes endearing;

Destroying anger man gets rid of sorrow;
 Destroying desire man acquires peace;
 Destroying greed man achieves happiness.
 EMBODIMENTS of Love! As long as man is filled with arrogance, he cannot win any kind of respect from others. Egoism brings about a man's ruin. Only when a man gets rid of pride the people respect and love him. The first requisite for securing the esteem and love of the people is to root out Ahamkaara (self-conceit).
 The second is Krodham (anger). A man consumed by anger can never be free from misery.
 Anger carries with it a blazing fire Anger is also described as Krodhaagni, (the fire of anger). As long as one is consumed by the fire, he cannot have happiness. To get freedom from misery, man has to get rid of anger. Anger is also the cause of depravity in man. It ruins him in various ways.
 It alienates him from his kith and kin.
 For the decline in human qualities today, pride and anger are primarily responsible. The third enemy of man pervades his entire being. It is insatiable desire. Man's entire life is filled with desires which are endless and ever mounting. Man can achieve peace of mind only by the conquest of Kaama (desire).
 The fourth enemy is greed or miserliness. When man overcomes greed, he can secure happiness.
 A greedy man cannot enjoy bodily; mental or spiritual happiness. The miser is like the dog in the manger. He neither enjoys his wealth, nor does he allow others to enjoy it. The world despises a miser.
 Only when man gets rid of these four undesirable qualities can he experience peace and happiness. These four vices have no place in a true human being.
 Human heart should be filled with compassion
 Man is the very embodiment of the Divine. This Divine Will is termed Prakrithi (the cosmos). In every human being the Divine Will is present. Man has taken birth to give expression to the Will of the Divine. The human heart should be an ocean of milk filled with compassion. The heart, in the core of which there should be this milk of compassion, is today filled with the four evil qualities.
 The ancient sages had a vision of the Supreme Lord Vishnu reclining on the Ksheerasaagara (Ocean of Milk) and adored Him in that form. And this was how Saint Thyagaraja described the Lord in his famous song beginning with the words: "Ksheersaagara shayana!" (Oh Lord reclining on the Ocean of Milk). (Svaami sang some lines from the song).
