 What is this Ocean of Milk? Is it anywhere on earth? On this mundane world with its material concerns, you cannot perceive this Ocean of Milk. Nevertheless, it exists. Where? In every human heart. In this heart Lord Sriman Naaraayana is resting. This is the reason why the Lord is described as Hridhayavaasi (the Dweller in the Heart). Every human heart is a shrine of God, In the Ocean of Milk in such a heart, no room should be given for crocodiles and whales in the form of evil qualities to dwell. Unfortunately, because of the influence of the Kali Age, the Ocean of Milk in the human heart has been turned into a Kshaarasaagaram (Ocean of brine)-in which attachment and hatred dwell as crocodiles and whales. The salt in this Ocean is of man's making.
 Today cities like Madras and Bombay are close to the sea. But can they make use of its water?
 No. Because it is saline.
 Deities and demons in daily life
 The ancient sages used to pray: "Oh gods, we welcome you. Oh Raakshasas (demons), depart from us." Who are these gods? These deities are 'good thoughts, good feelings, good behaviour'.
 The sages prayed that such celestial beings should enter their minds. The demons whom they wanted to get rid of are evil thoughts, bad feelings and bad actions. This is an example for every one to follow in daily life.
 In daily life, we consume good things and eschew bad things. We consume good food and defecate what is not wholesome. This is a basic principle. You must give up the bad to provide room for the intake of what is good. This is the lesson from everyone's daily experience.
 Unfortunately today men give up what is wholesome and take what is harmful. That is, they are taking in the bad and giving up the good. It is this which accounts for the prevalence of disorder and misery in the world today. Hence, the first need is to cultivate good qualities. Bad thoughts and bad habits have to be cast away. Not recognizing this truth, man makes himself a prey to misery and discontent. Can you say that this misery and worry were caused by Providence? Not at all. You own bad thoughts and actions are the cause of your misery. As you sow, so shall you reap.
 The seed determines the fruit. When man cherishes bad thoughts, 'bad results' haunt him.
 When he has good thoughts, the results are also good.

Do not blame God for your grief
 'Those who do not recognise this fact, go about blaming God. They lament: "Oh God! Why are you inflicting these miseries on me? Why are you denying, me peace of mind?" God is the Eternal Witness. He is the dispenser of the fruits of actions. He gives you according to your deserts. He is in no way responsible for your grief or happiness. (Svaami sang a ballad which pointed out that a man sows a poisonous seed, while desiring sweet fruits. Unable to eat the poisonous fruit he blames God). This is the product of ignorance. It is opposed to the sacredness of human life.
 Man's first duty is to practise good conduct. Such good conduct can ensue only from the contemplation of God. People must nourish sacred thoughts about the Divine in their hearts. This is not something which can be got from someone or somewhere outside you. It is within you. The Divine is present within you. Those who experience this Presence within them can experience a joy that is indescribable, wherever they may be. It is not enough if you are here. You must realise the sweetness of your presence here. A frog that is close to a lotus is totally unaware of its nectarine honey. But a bee comes from afar and drinks the honey. People should realise that time is fleeting and one's life span is melting away every moment like a block of ice. Man is nearing his end even before he realises his primary duty. What is that duty? It is to discover the purpose of life. Man seeks wealth, comforts, position and happiness. How are these to be got? Moving away from God's grace, man seeks all these kinds of worldly happiness. Of what avail are these transient physical pleasures? Thyaagaraaja sought to know wherein lay real happiness. Is it in wealth or is it in the service of Lord Raama? If one is blessed with God's grace, what more does he need? Practise sacred impulses to experience the bliss within Hence, seek God's grace at the outset. Does real happiness lie in enjoying creature comforts? No. True happiness consists in manifesting all the potentialities in man. When you put into practice all the sacred thoughts that emanate from your mind you will realise true happiness. Most people do not practise the sacred impulses that arise in them with the result that they do not experience the bliss within them. Embodiments of Love! The most important thing you have to recognise is that your heart is a Ksheerasaagaram (Ocean of Milk). But because of the invasion of bad thoughts and feelings, your humanness is vitiated. Humanness consists in harmony of thought, word and deed. Your freedom is subject to the norms of society Today devotees have come here from all parts of the world. Whatever your dress, your education, your habits, each of you has to realise one supreme fact. You are a member of society and as such you have to respect the social norms. You cannot behave as you please. All your actions have to be in accordance with the obligations to society. Your freedom is subject to the norms of society. Society does not mean a large group of persons. Relationship with any other person is governed by social obligations which limit your freedom. Your right to wield the stick in your hand in a public place is limited by the right of others to use the public places. Your freedom is subject to your duty towards other fellow-beings. Moreover, Svathanthram (freedom) has to be construed in the correct way. Svathanthram consists of the two terms: Sva and thanthram. Sva means the Spirit. Svathanthram means acting according to the dictates of the Spirit. The Spirit will never cause harm to others. It is the Eternal Witness present in everyone and desires the welfare of one and all. Hence Svathanthra or real freedom is related to the Divine Will. Duty is related to one's obligations to society. Freedom is related to expressing the Will of the Divine. The Prakrithi (phenomenal world) is a projection of the Divine. Hence, it should be regarded as holy. Duty means recognizing the sacredness of one's obligations to Prakrithi. Each one must recognise that he (or she) is an image of the Divine and conduct himself on that basis. He alone is a real man who lives his life in this way. Deeming the physical body alone as real, man goes after worldly objects and ultimately ends up in misery. Man must take to the spiritual path. This means that one should recognise the entire cosmos as an image, of the Divine. Once one has this conviction, evil can never approach him. He experiences bliss at all times and everywhere. He desires that all should be happy. Unfortunately, most people today do not cultivate such a broad feeling. They are immersed in concerns about themselves and their family, They should transcend these narrow feelings and have regard for society as a whole. They should deem service to society as service to God.

The illness and the remedy

The overseas devotees who have come here are affluent people. Why have they come here? They are like patients who go to a hospital for their ailments. All of them suffer from some kind of illness or other, mental or physical. All are victims of some kind of mental illness. They have all come for the medicine of peace, joy, and happiness. Wherefrom is this peace to be got? It cannot be got from outside. It is within oneself. The disease has arisen within because of bad qualities. Every person's physical, mental and spiritual health is mined by bad qualities, bad thoughts and bad feelings. Hence, cultivate good thoughts, good feelings and good attitudes. Expel every bad thought as it arises in the mind. You cannot relish food that is not tasty. Should you not impart sweet taste to your life which spans several decades? How to impart that taste? By constant contemplation on God. Life is made tasty by good thoughts and good actions. All those who wish to pursue the spiritual path must begin with getting rid of bad thoughts and bad practices and start transforming their lives. People ask: "How are we to cultivate a broad attitude?" The answer is: "Get rid of the artificial barriers you have raised between yourself and others." These barriers create narrow and limited loyalties and prevent you from enjoying an all-embracing bliss. Enlarge your horizon. Expand your vision. This is the true, spiritual exercise for you. Devotion of overseas artists

During the past three days, devotees from many countries have presented a blissful programme of the kind which cannot be seen anywhere else in the world. They would not have come on the invitation of any government. Even if they had come, you would not have experienced the kind of bliss you have enjoyed here. This is an example of the relationship between an object and its image. It is because of the bliss within the artists, they could generate that bliss in the audience. They have come from their respective countries filled with devotion and in their singing and dance they completely forgot themselves. This kind of performance would not be possible by artists who expect rewards. The devotees did not come merely with art, but they came with their hearts. Their "art" is filled with "heart." Some of them were oblivious to their bodies in the performances.

They were forgetful of their native countries--whether Russia, or America, or Germany, or Africa. This is real Samaadhi (the state of spiritual ecstasy). Samaadhi is not falling into a trance or some state of unconsciousness. These may be caused by hysteria or antic of the imagination. Samaadhi means equal-mindedness, forgetting the body consciousness and being immersed in Aanandha (bliss). These devotees demonstrated this Samaadhi and shared their bliss with thousands of others. Not only did they experience this bliss themselves, but they shared it with all. Can there be a greater thapas (penance) than this? What greater Saadhana do you need? "Udahareth Aathmanaa-Aathmaanam," says the Upanishath-- Raise yourself and share that experience with others. Adherence to tradition by overseas artists

Those artists have been strictly adhering to the artistic traditions of their respective countries. In the Japanese dance yesterday, the priest (an old man) appeared to be shivering. He has all the strength, but when approaching the shrine and nearing the Emperor he displays extreme humility and reverence. They practise such supreme humility. Economically and technologically Japan is a highly advanced country. But see what humility and discipline they display! Look at the Russians. Among Russians, there is a tendency to "rush." But what complete selfforgetfulness was displayed by the lady while she sang and danced? What ecstasy in her heart made her experience such joy? She was completely lost in her song and dance. No one can tell what kind of experience one can have in a certain place at a certain time and in a certain situation. Altogether, what transformation has taken place in all those who came for the Global Festival! They came for the first time. But the transformation that has taken place in them cannot be seen in many who have been coming here for years and years. Many of you have listened to countless discourses and have read a lot of books. But, what is the change in you? None at all. You have remained where you are. If we examine further, many seem to have gone back rather than going forward. Hence, devotees should strive to put into practice at least a fraction of what they have seen and heard. The lives of these overseas devotees appear exemplary. Though they have learnt little, the joy they derive from it is great. This is what is great about them. There are many here who know a great deal, but who practise very little of it. Every devotee must aspire for friendship towards God. Of what use is all the reading of scriptures and epics? Very little of it is put into practice. The overseas devotees know only a few things. An American artist declared "Baba is my great friend." This means that he had developed this friendly attitude even before coming here. How did he accomplish? Friendship towards the Lord is one of the nine forms of devotion. Starting with listening to the glory of the Lord, friendship forms the penultimate stage before Aathmanivedhanam (utter self-surrender to the Lord). Every devotee must aspire to reach the stage of sneham (friendship). What kind of friendship is it? It is not something new. It is an old friendship. Only such friendship can bring about familiarity and intimacy with the Lord. You maintain formal relations with a friend, But, because God is an ancient friend, the devotee can experience an unrestrained intimacy. When you recognise this truth, you can behave with natural ease and freedom towards God. You are free to confess your lapses to such a friend. You have to receive His counsel. You can then get your heart purified. Offering your sullied heart to the Lord is like presenting a soiled currency note to the Reserve Bank for getting a new one. A note which is not acceptable to others will be accepted by the Reserve Bank. Only God can accept it and replace it with a new one. Therefore, offer all your bad qualities to God and receive from Him all good qualities. Don't pass on your bad qualities to others. You have to offer yourself to God. What is that you have to offer to God? Not a leaf, a flower, a fruit or holy water. You have to offer yourself to God. Then you become one with the Divine. That is what God desires from you. Instead of realising this sublime truth people seek to offer their hair to Sri Venkateshvara to secure petty favours. What is it that Lord Venkateshvara lacks? Does the Lord need your overgrown hair? What is it the Lord needs? On the top of the head you have dark hair. That represents the Thamo-guna--the quality of lethargy and ignorance. Those who go to Thirupathi should offer to God their Thamoguna and acquire the Sathva-guna. Realise that there is nothing of ours that you can offer to God. All you enjoy is from Him. Develop this conviction. Treat whatever good or bad that happens to you as coming from God. What you deem as bad may be like a bitter medicine prescribed by a doctor for your good. Consider all that happens, good or ill, pleasure or pain, is for our good. Only then you will be able to nourish your good qualities. Embodiments of love! Wherever you may be, in whatever condition, consider your hearts as an Ocean of Milk, the abode of God. God is omnipresent. When you lead your life with this faith, there is nothing greater than this. The overseas devotees who were here during the past three days have converted their hearts into the Ocean of Milk and invited the Lord to recline on it. The other devotees should learn from them. The world will come to Sai. Do not consider Sai Baba as a mere figure five feet three inches tall. His Presence will be felt all over the world. Wait and see. In a few days the entire world will come here. Therefore, at least from now on make the best use of the opportunity that has come to you and strive to redeem your lives. Because of proximity, you have tended to take me for granted. Yashodha was similarly misled about the true nature of Krishna and could not understand why He preferred the butter kept by the Gopikas to the butter offered by her. Krishna could be bound only by the rope of devotion. Yashodha had material affection but not the intense devotion of the Gopikas. The sense of dualism should go and there should be total identification with the Divine. On this holy occasion devotees from many countries have delighted every one here by their presentation of the artistic culture of their respective countries. Wherever you may go do not give up your traditional culture. Devotees from outside who come here adhere to their culture. But Bhaaratheeyas going abroad forget their ancient culture. What is worse, they even forget their mother tongue. After years spent in Bhaarith, within a short spell of stay in the United States they get addicted to the American language. When I ask in Thelugu young people who return after a short-stay in the U.S. what they are doing there, they say: "I don't know Thelugu." What is it that you have learnt? If you have forgotten your mother tongue, are you likely to remember your mother? Nations are many but the earth is one Raama declared: "The mother and the Motherland are greater than Heaven itself." Therefore, wherever you may go, do not forget your ancient traditions. This is relevant to people of all countries. At the same time, unity should be cultivated. "Nations are many, the earth is one.

Beings are many, but breath is one." This truth has to be recognized.

All the resources of Nature

like air are available to all irrespective of nationality or creed or race.

This is the unity in diversity that has to be realised, Out of unity comes purity. All should seek to live as brothers and sisters. No one should criticise any nation, faith or culture. When you cultivate this broad outlook, your culture will be respected by others. It is this spirit of unity that the world needs today.

If Bhaaratheeyas forget their culture they will be guilty of spiritual betrayal. See how the Chinese

(from Malaysia) performed their unique dances. The young lads had such intense dedication to their culture. Indians going abroad tend to decry their traditional culture as superstition. Once

Prof. Max Mueller, attempting to get the meaning of Vedhik passage from an Indian I.C.S.

trainee who gave his name as Chathurvedhi, found that he was totally ignorant of the Vedhas and had no respect for them. Prof. Max Mueller was sad that one born in India, with the name Chathurvedhi, should have so little regard for the Vedhas.

Bhaaratheeyas should realise what great respect is being shown by foreigners to our culture and spiritual heritage. The nation is going down morally and spiritually. The first need is to cultivate self-respect. Everyone should uphold the name and fame of Bhaarith. For this, they should have respect for the Vedhas and try to acquire the same knowledge of the Vedhas. To say the least, they should at least regard God as the indweller of the heart.

Embodiments of love! Cherish the heart as the temple of God and try to keep it pure and unsullied. Chant the name of the Lord to drive away all evil thoughts and impulses.

Discourse in Sai Kulwant Bhavan, Prashaanthi Nilayam on 11-7-1995.

The greatest instrument by which success can be ensured for all your efforts is Bhakthi. That will give health, wealth and prosperity too, for it will eliminate hatred and faction and give more power to your elbow when you plough the land.

BABA

20. The Divine dispeller of darkness

The human body, constituted by the five elements

is the combined product of the five elements.

These five elements are derived from the Divine.

But man to-day is not aware of the truth about these elements.

Man can accomplish many things in this world:

he can be a great scholar, a great warrior,

A ruler of rulers, a great astronomer

or an astronaut on the moon,

But can he control his senses and make his mind tranquil and steady?

Neither charity, nor yajna,

nor thapas, nor wisdom,

Nor the practice of ancient Dharma,

nor adherence to truth or any discipline

Will be of any avail without self-control.

EMBODIMENTS of the Divine Aathma! Water is getting scarcer every day. What is the reason?

because of the decline of morality among men water is getting scarce in the world. For human life morality is the life breath. Morality makes humanness blossom.

Because morals have been lost, water is getting scarce.

Today people are propagating Vedhaantha (philosophy) in various ways. This propaganda is exciting the minds of the people. It is perturbing the hearts of people.

Life is filled with doubts.

Man today does not require a siddhaantham (ideology). He needs sense-control. Without control of the senses, a man cannot become spiritual. This was proclaimed by saint Thyaagaraaja in his song wherein he said that without peace of the Spirit there can be no happiness for any one, whether he is a Vedhaanthik scholar or an aspirant. Only through self-control can a man experience peace. But man is engaged in a futile search for something he does not know. The world is full of such aimless seekers. They are forgetting the Eternal reality in the concern for transient worldly objects.

Lead lives inspired by sheelam and thyaaga

Man today is dominated by selfishness. Insatiable desire fills his whole being. The numbers of such persons are growing without limit. How can they achieve anything great in life? Their daily round of activities consists of reading newspapers, watching video programmes and listening to the radio. Every moment their attachment to castes, creed and parochial interests is growing.

Men today must learn to lead lives inspired by sheelam and thyaaga (morality and sacrifice).

Human relationships today are governed by friendship or enmity. The cause for either feeling is the mind. Hatred is bred by each one's thoughts. This may be seen from the hatred of Raavana towards Raama, of Shishupaala and Dhanthavakra towards

Krishna and of Kauravas towards Dharmaja, who was an "Ajaathashathru," incapable of hating anybody. There is no need to worry about the enmity of others towards you. You develop your friendly attitude towards all.

Ignore the abuses of others, because they serve only to diminish your sins and transfer them to the reviler. When a man praises another, the merits of the latter accrue to the former. Deem the critic as your friend, not the one who flatters you.

Accountability for actions

One's actions determine one's future. Actions are of three kinds, Thoughts are one kind. Giving expression to them is another. Acting according to one's words is the third. The mind is responsible for thoughts, the tongue for speech and the hands for actions. The combination of thought, word and deed represents the human state. These three account for man's pleasures and pain. Recognizing this, one should understand that he is accountable for his actions. No one can escape from the consequences of his deeds. But anything can be achieved through God's grace.

Hence man should strive to win God's grace.

The results of one's actions are realised over different periods of time. In some cases, the results are immediate, as, for instance, when one slips and sustains a fall. In some cases, the results occur after a few minutes or hours. For example, the food you take in the morning is digested after two hours. When you sow a seed in the ground, it takes some months or years to grow into a tree and yield fruits. Some fools imagine that they can get away with bad deeds because the consequences are not immediate. But the consequences are bound to occur some time or other.

Three types of Karmas

There are three types of actions: Sukarma, Vikarma and Akarma.

Sukarma relates to good actions which produce good results. Vikarma relates to bad actions which have bad consequences.

Akarma relates to the fruits of actions in previous lives. The suffering of good people like Seetha, Harishchandhra and Nala and Dhamayanthi have no basis in their actions during their lives, but are the results of previous karma. People who may have done no actions of any kind in their present lives may still suffer from the consequences of their actions in previous lives.

The effects of past deeds can be mitigated by earning God's grace. The means of securing Divine grace is to cultivate qualities like truth, righteousness, love, compassion and forbearance. With these qualities life becomes a beautiful garden and a joy forever. For the man filled with bad thoughts and actions, life is like the dark and filthy Vaitharini river (called Styx in Greek mythology). Each one has to judge for himself the nature of his life. Each one is a witness unto himself. A bad man may pass off for a good man from his external appearances but he knows within himself his real nature.

God is beyond all praise or criticism. He is Sath-Chith-Aanandha (Being-Awareness-Bliss). He blessees even the one who derides Him. When Kamsa, who ceaselessly hated Krishna, died at the Lord's hands, his blood flowed towards the feet of Krishna. Likewise, Shishupaala, who used the vilest abusive epithets against Krishna, was slain by Krishna, but his spirit merged in the Lord because he remembered the Lord always out of his hatred. (Svaami recited poems from the Bhaagavatham to illustrate the language in which Shishupaala reviled Krishna).

Fools who indulge in flippant remarks about Sri Krishna know nothing about the inscrutable ways of the Lord. Everyone has to face the consequences of his actions, though he may not know how, when or where these consequences may occur Man can reverse the consequences of bad actions by performing good deeds and invoking God's help.

The guru is in the heart

Today is Gurupuurnima. The real significance of Gurupuurnima does not consist in worshipping the guru (preceptor) with some offerings, but getting rid of the darkness of ignorance. Puurnima refers to the full moon, but the full moon symbolises the mind filled with delight. There is close association between the mind and the moon. Gurupuurnima signifies the elimination of all darkness and evil from the mind. The true Guru is in our heart. Purify the heart to let the Divine dwell in it.

Do not forget God. What you should forget is the mundane world. God is omnipresent in all forms, everywhere, as declared in the Purusha Shuktha. It is foolish to search for God, who is within you and outside you. When Raamakrishna Paramahansa was asked whether he had seen

God and could show Him to them, he replied- "I have seen God. But how can you see God if you don't pine for him in the same manner in which you pine for your wife and children and wealth?

Pray to Him, yearn for Him and be prepared to sacrifice everything for Him. Then you will experience the vision of God." God cannot be perceived by the spiritually blind, just as a blind man cannot understand what is meant by the whiteness of milk. God is infinite bliss. He is formless, but He can assume any form He wills. How can anyone attempt to describe the nature of God?

Contemplate on God with a pure heart. There is no greater spiritual exercise. But, as long as men are attached to worldly objects they can make no progress in the spiritual field. Once Radha and other Gopikas wanted to go down in a boat from Mathura to Brindhaavan. They rowed the boat all through the night, but found to their astonishment that the boat had remained where it had been. They then discovered that they had not untied the rope which kept the boat bound to a post on the bank.

Develop detachment and spirit of sacrifice

The first need is to develop the spirit of sacrifice and get rid of attachment and possessiveness.

Then, the yearning for God grows. All are entitled to receive God's grace according to their merits. It is like drawing upon a bank according to what you have deposited with it. There are three ways of getting money from a bank. One is drawing on your deposit. In spiritual terms, this means realising the fruits of your past actions. The second means is raising a loan on the security of your assets. This corresponds to the grace you get by your current good deeds. The third means to get money from a bank is to have a good surety to the loan you wish to raise from the bank. Spiritually, this corresponds to securing God's grace through the medium of a guru (preceptor). Who is the guru? He is the Divine dispeller of the darkness within you. The Divine Trinity (Brahma, Vishnu and Maheshvara) have been described as gurus. This implies that the Divine should be regarded as the supreme preceptor, who can destroy the darkness of ignorance.

Install God in your heart

Forgetting this basic truth, people run after men wearing the ochre robe who profess to impart a manthra and stretch their palm for money. This is not what is meant by Guru. Install God in your heart. The vibrations that emanate from the heart will elevate you spiritually and confer divine wisdom. This wisdom has been defined as Prajnaana (Constant Integrated Awareness). To acquire such wisdom you have to keep your mind pure as a mirror, using shraddha (earnestness) as a cloth, dipping it in the water of Prema (Love) and wiping the dust on the mirror (in the form of bad qualities). This wisdom cannot be acquired from books. It has to be got through selfexamination and self-correction.

Gurupurnima is an occasion for cleansing the mind to make it absolutely pure. It is not enough to praise God. You have to love Him. You have to become love itself so that you can love the entire Universe. I address all of you as "Embodiments of love." When you become embodiments of love, you can love all.

Discourse on 12-7-1995, in the Sai Kulwant Mandap of Prashaanthi Mandir.

21. Dedicate all actions to God

There is no greater penance than contentment for securing happiness.

There is no worse disease than insatiable desire.

There is no greater virtue than compassion.

Peace is the highest spiritual discipline.

EMBODIMENTS of love! There is no greater penance than shaantham (tranquillity or peace).

Peace is the foremost prize for man. Peace confers beauty on sages. Peace is the fascinating charm of the Divine. "Without such peace there can be no happiness," declared Thyaagaraaja (the composer-saint of south India).

There is no greater santhosham (happiness) than being contented. Man seeks happiness in various forms. But there is no happiness equal to shaanthi (peace).

Thyaagaraaja sang in the same strain, declaring that without peace there can be no happiness. There is no greater happiness than that derived from santhrupthi (contentment). What greater heaven is there than contentment?

"There is no worse disease than desire." Contemporary man is afflicted by endless desires. These desires are the cause of innumerable diseases, There must be a limit to desires. Today desires grow limitlessly. Consequently, diseases also increase limitlessly. Owing to endless desires, man is affected mentally and this gives rise to many bodily ailments. Hence everyone should try as far as possible to keep a check on desires.

Compassion-filled heart is the temple of the Divine

"Na dharmo dhayaa samah" (There is no virtue equal to compassion). What is dharma?

Compassion is the highest dharma. A heart filled with compassion is the temple of the Divine.

Every man should have a compassion-filled heart.

There is a lesson every man should learn. There is the potency of a manthra (a sacred declaration) in every word. Every plant has medicinal properties. Every human 'being' is precious. A true individual is one who knows and lives upto this truth.

People today do not recognise the value of being human and the preciousness of time.

You spend the whole day in hectic activity.

Do you call this living?

You eat three times a day.

Does this constitute living?

Do you think that living consists

In sleeping comfortably?

Do you regard indulgence in Gossip as the aim of life?

Did God give you life for these purposes?

Knowing what is merit and what is sin,

You are indifferent to them.

Is this the way you spend your life-time?

At least from now on,

Learn to lead a truly human life.

The Divine energy

The cosmos is a creation of the Divine. It is surcharged with energy.

This energy is not localised at a particular point in space or in time. Though this energy is all-pervading, man is not able to recognise its divine nature. As he cannot recognise it, he presumes that it does not exist.

Electrical energy is present all the time (in the electrical installations). But its presence is recognized only when a bulb is switched on. Likewise, though God is omnipresent. His divine effulgence will shine only in those who adore Him with a pure heart.

Man today is unable to understand what is life, what is its goal, what is one's duty and what should be one's aim. Time is moving fast like a whirlwind. Man's allotted span of life is melting every moment like a block of ice. Man's life ends even before he is aware of his duty. What is his duty? Every individual has some aspirations, some ideals to be realised and some sacred paths to be trodden. He makes no effort to pursue these aims. What is the goal and purpose of one's life, what is its secret? Man hardly puts these questions to himself. He is content to devote himself to sensuous pleasures. This is not what he should do; it is not the aim of life.

Every individual should manifest a divine ideal in his life. This ideal should absorb his entire life and activities. Alas! man today does not follow this sacred path.

Everything is based on man's thoughts, which find expression in external forms--a reflection of his inner being. This can be illustrated by a simple example. When one wants to build a house, he plans in advance how the different rooms should be located. These ideals are later incorporated in blue prints. The thoughts come first and then they are given concrete forms.

Similarly when you want to write a letter, you first think of what you should write and then commence to write.

Thoughts lead to action. There can be no action without sankalpas (firm thoughts). Hence, it is essential to entertain sacred thoughts. Everyone should realise that all the sorrows and miseries of modern man are due to his bad thoughts. Every man thinks that someone else is responsible for his troubles. This is not so. You alone are responsible for the good and evil that befalls you.

You blame others because of your weakness.

Valmeeki's transformation

The Kenopanishath has proclaimed this truth beautifully.

"Brahmavith Brahmaiva Bhavathi"

(The knower of the Divine becomes Divine himself). Whatever you aspire for, whatever your yearning, that you become yourself. When Valmeeki wished to write the Raamaayana, he first meditated on all the qualities of Raama and then alone he could commence his epic. Because of the constant repetition of the name of Raama and continuous meditation on the Raama Principle, he shone with the effulgence of Raama. It is one of the miracles of Raama that the highwayman

Rathnaakara could become the author of a great epic.

When you meditate on the effulgence of anyone, a part of that effulgence enters into you. Such was the case with Prahlaadha. By constant chanting of the name of the lord, devoting all his thoughts to Naaraayana, he was filled with the power of the Divine and experienced ineffable bliss. He could face with utter equanimity all the ordeals which he was subjected to by the minions of his father. (Svaami sang a poem from the Bhaagavatham in which Pothana describes how Prahlaadha chanted only the names of the Lord while the raakshasas were tormenting him).

Prahlaadha had no sense of fear. The effulgence of Vishnu shone in his face.

Man is a spark of the Divine

Man today should reflect on his true nature. The Lord declares in the Geetha- "The individual on earth is a fragment of my Eternal Self." The import of this declaration is' "Oh foolish man! Don't think you are only a composite of the five elements. You are an Amsa (fragment) of Myself."

A branch is a part of a tree. A child is a part of the mother. The branch cannot survive without the tree. The child cannot survive without the mother. Man is fragment of Maadhava (the Supreme Self). Hence man cannot exist without Maadhava. But, it may be asked, "Is not man surviving today? How is he doing that?" But what kind of life is he leading? Is he living as a human being? No. He is living as an animal. If he were aware that he is a spark of the Divine, why is he a prey to suffering? Does God have any worries or troubles? None at all. "He is in eternal bliss, the bestower of all happiness, the embodiment of all wisdom," says a Sanskrit sloka. If you are a fragment of that Divine, why should you be a prey to all this suffering? When you enquire in this manner you will realise that you are not behaving like a spark of the Divine.

You must take a pledge from today to lead a godly life.

Consider also how this has been treated in other religions. In the Bible, God is described as omnipotent and all encompassing. Moses was always meditating on God and dedicated his entire life to God. Because of this, Moses acquired the effulgence of the Divine. Jesus Christ declared repeatedly: "I and You are one."

A very great scientist, Charles Darwin, was so much devoted to his teacher, Henslow, that he became the very image of his preceptor. Such feelings should arise in the hearts of every one.

Today, people's feelings vary from moment to moment. The result is men lead mindless lives.

Having taken birth as a human being, having realised that one is a spark of the Divine, one should lead a godly life.

Quest for perfection

There was a great (Italian) violin manufacturer by name Anthony (Stradivarius). He used to take a whole year to produce a single violin, perfect in every aspect. Once a friend asked him'

"Anthony, if you take one year to make a single violin, how can you make a living?" Anthony replied' "Brother! God is the embodiment of perfection. In harmony with His perfection I must make a perfect violin. If I do not make a perfect violin, I shall be a traitor to God. God 'is fullness, total perfection. If you want to please God, your thoughts, words and actions must be entirely pure." That is perfect, and this must also be perfect. It is in this spirit that some of the great figures in the western world worshipped and served God.

God is all perfection. Hence, in worshipping Him, the feeling should be total. God should not be worshipped in halves and fractions. The devotee should achieve total involvement with the Divine. Quantitatively there would be a difference between God, who is the ocean of love, and the devotee whose love is a drop in that ocean. But the quality of love is the same.

The gopikas' devotion

Whatever you do to please God must be in harmony with the perfection of the Divine. Your words should be absolute truth Your actions should be totally God-Oriented. All thoughts should be divinised. It should be realised that God is the Indweller in all beings. Because man has failed to realise this truth he leads a double life and is a prey to troubles and worries. Only by leading a godly life can man redeem himself.

The Gopikas (cowherd women) are perfect examples of total and pure devotion. They were totally absorbed in Krishna. They ignored the message brought to them by Uddhava. They told Uddhava that they were so totally immersed in the adoration of Krishna that they had no time or inclination to do anything else. They had totally identified themselves with Krishna.

Krishna was a six-year-old boy when he was sporting with the Gopikas. Even Bhaaratheeyas have wrong notions about Krishna's sports with the cowherdresses. His sports were those of a young child with his brothers and sisters. By his sports Krishna moved the hearts of the Gopikas.

The Gopikas saw the image of Krishna in every creeper, every flower and ever plant. When'

Krishna was away from Gokulam, the Gopikas went to Brindavan and appealed to every creeper and flower to let them know where Krishna, who had stolen their hearts, was hiding himself.

(Syaami sang the song of the Gopikas describing Krishna and appealing to the creepers to let them know that He was not hiding amongst them). The Gopikas had only one image before them, that of Krishna. They had only one vision, that of Krishna.

The nature of true love between the devotee and God cannot be understood by the unbelievers, the atheists. Only the loving devotee can experience the effulgence of the Divine. The man without love is lost in dialectical controversies, with the result that bitterness develops over arguments.

The human life is precious

The incarnation of Krishna proclaimed the doctrine of divine love, as manifested by the Gopikas.

Man today is like an earthen pot filled with nectar. His body may be made of clay, but his spirit is eternal. The Divine has to be experienced through the body. Hence, human birth should not be treated as something trivial. Human life is worth living, it should be cherished as something precious.

But such a precious gift is being treated as dirt today. It is essential to realise the value of human existence. What is the goal of human life? It is to go back to the source from which we came.

Our duty is to return to our primordial, original home.

All of you who are here have come from different parts of India and the world. After your stay here, you have to go back to your native places. Likewise human beings have come to the planet earth as pilgrims. They have to return to their original home. You have come from the Aathma.

You have to go back to the Aathma. You have come from the Brahman (Supreme Self). You have to merge in the Brahman. You have incarnated as a spark of Brahman. You have to become the Brahman. In between there may be many impediments. You should ignore them. Have unshakable faith. That is true devotion.

Love is God's gift

Devotion does not consist merely in different forms of worship. It is dedicated offering of yourself to the Lord with unsullied love. You have come from the Divine with love. You have to base your life on that love. That love is a gift of the Divine. You must treat it as Divine property and not as your personal possession. As long as you entertain the sense of personal property, you can never understand the Aathmik principle.

The feeling of 'I' and 'mine' is the root cause of all man's troubles. Attachment and possessiveness cannot be totally eschewed. But there should be limits for them. Insatiable desires are the cause of the growth of peacelessness. The Gopikas and Gopalas lived a life of contentment. They had only one desire: the yearning for God.

People are often affected by the deluding power of Maaya. Even the Gopikas once doubted whether a little boy like Krishna would be able to lift the Govardhana mountain to give shelter to the denizens of Repalle from a heavy downpour. Devotees should not give way to doubts. Faith in God should be firm till 'your last breath.

The triple purity

Embodiments of love! You celebrate what are regarded as the birthdays of God coming as an avathaar. What is the secret of these birthday celebrations? Every Avathaar comes to uphold or testify to a certain ideal or purpose. Avathaars come for establishing Dharma in the world (as declared in the Geetha). What is Dharma? There are various Dharmas (Codes of conduct) relating to celibates, house holders, renunciants and others. These Dharmas are related to one's stage in life. True Dharma is that which sustains one-- "Dhaarayathi Ithi Dharmah" Man is sustained by three factors: the body, the mind, and the tongue. The hands represent the body, thoughts represent the mind and speech represents the tongue. The acting in unison of the body, the mind and the tongue is Dharma. Thoughts, words and actions should be in harmony. That is the mark of a true human being. This basic truth is valid without regard to place, nationality, language or religion. It is applicable to people everywhere, at all times. Those who observe this triple purity are the redeemed. They are the salt of the earth. They are the upholders of righteousness. To such adherents of Dharma, God is a constant companion, keeping close to them at all times and places. Today, people have to cherish and uphold this Dharma. Instead, they are deluded by attachment to the body to sacrifice purity in thought, word and deed.

To illustrate how attachment to bodily relations affects one's judgment, I would relate the episodes in the Mahaabhaaratha which preceded the Kurukshetra battle and the conduct of Arjuna on the battle field. Arjuna had vigorously opposed Krishna's attempts to hold peace parleys with the Kauravas as a futile exercise. But when he saw his preceptors, cousins, and other kinsmen ranged against him on the battlefield, he was despondent and did not wish to fight.

It was then that Krishna taught him that the Spirit is immortal and bodies are perishable and one should not give way to bodily attachments in the performance of one's duty. The body has to be taken care of, but not excessively. It should be dedicated to the service of God.

The delusion of separateness

One may claim to surrender all his wealth, kith and kin and power and position to God. But this is not real surrender. One must realise: "I am in You, You are in me."

God is one. The sense of separation between God and the individual should go.

Even Yashodha, though she had experienced numerous examples of Krishna's divinity, could not realise the oneness of Godhead, because of attachment to the body (owing to the delusion caused by Maaya). She complained about the worry caused to her by Krishna, who refused to eat the butter given by the mother, but went out stealing butter from the Gopikas' houses. She tied Krishna to a tree to prevent him from going round houses. Episodes such as these are intended to teach lessons to devotees about the ways of God. The Divine is in every individual, but one's realisation depends on one's own efforts. The Divine shines according to the degree of one's spiritual awareness. To manifest the full effulgence of the Divine, one has to adhere to the path of Love. Only through Love can the Supreme Divine be attained - God cannot be got by hatred, anger or jealousy. It is because these three evil qualities are present in people that you see in their faces the marks of misery. On the contrary look at the faces of Dhruva, Prahlada and Naarada. You see extreme brilliance on their faces because they are filled with the love of God.

There should be no mark of sadness on the face of one who has faith in God. This was the case with Valmeeki. His face was full of radiance---a radiance derived from Raama, who is the embodiment of Love.

All of you should strive to promote your effulgence and bliss by seeking oneness with the Divine. This is the primary duty of man.

(Bhagavan sang two songs in which He bemoaned the plight of human beings who were more concerned about their food than about God and who mastered all the texts but did not sincerely worship God). This was the message which Aadhi Shankaraacharya wished to convey in his famous hymn, Bhaja Govindham. Every one should realise the transitoriness of life and turn his thoughts towards God early enough in life. The challenges of life should be faced with fortitude and firm faith in God. That is the Supreme quality of humanness. Its grandeur and power should not be belittled. Faith in God should never be given up, whatever one's scholarship, position or power. That is the summum-bonum of life.

Universal message of the Geetha

Today people have forgotten the eternal verities and are immersed in selfishness. The true meaning of Svaartha is dedication to the Self and not petty selfishness.

This is the Supreme message of the Bhagavath Geetha. It is not a message intended for one individual or one nation. It is meant for all mankind. It is the word of God the Eternal Wisdom, the Cosmic Director, Playwright and Actor, all rolled into one. The unbreakable bond between the One and the Many should be properly understood.

Divinise every act

Whatever you do, remember the omnipresence of the Divine. Do every act to please God, out of love and not out of compulsion. Divinise every act. The Lord declares in the Geetha: "Having been born in this transient and unhappy world, worship Me."

Krishna called upon Arjuna to stand up and face the battle, reminding him of what was in store for the evil-minded Kauravas. He adjured Arjuna to have full faith in Him and do his duty. Then Arjuna declared' "Karishye vachanam thava" (I shall do as you bid me).

Then Krishna declared' "You have now become my true devotee."

And He exhorted Arjuna to rise and fight the battle which would end in the complete destruction of the Kauravas and the wicked quartet, Dhuryodhana, Dhushshaasana, Karna and Shakuni.

The great teaching of the Geetha is: "Put your trust in God, carry on your duties, be helpful to everyone and sanctify your lives." Dedicate all actions to God. That is the way to experience oneness with God. God is in you. You are in God. This oneness is the basic truth. Chant the name of the Lord and render social service in a spirit of selflessness and devotion to God.

Discourse in the Sai Kulwant Mandap on Gokulaashtami day, 18-8-1995.

22. Unique potency of Gayathri

EMBODIMENTS of love! Man today spends his life fully preoccupied with worldly concerns.

Owing to attachment to the body; he forgets his true nature, is immersed in the affairs of the body as permanent and. makes bodily comforts his goal in life. These are the things which every individual experiences in daily life. If anybody accosts a person and asks him, "Who are you?", out of his identification with the body he gives his name in reply. In answer to further questions he introduces himself as a doctor, a farmer, or student, or the like.

When the enquiry goes further, he identifies himself with his nationality as an American, an Indian, a Pakistani or so on.

When you examine these answers deeply, you will find that none of them gives the truth.

He got his name from his parents. It did not belong to him at birth. His identification with one or other of his professions is not true because he is not the profession.

What, then, is the truth about him? "I am the Aathma. That is my true Self." That is the truth.

But people identify themselves with their names, professions and nationality and do not base their lives on the Aathma. No driver of a car identifies with the car.

Likewise the body is a car and the Aathma is the driver. Forgetting one's true role as a driver, one is identifying one's self with the body, which is only a vehicle.

This truth is emphatically brought out by the Gaayathri manthra.

"Dheha budhyaath

Dhaasoham" (From the standpoint of the body, I am your instrument, your servant).

"Ieevabudhyaath Thvadamshah" (In the context of the Jeeva, the individual soul, I am a spark of the Divine Thou). "Aathmabudhyaath Thvameva-aham" (In terms of the Aathma I am yourself). When one views one's self from the Aathmik standpoint, one is identical with the Divine. "I am you and you are me."

Our life is a three-storeyed mansion

Every man has thus three aspects. Our life itself is a three-storeyed mansion. The Brahmacharya (celibate) stage is the foundation of this mansion. After that, the stage of Grihastha (householder) is the first floor. Then you have the Vaanaprastha (retirement from the life of a householder) stage as the second floor. Finally, there is the stage of the Sanyaasa (renunciant), consisting-the third floor. Thus, Brahmacharya is the foundation for the other three stages of life.

The safety and security of the other three floors depend on the strength of the foundation, vis, Brahmacharya. Hence, Brahmacharya is the basic foundation.

But, unfortunately this vital fact has been forgotten by people. They feel happy on seeing the super-structure. But the whole edifice may collapse at any time if the foundation is weak. When you feel happy at the sight of a tree and its flowers and fruits, you must be concerned about its roots. The unseen foundation is the basis for the visible mansion. The invisible roots are the basis for the visible tree. Likewise, the invisible Praana (Life-Breath or Force) is the basis for the visible body. Praana has no form, while the body has a form. There is, however, the Aathmik principle which confers all the potencies for the Praana (Life Force).

It is because of the power imparted by the Aathma that the Life Force is able to activate the body. The body inherently is inert. It is made up of different kinds of material substances.

Three potencies in man

In the Gaayathri Manthra the first line is: "Om Bhur bhuvas suvah." This manthra is assumed to refer to three worlds, the earth, the middle world and Heaven--Svarga, the land of the gods. Bhu refers to the body. It is made up of Pancha Bhuthas (five great elements). These five elements constitute Prakrithi (Nature). There is an intimate relationship between the body and Nature. The same five elements that are in the nature are also in the body.

Bhuvah is the Praana Shakthi (Life Force) that animates the body. Even if the Life Force exists, without Inaana (Awareness) the body will be of no use. It is on this account that the Vedhas declared: "Prajnaanam Brahma"

(Constant Integrated Awareness is Brahman). It is by the presence of Prajnaana that the Life

Force is able to animate the body. The body represents inert matter.

The Life Force operates in the body as a vibration. This Vibration derives its power from Prajnaana, which finds expression in radiation.

Therefore, the body, the Life Force and the Prajnaana are all within man. The entire cosmos is present in miniature within man. It is because of these three constituents that we are able to see the cosmos and experience many other things. Every potency is within us. The external is a reflection of the inner being.

It follows from this that true maanavathvam (humanness) is Dhaivathvam (Divinity) itself.

Hence, the Vedhas declared that the divine appears in human form. Every human being is inherently Divine, but owing to his attachment to the body he' considers himself a mere man.

How did this human body get animated by the Life Force? Whence has this Life Force come? It is from the Aathma-Shakthi (the power of the Self). Making use of this power of the Self the Life Force carries out all activities.

Triple aspects of Gaayathri

Who is Gaayathri? Gaayathri is not a goddess. "Gaayathri Chandhasaam maathaa" (Gaayathri is the mother of the Vedhas) "Gaayantham thraayathe ithi Gaayathri" (Gaayathri is that which redeems the chanter of the manthra). Gaayathri is present wherever the manthra is chanted.

Gaayathri, however, has three names' Gaayathri, Saavithri, Sarasvathi. These three are present in everyone. Gaayathri represents the senses. It is the master of the senses. Saavithri is the master of Praana (Life Force). Many Bhaaratheeyas are familiar with the story of Saavithri who brought back to life her dead husband, Sathyavaan. Saavithri signifies truth. Sarasvathi is the presiding deity of Vaak (Speech). The three represent Thrikarana Shuddhi (purity in thought, word and deed). Although Gaayathri has three names, all the three are in each of us as the senses (Gaayathri), the power of speech (Sarasvathi) and the Life Force (Saavithri).

Gaayathri is said to have five faces and hence is called Panchamukhi. Is there anybody in the world with five faces? No. In the Raamaayana, Raavana is said to have ten heads. If really he had ten heads how would he be able to lie in his bed or move about? This is not the inner meaning of this description. He is said to be ten-headed because he was the master of the four Vedhas and the six Shaasthras. Likewise, Gaayathri is described as five-faced. The five faces are as follows. Om (the Pranava) is the first face. The Pranava Principle represents the Ashta-Aishvarya (eight different forms of wealth). The second face is: "Bhur Bhuvas Suvah." The third is: "Thath-Savithur-varenyam." The fourth is: "Bhargo Dhevasya dheemahi." The fifth face is: "Dheyo yo hah prachodayaath."

When the Gaayathri manthra is understood in this way, it will be realised that all the five aspects of Gaayathri are within each of us.

Power of Gaayathri Manthra
The Gaayathri manthra has all the three elements which figure in the adoration of God description, meditation and prayer. The first nine words of the manthra - "Om-Bhur-Bhuvas-Suvah-Thath-Savithur- Varenyam-Bhargo-Dhevasya"--represent the attributes of the Divine.

Dheemahi pertains to dhyana (meditation). "Dheyo yo hah Prachodayaath" is the prayer to the Lord. The manthra is thus a prayer to God to confer all powers and talents.

"Sarva roga nivaarini Gaayathri" (Gaayathri is the reliever of all diseases). "Sarva dhukha parivaarini Gaayathri" (Gaayathri wards off all misery). "Sarva vaancha phalashri Gaayathri" (Gaayathri is the fulfiller of all desires). Gaayathri is the bestower of all that is beneficial. If the manthra is chanted, various kinds of powers will emerge in one. Hence the Gaayathri manthra should not be treated casually. In our respiration process the sound of Gaayathri is embedded. That sound is a reminder of our true form. In the breathing process, there is inhalation and exhalation. In the Yoga-Shaasthra, inhalation is termed Puurakam and the exhalation is called Rechakam. Holding the breath is called Kumbhakam. When air is inhaled, the sound that is produced is 'So-o-o.' When it is exhaled, the sound is 'Ham-m-m.' 'So-ham, Soham.'

(Bhagavaan demonstrated how this happens while breathing in and out). 'So' is "that." 'Ham' is "I". "I am that," "I am Divine." Every breath proclaims this. The Vedhas declared the same thing in the pronouncements: "Thath thvam Asi" (That thou art),

"Aham Brahmaasmi" (I am Brahman), "Ayam Aathma Brahma" (This Self is Brhman).

Gaayathri is the indweller in the heart Don't imagine God is somewhere remote from you. He is within you. You are God. People want to see God. "Sathyam Inaanam Anantham Brahma," say the scriptures. Truth is God. Wisdom is God. Both these are present everywhere. They transcend the categories of time and place. Truth is that which is valid at all times--past, present and future. That truth is Gaayathri ...

Gaayathri is thus the indweller in the 'Hridhaya (heart). Hri-dhaya contains the word Dhaya meaning compassion. There is compassion in every heart. But to what extent is it shown in real life? Very little. All the while only anger, jealousy, pride and hatred are displayed. These evil qualities are not natural to man. They are opposed to human nature. It has been declared that one who bases himself entirely on the mind is a demon. One who bases himself on the body is an animal. One who follows the Aathma (the Self) is divinely endowed.

One who relies on the body, the mind and the Aathma is a human being. Humanness is the combination of the body; mind and Aathma. Man should strive to ascend to the divine and not descend to the demonic or animal nature.

How to remove insecurity and secure security
From today onwards parents should teach their children stories with morals. You all know in what a chaotic condition the world is today. Disorder and violence are rampant everywhere.

Peace and security are not to be found anywhere. Where is peace to be found? It is within us.

Security is also within us. How is insecurity to be removed and security secured? It is by giving up desires. In the language of the ancient Bhaaratheeyas this was termed Vairaagya (giving up attachment). This does not mean giving up home and family and retiring into the forest. It is reduction of wants. As a householder limit your desires to the needs of the family. As a student, stick to your studies. As a professional, adhere to the duties of your profession. Do not indulge in excesses of any kind.

In the practice of the Gaayathri manthra, one should realise that everything is within one and thereby develop confidence in the Self. Man today is racked by numerous troubles because he has no confidence in the Self. The aspirant on the spiritual path is bound to face the troubles caused by the six enemies, lust, anger, greed, infatuation, pride and envy. He has to overcome them.

Students! On an auspicious occasion like this, you should consider how you can lead an ideal life. Through faith in God, you have to sanctify the body. Without the body, you cannot experience the mind and the intellect. To achieve your ideals, the body is the instrument. It should be kept in proper condition. While the body is an instrument, the user of the instrument is the Self. All senses function because of the Aathma. The Aathma is the Witness to everything. It is also known as Conscious Self. It derives its sanction from the Divine. It is a fragment of the Divine. Every human being is a spark of the Divine, as declared in the Geetha. The human being is essentially Divine, but tends to forget his Divine origin.

The Gaayathri manthra is enough to protect the person who chants it, because Gaayathri embodies all the Divine potencies. It is an essential requisite for the young because it ensures a bright and auspicious future for them. The young students are the citizens and leaders of tomorrow. Hence, they should develop pure and noble thoughts. The parents also should foster such a development.

The meaning of Upanayanam

The Upanayanam ceremony is just over. The Gaayathri manthra has been imparted to you. You are wearing the sacred thread with three strands tied in one knot. The three strands represent Brahma, Vishnu and Maheshvara. They also represent the past, the present and future.

Upanayanam means being near to God. Nearness to God will enable you to get rid of your bad qualities and acquire virtues.

Students! The Vedhas have emphasized three duties. Esteem the mother as God, the father as

God and the preceptor as God. Bear this injunction in mind. Gratitude to your parents is your foremost duty. This is the lesson taught by Shri Raama. Love your parents and remember God. When you please your parents and make them happy, your entire life will be filled with happiness.

Chant the Gaayathri as often as possible. If you chant it while you take a bath, your bath gets sanctified. Likewise chant it before taking your food. The food becomes an offering to the Divine. Develop heartfelt devotion to God.

Discourse in the Sai Kulwant Mandap, Prashaanthi Mandhir, on 23-8-1995.

A man with Bhakthi will do every act as worship of God and so the act will be done better and more efficiently, without maligning or insincerity. It will also win the grace of the Lord, and so, a Bhaktha will be able to raise more crops and enjoy greater health and mental happiness.

23. The significance of Vinaayaka worship

With your elephant's trunk
And single tusk, and benign looks,
With the tingling of your anklets,
And your prodigious belly,
Looking like a dwarf,
But capable of bestowing all knowledge,
Oh Son of Paarvathi!
Hail! Lord of the Ganas.

BHARATHEEYAS' festivals are pregnant with spiritual significance. Unfortunately Bhaaratheeyas today give importance only to external rituals and observance, ignoring their inner meaning and eternal values.

"Paarvathi thanaya Ganaadhipa!" (Oh son of Paarvathi! Lord of the ganas). In these terms the Vedhas extolled Ganapathi. Who is this Paarvathi? Who is her son? What is the relationship between mother and son? Few Bhaaratheeyas care to enquire into these questions. The Vedhas proclaimed' "Oh Ganaadhipa!" Who are these ganas? Are they celestial hosts or Asuras (demonic beings)? They are celestial beings. Where are they? Are they wandering in the external world or are they present subtly in human beings? He (Vighneshvara) is called Ganaadhipathi because he is the Supreme Lord of the ganas. The ganas are the embodiments of the Inaanedhriyas (organs of perception) and of Karmendhriyas (organs of action). The mind is the master of these ten senses. The presiding deity of the mind is called Indra as he is the Lord of the Indhriyas (the senses). The master over the mind is the Buddhi

The meaning of "Ganapathi"

What does the name 'Ganapathi' signify? 'Ga' means Buddhi (or intellect), 'Na' means Vijnana (wisdom). As Vighneshvara is the Lord of the intellect and Wisdom, He is called Ganapathi.

It follows from this that what are called ganas are parts of the human body. The vyakthi

(individual) is a part of shrishti (creation). Hence, Divinity, of which the cosmos is a projection, is immanent in the human being. "Vigatho naayakah Vinaayakah" (Vinaayaka has no master over him). This means that Vinaayaka is a totally autonomous and independent deity. He has no lord above him. In the world, any individual or authority has someone superior above him. But Vinaayaka has no overlord.

The worship of Vinaayaka has been in existence from times immemorial in Bhaarath. The Rig

Vedha, the Naarayanopanishath and the Thaitheeriya Upanishath have passages referring to Vinaayaka. It is embedded also in a Gaayathri manthra.

Thathpurushaaya Vidmahe

Vakrathundaaya dheemahi

Thanno Danthi Prachodayaath

This manthra indicates that Vinaayaka's divinity is glorified in this Gaayathri manthra. Hence, Ganapathi signifies an all-pervading divine potency.

In everyday parlance, Ganapathi is described as the son of Paarvathi. Paarvathi represents Prakrithi (Nature). Man is a child of Nature. Hence every human being is a Vinaayaka. He is a spark of the Divine Shiva-Shakthi, the union of the Lord and Nature. Everything in the world has emanated from Prakrithi (Nature). All things are aspects of Nature. It is to reveal this sacred truth that holy festivals are observed.

Elephant head and Muushika

How does it happen that Vinaayaka has the head of an elephant and has a mouse as his vehicle?

The mouse is called Muushika in Sanskrit. It is a sign of night, which signifies darkness. The mouse is a symbol of darkness. Because Vinaayaka has control over darkness, He is described as the rider on a Muushika. He is the one who dispels darkness and sheds light on the world.

The Muushika (mouse) is also a symbol of the sense of smell. The mouse moves about following the direction of the vaasana (smell). Vinaayaka is the one who has mastery over vaasanas, that is, desires and ignorance (represented by Muushika).

What is meant by describing the Muushika (mouse) as 'the vehicle of Vinaayaka? It means that

Vinaayaka rides on the Muushika, representing vaasanas (desires) and ignorance (darkness).

Vinaayaka is one who drives away all sorrows, difficulties and miseries. He is the enemy of all obstacles. He will not allow any obstacles to come in the way. He is the destroyer of obstacles.

He confers happiness and peace (on his devotees). He is the master of all these powers--Buddhi and Siddhi. What is this Siddhi (fulfillment)? When there is purity of mind you achieve peace which is Siddhi. Vinaayaka is thus the Lord of Buddhi and Siddhi (the Intellect and Self-Realisation). Hence, every human being should acquire control over the mind.

Nature of food offered to Vinaayaka

Every festival is celebrated by various culinary preparations. For Vinaayaka Chathurthi, these preparations are of a special kind. The edible offerings to Vinaayaka are totally free from oily substances. Vinaayaka is offered only items cooked through steam. What is the reason?

According to the science of Ayurvedha (the ancient Indian system of medicine), food cooked through steam is easily digested.

Moreover, the Vinaayaka festival, which is celebrated in the month of Bhaadhrapadha, falls in a month when sesame and jaggery come to the market after the harvest. The sesame seeds are powdered and mixed with rice flour and jaggery and cooked in balls which are offered as Naivedhyam to Vinaayaka. Jaggery is a cure for several ailments relating to phlegm and bile. The sesame seeds have the power to cleanse 'the lungs and improve the vision. These balls of sesame and jaggery are thus noted for their medicinal properties for curing both external and internal ailments.

The ancient Bhaaratheeyas never indulged in meaningless practices. Every festival has an inner spiritual significance. Every word they spoke, every step they moved, every food they consumed had spiritual significance.

The Lord of learning

Vinaayaka is the Lord of all Vidhya (learning). Does learning mean bookish scholarship? No.

Everything pertaining to the cosmos is included in the term Vidhya (learning). Walking, talking, laughing, sitting, eating, strolling, thinking every kind of activity is related to learning.

Vinaayaka is the master of every kind of learning.

Today learning is identified with 'acquisition of information. But apart from knowledge of the physical world, we have many other kinds of knowledge relating to chemistry; the fine arts and other skills.

Vinaayaka is the master of every kind of knowledge. Learning is related to Buddhi (intellect). It is not mere scholarship. Familiarity with books is not knowledge. One's entire life is a continuous process, of learning. Any process of enquiry is related to learning. But basically our enquiry should be concerned with finding out what is transient and what is permanent. This is true knowledge.

Hence, today students worship Vinaayaka with zeal. Vinaayaka is not the one who merely comes to the aid of those who read their books. He helps everyone at every step in life's journey. He is readily accessible. He is pleased with an offering of flowers of no value ("Jilledy" flowers). It is said that any one who eats these flowers will become insane. Such flowers are 'offered to Vinaayaka.

Vinaayaka is also worshipped with an offering of green grass. What is the inner meaning of these kinds of offerings? It means that earlier Vinaayaka used to be worshipped even by animals. His face is that of an elephant. His vehicle is a mouse. These are symbols from the animal kingdom. They indicate that Vinaayaka is worshipped even by birds and beasts. Vinaayaka is thus worshipped by all beings and is Lord over all beings. He does not belong to one country or one nation or one period of time. He is related to all places and all times.

There are scriptural texts which testify to all this. But some of them are quite fanciful. For instance, in one puraanik story, it is stated that once Shiva and His consort Paarvathi were playing a game of dice. For any game there has to be an umpire, who has to declare who is the winner. Shiva and Paarvathi agreed to have Nandhi (the divine bull) as the umpire. Nandhi is a favourite of Shiva, as he is Shiva's vehicle. Although Shiva lost the game, Nandhi declared Him the winner. It is stated that Paarvathi was indignant over Nandhi's partiality for Shiva and cursed him that he should die from an incurable disease. Thereupon Nandhi fell at the feet of Paarvathi and pleaded for forgiveness. "Mother! forgive me. Should I not show at least this amount of gratitude to one who is my master? Is it not humiliating for me to declare that my master has lost the game? To uphold his honour I no doubt uttered a lie. But am I to be punished with such severity for so small an offence?" Nandhi prayed for forgiveness in this manner. Paarvathi forgave Nandhi and taught him the means to atone for his lapse. She told him, "The Chathurdhasi day in the month of Bhadra-padha is the day when my son's birthday is celebrated. On that day you have to offer to my son what pleases you most (green grass)." This means that one atones for one's sins when One offers to the Lord what is most pleasing and enjoyable to him. For Nandhi the most enjoyable and relishing food is green grass. As directed by Paarvathi Nandhi worshipped Ganapathi by offering green grass. Nandhi was then relieved of his dreaded disease. His health improved and by the grace of Paarvathi he was redeemed.

This incident is the basis for the practice recommended for pilgrims to Gaya, Benares and other places that they should give up something they love most as an offering to the Divine. This means that they should give up something which they like most and not something which they do not like. Whether it be a fruit or a vegetable, what you should choose to give up as an offering to God is what you like most. This means that you give up consuming thereafter that vegetable or fruit. This practice has been prevailing from ancient times among pilgrims to Benares, Prayaag or other sacred places for a holy bath in the Ganga or Yamuna. Offer to God what you like most Today many people go to Prayaag (Allahabad). What is the real meaning of Praayag or Kaashi?

The scripture declares: "The Indweller is the Eternal Self." The body is the temple in the center of which the Ganga of Inaana (Wisdom) is flowing. In this Ganga of wisdom the two rivers of Bhakthi and Sraddha (Devotion and Earnestness), represented by Yamuna and Sarasvathi-- merge and the point of conjunction of the three is known as Prayaag. Hence, the Divine should be offered what is most pleasing to one.

Unfortunately today this ancient traditional practice has been reduced to a fashionable formality.

Pilgrims going to Prayaag are asked by the paandas (priests) to give up what is most pleasing to them. Some of the pilgrims ponder over what they can easily give up and mention the names of these vegetables and fruits. They give up the bitter gourd or something else which they don't like.

This is not proper. People should offer to give up what they relish

most as the best offering to the Lord. But when they offer something which they don't like, the Lord seated in the heart declares:

"Be it so!" As you have not offered what is most dear to you but what you dislike most, the Lord also offers to you what you dislike most. The reward for such dubious offerings to God is that instead of health you get disease. If you offered what is good, will not God give you what is good for you?

As is your offering so is your reward

This is illustrated by the example of Harishchandra. He made an offering of what was most dear to him, namely, Sathyam (Truth). He was prepared to give up his kingdom, his wife and son and sell himself in bondage to uphold Truth. Truth is God. God is Truth. Where there is Truth there is God. Therefore adore Truth. Make all your offerings truthfully. Thereby you will reach the abode of Truth. As is your offering so is your reward. This is the truth demonstrated by Vinaayaka.

There are other examples of Vinaayaka's greatness. Vinaayaka will not inflict trouble on anyone.

However, apprehending that if Vinaayaka accompanies anyone, he will cause trouble, he is given a food offering and kept in the corner of the house. But Vinaayaka is not a lover of sleep like Kumbhakarna (Raavana's younger brother). Seeing his big belly people imagine that he is slothful.

Gajaasura and Shiva

There was once a demon by name Gajaasura. He was a demon King. He performed severe penance. Eeshvara appeared before him. Eeshvara is easily propitiated, and He gives readily whatever one prays for, without examining whether it is right or wrong to confer such a boon. He gives whatever the devotees pray for. This was what happened in the case of the demon, Bhasmaasura. He prayed to Shiva to grant a boon that whomsoever He touches by his hand should be reduced to ashes. Shiva granted the boon. Immediately Bhasmaasura wanted to test the power he had received by trying to place his hand on Shiva Himself! Ultimately Shiva had to be saved from Bhamaasura by a stratagem of Vishnu who made the demon place his hand on his own head. He was then reduced to ashes.

Likewise, Gajaasura also performed penance and prayed to the Lord. Eeshvara appeared before him and asked him what he wanted. Gajaasura said "Lord! you must merge in my stomach."

Shiva granted the boon and lodged himself in the demon's stomach. Paarvathi, not finding Eeshvara, went out in search of her Lord and could find him nowhere. She went to her brother, Vishnu, and appealed to him to trace her missing Lord.

Vishnu knew that Shiva was in the habit of granting boons indiscriminately and getting into difficulties. He told her: "Paarvathi! I know what has happened. Be calm. You go to your abode.

I shall bring Eeshvara there."

Vishnu took Shiva's Nandhi and decorated it to appear like a performing bull. Assuming the role of a bull-performer, Vishnu led the bull to the city of Gajaasura, playing on a pipe all the way while the bull danced to the tune. The bull was dancing to the music of the Divine embodiment of all mysteries. Gajaasura was intensely watching the performance of the bull and its master.

Pleased with their performance, Gajaasura asked the bull trainer, "What do you want?" The latter said: "You should not go back on your word. Will you grant me what I want? You are Gajaasura, a great king." "Yes," he said. Give me Eeshvara who is in your stomach," said Vishnu. Only Vishnu knew this fact, none else. Gajaasura immediately fell at the feet of Vishnu and said'

"Svaami! This secret is not known to anybody except yourself. I will keep my word even at the cost of my life. But there is one condition. My head should be worshipped by all and Eeshvara should wear my skin." Vishnu agreed to it. That is the reason why Eeshvara wears an elephant's skin. The head of Gajaasura is worshipped as Vinaayaka's head.

Significance of Puraanik stories

These are some of the puraanik stories relating to Vinaayaka. They are only stories. But such stories have been related to turn people's minds God-ward.

If a deep enquiry is made, it will be realised that there is only one God. God is present in all.

Vinaayaka is not separate from us. The indwelling principle in our hearts is the Divine Aathmik Principle.

What is it that you should offer to God? Is it unripe or a ripe fruit? You should offer only a good ripe fruit. Likewise, you should offer your good thoughts to the Divine. That is the supreme significance of the Vinaayaka Chaturthi festival. Without realising this, people install a mud idol, decorate it with meaningless flowers, make offerings of useless things and seek the most valuable things from Him. What kind of bargain is this? You should offer to the Lord what is most sacred. Look at the example of a cow. It is offered all kinds of grass and other fodder. But it offers in return the most nourishing milk. Even the cow offers to man something pure and holy.

But what does man offer to God? He keeps the pure things for himself and offers the impure to God. This is not right. You should offer to God what will please Him.

You pray to God to give you all kinds of things. How are you entitled to ask for them? Only if you offer to God what will please Him. If you do not perform acts which will please God, how do you expect God to do things that will please you?

Inner truth about Vinaayaka

Therefore, at the outset you have to do things which will please God. Then God will offer what will please you. This is one of the truths to be learnt from the Vinaayaka festival.

Vinaayaka is the Lord of life. Men should learn to shed selfishness and cultivate love of the Supreme Self. This is the inner truth about Vinaayaka. Vinaayaka should not be considered as merely an elephant-headed deity riding on a mouse.

Similar mistakes are made about other deities. For instance, Sarasvathi is represented as a Goddess riding on a swan. Sarasvathi is the Goddess of Speech.

Speech is based on the inhaling and exhaling of breath. In this process of respiration, the sound So-Ham is produced and when it is repeated regularly, you have the sound Ham-So, which is identified with a swan. The inhaling and exhaling process is the chariot on which the Goddess of Speech moves.

The inner meanings of the terms and symbols used in Vedhaanthik parlance have to be properly understood.

Everything is for your good

The best way to please God is to act according to His injunctions. For instance, I advise students not to indulge in excessive talk. Carry out your duties. Contemplate on God. Is all this advice being given for God's sake? No. Whatever Svaami tells you is for your own good. Recognise that everything is for your good.

I would relate a story in this context. There was a minister to a king who was in the habit of declaring that whatever happened was for one's good. Once the king cut his finger while slicing a piece of sugarcane. Seeing the bleeding finger of the king, the minister remarked that the cut was for the king's good. The king got so angry that he committed the minister immediately to prison.

Even then the minister remarked that the prison sentence was for his own good. A few days later the king went alone for hunting in a forest and was resting under a tree. The servants of the tribal chief of the forest seized the king to be offered as human sacrifice for the tribal goddess. When the king was about to be beheaded, it was noticed' that the king's finger was mutilated and such a mutilated person could not be offered as sacrifice. The king was freed. He remembered the minister's words and realised that the injury to his finger had saved him from death. He went to the prison straight and asked his minister how he could declare that the prison sentence was good for him. The minister replied that but for his being confined in prison, he would have accompanied the king and the tribal would have chosen him in the place of the king for their sacrifice.

The lesson of this story is that one should learn to welcome everything that happens as for one's own good. Recognition of this truth is the means to acquire God's grace. Develop the firm conviction that whatever God says or does is for your own good.

This is what all the Bhaaratheeya festivals seek to teach. Underlying every festival is a profound spiritual message. Unfortunately present-day students, caught up in modernity, are unable to comprehend this truth. They are obsessed with trifles and do not realise that education is for the purpose of leading the good life and not for earning a living. Yearn to lead an ideal life.

Consider Vinaayaka as the Indweller in your heart. He is constantly warning you against what is bad. You ignore the warning and get into trouble. How much will you benefit if you "follow the Master" within you. Your conscience is the Master. Above all, heed the dictates of the Divine.

That will be your best safeguard.

Vinaayaka is one who has all the five elements under his control. Arjuna did penance for acquiring the Paashupatha Asthra from Shiva and overcame the powers of the five elements by the power of his penance. Vinaayaka is the embodiment of all potencies. He has no superior

In our bhajans, the first prayer is addressed to Vinaayaka. The bhajan starts with Om, the Pranava. It is the combination of Pranava with Vinaayaka which serves to redeem our lives.

Discourse in the Sai Kulwant Mandap on 29-8-1995.

24. Offer everything to God
 As in the sesame seed oil exists,
 As in milk ghee is present,
 As fragrance resides in a flower,
 As the juice exists in a fruit,
 As fire is latent in a faggot
 So is the Divine immanent in subtle form.
 EMBODIMENTS of Divine Love! Oil is present throughout the sesame seed. Ghee is present in every drop of milk. Fragrance is present in an invisible form in a flower. A fruit is filled with sweet juice. In every piece of wood fire is latent. In the same manner the Divine is immanent in the entire cosmos in a subtle form. God is present not in some country or some body. Like vision in the eye and hearing in the ear, God is present in the mind as Chaithanya (Consciousness). The cosmos is the visible manifestation of the invisible Supreme Self. While the Divine is in such close proximity to him man in his ignorance goes seeking God everywhere. The Divine is effulgent in every man as Sath-Chith-Aanandha (Being-Awareness-Bliss), the Cosmic Consciousness. Reflections of the sun shining in the sky can be seen in the oceans, rivers, the lakes and in wells. Though the reflections are varied, the sun is one alone. The Divine is present in man like the unseen thread which holds a garland of gems together. The entire cosmos is permeated by the Divine and is the visible manifestation of the Divine. Man's essential humanness is common to one and all. Nothing in the world, no object, no human being, no creature can be found wherein God is not present. Though man appears in the world in different forms, speaking different languages, his essential humanness is common to one and all. There is only one race, that is the human race. God is only one. He is Sath-Chith-Aanandha. Just as a seed sprouts and grows into a plant wherein a flower blossoms, so does the Divine seed grow in the heart of man and blossoms as a flower, Sath-Chith-Aanandha. Just as it is natural for a seed to become a fragrant flower, so is it natural for man to experience the bliss of the Divine-- Sath-Chith-Aanandha. There are many evidences to demonstrate the Divinity that is inherent in man. But few men are ready to make the sacrifice that is required to experience this Divinity. The ancient sages regarded human life as full of fragrance to be enjoyed. They considered life as full of nectarine sweetness. When man is oblivious of this sweetness, he ceases to be human.

Thyaaga (sacrifice) is the sweetness in Maanavathva (humanness). The scriptures declare "Only through sacrifice can man realise the eternal Divine." But, immersed in selfishness, man fails to recognise this truth.

Thyaaga and Bali

A synonym for the word Thyaaga (sacrifice) is Bali. The term Bali has several meanings such as' offering, dedication, sacrifice and a tax levy. What is meant by tax?

Bali means that which has to be given as an offering in human life. But the ancients regarded Bali as offering a living object as a sacrifice. This is not the proper meaning of Bali. Bali is the recognition of the Divinity in man.

People pay a water tax to the authorities who make available water at their dwelling from a distant source. Likewise people have to pay dues for the electricity supply which they receive.

What is the tax you pay to the Divine for implanting divinity in you when you consider yourself to be remote from God because of your involvement in worldly affairs? You pay for small amounts of water supply and electrical energy. But what do you pay for the heavy downpour of rain which you get from Providence? God fills the tanks and rivers with water. He provides man with the life-giving oxygen in the air he breathes. The sun illumines the whole world by his light.

What is the tax we pay for all these services? The arpitham (offerings we make to God) is the tax. That has been called Bali. One should not be frightened by the term Bali. It means only offering one's self to the Divine.

Greatness of Emperor Bali

In making such an offering, Emperor Bali was supreme. He was the grandson of Prahlaadha.

Emperor Bali was dedicating his entire life to God. He was a great devotee. Moreover he excelled in acts of charity. He made his subjects rejoice. He never went back on his plighted word. He was full of such great virtues. Emperor Bali took good care of his people, promoting their welfare and endearing himself to them.

Bali's father, Virochana, was also a godly ruler. Thus from Prahlaadha to Bali the whole line of rulers were filled with love of God. They were influenced by the Divine power. Originally Prahlaadha's father, Hiranyakashipu, was Lord Vishnu's gate-keeper. Whatever their differences in behaviour and attitudes, all three (Prahlaadha, Virochana and Bali) were equally inspired by devotion to God.

In spite of the strong opposition from his preceptor Shukraachaarya to Bali for giving an offering of land to Vaamana as promised by him, Bali was firm in surrendering to Vishnu all that he had.

He told the Preceptor: "Guruj, what is the use of my possessing anything which is not of use to God? The seeker is God Himself. God has really no desires. But to redeem us from the consequences of our past deeds He creates situations which call for offerings, When the infinite

Divine appears in the role of the seeker of favours, what greater blessing can there be than making the offering to the Divine? I do not seek any greater blessing than this. I am ready to offer my mind, my body and my life itself to God. There is no greater fortune than this."

This is the meaning of surrender. God does not ask for any offering of wealth or position. God is said to be pleased if a sincere devotee offers a leaf, a flower, a fruit or even water. What is this leaf? It is the body. The heart is the flower, the mind is fruit. The water that is to be offered is that from the tears of joy shed by the devotee. This is what God expects from you. The Lord tells you "My dear man! The body does not belong to you. Who gave it to you? It is precious gift from God. It is inert like a leaf."

Eradi referred to the Gaayathri manthra: "Om! Bhur-Bhuvas-Suvaha". In this manthra, 'Bhu' refers to the body, which is made up of material substances. It may be compared to a leaf, (which is also a material object). 'Bhuvah' refers to that which activates the inert body. That Praana (Life Force) operates as vibration. 'Suvah' What is the basis for the life Force? It is Prajnaana.

The Upanishath declares: "Prajnaanam Brahma." The Prajna operates through radiation. 'Suvah' refers to this power of radiation. Humanness is made up of these three constituents' Radiation, Vibration and material inertness.

Make God your life-breath The flower to be offered-to God is a pure heart free from all taints and evil tendencies like lust, anger, and pride. The fruit to be offered is a mind free from all bad thoughts and feelings. It should be filled with the sweet juice of goodness. The water that should be offered to God is the water that flows from the eyes out of joy in experiencing God. Tears are of two kinds: tears born of grief resulting from attachments; tears spontaneously arising from Aanandha (blissful experience of the Divine). Make God your life-breath, the sweetness of your existence.

It was with such sacred feelings that Emperor Bali offered himself to the Lord appearing as Vaamana. People make all kinds of offerings to God. But the greatest of them all is to offer oneself. That is what Bali did. He declared- "Oh Lord! I am offering to you the heart which you gave me. What else can I offer you? Please accept my offering at your feet."

Bali is such an example of supreme sacrifice. Thus he pleased God. God has no desires because He contains within Himself everything. Whatever He does is only for the good of the devotees.

The supreme quality of Emperor Bali is his spirit of sacrifice. He taught the people of Kerala the lesson of sacrifice. He also demonstrated that when it comes to upholding one's plighted word, one can disregard even the advice of one's preceptor. Nothing should be allowed to come between a devotee and the Lord. Bharata, Prahlaadha and Bali are examples of devotees of the Lord who set aside the Vedhic injunction regarding reverence for the mother, the father and the preceptor in their allegiance to the Divine.

Bali recognized that not a blade of grass moves without the power of the Divine in it. "No one knows the supreme power of God's will. He permeates everything in the cosmos from an ant to Brahman. Men are ignorant of this truth," declared Bali (Svaami recited a verse from the Bhaagavatham).

Significance of Onam

Emperor Bali surrendered himself totally to the divine. Under his reign, all the subjects were happy and led godly lives. Saddened by the thought of having to go away from his people, he told them "Dear people! I cannot be without you and you cannot be without me. Every year I shall appear before you and give you joy."

Onam is the day on which Bali fulfills his promise. Waking up early in the morning taking a bath, wearing new dresses and worshipping God mark the celebration of Onam. What is the significance of wearing new Vasthra (clothes)? Vasthra is one of the names for the heart.

Wearing new Vasthra (clothes) means purifying the heart. When the heart is pure the Divine elects to dwell in it. There is no meaning in wearing new garments if the heart remains impure.

Hence, the heart has to be kept pure. The ruler must be worthy of the subjects and the subjects must be worthy of the ruler. Harmony between the two is vital.

 It is not easy to understand the ways of the Lord. Even the ancient sages felt that god's ways are inscrutable and that His attributes are beyond reckoning and praise.
 The Gopikas declared: "Oh Krishna! How can we know your true nature? You are subtlest among the subtle and vaster than the vastest. You are omnipresent. How can we know you?"
 All belongs to God
 The sages, probing the mystery of the Divine, came to the conclusion that God is everything and no one can claim anything as one's own. By this attitude they were able to realise the Divine.
 However, because of the influence of Kali Age, today everyone claims everything as "Mine."
 Indeed, nothing belongs to anyone. Men are immersed in the false and foolish concept of ownership. Possessiveness is rampant in every thought and action. And this leads to the inflation of the ego. Egoism has to be utterly eradicated. Possessiveness should be banished. Divinity should be installed in the heart. Be aware that all things belong to God. "You came with empty hands and you depart with empty hands." All that was got or spent in between are mere passing clouds. Emperor Bali taught this profound truth that nothing belongs to anyone. All are gifts from God.
Bali was a great devotee. Devotion has five qualities and nine paths to adore the Divine. These nine paths begin with shravanam (listening to the glories of God) and end with Aathma nivedhanam (complete Self-surrender). Bali taught his subjects the profound truths about devotion.
 From then to our own times, the people of Kerala have been celebrating Onam as a festival dear as life itself. They greet the festival with ineffable joy. Not for the delicious dishes prepared on the occasion. It is the holiest of the holy days for them. They should come together to chant the Lord's name. (Bhagavaan sang a poem which glorifies how a holy festival day should be celebrated. By chanting the Lord's name, by listening to the stories of the Lord and by playing the host for godly men). Only that day is a sacred day when you chant the name of God, yearn for proximity with God and experience the bliss of His grace within you. All other days are days of mourning. The Divine is within each one. When one seeks this inner vision, there is no greater experience.

The Keralites have retained their faith in God despite conditions not conducive to theistic beliefs.

Their devotion is deep and firm. As worshippers of Padmahabha, their devotion stems from the depths of their being.

Embodiments of Divine Love! Realise that you are not separate from God, who is the very embodiment of Love. God can be attained only through Love and not by any other means.

Discourse on 5-9-1995, in Sai Kulwant Mandap, Prashaanthi Nilayam.

25. Earn the esteem of society by service

EMBODIMENTS of Love! Human life is immensely precious. But this sacred life is haunted by troubles of various kinds of daily living. Life is like an ocean carrying waves of pleasures and pain. In his ordinary life man is driven by innumerable desires to seek worldly pleasures of various kinds. This precious life is rendered meaningless and worthless by the pursuit of these mundane desires.

The body is essential for living. Without it man cannot accomplish anything. Human life is a composite of body, mind, and spirit. But man today ignores the mind and spirit and wastes his life by preoccupation with the body alone.

The mind is the most important organ in the body. It is vital for doing anything. Man's life is based on the mind. The universe is filled with mental consciousness. The cosmos is rooted in the mind. The mind is a bundle of thoughts. Hence man has to purify the mind by sacred thoughts.

Only when he has noble thoughts he can lead an ideal life. Out of thoughts are born the desires.

Desires activate the mind. Hence it is necessary to keep desires under control.

Dharma can be achieved through the body alone

Society tends to look askance at persons with physical disabilities. But limbs are not so very important. What is more essential is a pure mind. If all one's limbs are perfect, but if one's mind is impure, of what use are the limbs?

However, man can achieve what he desires, only if all the limbs in the body are in good shape.

Man should make good use of all his organs to lead an ideal life. Every living being has come into existence for a purpose. Hence everyone should strive to use his body for the purpose for which he has been endowed with it.

Through the body alone can Dharma be achieved, declares the scripture. The body is given to man to carry out his duties in life. Men today tend to use the body for eating and sleeping, without recognizing the duties they have to perform. Should men live like beasts and birds, with no higher aims than eating, mating and sleeping? There is in man an immortal spirit, whose presence should be realised.

 People pursue various studies, engage themselves in various activities, but make no attempt to understand what is humanness. Of what use is knowledge, wealth and position if man ignores his essential eternal spiritual reality? Every man's life should be dedicated to the service of others.
Na thapaamsi na theerthani
Na thanthrani, japaanapi
Samsaara saagarothaare
Sajjana sevanam vinaa.
 ("Neither penance, nor baths in sacred waters, neither rituals nor chanting of the divine name will help one to cross the ocean of worldly life without service to good persons.") Whatever pilgrimages one may perform, whatever yaagas and japas one may do, without using the body in the service of others, no one can achieve liberation. Every one should be prepared to serve and be served. This body has been given so that one may do seva (serve others) and not for Naayakathvam (lord it over them).
 Service is the supreme aim in life. Everyone should seek to redeem his life by service to his fellow-human beings. Render service to the extent of your capacity. How can anyone be called human, if being born a human being and growing in a human society, he does not recognise human values? You must see that you don't harm any living being. "He alone is a redeemed being who causes no pain to others and avoids pain to himself," says a Thelugu poem.
 Advice to the handicapped
 Those who are handicapped need not lament over their plight. They should develop good qualities. People today worry about their possessions, positions and associates, but not about their virtues. What is the value of riches, acquaintances and positions? There is need for a certain amount of material possessions. But excessive wealth is harmful. Of what use are fair-weather friends who surround you when you have money and position, but desert you when you lose them? God alone is an unfailing friend, who is with you at all times and protects you. When you cultivate such an attitude you can face any situation in life.
 At birth all are pure and innocent. But as they grow, they develop arrogance, pride and ostentation. But this is not proper. People should cultivate humility and discipline, which are the hall-mark of humanness. Humanness means harmony in thought, word and deed. The absence of this harmony is degrading. Men should learn to respect one another. The divine is present in everyone. Strive to make others happy as far as possible.

 Everyone should manifest his divine essence as a spark of the Divine. It is a fruit of many lives to be born as a human being. Man must lead an exemplary life. Education and wealth are good in themselves, but when they are misused they become harmful. The fault lies in the conduct of the persons concerned. Humanness-consists in leading a life free from egoism and acquisitiveness.
 Every man should recognise what it is to be human. He should realise that his tongue, eyes, ears and other organs are given to him to glorify God, not to disparage or cause hurt to others.
Jayadheva exhorted his tongue to revel in singing the greatness of the Lord. This is the task before every one. He should keep his tongue under control, serve society with dedication and lead a worthy life. Life is essentially transient. Hence while life lasts, one must earn the esteem and regard of one's fellowmen. One should not waste one's life. It must be filled with bliss. This is the true path for everyone.
 Discourse in the Sai Kulwant Mandap on 1-10-1995.
 26. Hanumaan : the ideal for mankind EMBODIMENTS of Love! Everything in the world has a value, but the value of the spoken word cannot be easily measured. By his words man can acquire every kind of wealth. By their words Rulers lose their kingdoms. By one's speech one can acquire friends and relations. By words one may make enemies, engender hatred and make himself miserable. Good words are a man's best kinsfolk. Nor is that all. It is one's speech which contributes to his progress in many ways. One's words are the root cause of one's prosperity, courage, bliss or even death. One's speech determines almost everything in one's life.
 Hence one's speech should be sweet, wholesome and pleasing to others. "Anudhvegakaram vaakyam sathyam hitham preethikaram" (One's speech should not cause excitement. It should be truthful, pleasing, and well-meaning). Even truth should not be uttered in harsh language. It should be soft, sweet, pleasing conducive to peacefulness. Hanumaan was the supreme exemplar of such speech.

Hanumaan was a dauntless hero who by his sweet and persuasive words promoted friendship between Shri Raama and Sugreeva. He was tranquil, valorous, and virtuous. He was a great scholar in Sanskrit and proficient in many languages. He was a master even of the Paisaachi language (the language of evil spirits). Sanskrit is the mother of all languages. It was esteemed as the language of the Gods in ancient times.

God and the cosmos

There have been different conceptions regarding the phenomenal world, some considering it as mithya (illusory) and some considering it as real. The Vedhik seers viewed the world as a projection of the Divine. From very early times many sages devoted their lives to the discovery of the Divine. Only a few persisted in the quest throughout their lives. Their ecstatic experience of the Divine is expressed in the Purusha Shuktha, which declares' "Vedhaaham Etham, purusham mahaantham." This means: "We have seen God. He is shining with the effulgence of a billion Suns. He is beyond the bounds of Thamo guna. His effulgence defies description."

"Aadhithyavarnam Thamasah Parasthaath" (He is effulgent like the Sun and is beyond the darkness of ignorance).

The world is made up of the five basic elements (ether, air, fire, water and earth). The sages demonstrated that the Cosmos is the embodiment of God. The Vedhas, the Upanishaths, the Ithihaasas and Puraanas also proclaimed the same truth. "Sarvam khalu idham Brahma" (All this is verily Brahmam). "Eeshvaras sarva bhoothaanaam," "Eesaavaasyam idham Jagath" (The entire cosmos is the abode of God). For experiencing this Divinity, Vairaagya (detachment) is essential. Detachment does not mean renouncing health and home and retiring to a forest. True detachment means giving up worldly feelings, developing godly thoughts. The Reality is One only. "Ekoham Bahushyaam" (The One willed to become the Many). The scholars declared'

"Ekam sath' Vipraah Bahudhaa vadhanthi" (There is One only; the wise call It by many names).

Reason for advent of avathaars and sages

To propagate this great truth to the world, from time to time many sages and saints and Avathaars made their advent in Bhaarith. They had total knowledge of the Supreme Self -- Paripuurna Brahma Inaanis. Why did such realized souls take birth in the phenomenal world?

In the modern world it is essential for people to comprehend the truth underlying this. Although these realized beings have no need to take human birth, they elected to do so for the purpose of redeeming the people on earth by their teachings and actions. Unless they are total Brahma-Inaanis, they cannot make others perceive the truth. Hence they come down in human form to dispel the ignorance of people in the world and reveal to them the Prajnaana (highest wisdom).

Krishna was a Paripuurna-Inaani (One who possessed the Supreme Wisdom). Why did he take on a human body? "Parithraanaaya Saadhunaam" (to protect the good). Krishna incarnated in human form to teach the highest truth to the pious and the godly persons who were filled with good thoughts and performed good deeds. The sage Vyaasa, who codified the Vedhas, was a Paripuurna Inaani. Vyaasa is Naaraayana Himself. What need was there for such a Realized

Divine Being to make his advent on the earth? Vyaasa incarnated as a man to elevate the ignorant and show them the path to a higher life. Shuka (the son of Vyaasa) was also a Paripuurna Inaani. He, as well as the others, chose to be born on earth for the sake of promoting the welfare of the world and not because of any karma-bonds.

Two types of spiritual aspirants

The knowledge of the Supreme Self is associated with total freedom from Ahamkaara (egoism).

Those who have no taint of ego in them are totally free from the consequences of actions, regardless of what actions they do. Today there are in the world two types of saadhakas (Spiritual aspirants). One type of aspirants regard the cosmos as a manifestation of God. The other type consider the cosmos itself as God. The difference between the two can be illustrated by an example. Many kinds of jewels are made from gold. Some may consider the jewels as different from gold. Others may consider gold as the basic substance from which the jewels have been made. The Paripuurna Inaanis belong to the category of those who realise that without gold there can be no jewels. Those who consider the jewels as more important than the gold, out of which they have been made,-belong to the category of those with half-knowledge. The truth is that without gold there can be no ornaments. Ornaments can be of various kinds and may have various forms and labels. But gold has no specific name or form like the jewels.

God is without attributes, is eternal, infinite and immutable. Everyone born in the world has a form and name. But the divinity within him has no name or form. The individual with name and form is filled with egoism and possessiveness. This egoism and possessiveness are the cause of one's pleasure and pain, happiness and sorrow. Hence everyone must strive to curb these two tendencies.

Guru and the disciple

Once a disciple went to a preceptor and requested him to impart to him the Supreme Knowledge of Omni-Self--Brahma-thathvam. The guru gave him a manthra and asked him to recite it continually without any selfish desire. The guru told him that after he has done this wholeheartedly for a year he could come and receive the Brahma-Inaana (knowledge of the Self). The disciple came back after a year duly carrying out with devotion the instructions of the preceptor.

Filled with the hope that the preceptor would impart the Supreme Knowledge, the disciple had a sacred bath and was on his way to the preceptor.

Unaware of the presence of the disciple, a maid was sweeping the aashram (hermitage) premises and the dust from the ground fell on the young man. Immediately, he lost his temper, as he felt that his purity after a sacred bath had been sullied by the dust that fell on him. He was angry with the maid for allowing the dust to fall on him. He looked at her with anger. The maid was filled with fear.

The disciple went in and offered his salutations to the guru and said "Guruji! I have been waiting for a year to secure your grace. The time is now ripe for realising it. I am eager to receive the Supreme Knowledge from you." The preceptor said "You are not yet competent to receive that knowledge. You have the qualities of a snake. You got angry with a girl who unwittingly caused some dust to fall on you. How can Brahma-Inaana be imparted to one who has not even this amount of forbearance? Go back and practise the saadhana for one more year.

At the end of the second year, when the disciple was about to come to the aashram, the preceptor instructed the maid to see that as she swept, all the dust fall on the disciple. The maid told the guru that on the previous occasion the disciple had been angry with her, and this time if she repeated the offence, he might beat her. The guru told her to do as directed by him. In accordance with the directive of the guru, she let the dust fall on the disciple in full measure.

Enraged at her conduct, the disciple went to beat her but refrained from doing so.

He then went into the aashram and paid his respects to guru. The guru told him "You have not yet acquired the competence to receive the knowledge. You are exhibiting the qualities of a dog.

Come back after ridding yourself of these animal qualities."

At the end of the third year, the disciple was coming to the aashram after a sacred bath. Carrying out the instructions of the guru, the maid of the aashram poured some dirty water on the disciple.

The latter calmly offered his pranaams (obeisance) to the maid and said "Mother! My salutations to you. You have helped to strengthen my forbearance so that I can be worthy of the preceptor's grace." Without getting angry with her, he told her that he would be always grateful to her for what she had done to him.

When he went in, the guru welcomed him and said: "Son! To-day you have become eligible to receive the Supreme Spiritual Knowledge."

The lesson of this story is that every spiritual seeker has to get rid of attachment to the body. But, that is not enough. The egoistic feeling should be totally eliminated.

The sense of possessiveness should be expelled. Only then can one realise Divinity.

The preceptor drew the disciple close to him and imparted to him the Brahma-Inaana (Supreme Spiritual Wisdom) and filled him with bliss.

Hanumaan's humility

There are in the world today millions of people who recite the Lord's name. But while reciting the name, they do not realise the greatness and glory of the Divine name.

When Hanumaan entered Lanka, the land of Raakshasas, the first friendly person he encountered was Vibheeshana. All the Raakshasas in Lanka, who had not seen a monkey, were curious to know all about the simian visitor. They asked him "Who are you? Wherefrom have you come and at whose behest? How did you enter Lanka?" Hanumaan was unruffled. He told them, "I am the servant of the Lord Kosala, Shri Raama", though he was very powerful. This means also that in any situation one should remain calm and unperturbed.

How is this tranquility to be secured? When the heart is pure, peace is assured. Without purity of the heart peace is unattainable. Even if one appears to be at peace, it is only a pretence. When one has both purity of heart and peace of mind, one can achieve anything. There are three P's.

The first 'P' stands for purity. The second 'P' for patience. The third 'P' stands for perseverance.

When these are present, one can acquire the grace of Shri Raama. This was amply demonstrated by Hanumaan.

But Vibheeshana was full of anguish. He told Hanumaan: "Oh Hanumaan! How lucky you are, how meritorious to earn the company of Raamachandra! I have not had that good fortune. I have been meditating on Raama's name for many years. But so far I have not got the Dharshan of Raama. You have not only enjoyed the company of the Lord, but you are privileged to carry out the commands of Raama. Please tell me how I can secure such a blessing." Hanumaan replied'

"Vibheeshana! It is not enough if you merely recite the name of Raama. You have to carry out the injunctions of Raama and engage yourself in the service of Raama. Only then you will experience the power of Raama within you." From that moment, Vibheeshana resolved to participate in the service of Raama.

Naama japa without service is no use Today in the Kali Yuga, there are any number of persons chanting Raama's name. Naama-japa (chanting the name) is not enough. Whatever name you recite, you must also be active in the service of the form associated with the name. What is implied by the term, Raamakaarya (service to Raama)? Raama is immanent in the entire cosmos. Raama is present everywhere.

Hence, you have to take part in social service. By rendering service to one's fellow beings, rendering help to the helpless and performing sacred acts of dedicated service, one becomes eligible for Shri Raama's grace.

Although Hanumaan was highly intelligent, in matters relating to the Divine, he made no distinction between good and bad. He carried out implicitly whatever he was ordered to do. He did not care to enquire whether it was right or wrong. Why? Because he regarded whatever Raama said as Vedha Vaakya (Gospel truth). God's word is beyond question. Hanumaan felt that.

he was not competent to sit in judgement on the 'Lord's words. "My duty is to carry out whatever

Raama says." "Karthavyam yogam uchyathe" (Duty is Yoga), says the Geetha. What is this yoga

? "Yogah karmasu Kaushalam" says Geetha. Yoga is excellence in the performance of duty.

Hence you should embark on all actions in accordance with the Divine injunctions. Then alone you experience all kinds of knowledge.

Do not give room for doubt and disbelief

Today everyone is racked by doubts' "To do or not to do." To meditate on God why should there be this doubt? No one filled with such doubt will be worthy of God's grace. You should not give any room for disbelief. Even if a person abuses you, you must seek to recognise the divinity in him. Every individual may have his own name and form, but the Divine is in everyone equally.

This broad-minded view should be developed. There is no one in the world without the Divine in 'him. Hence service should be rendered to one and all with this conviction.

Many hanker after Self-Realisation. But how can they have Realisation when they have no selfconfidence?

What does Self-Realisation mean? It is not discovering one's lineage and mundane identity. These relate to the body. But you do not belong to any family or clan. You are yourself.

Even to declare, "I am God", implies dualism. It is difficult to comprehend the Divine Principle.

The nearest approach to comprehending the Divine is to consider Divinity as all pervasive.

Leave no taint of self interest in your actions

Embodiments of Love! All devotional exercises today appear to be a kind of business. This is not the way to relate to 'the Divine. Whatever you do, regard it as an offering to the Divine. "Who am I? I am yours"---this should be the attitude towards God. There should be no taint of self interest in your actions. (Syaami related how Raama taught to Kaikeyi the Vedhaanthik message of egolessness as the means of Self-Realisation).

Men are dominated by the feeling of possessiveness. But what is it that really belongs to them?

They are only Trustees for their properties. Nothing really belongs to them. You imagine that the body belongs to you. But how much control have you over it? Can you live as you please? No.

The body is not yours. Everything belongs to God. One can become a true devotee only when he has this feeling. "Nothing is mine. All belongs to you (God)." This should be the feeling of the devotee.

The difference in attitudes between the gopikas and the denizens of Dhvaaraka consisted precisely in this' The gopikas declared' "Krishna, we are yours!" The people of Dhvaaraka developed pride and egoism over their kinship with Krishna. That egoism brought ruin on the Yaadhava clan. The Yaadhavas boasted about their kinship with Krishna in various ways. The gopikas had no such conceit. They were content to declare: "We are yours, Krishna!"

The difference in attitudes indicates the distinction between dualism and non-dualism. The nondualist has no problem. "Adhvaitha dharshanam jnaanam" (Perception of the one without a second is the Supreme Knowledge). What everyone has to realise today is the omnipresence of, the Divine. "Sarvam khalu idham Brahma (Verily all this is Divine). The unity of the body, mind and spirit should be understood. No actions can be performed without the body. Without actions the eternal verities cannot be recognized. There can be no Self-Realisation without recognizing the verities.

Hanumaan's devotion

Hanumaan was always engaged in the contemplation of Raama.

Every hair on his body chanted the name of Raama. Hanumaan is adored by devotees as an example of total devotion to the Lord. When some had doubts whether Hanumaan could leap the ocean to search for Seetha in Lanka, Hanumaan told them that Raama had given him the task and He would also give him the strength to accomplish it. This absolute faith was the cause of his success. When people entertain doubts as to their capacity to carry out the tasks assigned to them by the Divine, they will be weak and powerless. Hence, to accomplish anything, firm faith is essential. Doubts have to be expelled. Everything that happens should be accepted as for one's own good. That is the means to qualify for God's grace. To go on speculating over Syaami's words is an insane exercise.

Hanumaan exemplified complete freedom from doubts. He had only two desires. To be dear and near to Raama. Hanumaan intensely yearned to be always near to Raama. He had no use for any object, however valuable, which did not proclaim the name of Raama. He threw away the pearl necklace presented to him by Seetha because the pearls did not recite Raama's name. (Syaami sang a ballad, in which Raama praised Hanumaan as the greatest of devotees and embraced him).

Raama declared' "Hanumaan! No material object is fit enough to be given to you as a present.

You live in the world of the Spirit. You have no attachment to the things of the world. Let you be present wherever my glory is sung."

Hanumaan was intoxicated by his devotion to Raama and was always in a state of ecstasy in chanting Raama's name. He was all humility in the presence of Raama. He was utterly fearless before Raavana. Before the Divine he was a suppliant. Before a Raakshasa he was a hero.

Hanumaan knew how to conduct himself in any situation. He was supremely, intelligent. He stands out' as ideal for mankind.

Human action and Divine aim should go together

People today lead meaningless mechanical lives with no ideals to inspire them. The purpose of life is to experience the Divine that is subtle and invisible like the roots that sustain a tree. Men today want fruits without considering the roots. The ancient sages searched for the roots to realise the fruits. Bhaaratheeya culture was based on this concern for what is fundamental and primal. Today people forget the basic truths and pursue the ephemeral. Worldly life is inescapable. But it should be lived with the ultimate goal in view.

Human action and Divine aim should go together. To forget the Divine is to descend to the level of the animal. A hero becomes a zero if he forgets God.

All over the world men are perpetually haunted by fears of every kind because they have not secured the freedom from fear which God alone can give.

(Bhagavaan sang a ballad describing the fears experienced by man).

God's grace alone can free men from fear. All should strive to secure Divine grace by developing firm faith in God. You may worship any form, chant any name, but have firm faith in God. Call the Divine by any name, Raama, Krishna, Allah, Jesus or Buddha--all names are the same. The one Lord is adored by different names.

Devotion should not be converted into a form of business. You should not say you will offer something to God if you get a certain thing which you desire. God needs nothing from you.

Everything belongs to God. You brought nothing with you at birth and leave the world with nothing. Only the Divine is with you. Hence, cherish faith in God.

People ask, "How is one to believe in something that is not perceivable?" This is an absurd question. The qualities of a man are not perceived while the physical body can be seen. But the qualities are more significant than the physical features.

Likewise, faith in the Divine is more important than faith in the phenomenal world. God can be realised only through Love.

Discourse in Sai Kulwant Mandap on 14-10-1995.

A wave of service, if it sweeps over the land, catching everyone in its enthusiasm, will be able to wipe off the mounds of hatred, malice and greed that infest the world.

Baba

27. The bliss of Self-Realisation

At nightfall the moon is the illuminator;

At dawn it is the Sun who illumines;

Righteousness illumines the three worlds;

A virtuous son is the light of the family.

EMBODIMENTS of Love! At night the moon is the source of light for us. During the day the sun sheds light and serves mankind. The three worlds are illumined by Dharma (Righteousness). A virtuous son is a beacon for the family. From ancient times,

Bhaaratheeya culture has been illumined, fostered and inspired by didactic sayings of this kind.

It is purity of mind that helps to sublimate mankind, directs it towards God and enables it to manifest the inherent divinity in man. "What is perceived is liable to perish" (says an aphorism).

That which is seen, that which appears to be real, is bound to pass away in the stream of time.

All that is apparent in the phenomenal world is bound to disappear sometime or other. We should make every effort to know that which is invisible but imperishable.

All external objects seen with the eye are bound to disappear.

Acquire the eyes of wisdom

It is not right that man, who is endowed with immense potencies, should be content with what is seen by the physical eyes. Such eyes are possessed equally by beasts and birds, as well as insects and germs. What, then is the uniqueness of the sight given to man? It must be realised that it is difficult to secure human birth. Having acquired this privilege, human beings should not be content with what is seen by the physical eyes. Man should acquire Inaana nethra (the eyes of wisdom).

It may be argued that even the physical eyes help to acquire knowledge. The eyes see everything but cannot see themselves. Eyes which cannot see themselves, how can they see the mind or see Maadhava (the Divine Lord)? To have a vision of the Lord, the physical eyes are not competent.

One must acquire the eyes of wisdom for this purpose.

The eyes are there, but when they develop a disease the eyes are not aware of it. When the ears lose the power of hearing, they are not aware of the loss. The senses which cannot know their own state, how can they know God? The physical eyes can only serve to see external objects in Nature and examine their properties and explain them, but cannot recognize the Divine.

The external world is made up of the Panchabhuthas (five great elements) ether, air, fire, water and earth. The five senses are transient, momentary and prone to disease. Senses which are liable to become victims of the disease of attachment, how can they serve to recognise the Divine?

Those senses which cannot recognise their own condition are enveloped in ignorance.

What is meant by the phrase "knowing one's self"? Does self knowledge mean knowing one's lineage or profession? Knowledge of the Self transcends knowledge of the body, the senses, the mind and the Antzahkarana (the Will).

Get the vision of God

Today people worship God in various ways. They pray to God' "Oh Lord! Let me have a vision of you! Free me from all my troubles." When one listens to these prayers, one is tempted to feel that they arise only from ignorance. People who offer such prayers seem to have no idea of the nature of God. Who is God? The scriptures, the Vedhas and the Upanishaths, give the answer to this question that God is: Sath-Chith-Aanandha. What you should seek from God, who is Sath-

Chith-Aanandha, is Sath-Chit-Aanandha, and not trivial things relating to the world. All things are included in that Aanandha (Supreme Bliss). What is happening today is that people invoke the name of God but are really worshipping the devil. All mundane desires are associated with the devil and not with the Divine. The more desires are controlled, the more blissful one will be.

What, then, is the meaning of the call "know thyself"? You have to get a vision of God. You have to experience the Divine. You have to converse with God. Man must realize God; see God; feel God; talk to God. This is religion. Without understanding this true meaning of religion, people regard various forms of worship and prayers as religion.

"Realise is Religion." This means that to realize the eternal reality is true religion.

Man is the embodiment of the eternal Truth. He is the embodiment of Sath-Chith-Aanandha (Being-Awareness-Bliss). But he is unable to recognize his true identity because egoism and possessiveness, pomp and pride envelop man's true form of "Being-Awareness-Bliss." The man who is able to get rid of attachment and hatred, egoism and acquisitiveness, will recognize his

Sath-Chith-Aanandha (divine nature). The Divine within is covered by these tendencies like ashes over a burning charcoal. When the ashes are blown away, the fire will reveal itself.

Sath-Chith-Aanandha is the true wealth of a human being. Everyone should try to secure this treasure by overcoming the dragon of self-conceit which is barring the access to it. Everyone has to think for himself how he is viewing this treasure.

Men appear to worship God, but in reality they are pursuing worldly objects. How can they expect to realise God? There should be harmony in thought, word and deed. The Divine whom you seek is within you. Your yearning for the Divine must be total and all-absorbing.

The body is a trust and not your private property. People speak about Moksha (liberation). What is it from which they have to be liberated? Is it from family, wealth or position? No. Liberation from these is an easy affair. Liberation is from the sense of identification with the body. The body is only an instrument and not your true self.

The body is a gift from God. It does not belong to you, but you have to protect it as an instrument given to you. Everything belongs to God. You have to treat it as a trust and not as your private property. It is therefore, your duty to make right use of the body and senses given to you.

God's ways are astonishing, inscrutable, and mysterious. God has made ample provision for all man's needs. He has also given to man much more in the form of luxuries. In addition, He has conferred on man the power to control all these things. God has told man "You are free to use as you like all the things given to you, subject to one condition. You will have to face the consequences of your actions." This means that you cannot abuse the freedom given to you to misuse the things that are provided for you. When you misuse anything, you have to bear the resulting misery. When you make good use of anything, you will enjoy the benefits therefrom.

You have to take note of the purpose for which you use your senses or the objects given to you. Any 'misuse of them will bring misery in its wake. Understand your true Self first. You came with nothing into the world and leave it with nothing. What happens to your wealth or to yourself? Of what use is all other wealth unless a man realises the bliss of oneness with the Divine (Sath-Chith-Aanandha)? (Svaami sang a song, in which he lamented the plight of man who ceaselessly worked for feeding his stomach, forgetting God) All these, pursuits are utterly worthless. Scientists who are exploiting the moon are not trying to understand their own minds.

Without understanding one's own true self, all other knowledge is meaningless.

The moon dispels the darkness of night. The moon shines through the reflected light of the sun.

Moonlight is cool while sunlight is warm. The mind is like the moon. When the rays of the Aathma fall on the mind, it acquires coolness. When the same rays fall on Buddhi (intellect), it gets hot. Today there is more concentration on development of the intellect than on broadening the mind. Man, who has come from the Divine, should aim at the perfection of the Divine. The famous Italian violin manufacturer Anthony Stradivarius, took one year to make one perfect violin because he regarded the making of the violin as an offering to God, who is perfect.

Consider the body as the flute of God. All actions should be done wholeheartedly. This was exemplified by the total devotion of the Gopikas to Krishna. They were lost in ecstasy over the melodious music of Krishna's flute. They found in that music the essence of all the Vedhas and the scriptures. (Bhagavaan sang a song in which the Gopikas pray to Krishna to fill their hearts with the nectarine melody of his flute).

What is the significance of the flute? It symbolises the human body. The flute has nine holes.

The human body has nine openings. The body should be considered as the flute of God. It should be rendered completely hollow, so that the Divine may blow through it. Today the body is anything but hollow. It is filled with all kinds of desires. Only when the desires are removed, the body will be a fit instrument for the Divine to fill it with nectarine music. This is the process of surrender to the Divine. Then one gets intoxicated with the music of the Divine.

Pomp and pride have to be given up to experience the Divine. People talk about meditation. But how much of it is concentrated on God? Nor is formal meditation necessary when you realise that the Divine is within you.

The purpose of meditation is to recognise one's unity with God. This realisation can come only when one removes the three-layered cloak that covers the Aathma in the form of the three Gunas---Thamas, Rajas and Sathva.

Trust everything as God's work, whatever your vocation or profession, By dedicating all actions to God, you sanctify every act in daily life. That is the message of the Vedhas.

Offer love to God
People are used to making edible offerings to idols or pictures, but consume them after the ritual.
These are not what should be offered to God. You should offer your Love to God as the food that God loves. Regard even this love as a gift from God. You offer to God what God has given to 'you. This was what Jayadeva said in a famous song. "Oh Lord! That heart which you gave to me, I am offering to you." It is only when one is filled with this feeling that one can become a complete devotee.
There should be no sense of separateness. This was finely expressed by Pothana when he declared that his entire poem was inspired and composed by the Divine. Thereby his Bhagavatham achieved unique sacredness. The way Pothana described the Goddess Lakshmi's dilemma when she saw her consort, Vishnu, rushing in haste to the rescue of Gajendhra (the lord of elephants), how she was anxious to know where the Lord was going, but felt that it would be inauspicious to ask him, is one of the memorable passages in the Bhagavatham. (Bhagavaan recited the poem with such verve that the entire audience burst into applause). Even Goddess Lakshmi may be swayed by fear on occasions, but the true devotee is always without fear.
Raamadhas expressed this fearlessness in one of his songs. That fearlessness stems from total surrender to the Divine. But today we witness only part-time devotion. The reward is also partial.
No danger from Solar Eclipse
The day after tomorrow, there will be a Solar Eclipse and people are filled with apprehensions about the effects of the eclipse on the world. There is no need for fears of any kind, because such events occur from time to time. The earth came out of the sun. The moon came from the earth.
The moon sometimes comes between the Sun and the Earth. At those times the sun cannot be seen. This is the eclipse of the sun. When the sun, the moon and the earth are in one line, it is wrong to think that any disaster will happen to the earth. No dangers are in prospect. Such natural phenomena are part of the mysteries of creation. Scientists are keen to study the eclipse as an experiment. If they are preoccupied with experiments, when will they acquire experience?

"When people are immersed in family life, what will they get from it? They will continue to suffer till the end of their lives." says a Thelugu Poem.
If all your life is spent on experiments, when will you begin to experience life? When will you start putting into practice the knowledge you acquire? There is joy only in practising what you know, not in the acquisition of knowledge. The delight of the pudding is in the eating. Practise at least a fragment of what you have learnt. Cultivate love for God. Love is God; Live in Love.
Discourse in Sai Kulwant Mandap on 22-10-1995.
28. Fight the forces of evil
Life in the world is impermanent;
Impermanent are youth and wealth;
Wife and children are not permanent;
Only Righteousness and renown are enduring.
EMBODIMENTS of Love! In this phenomenal world, life is like a water bubble. No one can tell when, where and how this bubble will burst. One's youth and wealth are transient stages in one's life, coming and going. No one can predict when they will come and when they will pass away.
Is there any reason for feeling proud about one's youth, which is purely transitory? It is not the unchanging reality. Wife and children are not permanent. They are like passing clouds.
They are like lightning flashes, bright one moment and disappearing the next. None of these is of a lasting nature. "Dharma keerthi dhvayam sthiram." The righteous acts performed by one and the reputation earned by one, these two alone endure for ever, as long as the sun and moon last.
Embodiments of Love! The primary goal of a human being is to realise his inherent divinity and redeem his life by that realisation. Man's heart, which should be an ocean of milk, has been polluted so much by evil today that it has become an ocean of brine.
Ksheerasaagara (the ocean of milk) is regarded as the bed on which the Lord reclines. It is pure and white like milk. But by polluting his heart man is a prey to all kinds of worries.
The ocean of milk has no room for whales and crocodiles. But the main evils of attachment and hatred, infesting the heart like whales and crocodiles, have turned it into an ocean of salt.
Festivals are designed to promote lofty feelings
The tainted life of man has to be purified by expelling the pollutants within man. What is pure and sacred has to be taken in. This duty has been forgotten. If you want to fill the stomach with wholesome and delicious food, you have to empty it of what is impure. One cannot relish good food when the stomach is full of bad stuff. This is borne out by every one's daily experience.

Hence every one should get rid of all the bad thoughts, evil intentions and bad feelings in him and fill the mind with good thoughts and noble feelings. All Bhaaratheeya festivals have been designed to promote such lofty feelings and not for indulging in feasting and revelry.

From ancient times Bhaarith has upheld high spiritual ideals and proclaimed the principle of universal well-being. "Lokaas-Samasthaas sukhino bhavanthu" (May the people of all the worlds be happy). The ancient sages led lives based on these sacred ideals. These ideals have almost disappeared today. Immersed in endless worldly desires people have become strangers to the Divine.

People today are keen to secure shortcuts for achieving anything. This is not so easy. "Anithyam asukham lokam idham praapya bhajasva maam" (Having come down into this ephemeral and hapless world, worship Me), says Krishna in the Geetha. This world is impermanent and "a vale of tears"--Asukham. Having taken birth in such a world, men desire true lasting happiness. When they do not get what they desire, they blame God. World is governed by the rules: As you sow, so shall you reap. Only when you sow good seeds can you reap a good harvest. How can you hope to get sweet fruits by sowing poisonous seeds? If you want to enjoy good results you have to perform good deeds.

Man today is dominated by selfishness and self-interest. Every action is based on selfish interest.

Man has become a plaything in the hands of Selfishness. Consequently he has forfeited peace of mind.

The real meaning of Punya

In life, everything has to be governed by restraints. These restraints should be for the purpose of directing life in the ideal path. Men desire the fruits of good deeds without doing good deeds and want to avoid the consequences of bad actions while indulging in them.

What, indeed, are Punya karmas (meritorious actions)? Vyaasa defined them as actions to help others. Causing harm to others is sinful. These are secular interpretations of the terms Punya and Paapa. Real Punya is the endeavour to recognise one's true self. Although man is the embodiment of Sath-Chith-Aanandha (Being-Awareness-Bliss) he is searching for them elsewhere. When man realises that the Bliss he seeks is within himself, that is Punya (meritorious). This Aanandha is within him and not in the external world. Whatever joy he may find in the external world is impermanent. "Papaaya parapeedanam" (To cause harm to others is sinful). To realise that "the same Aathma that is in all others is within me and is in all living beings" is Punya. This Ekaathma bhaava (spiritual oneness) is meritorious. To regard all beings as diverse in spirit is a sin. The sense of separateness is sinful. "That is full and this is full." This oneness of Spirit has to be experienced. Causing harm to others is only a sign of animality. The real sin is to regard what is spiritually one as manifold and diverse. Man is the embodiment of the Divine. All human bodies are animated by the same Spirit, like the current that makes all bulbs shed light. The Divine subsumes everything though invisible.

Make efforts to realise the Divine

The Divine is omnipresent. The entire cosmos is permeated and sustained by this Divine energy.

Everyone should endeavour to experience the Divine. Man must make the effort and he is bound to realise the experience. The necessary sacrifice must be made. All the bad qualities have to be renounced the moment they invade the mind. True devotion means elimination of all the animal tendencies in man. Man should seek to realise the eternal Divine within him. That is the primary purpose of human life. All other accomplishments are valueless. Man should raise himself from the animal to the Divine. There is nothing great in earning a fortune. What one should seek is purity of the Self--that is the essence of humanness. Today is described as Naraka Chathurdhasi.

What is Naraka? Whatever is associated with suffering is called Naraka. "Ka" stands for 'bad qualities'. Naraka means human life with bad qualities. That is a hellish life. How did Krishna deal with Naraka? Krishna is the Divine, one who attracts by His magnetic vibrations. These vibrations represent the Life Force. The Consciousness that animates the Life Force is known as Prajnaanam, the source of radiation. When radiation and vibration are active in the body, you have the whole human being.

The bad qualities in man, in the form of Narakaasura, have to be destroyed. Krishna came to destroy these bad qualities. He enlisted the aid of Sathyabhaama, who represents the bearer of Truth. This means that with the help of truth, Krishna destroyed the bad qualities. Thyaagaraaja sang ecstatically about the glorious achievements of the Lord. On Deepaavali day, people should pledge themselves to get rid of their bad qualities.

"There is no greater virtue than Truth." Truth is not limited to one nation or one people. It belongs to all mankind. Truth sustains the cosmos. Therefore Truth is God. Follow the path of Truth. Speak the Truth. That is the foremost spiritual exercise.

Fight evil forces

Embodiments of love! Your duty today is to destroy the demonic qualities in you. Evil thoughts and evil actions are rampant everywhere You cannot remain a mere witness to these happenings.

Placing your faith in God, you have to fight evil forces as a human being. You have to demonstrate your human estate. You have to earn a name as a good man. That alone counts. All other acquisitions are worthless. Only a good man endures. Every moment of one's life should be devoted to practising Dharma (righteousness) and earning a Keerthi (good name). Fill every cell in your body; with the spirit of Truth.

Naraka Chathurdhasi is the day on which you resolve to get rid of your bad qualities and follow the path of righteousness. Deepaavali is celebrated today as a festival of lights, with the firing of crackers and display of fireworks. In olden days the ancients rejoiced over the destruction of the demon Narakaasura and let off fireworks.

There is another meaning in the burning of crackers on Deepaavali day. This is the rainy season.

All kinds of germs fill the atmosphere. The smoke from the crackers destroys these germs. The joy derived from the burning of crackers should really come from the elimination of bad qualities within one. For this, it is essential to meditate on God. Listen to Divine discourses. Participate in Bhajans.

Discourse in the Sai Kulwant Mandap on 23-10-1995, Deepaavali Day.

Work done for the welfare of the world is thapas (true penance), while work done for selfish purpose is thamas (useless).

BABA

29. Render unto the people what is theirs

EMBODIMENTS of Love! "Sarve Bhavanthu Sukhinah" (Let all people be happy!). This is the primal call of Bhaaratheeya Culture All people in the world should live happily and comfortably.

Bhaaratheeya culture has handed down this call from ancient times that no one should experience suffering or sorrow.

This sacred land of Bhaarith has shown, from ancient times, to the rest of the world, not only the path of Spirituality but also the ideals to be pursued in the fields of Social, Ethical and Moral values. Forgetting these eternal verities, Bhaaratheeyas have become victims of disorder and discord because of total preoccupation with worldly pursuits.

Because of the advances in science and technology, people seem to be content with physical comforts, oblivious to their Divine heritage. A Nation's well-being or troubles are dependent on the actions of the people. Actions are related to men's thoughts. If the country's condition is not what it should be, what is the reason? Men's thoughts and actions are not what they should be.

Human values should predominate in men's thoughts. Human life has no meaning without these values. To be a true human being, one has to practise these values in daily life.

The two organs of unique importance

There are two organs in man which are of unique importance: the Head and the Heart. All that emanates from the Head is related to the physical world. In Vedhaanthik parlance, this is called Pravritthi Lakshanam (externalism). These external activities include studies, moving about, earning and spending and ultimately passing on. All these relate to the mundane and are not enduring reality. Qualities like kindness, sympathy, compassion, truth and forbearance arise from the Heart. These are described as Nivritthi Lakshanas (Internal traits). Of the two tendencies, the external and the internal, it is not good to follow the Pravritthi Lakshanas (external traits). The quest for truth means understanding the difference between the two paths. This quest embraces every kind of action seeing, speaking, doing, etc. For instance, the eyes see the mother, the son, the daughter, the daughter-in-law and others. The quest for truth means understanding how each of these different persons are to be viewed, though it is the same eye that sees all of them.

Similarly, the tongue is prone to speak the truth or utter lies or indulge in delusions. The quest for truth means that the differences in the role of the tongue should be properly understood. For instance, scientists look at the branches, flowers and fruits of a tree and study the different aspects and draw their conclusions. There are others who realise that the branches, flowers and fruits are sustained by the roots which are below the ground. The persons who searched for the roots were esteemed by our ancient Vedhik seers. The Vedhaanthins thus teach things which are unknown to the scientists. Science teaches things which are not dealt with by the Vedhaanthins.

The real quest for truth consists in combining the explorations of the scientist and the spiritualist.

Branches cannot exist without roots. But roots without branches are useless. Both are interdependent. Likewise, everyone should recognise the integral relationship between the external and the internal. Only then can one know the whole truth and base his life on it.

Exploration of energies present in the cosmos

The world is passing through many changes. Whatever power functions in the Cosmos is present in the individual. You find waves of energy in the world. You also notice the rays of light illuminating the world. Radio waves also fill the atmosphere. Laser beams are also present.

Invisible X-Ray waves are also present. While these are given different names, all these radiations are different manifestations of the same energy. The ancient sages had explored these different forms of radiations and experienced the bliss to be derived therefrom. They were able to accomplish many things on the basis of their knowledge of these powers.

For many millennia, the exploration of these energies has been going on. The first scientist to know about them was Hiranyakashipu. He had total control over Panchabhuthas (five great elements). But, his son, Prahlaadha, taught a few lessons to his father. "Oh father! You have conquered all the worlds in a trice. But you have no control over your mind." Churchill (the British Wartime Prime Minister) pointed out the same truth when he observed "Man has conquered many things. But he has made no effort to know himself."

Scientists today have explored everything, but have not understood their own reality. Of what use is all other knowledge if you do not know the truth about your own self? That is why Vedhaantha summons man to embark on Self-Knowledge.

Everyone should seek to know his true nature, his motives and his consciousness. Man is endowed with all potencies and all forms of energy. Man has limitless magnetic energy in him.

Possessing all these powers, it is a pity that man regards himself as weak. Energy and matter are not different. They are present like the tree that is latent in a seed.

"Nothing is Mine"

People do not comprehend the preciousness of human life and all its potentialities. Men should learn to lead a moral life. When one's thoughts are pure, one's life becomes sacred and blissful.

No room should be given for bad thoughts and bad actions.

From earliest times, Bhaaratheeyas had sought to base their lives on noble ideals. Today, Bhaaratheeyas are asking. "Where is God?" The truth is "You are God."

With regard to the Drinking Water Project, people have been praising Svaami in laudatory terms.

Svaami is not happy with these eulogies. Nothing is mine. All these are gifts from devotees.

They have taken the form of water. To demonstrate the exemplary character of this devotion, I launched the water project. I am only a trustee. I am a postal runner. Whether the messages delivered by the postman are pleasant or unpleasant, only the recipients can know. Hence, it is not right to attribute to Svaami responsibility for anything. God seeks nothing. What you have to offer to God is only your love.

True sacrifice is to provide amenities for the poor

There are in the world many great men and wealthy men. There are any number of aashrams and temples. Wherefrom are these aashrams and temples getting funds? They come from the earnings of the public. Hence, such funds, received from devotees, should be utilized for the benefit of the devotees. Whether it be an aashram or a temple or a wealthy person, their income comes from the labours of poor persons. If the poor did not do the work, how could the rich become rich? It is their labour which has enabled the rich man to acquire wealth. Hence, what has been acquired from the labours of the poor should be used for their good. Therefore, the authorities of aashrams or temples in any area should use their resources for providing education or medical relief or other amenities in their areas and make them happy. This is true sacrifice.

Many devotees offer all kinds of ornaments for the idols in temples. For God the only ornament is Love. No other ornament can fittingly adorn God. Hence, instead of offering ornaments, it is better to use the money for the benefit of Naaraayana in the form of needy human beings.

It is not good to look to the Government for everything. People should come together and try as far as possible to get their requirements met by their own co-operative efforts. Only then they will become one human family. All, indeed, are brothers and sisters and should work together in this spirit. How do you expect Government to provide all amenities? They have to get the money from public. It is better to let the people use their money for their own benefit along proper lines.

This kind of mutual co-operation in all endeavours has been commended by the Vedhas from ancient times. The Vedhas have declared that sacrifice is the only means to achieve immortality.

It is necessary to devise means to ensure that the resources of aashrams and temples are used solely for the public good. Unity among the rural folk is essential. There is the problem of maintenance of the facilities created by the Water Project. If, for instance, a pipe put up in a place fails to work, there is no meaning in waiting for the official machinery to set it right. The villagers themselves should arrange to get it repaired. Why should not there be such unity and co-operation among the rural folk? Most of our troubles are due to lack of unity and co-operation among the people. Only unity can ensure the prosperity of the people.

Let unity prevail. Let the affluent sections realise that their wealth comes from the labours of the masses. There is no need to glorify what I have done. I have given back to the people what has been given by them. I have given to you what is essential for you. Nothing is mine. If anything can be called mine, it is you. You are my greatest property. If you are happy, I am happy. If you pursue the right path, that is my food. When you are united, I feel happy. Therefore, do not speak about what Svaami has done. Svaami served to you what you offered to Him. I have nothing in my hands. People will call them empty hands. But this nothing is everything.

Real 'art' should emanate from the 'heart'. During the past few days, the people have been enjoying the music concerts and dance programmes. In the past these fine arts were patronized by rulers. Today the word 'art' has lost its meaning. Real art should emanate from the heart. Artistic expression should reflect what is in the heart. All arts like music, painting, dance, etc. should be developed as sacred activities. You experienced joy when you witnessed the concerts. That joy came from the heart. By promoting such arts the people can experience perpetual joy. Hence people should encourage such sacred arts, which are part of Bhaarith's great cultural heritage.

The Vedhas have held forth the message of people living in amity striving together for common ends and sharing the fruits of their co-operative efforts. Equally, they have proclaimed the omnipresence of the Divine. The cosmic form of the Divine encompasses every being in the universe. Forgetting this fact "Sarvam Vishnumayam Jagath" (The Divine is immanent in the Cosmos), people search for the Divine. Every human being is a spark of the Divine. Hence, there should be no ill-will towards anyone.

People wish Happy Birthday. For whom is this birthday? It is only for the body, which cannot experience happiness. Do not follow the body, which is perishable, or the mind, which is like a mad monkey. Follow your conscience. Human life is based on the body (actions), the mind (thoughts) and the Aathma (Consciousness). The body has to be kept in a sound condition. It has to be used for the service of others. Put into practice Vyaasa's motto: "Help ever; Hurt never."

This is my advice to everybody.

Secret of Svaami's strength

This body (of Svaami) will enter on its seventieth year on the 23rd. As far as I can remember, I have not done all these years any harm to anyone in any form. Even the idea of causing harm to anyone has never entered my mind. Because of this, inspite of my seventy years, I appear like a small boy. As I don't find the time or the opportunity, I don't run, but I can do so. Wherefrom has this strength come? There are three factors responsible' three P's. First P, Purity. Second P, Patience. Third P, Perseverance. If you develop these three qualities, you can also acquire the same strength.

Today, most people lack purity. Whether you believe it or not, I must tell you that there is no trace of self-interest in me. I am keen to do something or other for this or that person, but I have no concern about myself. Develop this attitude and you will experience your Divinity.

So far, I have not stretched my hand to seek anything from anyone. I ask for only one thing: pure love. That is God. Only the love of God is true love. All others are merely different forms of attachment. There is no greater achievement or ideal than love of God. Dedicate every action to God. Work will be transformed into worship.

Whether people believe it or not, it is a fact that I have never known what it is to worry. Persons working in the Super Speciality Hospital have asked me: "Svaami!

The Hospital is costing two crores of rupees a month.
The Institute of Higher Learning is being run without getting anything *from the Govt or the students. How are these being done? Svaami appears to be totally free from worries. Why should there be any worry? If you are engaged in good work for the public, there is no room for worry.
It is purely an aberration of the mind. I have no such worry: I am engaged in good work. Where, then, is cause for worry? If you are not doing good work, you have to worry.
Therefore, embark on good work with faith. You will have no worries.
Develop love! Fill your hearts with love and share it with all beings, thereby experience bliss.
Regard the entire world as one family. That is the message of Bhaaratheeya culture. Countries are building up arms for defence. But Bhaarith has believed in Dharma as the real safeguard for nations or individuals.
Hence you should protect and cherish Dharma.
Atomic weapons should be given up. Prime Minister Narasimha Rao has been pleading for the abolition of atomic 'weapons. I agree with him. Bhaarith's most powerful weapon is Dharmaasthra.
Let us adhere to Dharma. That will protect us.
Embodiments of love! It is a blessing to be born in Bhaarith. There are doubtless troubles and difficulties. These have to be faced and overcome.
There is only one thing which you have to offer as a birthday gift.
Develop love and live fraternally. Banish hatred and jealousy. Set an example to the world.
Discourse in the Sai Kulwant Mandap on 17-11-1995.
30. Fill the world with love
There is no worse disease than greed;
No enemy worse than anger;
Nor is there any misery worse than poverty;
There is no greater happiness than wisdom..
AMONG the numerous diseases prevalent in the world, the disease of lobha (greed) has grown beyond bounds. There is no disease worse than this. This greed undermines humanness and turns man into a monster. The second disease is krodha (anger): There is no enemy worse than anger.
It is possible to overcome external foes, but it is very difficult to subdue this internal enemy.
Anger can destroy all human qualities and make a man forget his real nature. It is man's worst enemy. There is no misery equal to poverty. Poverty does not merely mean lack of wealth. You have poverty of the mind, poverty in wisdom. This poverty also causes misery to man.

Man is ravaged by these three: Greed (or miserliness), anger and lack of wisdom. There is no greater source of happiness than Inaana (wisdom or the Higher Knowledge). Inaana is not confined to worldly knowledge. There are other kinds of knowledgebookish, superficial, etc--of which the most valuable is practical knowledge.
Understand the purpose of life
Everyone should strive to acquire that knowledge by which he can get rid of greed, anger and material and spiritual poverty. It is to achieve this purpose that you are participating in this conference.
At the outset you have to consider what is the purpose of life. "Is it for involvement in endless work or for eating and sleeping or indulging in gossip that the Divine has conferred this human birth?" (Svaami sang a Thelugu poem). The gift of intelligence is being used for many trivial purposes but not to understand the goal of life.
Society today is riddled with discord and disorder. The progress of civilization has undermined morality and decency in all walks of life. Obsessed with worldly values, men 'have lost all concern for moral values. Selfishness reigns supreme everywhere.
Even in the spiritual field, people seem to be more interested in themselves than in the welfare of society and the promotion of public good-
The delegates assembled in this conference appear to be concerned about the functioning of their centres. Why were these centres started? The primary objective of the Sai Organization is to raise the human consciousness to the Divine by eliminating all animal tendencies. People do not seem to be aware of their true nature. Only those who understand their true selves can help to elevate others. The Upanishaths have given the clarion call to mankind to wake up from their ignorance and go forward towards their 'supreme divine destiny of selfrealisation.
The three paths of Sai
You have to engage yourselves in Seva (Service). Service does not mean mere rendering help to others of one kind or another. True service means participation in social activities after ridding yourself of egoism and possessiveness and manifesting your qualities of compassion and kindness. The aim is the refinement of your own good nature rather than giving succour to others. There is a Sanskrit saying which declares that greater than penance or pilgrimage, meditation or worship, is service to good people. In rendering service, there should be unity of heart, head and hands (three H's). Only then service becomes sanctified. The significance of the three letters in Sai should be understood. "S" stands for Service. "A" stands for Adoration. "I" stands for Illumination. These three represent Karma. Bhakthi and Inaana respectively. Sai teaches these three. All the three concepts are equally important. Sai is a combination of the three spiritual paths of Action, Devotion and Wisdom. Just as the Pranava sound is made up of the three letters "A", "U", "M" (OM), Sai stands for the triple forms of spiritual saadhana. In the Sai organization, this threefold exercise has to be properly understood. Sai sevaks have to develop the love in them, share it with others and fill the whole world with love. True love should be distinguished from attachments of various kinds. That love is a synonym for God. Love is God. Live in love. The love of God comes from the depths of the heart. Sai sevaks should understand this love and render service in the right spirit to all mankind. Fill the world with love. People ask how they can experience God. The answer was given by Raamakrishna Paramahansa, when he told a questioner that if he loved God with the same intensity with which he loved his wife and children he would be able to experience God. Perform all actions as an offering to God. Do not make any distinction between your official work and your work in the Sai organization. Spirituality cannot be divided into compartments. The Sathya Sai organization was set up solely to enable members to manifest their love in all their activities. You should manifest the divinity within you. That is Self realisation, realisation of your oneness with the Divine. The setting up of Sai Centres is not an exercise in numbers. The emphasis should be on quality and not quantity. The International President and the National President of our organization have mentioned how the Samasthalu (centres) have grown. But has Samathvam (fellow-feeling) grown to the same extent? Fellow-feeling should grow. On the contrary, divisiveness is growing. I want quality, not quantity. Promote harmony among members. You cannot avoid making such distinctions as President, Coordinator, Member and the like. But these distinctions are functional and have no place at the spiritual level. God is present equally in all, from the president to the ordinary member. You should recognise this oneness. Positions, names and forms may vary but the Supreme Truth is one. This spirit of Samathvam (oneness) should be fostered. Then there will be no jealousy or discord. Where there is oneness there will be no trouble. Foster the spirit of Samathvam. Society today is racked by jealousy and hatred. Jealousy is a disease, which gives rise to hatred. Develop forbearance and goodwill. That is the cure for jealousy. I have often declared: "My life is My message." Often many have extolled Me or derided Me. I do not get elated by praise or depressed by criticism. I treat everything alike. "Samathvam yogam uchyathe." That equal-mindedness is yoga. What do I lose when someone criticizes me? That is his opinion. It does not affect me. Those who criticize Baba are suffering from a disease, like those who reject a sweet because they suffer from diabetes. The fault lies not in the sweet but in the person who is unable to relish it. They know that Baba is engaged in beneficial activities and they want him. But because some of their selfish interests are not served, they turn against Svaami. That is a malady. When you see the facts in this light, you will realise the truth. Today you have to cultivate a serene equanimity that rises above these trifles. The development of equanimity is more important than the growth of centre. You should recognise the Divinity in one and all. "The one Supreme Spirit dwells in all beings." Bulbs are many but the current that illumines them is one. Develop this spirit of oneness. Unity will lead to Divinity. Many who are working in the Organization do not recognise the need for unity. Lack of unity breeds enmity and groupism. The organization exists not for my sake but yours. When Svaami administers what may appear as bitter medicine, it is for your own good. God is the physician for the ills of human existence. You may not relish the taste of His medicine. But whatever Svaami does, says or gives, is all for your good. Above all, unity is the foremost need of the hour. "Nations are many, but the earth is one." All are denizens of the earth. All are children of Mother Earth. Recognise this truth. In the realm of the Spirit, it is foolish to ask for proofs of direct external perception. The spiritual is subtle. It has to be experienced within. The Divine is present within us incognito like the Paandavas during the last year of their exile. Does the external form of a person reveal anything about his internal qualities? He himself may not be aware of all of them. He may be full of love or hatred. Can anyone perceive it? Without knowing his qualities, is it proper to judge him by his physical features? You see this magnificent hall, but you do not see its foundations. Likewise, God is the basis, Nature is the superstructure. The spirit is the basis, the body is the superstructure. The body is like a rose in which the spirit is present as invisible fragrance. "I am always blissful" This conference should consider how the Sai Organizations can improve their service activities. I have nothing to gain from the organization. I am always blissful. There is no need to wish me "Happy Birthday". I am always happy. Embodiments of Love! Develop love, so that you may deserve this appellation. The Thamil Naadu President, T.G. Krishnamurthy said, that when Svaami reincarnates as Prema Sai he should be given the privilege of serving Svaami. Ayyaa! Take good care of what you already have. Why hanker after something in the womb of the future? The present is very important. Past is past. Don't worry about the future. Take care of the present which will determine the future. Do your duty now. Duty is God. Work is worship. This is the way to run the organization on ideal lines. What is being inaugurated today is the search for the supreme truth about the Divinity within. Youth is not related to age. People have referred to the Seventieth Birthday. The body is constituted of the five elements, the five sheaths, the five life-breaths and the five senses. Upto one's fiftieth year, one may be described as experiencing Yauvanam (youth). Youthhood should be dedicated to purposeful activities. Youth is not related to age. Bheeshma, who was 112 years old, was the commander-in-chief of the Kaurava forces. It is will power that determines one's age. When one reaches sixty, it is a Bhaaratheeya custom to perform Shaanthi puuja for the purpose of subduing the six internal enemies (lust, pride, etc). On reaching seventy, a person attains the state of the Seven Sages, the Seven Oceans, the Seven musical notes, the Seven colours. The seven colours come from the sun's rays. The sun's rays are eternal. The Seventieth year symbolises the attainment of the saintliness of the Saptharishis (Seven sages who constitute the constellation of Ursa Major, the Great Bear). On attaining the eightieth year, you must become one of the Ashtagrahas (eight planets). On reaching the ninetieth year, you have to acquire the strength of one of the Navagrahas (nine planets). On reaching the hundredth year one should merge in the ten indhriyas (organs of sense and action') and get rid of the body consciousness. The acquisition of the love of God should be the primary aim of members of the Sai organizations. The spiritual path is the easiest to follow. The giving up of worldly desires is easier than clinging to them. Hold fast to God. Inaugural address to the Sixth World Conference of Sai Organisation on 18-11-1995. Bhakthi does not consist in wearing ochre robes, the organization of uthsavas (religious festivals), the performance of yajnas, the shaving or matting of hair, carrying of kamandala (bowl) or danda (stick), etc. A pure heart, uninterrupted contemplation of God, feeling that everything is the Lord's creation and therefore One, unattachment to sense objects, embracing all in equal love, dedication to true speech--these are, indeed, the characteristics of Bhakthi. BABA 31. Supreme need for national unity EMBODIMENTS of Love! In this vast world, in which countless, human beings are leading miserable lives, pursuing endless desires and unattainable aspirations, the spirit of sacrifice is most essential. Trees bring forth fruits for the benefit of others. Rivers carry water for the use of others. Cows yield milk to benefit others. Likewise, man should share in harmony with others his qualities of goodness, compassion, forbearance and charity. The earth follows its Dharma (natural duty) to make use of its five elements to produce sustenance for all living beings. Born on the earth, men are not following the example of the earth. It is not the creeds that men profess--whether Christianity or Islam or other religion--which lend value to their lives. The highest value is the fact of their humanness. All faiths combine to invest man with a unique effulgence. The various talents with which man is endowed should be used-for good purposes on the basis that individual good is linked to social well-being. Man today has to go through transformation at three levels: First and foremost is spiritual transformation. Second comes transformation in the attitude towards society. The third change is at the individual level. When spiritual transformation takes place, there is an automatic change in the attitude towards society. When society becomes harmonious and prosperous, the individual also changes. Three-fold transformation

This three-fold transformation is implicit in the term Sai. "S" stands for Spiritual change. "A" stands for Association change. This is change in one's relationships with others in society. "I" stands for Individual change. Sai--this signifies changes at all three levels---Spiritual and Individual. This triple transformation is what Sai desires. When this transformation takes place, the whole world will be prosperous and happy.

The question today is "How can spiritual transformation take place without changes at the individual and social level?" The basis for all the threefold transformations is the love principle.

This love has to be experienced by one and all.

How is individual transformation to be achieved? There are some bad habits among individuals such as smoking, drinking liquor, meat eating and gambling. These bad habits not only degrade the individuals but also inflict hardships on their families. These bad habits have to be given up for the individual to manifest his inherent goodness. One's personality can blossom only when he leads a moral life.

How should one's attitude to society be changed? One should give up talking ill of others, reviling them or ridiculing them, feeling envious of good people. Evil traits like these lead to loss of peace in society. People should develop friendly and loving attitude towards their fellowbeings in society. To develop a sense of helpfulness, there should be the spirit of sacrifice.

People should also cultivate the feeling of sympathy and understanding.

For spiritual transformation, the qualities that are needed are Dhava, kindness, love, forbearance and compassion. Bhaarith throughout the ages has fostered these qualities among the people.

People today have forgotten these sublime qualities because they have lost the fear of sin, ceased to love God and do not observe social ethics. What greater misfortune can there be for the nation?

Love of God and fear of sin

Love of God should be a natural feeling in everyone. It is our immemorial heritage. When there is love of God, fear of sin follows naturally. Today fear of sin has gone and everywhere the most heinous crimes are being committed. In such a situation, how can there be morality in society?

How are we to transform this state of things? The Prime Minister, Sri E V. Narasimha Rao, in his speech referred to the grave problems facing the country. Who is responsible for all the troubles, disorder and violence? Maname (We alone) are responsible. The truth has to be recognized. People are blaming others for their own faults. If there is unity among the people, there will be no problems. Unity is strength.

Today righteousness has declined among the people. As the level of righteousness goes down, the water level also goes down! If good qualities arise in men, the water level will also rise.

What is the reason for the failure of timely rains and the shortage of food crops? It is the decline of morals among the people which is the cause of natural calamities. The people must cherish sacred thoughts. Then the people's aspirations will be fulfilled. I have to utter a warning in the presence of the Prime Minister.

Bhaarith achieved its freedom through the sacrifice of innumerable patriots, who gave up their lives. Freedom has been achieved, but not unity. Without unity~ the nation is weak like the hand of a man who cannot use all his fingers. We must achieve unity in every field.

Need for national approach to sharing-river waters

All natural resources of the country should be enjoyed equally by all the people, regardless of caste or community. There are many rivers in our country which flow across State boundaries.

Bhaarith is not lacking in water or other resources. We have many perennial rivers and vast areas of fertile land. But these resources are not being fully used. The nation's perennial rivers like Kaaveri, Ganga and Krishna should be treated as national property. Then there will be no room for inter-State disputes. All river waters should be used for the benefit of all the people. It is because of lack of unity and the assertion of separatist claims that a good deal of river waters is going to waste. If the Prime Minister endeavours to promote a national approach to the harnessing of river waters, the nation will prosper. The States also are prone to put their claims against the claims of others. They should adopt a co-operative and fraternal attitude towards each other and behave as good neighbours. If this is done, there will be no shortage of food or water in this country. The people also should develop this co-operative attitude.

It is well known that quite often, sections of the public adopt an adversary attitude towards measures taken by the Government. The people should recognise that these measures are taken in their interest. Moreover, the public should not remain idle, leaving everything to the Government. They have to do their duty. They have to live up to certain ideals. The body should be used for rendering help to others. The spirit of helpfulness must be fostered.

There is an old Sanskrit saying which declares' "Charity is the ornament for the hand; Truth is the ornament for the throat; Listening to sacred lore is the ornament for the ears." These are the ornaments which should be valued.

Education, health and water should be free for all Syaami had resolved from the beginning on the provision of three vital things for the people: For health, the heart is important. For education, the head is important. For the body, water is vital. I feel that these three should be provided to the people free. Today a heavy price has to be paid for medical care and for education. Even water has to be bought. A heavy capitation fee has to be paid for getting admission even in a primary school. Illness is incidental to human life. Doctors should be prepared to make any sacrifice to relieve the sick. Money should not be the primary consideration. There are many educated students present here. They should take a pledge to serve society after finishing their studies. Instead of going after high salaried jobs in the cities they should go to the villages to serve the poor living there and earn their love and gratitude. Only then their education would be worth while. Students should be quite content with modest emoluments in the villages, with which they can be more comfortable than with larger earnings in the cities. They can lead more healthy and happy lives in the villages.

The water project
With regard to the water project, it should be noted that much was accomplished in a short period. In the execution of the project changes had to be made in response to the appeals of people in different villages. Because of this, the entire project has not yet been completed. Some villages are yet to get water. This should not cause any disappointment. Whatever may happen, all villages will get water and the project will be fully carried out.

The inauguration of the project by the Prime Minister does not mean that further work will be held up. We are prepared for any sacrifice to honour the plighted word. Work will be resumed from tomorrow and we shall see that by January the entire district is supplied with water. We will give no room for anyone to complain that he has not got water. Embodiments of Love! It is a matter for gratification that today the Prime Minister, who belongs to Andhra Pradesh, has inaugurated the water supply scheme for Ananthapur District. All of you should live in amity, without differences of any kind and offer your cooperation to the Government. Not only will the nation benefit from your unity, but you will also be setting an example to the world. Give up hatred and jealousy, participate with love in measures taken by the government for the well-being, of the people. Love can achieve anything.

Discourse in Sai Kulwant Mandap on 18-11-1995.

Bhakthi, to be effective, must be regularised through selfdiscipline; it should not be allowed to grow wild and untended.

You rush forward to touch My feet or to prostrate before Me, ignoring the children, the aged and the sick, upon whom you fall when you press forward towards Me. Do not forget the Sai in those people, when you rush forward towards this Sai. The merit of all the hardship you underwent to see and hear this Sai is as good as cancelled when you inflict pain on the Sai who resides in them. That plus and this minus add up to zero. In your frenzy to offer homage, you should not forget others who have been waiting long for the chance; you must provide facilities for their dharshan.

32. When women are honoured

Asthiram Jeevanam loke (Life in this phenomenal world is impermanent)

Yaddhrishyam tannashyam (Whatever is perceived is bound to pass away some time or other)

Asthiram yauvanam dhanam (Youth and wealth are transient)

Asthiram dhaara puthraadih (Wife and children will pass away)

Sathyam Keerthi dhvayam sthiram (Only Truth and Fame endure).

EMBODIMENTS of Love! In this infinite universe, among the myriads of living beings humanity is eminent. Among human beings, it is a privilege to be born as a woman. There are many examples to demonstrate the preeminence of women.

Was not Raama born as a Divine incarnation in Kausalya's womb?

Did not Lava and Kusha (the twins) become great because they were born to Seetha?

Was it not Jeejeebai's loving care which made Shivaaji great?

Was it not Putlibai's piety which made Gaandhi a Mahaathma?

All the greater sages, and saints, heroes and warriors were born to women "who made them great . Woman is the Goddess of Nature.

Gaayathri, which enshrines the essence of the Vedhas, is a goddess, venerated as Vedha Maatha (the mother of the Vedhas).

It is obvious that feminine birth is estimable, adorable and sublime.

The Vedha also adores the feminine principle in various ways. Vedhik rituals and practices accord a high place to women.

Feminine aspect of Divinity

The woman is adored under different names as Sathyavathi, Anyavathi, Angavathi and Nidhaanavathi. Sathyavathi proclaims the truth that the Divine pervades the cosmos, God is not separate from Prakrithi (Nature). Nature is a form of the Divine. The Vedha testifies to the omnipresence of the Divine like the presence of butter in every drop of milk,

Next is Anyavathi. The five elements are present everywhere in the universe: earth, water, fire, air and ether. These elements vary in subtlety in a progressive order. The Vedha declares that even the five elements, are manifestations of the Divine. This aspect of Nature is called Angavathi.

The Anyavathi principle points, out which deity is responsible for what function and describes the deity's special characteristics. Eeshvara is described as Thrishuula-dhaari (the bearer of the Trident) and Thrinethra dhaari (the deity with three eyes) Vishnu is described as the bearer of the conch, the discus and the mace. Krishna is described as one having the peacock's feather (on his head). Raama is described as the wielder of the bow. The Angavathi ritual worships the different deities with their distinctive features.

The Nidhaanavathi ritual-lays down nine. different ways in which the Divine can be worshipped, such ,as listening, chanting the name, etc.

All forms of worship, are presided over by these four feminine deities. Though the names, are different, the goal is one.

Women should be revered

From ancient times the feminine aspect of the Divine has been worshipped in various ways. The Vedha declares that where women are honoured and esteemed, there divinity is present with all its potency. Unfortunately today men consider it demeaning to honour women. This is utterly wrong and is a sign of ignorance.

Sthree (Woman) is Grihalakshmi (the Goddess of Prosperity for the home). She is hailed as Dharmapathni (the virtuous spouse). She is called - Illalu (the mistress of the house) and

Ardhaangi (the better half). People gloat over petty titles conferred on them. But women have been conferred the highest titles which are valid for all time. A home 'without a woman is a jungle.

Men should realise the high status of women and honour and respect them accordingly. They should not make women weep and shed tears. A home where the woman sheds tears will be ruined. Men should give an honourable place for women and lead a respectable life.

The archetypal woman is described as Aadhishakthi (the primal source of all energy) having a whole array of powers. She is hailed as the mother of the Amrithasyaputhraah (children of immortality).

The thrigunas in the word "Sthree"

The word Sthree is made up of three, consonants, "Sa", "Tha" and "Ra". "Sa" signifies the Saathvik nature of women. It represents also the triple aspects of experiencing divinity

Saalokyam (vision of the Divine), Saameepyam (proximity) and Saavyujyam (mergence). "Tha" signifies the Thaamasik quality. But this Thaamasik quality is 'not indolence and slothfulness. It includes qualities like humility, kindness and modesty. This means that women begin with qualities like meekness and-modesty so that they may serve the family and society in the right spirit. There is a saying in Andhra Pradesh: "Judge a house by its mistress."

"Ra" represents the Rajoguna. This does not mean pugnacity and querulousness. This quality signifies the preparedness of women, where necessary, even to sacrifice their lives for the sake of their honour and the honour of their family. Bhaarith's history is full of examples of women who fought valiantly and gave' up their lives to protect their husbands and their honour.

Sthree thus represents the combination of the three gunas. Woman, who should be highly honoured for these qualities, is being treated as a Abala (weaker vessel) and assigned an inferior status.

It will not be out of place to mention here that women who have wielded power in Bhaarith or other countries have proved themselves to be exceptionally able and successful. There have been many kings in Britain - but no one ruled the country so well as Queen Victoria, Her rule was marked by righteousness, prosperity and efficiency. There was no discontent during her reign. In more recent times, Indira Gandhi ran the Government with courage and consummate skill. She was prepared for any sacrifice in the interests of the country. Among Prime Ministers, she headed the Government for over twelve years. Many others had only brief tenures!

There are several organizations which are being run by women with great dedication and zeal for the benefit of the people. Valmeeki extolled the sweetness of womanhood. What is the cause of, this sweetness? The spirit of sacrifice is the cause, according to Valmeeki.

Spirit of sacrifice is found only in women

A mother is ready to sacrifice everything even her life, for the sake of her child. Such a spirit is to be found only among women. If a child is grievously ill, the father may say that the child may as well die. But the mother will try to save the child at any cost. It is for this reason, that woman is described as Thyaagamuurthi, the embodiment of sacrifice. Men do not have the same spirit of sacrifice as women. Men may present a heroic pose, but do not have the determination and perseverance to carry on the struggle to the end. Valmeeki described woman as the Bhakti svaruupini (embodiment of devotion). Man was described as Inaanavaruupa. The Inaani has limited access to the Divine mansion. But the woman devotee has access to innermost apartments. The preeminent status accorded to women will be evident from all the ancient scriptures.

In this context the role of women as mothers should be understood.

The great hero, Shivaaji, was moulded entirely by the teachings of his mother. Raama was taught by his mother Kausalya to follow the sacred path of Dharma. The lives of the great show to what extent they were the products of their mothers.

Gandhiji became a staunch adherent of truth after a lesson he learnt from his mother, who could not bear her son telling a lie even to make her break her fast.

It is the mothers who make their children take to the right path, not so much the fathers. Today we find the father's teaching the children to utter lies. For instance, when the telephone rings in the house, the father who is in the house tells his son to inform the caller that the father is not at home.

The practice of fathers allowing the sons to go astray has a long ancestry. It started in the Dhvaapara Yuga with Dhritharaashtra, father of Dhuryodhana.

Whatever evil deeds his son did,

Dhritharaashtra used to say he was a good man. Fathers who allow their sons to go astray are not real fathers at all. Prahlaadha observed: "Only he is father who advises the son to seek God. Only he is a true guru who instructs the pupil about God."

The mother is the first preceptor for the child

Mothers in ancient days used to teach, the children about right conduct, morality and devotion.

The first preceptor for a child is the mother. For this reason, Bhaaratheeya culture gave the first place to the mother among the four persons to be revered as divine: mother, father, guru and guest. The mother gets the first place because she bears the child in the womb for nine months and nourishes him with her own blood.

Even in mentioning the names of deities, the first place is given to the goddess, as in Seetha-

Raama, Paarvathi-Parameshvara and Lakshmi-Naaraayana and the reason for the feminine, name getting priority is she is Prakrithi svaruupini--the embodiment of Prakrithi (nature). The implication in this usage, is that you should realise God through the propitiation of Prakrithi.

Earn the blessings of the mother

In this world, all things are transient. Only righteousness and good name endure. How is one to acquire a good name? By revering the mother. Never go against the wishes of the mother. The son who causes pain to the mother 'can never' be happy. Hence, earn the blessing of the mother.

In this context, it should be noted that Russians observe December 8th as Ladies Day. On that day the women have free time. The men have to do the cooking. The women go out to do service in hospitals and other places.

Men and women have to understand each other so that they can live in harmony, in the family.

Today people want to live happily but not to lead ideal lives. Parents, for instance, do not set a good example to the children. In the modern age, the father does not instruct the children properly and the children do not pay heed to the words of the mother. The vast majority of fathers today behave like Dhritharaashtra. Where there are some good children, leading a pious life, the fathers rebuke them, saying, "Have you gone crazy? Don't take part in Bhajans or social service." Parents who behave in this manner are like Hiranyakashipu, who could not tolerate his son worshipping Hari. Today we have many parents like Dhritharaashtra and Hiranyakashipu,

but few who encourage, their children to adhere to righteousness.

Children today do not relish edifying works like the Raamaayana, the Mahaabhaaratha and the Bhaagavatham. They waste their time on reading trash. Parents should see that children do not read bad books.

Now, for a few words of advice to women. It is found that women are given to excessive talking.

From today you have to take a pledge not to indulge in talking. Women are found talking not only, in the auditorium but even in the bhajan mandhir. Men are fond of strolling around as they please, They observe no restraints as to where they should not go and what places they should avoid.

If women observe restraint in speech and men control their movements, it will be good for both.

Ladies day should be observed every year

If the nation has to prosper, improvement must start with the parents. Without peace and harmony at home, there can be no peace in the nation. This message should be propagated throughout the country on every November 19th, by observing it as Ladies' Day. You should teach people how to run their homes well and how to bring up children on right lines. You must deal calmly and tactfully with the men, if they are not cooperating. Though Raavana was evil-minded, his noble wife, Mandodhari, tried to correct him as much as possible. She advised him strongly not to keep Seetha in Lanka, but to restore her to Raama.

From today learn to see the good in others and examine your own defects. Thereby you will benefit both ways. Those who go about finding faults in others are like dogs which go after cast off shoes.

Call to women

Embodiments of Love! Mistakes may sometimes be committed in the organization. See that they do not recur. Buddha learnt the proper lesson through a single experience of seeing an old man, a sick man and a dead corpse. He understood the entire nature of human existence from this.

People today have similar experiences over and over again. But their minds remain unchanged.

Every experience should bring out a change. For years you listen to Svaami's discourses. How many have changed? How many have developed good qualities? Very few indeed.

Develop pure thoughts wherever you may be. Only then your visit to Prashaanthi Nilayam at great expense would have served a purpose.

As today is a sacred day dedicated to women, they should change themselves and help to change the men and the children. They should develop the qualities of sympathy, compassion; love and sacrifice. Study the lives of our great women, who were models of patience, fortitude, compassion and sacrifice. I desire that you should take up the reins of leadership and bring peace and prosperity to the nation by leading ideal lives.

Discourse on 19-11-1995 in the Puurnachandra Auditorium

33. From the individual to the Divine

Divine MBODIMENTS of love! All, over the world, mankind is racked today by various difficult problems. When one problem is solved, another-series crop up. The reason for this situation is the absence of right relationship between the individual and the society.

At the very outset, we have to take note of four entities: The first is the power that can solve any problem in a moment. This is Parameshti (the Supreme Self). The second entity is Shrishti (the created universe). The third is Samashti (the collective entity--society or community). The fourth is Vyakthi (the individual). These four are not separate entities. A body consists of different organs performing different functions but they are integral parts of one body. For instance, the hand has a palm, which has fingers. All are integrally related.

Similarly, the primary role of Parameshti has to be recognized. It is only when Parameshti is understood that the secret of creation can be grasped. When this secret is understood, the significance of society will be evident. Then the individual's role can be understood.

How to recognise Parameshti? By-developing sacred qualities and adoring the Parameshti

(Supreme Self), the individual understands the secret of Shrishti (creation) and the importance of society. Today if you want to understand Prakrithi (Nature or the phenomenal Universe), you have to understand Samashti (Society).

The term Samashti encompasses all social organizations. A Samashti (community) is made up of individuals coming together. This union of individuals is essential for realisation of the Divine.

Three rules for promoting collective action

Take, for instance, the present conference, Here people from different countries, professing different faiths and belonging to different cultures, have come together. But what is their common unifying factor? It is the belief in the Sai Principle that has, brought you together. All of them are trying to find unity in diversity. To promote unity, the concept of Samashti (collective action) has to be understood. There are three rules to be observed in promoting collective action, Sathyam bruuyaath (Speak the truth). Priyam bruuyaath (Speak what is pleasant). Na bruugaath Sathyam apriyam (Never speak what is true but not pleasing). Truth is of the highest importance whether we consider morality, worldly life or spiritual progress. From the ethical point of view you have to speak the truth. In the context of worldly life, you have to speak what is pleasing. From the spiritual point of view you have to avoid what is not pleasing even if it is true. The Geetha also teaches that one should not utter words that cause excitement, but speak the truth, which is both pleasing and wholesome. Three faces of reality There are similarly three concepts in Vedhaantha relating to what constitutes truth: Paaramaarthika, Vyaavaahaarika and Praathibhasika. Paaramaarthika relates to the Supreme, Vyaavaahaarika to worldly existence and Praathibhasika to the superimposition of the physical on the spiritual. These three are not at variance from each other. They are the same thing in three different forms like the ocean, the waves and the foam. The same coolness and taste that exist in the ocean are to be found in the wave and the foam. When you are considering matters relating to the world, you use the term vyaavahaarika. When you are considering experiences relating to the mind, you call them Paaramaarthika (concerning the Divine). When you consider matters relating to thoughts, you describe them as Praathibhasika. While the epithets are different, the underlying truth is one and the same. To know the nature of the Divine, the first step is to understand the social process. Starting with Parameshti (the Divine), you understand Srishti (creation) and become aware of Samashti (the society or community) and realise the role of Vyakthi (the individual). The process of understanding is an integral one related to each other. Without the individual there can be no society. Without society, creation has no meaning. Although different terms have been used in Vedhaantik parlance to describe the different levels of awareness, the entire understanding of this unifying process is that the individual proceeds from the social to the cosmic and then to the Divine. The relationship between the individual and God should be properly understood. God is the Samashti (all-embracing whole). The individual has to experience his oneness with the universal. This universal has been called the Vishva-Viraata-Svaruupam (Cosmic form of the Divine). All the beings you see here are manifestations of the cosmic form. This means that all are inherently Divine. By obsession with the separateness of the individual, one fails to see his cosmic essence. Forget the ego in you and recognise your spiritual essence. It is attachment to the body that is the cause of man's loss of peace. Man has explored everything in the external world but has failed to know his own true nature. As a result he has created Bhinnathvam (divisiveness). Once he knows his true self, he will have no feeling of divisiveness. He will recognise the oneness of all life. Role of Sai sevaks Why is this conference being held? In this context three things are highly significant. First, what should be the characteristics of persons in the Sai Organization? Their hearts should be cool like the moon. Their minds should be pure like butter. Their speech should be sweet like honey. It is only when you have a heart cool as the moon, a mind pure as butter and speech sweet as honey, will you be a worthy member of the organization. When these three qualities are present, there will be Divinity. In the Geetha, Krishna advises Arjuna to give up all Dharmas and take refuge in Him. The Dharmas that are to be given up are related to the body and are the cause of innumerable worries. Sai love is the sure solvent for all these worries. (Bhagavaan sang a Thelugu poem describing all the different worries from birth to death to which men are subject). As long as you do not understand the workings of Nature, everything will be worry. But once you understand them, you will be always happy. That understanding will lead you to the awareness of Parameshti (Divine). Once the nature of the Divine is understood, all experiences will be blissful like the sweetness, of sugar which is present in different kinds of sweets. Vedhaantha and science proclaim the same truth. Recognise that the Divinity that is present in everyone is the same. This was the truth proclaimed by Vedhaantha. Scientists are now coming to the same view through a different approach. The ancient sages proclaimed the omnipresence of God,

'Raamadhas and Pothana also gave expression to this truth in their poems. Scientists are now declaring that the entire Cosmos is composed of energy.

Some years ago, at a meeting in the Institute of Science, Bangalore, one scientist referred to" the 'age of the sun, giving a figure running into billions of years. The ancients referred to the sun as anaadhi, meaning that its origin is indeterminate. By merely assigning a definite number running into billions, has science-made the fact more meaningful than what the sages said? Anaadhi.

(Beginningless) is a truer description of the age of the sun, than the scientists reckoning in billions of years.

The ancients understood the secrets of creation by seeking to understand the Parameshti

(Supreme creator). Through understanding creation, they realised the truth about society and the individual.

Self-enquiry is the means to Self-Realisation. Self-enquiry reveals that you are not the body, the senses or the mind. You are their master. You are the Aathma (Spirit). The knowledge based on the body is Bhouthika Inaanam (worldly knowledge). The knowledge based on the mind is sujnaanam (rational knowledge). The knowledge based on the heart is' Aathma Inaanam (Spiritual Knowledge).

We are one family

The most important concern of this conference should be how to enable members to realise the Parameshti (Divine). The first requisite for this purpose is good company. Good company is conducive to good thoughts. Anil Kumar referred to the "Latest God" in his speech preceding Bhagavaan's discourse. This is a misconception. There is only one God and He .is eternal. Dr.

Safaya expressed thanks for the gift of blankets by devotees from Korea. Inspite of proximity to Svaami over many years many have not understood Svaami's teachings even on minor matters.

When do you express thanks? You thank a third person. But you don't thank your own people. When you go out for a dinner you express thanks to the host, but does anyone thank the mother for serving food? There are no "others" in 'the Sai Organization. We are one family. The 'Word "thanks" should not be used in the Sai Organization. It is purely a conventional expression, in the ordinary world. The member of a family who works for the family is different from a worker who labours for wages. Members of the Sai Organization should render service without expectation of any reward or recognition.

Members of the Sai Organization should endeavour to improve themselves to some extent at least as a result of their participation in this conference. Don't bother about the past. Concentrate on the present. From now on, all of you should tread a sublime path.

Don't give room for mutual jealousy, hatred or ill-feeling. Follow the role' "Help ever, Hurt never."

Discourse to the Sixth World Conference of Sri Sathya Sai Seva Organizations in the Sai

Kulwant Mandap on 20-11-1995.

The fulfilment, of man's life on earth consists in filling himself with the love of God and channelising that love into acts of service, service of all who are embodiments of God. There is really no 'other' no 'neighbour'. Everyone is oneself, for all belong to an indivisible whole. Service uplifts us, delights us, satiates our hunger, expands our horizons. Service to man is worship of God, in the one who gives and the one who gets, in the helper and the helped.

34. Spiritual significance of loving service

EMBODIMENTS of Love! A pure, unwavering, compassionate heart, truthful speech and use of the body for dedicated service to others are sublime qualities in a human being," says a Sanskrit poem.

Mankind has been engaged in the quest for. Truth from the earliest times. Bhaarith is the birthplace of many sages who explored the realms of the spirit, discovered the highest truths and proclaimed them to the world. In more recent times others have been engaged in pursuing scientific investigations to discover a different set of truths. Whatever the truths discovered by science or spirituality, the ultimate reality is the energy of the atom.

All that is perceived or experienced in the manifested Cosmos is the combination of atoms.

The five basic elements are made up of atoms. The food you eat, the water you drink, the air you breathe, the sounds you hear are all expressions of atoms. The Cosmos is made up of atoms.

It has taken science a thousand years (of investigation) to discover this truth. But many millennia ago, a young child Prahlaadha, proclaimed this truth. He told his father, "Do not have any doubts as to whether Hari (the Supreme Lord) is at one place and not at another. Wherever you search for Him, you will find Him. (Svaami recited a poem from the Bhaagavatham) Prahlaadha

taught that the Divine permeates the entire universe in the form of atoms. This omnipresence of the Divine was also proclaimed in the Geetha. See the Divine in all What pervades the entire universe is a manifestation on of the Divine Energy. To experience this omnipresent energy, certain spiritual processes have been indicated. One of them is to see the Divine in whatever you do, whatever you perceive and whatever you experience.

"Love and Service represent the same truth" (TheLugu saying). For man, love and service are like-two 'wings with the help of which man should strive to realise the Spirit. The quest for Truth really means discovering one's own inner reality. This eternal Divine Principle is in one and all.

To experience this Divine, one has to develop certain sacred qualities. Morality is a mark of a human being. Truth is the rule. Righteousness is the path. Sacrifice is the glory. These three are the hall-marks of humanity. Mankind is distinguished by these three qualities. Man today has lost the spirit of sacrifice. Morality has been undermined.

There is no concern for truth. He is lost totally in mundane pursuits, forgetting his divinity. The Sai Organizations were set up to make people realise their true divine nature. What is the primary purpose of the Sai Organizations? It is to make the people realise that they are sparks of the Divine and not embodiments of the physical products of Nature. The inherent divinity of man has been clearly proclaimed in the Geetha. This truth is not the opinion of any person, subject to changes.

Spiritual value of service Some of the speakers at the Conference have stated that Svaami is bringing about transformation in individuals When does transformation take place? After a person has received information.

Therefore, the first requisite is to get the information about the presence of the Divine Principle in all. The Sai Organizations have been engaged in propagating this "information." Seva (Service) is the ideal means by which this message can be conveyed. You should all realise that the human body has been 'given to you solely to render selfless service. Such service broadens the heart, destroys the ego and generates bliss. Service also helps to promote consciousness of the brotherhood of man and the Fatherhood of God. Your task does not end there. You have at the same time to propagate the idea of Ekaathma-Bhaavam (spiritual oneness of all mankind).

Mankind has to be led from dualism to non-dualism. Arguments over the existence or non-existence of God are entirely futile and foolish, as Buddha pointed out. According to the minds of different persons, views and beliefs are bound to differ.

But irrespective of these controversies, the Truth is one. That Truth is God. Dharma is God.

Ahimsa is God. Adhere to these three: Truth, Righteousness and Non-violence. Follow the path of Truth. There is no greater virtue than truth. The truth you speak must emanate from the heart and should be filled with love. Where there is love there is truth. Stick to truth in whatever you do. This may not be easy. But through persistence truth will become a natural habit. Act according to the dictates of your conscience and not the promptings of your senses.

Love is the basis for all actions Make love the basic impulse for all your actions. Share your love with others. Be unselfish. Self lives begetting and forgetting. Love lives by giving and forgiving. Develop confidence in your self. Through self-confidence you can achieve self-realisation.

The Sai Organizations have been enjoined to carry out a programme of ceiling on desires. Everyone should try to control desires as much as possible. The promotion of human values is another item in the programme. These human values are inherent-in every person. All that is needed is, for everyone to manifest them in his daily life. Truth, Righteousness and Peace are all in you. You are the embodiment of Truth, Peace, Love and God. Recognise this fact. Members of Sai Organizations should cultivate certain desirable practices. For instance, they should regulate their diet, because one's food influences ones thoughts. Smoking and intoxicating drinks have to be given up. They are ruinous for the health. Meat eating should also be given up because eating animal food promotes animal tendencies. The fourth evil that has to be got rid of is gambling. Those who take to the Spiritual path should avoid as much as possible these four bad practices. It is sinful to slaughter poor animals for one's food' Sai members should follow the motto' Help ever; Hurt never. There is no meaning in professing to respect human values without observing the rule that you should cause no harm to others in any form whatsoever.

God loves those who serve others because He is in all of them. Whomever you may serve, consider it as service to God. Divinise all your actions. Treat every action you perform as God's work.

Love to love; heart to heart

Sai Organizations have not been set up for propaganda purpose. We do not need any publicity.

Who invited all of you here? You came out of your love. It is an outpouring of your love for Svaami. What is the nature of your relationship? Love to love; heart to heart. It is your love for me and my love for you, which has brought about this enormous gathering here today.

You have to bear in mind yet another fact about our Organization. The services rendered by the Seva Dal to maintain cleanliness and security in the Nilayam Campus are beyond praise. They are true sevaks. In our seva organizations there are hundreds of thousands of workers who are rendering service of various kinds. The office-bearers should not feel that they are apart from the workers. All are workers. No one can consider himself a master. Service can assume any form.

What a mother does for her child is service. A husband and wife render mutual service. In this sense all are servants. God is the only Master. All others who call themselves "masters" like post-master, station-master, etc. are not masters at all.

In rendering service, see that you do it for the satisfaction of your conscience and not to impress others. Treating service as an offering to the Divine, do it perfectly. Remember that God is watching everyone of your actions. Be your own watchman to scrutinize what you do. When you do everything to satisfy your conscience, you are well on the way to Self-Realisation.

Saadhana of overseas devotees

I am well aware that our Sai members are doing excellent work. Without boasting about it, we can claim that there are no organizations in the world like the Sathya Sai Seva Organization. The way the sevaks have been serving food and water to lakhs of people is inconceivable elsewhere.

Moreover, you have to appreciate the patience shown by overseas devotees. They are used to living in spacious houses with all amenities. Here they have been living in sheds adjusting themselves to the lack of many amenities. That adjustment is an index of their devotion. The adjustment is itself a form of spiritual saadhana. Adjustment is possible when there is understanding. It is because they cherish the feeling, "Here is our Svaami, our God," they are able to adjust themselves. This understanding is also a form of saadhana. Acquire this understanding and then act on that basis. Then you will experience bliss.

There is no use merely going on reading books. Practising what you have learnt is more important than filling the mind with book knowledge. In our organization all are well-read persons who are keen to practise what they have learnt. You are all treading the path of Truth.

The whole world is one. Respect all faiths alike. The world is like a veena with many strings.

When the strings are in harmony, the world will be happy. All should behave fraternally towards each other. There should be no differences on grounds of religion. All worship the same God. No religion preaches hatred. Truth and righteousness are common to all religions. Adhere to them, Observe morality and integrity, in daily life.

Love for Svaami is cause for transformation

Today everyone in Prashanthi Nilayam is living as a member of one family. Whatever your language, religion, nationality or custom,; you feel as one here. This is great spiritual saadhana.

No one brought about this transformation. It was an individual transformation, each by himself or herself. How did they effect this transformation? Out of their love for Svaami. That love accounts for this prodigious transformation.

In the Sai Organization, because it functions in the work-day world, some regulations have been laid down. Rules and regulations are essential. First of all, whatever resolutions have been passed at this conference, they should be carried out whole-heartedly. All sorts of conferences are held all over the world. Resolutions are passed. But they are ignored after the conference is over. In the Sai Organizations, this should not happen. Having passed resolution, you must "pass" in it!

You would have scored a "pass" only when you implement the resolution. Therefore, you must carry out the decisions you have taken. That is the meaning of discipline. Discipline grows out.

of devotion. Devotion stems from duty. Observe the three D's: Discipline, Devotion, Duty. This is true spirituality. In the performance of every duty there should be devotion. There should be devotion and not diversion!

Devotion signifies love. Love for the Divine is the only true love. All other expressions of love are merely attachments of one sort or another. Love is God. Live in love. Start the day with love

Fill the day with love. End the day with love. That is the way to God.

This love should be considered. Divine by people of every faith. Manifest your love 'regardless of how others behave. Share your bliss with others Cultivate this love. I am not concerned about the numerical growth of centres or devotees. I want only quality. Increase in quantity should be accompanied by improvement in quality. This is the service you have to render. The bliss which you experience should be shared with others. Do not violate the rules of the organizations. Thereby your love will grow. It is that love, which is responsible for your putting up with all inconveniences and discomforts. Develop the spirit of sacrifice. Realise that true happiness consists in union with God. You need not wish me Happy Birthday. I am' always happy. I am a tank of happiness. Draw from it as much as you wish. Drink that water and sanctify your life. It was the thirst for Divine bliss that drew you here. Drink deep and experience that bliss. Live in peace in Prashaanthi Nilayam, ignoring the attractions of the outer world. When you return to your respective countries, share your experience with your countrymen. Enjoy the love I confer on you. It is totally free from self-interest. Receiving selfless love, make your love unselfish. Discourse of Sixth World Conference of Sathya Sai Seva Organizations on. 21-11-1995.

35. Cherish Bhaaratheeya culture
EMBODIMENTS of Love! Education lends beauty to man. Education is man's secret wealth. Education is the source of fame and happiness. It is the teacher of teachers. Education is the true kinsman for one going abroad. It is the third eye for man. Rulers honour the scholar more than the man of wealth. One without education is an animal. This is the message of Bhaaratheeya culture. Life goes on whether a man acquires culture or not or pursues studies or not. But the life-span melts like ice from day to day. Even before he realises his duties, his life comes to an end. In the sphere of education, every thinking man is confronted with baffling problems. Educational institutions have forgotten their obligation to make education a source of strength and happiness in daily life. Educational ideals have lost their appeal. Education has ceased to be creative. It has become a destructive force. Respect and reverence are down in the dumps. Education has been commercialized. Students are more keen to make money by any means rather than to acquire knowledge. Educational institutions which ought to be citadels of morality, integrity, sacrifice and character, have cease to foster morality. Students don't make any attempt to develop good qualities, while cultivating friendships and participating in common activities. All associations without good qualities are valueless. Character is most important for a student. It is the essence of Bhaaratheeya culture. Without cultural refinement, can anyone hope to earn honour? Without morals, can you acquire the esteem of others? If you preach righteousness without practising it yourself, will anyone respect you? Without fear of sin, with sinful thoughts, you commit sinful acts. At least from now on, recognise the truth and live upto the name of sons of Bhaarith. It is not a good index of pure education, if having been born in Bhaarith, you do not live up to the ideals of Bhaarith and lead a mundane existence. Bhaaritha Maatha's lament Students! Awake! This is not the time for slumber. Don't you see the tears Mother Bhaarith is shedding? Why is she shedding tears? Because her sons have forsaken the sacred path and are leading sub-human existence. Morality and integrity have been given up. To wipe the tears of Mother Bhaarith, every Bhaaratheeya should cherish the culture of Bhaarith. Every student should observe the three principles of equality, unity and co-operation. The nation is going to pieces because of the lack of mutual respect and unity. Education is not confined to reading, writing and listening. Degrees do not constitute true marks of learning. Without wisdom and spiritual knowledge, can there be real education? Education is not for earning a living but for leading the good life. All education which imparts worldly knowledge and develops intellectual activities without promoting character is utterly worthless. Morality imparts value to human life True education should promote morality, character and spirituality. Science and Technology are undoubtedly necessary for comfortable living. But there is an unseen power which underlies the physical world. Today students should acquire both physical knowledge for living and spiritual knowledge for understanding that .which sustains life. The two together help to make humanness blossom. It is morality that imparts value to human life. Morality and Integrity are today confined to books. The heart is utterly polluted. Hands are engaged in selfish pursuits. This is the progress of modern education. (Theugu Poem). Man has progressed in science and technology. But morality and integrity are going down from day to day. The immediate task is to promote moral values. There are ninety crores of Bhaaratheeyas, but few who will assuage the agony of Mother Bhaarith. Of what use are these myriad sons? There was a time when Bhaarith stood out as the example for the world in holiness and purity. The ancient sages enthroned righteousness and gave the highest place of honour for the spirit of sacrifice. They adored justice and revered truth. In this way, they bequeathed to the nation its greatest cultural heritage. Lessons of history of Bhaarith Students! Recall for a moment the past history of Bhaarith. There is no record at anytime of Bhaaratheeyas having invaded other countries. Bhaaratheeyas always adhered to justice. They protected Righteousness. They esteemed truth as their life-breath. They took to arms only when foreign hordes invaded the country. Otherwise they never committed aggression on any country. Many foreign nations plundered the wealth of Bhaarith, but Bhaarith never coveted the wealth of any country, Not only did they loot Bhaarith's wealth, but they desecrated the sacred culture of Bhaarith. They created divisions between persons. They set at naught the sanctity of the plighted word. They undermined human relationships. It is because of these outrages that Bhaarith is in a deplorable plight today. Reflect for a moment on the glorious record of Bhaarith's past history. Bhaarith has always cherished noble virtues. Unable to recognise the purity, sacredness and spiritual heritage of Bhaarith, students treat it with levity. They consider it as uncivilized. This is totally wrong. Bhaarith has been the home of prosperity, morality, sacrifice and fraternity. But modern education has polluted all these qualities. Evils like corruption, dishonesty, injustice and falsehood were unknown to Bhaaratheeyas in ancient India. Today the people have become victims of exotic modes of living and have no respect for the transitional culture.

Bhaarith has upheld the collectivist ideal as against the concept of individualism. Community singing of Bhajans was preferred, not individual singing. Collective action was promoted. The Vedhas also glorified the collective spirit. It was Guru Naanak who initiated the practice of congregational bhajans. Students today should take a pledge to go to the villages and serve the rural populations. Most students soon after they get their degrees, either wish to go abroad or desire well paid jobs. Students should realise the importance of our villages and try to improve them. Money is not important. It is character that counts. The ancients attached value to the four goals of life: Dharma (Righteousness), Artha (Wealth), Kaama (Desires) and Moksha (Liberation). They followed righteous means to acquire wealth and transformed their desires into yearning for liberation. Thus they gave primary importance to Dharma and Moksha. Today people have given up Dharma and Moksha and are pursuing only Artha and Kaama. Consider Dharma as the basis for everything Students! Examine your hearts. Rectify your thoughts and earn money by moral means. Our ancients considered Dharma as the basis for the world. Today Dhana (wealth) is esteemed as the basis for everything. The achievements of our ancients and the greatness of their qualities are beyond praise. Emperor Sibi was prepared to offer his own flesh to save the life of a pigeon. Many sacrificed their lives to protect the lives of others. Harishchandhra gave up his kingdom and even his wife and son to honour his word. Students today do not cherish the lives of these heroes. The educational system should not be subject to changes according to changes in Education Ministers. Education, like Justice, should be free from governmental interference. Students should realise that what matters is not the religion they profess, but how far they are truly human in their life. They should realise the sacredness of their Motherland, Bhaarith. It is a name which is anterior to either Bharatha, Shri Raama's brother, or Shakunthala's son, Bharatha. Five qualities represented by H-i-n-d-u Foreigners should understand the precise meaning of the word "Hindu," the name which they associate with India. The five letters in the name of "Hindu" represent five qualities--Humanity, Individuality, Nationality, Divinity and Unity. Unity is essential not only for Bhaaratheeyas, but for the entire world.

Today students tend to migrate from villages to cities after their education is completed. Students who come from villages should stay on. in their villages and improve the quality of life of the villagers. Students should learn three essential things: Cultivate the company of the good. Avoid evil associates. Do ceaselessly meritorious deeds. Students should dedicate themselves to social service, striving always for public welfare. Social service leads to the ripening of wisdom. Wisdom is the source of good qualities. Develop good qualities and good conduct. Realise that service is the means to overcome the ego, broaden the vision and promote love. Arise, awake and stop not till the goal is reached!

Mother Bhaarith is shedding tears. Find out the cause, as Lava and Kusa did when they found their mother Seetha was in tears. They asked their mother: "Oh Mother"! Why are you weeping?

Here we are, more valiant than Shri Raama. We can bring for you a Golden Mountain if you desire it." (Bhagavaan sang a Thelugu song which was both sweet and deeply moving). The boys held her feet and declared that they would not leave until she revealed the cause of her grief. See what the children of Seetha, the daughter of the Earth Goddess, did to assuage the grief of their mother. Which son of Bhaarith today is trying to wipe the tears of Bhaarith Maatha? This is deepening her grief. She laments: "I have ninety crores of children. But of what use are they?

They are not relieving a mother's sorrow." Mother Bhaarith's grief affects the whole world.

What Sai expects

The Motherland should be revered as divine. Only then there will be worldly peace. Make your studies useful to the country. Values are necessary for acquiring education. Education is for life.

Life is for love. Love is for service to the nation and the world. Then there will be peace. Starting with values you end up with peace. There can be no peace without values (cheers).

When students acquire education in this manner, they will promote the well-being of the country and the world. Students should take a resolve to develop their native places and make their lives meaningful. This is what Sai expects from you. This is what you should offer to me. Be good and make the country better. Be ideal students. Ensure security and prosperity in the country.

Experience bliss by taking to the spiritual path.

Discourse to the Fourteenth Convocation of Sri Sathya Sai Institute of Higher Learning at the Vidhya Giri Stadium on 22-11-1995.

36. Love and sacrifice will save mankind

The Embodiment of all forms ever tranquil,

Bearing all names, ever auspicious, Shivam

Sath-Chith-Anandha Ruupam, Adhvaitham

Sathyam, Shivam, Sundharam

More effulgent than the sun,

Purer and whiter than snow,

Subtler than the firmament,

Immanent in all beings,

There is no particle without the Self.

The cosmic consciousness

Is within you and you are the Brahman.

What more can I tell you;

The good people gathered here?

EMBODIMENTS of Love! Sathyam (Truth) has manifested itself in the cosmos. Without Truth

there can be no universe. Everything has emanated from Truth. "The lord created everything out of truth. There is no place anywhere without truth. That is the pure absolute self," says a Thelugu poem.

All wealth, all pleasures come from Truth. The Vedhas, the Upanishaths and all scriptures have their origin in Truth. Truth is the proper abode of God. Truth and God are inseparable.

God is present in subtle form everywhere

Truth is God. The Upanishaths declare: "Raso vai Sah" (God is all sweetness). This means that God 'is' present in subtle form everywhere, like sugar in sugarcane and butter in milk. Although it is difficult to have a direct perception of God, His presence can be experienced in many ways.

The sweetness in sugar, the sourness in lime fruit, the bitterness of the margosa leaf, all testify to the presence of the Divine. When you see a mountain or waterfall or a forest you feel happy. All these proclaim the presence of the Divine. Light shines, the stars twinkle, the sun blazes, the planets revolve in their orbits. All these-phenomena are manifestations of the Divine. By understanding the nature of a flame you can understand the nature of fire. By examining a drop of water you know the nature of the Ganges. Likewise by understanding Maanavathvam (the true nature of humanness), you can understand Dhaivathvam (Divinity).

Despite all the activities in which man is engaged from dawn to dusk, he has no understanding-of his true nature. He identifies himself with the body,, the senses and the mind, forgetting that his true self is beyond all these. They are only instruments. Vedhaantha calls man to know himself.

The insignia by Which a man is identified in ordinary life are not the indicators of one's true self.

There are two entities in a man Dheha or Kshethra (the body) and the Dhehi or Kshethrajna (indwelling Spirit). To know the Kshethrajna is to know one's true Self.

The Trinity and the three gunas

In this human body, constituted by the five elements, God dwells in the form of the three gunas.

Bhaaratheeyas adore the Trinity--Brahma, Vishnu, Maheshvara. The Trinity are not embodied beings. No one has ever seen them. Nor is it possible to experience them in any way. The trinity dwells in the human body as the three gunas: Sathva, Rajas, and Thamas. The three qualities are forms of the Divine. Brahma is responsible for creation. The process of creation is subtle and cannot be perceived by any of the senses. This transcendental process is taught by the mother.

All are creations of the mother. Hence, the Upanishath declares: "Revere mother as God." The mother is to be adored as Brahma, the Creator. Revere the mother, serve the mother and trust the mother. This symbolises worship of God.

Next comes the father. He protects the child, takes care of his upbringing and leads him to God.

This protective function is attributed to Vishnu. The father symbolises Vishnu as the protector.

Hence the injunction: "Revere the father as God." Thus the mother and the father are images of Brahma and Vishnu.

Then there is Eshvara. He is called Bholaashankara. He gives whatever one prays for. He never says no to any suppliant. Such an embodiment of truth cannot be hidden. To experience this embodiment of auspiciousness (Shiva), Thamas is the mean. The Thaamasik quality is usually associated with slothfulness and indolence. But this is not the proper meaning of Thamas (as an attribute of Shiva). Shiva's role is to lead man on the right path to realise his divinity.

The Trinity, in the form of the three gunas, are present in every human being. This is borne out by the scriptural aphorisms: "Eshvaras-sarvabhuuthaanaam" (the Divine dwells in all beings),

"Eshaavaasyam idham jagath" (the Lord is the indweller in the cosmos). When the significance of the three gunas is understood, the nature of the trinity can be understood.

Body, mind and conscience

God is not somewhere outside. He is the indweller in the body. Sin is the result of one's own actions. Hence it is folly to seek God elsewhere. Man wants to know all about the world and ventures to explore outer space. But he is unable to know his own true nature. How is he to know his self? The self is called conscience. The spiritual quest means making use of the vibrations from the conscience to understand the truth. Today man follows only the body and the mind and becomes a prey to all kinds of troubles.

Man has to discover his divinity. The answer was given by Raama in the Raamaayana. Without troubling to find out where God is, it is enough if one worships the mother and the father who are the living embodiments of God. By pleasing and acting according to their wishes one can get their blessings. To ignore the deities who are directly visible, in the form of one's parents, it is delusion to search for an invisible God.

Raama exemplified this truth when he told king Janaka that without the consent of his parents he would not consent to wed Seetha, although he had won her hand by lifting Shiva's bow.

Similarly; when Bharatha and Vashishtha came to the forest to appeal to Raama to return to Ayodhya to rule over the kingdom, Raama firmly declared that he had to fulfill the pledge given by his father to Kaikeyi and complete his term of exile in the forest. Honouring the words of the parents is the highest virtue. This has to be observed by one and all.

Brahma and Vishnu are therefore to be worshipped in the physical forms of one's parents. The two deities have no forms. The forms seen in the paintings of Ravi Varma are the products of his imagination. They have no basis in reality.

The formless divine has to be experienced in the respiratory process which proclaims the oneness of the individual and the cosmic Self in the sound So-Ham. In breathing in with the sound 'So'

and breathing out with 'Ham,' the life-breath is declaring: "I am God," "I am God."

Disastrous consequences of lust, greed and anger

For Bhaaratheeyas, the Raamaayana, the Mahaabhaaratha and the Bhaagavatham are the most sacred texts. The Raamaayana points out the disastrous consequences of Kaama (lust). The Mahaabhaaratha teaches that Lobha (greed) brings utter disaster.

The Bhaagavatham shows the consequences of Krodha (hatred) towards God (Hiranyakashipu's example).

The world reveres. Raama but despises Raavana. Why? Raama is the repository of all virtues. He is described as "Sarva bhoothahithe rathah" ---one who rejoices in the well-being of all living creatures. He was the fountain of all wisdom. He exemplified the quality of equanimity in all situations. Raavana was the embodiment of arrogance. His lust and pride destroyed him.

Lust, greed and anger are demonic qualities. When Sathva, Rajas and Thamas are cultivated in the right way, they can help man to realise his higher nature.

Let your love embrace the whole world

Embodiments of love! You have supreme duty to revere the mother, and the Motherland.

Wherever you may go or work, never forget the Motherland. Students today should follow the good teachings of our ancient sages and seers and lead ethical lives.

"Let us live together, strive together, bear no ill-will towards each other." This was the message of the Vedhas. Let your love embrace the whole world. Treat all man-kind as one family. All nations should be happy and prosperous.

You must realise that life is like a two winged bird. The two wings are Love and Sacrifice. With these two you must aspire to reach the supreme goal.

What is that men should do to promote the welfare of society? People claim to render social service, but their motives are self-centred. On the contrary, they should be conscious of all that they owe to society and render service in a spirit of selflessness. They should recognise their identity with society. You should recognise your true spiritual reality and engage yourselves in helpful activities. Make service the badge of your life.

In this conference, people from many countries have taken part. What is the foremost message of this conference? Rendering service whenever it is needed, you must be prepared to dedicate your life for service. You can become a leader only when you are filled with the spirit of service.

Today you pray to a river: "Oh river! overflow with water." Don't pray to the river. Address your prayers to rain. When the rain responds, the rivers will get filled automatically. Likewise, when you serve society as the Divine, automatically your desires will be fulfilled.

Svaami belongs to you

Devotees expect all kinds of things as a result of their devotion to God. Today, on the seventieth birthday of this body, you 'have to take note of one thing. Svaami needs nothing. Do not offer even a small robe. Svaami belongs to you. He is not separate from you, nor are you separate from Svaami. This is an inextricable relationship. Promote the well being of the backward and poor villages.

You must have listened to the list of offerings of gold ornaments by some devotees. What is the ornament for Bhagavaan? Only bliss. Why cover Him with a shower of jewellery? A sculptor carves a beautiful idol. Why submerge that beauty under clothes, jewels and garlands? All these are artificial. Natural beauty alone gives real joy.

Don't take the trouble to bring such ornaments. You should not entertain such thoughts at all. Let not the devotees feel otherwise. Bhagavaan has told the central Trust to put up for auction on this stage itself all the ornaments given by devotees. The money raised thereby should be used by the Trust. These jewels should not be taken even to Prashaanthi Nilayam. I have not sought anything from anybody. But I will be happy with any kind of service you render. Spend your money to help the needy. Assist in the provision of water. Meet the educational needs of the people and provide medical relief. Do everything for the good of society and not for the sake of an individual. Have the nation's welfare in your mind.

In addition to jewels, offerings of money have also been made. All these funds will be used for the completion of the drinking water project. The water problem of Raayalaseema will have to be completely solved. This is a dry area. There is not enough water to drink. How can trees be grown in such an area? But without trees, the people cannot have a sufficient supply of oxygen.

Water, therefore, is essential for life. I had been considering this problem for a long time. For health, the heart is important. For knowledge the head is important. For the body, water is essential. All these three should be provided free. They should not be commercialized. All these come from God.

Like oil for a lamp, Love is essential for life. Without oil or love, darkness will prevail. Render loving service to all. Recognise that the Divine is within you and you have all the potency for great deeds.

Serve Dharidhra Naaraayana

From today, our organization should grow from day to day and encompass the whole world. Set aside private interests. Let welfare of society be your primary concern. Wherever you may be, in whatever country or place, take part in the service activities there. Today devotees from 137 countries have gathered here. How much work is being done in these countries? That is the test. In all countries there are people who are hapless. They are embodiments of Dharidhra Naaraayana (God in the form of the poor). What need is there to serve Shriman Naaraayana? He has a host of persons to serve Him. You must serve the poor Naaraayanas, who have nobody to serve them. "Your welfare is your gift to Me" Sow the seeds of such noble thoughts, let them grow into giant trees and let people take shelter under them. This is the only birthday gift I seek from you. Your welfare is your gift to Me. Become exemplary persons. When you return to your countries from this conference, you must develop your centres without hindrance, from day to day. Make good use of the Divine Trinity in you. Recognise the Divine in your mother, father and preceptor and revere them. Develop the conviction that the Divine you adore, who is your favourite deity, is within you. That Divine is Sathyam, Shivam, Sundharam (Truth, Goodness and Beauty). Plato (the Greek philosopher) declared that Truth, Goodness and Beauty are God. Irrespective of the country, these three are the eternal verities. With these truths in your hearts, embark on service and bring a good name to Bhaarith. Raayalaseema should be ensured water supply all through the year. Today it is a "Raallaseema" (a stony region). This region must be transformed into a "Rathnaalaseema" (a region glittering with gems). This is the collective responsibility of the people concerned. Make yourselves into a garland and I shall be the thread holding all the flowers together. Consider yourselves the children of one mother, belonging to the human family. Do not give room for differences of race, creed and nationality. All belong to the caste of humanity, the religion of love and the language of the heart. The same object, water, is called by different names in different languages. Likewise God is one, whatever the name that is used - whether Allah, Jesus, Buddha or Raama - have that faith. Don't criticize any religion. By developing this universalism, bring joy to Bhagavaan. Many overseas devotees greeted me in the morning with "Happy Birthday." I am always happy.

It is enough if you are happy True happiness consists in union with God.

From today you have to take to a new path. You must spend your lives in harmony, co-operation and mutual esteem. See the Divine in all things. That is the source of true and lasting bliss. It can be got only through Love.

Discourse in the Vidhyagiri stadium on 23-11-1995.

What is the happiest day in your life? All are happy days to a person of true knowledge. Happiness is an internal conscious experience which comes as an effect of the extinction of mental or physical desire. The less the desire, the greater is the happiness, so that perfect happiness consists in the destruction or satisfaction of all desires in the Absolute being.

BABA

37. Treat patients with love

The first message conveyed by Bhaarithheeya culture to the whole of mankind is this "Let all people live happily, in good health and cheer." It desired that no one should experience suffering or misery in this world.

Health is the English term for Aarogyam in Sanskrit. The word health is derived from the Latin word "Healy." Aarogyam has several meanings. One is sacredness.

Another is Paripuurnam

(Wholeness). The term thus indicates that all the organs of the body should be perfect and holy.

If any organ is afflicted, the body cannot be said to be Whole.

Hence men should aim at achieving perfect health and help others to do so. "Karmaath Jayathe Narah Karmanyeva Prabodhathi." (Every man takes birth as result of past actions. Karma is the cause of death). Thus Karma is the cause of birth and death.

Every action has an effect. In any action done by man, its consequence is present in a subtle form. Action thus is related to its fruits. Moreover, time is also related to action. Action and time are inextricably inter-related.

Time is measure of duration between two actions

Every action has its own Maarga (course). One object is separated by space from another.

Likewise, time is the measure of the duration between one action and another. Here is a tumbler.

Beneath it is a plate. The space between the glass tumbler and the plate is termed Dharma. There can be no separateness between one object and another without this Dharma. Dharma defines the inter-relationships between two objects.

Now regarding time: A doctor fixes 8 A.M as the time for performing an operation. By 11 A.M, the operation is completed with the stitching of sutures. The three-hour interval between the commencement of the operation and its completion indicates the time taken for the surgery. In reckoning time, action is also involved. Action is the interval between two points of time. Thus time and action go together. Hence everyone should recognise the intimate relationship between action and time.

Every action, whether good or bad, has its consequence. There is no action in the world which is devoid of consequences. This is law of nature. For instance, a finger is cut by a knife. Immediately the finger starts bleeding. The result of the cut is instantaneous. When man slips on a step while walking, he sustains a fall and a limb is fractured. Here again, the result of the fall is instantaneous. Take another example. You had your breakfast this morning. It takes two hours to digest the food you have consumed. In the two earlier examples the results of the actions were instantaneous. But in the case of digestion of food you have consumed, it has taken two hours.

Another example: You sow a seed. It becomes a sapling after some days. To bear fruit it takes some years. Thus every action has a consequence, but the time interval between action and result varies from case to case. Bhaaratheeya culture recognized the truth about action and consequence. Others have also got to realise this truth.

One who is aware of this truth is unlikely to commit any wrong action, because he knows that good actions produce good results and bad deeds have bad consequences. Recognition of the law of Karma will make men lead proper lives. Man today takes to wrong paths because they have not realised this truth.

Way to maintain heart in a good condition
Health is essential for the body. A healthy mind can exist only in a healthy body. Only a man with a healthy mind will take part in joyous activities.

This conference is concerned mainly with the heart. Many consider the heart as the most important organ. There is a way to maintain the heart in good condition. Most of the organs in the body are in an immobile state. But the heart is continually active. It is difficult to perform an operation on an organ which is ceaselessly at work. If the heart has to be stopped beating for performing an operation, this cannot be done for more than two or three minutes. No operation can be done in such a short time. Hence heart specialists investigated the methods by which the heart could be kept inactive for a few hours so that cardiac operations could be performed. The heart-lung machine was designed to enable heart operation to be done.

The heart is the primary organ for keeping the body well. Only when the heart is sound there can be proper blood supply to the whole body.

Who invented the heart-lung machine? It is a product of human, intelligence. This shows that intelligence is even superior to the heart. It is this intelligence that has been responsible for the discovery of numerous devices.

Recognise the relationship between time and action
It is by the use of intelligence for a practical purpose that doctors have found the technique of carrying out heart operations. The intelligence is as important as the heart. It is the combination of the intelligence and the heart that helps to keep a person healthy. A doctor may be extremely intelligent in performing operations. But if during an operation his mind wanders, the operation will not be successful. The combination of qualities required for success should be properly understood.

The relationship between time and action should be recognized. Modern man tends to ignore the consequences of his actions. Purely for the sake of worldly pleasures, he considers wealth as the most important thing. The Chinese were accustomed to a certain traditional practice. Every morning on waking up they used to remember the saying: "Difficulties are our friends; let us welcome them." Today people regard difficulties as enemies. Without difficulties you cannot obtain a comfort.

People consider, wealth as, essential for physical comforts and thereby become slaves, of wealth.

As long as they remain slaves of wealth, they will have no respite from troubles.

"Serve Bhavanthu Sukhinah. Sarve Santhu Niraamayaah" (All should be happy. All should be free from sufferings). If you are to pray in this manner, you must have these feelings in you.

Dr. Bhatia urged that Svaami should indicate to the doctors the right path and give them strength to pursue it. You are not lacking in strength. God has endowed you with strength, but you are not using it on right lines. Every human being is endowed with a divine energy, which has to be used for proper purposes. It has to be used righteously according to the dictates of one's conscience.

When the conscience is satisfied the energy gets sanctified. Man today misuses the Divine energy for selfish purposes.

Duty of doctors today
Men should realise the sacredness of action and time. The presiding deity of Karma is allpowerful.
Hence a prayer is addressed to the deity requesting him to see that one's actions are good.
The human race is called Mankind, because sacred feelings, thoughts and intentions are there in man. It means "humanness" is synonymous with kindness. The sage Vyaasa wrote eighteen Puraanas (sacred epics). Who has the time to read so many Puraanas? Therefore, ruminating on this point, sage Vyaasa declared the quintessence of these Puraanas just in these words: "Help ever; Hurt never."
This is the duty of doctors today. They have acquired valuable knowledge. This should be used for public good. The more it is used this way, the more it will grow. Always be prepared to serve a patient when he comes to you. It is a sign of weakness to turn away a patient on a plea of inability. You have the God-given power. Be conscious of your power. Doctors should recognise the importance of the five human values: Truth, Righteousness, Peace, Love and Non-violence. Love is the basis for all the other values. Doctors can infuse courage in patients by the love they show towards the patients. If doctors carry out their duties with love they will be crowned with success. "Old is Gold"
In the discussion at the conference, several conflicting views were expressed by the participants.
One of the issues was whether the latest technique should be preferred as against earlier techniques. Svaami was of the view that the older techniques had much to be said in their favour.
The older technique, though they may not produce quick results, are slow and sure. The latest techniques appear successful momentarily but their long term results are not always good. While the latest technique should be employed where necessary, the earlier techniques should not be rejected out of hand. "Old is Gold" The old techniques have the merit of proven value.
A caveat should be said about heart transplant. The operation may be easy, but how easy is it to get a heart for transplanting? A transplanted heart may serve for a time, but cannot serve as long and as well as the God-given heart.
A word of caution has to be uttered with regard to heart transplant or transplanting the cornea for the eye. The character of the person from whom the transplanted heart or cornea has been got should also be taken into account. The practitioners of medicine in ancient times considered these factors in treating patients.

The antecedents of families were fully examined in the past, before marital alliances were concluded. But today these factors are ignored. People are indifferent to family backgrounds, while they are concerned about the pedigrees of dogs in dog show! This indifference to lineage accounts for the breakup of many marriages after a short time. This should not happen. Marriage should be a life-long partnership. Good thoughts are more efficacious than drugs. It is better to remedy the original heart of a patient than to try to replace it with another heart of a person whose antecedents may not be good. The heart is the most vital organ in the body. To keep it in a healthy condition, one's thoughts should be healthy. Good thoughts are more efficacious than drugs.
The doctors who have gathered here are estimable persons. They are broad-minded, gentle and kind hearted persons. You may receive fees from the rich patients. But you should treat the poor free. Dedicate one day in a week to render free medical service to people, irrespective of creed or nationality. Such service will give you spontaneous joy and enable you to experience the Divine.
Make love the capsule you offer to your patients. When a weak patient comes to you do not be content with offering him glucose or some other thing. Give him the injection of love. That will give him instant strength. Speak to him with love, offer medicines with love and keep him in good humour. That is the way to make him happy. Happiness is union with God. Anything you do with love will be rewarding.
The participants have stood for great ideals. Their experiences are beyond praise. As they related their varied experiences, it was thrilling to hear them. They are all experts in their field. Your presence at this conference and the encouragement you have given to our doctors are deeply appreciated. Symposia and conferences are held all over the world. But at this conference everyone was deeply involved. Everybody experienced Divine vibrations wherever they met. I bless you all that you may return to your countries enriched by your experiences here and serve your respective countries well. Wish you all peace and happiness, which you should share with your people.

Valedictory address to the International Conference on Cardio- Vascular Diseases at the Institute Auditorium, Prashaanthi Nilayam on 18-12-1995.

Life is an experience meant to train the individual for a higher, deeper and more expanded state of existence through the experience of the results of action. The aim of everybody's life is the attainment of complete perfection in the spiritual Absolute.

BABA

38. Realise God through Pure Love

All the objects in this visible universe are Extremely beautiful, attractive and pleasing.

The Divine is immanent in the entire cosmos.

The cosmos is filled with love.

The Supreme Self is the embodiment of love;

Hence if love encounters love they merge;

Hence if you develop your love

You become eligible to achieve

Oneness with the Divine.

LOVE exists for love and nothing else. It is spontaneous and imparts delight. Everything is permeated by love. Love sees with the heart and not the eyes. It listens not through the ears but by the tranquillity of the heart. It speaks not with the tongue but out of compassion. Compassion, kindness and love are separate words which mean the same thing.

Love has many synonyms.

Love can emanate only from the heart and not any other source. Love is immortal, nectarine, blissful and infinite. A heart filled with love is boundless just as rivers with different names and forms merge in the ocean and become one with it, love in many forms enters the ocean of the heart and gets identified with it.

True love has no beginning or end

Love can conquer anything. Selfless, pure, unalloyed love leads man to God. Selfish and constricted love binds one to the world. Unable to comprehend the pure and sacred love, man

today is a prey to endless worries because of his attachment to worldly objects. Man's primary duty is to understand the truth about the Love principle. Once he understands the nature of love, he will not go astray. The various contexts in which the word love is used today have no relation to the true meaning of love. The affection, between a mother and child or between a husband and wife is incidental to a certain temporary relationship and is not real love at all. True love has neither a beginning nor an end. It exists in all the three categories of time--past, present and future. That alone is true love which can fill man with enduring bliss.

One's thoughts, one's words and looks should be filled with love. This is divine love. One who is saturated with this love can never be subject to suffering. Men today are affected by praise or blame. But one who is filled with divine love transcends praise or censure. He is unaffected by criticism or flattery. He treats alike joy and sorrow, profit and loss, victory and defeat.

It is not easy to experience such love. It is easy to blame God but difficult to realise God. Men today prefer the easy path to the rough, one. They should realise that there can be no pleasure

without pain.

The mission of Jesus

It was to teach mankind the greatness of divine love that Jesus came.
His father passed away when Jesus was ten years old. Thereafter, with the permission of his mother, he embarked on his ministry of service to the people. He resolved on three tasks: one, to be filled with Divine love and to share it with others was the main purpose of his life; two, he should not succumb to praise or censure in carrying out his mission; three, to inspire in others the conviction that the Divinity within is omnipresent. Jesus considered spreading the gospel of love as his foremost task. He encountered many ordeals in carrying out his mission, but he regarded them all as challenges to be overcome. He was determined to treat pleasure and pain, sickness and failure with equanimity. He could not bear to see any one suffer. He was opposed to the traffic in birds going on in the temple in Jerusalem. The affected persons turned against him. But Jesus carried on.

regardless of their hostility. In the end he sacrificed his life for the sake of others and out of his love for all.

Every human being is potentially a messenger of God. But, today, men have become messengers of the Lord of Death. They are traitors to their true human state.

Humanness demands that everyone should manifest the Divinity within him. Everyone should be a real messenger of God and strive to promote peace and security in the world. There is no other path to be followed.

God's message is sacred and totally free from self-interest.

When Christ was born, three kings came to see the infant. One of them declared that the child would be a lover of God. The second one said that he would be the beloved of God. The third one declared that he was God. A lover of God is a messenger of God.

The one whom God loves is a "Son of God." When one experiences both of these, he becomes one with God. "Father and Son are one."
 Therefore, at the outset you must prepare yourselves to be messengers of God. This means that you should live up to the message of God. The message calls for service to all. Compassion, morality and integrity are essential elements in the message. In propagating this message faith in God should be promoted. Love should be the watchword. The absence of love gives rise to hatred. Today there is no unity among the people. Without unity how can there be bliss? Without bliss how can anyone experience God?
 Men should lead selfless lives. This may seem difficult. But, in reality there is nothing easier. It is selfishness that creates all kinds of difficulties for mankind. Selfless love will give no room for any evil. Unselfish love may meet with opposition from one's kith and kin and from worldly persons. But one should not be deterred by such opposition. Love should be cherished as one's life breath.
 The elements and the Divine
 It is essential to have faith in God. The five elements are manifestations of God. They are the earth, water, fire, air and ether (or space). In the earth God exists in the form of Prajna
 (Awareness). In fire, God is in the form of Jaagratha-Swaruupa (wakefulness). The Vedhik warning is, "Be awake". In air, God exists as the Praana (vital breath).
 In ether (or space) God pervades it as the primal sotmd, Omkaara. Every element thus proclaims the manifestation of one aspect of God.
 All beings experience the presence of the Divine through the five elements, the five senses, and the five life breaths. Some may ask, "When the Divine is omnipresent and is in all beings, why is He not visible to us?" If investigation is made on right lines, God can be perceived. Some human effort is essential to get this perception. Just as the reflection of the sun can be seen in all its purity only in clear and still water, though reflections may be noticed in ponds, wells and oceans, God can be perceived only when the heart is pure and unselfish. How can God be expected to appear before a person whose mind is wavering and whose outlook is self-centred? The wavering mind will experience only a hazy figure. In a steady mind, God will present a clear image.

Mind is the cause of man's bondage
 The mind, according to the scriptures, is the cause of man's bondage or liberation. The mind has three qualities: Thamas, Rajas and Sathva. The Thaamasik quality makes the mind ignore the truth, pursue the false and impels man to indulge in what is unholy and improper. It is necessary to correct this tendency of the Thamo-guna. The Rajo-guna is responsible for a person living in a kind of dream-state and treating it as real. The Saathvik quality makes a person see good even in a bad person or object. The Saathvik person sees God in the whole cosmos and fosters the godly approach to creation.
 Today people all over the world are racked by fears of various sorts.
 There is no peace anywhere.
 But people should not give way to despair. They should face the situation with courage, without bothering about the results.
 Make love the basis for all your actions. The Gopikas prayed to Krishna to play on the flute and fill their barren hearts with love so that love may grow and ripen in their hearts. The love of God should be free from any desire for favours. God judges the devotee's love by the intensity of the feeling and not by the number of ways in which worship is offered.
 Love of God does not mean giving up your normal duties. In the performance of these duties, every action should be done as an offering to God - Bhaagavath preethyartham (for the sake of pleasing God). Look upon the body as a moving temple, wherein God' resides. Recognise that God is always with you and around you.
 Messengers of Sathya Sai
 The Messengers of Sathya Sai are doing excellent work. They are helping to build dwellings for the poor in the villages. They also arrange for the marriage of poor villagers, raising the money from among themselves. Many old students of the Women's College (at Ananthapur) are living in overseas countries like Germany, U.S.A, Australia and Japan. It is an index of their devotion to Svaami that they have come from these distant places for this annual meeting of "the Messengers" at great expense. I asked the President of the Association why the members are wasting money in this way. Why should they not use it for helping some poor people in their places? Every trip costs about a lakh of rupees per person. Her reply was: "Svaami! We are not concerned about the expense. We come to Svaami to get our spiritual batteries recharged go that we may render, better service Money comes in one way or another:

But we have to develop our spirit of sacrifice. It is for this reason that we are coming here. Even the money we earn is not really ours. We are merely agents. We are a kind of trustees for our incomes."

This attitude has to be appreciated. People should regard all wealth as coming from God to be used for sacred purposes. No one brings anything with him at birth and carries anything with him at death. All relationships in between are transient. Treat all alike.
Even bad people will be transformed if you treat them with love.
Show love to those who dislike you also

St. Paul was an example of one who originally hated Christ but later became his foremost apostle. When you show love towards all, even to those who dislike you, God will love you.

Then you become a "Son of God." You earn the right to inherit the Kingdom of God. You can become one with God.

Among the Messengers of Sathya Sai, consisting of men and women, it is the women who are carrying on more service activities. This is all the more commendable because of the handicaps they labour under as housewives with in-laws and others who dominate over them. Nevertheless they are persuading their husbands to come to Svaami. This is true seva because they are converting sceptics to believe in God.

The male old students have more freedom but are not equally zealous in rendering service. They should realise the true meaning of freedom, namely, carrying out the dictates of the Spirit.

As a nation we have achieved freedom, but we have not achieved unity. Unity can be achieved only through love. This was the message of Jesus.

Make yourselves worthy of calling 'Sai Devotees'

Students! When you are observing today the birthday of a divine personality you have also to follow his teachings. You have to remember what constitutes the greatness of the person whose birthday you celebrate. We celebrate Shri Raama's birthday, but how many respect the words of the father as Raama did? How far are you prepared to sacrifice position and power as Raama did? People insist on rights to which they have no claim. How can they call themselves devotees of Raama? You should follow the ideals of Raama.

What is meant by calling yourselves devotees of Sai? You have to foster love and develop unity.

You must consider yourselves as members of one family, the children of one God. Only then you are entitled to call yourselves Sai devotees. Whatever others may say, do not bear any ill-will towards them. Welcome everything as for your good.

The more you serve God, the more the bliss you will experience.

Hence, fill your life with love,

grow in love and end your life in love.

Christmas message in the Puurnachandhra Auditorium on 25-12-1995.

1. The triple purity

Devotion alone bestows the supreme good;

Devotion alone is the destroyer of the disease of the cycle of birth and death;

Devotion alone is the means of recognizing Divinity;

Devotion alone is the means of Liberation.

EMBODIMENTS of Love! Only through devotion does man attain the supreme Truth. Through devotion alone does man get release from the disease of birth and death. Through devotion man seeks to realise God. Through devotion alone he achieves Liberation.

Esteeming Bhakthi (devotion) as the supreme end and the highest goal of life, Bhaaratheeyas

have been pursuing the path of devotion from ancient times.

The term Bhakthi (devotion) has been interpreted in many ways.

The word Bhakthi is derived from the root 'Bhaj.' "Bhaja Sevaayaam," declared Shankara.

"Service is devotion," according to Shankaraachaarya. Whom do you serve? What is the form of service? Service to God is true form of service.

Viveka Chudaamani (of Shankaraachaarya) expounded the meaning of Bhakthi in a different way. "Svasvaruupa dharshanam Bhakthi" (The recognition of one's own true Self is Bhakthi).

Naaradha, who was a great exponent of devotion, declared: "Bhaja Paramabhakthih." Naaradha

defined Bhakthi as the ceaseless flow of devotion arising from dwelling on the Lord's name.

He also declared that one who is filled with Paramabhakthi (supreme devotion) is in a state of intoxication, forgetful of the body, totally immersed in the love of the Divine. This means that true devotion consists in obliviousness of the body and total absorption in the love of God.

Raadha and Bhakthi

Raamaanuja who is the exponent of the Visishtaadhvaitha philosophy, derived the meaning of Bhakthi from the name of Raadha and interpreted it as the continuous flow of love for God. The word 'Raadha' contains four syllables: Ra, aa, dh, and aa. If you read the word starting from Ra,

you have Raadha. Starting from aa, you get the word Aadhaara.

Starting from Dh you get the word, Dhaaraa. Starting from the second: aa, you get the word Aaraadha. Aadhaara means "basis." Dhaaraa means "continuous flow." Aaraadha means "worship." Thus Raadha signified for Raamaanuja the continuous stream of worship of the Divine. Vallabhaachaarya gave a different interpretation of devotion. He made a distinction between the continuous flow of devotion and devotion falling in drops. When a devotee's heart is completely filled with the love of God, he ceaselessly chants the name of God. This state of mind of the devotee was described thus, "Sarvadhara Sarvakaaleshu Sarvathra Harichinthanam" (ceaselessly thinking of God at all times and at all places). True devotion is to regard God as friend. Maadhvaachaarya described true devotion as regarding God as the only unfailing friend. All others may be friends for some time and turn inimical later. Thus all worldly friends may turn into enemies some time or other. God is the only true friend. Maadhvaachaarya defined true devotion as the manifestation of the love for God, considering Him as the greatest friend. The Vedhas have proclaimed a truth transcending all these interpretations. The Vedhas repeatedly harked upon two words: Nithyam and Svagatha. Nithyam is that which remains unchanged through all times. This has also been described as Truth which remains the same in all the 'three' categories of time past, present and future. Svagatha refers to that illuminating power, which remaining alone spreads its effulgence all around. This is illustrated by the sun, who is one entity that is unchanging and spreads his light all round. The permanence of the sun indicates the attribute of Nithya and the dispersal of his light indicates the quality of Svagatha. Both the qualities are rooted in a single entity. The smriti referred to this characteristic as Svaruupa-Svabhaava (the combination of form and quality). The sun has two qualities: One is shedding light; the other is transmitting heat. Likewise, the Aathma has two qualities. One is: Prabhaava (effulgence). The other is spreading the light all around. You have the example of a lamp in your home. The lamp is one, but its light illumines the whole house. Likewise, the Aathma (Spirit) is one only in its form. It is eternal and unchanging. The Smriti described it as: Sathyam, Inanam, Anantham Brahma (The Supreme Self is truth, wisdom and infinite). It is the nature of the Self to spread Inaana (spiritual wisdom) everywhere. The Smriti declared that the Self has the form of Anu (the atom). The implication of this is that there is nothing in the universe without atoms. All material objects are made up of atoms. The scripture declared that God is omnipresent as Anusvaruupa. God is present also as the macrocosm. Dharmee and Dharma The Anusvaruupa (micro-essence) of God is termed Dharmee. In this form, Dharmee is present in all objects in creation, but none of them is present in Dharmee. All objects in the universe appear as different from each other, but the Divine principle in all of them is one and the same. That Divine principle, which manifests the oneness underlying all objects, is called Dharmee. This means that Dharmee is what unifies all apparently manifold objects. Dharma demonstrates the diversity in the forms of objects. The underlying principle which reveals the oneness of all these objects is Dharmee. This Dharmee is described by the Vedha as Muulaadhaara padhaartham---the thing that is at the root of all things. This primal basic substance is the basis for everything else. Today the significance of this Dharmee is being forgotten. It is also forgotten that this Dharmee is all-pervading. As the all-pervading Dharmee (divinity) is present in all objects as the subtle atom, man is regarded as Dharma-Svaruupa, the embodiment of Dharma (righteousness). What for has man been given a body? What for does he exist? The scriptures say: "Shareeram aadhyam khalu dharma saadhanam" (the body verily is primary tool for realising righteousness). The body has been given to man to practise Dharma. Today men tend to forget the purpose for which they have come to existence. They ignore their duties. They go after meaningless fancies. Hence they are not able to understand their true nature. Role of festivals In order to make people understand their real divine nature, festivals were designed. Today is Vaikuntha Ekaadashi. What is Vaikuntha? The Lord's abode is described in various ways as Vaikuntha Kailaasa, Svarga etc. All these are fanciful names. What is the abode of God? The Lord told Naaradha: "I reside wherever my devotees sing my glories." The Lord dwells in the hearts of devotees. This is His main address. All other places are

"branch offices." Any message addressed to the Divine Indweller in the heart is bound to reach

God. Vaikuntha as the abode of God means a place which is changeless. Many things may change in a man, but his heart is changeless. What is meant by Ekaadhashi? This should not be regarded as some special place or time. The form of Ekaadhasha Rudhra is made up of the five organs of perception, the five organs of action and the mind. Rudhra is a resident of the human body, which is full of numerous potencies. Men today are forgetful of these potencies and the Divinity. that dwells in the heart.

New year days come and go. Of what use are they? Samvathsara (the year) is one of the names of the Lord. Every moment is new. Why wait for a whole year to make the change in yourselves?

As long as you are caught up in worldly celebrations of New year, Vaikuntha Ekaadashi and the like, God will elude you. You can realise God only when you forget the phenomenal world and the body-consciousness.

The three active agencies in man

Turn the love that arises in you towards God. Dedicate your body to the Divine. This is the true mark of devotion. There are three constituents in man: the mind, the power of speech and the body. These three are called Thrikaranas---the three active agencies in man. It is when all three are used for sacred purposes, man becomes sanctified.

Every human being needs to cultivate the spirit, irrespective of his beliefs. All need devotion. It is only spirituality that can purify the heart and mind of man. The second requirement is morality. Morality helps to purify Vaak (speech). The third is Dhaarmikam. All righteous deeds done by the body or hands sanctify a man. It is through spirituality, morality and righteousness that the three instruments get purified.

Only the one who has achieved this triple purity can realise the Divine, If any of these instruments are impure, he cannot realise the Divine.

To comprehend the Divine, man has to understand the subtle atomic principle that pervades the entire cosmos. The difficulty in comprehending the Divine was recognized by the Gopikas who declared: "How can we know you, oh Krishna! You are the subtlest among the subtle and vaster than the vastest among the 84 laks of species in the cosmos."

The three ornaments to cherish

With faith in the omnipresence of the Divine, man should engage himself in good deeds, cherish

good thoughts and dedicate his life to good practices. His words should be words of truth. The ornaments he should cherish are truthfulness in speech, charity for the hands and listening to sacred lore for the ears.

Develop faith in your divinity. Then you will redeem your life. Follow your conscience. Make your heart pure.

You cannot realise the Divine by immersing yourself in worldly concerns. There are two kinds of knowledge: Dharmee-bhuutha Inaana and Dharma-bhuutha Inaana. Dharmee-bhuutha Inaana is knowledge related to forms. Dharma-bhuutha Inaana is related to names. There is no basic difference between the two kinds of knowledge. Name and form are interrelated. This truth has to be understood. The awareness that shines within all beings is the form and nature of the Divine. This oneness of form and name has to be properly understood. Every such concept has an external and an inner meaning. You have to grasp the inner meaning. For instance, the mike here rests on the table. The table is the base. The table stands on the earth. The earth is the base and the table is supported by the earth. The base is called Aadhaara and the object supported by the base is called Aadheya. Today people tend to forget the Aadhaara and think only of the Aadheya.

Anything can be accomplished with Divine support

Embodiments of Love! The New Year comes regularly year after year.

But do you have any new thoughts? You do not shed your old, mistaken ideas. They should be given up, yielding place to new, sacred and sublime thoughts. Of what use is it to celebrate new year days if you do not change your old ways of thinking and behaving? Make proper use of time which is both precious and sacred. Do not indulge in useless gossip. Develop good qualities like compassion, love and sympathy. Act as your own monitor and correct yourself by self-punishment. By a simple method you can control your wandering mind or your anger.

Moreover, place your reliance on

God.

With the power of the Divine to sustain you there is nothing you cannot accomplish. Karna and

Raavana are examples of powerful men who were destroyed because they did not have the power of the Divine behind them. The Paandavas were saved because of their faith in the Divine and their unity. Happenings in the world show how some families have prospered because of unity and how others have suffered because of divisions within the family. Today the nation needs unity above everything else. It is through faith in God that unity can be promoted. Look at the diversity of people in this hall, the different creeds they profess, the different nationalities to which they belong. All are united in their common allegiance to Svaami.

By this single feeling of faith in the Divine, unity can be achieved. It is the absence of this faith that is the cause of division.

All of you are embodiments of the Divine. All of you are embodiments of love and peace. You are the Divine in human form. Develop that conviction. Immerse yourselves in Divine love.

Offer that love to the Divine. Thereby you will have love for all. It is only when you develop this love principle you will be realising the meaning of festivals like these. Stand up for your belief in God, even as you stand up for your father or mother.

Render service to society, without which you cannot exist. Your welfare is bound with that of society. Develop the feeling of oneness with all, loving all as members of one Divine family.

Discourse in Sai Kulwant Mandap on 1-1-1996.

If you take one step towards Me, I take hundred steps towards you. Baba

2. Learning a lesson from a child

The farmer has no fear of going without food;

One who chants the Lord's name has no fear of worries;

The silent man has no fear of discord;

The careful man has no fear of danger.

EMBODIMENTS of Love! The hard-working farmer has no fear of starvation. The one who chants the name of God has no fear of worldly worries. The man of few words will be free from enmity. Through excessive talk man falls a prey to quarrels. Everyone should cultivate moderation in speech. Restraint in speech is conducive to friendly feelings. The one who is careful in his behaviour, doing all actions after due deliberation, will have no fear of danger.

All these precepts are related to education. True education consists in knowing how to lead a peaceful life. This means that in embarking on one's educational career, one should aspire for world peace. The reason is, he is a part of the world community. His well-being is intimately bound up with the well-being of the world. He should give up all narrow feelings. Students have also got to acquire unity and fellowship.

All these qualities cannot be taught by teachers. For every individual, Nature is the best teacher.

Nature is teaching all lessons to man all the time.

The supreme virtue in a man

What lends beauty to sports and games is the spirit of unity with which the participants play in them, eschewing feelings of envy and hatred. The supreme virtue in a man is to forget his individual differences with others and move with them in a spirit of equality and harmony.

Today people derive only physical fitness and strength from taking part in sports and games. But man is not the body alone. Fulfillment in life is not attained by physical health and strength alone. Even when the stomach is full, 'the mind must get satisfaction. Hence, efforts should be made to promote mental health also. Only when both the mind and the body are hale and well can one experience happiness. However, young people today are concerned only about physical appearance and fitness.

Man is endowed by Divine grace with physical, mental and spiritual potencies of many kinds.

Unfortunately young people tend to misuse these powers and come to grief. They do not recognise the magnitude of their internal powers. The mind is the source of all powers. Only when the mind is subdued can man realise the Divine.

Use and abuse of energies present in man

For achieving anything, strong determination is necessary. Young people in particular should take note of the powers in them. It is comparable to a kind of electrical energy. This energy enables them to see things through the eye (which is like a bulb). You must ensure that your vision is pure, sacred and pleasing. Do not taint or pollute your sight by looking at undesirable objects. Do not look at anything with bad thoughts. The eyes are spoilt by misuse.

Then you have circulating in the entire body a magnetic energy. Although this energy is present throughout the body, its presence is conspicuous in the hand. Hence the hands should be employed for good purposes. They should not be used for doing harm to others or hurting them.

Moreover, there are in the body rays emitting light. The electrical energy in the body serves to transmit these rays throughout the body like radio waves. People do not use these energies for right purposes. The ears listen to gossip, slander and evil talk. The result is that the power of hearing gets polluted.

Then, you have the power of speech. This power finds expression in sound waves. This power has to be used with great care. The words one utters should be examined to see that they do not excite, irritate or anger others. Bad words come back to the speaker with double strength. Hence one's speech should be soft and sweet.

The major weakness of young people is the tendency to misuse their boundless potencies. This degrades them as human beings.

Young people, failing to exercise control over their actions, tend to become unruly and ungovernable. You may be great scholars or intellectual giants. There are many Nobel Laureates.

How many remember them? But the great benefactors of mankind, the men of noble qualities, are cherished by all mankind. For instance, there is the example of a noble soul from Calcutta.

Calcutta produced many great intellectuals. After a time they are not remembered at all. But if today Raamakrishna Paramahansa, an illiterate person, is enshrined in the hearts of millions all over the world, is education responsible for it? Likewise, if many noble persons are enshrined in the hearts of people, what is the reason? They have earned their good name by their faith in God, their character, magnanimity and spirit of sacrifice. God has been the prime factor in their lives.

A child's faith in God

The other day you witnessed in the sports festival a young child dancing as Krishna on the hood of a serpent. Owing to the firing of some crackers, the cloth on a platform where the child was dancing caught fire. As the flames rose, the police, the students and others rushed to the spot with buckets of water to put out the fire. There was great commotion. But the child Krishna went on with his dance, totally indifferent to what was happening all around. His entire concentration was on the role he was playing. The child went on with the dance with his concentration on Syaami. His eyes were centred on Syaami. When one's look is centred on the Lord, nothing untoward can happen. All around the child, the decorations had been prepared with paper.

Behind the decorations five hundred children were seated. What disaster might have happened if the fire had spread towards them? But, even a mountain of danger will melt away like ice if one's thoughts are centred on God. This means that together with concern for worldly things, there should be devotion to God. Together with education Samskaara (refinement of character) is essential.

What is meant by Samskaara? "Samyak Krithi ithi Samskaara" (Refinement of action is culture).

The true implication of the benediction, "Lokaas-Samasthaas-Sukhino-Bhavanthu" is not properly understood. "All should be happy." This is the assurance of the Divine.

Valmeeki, Vyaasa and Pothana

How did a highwayman like Rathnaakara become the immortal author of the great epic

Raamaayana? By continuous chanting of the name of the lord, as taught to him by the Saptharishis (seven great sages), his face acquired a new effulgence and he could become the sage Valmeeki, who is immortalized as the author of the Raamaayana. He composed his work to please the Lord. He did everything in a spirit of dedication to the Lord.

Take the case of Sage Vyaasa. He was the author of eighteen puraanas (ancient spiritual epics).

He wrote the Mahaabhaaratha and many other great works. But it was only when he was filled with divine fervour and wrote the Bhaagavatham that he became enshrined in the hearts of the people. Valmeeki and Vyaasa have become immortal through their devotion.

We have Pothana, the author of the Thelugu Bhaagavatham. He began writing his Bhagavatham with an invocation in which he declared: "What is being composed is Bhaagavatham. The one who inspires the writer is Raamachandhra. What is written by me will be redemptive. I shall write, as there is no greater story to tell." Pothana began composing his magnum opus with the feeling that everything he was doing was by the will of Shri Raama. So, when you think of Bhaagavatham, you are reminded of Pothana. By his great work he has installed himself in the hearts of the devout.

Mind should be directed towards God

Students should not end with mastery of books. The hearts should be filled with right knowledge.

The students should see that the darkness which envelops the mind is dispelled. This was the prayer which the gopikas requested Uddhava to convey to Krishna: "Oh Krishna! Dispel the darkness in our hearts and fill them with your effulgence. Pour your love on the parched fields of our hearts so that devotion may sprout from them."

The gopikas and gopalas prayed to Krishna that they could not live apart from Him that therefore they should be endowed with forms related to whatever forms He took so that they could stay with Him. Separation from God is the cause of men's wallowing in sensuous pleasures. The mind is the cause of man's pleasure and pain. It should be directed towards God to secure freedom from pleasure and pain. God will not give up devotees. People today speak about God having forgotten man. This is not true. God can never give up the devotee. It is the devotee who gives up God. God can never forget the devotee. It is the devotee who forgets God. God is never away from you. Only the devotee is away from God. You think that God is moving away from you. Not at all. You forget God and declare that God has forgotten you. Your own feelings are reflected in your utterances. What is the result of education? You find that in any conference, the members criticize one another in unspeakable terms. The critics are invariably petty-minded persons. Many leaders today indulge in mutual mud slinging, which is totally unbecoming. Indulging in abuse of others is a grievous sin. Develop your own good qualities and share them with others. That is the right way. Try to correct yourself rather than to criticize others. Most young people today indulge in slander, instead of cultivating qualities like devotion to God, service to society and sympathy for fellow-beings. They should realise that they have to lead exemplary lives and serve their fellowmen. Every individual should dedicate himself to social service. The spirit of sportsmanship which you display in sports and games should be displayed in other fields also. The determination displayed in sports should also be shown in the game of life. You young people have to learn many things. First and foremost, get rid of Ahamkaara (arrogance). Earn a good name as a scholar, a man of character, endowed with a spirit of sacrifice. Realise that if you please God, you can please the whole world. You saw the film about the saint Ghori Khumbhar. In his total absorption in God, he forgot the presence of his son and unwittingly caused the child's death. When he realised what had happened, he did not mourn the death of the child. He declared that God took away what God had given him. Such was his total faith in God. While pursuing your studies remember that you have also to strive for the well-being of the world Loka hitharathah. Service should justify the salaries. Make use of your education for public welfare. You have no doubt to take up a job for earning a living. See that the work you do justifies the emoluments you get. It is treason to the nation to receive thousands by way of salary and do hardly a few hundred rupees worth of work. Today such disloyal employees are, increasing in numbers all over the world. High salaries and poor turnout are the rule today. This accounts for the deplorable condition of Bhaarath today. The public debt is growing alarmingly. Who is responsible? If public servants rendered service according to the salaries they received the country would not be in such a bad plight. Discharge your duties according to your conscience. Our students should live up to this ideal. There is nothing wrong in receiving a high salary provided you do the work to deserve it. Now young people are concerned only about the pay packets and not the work they have to do in the service of society to deserve the pay. Think more about what you owe to society than what you can get from it. It is sheer selfishness to be concerned only about your earnings. The Vedha has declared that immortality can be attained only through sacrifice. "Students are my only property" Students! Boys and girls! Wherever you may go, wherever you may live, serve the elders at home, serve the society and bring a good name to the institutions which have educated you. Observe discipline all through your life. Do your duty. It is not easy to bring back the glorious days of the past. You young people cannot be aware of the times when a bag of rice could be got for four rupees, when people could go about without any fear of attack and houses could be left unlocked. Today fear stalks the country. No one is safe. For all these evils the insatiable craving for money is responsible. The evil began in a sway in the Dhvaanpara Yuga. Today it has reached frightful limits. The craving for wealth has led to many other evils like jealousy and pride. The money that comes from the people should be given back to them in one way or other. This is Bhagavaan's will. People say that Sai Baba is spending crores of rupees on the drinking water project. There is not a single rupee of Sai Baba in all this. What has been received from the people is being given back to them. I do not own anything. I have only one property, my most valuable property. My students are my only property. It is enough for me if my students conduct themselves well.

I bless you all that you should carry on your lives in the same spirit in which you have distinguished yourselves in games and sports. Win prizes in the game of life, carry out the injunctions of God and stand forth as ideal citizens. Never forget the supremacy of love as the ruling principle in life.

Discourse in the Puurnachandhra Auditorium on 14-1-1996, after distribution of prizes to winners in sports and games.

It is enough if Prema is cultivated, the Prema that knows no distinction between oneself and another, because all are but limbs of One corpus of God Almighty. Through Love alone can the Embodiment of Love be gained. Here, no scholarship is needed; in fact, scholarship will be an impediment, for it caters to egoism and it breeds doubts and the desire for disputation and laurel of victory over others preening themselves as learned.

3. Triple transformation : Sankraanthi's call

The sun appeared cool and serene;
The day started getting shorter;
The chill wind blew fiercely;
The fields were filled with golden harvest.
The farmers rejoiced in singing at night
With the moon shining bright,
The buds of flowers blossomed
Like garlands of pearls
On the banks of rivers;
Farmers were bringing home
The newly harvested grain, Hailing the advent of The Joyous festival of Sankraanthi.

EMBODIMENTS of Love! Bhaaratheeya festivals are full of inner significance, imparting bliss, and not ostentatious shows. Every festival has a unique significance of its own.

The sun moves into a house of the zodiac every month. In a year he goes round the twelve houses of the zodiac. Of these, the main houses are four. The first is Makara Sankramana (the zodiacal sign of Capricorn). The second is Karkaataka (Cancer). The third is Thula (Libra). The fourth is Mesha (Aries). Of these four, the most important is Makara (Capricorn). The entry of the sun into Capricorn has physical, ethical, social and moral significance.

The northward journey of the sun

From today the sun starts on his northward journey. What does the north signify? It is considered the direction leading to Moksha (Liberation). The sun is said to move towards Himaachala.

Himaachala is made up of two words: Hima + Achala. 'Hima' means that which is white as snow. 'Achala' is that which is firm and unshakable. What is the place to which this description applies? It is the region of the heart. In a heart that is pure and steady, the sun of Buddhi (the intellect) enters. There is no need to undertake a journey in the external world. The Uttharaayana (or the Northward Journey) means turning the intellect inward, towards the heart. The bliss that is experienced within alone is true bliss for man. All other external and sensory pleasures are ephemeral. Only the Aathmik principle is pure, permanent and infinite. This has been termed the abode of Moksha (Liberation). The journey to Moksha is called the quest for liberation.

Sankramana is the time when the inward journey towards a pure and unsullied heart is made. Just as the sun embarks on his northward journey, Sankraanthi is the day on which the intellect should be turned towards the Aathma for Self-realisation.

The Vedha has declared the Uttharaayana as a sacred period. The great warrior Bheeshma, lying on a bed of arrows, waited for 56 days for the advent of Uttharaayana to end his life. The puraanas have stated that whoever passes away in Uttharaayana will attain liberation.

Inner meaning of festivals

In the movement of the sun from house to house in the Zodiac, the entry into Capricorn is most important. Capricorn is a sign of peace and contentment. According to the Gregorian calendar, Sankraanthi begins on January 13 or 14. This confers a kind of mental and physical peace.

In this period, farmers and others labouring on the soil enjoy a period of rest. The farmers are at ease enjoying the fruits of their labours. Their granaries are filled with grains of all kinds.

Farmers have no other period of rest. During this month, farmers enjoy peace of mind and body.

Few people understand the true significance of festivals like Sankraanthi. Man cannot secure enduring bliss through physical pleasures. He has to discover that the source of this bliss is within himself. Sankraanthi enables man to make this discovery, like a man who carrying his spectacles on his forehead searches for it everywhere and discovers to his joy that it has been with him all along.

The Divine is not anywhere else. It is enshrined in one's heart. Hence, the man who seeks the Divine within his heart redeems himself. He then attains liberation. All external spiritual exercises are of temporary value. They should be internalized to experience lasting bliss. All mental exercises also leave the heart unaffected. In the nine paths of devotion, beginning with listening to sacred things and ending with Aathma-nivedhanam (total surrender of the self), the last is the most important. After Aathmanivedhanam there is no need for any other effort.

The feelings promoted by Sankraanthi Sankraanthi gives the call for this total surrender. Subba Rao (in his speech prior to Svaami's discourse) said that Sankraanthi is a kind of family festival. Yes. This is so. But the whole world is one family Vasudhaiva Kutumbakam. The festival relates to the entire world. It is not confined to one's kith and kin. Sankraanthi is related to the entire mankind. Whether people realise it or not, Sankraanthi promotes in one and all a feeling of happiness. Sankraanthi promotes mental transformation. It illumines the minds of people. It induces the unfoldment of inner feelings. It brings about the manifestation of the invisible Aathma within everyone. Sankraanthi is pregnant with such immense significance. It influences not only the mind but also the powers of nature. Nature is a projection of the mind. "Manomoolam idham Jagath" (The world is rooted in the mind). When the mind is turned towards the heart and the heart is filled with the Divine, the mind will cease to be a source of trouble. The mind is the master of the senses. When the senses are controlled the mind is under control. Only the master of the mind can attain Maadhava (the Divine).

Young people should realise that the root cause of all their bad thoughts and bad actions is the food they consume. The nature of the food determines the state of the mind. Food does not mean merely what is eaten, but includes all that is received through the senses and stored in the mind.

The mind, as Subba Rao said, has the power of attraction. It attracts impressions of all kinds from the external world. What do we find in every home today? Harm done by Television

There is a television set. T.V. sets are installed in every room in the houses of the rich. From the moment television made its appearance, the mind of man has been polluted.

Before the advent of T.V., men's minds were not so much polluted.

Acts of violence were not so rampant previously. Today T.V. is installed in every hut. People watch the T.V. even while taking food. The result is that all the foul things seen on the T.V. are being consumed by the viewer. Concentration on the T.V. affects one's view of the world. The scenes, thoughts and actions displayed on the T.V. set fill the minds of the viewers. Unknowingly, agitations and illfeelings enter their minds. In due course they take root and grow in the minds.

Hence while taking food, you should not discuss dreadful incidents. No room should be given to subjects which excite the mind. Silence should prevail during eating. Even sound waves enter into us and affect our minds. Hence people should avoid T.V. while taking food.

There is now what is called "Star TV." It is doing great harm to human life. The temporary satisfaction given by it is followed by lasting damage. It is like a sword coated with honey. As you lick the honey, the sword will cut your tongue.

Not Bhaarith alone, but the whole world is suffering from the consequences of T.V. The world is racked by disorder, discord and frustration. Fill your life with holy thoughts

Men today are plagued by a whole battery of troubles from birth to death. How can they hope for happiness amidst this sea of troubles?

They have to change their vision, their thoughts, their words and their conduct. This is the meaning of Sankramana. Unless you purify yourself, what can any number of Sankraanthis mean to you? You tasted sweet prasaadham this morning. After some time, its taste is gone. It is not sweet food that is important. You must fill your life with holy thoughts. That is the purpose of sacred festivals.

Young people ask why they should not enjoy freedom as the fish, birds and animals do. They should understand that each of these creatures are enjoying freedom in accordance with their own sphere of life. Similarly man should enjoy freedom related to his human condition. You cannot call yourself a human being and lead the life of an animal. Enjoy the freedom of a human being. To be free like an animal is to become an animal yourself. What is the freedom a man can enjoy? Man is governed by certain restraints. He has to adhere to truth. He has to follow righteousness. He has to cultivate love. He has to live in peace. He has to observe non-violence.

Sticking to these five values, man can exercise his freedom. These five values are associated with the five elements which make up the cosmos. These five elements may be used in different ways, but they are the basic substances constituting the universe. Beyond these five, there is only one sixth element, that is, the Anthahkarana, the Inner Motivator, which is identical with the Aathmik principle.

To exercise freedom in its true sense, man has to respect the five basic values. It is in that freedom he will find true bliss. Imitation has become a deadly disease. In exercising freedom you should not merely imitate others. Imitation has become a deadly disease among modern youth, in matters of dress or other behaviour. They should consult their conscience in all matters rather than copy others. Films and TV have totally demoralized the people. People have become completely oblivious to Divinity within them.

People today have lost the quality of forbearance. The sages in the past allowed even anthills to grow over them while they were immersed in penance. Today people cannot tolerate the slightest disturbance by a fly or a mosquito. Young people should cultivate forbearance and tolerance.

Without peace of mind there can be no happiness. Peace can be got only through sacred thoughts. Youth today have lost confidence in themselves. They are affected by criticism levelled against them. They should see that if the criticism is justified, they should correct themselves. If it is not justified, they should ignore it. Taking myself as an example, I may tell you if somebody somewhere says, "Sai Baba has a mop of hair," I accept it, as it is true. If someone were to say to my face, "Sai Baba is bald," I will ignore it, as it is not true. Why should I bother to quarrel with him? If you are criticized for a fault that is not in you, you can ignore it even if the whole world joins in the criticism.

When we pronounce "Shaanthi, Shaanthi, Shaanthihi," three times, it is prayer for peace of body, mind and the spirit. Though people have been mouthing this prayer for thirty years, they have not found peace, because they have not enshrined peace in their hearts. They must learn to speak sweetly and softly. Students must pledge to rid the world of its ills. Students! Apart from educational programmes, do not look at T.V. at all, especially while taking food. Concentrate on the work on hand, whether it be eating or anything else.

You are observing many things in the world today. You must see how you can make use of your knowledge to make the world better. Students-boys and girls---must pledge themselves to rid the world of its ills. Earning incomes is not a great thing. To ensure peace and prosperity in the world is the highest achievement. You have to strive for peace in the nation, starting with peace in the home.

Above all, unity is important. Young people should promote unity and serve the nation. They should be a power for peace wherever they go. Educated young men should be examples of discipline and good behaviour. Revere parents and elders, love the Motherland and uphold its greatness.

Sankraanthi should be hailed as the harbinger of unity and peace. This was the immemorial message of the Vedhas. "Let us live together in harmony and strive together."

Discourse in the Sai Kulwant Mandap on 15-1-1996, Sankraanthi Day.

God draws the Individual towards Himself; it is the nature of birth to have this affinity, for they are the same. They are like the iron and the magnet. But if the iron is rusty and covered with layers of dirt, the magnet is unable to attract. Remove the impediment; that is all you have to do. Shine forth in your real nature and the Lord will draw you into His Bosom. Trials and tribulations are the means by which this cleansing is done. That is why Kunthi prayed to Krishna, "Give us always grief, so that we may never forget Thee."

4. Spiritual basis of human values

BORN as human beings, growing as human beings, men have forgotten the value of human existence. Developing religious differences, fostering demonic tendencies, they are destroying peace. What is the state of human life today? The foremost thing that should exist is respect for human values. However great an intellectual may be, however great one may be as a scholar or a man of learning, one has also to acquire humanness. With out humanness, scholarships and intellectual eminence are of no value. It is only when men cultivate humanness that society will shine with radiance and the nation and the world will progress. Humanness can be promoted only through spirituality and not by any other means.

Just as a seed can sprout only when it is planted in the soil and watered, human values can grow only in a spiritual soil. If a man wants to cultivate human values he has to apply the manure of spirituality to his heart, water it with love so that human values will grow. Human society needs essentially fellow-feeling and unity. When these two are present, humanness will flourish.

The five principles of Yama (sense control)

Wherefrom are human values to be derived and how are they to be developed? Human values are born along with human birth. They exist in union. Unfortunately, man today separates himself from human values and yet wants to live as a human being. To recover human values, man has to take the spiritual path.

In spiritual saadhana, there are eight Yogik disciplines to be observed: Yama, Niyama, Aasana, Pranaayaama, Prathyaahaara, Dhyaana, Dhaarana and Samaadhi (sense restraint, observing rules, seating posture, breath-control, withdrawal of senses from objects, meditation and Super Conscious state). Of these, the first is Yama. It is enough if this single discipline is observed. All human values are comprised in it. Humanness is embedded in it.

Yama includes the Pancha Praanas (five-breaths), Pancha Bhuuthas (five elements), Pancha Koshas (five sheaths), Pancha Thathvas (five basic principles), and Pancha Ruupas (five forms). The five forms are the form of Gaayathri. The five basic principles are: Ahimsa, Sathya, Brahmacharya, Astheya and Aparigraha (Non-violence, Truth, Celibacy, non-stealing and non-possessive qualities). These five constitute Yama. The first is Ahimsa. Buddha attached the great importance to Ahimsa. He considered it the foremost Dharma (duty). "Ahimsa Paramo Dharmah," declared Buddha.

Wider meaning of Ahimsa

What does Ahimsa signify? It is not merely refraining from causing harm or injury to others. It implies also refraining from causing harm to himself. One who harms himself cannot avoid harming others? Whoever desires to observe Ahimsa must see that he does not do violence to himself. How is this to be ensured? By constantly examining whether his conduct is right or wrong. For instance, in the matter of speech, he must examine whether his words are causing pain to others or not. He must see that his looks are not tainted by evil intentions or thoughts. He should not listen to evil talk. All these cause harm to the individual.

Hence, everyone should see that he gives no room for bad looks, bad hearing, bad speech, bad thoughts and bad actions. How do you determine what is bad? By consulting your conscience.

Whenever you act against the dictates of your conscience, bad results follow. The conscience is the form of the Divine within everyone. Whatever you do, the conscience tells you whether it is right or wrong. However, to ascertain the directive of the conscience you have to wait for some time. You should not be in a hurry. When you want to say something, you must consider for a moment whether it would be proper Or not and then speak. When you want to listen to something, you must examine whether it is good or bad to listen and then decide what is proper.

You should be careful not only with regard to how you react to the five elements, but also with regard to your food. Excessive eating does violence to the body. Moderation in food is conducive to happiness. Ahimsa (non-violence) is thus what confers happiness on you. That which hurts you is himsa (violence). Nor is that all. Even in drinking water, you should observe restraints.

Likewise, one's entire life should be governed by the principle of non-violence. Many germs die when one takes a bath or walks or does any other action. Even in the process of breathing many germs die. Violence is present in all these activities. Therefore, to avoid the consequences of such involuntary violence to living creatures, one is advised to dedicate all actions to the Divine.

But there is no meaning in dedicating to the Divine conscious acts of violence. The conscience will not approve of such conduct. In Vedhaanthik parlance, the conscience is called chith. It is also called Awareness. Awareness is total understanding. This total understanding is within the capacity of every human being. Everyone must strive to express this awareness. Thus, Ahimsa is the primary duty of man.

Adherence to truth

The second duty is Sathya (Truth). Truth is not merely telling the facts about what you see or hear or know. These are temporal truths. In its full sense truth can be applied only to what comes out of your heart in its pure and unsullied form as the voice of conscience. This Sathya (truth) is also called Ritham. It is true for all time--past, present and the future. It is not affected by changes in time or place. It is unchanging and cannot be suppressed. Truth is its own proof. It is the form of the Divine as declared in the Vedhik saying: Sathyam, Inaanam, Anantham Brahma (Thath, the highest Wisdom and Infinite--that is the Absolute Self). Truth is thus the second human value.

The third is Astheyam (non-stealing). Astheyam means not stealing the properties of others.

Property should not be confined to physical objects like a book. When you need anything, there is nothing wrong in your taking it with the permission of the owner. To take or use any object without such permission amounts to stealing. Even to criticize someone in a way that harms him also amounts to theft (of his good name). It is common among students to borrow a friend's camera and use it. When the camera is damaged, the responsibility for getting it repaired is that of the user. In this manner, you can understand how the concept of stealing applies to even trivial incidents in daily life. This is the third duty.

The true meaning of Brahmacharya

The next duty is Brahmacharya. Brahmacharya is interpreted in many ways. One meaning is remaining unmarried. This is not the correct meaning. The true meaning of the term is "Moving in Brahman." Brahmacharya means ceaseless contemplation of God. Charya means moving or treading. Brahmacharya means "moving in Brahman." Mere bachelorhood is not Brahmacharya.

A married man is called Girhastha (house-holder). There is Brahmacharya even in a householder's life. This consists in his leading the conjugal life with the wife alone--Ardhaangi. If a married man leads a promiscuous life he is not observing Brahmacharya. Even in thoughts and looks, one should observe continence. Brahmacharya acquired its importance because of its strict observance by our ancient sages.

Unconsciously or otherwise men tend to waste their energies. All these are lapses from Brahmacharya. Sense control is vital in practising continence. It is easier to conquer Indhra (the Lord of gods) than to subdue the Indhriyas (senses). Control of senses is an important human value. It is because these vital disciplines were observed by the sages and others since ancient times, they continue to be cherished to this day. Bhaarith has passed through innumerable vicissitudes in its long history, including foreign invasion. Nevertheless, by and large, the people have managed to foster the human values.

Subtle implications of Aparigraha

The fifth discipline is Aparigraha. This means not accepting things from others. You have every right to receive gifts or other things from your parents. You are the product of your parents and hence you can accept from them whatever they give. Aparigraha has certain subtle implications.

For instance, it is not proper to accept gifts even from one's uncles or in-laws or even from one's brothers. When any gifts are received from these relatives you have to requite them by equivalent presents. Today the Aparigraha role is blatantly violated.

For instance, boys when they get married after their education, receive dowries at the time of marriage. This is very wrong. It even amounts to a sin. A girl who has been brought up well is offered to a young man in marriage. That itself is a great gift. Why should one ask for money along with the bride? The parents of the girl may give her whatever they choose. But the bridegroom should not expect or accept anything.

This is the attitude one should have towards gifts from others. It is because many of these immemorial injunctions have been given the go-by that today Bhaarith is experiencing various troubles.

No limits to gifts from God

Gifts can be accepted from parents, the preceptor and God. These are the exceptions to the rule of Aparigraha. From these four, you can receive anything. But even from the parents you should not seek to get anything by compulsion or litigations. What is offered by the parents with love should be received with love. There are limits to what you can receive from the parents. But there is no limit to what you can receive from God. You can accept anything from God because He is the Lord of everything. He can free you from sin and redeem you from the consequences.

God encompasses all relationships and hence one should identify one's self with God. "You and I are one." Attributing relationships like mother and father to God sets binding limits to the association between God and man. In the vast ocean of Sath-Chith-Aanandha (Being-Awareness-Bliss), the myriad human beings, with different names and forms, are like waves. But as the waves are made up of the same water as the ocean, all human beings are sparks of the Divine.

Sath-Chith-Aanandha are present in every human being. People out of their ignorance go in quest of Sath-Chith-Aanandha elsewhere. Ainaana (Ignorance) is the cause of Aviveka

(stupidity). Stupidity is the cause of Ahamkaara (egoism). Egoism gives rise to attachment.

Attachment leads to hatred. Hatred gives rise to Karma (action).

Karma is the cause of birth. The original cause of the chain of processes leading to birth is ignorance.

What is ignorance? It is the state of bhinnathvam (divisiveness). To regard "That" as different from you is ignorance. To differentiate God from yourself is ignorance. All are fragments of the Divine, sparks from the same flame. When the sparks are near the fire, they retain their heat and light. But when they are away, they turn into charcoal. Likewise, when one is near God, Sath-

Chith-Aanandha will be in him. When he is remote from God, he will lose the attributes of the Divine. He will be immersed in ignorance. It is not mastery of books and scholarship which makes a person a Inaani (a knower of the Supreme Truth).

"Advaita dharshanam Inaanam"

(To perceive the One without a second is Knowledge).

"Happiness is union with God"

It is only when you manifest the bliss that is in your Sath-Chith-Aanandha--that you can call yourself Vyakthi, the manifested individual. The term Vyakthi cannot be applied to all and sundry. He alone can be called Vyakthi who manifests the invisible divinity within him.

What is meant by Sath-Chith-Aanandha? Sath is "Being", that which is eternal and unchanging.

Sugar has the quality of sweetness, which remains in whatever form it may be used. For purposes of analogy, sugar may be described as Sath. Chith may be compared to water. It has the quality of mobility. When sugar and water are mixed, you have neither sugar nor water as such, but a new product, syrup. When Sath and Chith come together, you have Aanandha (Divine Bliss).

People imagine that this bliss is to be found in jobs, marriage, property or progeny. That is not the case. You hope for happiness in one thing after another: education, jobs, marriage, children and so on. But happiness eludes you. The only enduring happiness is got by oneness with the Divine.

The answer to the question, "Where is happiness?" is "Happiness is union with God." Students tend to forget this, in the pursuit of worldly pleasures. It is only through the ripeness of experience that this realisation can come. For instance, you see a barren field in the summer.

After a night's rain, you find grass coming up. Wherefrom did it come?

It is from the field. What was present in the form of seeds in the earth came up as grass after the rain. Likewise the bliss within you will sprout when you water your parched heart with the rain of divine love.

Do not underrate the powers in the atmosphere

Scientists today have made many astonishing discoveries. But they lack peace. They have failed to understand the Vedhaantik truth about their true nature. Hence they are unable to experience the bliss of the Spirit that is in them. People should not underrate the powers present in the atmosphere. For instance, it is filled with radio waves coming from different broadcasting centres. But the waves maintain their individual wave length and do not collide with the others.

This electrical energy is divine. It is one of the secrets of creation. The body is like a radio set.

When you do not tune in properly by concentration you will not get the right station.

Concentration is essential for every kind of activity in life. Students should realise how much can be gained by reducing one's desires. They may experiment in a small way with reducing the consumption of coffee. They will find that their memory power increases. As desires are reduced, their will power will grow. This Ichchaa-shakthi (will power) is being undermined today. The result is their ability to act is also reduced. Consequently, even the Inaana-shakthi

(the power of wisdom), is also lost.

Place your faith in God

Students! Understand that there is no free will for individuals. They are constrained by various limitations. God alone has total free will. All others are bound in one way or another.

Whatever one's efforts, the ultimate outcome lies with Providence. Therefore, place your faith in God and do your duty, wherever you may be. Do not cause any harm to others. Observe continence, avoid covetousness and lead a good, righteous life. A bad habit, which may seem trivial in the beginning, may develop into a menace in later life. Correct such faults in the initial stages. Pursue spiritual exercises with the same enthusiasm you have for sports and studies.

(Bhagavaan related at length the story of Ghora Kumbhar and his final merger in the Lord of Pandharpur, Paanduranga. Bhagavaan pointed out how God's grace was needed for the Rishis to obtain a vision of the Divine, or get the opportunity to speak to God.

The Rishis later took birth

as monkeys to converse with God and again took birth as gopikas and gopaalas to have contact with God).

The purpose of the Sai avathaar is different from that of Raama and Krishna because the forces of good and evil are now present in every human being and the process of transformation has to be effected in a context very different from the previous yugas. In the Kali Yuga, the process of transformation has been individualized. Everyone has to correct himself. "Child! You have to save yourself. I am present within you as a witness." This is the Lord's message. Hence, everyone should try to reform himself. You have to decide what is right and what is wrong and give up what is bad.

The ways of God are inscrutable. You should not ascribe to God motives which are a reflection of your own feelings. Hence, self-enquiry is essential. Embark on the Divine path with sincerity.

You will emerge as leaders in the world.

I have high expectations regarding your future. Revere your parents, serve society and protect the nation. It is to produce such students that I am devoting three-fourths of my time to them. Carry out Svaami's injunctions. Earn a good name. Uphold the prestige of the Sai educational institutions. That is the gratitude you can show to Svaami. Do not think of the pens and other gifts you received. Remember only that Svaami gave you good sense. Develop both goodness and godliness. Beyond these two, there is nothing greater which education can do for you.

Discourse in the Secondary School Hostel on 18-1-1996.

5. Spiritual significance of Shivaraathri

Moham hithvaa priyo bhavathi

Krodham hithvaa na sochathi

Kaamam hithvaa arthavaan bhavathi

Lobham hithvaa sukhee bhavathi.

EMBODIMENTS of Love! "Moham hithvaa priyo bhavathi" (As long as one is proud, men will not like him). Only when he suppresses his pride will he be liked by one and all. "Krodham hithvaa na sochathi" (The man filled with anger will have no happiness). He will be immersed in misery. When he subdues his anger, he will be free from grief.

"Kaamam hithvaa arthavaan bhavathi" (When a man has insatiable desires he will never feel contented). When he controls his desires, he will be truly rich. "Lobhamhithvaasukhee bhavathi" (A miserly person will never feel happy). When he gives up greed he will realise happiness.

Embodiments of Love! Divinity is not easily perceived or realised. It is easy to talk about the Divine. It is easy to comment on the miracles and sports of the Divine. But to understand them in their fullness is very difficult. To look at something evil and shout about it like crows is not a good thing. It is better to sing like the cuckoo over something good.

Tastes differ from person to person. One man's sweet is another man's poison. With such diverse tendencies, how can men recognise the Divine?

The ancient sages of Bhaarith carried out many spiritual investigations and through the study of the scriptures proclaimed their experience of the Divine. The Upanishaths declared: "Raso vai

saha." That is, the Divine is present in all things as their essence like sugar in sugarcane and butter in milk. God is present both in the good and the bad, in truth and untruth, in merit and sin.

That being the case, how is one to determine what is false and what is unrighteous? The Geetha declares: "My Spirit is the indwelling spirit in all beings." The individual who realises this truth will experience samathvam (equal-mindedness).

Duality in life cannot be escaped

But, for people living in the mundane world and concerned with worldly affairs, right and wrong, truth and untruth and similar opposites are unavoidable. Hence, as long as one is involved in leading a worldly life one cannot escape from duality. One's peace and security have to be found in the context of pleasure and pain. One's joy is linked with suffering. Pleasure is an interval between two pains. Life is a combination of light and shadow.

Without sorrow there can be no happiness. Only when you walk in the hot sun can you experience the pleasure of a shady place.

In such a life, it is not possible to experience pleasure alone all the time.

The cosmic process

The entire cosmos is governed by three states: srishti, sthithi and layam (creation, sustenance and dissolutions). The truth of this is beyond dispute by anyone at any time. A Divine truth is conveyed by this concept. Srishti (creation) is the expression of the Eeshvara Sankalpa (Will of God). It is called Prakrithi (Nature). Every object in creation should have the characteristics of Nature. Man has come into existence to manifest the powers of Nature. The powers of Nature are not present in all in equal measure. The man who is conscious only of the physical has a perverted view of these powers. The spiritually-oriented person sees their benign nature.

Prakrithi (Nature) and Chaithanya (Spirit) are one. But in accordance with their varied feelings and attitudes, things appear good or bad to Loka is one of the names applied to the world. Loka is that which has the power of aalochana (thought). In this assembly there are a large number of persons. They are all gathered in one place. But each lives in a world of his own. What is the reason? One will be thinking about an educational problem. Another will be thinking about a job.

Yet another may be worried about his business. Another may be concerned about agriculture.

Others may be thinking about some scientific problem. All these different realms of thought are all exercises of the mind.

The trinity in man

Thus the cosmic process shrishti (creation), sthithi (sustenance) and layam (dissolution) goes on in every human being. Srishti is the outcome of sankalpa (thought).

Sthithi is protection of creation. Layam is the merger of creation in its source. Srishti, Sthithi and Layam are also identified with the three qualities--Sathva, Rajas and Thamas. Man is the embodiment of the three gunas. The three gunas represent the Trinity (Brahma, Vishnu, and Maheshvara). The Trinity represent the Thrilokas (three Worlds). The three worlds and the trinity are present in every human being. The three are to be regarded as one and worshipped as Shivam. What is Shivam? It is the embodiment of Auspiciousness. When man recognizes the unified form of the Trinity his humanness acquires auspiciousness.

In a government there are different departments like education, finance, etc. Likewise in the spiritual field also there are different departments. They are: Srishti, Sthithi and Layam. Each department has a head. Each head has to govern his department on right lines.. There is an overlord presiding over all departments. He is like the Prime Minister in a cabinet. He is God. He is called Allah. By attributing different names and forms to God, Divinity is fragmented in various ways. The one Divine is responsible for the threefold cosmic process. This three aspects of God can be seen in the English word GOD. G represents Generation--Srishti. O represents Organizations-----Sthithi. D represents Dissolution--Layam. GOD represents the unity of the three aspects.

There is a misunderstanding about these three. Layam is considered as destruction or dissolution.

Its real meaning is mergence. O represents organization. It means protection. G stands for generation (creation). Brahma, Vishnu and Eeshvara are three potencies Immanent in man. To understand this it is essential to follow the spiritual path. Spirituality does not mean leading a lonely ascetic life. Spirituality means getting rid of attachment and hatred and looking upon the whole humanity as one. Every one should understand this inner meaning of spirituality.

Shivaraathri is an auspicious night

Man is endowed with infinite potencies. All that you experience by way of seeing, hearing and the like are reflections of the inner being. The significance of this experience has to be properly understood. For instance, today is Shivaraathri day. You experience the night every day. These are ordinary nights. They are nights of darkness. But Shivaraathri is an auspicious night. How is it auspicious? There are sixteen aspects for the mind. The moon is the presiding deity for the mind. Of the sixteen phases of the moon, today in the fourteenth day of Maargasheersha month, fifteen of the phases are absent. On this day it is possible to get full control of one's mental faculties. Hence it is considered an auspicious day. Auspiciousness consists in diverting the mind towards God. This calls for getting rid of the inherited animal tendencies in man. This is the occasion to recognise the omnipresence of the Divine in all beings and in all objects. It follows that whomsoever you adore or condemn, you are adoring or condemning God. You must follow the injunction: Help ever, hurt never.

Every human being has sacred qualities, based on his Shivathvam (Divine essence). Hence man should realise his inherent divinity, though his body is made up of the five elements. Thereby humanness is transformed into divinity. The human birth is intended for the pursuit of Dharma.

Dharma implies harmony in thought, word and deed. When every person realises his essential divine nature, the entire world will be transformed. The body and the mind are mere instruments.

Man's reality is the Aathma (Self). Man should use the instruments given to him to perform his duties well and realise his oneness with God.

Unity in diversity

All the phenomena in Nature proclaim the glory of the Divine. Why foster religious differences?

Let everyone carry out the dictates of the Divine, who governs the universe. (Svaami sang a poem in Thelugu to convey this message). Everything that happens is by the Will of God.

The principle teaching of the Vedhas is that all men should strive together in harmony and share their joys together in amity. Through unity, humanity can achieve purity, leading to divinity. The three great enemies of man are lust, anger and greed. These have to be eliminated. The greatest quality in man is love. Love is God. Live in love.

Bhaarith has been hailed as the teacher for all lands. It is the country which regarded God as one and recognized the unity that underlies all diversity. God is one, the goal is one and all life is one. This unity underlies all diversity. This basic Divine unity is missed in the perception of diversity.

Use every opportunity to help others
Embodiments of Love! At the present moment, in the prevailing situation, what is most essential is the cultivation of love. Losing love, mankind has lost its humanness. Love is the supreme human value. Truth, righteousness, peace and non-violence are other human values. Knowing these values, men are foolishly leading valueless lives. What a pity that men in human form do not behave like human, beings. Rivers, trees and cows teach the lesson of living for the benefit of others. Man should also share the divinity in him with others. Men today are steeped in selfishness.

Whoever remembers the names of scholars and scientists? But millions adore the names of realised souls like Raamakrishna Paramahansa, Thukaaraam, Kabeer and Raamdhaas. Bear in mind four dicta to be observed: "Run away from bad company. Welcome association with good people. Do meritorious acts continually. Remember what is transient and what is permanent." Be with God, think with God, see with God and dedicate all actions to God. Consider all as members of one Divine family. Regard yourself as a trustee and use your wealth and talents for the good of others. Use every opportunity, to help others. Be compassionate at all times. Students in particular should always be ready to go to the help of people in distress.

God today is in search of good men. Every one should strive to be sincere in thought, word and deed. Then you need not go in search of God. God will discover you. You have to develop fraternal feelings towards everyone. Here is an example from the Raamaayana. Once the four brothers as young lads were playing a game with a ball. After the game Raama ran to Kausalya and rested on her lap. He was full of joy. When Kausalya asked him why he was feeling so happy, Raama said that Bharatha had won in the game that day and that made him so happy. Kausalya remarked that an elder brother rejoicing in the success of his younger brother is a great example for brotherly love. Shortly thereafter Bharatha came to Kausalya with a sad look. Kausalya asked him why he was feeling sad when he had won in the game. Bharatha said: "When I was about to lose the game, Raama managed to lose the game and made me the winner. I am feeling unhappy because of the defeat of my elder brother. Is it not sad that on my account my elder brother should lose the game?"

What an example of fraternal love! The elder brother should rejoice in the success of the younger, even by losing the game himself. This is the lesson taught by the Raamaayana. In those days the four brothers were in a supreme state of fraternal love. Today brothers go to the Supreme Court for settling their disputes! This is not proper. Brothers should be united and live in amity. The ideal of fraternal unity upheld in the Raamaayana should inspire the people today.

Students! Strive for the welfare of society as a whole. Experience God through love.

Discourse in Puurnachandhra Auditorium on 17-2-1996.

6. Cherish the glorious heritage of Bhaarith Sarve Bhavanthu Sukhinah; Sarve santhu Niraamayaah; Sarve Bhadhraani Pashyanthu;
Maa Kaschid-Dhuhkhino bhaveth.

EMBODIMENTS of love! The dictum of Bhaarithheeya Culture is that all people should enjoy happiness and prosperity. Bhaarith is the birth-place of spirituality and the qualities of charity and righteousness. It is known for its devotion to peace and security. The adherence to truth practises in Bhaarith could not be found in any other country. This land gave birth to the immortal Seven Sages. It is the birth-place of the first among poets, Valmeeki, (author of the epic Raamaayana), and the Sage Vyaasa, who codified the Vedhas. Bhaarith is the land where Raama established the reign of Righteousness. Bhaarith is the sacred land where Krishna preached the Geetha. This is the land sanctified by the advent of Buddha. It has the glory of witnessing the many incarnations of the Lord.

Unfortunately Bhaaratheeyas are not recognizing the sacred greatness of their country. Bhaarith was the land where at one time there was no one who did not practise dhaana (charity) or Dharma (virtue). These two qualities constituted the main wealth of the nation. Bhaaratheeyas used to utter a prayer before embarking on any act, however trivial. The young boys and girls of today are the inheritors of this sacred wealth. Bhaaratheeyas of today, both young and old, should strive to preserve this heritage. Since ancient times Bhaarith has been the leader of spirituality and holding forth the message of peace and prosperity to the rest of the world. Then and now the Bhaaratheeya ideal has been: "Let all the people of all countries be happy." Fill your minds with thoughts of God Bhaaratheeyas today are letting slip this great, sacred and precious heritage. They are pursuing purely mundane and material gains. Bhaaratheeyas should realise that just as the body can be healthy only so long as the blood is pure, they can have real bliss, only as long as their minds are filled with thoughts of God. Bliss is not something apart. As long as sublime thoughts, noble feelings fill their hearts, they will experience bliss. Every thought arises from the heart. When the heart is filled with love, every thought and feeling becomes loving. Hence, what Bhaaratheeyas should seek is love-filled hearts. Every act stemming from the heart should be filled with love. Every effort should be made to foster this ancient culture of Bhaarith. In the chanting of the Lord's name there is no specific regimen to be followed. It is not governed by differences of creed, caste and religion or by any age restriction. It is not associated with any particular language. It is like a boat that can be used by one and all. It is by the constant chanting of the Lord's name that Bhaarith has been protected through the ages. No other country can lay claim to the kind of spiritual wealth possessed by Bhaarith. Truth is God One of the earliest scientific investigators in the west declared that there is a base for all knowledge, all science and all wisdom. "This is the Supreme Truth. Bhaarith is the original home of this Truth." Truth is God. This Truth should never be forgotten. Investigators elsewhere enquired into the source of all knowledge and wisdom and found that Bhaarith had found that Truth was the basis of all knowledge. Today people are not making such investigations. Crores of rupees are spent on trivial investigations and time and energy are wasted on them. Divinity cannot be discovered by experiments. The different methods of devotion may not directly reveal God, but they show the path to God-realisation. For instance, the sourness in the neem fruit and the sweetness in the sugarcane indicate the presence of the Divine. The basis for all the varied phenomena in Nature--the twinkling of the stars, the revolutions of the planets, the fire from the sun--is the Divine. Nature proclaims the immanence of God. You look with awe at a mountain. You feel ecstatic at the torrent of a mighty river. The sight of a green forest lights you. All these are manifestations of the Divine mystery. All the beauties in Nature testify to the basic presence of the Divine in all things. True meaning of "Know thyself" What is the basis for man? It is the body. All the powers found outside are to be found in the human body. It was for this reason that the sages and the scriptures called upon man to discover his true nature. What does "Knowing one's self mean? A man's real self is not known by finding his lineage, or his profession, his nationality or scholarship. These are all attributes employed in ordinary parlance to identify a person. All these are related to one's body. When a person declares that one is a Brahmin or a young man, or a woman, these terms relate to the body. "Know thyself does not mean knowing all about the body. What is to be known is the Shareeri (indwelling Spirit). It is not enough to know about the Kshethra (the body). You must know the Kshethrajna (the Knower of the Field, the body). Krishna declared in the Geetha: "Know that I am the abode--Kshethra and the Knower of the abode--Kshethrajna." Humanness consists in the unity of the two. The body is essential for knowing the nature of the indwelling Spirit. It is only when the Kshethra (the body) is used properly that the nature of the Kshethrajna (the Indwelling Knower) can be understood. How are the various divine potencies in man to be made known? What are the basic requirements for every person? A mind pure as butter, a heart cool and pleasing as the moon, speech sweet as honey---when these three qualities are developed, Divinity is experienced. When you examine the present state of things, you find the mind is polluted, the heart is filled with bitterness and the speech is marked by harshness. These are not the marks of true humanness.

These are signs of a cruel nature.

Hence, everyone should cultivate nectarine sweetness of speech, a moon like pleasing heart and an unsullied butter-like mind. These are the characteristics of the Divinity latent in man.

Man is a combination of yanthra, manthra and thanthra

To realise this inherent divinity in man the royal path is spirituality. God can be realised by any path. The scriptures indicated the nine paths of devotion for God-realisation and showed that chanting the name of the Lord is the simplest. Whatever form of worship, penance or meditation one may adopt, the foundation is the Lord's name. The entire Rig Vedha is replete with the Lord's name. The Yajur Vedha is a compendium of manthras (sacred sound formulae). Saama Vedha is filled with melody. The human heart is combination of music, manthra and name (of the Lord).

The ancients regarded the human being as a combination of yanthra, manthra and thanthra.

The body is a yanthra (a machine). The life-breath is a manthra. The heart is thanthra. What is the manthra contained in the life-breath? It is "So-Ham". The manthra "So-Ham" (I am He) is chanted by each breathing. 'So' (He) is the sound that arises when air is breathed in. 'Aham...' (I am) is the sound that emanates when the air is breathed out. This sacred mantra is proclaimed by the heart with each breath. To pronounce this manthra the body is essential. If any minute part of the body is affected, the entire system will be affected, just as a defective bolt or nut can make a rocket functionless.

All organs in the human body should be kept functioning properly. Only then it would be possible to rise from the human to the divine level. How is this to be accomplished? By dedicating every action to the Lord. When every action is done with the consciousness that it is done for the pleasure of the Lord, life gets divinised. There is no need for anyone to give up any of his duties or actions in daily life. All that is needed is to perform everyone of them in a spirit of dedication to the Lord.

Devotion without faith is useless

Embodiments of love! For anything that you want to accomplish, faith or self-confidence is vital.

Faith is as basic for spiritual progress as breathing is essential for life.

Today what we witness is devotion without faith. There is a familiar saying that a bull without a yoke, a horse without curbs, a car without brakes and mind without sense-control are. dangerous and useless.

Chanting the Lord's name is essential for crossing the turbulent ocean of life. It is a boat that can carry you across the deeper ocean. In chanting the Lord's name, one should be tranquil, utterly selfless and pure at heart. Ostentation and egoism should be eschewed.

One can follow any of the nine forms of devotion (from listening to total surrender) with purity of mind and in an unselfish spirit. In singing bhajans, there should be no spirit of competition and no cavilling of others. The entire concentration should be on the name and form in the present Kali Yuga the chanting of the Lord's name is the panacea. In Kritha was Dhyaana

(meditation). In Thretha Yuga it was Yajna (ritual sacrifice). In Dhvaapara Yuga it was Archana

(worship of icons). In the Kali Yuga, there is no other means needed for human redemption except the mere chanting of the name of Hari.

The Lord's name can be chanted while you are travelling or before you go to sleep, or while you are doing any of your daily chores. This easy, sacred path has been laid down for people in the Kali Yuga.

Spiritualize life

Today you have every kind of amenity. You have hospitals, schools and other institutions to serve you. The only thing people lack is faith in God. What is the use of having everything else?

Develop faith in God.

It is the duty of students, boys and girls, to foster the ancient culture that has come down to us as a precious heritage. You are the inheritors of this culture. You must enter every walk of life in the world and infuse spirituality in it. Young people are sacrificing their lives in meaningless conflicts. Humanness is at a low level. Demonic tendencies have reared their heads. Young people should counter these forces and uphold the culture and human values of Bhaarith.

If you develop the sense of spiritual oneness of all mankind the conflicts of today will vanish.

Discord has become ubiquitous. At the root of all this is the loss of faith in God. Get rid of jealousy and egoism. Then you will experience the Divine.

Sarva ruupadharam Shaantham

Sarva naamadharam Shivam

Sath-chith-aanandha ruupam Adhvaitham

Sathyam Shivam Sundharam.

All forms of the Lord are peaceful. By whatever name the Divine is cherished in one's heart, that is Shivam--the one without a second, whose form is Being-Awareness-Bliss. When the changeless Sath combines with Chith (total awareness), you have Aanandha (bliss). It is like the union of sugar and water which produces syrup.

The Geetha has declared that the one Divine is present in all beings as consciousness like the current that illumines a variety of bulbs. To be conscious of this oneness is the highest manifestation of love.

Max Mueller's wish

Embodiments of Love! You can have no idea of the greatness of Bhaarith as the land of wisdom, of yoga, of merit and noble deeds. Many foreigners desired to take birth and pass away in this sacred land. The great savant, Max Mueller, wished to be reborn in Bhaarith. He was such a great seeker that he was named

'Moksha Muula' (one who is rooted in liberation). He made a thorough study of the Vedhas. He regarded every clod of earth in Bhaarith as sacred. He regarded everything in Bhaarith as Divine. In Bhaarith unfortunately Bhaarithheeyas do not have the same feeling regarding their motherland. Foreigners are having this blissful experience and are undergoing a great transformation.

The process of change is going on continuously everywhere. A seed grows into a tree, an egg becomes a chicken. But man is failing to grow into the Divine. Instead he is falling into the demonic state.

Mankind should ascend to Divinity

This is not proper. Mankind should go forward from the human to the Divine. Evolving from the animal, becoming human, mankind should ascend to Divinity.

Embodiments of love! Whatever situation you may confront, never give room for religious differences. Whether it is Allah or Krishna or Jesus, God is one. The one Lord has a myriad names. The goal is one. Don't entertain the idea of "my religion" and "his religion." Consider ideas of creed and nationality. Foster the feeling of oneness of all mankind. This is what you should develop on the sacred occasion of Shivaraathri.

Shivaraathri comes once a year. But the auspicious qualities in you are always there. Constant repetition of the Lord's name at all times and at all places is the message of Shivaraathri. I bless you all that you should realise God by devotion to God and by adherence to righteous thoughts and actions.

Discourse in the Puurnachandhra Auditorium on the morning of 18-2-1996.

7. Let everyone do his duty

Anaadhi nidhanam Vishnum

Sarvaloka Maheshvaram

Lokaadhyaksham Sthuvannithyam

Sarvadhuhkhajitho bhaveth

EMBODIMENTS of Love! Anaadhi nidhanam is a name attributed to God in relation to time.

Sarvaloka Maheshvaram signifies that God is the illuminating overlord of all the worlds.

Lokaadhyaksham Sthuvannithyam---He is the presiding ruler of the Cosmos. Who is He? He is the Sun. Time is marked by the Sun. Hence the Sun is the visible manifestation of God. He is the effulgence that is common to all nations, all creeds and all people. Hence Shankara hailed the Sun as "Anaadhi nidhanam Vishnum," the presiding deity for the Samvathsara (year) as the overlord of Time. Samvathsara is the appellation given to the Kaalaathmaka (Time-spirit). Because the Lord is the very soul of Time, Shankara described Him as "Kaalaathmakaaya namah" (Prostrations to the One who is the Spirit of Time).

Time is most precious in human life. More valuable than Time is Praana (life). Man aspires to achieve many things without concern for his life. However great his achievements are man is driven by the urge to achieve more. This discontent is itself a source of satisfaction for man.

All are embodiments of the Divine

Every man has a heart. Every heart is filled with compassion.

However, how many choose to share this compassion with others? Sharing the compassion in one's heart with ten others has been characterised as Bhakthi (devotion). One who does not share his compassion with others cannot be called a human being. Today the human heart that should be full of compassion has become stone-hard. This is man's misfortune. What is the reason? It is because the heart is filled with the bitterness of differences of caste, creed and nationality that it has become stony. All human beings belong to one caste, one community, one nation. All are embodiments of the Divine. Krishna declared in the Geetha: "All beings in the world are a fragment of My Self." It is tragic that man should forget his divine essence and behave like a demon.

What is the significance of the advent of the new year? It is not necessary to wait for twelve months for the new year to appear for one to do what he wants to do. The year is made up of seconds, minutes, hours, days and months. Every second is a new moment in one's life. Why then wait for a year? Every one should strive to render help to the people every second of his life and lead a noble and ideal existence. It is necessary for man to understand the truth underlying this dictum. The eye sees different persons in different relationship to a person the mother, the daughter, the daughter-in-law and so on. Although the eye that sees is the same, the persons seen are different and one's behaviour is to be in accord with the varying relationships.

Distinction between the apparent and the real
The distinction between the apparent and the real (the true) should be properly understood. For instance, it is apparent that the sun rises in the east and sets in the west. But the truth is, the sun is stationary and neither rises nor sets. It is the revolution of the earth round itself at a speed of 1000 miles an hour that is the cause of the phenomena of day and night and the apparent rising and setting of the sun. The relevance of the distinction between truth, falsehood and apparent fact is not limited to natural phenomena alone. It is equally relevant in the spiritual sphere. The quest for truth in the spiritual field provides proofs for the existence of God. In every man, at every moment a divine effulgence is always shining. Man has not taken birth purely for a selfish purpose. He has to strive with others to lead an exemplary life.

In the world today there is unrest everywhere. What is the cause of this unrest? The advent of the new year is viewed by people with apprehensions as to what is in store for the world, what disasters and calamities. There is continual change taking place in almost every sphere, but the mind of man alone has undergone no transformation, pleasure and pain are not the products of time. The year is not responsible for joy or sorrow. People's actions alone are responsible for the good and bad things they experience. The year does not bring any evil with it. Many people imagine that the new year may bring calamities. The year is part of repetitive phenomenon of day and night. Hence Time does not bring in its wake any good or ill. Only human actions account for these reactions. Good acts produce good results and bad actions have bad consequences. As you sow, so shall you reap. New year does not account for anything extraordinary. Good and bad occur in succession in the usual course. A new year does not account for anything extraordinary. However, the Panchaangam (almanac) indicates some changes as a result of the movements of the planets and the configuration of the constellations. The Hindu almanac refers to five factors the day of the week, the thithi (phase of the moon), the relevant constellation, the auspiciousness or otherwise of the particular day and the Karanam (astrological divisions). The predictions in the almanac have no relation to what may happen to any particular person. The Siddhantis (the almanac makers) give their own interpretations of the astrological configurations. Above everything, if one has firm faith in God, one can face the future with confidence. There is no room for doubts as to who is God and where He is to be found. God is Viraata-Svaruupa (Cosmic Form). The whole universe is the manifestation of God. What does God teach? The lessons are given through Prakrithi (Nature) which conveys lessons to mankind. The earth, for instance, is revolving round itself at a speed of 1000 miles an hour. This is going on without rest. This revolution of earth produces night and day. This enables man to have a time for work and time for rest. In addition, the earth is going round the sun at a speed of 66,000 miles an hour. This motion of the earth is responsible for the changes in seasons. The changes in seasons cause rainfall, enable the cultivation of crops and help people to live in comfort. The earth thus is a visible manifestation of God. The ancients hailed the earth as Bhuumaatha (Holy Mother Earth) for this reason. All the essential necessities of life come from the earth. The earth thus teaches man that he should do his duty even as the earth itself is performing its duties. Dedicated action is necessary to reap the fruits. Man should be dedicated to action. Today he does not adhere to this principle. How, then, can he expect the fruits? Men must work. They must perform good deeds and realise good results. They must share the fruits of their labours with others. This is the foremost duty of man. If everyone does his-duty, there will be no room for conflict in the world. This is the lesson taught by the earth.

Karthavyam (duty) is most important. The lawyer should do his duty. The doctor, the farmer, the administrator, the businessman, each should discharge his respective duty. If this is done, the world will have no problems. Everyone should aim at excellence in the performance of one's duties. Then the nation will be prosperous and happy. Today very few discharge their duties properly. Instead of doing their work, they interfere in other people's work. They fail to do their work and spoil that of others.

The year is not responsible for the unrest in the world. Human actions alone are responsible.

Every one should strive to work well and achieve good results. Every one has twenty-four hours at his disposal. If out of this, six hours are used up in sleep, six hours for one's own private concerns and six hours for one's job, still six hours remain. How does one spend them? One should utilize them for rendering social service. One must embark on divine activity. In the present state of the world, if people do not take to divine activity, the conditions will get worse.

Mastery over one's mind is the index of greatness

Today people have forgotten the spiritual, the moral and the ethical aspects of life. They are immersed in the worldly pursuits and in securing mundane benefits. There is no greatness in achieving these things. Once Shankaraachaarya asked his disciples what is the hall-mark of greatness. Each disciple gave his own answer. One disciple said that the man who won great victories in battle is a great man. Another disciple said that man who underwent many troubles and difficulties and amassed large wealth was great. Another said that a great man was one who accomplished by determined effort what he wanted to achieve. Planting one's flag over a territory or crossing a mighty ocean were mentioned as marks of greatness. Ultimately Shankara gave the answer that he alone is great who has mastery over his mind. All other achievements are of no avail. Every action is sanctified by making it an offering to-God.

Shankaraachaarya declared that the one who is immersed in the contemplation of the Supreme Self, experiences the highest bliss, regardless of all other actions. (Syaami sang a stanza from the Bhaja Govindham hymn of Shankaraachaarya). Shankara exhorted the devotee to adore God in whatever situation he was placed, whether in a crowd, or while enjoying something or in any other state. This experience of the Divine is one's true wealth.

Thus, it is essential to perform every action as an offering to God. The impulse for every action comes from the heart, whether the action is good or bad. The heart is the abode of Lord. Hence, every thought arising from the heart and every action from it should be regarded as an offering to the Divine.

Give no room for differences

Today, because men's actions are motivated by concern for one's family and possessions, society is riven by conflicts and differences. People talk about unity but there is no unity. For instance, there are different States in the Country. It is natural for people to have special regard for their respective' States. Karnataka, Tamil Nadu, Aandhra Pradesh and so on. But they should all consider themselves children of one God. All States should be happy. If this broad vision is developed, there will be no room for inter-State differences.

The name of the new year is "Dhaathru." This signifies the spirit of sacrifice. The scriptures have declared that sacrifice is the only means to attain immortality. People should develop the spirit of sacrifice. Thereby they will make the name of the new year meaningful.

Compassion is the hall-mark of Bhakthi

Giving up narrow idea and feelings, people should show compassion towards their fellowbeings.

Compassion is the hall-mark of Bhakthi (devotion). No one can hope to please God without showing dhaya (compassion) towards his fellow-men. A loving heart is the temple of God. God cannot dwell in a heart without compassion.

God is one. The goal is one. People have to change their outlook. They have to develop love towards all. There is nothing greater in the world than this Premadhrishti (feeling of universal love). There are many eminent scholars and intellectuals in the world today who are adept in seeing the diversity in the world. But why don't they try to see the unity that underlies this diversity? They alone are good who see the unity in the apparent diversity. But those who see only the diversity in the One are mere clever intellectuals.

The uniqueness of every being is one of the marvels of creation. No two persons are entirely alike. There are differences even among twins. People differ in respect of talents. But it should be realised that all talents are derived from the Divine.

How are we to recognise unity in diversity? Birth and death are common to all beings. Whether one is a millionaire or a pauper, both are brought forth from their mothers wombs. Hunger and thirst are common to all. The kind of food that is eaten may vary, but hunger is the same for all.

Likewise thirst is common to all. These basic common experiences point to the unity that underlies the diversity. The Upanishaths have emphasized the spiritual oneness of all beings. The life force is one and the same, in all. The Aathma is the same in all. How, then, it may be asked, there are differences in the bodies? These differences are the results of differences in the thoughts, feelings and actions of the individuals concerned. The indwelling spirit is the same in everyone.

Make every act holy

By developing attachment to persons and possessions men created causes for their sorrow. By reducing their attachments and developing love for God, they can reduce their misery and increase their happiness. The more they love God, the more the bliss they will experience. Men are plunged in misery because they hanker after the physical instead of yearning for God. If men convert their desire for material objects into the desire for the Supreme they will enjoy immense happiness. All that is necessary is for them, to see the Divine in everything in the phenomenal world. That will be true devotion. And work will be turned into worship. Make every act holy.

People need not be unduly worried about the portents of the .new year. There are, however, indications that some big changes may occur in the political sphere. Internal conflicts may increase. There will be no shortage of food. There may be floods in some parts of the country and cyclones in some areas. By developing faith in God, some of these calamities may be averted or their ravages mitigated. Men have to realise that they are sparks of the Divine. They have to develop sacred thoughts and lead ideal lives. They 'must seek to promote the welfare of society.

The power of prayer is incalculable

Pray for the welfare of all. The power of prayer is incalculable. Every one gathered here should pray every day for the welfare and happiness of all people everywhere. This is true spirituality.

To render service to others to the limit of your capacity is real spirituality. The body has been given to man for serving others. If one has a compassionate heart, is truthful in speech, and uses his body for serving others, he needs nothing else to redeem his life.

Today the book, "Vision of India," written by Shri Shivraaj Patti, Speaker of the Lok Sabha, has been released. He has been coming to Svaami for many years. He knows Bhagavaan well and Bhagavaan knows him equally. He has a compassionate heart. He is calm and serene. All are aware of the kind of uproar and disorder that prevail in the Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha.

Members have not hesitated even to shout at the Speaker. On such occasions as Chavan observed

(in his speech earlier), it is natural to expect the blood-pressure of the Speaker to go up. But our

Shivraj Patil spoke calmly to every member, giving suitable replies to everyone, and thereby winning the confidence of all sections of the House. He has earned the approbation of all parties.

That good name is enough. Having been born, one should earn a good name. Good thoughts flow from his heart. In his book, he has related all his experiences, his aspirations and his hopes. His book covers all aspects of his life social, economic, spiritual and political.

It is not enough to speak about one's ideals. One must live upto them. Today everyone must develop a compassionate heart and be truthful in speech. Truth is the means to realise God. God is the very embodiment of Truth. Where there is Truth there is God.

Bhaarith in its ancient days of pristine glory achieved greatness by adhering to Sathya and

Dharma. The Upanishaths have declared: "Speak the Truth. Follow Righteousness." Today in their life people must adhere to Truth. Whatever Dhaarmik acts you do should be done in a spirit of sacrifice. Charity is the best ornament for the hand, truth for throat and listening, to sacred things, for the ears. It is such sublime sentiments that constituted the priceless culture of Bhaarith. These eternal verities are being forgotten in the craze for ephemeral pleasures.

Regard every moment as new Embodiments of love! The new year portends nothing to be feared by the common people.

However, for those in high offices and for politicians there are indications of internecine conflicts of their own making. Those who discharge their duties in a spirit of dedication have nothing to fear.

Regard every moment as new Live in the present. Have good thoughts and do good deeds.

Cultivate good company. Act according to the dictates of your conscience. The secret of happiness lies within you, not outside. Pray for the welfare of all. The speakers here requested to bring about peace and bliss in the world. In fact, you are all embodiments of peace, bliss and Divine. Everyone of you should make efforts to develop inner peace individually. Then the whole world will be peaceful. Don't yield to any fear or anxiety. Develop love. Hatred breeds disaster. Shed feelings of hatred. With love, the country and world will prosper.

Discourse in the Sai Ramesh Mandap, Brindhaavan, on 20-3-1996.

God incarnates for the revival of Dharma (Righteousness) which includes morality, truth, virtue, love and a host of other qualities that uphold the communities of man as well as the individual. The other purposes usually given, such as serving the devoted, destroying the wicked, re-establishing the sacred tradition, these are all secondary. For, he who is righteous will be guarded from harm by righteousness itself, he who is unrighteous will fall into disaster through the evil that he perpetrates. The one task includes all else.

Baba

8. Let Raama live in your hearts

Vedha-vedhye Pare Pumse

Iaathe Dasharathaathmajae

Vedhah Praachethas Aaseeth

Saakshaath Raamaayanaathmanaa

EMBODIMENTS of Love! When the Lord, the knower of the Vedhas, took birth as the son of Dhasharatha, Praachethas realised the Divine by writing the Raamaayana.

The story of Raama is the story of one who was filled with the sweetness of compassion. This story is the royal road to human progress and an ideal life.

The Raama-principle is a combination of the Divine in the human and the human in the Divine.

The inspiring story of Raama presents the triple ethical code relating to the individual, the family and the society. If society is to progress properly the family should be happy, harmonious and united. For unity in the family, the individuals composing it must have a spirit of sacrifice. The Raama story exemplifies the ethical codes governing the individual, the family and society.

The Raama story holds forth many ideals. Children today pay little heed to the words of parents.

Parents also show no great concern for rearing ideal children.

The preceptor does not command respect these days. The teachers show little affection for the students. Hatred and bitterness between people are growing. Today's friend becomes tomorrow's enemy. Kinship itself is robbed of its bonds of affection. Pollution has sullied every sphere of activity---business, education, agriculture, politics etc., and caused general degradation in society. In every sphere demeaning ideas and actions are rampant.

In such a situation, the Raamaayana provides the ideals and the examples for reforming society.

Invoke the divine in pursuing aims

The world is presided over by Naaraayana. Naaraayana is under the spell of His name. The name is under the control of the devotee. Hence every person should invoke the Divine in pursuing his aims.

The world today is in a strange predicament. Every step taken by man is tainted by unrighteousness. Falsehood is ubiquitous. Men have lost the vision of great things. All desires arise from selfishness and are insatiable. Control of the senses has become rare. The truth, in short, is humanness has vanished.

On the other, hand, another strange thing is also apparent. Large numbers of people gather to listen to spiritual discourses and speeches by learned in thousands, listen to the talks, enjoy them, but do not practise any of the teachings. The result is that, though there is an abundance of spiritual teaching, disorder and unrest prevail because few people practise what they learn. What crop can you grow on the dry bed of a lake? Though man has recognized the inherent divinity present in him, he does not live according to this belief. Precept without practice is valueless.

Triple Dharma of individual, family and society

Raama is the supreme example of one who observed in his life the triple Dharma relating to the individual, the family and society. When every person in the country observes this triple Dharma, there will be peace and prosperity in the nation.

The sun illumines the world during the day. The moon sheds light during night. But Dharma (Righteousness) illumines all the three worlds at all times. A good son, it is said, becomes a beacon for the whole clan. Everyone should strive to become a Suputhra (good son). It is not enough to have sons. They should be good and worthy sons. Such a son was Raamachandhra.

Even as a jasmine creeper fills an entire forest with its fragrance, a noble son glorifies not only his family but his entire clan. Essentially all human beings are Suputhras (good sons). But their behaviour turns them into bad men.

The author of the Raamaayana is called Praachethas. How did he acquire this name? Praachethas is the name of the Rain-God Varuna. Rathnaakara was the original name of the poet. After he was initiated, he began meditating on the Lord's name and completely lost all body consciousness. An anthill grew over his body. His body was not visible from outside. At this stage Varuna caused a heavy downpour. That heavy rain washed away the anthill, revealing the sage. Because Praachethas was responsible for bringing forth the sage, he got the name Praachethas (the offspring of Praachethas). He also got the appellation Valmeeki because he had come out of "Valmeeka," an anthill. Praachethas became the sacred and immortal composer of the epic Raamaayana, which he gave to the world as a perennial source of inspiration to mankind. Any person today who can get rid from the mind, attachment and possessiveness enveloping him and who constantly meditates on God will become pure and sacred, like Valmeeki. The Divine and the human Every man is endowed with a mind. The mind is a mysterious thing. It can appear totally stationary and yet move faster than the speed of light. Whatever births a person may undergo and whatever changes in name and form may occur, the mind remains unchanged. It follows one from birth to birth. It is the mind's peculiar behaviour. In this context, how is one to manifest his humanness? Man must follow the example of the honey bee which sucks the sweet honey even from a bitter flower. Likewise one must seek the good even in what is apparently bad. There is something good in what is bad. Valmeeki declared that he saw the divine in the human form of Raama. Raama, who was Divinity itself, was seen as a human being. "Maadhava is human. Man is Maadhava." God cannot be experienced unless He appears in human form. Incarnation as a human being is essential for recognizing God. That is why it is said that "Dhaivam maanusha ruupena" (God appears in human form). Raama did not announce at any time that he was God. He declared that he was the son of Dhasharatha. In his speech, though there was humanness, there was also the illumination of Divinity. God is not apart from the universe. The entire cosmos is the very form of God. But man, deluded by his physical vesture, forgets his divinity. All are embodiments of the Divine Raama and Krishna are regarded as Avathaars. This is not so. They are in their human form quite like other ordinary men. All of you are embodiments of the Divine. Recognise this fact and strengthen this feeling within you. The idea that God is different from you should be given up. You have to develop the feeling that God is not different from you. On the occasion of Raamanavami, people hail the advent of Raama and recall his various achievements. But everyone should remember that he is an image of Raama. "Ramayathi ithi Raamah" (One who attracts others is Raama). In every person there is this power of attraction. Because of this magnetic power man is able to enjoy the world. He develops many worldly desires. But he is never satisfied. He derives satisfaction from discontent. That is a sign of the divine power of attraction. There is no limit to this power. Everyone can experience the divinity within him. Difference between Raama and Raavana See the difference between Raama and Raavana. Both were equally eminent intellectually and were great scholars. Raavana was a great man. Raama was a good man. The difference between greatness and goodness should be understood. Raavana, out of egoism and uncontrolled desire, misused his knowledge and brought about his ruin. Raama used his knowledge for the benefit of the people and made them happy. Raavana did not digest his knowledge properly and suffered from the consequences of indigestion. The difference between Raama and Raavana was that between Dharma (Righteousness) and Adharma (unrighteousness). Raama and Raavana are present in each human being. When a person takes to unrighteous courses, he becomes a Raavana. When people pursue the path of truth and righteousness, they become Raamas. Precept and practice should go together like medicine and diet control. Meditating on God one should engage oneself in godly activities. It is useless to study or listen to spiritual discourses without leading a spiritual life. Righteousness means living according to the dictates of one's conscience. Acting in violation of the conscience is wrong. To realise this there is no need to study books. The truths propounded in the Raamaayana are relevant to all mankind. Raama represents the exalted state of the human heart. Raama is the treasure-house of compassion. Where can you find such truth, compassion and grace? All thoughts arise from the heart and lead to actions. Hence for all thoughts, words and deeds, the heart is the source. What should be the condition of the heart? It should be full of Dhaya (compassion). Today Dhavyam (the devil) has installed itself in the heart. The devil in the heart accounts for all bad and for the absence of compassion.

Everyone is responsible for his condition

If men today suffer from restlessness and lack of peace, their own actions are responsible for this state. No Guru or any other person is to be blamed Nor can the changes in the years be blamed.

The year is not responsible for your happiness or misery. You alone are responsible for your happiness or misery. You alone are responsible for your condition and your experiences. Make your thoughts pure. Realise that you are human and that there is the Divine in the human.

Man has the option to pursue the Pravritthi Maarga (the path of external, worldly objects) or seek the bliss that is in Nivritthi Maarga (internal). Everyone is responsible for his condition. It has become a bad habit to blame others for one's plight. One should recognise one's defects.

There is no greater sin than accusing others. One should see the Divine in others. When this attitude grows the nation will prosper. Men have immense potentialities for good or ill. By their good thoughts and good deeds men can transform the state of the nation.

Despite all the myriad scientific and technological achievements of man, it should be realised that human life is impermanent. Death may overtake anyone at any time. Man has all the potencies in him. This truth should be realised by all. Man is the maker of his country or the cause of its ruin. Men promote the prosperity of their nation or bring about its degradation. When humanness is fostered the nation will be prosperous.

Men have achieved many things in various fields, from atom bombs to space travel. They have acquired great destructive power. But it is not realised that by its very nature the physical body is impermanent. The truth should be recognized while the body lasts.

You have to have a sacred life.

Raama took birth ages ago. He adhered to Dharma Krishna came later. He propagated great truths. He led the Paandavas to victory. He taught the Geetha. Where are they now? What has happened to all the proud rulers of the past? How many have taken birth and passed away? Death is certain. But before the end comes, one should lead an exemplary life and serve the nation.

Role of avathaars

Everyone should realise that he is the embodiment of the Divine. We may talk about the avathaars of Raama and Krishna. But your present avathaar is no less significant. All those avathaars came to tell mankind that all human beings are avathaars (incarnations of the Divine).

Having taken birth as human beings men should conduct themselves as embodiments of the Divine (as beings in whom the Divine spirit resides). Recognizing your spiritual reality you should live always in the Aathma-thathva.

Man who should progress upwards from day to day is going down the slope. This is not right learning. Every day you should make the ascent towards the Divine. "I am God. God is not different from me." This is the conviction with which men should live. All are deities"

Some people offer prayers saying, "Sarva-dhevathaa Svaruupaaya namah" (I offer my salutations to the one who embodies the forms of all deities). How many deities are there?

Unless there were many deities, the prayer would be meaningless. The implication of the prayer is: "All are deities." Our ancients used to refer to three crores of deities. What does it signify? At that time there were three crores of human beings in Bhaarith. They considered all of them as Divine beings. Today we have hundred crores in Bhaarith. Hence, there are hundred crores (one billion) of Divine beings in Bhaarith. If you take the population of the world, there are 570 crores of people today (5700 million). All are divine beings.

That divinity is within you. What is the source of the life-force in you? Men today create robots which operate like human beings. But there is no life in them. There is a world of difference between the man-made artificial robots and real live human beings. Today people are attracted by the artificial creations and are not aware of the immense potentialities latent in human beings.

You have to respect the potency of the human.

This was the lesson taught by Raama. He revered his parents. He carried out faithfully their injunctions. Without regard to the consequences, he carried out their commands with love. He had immense love for his brothers. They had unity and harmony amongst them.

Love that existed between Raama and Bharatha

After reaching the forest, Raama sent word through Sumanthra

(who had driven the chariot) as follows: "My brother Bharatha would have returned to Ayodhya by now. Tell Bharatha that there should be complete unity in the family. He should love Kausalya and Sumithra in the same manner in which he would love his mother, Kaikeyi. He should not make any distinction between them. However, unable to bear the pangs of separation from Raama, Bharatha used harsh words against his mother. He did not spare even the family preceptor Vashishtha. Vashishtha approached Bharatha and told him: "Raama has left for the forest. You must get ready for the coronation. As soon as you are ready I shall fix the auspicious moment for the ceremony."

Bharatha lost for a moment the sense of respect he should have for the word of the preceptor.

Raama was the very life-breath of Bharatha. He spoke to Vashishtha in great anguish: "Am I to rule over a kingdom which banished Raama and plunged the whole of Ayodhya in grief? Do not mention the name of the kingdom that sent my Raama to the forest. I have no use for such a kingdom tarnished by a grievous wrong." This was the kind of love that existed between the brothers.

Once, when the brothers were children, Raama came to his mother Kausalya in great joy.

Kausalya asked him what was the reason for his joy. Raama said: "I am immensely happy today because Bharatha won in the game we were playing." Raama rejoiced in the successes of his brothers. Meanwhile Bharatha came weeping to Kausalya. She asked him: "Bharatha! Why are you crying? Raama is so happy over your victory." Bharatha replied: "Mother! I am very sad because Raama deliberately chose to lose so that I may win." The elder brother rejoices over the younger brother's victory. The latter feels sad about his victory and the defeat of the elder brother.

What mutual love prevailed among the brothers! Such was the pure and sacred unity that existed among the brothers at that time.

Raama is within you

Raama was always deeply concerned about the welfare of his subjects. He fostered unity among the people. This is the duty of every one at the individual level. Four qualities have to be developed by every individual: Equality, Integrity, Unity and Fraternity. The individual's personality blossoms when one has these four qualities. A family composed of individuals of this nature is an asset to the nation.

It is not enough if people merely observe Raama's birthday and glorify the Raamaayana on one day in a year. Each one should develop Raama's qualities within himself. You should experience Raama's divinity within yourself, irrespective of whatever name you may bear. From the Aathmik point of view, you are Raama or Krishna.

Do not base your life on the body, It is impermanent. The spirit within is immortal. The body is Karmakshethra, the field of action. The heart is Dharmakshethra, the abode of righteousness.

The human state is a combination of Karmakshethra and Dharmakshethra.

Embodiments of Love! Recognise that there is Divinity in everyone.

Man has all the potencies the power of Aakarshana (total attraction), Prakarshana (the capacity to transmit that power to others) and Sankarshana (the power of self-transformation).

Krishna was considered the embodiment of Aakarshana (the power of attraction) and

Balarama as the embodiment of Sankarshana. The combination of Aakarshana and Sankarshana brings about Prakarshana---- the spread of the Divine power of attraction over the entire world.

Sankarshana (which is one of the names of Balarama) literally means transferring the foetus from the womb to another. The wider meaning of the term is the process of transformation of one thing into another.

What is the Sankarshana we need today? The transformation of the human to the Divine. We should be attracted (Aakarshana) to this process of transformation (Sankarshana). And then this should be spread everywhere (Prakarshana). This is the type of saadhana (spiritual exercise) to which, people must devote themselves and not be immersed in Japa and dhyaana (chanting the Lord's name and meditation).

Give up attachment to the body

Concentrate on developing the firm conviction that you are the Dime. With this conviction you can achieve anything. Give up the attachment to the body. Even scientists sometimes forget their body-consciousness while absorbed in their experiments. If that is the case, why should the spiritually-minded persons retain attachment to the body, which is made up of the five elements and is a container of all foul things.

Giving up the attachment to the body, the scriptures call men to surrender to God. What is meant by surrender? Forgetting the body and thinking of God, that is surrender. Surrender does not mean offering to God your worthless body and your perishable possessions. Such offerings have no meaning for the Divine. People going to Thirumala make all kinds of promises to God if their desires are fulfilled. Does God need any of their offerings? No. Why should God be commercialized? You should seek oneness with God. God will be pleased if you realise your true self. Your happiness is His bliss. Mind is man's most precious possession. Develop, therefore, this sense of Ekaathmabhaavam (spiritual unity). It is the loss of this sense of unity that is at the root of all the differences and divisions in the world today. You have no need to search for God. God is truth. Adhere to truth; follow Dharma. What is Dharma? It is not charity or gifts of earthly goods that constitute Dharma. Dharma means purity and unity in thought, word and deed. Turn your mind towards God. All will be well with you. If you turn the mind towards the phenomenal world, you will experience only misery. The mind is man's most precious possession. Without it man ceases to be human. The human birth has been given to man for practising Dharma. This was the truth demonstrated by Raama. He practised his Dharma. He told Bharatha that the latter should rule over the Kingdom given to him and leave Raama to do his duty in the forest. When Bharatha argued that the kingdom should be ruled by the eldest son, Raama replied that he also had been given a kingdom to rule over. "Dandakaaranya is my kingdom. I shall rule here. You reign over Ayodhya," said Raama. This means, that there is an Ayodhya in the Dandakaaranya and a forest in Ayodhya. "Realise the oneness of the two," said Raama. Such was the equal mindedness of Raama. Let people understand the Raama-principle and live upto it. Restrain your desires. Experience the bliss of the Divine at all times. That is true humanness, which manifests itself when you think of God. Happiness is union with God. How much bliss can you experience if you see God in yourself and in everybody! Let all differences cease. Recognizing the divinity that is present in all, you should foster the principle of love and develop compassion in the heart. Love is God. It transcends all human relationships based on attachment. Develop divine and selfless love which is enduring and infinite. A true lover of God will experience no sorrow. On this auspicious day, ponder over the sacred teachings and develop the spirit of oneness. Discourse in the Sai Ramesh Mandap on 28-3-1996, Raama Navami Day. You have to busy yourselves with activity in order to use time and skill to the best advantage. That is your Duty and Duty is God. Baba 9. Make Swami's words your beacon-light EMBODIMENTS of love! Through the power of speech man is able to conquer kingdoms. Through speech man loses all his wealth. Man acquires kinsmen and friends through speech and loses them also by his words. Through words, again, man loses his life. Words are the root cause of all these happenings. Speech is important for man whether for experiencing loss or gain, prosperity or adversity or pain and pleasure. Life is extremely precious. Time is highly valuable. The heart is tender. The mind is a great possession. Though endowed with all these valuable things, man conducts himself as a mean, ignorant and miserable being. He is unable to recognise what a rare, sweet and blissful thing is human life. The reason is, man, forgetting his divine nature, is immersing himself in worldly pleasures and in mundane desires. Man should realise that he is subject to Time and Time has no respect for wealth or position. Man is devoting all his time to worldly pursuits and the demands of the body. Not realising the significance of time, man leads an animal existence. The heart, which is soft and compassionate by nature, has been hardened into stone by man. Humanness should manifest itself in a heart overflowing with compassion, but compassion has turned into hard-heartedness. The mind is all-powerful. It can see without eyes, hear without ears, speak without the tongue and move about without legs. Man tries to control the mind, but he is subordinate to it. As long as he is subject to the mind, man cannot understand the true nature of the mind. Scholarship alone does not make man a Panditha. Although Raavana was master of a larger number of Vidhyas (types of knowledge) than Raama, he could enjoy no peace or bliss because he did not practise in the right way what he had learnt. Raama, on the other hand, was always blissful because he had fully digested what he had learnt and put it to proper use. Mere scholarship alone does not make a person a Panditha (a man of learning). "Pandithaah sama-dharshinah," says the Geetha. The true man of learning is the one who sees with an equal eye different beings. True knowledge should become an integral part of one's being, flowing in one blood in an endless stream. Ill-digested learning results in the diseases of egoism and pride, as in the ease of Raavana. Unfortunately education today has become a bookish affair, used only for passing examinations and forgotten immediately after quitting the examination hall. People who cannot make proper use of their knowledge for the nation's good, are traitors to the nation. They are a liability to the society and the country. Of what use is it to flaunt one's degrees if the only purpose of acquiring them is to earn a mess of pottage?

Mansur's saga

There was once in Northern India a Muslim called Mansur. From his childhood he was constantly meditating on God. Although he belonged to a poor family, his parents wanted him to have a good education. But Mansur had a pure unsullied heart filled with love and his only desire was to know his true self. When the parents wanted him to go to school, he asked what was the purpose of going to school. The parents said that he should get educated to be able to earn a living. Mansur said: "Mother! Have I to study only for earning a living? Are not dogs, birds, ants and many other creatures able to get their food without any education? Am I to waste my divine life for the sake of filling my belly?" He walked out of his home. He was a young lad, but there was an effulgence in his face. He sought nothing from any one. People seeing the effulgence on his face offered him things of their own accord. One old lady offered him food. The purity of his heart secured for him the food. His pure love was feeding him. Wherever he went, he was declaring: "Anal Haq! Anal Haq!" (I am God. I am God). This corresponds to the Vedhaanthik declarations, "Aham Brahmaasmi" (I am Brahman), So-Ham (I am He). This declaration was treated with ridicule by some persons. The elders reviled him and asked: "You little fellow! How do you claim you are God? How can you be God?" Foolish people ask such questions in this world out of their ignorance and lack of faith. Why should they undermine the faith of others?

Mansur's answer to them was: "I am uttering these words because I am God. There is divine energy in everyone. But some use it for good purposes and some others misuse it. I am using it for good purposes." He went on declaring "I am God. I am God."

Meanwhile all the pandiths (scholars) came together and observed: "We have studied all the Vedhas and Scriptures. We dare not make a declaration of this kind. How is it a young student goes about making such a claim? How did he dare to make such a claim?"

Do not allow your faith to be shaken

It is not scriptural knowledge that confers the courage to make such a declaration. It is the faith in the heart. Whatever others may say, one should not allow one's faith to be shaken. Students should have such firm faith.

The pandiths came together and went in a body to complain to the king. "Oh king! This boy is insulting our scholarship. In spite of all our knowledge, we are not able to declare that we are God. This illiterate fool goes about saying that he is God. How to account for this? Either he is a lunatic or an arrogant fellow." The pandiths somehow wanted to put an end to this. It is the nature of the evil-minded to cause harm even to those who are innocent and good. They make no distinction between the bad and the good, just as white ants make no distinction between an expensive sari and a torn piece-of cloth. People who criticize others are like these white ants.

Mansur's firm faith

When the pandiths complained to the king, the latter ordered the boy to be brought to him. When the King summoned Mansur, he declared: "I am God." The King drew the boy near him and tried to appeal to him in soft words. "Child! you are an ordinary human being. You are illiterate and ignorant. You should not boast that you are God." Mansur replied: "I will continue to do so. I am proclaiming the truth. I am God. You are God. All are God. The indweller in all is the one God.

The Muslims say: 'Allah ho Akbar.' The Christians say: 'God is great.' The Hindhus say: 'So-Ham.' God is one. He is the Brahma-Suthra. He is the one thread running through all beings who are like beads in a rosary." Mansur went on arguing with the King in this manner. The King's words did not appeal to him. He said: "Oh King! You are seeking to divert me to a wrong path away from royal road. This is not proper on your part." Mansur continued to assert: "I am God."

The King got angry. "You are despising my words," he said. He summoned a doctor and ordered him to gouge the eyes of Mansur. "This will force him to remain in one place and he will not disturb others." The doctor took away the eyes of the boy. But he continued to shout in joy:

"Anal Haq! Anal Haq!" (I am God, I am God). The boy was free from body consciousness. The king then summoned a butcher and asked him to cut off the hands of the boy. Continuing to laugh, he exclaimed: "Anal Haq! Anal Haq!"

The people in the audience hall could not bear to see the gruesome sight. But there was no sign of grief on the face of the boy. He continued to laugh. His faith was unshakable. He was unaffected by what others said.

Of what use is education if there is no firm determination? Is the amassing of wealth and secreting money abroad, the purpose of education? No. Earning of money may be necessary, but it should be limited and the money earned should be used for good purposes.

Seeing the determination of Mansur, the King ordered that his legs should be cut off. After this maiming, Mansur died. But the blood flowing from his tortured limbs was proclaiming: "I am God. I am God." The dead body was cremated. But from its ashes rose the cry "I am God. I am God."

This happened three centuries ago in Northern India. The people were astonished at the phenomenon. The king felt repentant, but of what use is repentance after a grievous wrong had been committed?

You should not pay heed to the words of all and sundry, Students should use their power of discrimination and should be guided by the voice of conscience. They should imprint on their hearts, the words of wisdom of the great sages.

Students should realise that no one can escape the consequence of one's actions some time or other. But God's Grace can overcome a mountain of difficulties and sins. Why are you not taking the Sai medicine, which is the panacea for all ills? Ingratitude is a grievous sin

You are the beneficiaries of totally free education in the Sai Institute. The gratitude you can show to the Institute is by your behaviour, as men of good character. Never be ungrateful to those who have been good to you. There is no greater sin than that.

The sun, who is the presiding deity for the eye, punishes the ungrateful by denying them their eyesight. The consequences of one's actions may be felt instantaneously or after the lapse of some time. But they are bound to follow. I seek nothing from the students. All that I want is that the moment they see you, people should recognise you as the fine products of the Sai Institute. By your bad behaviour you should not bring a bad name to the Institute. More than a white uniform, you should have a white and pure heart. You must become ideal students.

The situation in the outside world is appalling. Even tenth standard students are taking to drinks and drugs. The parents are not restraining them. Nor are they setting a good example. When the parents exchange words, the children exchange blows. The parents give a free rein to the children instead of controlling them. The parents are to blame for three-fourths of their children's misbehaviour. A child who had stolen a mango was praised by his mother for his cleverness. He grew up into a criminal and was sentenced to death for murder.

Before the hanging, the man asked for his mother to be brought near him and he started strangling her, saying that she was responsible for making him a criminal. (Svaami related the story so vividly that the entire audience was deeply moved).

When parents allow the children to go astray, some time or other they will suffer the consequences. It has become fashionable in this Kali Age to let the children have their own way.

They fear that otherwise the children will run away or commit suicide. What does it matter what befalls such characterless children? Parents do not have today this kind of moral courage. They go on listening to bad reports about their children and end their lives in despair.

Bhagavaan's grace

Thanks to the Lord's Grace you young people have come to Svaami. You may not appreciate all that I have said at this age of yours. But you will realise the truth of Svaami's words in due course. You have been fortunate to secure something which few others have got. You are discarding it lightly. You are slighting Svaami's injunctions. You do not heed the words of Svaami.

People do not listen to words of the wise, but easily fall a prey to bad advice. Such people, how can they hope to understand Svaami?

Of what use is all their education? (Theugu poem).

They will not listen to good advice. But they will listen to bad talk with both ears! How can they expect to know Bhagavaan? Can an ant fathom the depths of the ocean? Likewise you cannot cognise the truth about Svaami? But you can make good use of the opportunity that has come your way. "Sai has come to you because of your great merit. Arise! Wake up!".

Earn a good name

You are returning to your homes for the holidays. Conduct yourselves well. Bring a good name to your parents. Earn a good name in society. If you have no other work, join in any service activities of the local Sai organizations. Let service be your motto.

That should become your life's goal.

If all of you behave in this way how much will the country benefit and prosper. Promote the welfare of society. Do not succumb to some of the petty desires of your parents. "Oh boy! Get married soon. You will get a rich dowry of lakhs of rupees!" What a shame that parents should speak like this and that boys should give in to them! Should a son be sold for the sake of a girl?

Whether it is ten lakhs or ten crores, do not sell yourselves. You must stand on your own legs.

You must depend on your own strength. Do not be carried away by what others say. Do not become a slave. Be a master. Only then can you be a master over others.

Students! Put into practice at least a fraction of what you have studied. Plunge into society and engage yourselves in social service. Make society happy. Having taken birth in society, if you achieve this much, it is enough. Remember that nothing lasts--the body, the mind or senses. Only one's reputation survives him. This is what Svaami expects from you. If you achieve a good name and bring credit to the Institute where you have studied, you would have rendered great service to the nation.

Four claimants of wealth

Do not become Raavan. Earn a good name like Rama. Do not aspire to become a Birla, a Kirloskar or a Tata. A name earned by merely amassing wealth is ephemeral. Do not sell yourself for money. Earn a good income and make proper use of it. Money earned by sinful means will not last. Either thieves will rob you or the Income-tax department will seize it.

For wealth there are four claimants: Number one is Agni (fire).

Number two, thieves. Third, relatives. Fourth, enemies. These four are after one's wealth. Before any of them deprives of your wealth, you should make good use of it.

Our students should not hanker after money either in the matter of marriage or in regard to a job.

Work, work, work. That should be your sole concern. Become votaries of work. Work binds men to the world. The body is given for carrying out righteous actions. It is not given for enjoying carnal pleasures.

Madhaalasa gave birth to four sons. When each son was born, she did not desire that they should study, go abroad, earn great wealth and acquire name and fame. From the time the child was in the cradle, she taught the child the ideal of Vairagya (renunciation). She sang a lullaby for the child, treating Pranava manthra as the cradle, the Mahaavaakya "Thathvam-asi" (Thou art That) as the bed, Awareness as the cord drawing the cradle. The four Vedhas were the chains for the cradle. Rearing each child in this manner, she sent him to the forest telling him that he will find real rest there.

Janaka and Gaargi

King Janaka was similarly a seeker after Brahmajnaana (the Supreme Truth). He sought knowledge for the sake of Self-Realisation and not for the sake of creature comforts. He held an assembly of sages where he achieved fame. At the assembly Gaargi carried on a debate with the sage Yaajnavalkya. The debate was based on the scriptures. It was inconclusive. Then Gaargi put a question to King Janaka: "What is the mark of a Sthithaprajna?" (a person of steadfast Awareness). The King replied; "He is the one who realises, the Oneness of the Absolute. There is no second." Gaargi said: "If you have realised this state of Awareness, you will be conscious of Oneness alone. You are not in that state now. I wish to realise this Awareness."

Gaargi said: "Oh King! I have one desire. Will you fulfill it?"

"Certainly," replied the king. She asked him to marry her. The king said: "I have only one wife, Sunethra (the one with good eyes).

I don't wish to have any other wife." Gaargi said: "You are a great Inani. You have good eyes and your queen is a good-eyed lady. May I ask what reward you are giving to the great Yaajnavalkya?" The king said: "I shall give him whatever he asks."

Yaajnavalkya was no doubt a great scholar but he did not have total sense control. Yaajnavalkya asked the king again: "Give this Gaargi to me in marriage. Celebrate our wedding." There was a great uproar in the audiencehall.

The great scholars present there asked: "What is the meaning of Yaajnavalkya's request?"

Gaargi then asked Yaajnavalkya: "What is the purpose of a marriage?" Yaajnavalkya replied:

"To have progeny." Gaargi said: "No. The wife is one-half of the husbands----Ardhaangi. This means that she should pursue Dhya together with the husband as a Dharmapathni (a righteous wife). Marriage is for the sake of pursuing Dharma. It is not for enjoying worldly pleasures. Our emperor enjoys carnal pleasures in his palace. The same pleasures are experienced by street dogs. Is that happiness?"

Wealth is not the source of real happiness

Thyaagaraaja asked: "Is wealth the source of happiness or serving the Lotus feet of Raama?"

Students should ask themselves-"Does happiness consist in the acquiring of degrees or getting good jobs or attaining high positions? Real happiness consists in the acquisition of wisdom.

However, till that wisdom is got, one should try to live in the world with morality and integrity.

That should be the aim, while living in the world. Keep your vision on the Divine and lead your life in the world. This is the teaching of Sai. You need not renounce the world. You need not go after jobs like dogs hunting for crumbs. Stick to the job you have and take proper care of your family. Lead an ideal life. Always bear in mind the goal. Students should recognise this and conduct themselves properly. Therein lies true bliss.

In olden days, after the disciples had completed their education and before they entered the life of house-holders, they stood before the preceptor to receive words of advice from him. This was similar to the convocations held these days.

Today some of you are leaving for your homes after completing your studies and others are going for the vacation to return after the holidays. You must experience happiness whether you enter a new life or whether you come back. Do not get into bad company.

As one of the students speakers said, cultivate good company. Avoid bad company at any cost.

Seek good company with all your life. Serve your parents. Help your mother when she goes out shopping. You must confer happiness on the mother who bore you for nine months in the womb.

Do not cause any displeasure to the mother. Be ready to give a helping hand to your father. Don't waste your time in idleness. Engage yourselves in social service.

Those who can sing should take part in Bhajans. Serve patients in hospitals by purchasing medicines or providing clothes, but do not give them money. If you give them money, they turn into beggars.

If you render service in these ways, you will be redeeming your human birth.

Adore God: Abhor the world

Keep your minds always fixed on God. That is the true meaning of Upavaasa, not observance of a so-called fast, followed by a sumptuous feast. (Svaami sang a Kannada song to illustrate how fasting is observed by some people to enjoy a feast later).

Never forget God. Do not believe in the world, which is perpetually changing. Don't fear death.

If you learn to observe these three maxims, you can accomplish anything. Svaami will take care of you. When students complain that Svaami is not talking to them, they should understand that Svaami does not want to talk to those who do not heed His words. If you are good, Svaami will talk to you of His own accord. If you act upto Svaami's words, Svaami will take good care of you. Avoid bad friends. Cultivate good friends. Above all, cherish faith in God. God is your sole protector. Do not trust anyone else. Today distrust of each other has become universal. Esteem

God alone as your true friend. You forget God at your own peril.

I seek your love

Students! I had no intention to speak today. But the Warden appealed to me to say a few words to the students. I have spoken often enough. Even now I am saying the same thing. I seek nothing from anyone. I have not sought anything all these seventy years. My hand always gives. The only thing that I seek from you is Love. My love for you is pure, unchanging and selfless. What is your life worth if you cannot believe in such love? Believe in it. You place trust in doubledealers.

Why don't you stand by the truth which you know? Receive my pure love with a pure heart. Make yourself holy. Live in love. Love is God. Bear in mind what Svaami has said and regard Svaami's words as a beacon light for your lives. With the light of Svaami's advice in your hearts, you can proceed on life's journey for any length of time.

Remember with love God, who is everything.

Discourse-in Sai Ramesh Mandap on 31-3-1996.

10. Srishti and Dhrishti

EMBODIMENTS of Love! In this world constituted by the three gunas----Sathva, Rajas and

Thamas (the qualities of serenity, passion and ignorance), the mixture of happiness and sorrow prevents man from recognizing his divinity. Human existence is enveloped in Moham

(infatuation). When man flees himself from this infatuation, he will experience real happiness.

This infatuation breeds Ahamkaara (egoism) and Mamakaara (possessiveness) which bring about the loss of one's name and fame. One who is filled with ego will be unable to experience love from others. It is essential therefore to get rid of this infatuation.

"Moham hithvaa priyam bhavathi" (one becomes endearing to others by conquering infatuation).

"Krodham hithvaa nashochathi" (By conquering anger one is free from grief). As long as man is filled with anger, he can have no peace. To secure peace and happiness man has to subdue anger.

An angry man may become the enemy of mankind.

A man filled with anger

will not be able to achieve anything.

He will commit many sins

and will be an object of derision.

He will forfeit all prosperity and lose the respect of all persons.

Anger is the cause of total ruin. (Thelugu poem).

The first requisite for a person embarking on spiritual development is control of anger.

Discriminate between necessities and luxuries

"Kaamam hithvaa sukhee bhavathi" (Conquering desire, a man becomes happy). Life is a long journey. Desires are the luggage you carry. The less the luggage the greater the comfort during the journey. Man has to discriminate between necessities and luxuries and confine his desires to what is essential.

"Lobham hithvaa sukhee bhavathi" (Happiness is got by overcoming greed). Life is an ocean filled with waves of pleasure and pain. Man is happy when his desires are fulfilled and is sad when they are not. "Joys and sorrows are inseparable. Joy is not separate. It is the fruit of difficulties," says a Thelugu poem. Pain and pleasure are like the two parts of a seed or the two sides of a coin. People should learn to treat pleasure and pain alike. In fact, pain enhances the joy derived from the pleasure that follows. Pleasure and pain, loss and gain, fame and infamy are inextricably linked in the world. Man's divinity consists in overcoming these opposites.

Unfortunately, man falls a prey to limitless desires and ends his life in misery and despair.

Examine your own faults and rectify them

Man needs God's grace to experience real happiness. But by his own thoughts, words and actions, man forfeits the Grace of God. "See no evil; see what is good."

But men today look at only other people's faults and do not think of their own failings.

Examine your own faults and rectify them.

Here is an example from the Mahaabhaaratha: The preceptor, Dhronacharya, asked the eldest of the Paandavas (Dharmaja) and the Kauravas (Dhuryodhana), to go round the kingdom and find out how many good persons and bad persons were there. Dharmaja came back and reported that he could not find a single bad person in the kingdom. Dhuryodhana told the guru that he could not find a single good person. Dhronacharya pondered over this divergent findings and realised that the outlook of each of them determined the nature, of their findings. Dharmaja, being a good man, found only what is good in everyone. Dhuryodhana, with his evil mind, could only see the bad side in every body. Everything thus depends on the outlook of the person concerned and not on the nature of the things he observes. If one looks at the world with a good mind everything will appear good.

The entire cosmos is Vishnu-Svaruupa (a manifestation of Divine). It is called Srishti (creation).

Prakrithi (nature) is a synonym for Srishti. Prakrithi means creation of the Divine. The five basic elements, which constitute Nature, are in every individual human being. Hence, it is declared that the Lord dwells in every living being. When this truth is recognized, there should be no room for anger, hatred or envy. The oneness of the universe is the reality, though there are a myriad forms and names. The unity that underlies the apparent diversity should be understood.

Communion with the Divine is true Yoga

Embodiments of love! Recognise the supreme significance of the Love-Principle. Today, it is love of the Divine that should be fostered. This love transcends the mind. Various forms of meditation are purely mental exercises. But Bhakti (devotion) which emanates from the heart transcends the mind. Communion with the Divine is true Yoga. All other yogik practices are merely physical exercises.

It is essential to limit one's desires and keep the senses under control. This is the only way to true happiness. The most important organ which has to be controlled is the tongue, which, unlike the other sense organs--the eyes, the ears and the nose--has a double function, speech and taste. The ancient sages practised silence for a variety of reasons. Silence serves to conserve energy, improve the memory and experience the Divine. Restraint in speech and avoidance of gossip and slander are commendable virtues. "Help ever, hurt never." This should be the motto of everyone.

"See no evil; see what is good" is the prescription for the eyes.

Keechaka (in the

Mahaabhaaratha) looked with an evil eye on Dhraupadhi (who was serving as the Queen's maid in the palace of the king of Viraata dhesa). His lustful vision brought about his death. His very name is abhorred by everyone. Likewise, one should not pay heed to bad or evil-minded words.

Kaikeyi (in the Raamaayana) is the example of well-intentioned woman who allowed her mind to be poisoned by the evil counsel of Manthara and was responsible for the death of Dhasharatha

and the bitter resentment of her son Bharatha. Kaikeyi and Manthara have passed into history as infamous characters.

How evil thoughts influence a person and bring about his ruin is illustrated by the story of Dhuryodhana in the Mahaabhaaratha. He always entertained evil designs against the Paandavas.

What was the ultimate result? Not only did he ruin himself but he mined everyone in his clan.

Likewise, Raavana, who was well-versed in all branches of knowledge, mined himself and his kinsfolk by his wicked actions. Innumerable examples of this nature can be found in the Indian Epics.

The three stages to reach Self-Realisation

Self-Realisation should be the Goal of human existence. It has to be reached through three stages: Self-confidence, self-satisfaction and self-sacrifice. Man should regard himself as the master of the body, the senses and the mind. He has to use the intellect to experience his oneness with the divine, the cosmic all-pervading consciousness. The Prajnaana (constant integrated awareness) which is in everyone is covered by the ash of worldly desires. When the ash is blown off, the fire of Brahman (Absolute Divinity) reveals itself.

To give another illustration. There is a tree on which thousands of birds are resting. Their droppings on the ground below the tree make it unusable. How to drive the birds away? When you shout "Raama, Krishna, Govindha" and clap your hands the birds will fly away. Our life is a tree on which have gathered a big flock of birds in the form of desires. The desires pollute the heart. To get rid of desires you have to perform bhajans.

Discourse in Sai Shruthi, Kodaikanal, on 12-4-1996.

The dull and the ignorant will hesitate to be active for fear of exhaustion or failure or loss. The emotional and passionate individuals will plunge headlong and rave for quick results and will be disappointed if they do not come in. The balanced persons will be active because it is their duty; they will not be agitated by anything--failure or success. The Godly will take up activity as a means of worshipping God and they leave the result to God. They know that they are but instruments in the hands of God.

Baba

11. The triple transformation

EMBODIMENTS of love! Bhaaratheeya culture declared from the outset that all people should be happy, that all should enjoy peace and prosperity and that all should lead sacred lives.

Mankind today has progressed immensely in the physical and social spheres. But in the field of morality and spirituality mankind is unable to give up narrowness and pettiness. What is the reason? It is because over many lives men have grown in selfishness. In every effort of man, in every aspiration, self-interest is the driving force. Man has become a plaything in the hands of selfishness. Whatever object he seeks, whomever he loves, it is out of selfishness and not for its own sake. No step is taken without regard for self interest. This intense selfishness has resulted in the total decay of human values. This monster of selfishness has pervaded every field of human activity the physical, the social, the economic, political and moral fields.

Shed selfishness

Hence, the primary endeavour of man today should be to shed selfishness, develop spirituality and realise the Divine. Three basic changes should take place in man. That is the truth contained in the Sai principle. "S" stands for Spiritual change. "A" stands for "Associational" (or National) change. "I" stands for Individual change. By this triple change the nation will prosper. Without a change in the individual, society will not change. Without a social transformation, spiritual transformation cannot take place in the heart.

Because the individual's behaviour has gone astray, society has got polluted. Concern for social good should influence every individual's action. The individual should give up the preoccupation with the interests of his own kith and kin. He must give up this attachment to "my and mine" and aspire for the divine.

Obsessed with worldly desires and forgetting God, man is immersed in misery. Even devotion is tainted by selfishness. It does not stem wholly from the heart. It is only part-time devotion and hypocrisy. All should realise that the Divine is the basis of everything in the universe. Having evolved from the animal, man should aim at realising the Divine. Unfortunately, men today are descending to animality. As a result, peace and order are vanishing from every sphere of life.

What is the use of all the progress m science, if people have no control over their senses and are not aware of the all-pervading Chaithanya (cosmic consciousness)? Everyone should recognise the indwelling Divinity in his heart.

A minister becomes a devotee. In the Tamil land, many great saints have taken birth. Many great scholars were born in the Tamil land. One of the Tamil kings was very fond of horses and sent his Prime Minister to buy horses. During his journey the minister came across a holy man named Thirukannan. He was attracted by the teachings of the holy man. The sage said that all worldly pleasures were ephemeral and God was the only reality. Inspired by these teachings, the minister decided to give up his mission (of purchasing horses) and used the money given to him to build a temple for Shiva. Meanwhile, the king was worried about what had happened to his minister and why he had not come back. He came to know that the minister had used the money, given to him for purchasing horses, to build a Shiva temple. He had the minister arrested and put in prison. The minister was unaffected. He continued to chant the Lord's name in the prison.

Later the king realised his mistake. Recognizing that the minister was a great devotee, he summoned him to his presence and asked him What he had done with the king's money. He said:

"Oh King! I used the money for God. What God had given, I gave it back to Him. Without the grace of God no one can have anything. Without the power of the Divine not a cell in the human can move, not a blade of grass will move. The whole universe exists by the will of God. Oh king!

By a stroke of good fortune you have become a ruler. Because of my bad luck I became a minister."

That minister considered his becoming a minister as a misfortune. When one becomes a minister he should be prepared to use all his energies and powers in the service of the Divine. Only when Spirituality prevails, will humanness blossom. The lotus blooms when the Sun's rays fall on it.

The lotus of the mind residing in the lake of the human heart will blossom when the light of Divinity illumines it.

Maanikka vaachakar's message

The mind should blossom and proclaim the glory of the Divine. The minister told the king: It is out of a realisation of this truth that I offered the money, given to me for buying a horse, to the Divine." The king ordered the freeing of the minister and allowed him to lead a spiritual life after his own heart.

From that moment he started composing hymns in praise of God. He wrote many hymns. This work is known as "Thiruvaachakam." The author is known as "Maanikka vaachakar." His writings are spiritual aphorisms containing the sublimest spiritual truths.

This kind of transformation should take place in every person. Only then will Bhaarath become an exemplar 'for the world. Today men have become worshippers of Mammon. Such persons are not human at all. What use is there in endlessly seeking wealth without securing the peace of mind? Why don't you spend at least a few moments on thoughts of God?

If one spends a small fraction of the time,

Devoted to numerous worldly affairs

And to family, property and possessions,

To thoughts on the Lotus feet of the Lord,

He will have no need to fear the messengers of death. (Shloka)

How much bliss will you derive from devoting five minutes out of the twenty-four hours of a day, to worshipping God?

Prema and Seva (love and selfless service) are like a bird's two wings for a man. He can soar to any heights with those two wings. To cultivate these two qualities one has to achieve the triple purity in thought, word and deed. In addition one has to reduce one's desires. Today enormous money is wasted on useless luxuries while people grudge expenditure on incense and joss sticks.

What folly is this!

Years come and go. What avails the passage of years if there is no change in the minds of men?

Time is precious. It should be used in the service of the Divine. All actions should be dedicated to God. Only through renunciation can man realise the Divine. Today people have forgotten the meaning of sacrifice. Sacrifice is Yoga. Enjoyment is Roga (disease). Make your heart blossom every moment. That is the way to greet the new year. Realise your oneness with the Divine.

My life is love

Promote love in your hearts and share it with others. That is the best form of worship. Love is the only property of Sai. My life is love. That is what I offer to one and all. I go on giving, giving.

But to what extent are you putting into practice Svaami's teachings? Practise silence for at least ten minutes in a day. Meditate on Svaami's teachings at that time. Realise that in this transient world the Eternal is immanent. Hold fast to God. Experience the bliss of union with the Divine.

Make love your life-breath. With love of God in their hearts the ancient sages could transform - even the wild animals in the forests.

On the New Year's Day in Thamilnaadu people prepare a chutney made up of fruits, sweet, sour and bitter and take it as sign of their readiness to meet all situations in life with equanimity.

Sorrow and happiness should be treated alike as gifts of God.

Discourse at Sai Shruthi, Kodaikanal, on 13-4-1996.

I am the embodiment of love; Love is my instrument. There is no creature without love; the lowest loves itself, at least and its "Self is God". So there are no atheists, though some might dislike Him or refuse Him, as malarial patients dislike sweets or diabetic patients refuse to have anything to do with sweet. Those who preen themselves as atheists will one day, when their illness is gone, relish God and revere Him.

Baba

12. The quest for truth

EMBODIMENTS of love! Trees bear fruits, rivers carry water, cows yield milk, not for their own sake but for the sake of others. Equally the body is given to man for helping others. (This is the purport of a Sanskrit shloka with which Svaami began His discourse)

We witness today humanity being racked by innumerable troubles and worries. No administration or authority can solve these problems. God alone can save mankind. Men have to develop Aathma-Vishvaasa (faith in the Self). Thereby they should acquire the grace of the Divine. Humanity as a whole is in need of God's grace. To receive this everyone has to fill his heart with love, render service to his fellowmen and thus redeem his life. Everyone has to embark perpetually on the quest for truth. In every thought, word and action this quest must go on. Truth is not merely what appears as a fact for the moment. It is changeless and beyond time.

In uttering truth one should bear in mind that it should be pleasing and wholesome. It should not cause excitement. It should not cause harm to anyone. Truth that is practised in this way will transcend barriers of caste and creed. Rooted in the spiritual, it is valid universally.

How is the quest for Truth to be undertaken? A distinction should be made between truth, untruth and apparent fact. What is apparent at one moment 'is liable to change at another.

Moreover, what is apparent may not be the real truth, as for instance, in the case of the Sun

"rising in the East" and "setting in the West". The sun in fact does not rise or set at all. It is the revolution of the earth round itself which produces the apparent phenomenon of the sun rising and setting.

Change your vision

To cite another example. The same pair of eyes look at different persons--the mother, the wife, the child and so on. Though the eyes are the same, the feeling with which each person should be viewed has to be different. The mother should be looked with a feeling of reverence. The child should be looked at with affection. The wife should be seen with endearment. The quest for truth in this instance calls for understanding how each person should be viewed in the context of his or her specific relationship.

In looking at the world, man has to change his vision. There is nothing wrong in creation. It is man's vision that has to be rectified. The eyes look at good and bad things, the ears listen to sweet or harsh words. The sense organs are the same. It is the individual who has to discriminate between what is good and what is bad, in using the sense organs. The senses are misused when you look at bad things or listen to evil talk. The tongue is likewise misused when one indulges in bad speech instead of using it to chant the name of God. No one should indulge in abuse or criticism of others.

The search for truth should go in every sphere of life. There is no need to search for God. He is everywhere. He is the indweller in everyone. As the Isopanishath declares: "God is immanent in the entire cosmos.

All names and forms belong to God

God can be called by any name---Raama, Krishna, Allah or Jesus. The same God is adored under different names. The names and forms are countless. All names are His. There is no name or form that does not belong to Him.

"Sathyam, Inaanam, Anantham, Brahma" says the scripture. Truth is infinite. Everything is based on Truth. Today people have to adhere to Truth. Truth is God. The answer to the question, "Where is God?" is: He is everywhere. Today the world is filled with hatred and discord. What is the reason? It is the feeling of "mine" and "thine." Everyone must try to find out the nature of his true self. Everyone answers the question, "Who are you?", with the reply: "I am so-and-so." The "I" that is proclaimed by everyone is Aham, the appellation of God. The inherent Divinity of each person is turned into Ahamkaara (egoism), by identifying the Self with the body. The body is liable to change and decay. It should be regarded only as an instrument for realising the Divine. The breathing process which takes place as long as life remains in the body proclaims through 'the manthra, So-Ham, that the individual is one with God ("I am He"). This manthra emanates from the heart. People today recite manthras mechanically. New year is a sacred day for purifying one's self. Today is New Year Day for Malayaalis. The day is usually observed as a festival occasion. But it should be regarded as a sacred day for purifying one's self. One should get rid of all bad thoughts and fill the mind with good feelings. Hatred should be banished. One should cultivate this spirit of equal-mindedness in facing the ups and downs of life. People should contemplate on God as the embodiment of infinite bliss, the bestower of all happiness, as the transcendental Lord, as the Eternal witness in the hearts of everyone, the One Absolute, immaculate Being, free from the three gunas and the pure embodiment of supreme wisdom. The Lord is described as the embodiment of Brahmaanandham (Braahmik Bliss). This bliss is far beyond the comprehension of human beings. It is infinite and unchanging bliss. The heart is the seat of all bliss. There is a basic difference between the mundane happiness and Braahmik bliss. The former is temporary and is purely physical. Bliss resides in the Spiritual heart of man, which is on the right, side. From this new year day cherish pure thoughts and cultivate good feelings. Each should practise his own religion sincerely. A Christian should be a good Christian. A Hindhu should be a good Hindhu. A Muslim should be a good Muslim. Let each one be a true practitioner of his religion. No one should criticize or hate another's religion. Muslims should not hate Hindhus and Hindhus should not hate Muslims. "All are one. 13e alike to everyone," declared Jesus. The one God is common to all. Embodiments of Love! Whatever you may do, never give up your faith in God. Do not place your trust in the transient things of the world. Regard all humanity as one family. Transcend the barriers of creed, language and nationality. The message of the Vedhas is universal, meant for all mankind. The message is one of unity and harmony. "Let us live together, strive together and rejoice together." Develop this spirit of oneness. Discourse at Sai Shruthi, Kodaikanal, 14-4-1996. Conquer anger by means of fortitude; conquer hatred by love. Do not feed anger with retaliation; do not feed hatred with fury. Meet hatred with your innate Prema; meet grief with innate joy; meet anger with shield of Shaanthi. Inner Peace. You are bound to win. Baba

13. Heroic mothers and noble sons
EMBODIMENTS of Divine Love! For the benefit of others alone trees give fruits, rivers carry water and cows yield milk. Likewise the human body is given for rendering help to others. But not recognizing this truth, man uses his body for selfish purposes. Man today behaves in a more degraded manner than trees, rivers and cows. Man is forgetting the purpose for which he has been endwoed with a body.. From dawn to dusk, he is immersed ,wholly in selfish pursuits. He has no comprehension of what selflessness means. Man considers the phenomenal world as the only reality. People mistake the unreal for the real and the real for the unreal. But the real is the only One And there is nothing else in the universe. This visible universe is made up of three gunas (Sathva, Rajas and Thamas). This is the reason for describing the cosmos as Sthree. The term Sthree has three components: Sa , Tha and Ra . "Sa" signifies the Saathvik quality. This comprises qualities like forbearance, compassion, and love. "Tha" signifies 'the Thamo guna which includes qualities like modesty, bashfulness, fear and patience. "Ra" signifies the Rajo guna represented by such qualities as courage, sacrifice and the adventurous spirit. Every being born in the world has only feminine qualities. Merely on the basis of the physical form, a distinction is made between men and women. The three qualities in the term Sthree are to be found both in men and women. Role of the mother

The term Stthree should not be treated lightly. The Bhagavath Geetha lists seven attributes to the feminine principle' Fame, Wealth, Speech, Wisdom, Intelligence, Fortitude and Determination.

The Mother principle, which embodies these seven potencies, is highly sacred. Wherever you turn, you will see manifestations of the feminine principle in Nature.' When any person goes abroad, the first question that is put is: "What is your Mother-tongue?" No one asks, "What is your Father-tongue?" This shows how much- importance is attached to the role of the mother.

The mother, fosters the child in the womb and goes through all travails to protect the child. There is no greater love in the world than maternal love. Hence the ancients accorded the highest honour to the mother and declared: "Maathru dhevo bhava" (Esteem the Mother as Divine) and. "Pithru dhevo bhava" (Esteem the father as Divine). For every person the first preceptor is the mother. It is from the mother that a child learns its first words of speech, the first steps in movement and many other primary lessons in behaviour. Hence, the mother stands out as the reflected image of Prakrithi (Nature).

Heroic women in Indian history Despite the evidences of recognition of the greatness of the feminine principle, women have been described as abala (the weaker vessel). This appellation is applied to women because of the secondary status accorded to women in the performance of yagnas (sacrifice) and other rituals, though participation together with men was permitted. Women could not perform sacrifices and rituals by themselves. Even charitable and religious acts could be performed by women only in association with their spouses.

Though the term abala is applied to women in this specific context alone, women are not weak at all in terms of strength or ability. We have innumerable examples of the strength displayed by women in the world. As against three potencies attributed to men, women are said to have seven potencies (according to the Geetha). Can you call as weak Saavithri, who made the Lord of Death restore to life her dead husband? Can Anasuuya, who transformed the Divine Trinity Brahma, Vishnu and Shiva into three babies and played with them, be called an abala (weak woman)? Sumathee was a great lady who stopped the sun from rising, because her husband was predestined to die the next morning. Could she be termed as abala?

No. Was Dhruvpadhi, who bore with fortitude for 14 years all the ordeals her husbands went through, a weak woman? Can Seetha, who shared with Raama all hardships of life in the forest and achieved ultimate victory, be called weak? Can Gaargi, who could carry on the debate with the Raaja yogi Janaka is a dauntless spirit, be called a weak woman? There are any number of such heroic women in recorded history. Though physically women may appear weak, in reality they are full of strength. As the embodiment of the three gunas, women are endowed with exceptional strength. Even in the spiritual field women display their boundless capacity.

Gratitude to the mother It is in her role as mother that there is the highest expression of a woman's strength. Every child that is born owes its existence to the mother. Hence everyone should be extremely grateful to one's mother.

The mother is the symbol of the Universal mother and father of the Dime Lord. There is a popular prayer in Sanskrit describing the Lord as everything: Oh Lord of Lords ! You are my mother and father, My kinsman and friend, My wealth and knowledge, My everything.

The mother is the first teacher of speech. The first words taught to the child are Amma, Appa (mother, father). Then the teaching of the alphabet starts. The first lessons are: "Om Namah Shivaaya" or "Om Namo Naaraayanaaya." The teaching of language begins with the teaching of names of the Divine - Shiva and Naaraayana. In ancient times, the mother occupied the place of the first preceptor for the child. Unfortunately, in the world today, what are the parents teaching to the child? They are teaching them "A, B, C, D." Nor is that all. They go on to teach the child some meaningless stuff like: "Baa Baa black sheep!" (laughter). The mothers imagine that they are teaching something wonderful to the children. This is wrong. Teaching of the alphabet should begin with learning the names of the Lord.

Ancient mothers taught Truth and Righteousness This was the way the mothers in ancient Bhaarath taught their children. The ancient teachings exhorted the people "Sathyam vadha, Dharmam chara" (Speak the Truth, adhere to Righteousness). No mother taught the child to speak untruth. No mother would think of asking the child to follow unrighteousness. Their sole desire was to see that their children secured happiness by leading worthy and meritorious lives. Hence, in the attitude towards parents, the children should give the primary place to the mother.

Today, we need to promote such ideal mothers. This is all the more necessary because the modern trends are disturbing. The tendency (among the affluent families) is to entrust the child from birth to a nurse or an ayah. The child does not get the love of the mother. The child has no knowledge of what a mother means.

In ancient times, Queen Madhaalasa was teaching the children from their infancy the greatness of Vairagya (detachment). She used to sing a lullaby while putting the children to sleep:

Placing you in the cradle of Omkaara

On the bed of the great saying 'Thath vam asi'

Swinging to the music of Awareness, dear child,

May the Gods lull you to sleep!

The four Vedhas are the four chains of the cradle.

May your heart be filled with the nine forms of devotion.

Because the mothers in ancient times filled the child with devotion and detachment, Bhaarith stood out as a land of sacrifice, of wisdom, of yoga and contentment. Because today mothers do not bring up the child in this spirit, this sacred land is ceasing to be one of sacrifice and is becoming a pleasure-loving nation. The pleasures are turning into breeders of disease. Sacrifice in ancient times made this country the Yogabhuumi (land of yoga). Our goal should be to become yogis, not rogis (victims of disease).

There may be bad sons but bad mothers are rare

Embodiments of Divine love! You must be prepared to make even the supreme sacrifice for showing your gratitude to the mothers. Even the avathaars Raama, Krishna and others, owed their advent to their mothers. Everyone should pray for sacred mothers who will bring forth good children. There may be bad sons in the world but bad mothers are rare. Most mothers today lament over the bad behaviour of their children. No son who has caused distress to his mother can come to anything good. The Thelugu saying is: "There can be no prosperity in a home where the mother sheds tears." Today we need sons who will please their mothers.

The mothers, for their part, should teach the children always to speak

the truth. When a mother asks the son, "Where have you been?" he should not prevaricate. He must tell the truth and confess his mistakes if he has done anything wrong. Very few children tell the truth to their parents today. Of what use is education for such children?

Today's boys and girls are the future redeemers of the nation. Hence, the parents should bring them up on right lines so that they may be ideal citizens.

Women in various places observe what is called Ladles' Day. The day should not be observed only by making speeches or holding bhajans. They should endeavour to help the poor and the destitute. Helpless women who have no means of livelihood should be taught some occupation like tailoring to enable them to earn an income. Slum dwellers should be helped to keep their huts dean. The environment also should be cleaned to help the children grow in a pure atmosphere. Proper housekeeping should also be taught to those people. Disease is caused mainly by unhygienic surroundings. Moreover the air, the water, the mind, everything is polluted.

This pollution is causing several, new types of diseases.

Example of Vidhyaasaagar

In the past, mothers used to play a big part in moulding their children. For instance, there is the example of Eshvar Chandhra Vidhyaasaagar. He was a native of Calcutta. He justified his name by being a great scholar (Vidhyaasaagar means ocean of knowledge). He belonged to a very poor family. His mother brought up her son at the expense of her own food. Pursuing his studies under the most adverse circumstances, he completed his education and found a job on a salary of

Rs. 50 per mensem. In due course, he rose to an eminent position by dint of hard work.

One day he approached his mother and said: Mother, I have reached an eminent position thanks to your blessings and guidance. I am now able to fulfill any of your wishes." The mother said:

Not yet, my son. I have three desires but I shall tell them in due course." Reaching a still higher position after sometime, Eshvar Chandhra renewed his appeal to his mother. The mother said:

Our village is poor and the village has no school. Please set up a school here so that the children will not have to go outside for their education. That school will be an ornament for me." The son carried out her wish.

Later, the mother revealed her second wish. She wanted Eshvar Chandhra to set up a small hospital in the village to serve the villagers. She said this would be her second ornament she wanted from him. He set up a hospital as desired by his mother. In the following years, Vidhyaasaagar rose to greater eminence, but remained as humble and free from conceit as ever.

He asked his mother what her third desire was. She said that he would build a small rest house (choultry) for travellers passing through the village to stay. Vidhyaasaagar built a small community hall in the village.

Today's educated persons get puffed up over their petty educational attainment. It was his mother's teachings which made Vidhyaasaagar practise humility. Not penance, not rituals, not pilgrimages
Are of any avail in crossing
The ocean of human existence.
Only service to the good
Can take one across. (Sanskrit shloka).
Service is most important, It helps to promote humility and to further the oneness of mankind.

No room should be given for ostentation. True devotion is free from exhibitionism.

Children should recognise the supremacy of maternal love, which is equal to Divine Love.

Revere and love the mother. That is the meaning of Mother's Day. The parents are living symbols of God. Children must make them happy.

Discourse in Sai Ramesh Mandap on 6-5-1996.

The most direct method of achieving spiritual success is Nishkaama karma, action without any attention or attachment to 'the fruit therefrom, action as duty, action as dedication, action as worship.

Baba

14. Message of the Avathaars and the Epics

EMBODIMENTS of Love! This vast cosmos, consisting of moving and unmoving objects, is permeated with Truth. All names and forms are founded on Dharma (Righteousness). Dharma is the form of God. The Aathma (Spirit) which is present in the subtlest of the subtle and vastest of the vast as a witness, is verily the Brahman (all-pervading Consciousness).

All the objects in the universe are made up of atoms. The atom is the embodiment of the Aathma (Spirit). Hence there is no place in the universe without the Aathma or Brahman.

Forgetting the spiritual basis of the universe man gets entangled in misery through his worldly attachments. It was out of a recognition of this truth that Buddha declared: Everywhere there is sorrow. Everything is momentary and everything is perishable." To consider the worldly things as permanent is the cause of sorrow.

If man recognizes that the world is permeated by the Brahman, which is all bliss, he will free himself from the cause of sorrow. He fails to recognise the divinity that subsumes the whole of Prakrithi (Nature or the phenomenal Universe). Instead, he regards the Divine as a natural phenomenon and though the workings of the Divine can be seen in Nature, man in his folly falls to recognise the Divine. Nature in its myriad forms is the effect. God is the cause. The entire cosmos is a manifestation of cause and effect. Hence the universe is a manifestation of the Divine.

See the divine in every human being

Man should realise that the five basic elements which constitute the fundamental stuff of the universe are common to all mankind and should be enjoyed as such. He should see the divine in every human being. This was the purport of the prayer: Buddham Sharanam Gachchaami (I seek my refuge in the Buddha). The second prayer is: Sangham Sharanam Gachchaami (I seek refuge in the Sangha). The implication of this prayer is that, after getting enlightenment, one should enter society (to serve it).

The third prayer is: Dharmam Sharanam Gachchaami (I seek refuge in Dharma). The meaning of the prayer as a whole is that for the sake of upholding Dharma (Righteousness), one should use one's Buddhi (the enlightened intellect) and engage himself in social activity. Possessing intelligence, if a person does not do social service, how can he uphold Dharma? It has been said that man had been given a body essentially to pursue Dharma.

Non-violence is the first dharana

The observance of non-violence has been described as the highest form of Dharma. All the violence in the world today is due to the fact that people do not lead righteous lives. People do penance and perform various kinds of rituals, but they have secured no peace. Why? Because they have not sought to find out who they really are.

This enquiry should lead to the realisation that one is the Divine in human form and deeming the body as the basic reality, men are misusing the body and the talents and qualities given to them.

They are failing to recognise how to use their endowments for redeeming their human birth.

Among the teachings of the Buddha to the world the foremost was Ahimsa (not causing harm to anyone). Non-violence is not merely refraining from inflicting injuries on others with one's limbs or weapons. Non-violence has to be practised with Thrikarana Shuddhi (purity of mind, tongue and body). There should be no ill-feelings which is a form of violence. To cause harm to others through the body is also Himsa (violence). No one should be harmed even by speech. The speech should be sweet, pleasing and wholesome. All actions should be helpful to others. "Buddha laid down three rules for all actions. All acts done by the hands should be good. The proper ornament for the Kantham (throat) is truth. For the ears the best ornament is listening to sacred lore. What other ornaments does anyone need?" (Sanskrit shloka).

What are people doing today? They are listening to what is undesirable. They are looking at ugly scenes. How, then, can they hope to get peace? Only by the harmony of the mind, the heart and the tongue. There should be unity in thought, word and deed. Bhajans and Sathsang should make one purer. Despite all the teachings, no real transformation is taking place in the behaviour of man. Of what use are Bhajans and Sath-sang (the company of the good) if one does not become purer?

Through the company of the good, one should cultivate good thoughts, which in due course will lead one to Jeevan Mukthi (Self-realisation in this very life). Men should act according to the dictates of their conscience, which can discriminate between right and wrong. They should rise above animal tendencies and realise the glory of human birth. Men should lead ideal lives, manifesting their inner divinity. Everything they do, their speech and their manners, should be exemplary. Even the smallest act should cause no harm to others.

Men today get easily enraged. Where can we find the example for such anger? In the Bhaagavatham. Likewise where can we find an example for Desire or lust? In the Raamaayana.

Where is the example for the evil quality of greed? It is in the Mahaabhaaratha. How do these great works contain warnings against three grievous evils? In the Raamaayana, the all-powerful Raavana, a great scholar well versed in the 64 types of knowledge and one who had performed severe penances, was destroyed because of the one evil quality of Kaama (lust). All his other virtues were burnt up by the fire of sensuous desire. Kaama (lust) is destructive of all other good qualities in a man. Raamaayana demonstrates this truth.

In the Bhaagavatham we have the story of Prahlaadha and Hiranyakashipu. Prahlaadha was a great devotee of Vishnu. His father, Hiranyakashipu, hated Vishnu. In his uncontrollable hatred of the Lord, he did not hesitate to subject his young son to the most terrible ordeals. His Krodha (anger) was the cause of his destruction. In the Mahaabhaaratha, Dhuryodhana stands out as the example for the evil quality of lobha (greed). He declared that he would not part with even a needle-point of land to the Paandavas (who were his cousins). His greed turned him into a totally wicked person.

Bounden duty of all to get rid of evil qualities Raavana, Hiranyakashipu and Dhuryodhana were not men of common clay. They were all eminent in their own way. They were heroes by virtue of their accomplishments. But they proved zeroes in their lives because of their specific vices. What use is there in possessing great talents if one is subject to a grievous vice? Raavana had numerous abilities and had made Lanka veritable paradise. But of what avail were all these when he had no Control over the sense?

It is the bounden duty of every human being to get rid of his evil qualities and foster his good qualities.

Avathaars and Dharma The role of every Avathaar (incarnation of the Divine) is to establish the reign of Truth and Righteousness, banish all that is evil, false and unrighteous in the world, and help to manifest the divinity in mankind.

It was to establish the reign of righteousness Dharma samsthaapana--that the advent of the Raama Avathaar took place. No one should go back on his plighted word. There is no greater Dharma than Truth. In order to uphold the promises given by his father, Raama chose to go in exile to the forest.

Likewise, in the Krishna Avathaar, the Lord declared: "I incarnate from age to age to establish Dharma."

When you listen to these declarations, it will be clear that Dharma is the supreme ideal. What is Dharma? Any act that is done with purity in thought, word and deed is Dharma. But, how many act up to this dictum? Very few understand or live upto it. Practice is primary.

The history of Bhaarith is replete with stories of the great men who have upheld Dharma.

Buddha also had to face criticisms from his contemporaries. These are the familiar experiences of all Avathaars. No incarnation was free from calumny. All good causes also suffer from criticisms. Peace and good result from the work of the, Avathaars in spite of these attacks and impediments.

The following is the fourfold formula for all people. Welcome good company. Eschew all association with the evil minded. Perform meritorious acts ceaselessly. Always discriminate between the transient and the everlasting. Buddha's first teaching was, "give up bad company." In his wanderings Buddha used to take with him some young men. Some persons criticized Buddha, charging him with spoiling the young men. Buddha gave a free rein to his traducers. He listened quietly to their accusations and left without uttering a word in reply. When the disciples asked him why he chose not to reply to the criticisms Buddha said that unanswered criticisms return to the critics who made them.

By not getting excited over the angry words of a critic, one becomes superior to the critic.

Otherwise, one descends to the same level as the critic. Bear no ill-will towards anyone. That is the golden rule indicated by the Geetha. Buddha carried on his mission in this spirit of equanimity and tolerance.

Animating principle of Avathaars is infinitely wide. It is the quality of great men to face obstacles and opposition with courage and calmness. It is not easy to understand the inner urges of great men or the motives and actions of Avathaars. The animating principle of Avathaars is infinitely wide. Compared to it, the capacity of the ordinary man is infinitesimal. How can the atom comprehend the infinite? Can an ant measure the depth of the ocean? Impossible, Likewise the nature of Divinity is beyond human comprehension.

Even the great sages like Vasishta and Vaamadheva could have no full understanding of the divine.

Instead of trying to understand the Divine, it is better to practise what you have learnt. Inaathum,

Dhrashtum, Praveshtum (know, perceive and commune) are the three which draws the divine towards them. The bhajans should be sung with complete obliviousness of the body. Devotional fervour is more important than musical skill. The ladies who took part in the bhajans in the morning sang the bhajans whole-heartedly. Their hearts were full of sweetness. Hence sweet music flowed from their hearts.

It is significant that a large number of devotees from Sri Lanka should celebrate their national festival of Buddha Jayanthi at Brindhaavan in the presence of Svaami. It is their good fortune that they have been able to have this celebration here despite all discomforts and inconveniences.

Their bhajans have sustained them in these celebrations. They have been singing the bhajans at all places and as often as they could. They could find happiness and peace because of the bhajans.

Discourse in Sai Ramesh Mandap on 15-5-1996.

Sai is Sarvajanapriya and so any name which gives you joy, you can take up. Tastes differ according to temperament and the character one has earned by generations of activity as a living being in this world.

Baba

15. Bhagavaan Baba's exhortation to students

Brahma Vidhya is the means by which

One learns the way to achieve world peace

And live in harmony with all,

Eschewing narrow ideas, and cultivating unity.

EMBODIMENTS of love! Dear Students! Boys and Girls! The main aim of a student should be to mould himself in such a way that he leads a purposeful and useful life in society. Unfortunately in the educational system today, there is no strength of purpose, no unity and no love. Whether one learns anything or not, whether one leads a meaningful life or otherwise, one's span of life melts away like a block of ice. Students should recognise this truth. Students today are not aware of what is the primary goal of life. They do not seem even to be worried about this. One in a million seems to be concerned about knowing the primary purpose of life. This concern is the first step in the ascent towards the goal.

Most students and the common people in general think that food, clothes, shelter and sleep, having a wife and children and enjoying material comforts of various kinds constitute the goals of life. However, these are not the primary purpose of life. Without knowing this, life becomes a saga of misery. With the awareness of this purpose, man can get rid of that misery.

Transcend beyond negative impulses

In this context, it is necessary to know the proper meaning of Vedha. Vedha is described as higher Vijnana (knowledge), as effulgence or knowledge of one's transcendental reality --

Uniki. It is only when these three are known that one can get rid of sorrow and experience the bliss of Vedha.

What is the effulgence that is meant here? Is it the effulgence of the sun or the moon or the light of a lamp? No. It is the effulgence of the heart that is implied.

What, again, is meant by the term Vijnaana? Is it the science of physics or worldly knowledge?

No. Vijnaana refers to knowledge about the functioning of the heart.

What is meant by "Uniki?" It is recognition of one's true nature. Are you the body? Are you the mind? Are you the senses or any other substance? No. Man has to realise that he transcends all these physical characteristics which are negative in nature, How can he realise his true transcendental positive nature if he fills himself with negative tendencies? What he can experience will be confined to the reactions and reflections of these negative factors and not that which is beyond them.

The first requisite, therefore, is the eradication of the negative impulses. One should investigate the truth about the divinity inherent in humanness.

Need for gratitude

What is it that one should do in this mundane, transient phenomenal world? The students should realise what everyone owes by way of gratitude to every person that has helped him in one way or another. For instance, if a doctor has cured a patient of a serious ailment, he should not forget what he owes to the doctor by way of gratitude. He should not think that after all the doctor has done his duty. Likewise, when a mother bears the child in the womb for nine months and rears

the child with love and concern, the child when he grows up should not merely consider that the mother has simply, done her duty. He should be ever grateful for all the travails the mother has gone through and for all the love and care she has bestowed on the child.

You have to show towards the mother the same love and spirit of sacrifice with which she has brought you up. Similarly you have to be grateful to one who enables you to earn a living when you are without the means of livelihood.

In the love of a mother for the child or the affection of a preceptor to the pupil, there may be an element of self-interest. But there is no selfishness in the bounties which the divine showers on mankind. God has no self-interest or selfish purpose to be-achieved. He expects no return from anyone. God is conferring on mankind countless benefits which no human being can offer. Can all the man-made lamps in the world equal the light coming from the sun? Can all the pumps you may install produce the amount of water that came down in last night's downpour? 'Who has given you the life-giving air that pervades everywhere?

Various benefits conferred by God on mankind

Thus, innumerable superhuman benefits are conferred by God on mankind. Even electricity is an expression of the Divine. From magnetism to electricity, heat and light, all these various forms of energy are considered as different forms of matter. This is not so. God is the source of all energy.

If this is not realised, we will be failing to appreciate the true source of the air we breathe, the light we enjoy and the heat that sustains life.

For the power we consume or the water we use, charges have to be paid for their supply. That being the case, do not we owe gratitude to the Divine who has provided the world with air, water and light free? As the beneficiaries of the benefits provided by the five basic elements (ether, air, fire, water and earth), we should show our gratitude to them as manifestations of the Divine. The five elements are the source of five qualities experienced by the five senses: Sound, Touch, Vision, Taste, and Smell. Man makes use of these five elements but shows no gratitude to them.

Gratitude should be an essential quality in man.

Unfortunately this is not very evident in man today. Everything is treated lightly. The result is disorder and discontent in the nation.

Every action has its reaction

Students should understand the relationships between cause and effect. Every action has its reaction. Every word has its resound. Every thought has its reflection in one's conduct. No one can avoid the consequences of one's actions.

Man is a reservoir of all potencies. The eternal principle of divinity is present in man, but he is not able to recognise it as he is deluded by the external world. A man produces a brilliant diamond out of piece of rugged rock, but more value is given to the diamond than to the man who fashioned it.

The educational system today has failed to bring out the spiritual effulgence in man. This really means that man is oblivious to his own real nature. Students have not learnt to use their faculties in the right way. They rely on others for forming their opinions. This is a kind of blindness. Of what use can such persons be to the society? Students should equip themselves to serve society and to promote its well-being.

Students might know about some of the great intellectuals of Bengal like Bipin Chandra Paal, Rabindranath Tagore, Aurobindo Ghosh and others. But very few remember them today except through books. But the name of an almost illiterate person like Svaami Raamakrishna Paramahansa is remembered and cherished by millions because of his spiritual eminence.

Education which is not based on ethics, morality and spirituality is utterly worthless. All education, all wealth, all ritualistic worship or penances are of no value without genuine devotion to God. Devotion can elevate the lowly to the highest level. Without faith in God, even an eminent person gets degraded.

The culture of Bhaarat lays stress upon ethics, righteousness and spirituality. True culture consists in the recognition of the unity that underlies the diversity in mankind. The basis of that culture is love, which is essentially divine. Love is a much abused word today. What is called love is only attachment of different kinds based on relationships. Culture and spirituality are not different. Love of the Divine is the only pure, unsullied, unchanging, enduring love. It is free from the taint of selfishness and self-interest. This is the love that is glorified in Bhaaratheeya culture. There should be no unfair comparisons between different cultures. All of them essentially are one.

What is important is people should learn to live and strive in harmony for achieving things in common and sharing their benefits equally. This is the attitude that should be promoted among students in educational institutions.

Students should also develop steadfast faith in God so that they can face with fortitude any of the vicissitudes of life. Prahlada is a supreme example of such faith. He bore with calmness and faith in the Lord all the persecutions to which he was subjected.

Culture and spirituality are not different from each other. Ekaatma bhaava (Oneness of spirit) is culture. Students should combine spiritual education with academic studies. Moreover, cultivation of good conduct is equally important.

Good behaviour should be maintained even after leaving college. Students of the Sai Institute should bear the stamp of morality and good behaviour wherever they go. They should act according to their conscience. Students should prove themselves exemplary citizens.

The Vice-Chancellor has requested that from this evening I should give discourses on the Raamaayana during this summer course. Every syllable in the Raamaayana is relevant for us today. It is pregnant with moral and spiritual teachings. Humanity will be redeemed when the lessons of the Raamaayana are learnt and put into practice.

Discourse to the Summer Course in Indian Culture and Spirituality on the morning on 20-5-1996, in the Institute Auditorium, Brindhaavan Campus.

Develop Prema (Love) towards the Lord, the Parama-Prema (Highest Love) of which He is the embodiment. Never give room for doubts and hesitations, for questions, to test the Lord's Prema. Baba

16. Infinite potency of the Raama principle
EMBODIMENTS of Divine Love! Man is endowed with all potencies. Forgetting the divinity inherent in man, people behave as if the body, the physical instruments, is everything. The truth about man is taught as a secret in the Raamaayana. In the following discourse in this series you will learn more about Raama, Lakshmana, Bharatha, Kausalya, Seetha and other characters in the Raamaayana. Only then the true significance of the Raamaayana will be properly understood.

The Spirit that is the indweller in all of them, is one and the same. Because they appear in different forms they are considered different.

Embodiments of Love! The Raama Principle is a mystery. There is nothing that cannot be accomplished in this world with faith in the Raama-thatva (Raama Principle). It is a mighty force. That is the reason why the Raama Principle has survived in the hearts of Bhaaratheeyas even after thousands of years. Despite the efforts of foreign conquerors, this faith in the Raama Principle has remained firm. It remains as fresh as ever. It is infinitely mysterious. It is present in everyone. It survives as the imperishable nectar though the form went out millennia ago. We should not go by name and form alone. The Raama principle has infinite potency. Its true form is beyond description. The Raama Principle continues to illumine and inspire the hearts of men.

When students grasp this truth, they will understand what is meant by maanavathvam (humanness).

Do not mistake the cotton fruit for the mango

If you wish to lead an ideal human life, you have to follow the example of the avataars (Divine advents). Avataars can come in human form. But you should not be misled by this phenomenon. Avataars may appear in human form, but you should not equate yourself with them. In physical form both may appear alike. But there is a fundamental difference. You should not mistake the cotton fruit for the mango. God comes in human form because man has strayed away from the path of righteousness. To reform man and bring him back to Dharma, God has to take the human form. Birds, beasts and insects lead lives according to their specific nature. They do not need avathars. Today, only man has given up all righteousness, forgotten his divine essence and degraded his humanness. To reform man in this state, God has to come in human form. The avathar has to protect the good parithraanaaya saadhuunaam reform the erring and punish the wicked. The role of the avathar will be explained in detail in the ensuing discourses. Raamaayana has life-giving message for all. The Raamaayana should not be treated merely as the story of Raama. It has a life-giving message for every human being. People lead artificial lives today. When they understand the Raamaayana they will know how to lead true lives. The first requisite is to know what is right. Then it has to be practised. There is no meaning in merely repeating the name, "Raam, Raam, Raam." The Raama Principle has to be fully understood. And one has to live up to it. This is possible only if there is love. Through love, one realises the Raama Principle and is transformed into an image of Raama. All scholarship and religious observances are of no value without such a mental transformation. The mind should be divinised. Faith in the name of the Lord is the basis for this transformation. Discourse in Sai Ramesh Mandap on the evening of 20-5-1996. 17. Greatness of Vibheeshana THE lives of two noble, meritorious and righteous personalities stand out in the Raamaayana. One is Sugreeva. The other is Vibheeshana. The lives of these two are very sacred. Raama sought the association with Sugreeva. Vibheeshana came seeking Raama only. After securing the friendship of Raama, Sugreeva realised the greatness of Raama. But Vibheeshana realised the compassionate nature of Raama even before coming to him. Raama was supremely pleased that he had been able to secure such noble friends. The Mahaabhaaratha war lasted 18 years, but the war in Lanka between Raama and Raavana lasted 75 days. These battles have become memorable. But even today in the heart of every individual the Kurukshethra battle is being fought between the forces of evil (as represented by the Kauravas) and the forces of God (as represented by Paandavas). Equally the battle between Raama and Raavana is going on symbolically in everyone. This means that the war between truth and falsehood, between good and evil, is a perennial one. In the battle in Lanka many died on both sides. I do not relish dilating on wars. What we should seek to understand is the nature of the forces ranged against each others, what forces stood for truth. Even among Raakshasas there are good people. Even in Lanka (ruled by Raavana) there was no lack of good people. While the battle was going on, one Raakshasa woman was running along, carrying a child in her arms. Hit by an arrow released by Lakshmana the child fell from her arms. Abandoning the child to its fate the woman continued to run. Seeing this Lakshmana remarked to Raama: Brother! look at the callousness of these Raakshasas. Without caring for the fate of her infant child, the Raakshasa woman is running away to save herself." The all knowing divine Raama told Lakshmana: Lakshmana! you are making a mistake. That woman is not selfish. She is full of devotion." Immediately Lakshmana sent a monkey to fetch the woman. He asked her: How is it you went on running, caring only for your own safety, without bothering about the fate of the child that fell from your arms?" The woman replied: I was not running for the sake of saving myself. It is not as if I had no love for my child. I am clinging to my life with the sole desire 'to serve Raama if he takes us to Ayodhya after the destruction of Raavana. I pray for the advent of Raamaraajya. I want to serve Raama." Then Raama remarked: Do you see, Lakshmana, how mistaken you were? Even among Raakshasas there are good people. Vibheeshana is the supreme example. Such persons do not need any protector. They are protected by their own Righteousness." The next day, the battle started in the morning. Both sides blew their trumpets. That day Raavana's son Indrajith used all his magical powers to inflict injuries on the monkey hordes. Vibheeshana knew well the wizardry of the Raakshasas. He shattered all the special missiles used by Indrajith and infused courage among the monkeys. Noticing this, Raama observed: When Vibheeshana came to me seeking asylum, all kinds of objections were raised against our accepting him as one of us. Do you see how helpful he is to us now?"

Indhrajith and Vibheeshana in the battlefield

Indhrajith began performing a yajna to destroy Raama, and Lakshmana. Earlier, in the battle between Indhrajith and Lakshmana, the latter had fallen unconscious after being hit by Indhrajith's Asthra (missile). Lakshmana regained consciousness after the application of a herb from the Sanjivini mountain brought by Hanumaan from the Himaalayas. Lakshmana resumed the battle with Indhrajith, carrying himself on the shoulders of Hanumaan. Vibheeshana took both of them to the place where Indhrajith was performing his Yajna. Indhrajith was offering many human beings as sacrifice at the Yajna that was being performed at the foot of a blackberry tree. So long as Indhrajith remained under that tree he could wield extraordinary powers.

Vibheeshana told Hanumaan and Lakshmana to see that Indhrajith was kept away from that tree as much as possible. Hearing this, Indhrajith got very angry. He burst out: Oh Vibheeshana! Are you betraying my secrets and the secrets of Lanka to the enemy? You are a traitor to your race."

He went on berating Vibheeshana in this manner. Vibheeshana makes Indhrajith understand the Truth Vibheeshana retorted indignantly: "Indhrajith! It is natural for Raakshasas to be abusive as they like. But, remember that Raama is the very embodiment of peace. He is pure of heart, utterly free from selfishness. It is not possible for Raakshasas to understand the truth about such a Divine Being. Raama has entered Lanka for rescuing Seetha and not for seizing the country. How can one who gave up Ayodhya itself voluntarily covet Lanka? Raama has no desire for anything. For a long time I had been warning Raavana that is a grievous sin to kidnap another, man's wife and appealed to him to restore Seetha to Raama. However, Raavana paid a deaf ear to my word. He is destroying by his own hands his kingdom and his clan. Who is to be blamed for this? Is it me or your father?"

Indhrajith asked, "If my father did not listen to your words, you should have remained silent and not allied yourself with our enemies. Is this kind of treachery justified?"

Vibheeshana gave a fitting reply: "Indhrajith! You are an ignorant fool who knows nothing about truth and untruth, right and wrong. I am one who is well aware of the rules of right conduct. It is unworthy for a person to remain silent in the face of wickedness.

Such inaction can destroy an entire society."

A comparison of Bheeshma and Vibheeshana

In this context, it is interesting to study the conduct of Bheeshma and Vibheeshana in similar situations. It is clear Vibheeshana is a greater person than Bheeshma. Why? Knowing that the Kauravas were committing a grievous wrong, Bheeshma remained silent without condemning them. Moreover, he accepted the role of Commander-in-chief of the Kaurava armies in the Kurukshethra battle. Vibheeshana acted differently. He roundly condemned the wrong action of his brother. He advised Raavana to return Seetha to Raama. Ultimately he renounced everything and sought surrender at the Feet of Raama.

Lanka had many such high-minded persons besides Vibheeshana. But cowed down by the wickedness of the Raakshasa, they were unable to protest against the bad persons.

When Hanumaan entered Lanka he noticed Vibheeshana. Vibheeshana told Hanumaan:

Hanumaan! I am living in the midst of the wicked Raakshasa like the tongue surrounded by sharp teeth, How long am I to live like this? How will I secure the grace of Raama? When will I be blessed with the bliss of being in His Divine presence? I have long been waiting for that great moment." Vibheeshana lamented in this manner.

Hanumaan gave a significant message to Vibheeshana then, "Vibheeshana! Do not think that you are alone in being subject to these ordeals. There are many great souls who experience similar troubles.

The Raakshasas constantly harass the Sages, the Avathaars and all good men. However, take note of one fact. The tongue came first and the teeth emerged later. The teeth which emerged in the middle drop away in due course! Likewise these Raakshasas also will fall away soon. Do not have any doubt on this score.

Hanumaan then went on: "Vibheeshana! You have been attracted to the Lotus Feet of Raama. Cling to them firmly. Either He should bless you because of your perseverance, or you should merge in Him in course of time. There is no other way. It is wrong to give up the Lord in the middle. This is not the mark of a true devotee. What is devotion? It is not mere repetition of Raama's name endlessly. While contemplating on Raama, you must take part in service to Raama."

Vibheeshana desired only to promote the prosperity of Lanka and the welfare of the Raakshasas.

He was not interested in getting the crown. Raavana and Indhrajith derided such a high-minded noble person.

The three boons granted by Brahma

Once Raavana, Kumbhakarna and Vibheeshana performed a severe penance to invoke the presence of Brahma. Brahma appeared before them and asked them what they wanted. He said he would grant them whatever boon they wanted. Kumbhakarna wanted to ask that he should be never at anyone's mercy--nirdhaya. But by a slip of the tongue he asked for nidhra (sleep).

Brahma declared: "So be it." Raavana asked freedom from death at the hands of all deities, but did not ask for freedom from death by humans because he considered them trivial beings.

Vishnu then decided to come in human form to put an end to

Raavana. What did Vibheeshana

pray for? "Oh Lord! Fill my heart with compassion and make me lead a righteous life." Because of this boon, Vibheeshana remained totally unaffected in spite of all the raillery and abuse by

Raavana and his sons. Vibheeshana always remained compassionate, never yielding to hatred or anger. Because his heart was full of compassion, he secured God's grace and proximity to the Divine. One without compassion is a demon and not a human being.

Discourse in Brindhaavan on 26-5-1996.

Scriptures are endless; Saadhanas are countless; opportunities are few; time is already overstocked. But you can easily win the battle of life, in spite of these handicaps, provided you arm yourself with Love, which is the essential teaching of all Scriptures, the goal of all varieties of Saadhana, the best use to which all opportunities can be put and the most profitable way of utilising the precious capital time.

18. The greatness of Raama-Raaiya

That day alone is a true day

When all good devotees gather to pray to the Lord;

When people serve the poor and the needy in a spirit of brotherliness;

When a feast is offered to the servants of the Lord who sing His glories;

When holy men visit our homes and relate the exploits of the Lord;

All other days are days of mourning.

IT WAS the great day of Shree Raama's Coronation. The City of Ayodhya was en fete, with the people rejoicing in the festive celebrations. The crown that was first worn by Manu, had been worn by successive emperors according to hallowed tradition. That day the sages Vasishta, Vaamadheva and Jaabali earned the crown for the coronation of Shree Raamachandhra.

To participate in the historic ceremony several kings, chieftains and lesser rulers were entering the Durbar Hall, along with many sages. At the main entrance gate, a gigantic message was blazoned across the gate in a novel manner. The message read in Sanskrit: "Sathya- Dharmaabhih yukthaanaam naasthi mrithyu bhayam" (Those who adhere to Truth and Righteousness will have no fear of death). The message declared that for the one who adhered to

Truth and Righteousness there was no fear of rebirth. This means that such a one need have no fear of death again after this life because he will have no re-birth. Without birth there can be no death.

Adherence to Sathya and Dharma in Raama-Raaiya

The Raamaayana brought home to one and all this significance of Truth and Righteousness. The glorious story of Raama spread the name and fame of Bhaarith to all countries. In the Raama-

Raaiya (reign of Raama) the two words, Sathya and Dharma, (Truth and Righteousness) reverberated everywhere in the Kingdom. Dharma prevailed everywhere and young and old, men and women, scholars and illiterates, one and all adhered to these two principles.

As is the ruler, so are the ministers. As are the ministers, so are the administrators. As are the administrators, so are the common people. The ministers strictly adhered to Truth and Righteousness. Lakshmana, Bharatha and Shathrughna were assigned the duty of enforcing Shree Raama's orders in all parts of the Kingdom. They kept a close watch over what was happening in every nook and corner of the realm, how far the people were adhering to truth and righteousness and how they were getting on in daily life. For this purpose a large body of officials were employed to go round the country. These messengers gathered all information everyday about the difficulties experienced by the people and their conduct. This system prevailed as long as Raama reigned over the Kingdom.

Raama performed a hundred Ashvamedha yaagas (horse sacrifices) and many other sacrifices.

Together with these sacrifices Raama propagated among the people the qualities of truth and right conduct.

The golden days of Raama-Raaiya

In Raama's reign, all married women were Sumangalis (whose husbands were alive).

Widowhood was unknown. It is natural for parents to die before their children. But it is unnatural for children to die earlier than their parents. In Raama-Raaiya there was not a single case of premature death. Death of young people was not known. There were none suffering from disease. There was no sign of poverty. The rains came in the right seasons. The harvests were bountiful. There was no shortage of food. Unrest was unknown. All people were happy and peaceful.

Comparing those days with the present times, we realise what apathetic plight is ours. Bhaarith

will enjoy Raama-Raaiya only when it has rulers like Raama, ministers like Sumanthra, saintly advisers like Vasishta and Vaamadheva and brothers like Lakshmana, Bharatha and Shathrughna. During Raama's reign there was no conflict anywhere. People did not indulge in mutual recrimination. Everyone in the Kingdom was grateful for any act of help and was eager to repay the act of kindness.

Raama expresses gratitude to all who helped Him

The first pronouncement which Raama made on the occasion of the coronation is remarkable. He said: "Who is it that is primarily responsible for making today's celebration possible? Hanumaan

was solely responsible for the successful search of the whereabouts of Seetha and helping me to recover her. Hence, at the outset I express my deep gratitude to Hanumaan."

Raama then expressed his gratitude to Jataayu, who sacrificed his life in fighting against Raavana while he was carrying away Seetha.

Next, Raama expressed his gratitude to Sugreeva, who had helped him in organising the search for Seetha and in providing the hordes for the war on Raavana. He next expressed his gratitude to Vibheeshana, who had come over to him, despite the suspicions of Raama's companions, and who had revealed to Raama many of the secrets of the enemy.

Above all, there were the huge hordes of monkeys, who had no direct connection with Raama or

Seetha, who endured many hardships and even laid down their lives for his sake and he expressed his gratitude to all of them. In this manner, Raama expressed his gratitude to one and all who had helped him in the epic Raama-Raavana battle.

The supreme lesson to be learnt from the Raamaayana is that one should be grateful all his life to anyone who has helped him in a crisis. Only the man who shows such gratitude can be termed a human being. The ungrateful man is a demon. The human and the demonic are not different in external appearance. It is by his actions that one is called human, demonic or divine. All those who indulge in bad thoughts, bad speeches and wicked acts are described as demons. Equally, those who do harm to those who have helped them were regarded as demons. So also, those who renounce Truth and Righteousness and cherish falsehood and wickedness as their life-breath were treated as demons.

Every substance has its inherent quality

Today men have a fascination for untruth. Ignorant of what is meant by Righteousness they practise unrighteousness. Our Vedhas teach: "Speak the truth: follow righteousness." Men today are not qualified even to utter these words, much less to practise them.

Every substance has its Dharma (inherent quality). This quality is independent of one's belief. It is its inherent nature. For instance, that which has the quality of burning has been called Agni (fire). The natural quality of fire is to burn. This quality is not based on anyone's faith or opinion.

Whether you are aware of this quality or not, when you touch fire it will cause a burn. Likewise, the quality of ice is coldness. This, again, is independent of anyone's belief. If coldness is absent, it is no longer ice. It has forfeited its nature. Similarly, the sun's nature is to shed light. One may fail to see the sun because it is covered by clouds or one is blind. But that does not detract from the sun's dharma of shedding light.

Likewise man has a dharma. This dharma (natural trait) is to perform all actions with Thrikarana Suddhi (purity in thought, word and deed). Man's natural function is to behave with harmony in thought, word and deed (unity of body, speech and mind). Where there is divergence between thought, word and deed, the resulting action is unrighteousness. It is because today there is no harmony between thought, word and deed in the conduct of human beings, unrighteousness is rampant. This triune unity is not prevalent among the educated or the illiterate.

One who lacks faith, but acts as if he has faith, is bound to face ruin. He is of a demonic nature.

Today Truth and Righteousness have declined alarmingly. The first task is to produce young men and women who are wedded to Truth and Righteousness. Only a nation where the men and women adhere to these two principles will be prosperous and happy. When Bhaarith has such men and women it will achieve great prosperity. Rulers are to be blamed for today's troubles. Bhaarith culture gave to the world spirituality and proclaimed the message: "May all people everywhere be happy!" In ancient times, the rulers, the sages, the householders all strove to practise Truth and Righteousness. The rulers set the example and all others followed them. Today we see that as are the rulers, so are the people. The people are not to be blamed at all. The faults lie entirely with the rulers. Because of the lapses of the rulers, the people are subject to all troubles. Each one pursues his own self-interest and selfish gain. Each is after power and pelf. There are no leaders who are concerned about the people's needs and their well-being. If the nation's progress is to be promoted, the rulers must follow the advice of high-minded leaders in society. Bhaarith's survival even in its present condition is due to the fact that in the past the rulers accepted the guidance of great sages. The sages had no personal interest of their own. Why did sage. Vasista come to Emperor Dhasharatha? He was not interested in wealth or pomp. He wanted to be there when the Lord incarnated as Raama. Seetha esteemed Hanumaan in the same manner. She said that even if she were to offer him lordship of the three worlds, she would not be discharging her debt to him. "You are the embodiment of sacrifice. You exemplify pure devotion. Because of these two qualities, you are entitled to move freely in all the three worlds. All the three worlds will experience prosperity through your presence." Restoration of Sathya and Dharma is the primary need. What we need today is the restoration of the supremacy of Truth and Righteousness. There are some who cavil at the use of these two terms. If they do not know what Truth and Righteousness are, they cannot be deemed human beings at all. Truth and Righteousness are the inherent natural qualities of human beings. Human life is based on Truth and Righteousness. What folly is it to declare that one does not know what they are? Truth is utterance of what you think. Righteousness is acting according to your words. The unity of thought, word and action is essential. Truth and Righteousness are not qualities to be acquired, as was suggested by Narasimha Murthy (in his speech prior to Svaami's discourse). They are inherent in man, born with him even as his limbs and his life-breath. There is no need to search for them elsewhere. They emanate from one's heart. They dwell in everyone. What is necessary is to see that these inherent qualities are not lost. No one is entitled to live in this world if he does not practise truth and righteousness. Treat ups and downs of life with equanimity. It has been declared that for the practise of these two qualities, Vairagya (renunciation) is essential. Renunciation does not mean giving up hearth and home. True renunciation consists in treating happiness and sorrow alike. One must have the spirit of equanimity in facing pleasure and pain, profit and loss. Do not get elated over 'happiness or depressed by sadness. Treat praise and censure alike. This is true renunciation or detachment. Treat the ups and downs of life with equanimity. Consider the example of Seetha. She was a prisoner in the Ashokavana of Raavana. He had enhanced its beauty in many ways to make it alluring to Seetha. But Seetha had no interest in these allurements at all. But she was deeply moved when a small monkey sang in praise of Raama from the top of the tree under which Seetha was sitting (Svaami sang the song of Hanumaan in praise of Raama). Seetha found more beauty in the monkey than in all the flowers in Ashokavana. It was the chanting of Raama's name which lent beauty to the monkey's face. She was full of bliss at that moment. The name was like nectar to her. Bliss without beauty is sterile. Raamaayana taught the integral relationship between beauty and bliss. Wherein lay the bliss of Seetha and Raama? It was in the well-being and happiness of the people. They sought nothing from the people. They were interested only in giving and giving what was good for the people. This applies to all Avataars from Raama to the present day. What is it that I am asking from you? I do not ask even for a small shell. Free education is given to the students. Free treatment is offered in hospitals. All that is offered by Svaami is free. The students bear only their mess charges. Where can you see such free provision of education and medical aid? Nowhere else. I do not ask for anything from anybody. This is the bliss I shall experience if you lead good lives and stand forth as noble citizens.

The mistaken attitude of people
In the world today you find that only when students pay a heavy price for education, they show greater interest in studies. People have greater confidence in hospitals where they pay heavily. In private hospitals you are asked to deposit in advances Rs. 2 lakhs for a heart operation. The patients feel that they will get high-class treatment because of the heavy charges they pay. This is sheer folly. Little attention is paid to the patients after the operation is over.
In the Sai Super-Speciality Hospital everything is done free, the best facilities are provided and loving concern is shown for the patients. All this is taken for granted because no fees are paid to the doctors. This is a totally mistaken attitude. No doubt the value of what is offered free will be realised in due course. But I am sorry that such wrong impressions should exist. If even students feel in this way, what is the benefit they derive from their education in Sai institutions? Is it for merely earning a livelihood that you are pursuing your studies?
Earning money is no great thing.
Even dacoits make money. Even beggars are known to have amassed large sums by beggary.
Education should be sought only for the acquisition of Vijanaana (wisdom), not for acquiring wealth. The one who is interested only in money will never be able to foster good qualities. All our Institute students should be concerned only with fostering virtues. Many Kings have enjoyed wealth and passed on. Where are they now?. Only their wicked deeds are remembered.
Character matters more than riches and affluence
During the past ten days you must have heard a great deal about Raavana. There was no limit to his riches. Kubera (the god of wealth) was his cousin. His fort and city were paved with gold.
What was the use of all his riches and affluence? He had no character.
Ultimately he lost everything.
Hence, promote your character. Acquisition of good qualities is the mark of true education. What matters how much wealth a man has if he has no morals? A rich man hardly enjoys peace of mind.
No doubt money is necessary for carrying on one's life. But excessive money is harmful. You owe a duty to your family. For that purpose you have to earn an income. Excessive wealth is the cause of all bad thoughts and feelings. You can see that in most cases it is the children of the rich who go astray.

People should always remember that the ultimate end may come at anytime. One should reform one's life well before the end comes. Greatness consists not in wealth but in virtue. A true human being is one who recognizes the Divine within him. He should lead a godly life. Everyone should strive to recognise the Indwelling Spirit within, which is the master of the body and the senses.
The highest education is Aathma-Vidhya (Self-Knowledge). The Spirit is invisible like the roots of a tree. But it is the basis of real bliss, just as the fruits of a tree are derived from the roots. The external pleasures you enjoy are based on the power of the Spirit within. The air you breathe, the light you see, the water you drink are all derived from the Divine.
Stand by your plighted word
Students should recognise the Divine power that sustains everything in the universe. It was the faith in the Divine that sustained Seetha during the ten months she lived alone as a prisoner in the Ashokavana. The divine power that sustained Seetha in her captivity is in everyone. Rely on that power. All that you have to do is to turn your vision inward. Follow the dictates of your conscience. Education should teach you good qualities, right thinking, right conduct, discipline
and devotion to duty.
Students should develop unwavering faith in truth and Righteousness. Stand by your plighted word. That is the message of Raama's life. "One word, one wife, one arrow." Raama exemplifies these three signs. You must experience the Raama Principle residing in your heart.
Raama is not the remote son of an emperor. He is the Eternal Spirit in one's heart. Live upto your conscience and you will please God.
Every human being has to develop faith in Sathya and Dharma, practise them in daily life and lead worthy lives.
Students! Boys and girls! You are likely to assume positions of leadership in the nation in future years. The nation's future depends on how you conduct yourselves.
Go forward to serve the nation, whatever trials you may have to face, do so with faith in God.
Follow the divine injunctions. It will contribute to your welfare and the welfare of the nation and the world.
Discourse in Sai Ramesh Mandap on 29-5-1996.
See in Me yourself, for I see Myself in you all. You are My life, My breath, my soul. You are My Forms all; when I love you. I love Myself, when you love yourselves, you love Me! I have separated Myself from Myself so that I may love Myself. My beloved ones,

You are my own Self.

19. Render unto God what is His

Without Sathya, Dharma, Shaanthi and Prema

all knowledge is useless;

Without these four, all charity and righteous

acts are of no use;

Without these four, the value of all good deeds is zero;

Without these four, the exercise of power is profitless.

For the edifice of the Ancient Dharma these four qualities are the main walls.

What else can I convey to you,

virtuous and noble minded students?

STUDENTS! Wherever you turn, you see in the world only unrest and disorder. There is little trace of unity, harmony and brotherliness.

Unrest and confusion prevail at every level from the individual to the nation as a whole. There is discord between man and man, from family to family, village to village, district to district and province to province. These conflicts are due to the craze for power, insatiable desires and intense selfishness. Moreover, the growth of unrest and chaos in society is also due to the weakness of government, the decline of truth and righteousness and the failure of people in the mass to discharge their respective duties.

Everyone talks about the presence of the Divine, who is the embodiment of Truth and Righteousness. People speak about the omnipresence and omniscience of God. But few care to understand what this means, to experience it and to live according to

it. A few drops of nectar on the tongue will work wonders, but of what use are barrels of nectar which remain untouched?

To preach without practice is repugnant to spirituality

Many lectures are given today about the Divine as the embodiment of Truth and Righteousness.

How many have direct experience of this? How many practise Righteousness? Have they tried to practise even a small fragment of this teaching? Have they made the slightest attempt to secure a vision of this Truth? To preach without practice is repugnant to spirituality.

Devotees like Potharaaju, Thyaagaraaju and Goparaaju

(Raamdhas) experienced bliss by their spiritual austerities. They sought no positions of power. They were content to seek the grace of the Divine. Their sole objective was to earn the love of God.

Owing to the influence of the Kali age today, even spiritual seekers are eager to earn wealth and positions, forget the Divine and lead unworthy lives. People should not pray to God for any position. In the pursuit of pleasure men today spend any amount of money. But they hardly try to spend even a fraction of this money on charity, good deeds and service to the Divine. Many people grudge to give even small amounts of money to the women in the house for the performance of worship with joss-sticks, flowers and fruits. They even question the usefulness of such offerings. It may well be asked what benefit such persons derive from their lavish expenditure on their pleasure and comforts. These sensual pleasures confer fleeting happiness.

But acts of charity, goodness and sacrifice confer divine benefits.

Pleasure and pain contribute to the beauty of life

Man should learn to treat pain and pleasure alike because both contribute to the beauty of life like the variety of flowers in a garland. People should also learn not to sneer at the traditional practices of the common people who do many simple acts out of reverence for what they regard as sacred. A young man travelling in a train ridiculed the act of a simple village woman who piously offered a few coins to the Krishna river when the train was going over the bridge. The woman asked him of what use was the money he was spending on smoking, which was ruining his health. She said that the few coins she had thrown in the river was an offering to Krishna. It happened once in a way. "But how much are you wasting everyday on your smoking? What will you gain from it except lung cancer or T.B? Without realising the grievous mistake you are committing, you are ridiculing my simple action," she said.

Pothana's dedication to God

The life of Pothana, the immortal author of the Thelugu Bhaagavatham, shows the difference between the God-oriented poet and a poet who seeks the favours of rulers and wealthy patrons.

Once, Pothana's brother-in-law, the poet Shreenaatha, told Pothana that if, instead of relying on

Shree Raama, he dedicated his Bhaagavatham to a local chieftain, the latter would offer him gifts of land and properties which would relieve his poverty. Pothana declared: "Brother-in-law! You are making a serious mistake. Our real protector is Raama and not any Raaja (ruler). How many have been helped by these rulers and for how long?. I revere my mother Earth. My life will be redeemed by my trust in mother Earth and by my faith in Shree Raama. (Bhagavaan recited a poem of Pothana in which the poet firmly declared that he would prefer to live on what he got from the soil rather than offer his sacred work to unrighteous rulers for the sake of a mess of pottage). Pothana told Shreenaatha, "My poem is the very embodiment of the Goddess o Wisdom, Sarasvathi. Such a work should be offered to Brahma and none else. How can I offer such a sacred work to wicked rulers?" Shreenaatha was displeased with Pothana's attitude. He conveyed Pothana's sentiments to the local ruler, who also felt slighted. In his bitterness, he sent his minions to set fire to Pothana's house. The entire house was burnt down except the shrine where Pothana worshipped Raama and kept his Bhaagavatham. While the flames were burning, Pothana prayed to Raama as the Lord of everything. When a person believes whole-heartedly, in God, he will not come to grief. With their interests primarily in worldly benefits and material gains, men pray to God with their lips and not their hearts. Rather than pray with lips, it is better to serve with the hands. This was the lesson which Hanumaan taught to Vibheeshana, when the latter was disappointed that he had no vision of Raama. Men are engaged in the pursuit of wealth and position, but not in the quest of the Divine. They forget that lasting happiness and peace cannot be got by wealth, scholarship or position. Only good qualities can confer happiness because a good man finds a place in the Lord's heart. Sacrifice is the essence of Raama Principle. The ancient sages and savants offered all their knowledge and scholarship as an offering to God. They did not regard knowledge as a means of acquiring wealth. In the days of Raama everyone was filled with a spirit of sacrifice. Raama set the example by His readiness to sacrifice the kingdom for life in the forest as an exile. Before leaving for the forest, Raama gave away all his personal possessions as gifts. Sacrifice is the essence of the Raama Principle. To develop the spirit of sacrifice the first requisite is firm faith in God. Students should realise that their only true friend at all times is God. He will be with them wherever they go. No others will accompany them like God. Hence, they should cultivate love for God. There is nothing greater than that love. Discourse in the Sai Ramesh Mandap on 30-5-1996. There is no living being without the spark of love; even a mad man loves something or somebody intensely. But, you must recognise this love as but a reflection of the Prema Svaruupa (the Embodiment of Love), that is your reality, of the God who is residing in your heart. Without that spring of Love that bubbles in your heart, you will not be prompted to love at all. Recognise that spring, rely on it more and more, develop its possibilities, try to irrigate the whole world with it, discard all touch of self from it, do not seek anything in return for it from those to whom you extend it. Baba

20. The four beacons
Pradoshe deepakas-chandhrah
Prabhathe deepako Ravih
Thriloke deepako Dharmah
Suputhrah Kuladeepakah
PRADOSHE deepakas-chandhrah (At night the moon illumines the world). Prabhathe deepako Ravih (At daybreak the sun is the illuminator). Thriloke deepako Dharmaha (For the three worlds Dharma is the beacon-light). Suputhrah Kula Deepakah (A virtuous son is a beacon for the whole family).
The difference between Amaavaasya (New Moon light) and Puurnima (full moon light) is between darkness and light. During Amaavaasya, the night is pitch dark. People do not relish this darkness in any way. Darkness invokes fear. It also breeds evil thoughts and provides opportunities for evil deeds. Darkness is welcomed only by evil minded persons. No good-intentioned persons will welcome darkness. Darkness is a valuable ally for thieves and rogues. Hence only the evil-minded will hail the advent of darkness. The good-intentioned and righteous persons will welcome the advent of the full-moon. The hearts of good persons .filled with good feelings, are cool like the moon. Children delight in the sight of the moon. Poets are inspired to pour forth the joy in their hearts at the sight of the moon. On the day of the Puurnima (full-moon) man's heart is also pure and bright. People should recognise the relationship between the fullmoon and the mind. The Vedhas declare that the moon emerged from the mind of the Viraat-Purusha (Cosmic Person) and the sun emerged from his eye. The human mind is a reflection of the moon and when there is the full moon the mind blossoms effulgently. Moonlight dispels the darkness of ignorance, drives away fear and confers peace and joy.

Reasons for the worship of sun
During the day, the sun affords light to the world. Without the sun, the world will cease to exist.
The sun is the visible deity for the world. Without the sun there can be no life on earth. Crops cannot grow. There will be no air, no food and no means of sustenance for living creatures. It is only because of the sun that rivers flow, crops are grown, life is sustained and there is happiness and comfort. It is the power of the sun that helps to purify the heart. Hence, for the planet earth the sun is the visible manifestation of God. The earth receives its life-sustaining oxygen from the sun.

Thriloke deepako Dharmah (The light that illumines the three worlds is Righteousness). What is this Dharma? "Dhaarayathe ithi Dharmah" (Dharma is that which upholds everything). This means that without Dharma the Cosmos cannot exist. Dharma is the lifebreath of all actions.

There can be no life without the sustaining power of Dharma. Every object in the universe is governed by its Dharma (the law of its being). For instance, there is fire. What is its Dharma?

The capacity to bum is the basic trait of fire. When the burning power is lost, it ceases to be fire.

It becomes mere charcoal. Likewise, the Dharma of ice is coldness. When ice loses its coldness, it ceases to be ice. For man, the Dharma is Righteousness.

Righteousness implies harmony in thought, word and deed. The unity of body, speech and mind promotes purity and sacredness in man. This triune purity constitutes humanness. All actions should be pure and according to the dictates of the conscience. The tongue is sacred organ endowed on man to chant the glories of the Lord. But today it is being misused to utter untruth.

The dharma of man is to speak the truth and adhere to righteousness.

Three maxims for primary obligations of man

Three words describe the primary obligations of man: Preethi, Bheethi and Neethi. Preethi pertains to the Dhaiva Preethi (love of God). Bheethi is related to the Paapabheethi (fear of sin).

Neethi is related to Sanghaneethi (morality in society). If these three are observed, there will be peace and non-violence. Dhaiva Preethi (love of God) is the basis for all human values. This love is inherent in all human beings. It is the index of man's divinity as proclaimed by the scriptures.

How is God to be experienced? God is present in everyone like butter in milk. Your heart is the container. Love is the milk present in the heart. When this love is offered to the Lord, it acts as the churning process for getting butter. There is then the direct experience of the Divine.

Some devotees fall asleep during the discourses or brood over some extraneous matters without listening to the discourses. Raamakrishna Paramahansa once chided Raani Raasmani for thinking about her court cases while appearing to listen to his talk.

Persons who are not interested in the discourses should keep away from the meeting.

Man's dharma is threefold. It relates to his body, his mind and his Aathma. Good deeds, good thoughts and Godly experience of bliss are the expressions of this triple Dharma. The reference to the light that illumines the three worlds should be understood in this way.

Who is a good son?

"Suputhrah Kula deepakah" (A good son is a beacon for the family).

Who is a good son? He is a good son, who is always immersed in the contemplation of God, in sacred activities and leads a godly life. A good son is one who reveres his parents, pleases them by rendering service, and is grateful for all that he has received from them. Nor is that all. A good son earns a good name in society. A good son sheds greatness on the family like the fragrance of a jasmine creeper in a forest.

Nowadays, parents distribute sweets on the birth of a son. But it is not the birth that is the right occasion for celebration. The right moment for celebration is when the son earns a good name in society.

"The father will not rejoice on the day a son is born.

He will rejoice when he hears the praise of the virtues

Of his sort by others," says a Thelugu poem.

God also will be happy when a son earns such a good name. A son should be called a good man by one and all. Such a Suputhra (good son) is a beacon-light for the entire family.

The four illuminators

There are three kinds of light. The lamp in a house illumines only the house. The moon at night gives his light to the world, although it is a dim light. But the sun who illumines the day sheds his effulgence everywhere. The light that burns inside a home is comparable to svartham (selfinterest).

The light coming from the moon may be compared to Paraartham (for the benefit of others). The light of the sun is Yathartham, the effulgence of Truth. Truth is God. The sun who illuminates everything is verily God. For this reason, from early times Bhaaratheeyas were worshippers of the Sun-God. They offered Suurya-namaskaar (salutations to the Sun). They regarded the Sun as the visible manifestation of God. Thus, what people need today are moonlight at night, sun-light during the day, and the light of Dharma which illuminates all the three worlds, and a good son who is the beacon-light for the family. Education alone does not make one a good son. One should be good in his actions and behaviour. The marks of a good son are good behaviour, good manners, good discipline and good devotion. These are the most important things. If there is devotion all other things will come easily. Three sects, but one truth. Today there are three schools of philosophy prevalent in Bhaarith. Dhvaitha, Visishta-adhvaitha and Adhvaitha (Dualism, qualifies Non-dualism and Non-dualism). In the Dhvaitha philosophy, there is dualism, separation between jeeva, the individual self and Supreme Omni Self. There is no great difference between Visishta-Adhvaitha and Adhvaitha. Whatever the creed, whatever the country or nationality, Truth is one. "Ekam eva Adhvitheeyam Brahma" (The Omni Self is one only, without a second). The variations between the three systems of philosophy can be explained by an example. You have sugarcane, with a number of knots. Whatever the shape of the sugarcane, the juice in all of them is the same. Adhvaitha (non-dualism) may be compared to the juice which is one and the same irrespective of the cane from which it is extracted. The juice drawn from any cane has the same sweetness. There is no other taste. Raamaanuja (founder of the Visishta Adhvaitha system) conducted his own enquiries and came to the conclusion that the sugar cane juice cannot be preserved indefinitely and therefore it should be converted to sugar. The sugar can then be used, any day at any time. This is qualified non-dualism. Madhvaacharya was the exponent of Dualism. Madhvaacharya viewed the problem in this way. He declared: "Oh Lord! I do not want either sugarcane juice or sugar. I wish to be born as an ant that relishes the juice or the sugar. The sugar does not know its own sweetness. Only the one who consumes sugar can know its sweetness. Q Lord! You are the very embodiment of love.

I do not wish to be mere love. I want to be one who enjoys love. You should remain as God and I should remain as leevi (individual soul). It is only when the individual is separate from God that he can enjoy the Divine." This is the essence of dualism----the distinction between God and the individual self. When the individual self starts enjoying sugar (the Divine), in due course he becomes the Divine itself. "The knower of the Divine becomes the Divine." Common truth proclaimed by all philosophies. Magnifying the differences between the three systems of philosophy, Bhaaratheeyas are wasting their time. All the three are essentially one. Adhvaitha is like the sugarcane juice. Visishta-Adhvaitha is sugar. The consumer of sugar is a Dhvaithin (dualist). The truth is that sweetness is common to all, though the names and forms may vary. Similarly, in the world the different nations and countries have diverse forms and names. But the Divine in all of them is one and the same. The Indwelling Spirit is the same in all beings. The Divine energy is common to all, like the current which activates all bulbs, fans etc. God is present equally in everyone. The differences among human beings are the result of the differences in their capacities. When one is immersed in thoughts of God, his capacity will grow. Develop greater love in your heart. As your love grows, the Spirit in you will shine brighter. Spiritual growth calls for restraint on desires. In addition, you have also to get rid of bad qualities like attachment and aversion. The three great enemies of man are kaama (desire), krodha (anger) and lobha (greed). Desire destroys devotion, anger annihilates wisdom and greed poisons every action. These three vices are destructive of Sath-Karma (good deeds), Upaasana (devotion) and Inaana (spiritual wisdom). All the three have to be totally given up. The only cure for them is to burn them in Premaagni (the fire of Divine Love). Example of Raama for being a good son. Good qualities can be acquired only by practice. The practice may be difficult, like moving an object uphill. But the effort has to be made. The saadhana (spiritual practice) must be done with full faith and no doubts. God is omnipresent. To experience God certain disciplines are required. This is the significance of the term Suputhrah (a good son). To realise God you have to be good. This means that one has to cultivate good qualities like reverence for parents, humility, respect for teachers and elders.

How did Raama achieve such greatness? By carrying out the injunctions of his father. Raama also exemplified friendliness and brotherliness. He moved among the people with a sense of endearment. He identified the people's welfare with his own well-being.

When you utter the prayer "Lokaas-samasthaas-sukhino Bhavanthu!" (May all people in all the world be happy), you should pray whole-heartedly with the conviction that the same Divine dwells in everyone.

Cultivate love for God. There is nothing greater than that. That is the message of Thulasidas and Meerabai. Realise God through Love.

Discourse in the Sai Kulwant Mandap on 18-6-1996.

It is on account of the mutual help, the collaboration that the Gopis of Brindhaavan were able to attain Moksha; their Bhakthi towards Lord Krishna endowed them with the Highest Inaana also. Now the essence of Bhakthi as well as Inaana is Shaanthi.

The highest type of Shaanthi, Prashaanthi, Prashaanthi leads one on to Prakaanthi, the Glory of Spiritual Effulgence, and thence to Paramjyothi, the Super-effulgence, of the Highest Revelation.

21. Importance of discipline

While uneducated birds and beasts

Know how to lead regulated lives,

Alas! Man endowed with intelligence

Does not lead a disciplined life.

EMBODIMENTS of love! Discipline is vital to every living being. For man it is even more important like the spinal column. Without discipline mankind will be ruined.

Discipline means the observance of certain well-defined rules.

Without such regulation it is not possible to maintain humanness. Such regulation contributes to the glory of human existence.

Discipline cannot be acquired from books. Nor can it be learnt from teachers. It has to be as natural component of one's daily life in the discharge of one's duties.

Discipline is essential from the moment of waking to the time of going to sleep.

Discipline is essential in everyday life

Discipline is essential for every group, for every society and for every political institution.

Without discipline there can be no society or Government. No nation can exist without discipline. It is discipline that unites man to man, and one society to another. Hence discipline is one of the basic insignia of social life.

Discipline has to be observed in speech, in sport and in every kind of relationship. For instance, during bhajans, all those singing in chorus have to maintain the same tune. Discordant singing will jar on the ears. Singing in unison in bhajans is a form of discipline.

In games, you have an umpire to enforce the rules of the game. Every player has to observe the rules strictly. Sometimes while playing, in their enthusiasm, the players fail to observe the rules.

The umpire, however, sees to it that the rules are enforced and the players have to obey him implicitly. Any player who does not obey will be violating the rules of the game.

Today it is because people do not observe the rules, whether in sports or elsewhere, life has become intolerable. Some persons hold positions of authority in business, in administration or in other institutions. Here also discipline is essential, but because one holds an office, he cannot behave as he likes. He cannot be free with his tongue. In his words and his writings he should observe restraint. In the use of words, whether in speech or writing, care should be observed regarding their future implications. Your discipline will protect you in whatever you do. Even in a simple matter like walking on the road, many do not observe the rules. They choose to walk on the middle of the road instead of using the pavement. Jaywalking on the road is not only harmful to oneself but is a hindrance to others. Your motto in life should be: Help ever; hurt never.

Discipline must start from the early years, But it is needed not only by students but by elders and all persons in authority.

Students should learn the right way of doing things even in ordinary actions like sitting or reading. They should sit erect and keep the spinal column straight.

This enables the Kundalini

shakthi (coiled energy) to move up from the base of the spine--

Muulaadhaara--to the top of the head. Sahasraara---through the vertebral column. This movement takes place during the yogic exercise known as Praanaayaama (breath control). This exercise is also useful for improving one's memory and powers of concentration.

Important elements of discipline

One of the important elements of discipline is physical purity. This does not merely mean keeping the body clean by a good bath. Real bodily purity calls for involvement in good actions.

Good actions and good thoughts lead to purity of mind and the intellect.

Another important aspect of discipline is keeping one's plighted word. The importance of this is illustrated by an incident in the life on Shirdi Baba. There was a sheristadhaar by name Tharkad.

His wife and 16-year-old son were ardent devotees of Shirdi Baba. Tharkad did not object to their worship of Baba. One day when they wanted to go to Shirdi, he gave them his consent. But Tharkad himself did not go to any shrine as he was a Brahmo Samajist. He did not go to Shirdi despite many appeals from his wife.

Tharkad's son told his father that he would not go to Shirdi because he was performing regular worship to Shirdi Baba in their house. This worship would be affected if he went to Shirdi. The lad told his father that every day he was making an offering of sugar candy to Baba and he was partaking part of the candy as prasaadh (blessed offering) out of the conviction that Baba was receiving the candy. He declared: "I do not want any break in this practice. Hence I do not want to go to Shirdi." The father had great affection for the son. He told the son: "Babu, I shall perform that duty. You better go to Shirdi." The boy wanted an assurance from the father that he would carry out the promise. "Will you offer worship to Baba as I have been doing? Will you offer candy to him and later eat part of it as prasaadh?" The father was moved by his son's determination and gave him the promise to carry on the worship during his absence. The mother and son left for Shirdi.

The father's lapse

The father kept the word given to his son and performed the worship in the manner of the son for a few days. Offering candy to Baba, he took a part of it after the worship before taking his meal.

On a Thursday, Tharkad had some urgent business in the court and left the house in a hurry after performing puuja (worship). Returning for his meal, he asked the cook to bring the prasaadh.

The cook informed him that he had not offered any offering of candy that day. Tharkad felt very sad over his lapse in failing to keep the promise he had given to his son. He was sorry that he had failed to make the offering to Baba.

At Shirdi, when the mother and son went to see Baba on the following Friday, Baba told the son:

"Babu, yesterday I had been to Bangra, but no one gave me any food. Even the candy which you used to offer daily was not available. I have come back very hungry.

Will you give me something to eat?" The boy was shocked on listening to Baba's words.

He returned home and wept over his mother's lap. "Father gave me a promise, but he has not kept it and Baba was disappointed. I cannot stay here any longer. I must adhere to my daily routine. I shall go back to our place." At that time, Baba sent a chit to the boy through one dog. In his message, Baba said:

"There is no need for you to go now. Your father failed to keep his word, but you have not failed in your duty. You have all my Grace. You can stay here as long as you wish." The boy stayed on for a few more days feeling very depressed and frustrated.

Truth is one. You must adhere to Truth

When the boy returned home, the father rushed towards him and begged his pardon. He said,

"You are young and I am old. But I am seeking your pardon because I failed to keep my promise." The boy said: "You must seek pardon not from me but from Baba. Whatever the Samaaj (society) to which you may belong, whatever your beliefs, the promised word must be kept. Truth is one. You must adhere to truth. This is your duty as a lawyer. You have studied the law. You know very well how Emperor Manu upheld Dharma. If you do not adhere to Truth, you are violating the law."

If discipline is observed in this manner, one can experience the Divine directly. The first requisite is purity of the body.

What is it you gain, oh man,

From waking to sleeping

If you seek only bodily comforts,

Forgetting God? (Thelugu poem)

Restraint has to be observed even with regard to eating. Excessive eating is the cause of many ailments. One fourth of the stomach should remain empty.

Discipline should govern every action of yours all through the day.

Then it becomes Karma

Yoga--the Yoga of Action. You must be the master of Karma and act according to Divine commands. This is the way to make education fruitful.

Discourse in the Sai Kulwant Mandap on 19-6-1996.

Be silent yourself; that will induce silence in others. Do not fall into the habit of shouting, talking long and loud. Reduce contacts to the minimum. Carry with you an atmosphere of quiet contemplation, wherever you happen to be.

22. Selfless love and firm faith

A heart without love is lifeless;

Can you call that life

Merely because there is Breath in the body?

It is just a pair of bellows.
 EMBODIMENTS of Love! The hall-mark of love is thyaaga (selfless sacrifice). Love seeks nothing from anyone. It bears no ill-will towards anyone. It is utterly selfless and pure.
 Failing to understand the true nature of love, man yearns for it in various ways. Love has to be cherished with feelings of selflessness and sacrifice. In what is deemed as love in the world-- whether it be maternal love, brotherly love, or friendship---there is an element of selfishness.
 Only God's love is totally free from the taint of selfishness. Divine love reaches out even to the remotest being. It brings together those who are separate. It raises man from animality to divinity. It transforms gradually all forms of worldly love to Divine love. To experience this Divine love, men must be prepared to give up selfishness and self-interest. They must develop purity and steadfastness. With firm faith in the Divine, they must foster the love of God regardless of all obstacles and ordeals.
 However, even the feeling of universal brotherliness is not the same as the experience of Ekathvam (oneness). Even in such a fraternal feeling there is an element of self-interest. Those who really wish to promote universal brotherhood should develop the consciousness of the one Spirit dwelling in all beings. Even brothers are often found engaged in mutual bickerings and hatred. What is described as fraternity may not be real and unsullied love. True love should express itself in the awareness of the presence of the Divine in one and all. Names and forms may differ but the indwelling Spirit is the same in all.
 One filled with Divine Love will be fearless
 Fill your hearts with love. One will be betraying himself if he entertains evil thoughts, but pretends outwardly to be full of love. No one having Divine love will ever fail to manifest it anywhere at any time. Students, who behave well during their stay in the Institute, should maintain the same behaviour wherever they may live or work after leaving the Institute. There should be no room for any outside association or circumstances to change their conduct. Love should be firmly implanted in their hearts. One filled with Divine Love will be fearless, will seek nothing from others, and will be spontaneous and selfless in expressing his love. There is no need to pray for gifts from God. God will give of His own accord what is good for any devotee.

Did not Shabari and Jataayu get the grace of Raama even without their asking for it? God will decide what to give, when to give, and where. Hence, all actions should be dedicated to God and He should decide what the devotee is fit to receive. When everything is left to God out of pure love and total faith, God will take care of the devotee. People today lack such firm faith. In the path of devotion many ordeals have to be overcome. Great devotees in the past faced such ordeals with faith and fortitude. Ultimately they secured the grace of the Divine and experienced bliss.
Dhruva's example
 For example, take the case of Dhruva. He was a five-year old boy, who knew little about the affairs of the World. He acted upon the advice of Naaradha and through severe penance was able to have a direct vision of God. His faith enabled him to secure this experience. But, when Vishnu appeared before him and asked him what he wanted, Dhruva said: "Lord! You came to me, knowing where I was doing my penance. Is it conceivable that you could not know what I want?" The Lord said: "I know what for you performed the penance.. When you set out from your home you took a resolve that you will perform penance and secure a boon from the Lord that you should be enabled to sit on the lap of your father. I want to know whether your words and actions are in harmony." Dhruva said: "It is true that I came to perform penance for a small favour, a piece of valueless glass as it were. But, experience of your Form is like a diamond to me. What good fortune is mine that while seeking a glass bead I had found a brilliant diamond. I have no use for that glass piece." The Lord saw the contradiction between Dhruva's original resolution, his penance and his present desire. The Lord told him that he should stick to his original wish for which he had performed the penance and therefore return to the kingdom with the Lord's Blessings. This emphasizes the need for unity in thought, word and deed.
 Recognise the Divine in the entire cosmos
 For achieving anything in life, two things are essential: firm faith and pure love. People should not think that pleasure and pain are caused by some external forces. It is not so. They are the result of one's own thoughts. There is no meaning in blaming others. If you develop love of God, that love will banish all sorrow and evil tendencies like attachment, anger and envy. Students should pursue both spiritual education and secular studies. You have to realise that Nature is also a manifestation of God. Hence, Nature should not be ignored. Nature is the effect and God is the cause. Hence you should recognise the imminence of the Divine in the entire cosmos. Discourse in Sai Kulwant Mandap on 20-6-1996.

23. As you sow, so shall you reap
ALL the pains and pleasures man experiences are the results of his own actions and not due to any act of the Divine. God is only a witness. God is like a postman. He delivers to you whatever letter is addressed to you. The grief or joy you derive from the contents of the letter are your own. Likewise the suffering or happiness one experiences are the results of one's own bad or good deeds and are not derived from God. However, there is the operation of special grace on certain occasions. When you pray to God with a pure heart, without a trace of selfishness and with sacred feelings, God confers special favour. Moreover, when a person has done some unique act of sacrifice in a previous life or at any time in the past, the Divine confers an appropriate reward for it at the proper time.

Krishna came to the rescue of Dhraupadhi when Dhuryodhana attempted to disrobe her, by making her sari endless, in return for the readiness with which Draupadi tore off a piece from her sari to bind the bleeding finger of Krishna. The spontaneous magnanimity of Karna
Even a noble and large-hearted hero like Karna became an accomplice of the wicked Kauravas because of his association with them. Students should avoid bad company. To illustrate the spontaneous magnanimity of Karna I would relate an episode where Krishna had contrived to bring home to Arjuna the extent to which Karna was prepared to sacrifice himself to satisfy any one who came to him for help. Krishna assumed the form of a Brahmana and came to Karna on the battlefield asking for some gold. As the only way he could satisfy the Brahmana was to pull out his two golden teeth to give them to him, Karna did not hesitate to do so. He got them washed in Ganga water aiming an arrow at the ground and making the river spout forth. Arjuna, who had a high opinion of his own prowess and devotion to Krishna, felt humbled at the sight of Karna's boundless generosity. The ways of the Divine should be properly understood. God exists not for one nation or one community. God incarnates on earth for the benefit of all mankind. Each one gets the reward according to his deserts, As are his actions, so are the fruits thereof. Hence before doing anything, one should consider whether it is right or wrong. One should see that no harm occurs to anyone on account of one's actions. This is not easy for one who is attached to the pleasures of the body. All sorrow is related to the body and worldly desires. You experience desires in the waking state. In the sushupthi (deep sleep) state one is totally unaware of even the body and of the phenomenal world. Hence there is no sorrow in that state. Rely primarily on the power of the Divine

By constant contemplation on God the mind should be turned away from mundane desires That is the way to get rid of both pain and pleasure. Man has to make up from the sleep of ignorance and realise his divine essence Sath-Chith-Aanandha. To the extent worldly desires are reduced, to the same extent bliss will be experienced. Simultaneously with the control of desires men should also get rid of Ahamkaara (egoism). Men today are filled with fear because they have no confidence in themselves. A bird can brave a storm because it has faith in its wings. But man succumbs to the slightest reverses of fortune because he does not rely on the power of the Spirit. People must rely primarily on the power of the Divine. With confidence in the Self, they should devote themselves to good deeds. This is the purpose of life. Every step you take must bring you nearer to God. Discourse in the Sai Kulwant Mandap on 30-6-1996.

24. Not salaries but service
EMBODIMENTS of Love! The educational system today prepares students for pursuing worldly gains and comforts, but makes no attempt to cultivate in them the qualities of righteousness, love of peace and promotion of social welfare. Both students and educationists are mainly concerned about using education for getting jobs and earning large incomes. What kind of life do they lead in their earning, career? After a so-called hard day's work, they spend their evenings in clubs, imagining that they get peace and rest there. If they wanted real peace they should have it in their homes. In the clubs they spend their time playing cards and having "bottles." Is this commendable? Does this benefit persons calling themselves educated? Far from it. Not only do they ruin themselves this way, but also ruin their families.

Instead of falling a prey to such pernicious habits, the educated should use their knowledge for the improvement of society and thereby redeem their lives. Addiction to drink makes a man ultimately a slave of the bottle.

Man's debt to God

Man is the beneficiary of innumerable gratuitous gifts of God: wind, rain, sunlight and so on.

What gratitude is man showing to God for all these, while he is paying a big price for every small benefit he derives from services like water supply and electric power? God is the provider of all that is essential for life. What recompense is man making to God? On the contrary he goes on praying for more benefits. This insatiable desire is the cause of all man's evil qualities. The truly human qualities are calmness, forbearance and compassion. Man should lead a contented life.

God has given to man a wonderfully beautiful world, with mountains, forests, rivers and the glorious moon. Above all, God has endowed man with a compassionate heart. But he is polluting it. What is it that man owes to God for all his gifts? The ancient sages called it bali (sacrificial offering). The term bali has been misunderstood as the offer of an animal as sacrifice. The right meaning of bali is tax.

Many such terms are often given wrong meanings in common usage. For instance, the term Shikhandi is interpreted as referring to a hermaphrodite (one who is neither a man nor a woman).

The true meaning, however, is "one who wears a peacock feather." The term is applied to Krishna.

What is the bali (tax) to be paid to God? Only the expression of our gratitude by a heartfelt prayer. That prayer is an expression of one's joy and thankfulness. The hands should be lifted in prayer and the words should come out full-throated. It is unfortunate that even those who are gifted with good voices do not sing aloud in bhajans. Man has been endowed with a tongue to sing the praise of God. If he fails to do so, he remains indebted to God. The right attitude of the devotee should be one of total surrender. As one devotee declared: "I am offering to you the heart which you gave me. I have nothing I can call my own. All are yours. I offer to you what is yours. What else can I do?" This was the spirit in which Lakshmana served Raama. As long as this spirit of total surrender is not developed, man will have to be born again and again. One should offer one's heart to the Divine, and not be content with offerings like flowers, and fruits.

You should offer your knowledge for the benefit of the people. You should set an example to your fellowmen. Cultivate the spirit of oneness of all mankind. It is to teach this message that the Sai advent has taken place. Sai has come to indicate the omnipresence of God. The Avathaar has come down to declare that God is present everywhere. This is as necessary as the need for some one to light a lamp even if you have a lamp holder, oil and wick. The Avathaar comes not only to proclaim the eternal virtues but also to shower His love on all mankind. But each one will get the benefit according to the size of the vessel he holds.

Discourse in the Sai Kulwant Mandap on 1-7-1996.

25. Adherence to truth

THERE is an eternal Truth which transcends the categories of time and space and is beyond the three gunas--Sathva, Rajas and Thamas. This Truth is God. All creation has emanated from this Truth and merges in it. The phenomena perceived by the senses are by their very nature transient and ever changing. The Spiritual reality is unchanging. The three letters in the term Sathyam represents Praana (life), Annam (food) and the Sun, who is the sustainer of all life. All the three represent the Brahmam. Another meaning of Sathya is control of the outward and inner senses.

When there is such sense control combined with purity in thought, word and deed, one experiences the Divine.

Dharma is based on Sathya. The Upanishathik saying is: "Sathyam vadha; Dharmam chara"

(Speak the Truth and practise righteousness). Today the number of persons adhering to truth is one in a thousand or so. Most of one's life is spent in untruth. A true being should lead a life based wholly on truth. Man is in desperate search of bliss in the external world, forgetting that the source of bliss is within him. Ignorance of his inherent Divinity makes a man miserable.

When the ignorance goes, his blissful nature reveals itself. Man has to realise this basic truth.

Overcome difficulties by adherence to Truth

Students! You should realise that whatever difficulties you may encounter in life, you can overcome them by steadfast adherence to truth. You must carry out your promise at any cost. You have the example of Emperor Bali, who honoured his pledge to Vaamana even at the cost of his kingdom and against the warning of his preceptor. Bali declared that there is no greater sin than going back on one's plighted word.

Even ten persons who adhere firmly to truth can save the world. How many today are prepared to sacrifice all theirs for truth? People listen to endless discourses, meet noble personalities and read all the scriptures. Of what use is all that when there is no practice of the teachings?

Man has evolved from the animal to the human and he must progress towards the Divine.

Unfortunately today he tends to revert to animality. Man should realise the infinite preciousness of human birth.

Discourse on 2.7.1996.

26. Bhagavaan deplores devotees' lapses

Without giving up Thaamasik tendencies

How can the truth be realised?

Without giving up Raajasik qualities

Bhakthi cannot be promoted.

The practice of Bhakthi

Is the Saathvik quality.

Hearken! Oh valiant son of Bhaarith!

THIS entire phenomenal universe is an expression of three qualities-- Sathva, Rajas and Thamas.

Every human being is an embodiment of these three qualities. How can such a being transcend the three qualities? It is only when man recognizes these qualities that he can go beyond them.

For all ordinary persons, all the three qualities are essential. Man cannot live without sleep. Man cannot perform any action without prior enquiry. Thought must precede any action. Sleep, enquiry and mentation are Thaamasik qualities.

Man cannot carry on his normal daily life without Raajasik activities. All desires arise from the Raajasik quality. Even the yearning for God is a Raajasik quality.

There is a Thelugu saying:

"No one can have the desire for liberation without experiencing other desires." Desires may be diverse, but their essential nature is the same. Qualities like anger, jealousy, hatred, pride and pompousness are Raajasik in nature. Even in the Raajasik quality there is an element of the Saathvik quality. Like the river Sarasvathi which is said to flow unseen between the rivers Ganga and Yamuna, the Saathvik quality is also present in a subtle form as the undercurrent between the Thaamasik and Raajasik qualities. As one examines each of these qualities individually, it will be found that there is a substratum of the Saathvik quality in the other two.

To develop the Saathvik quality, the Thaamasik quality is an accessory and the Raajasik quality is a necessary stage. When one goes beyond these two, the full nature of the Saathvik quality manifests itself.

From highway man to sage

How does one get over the Thaamasik quality? There is the example of Rathnaakara, who was originally a highway robber harassing and plundering wayfarers.

Absence of compassion and consideration for others is the mark of Thaamasik nature. Such a person was transformed into a great sage by the contact and teaching of the Seven Sages (Vasishta and others). Not only did he become a sage, he also became an immortal poet, the author of the Raamaayana, the epic story of the Raama Avathar. The term Kavi (poet) signifies one who has a vision of the past, the present and the future. The so called poets of today can hardly be called poets in the ancient sense of the term.

Vaalmeeki and Vyaasa, by their penance, transcended the three qualities, experienced the Divine and acquired the capacity to envision the three categories of time-- the past, the present and the future---thereby they became immortal poets. The company of the good was responsible for the transformation of a totally Thaamasik person like Rathnaakara into the totally Saathvik sage,

Vaalmeeki. This shows that no one need feel that a Thaamasik person cannot become a Saathvik person. For every transformation Divine Grace is the cause. It is possible at one jump to proceed from the Thaamasik to the Saathvik nature by Divine Grace and association with Godly persons.

From emperor to Brahmarishi

Coming to the Raajasik quality; it is characteristic of persons belonging to the Kshathriya

(warrior) caste. Hatred, jealousy, ostentation, egoistic pride, are some of the traits associated with the Raajasik quality. The sage who exemplifies the transformation from the Raajasik to Saathvik quality is Vishvaamithra. Vishvaamithra, who was steeped in Raajasik tendencies, became a great Raajarishi and later a Brahmarishi. His antipathy to sage Vasishta went to the extent of even contemplating the destruction of the sage. Vishvaamithra was hovering near the aashram

when he overheard a conversation between Vasishta and his spouse, Aurndhathi. Arundhathi expressed her admiration for the beautiful unblemished light the fullmoon was shedding that night. Immediately Vasishta observed: "Tonight's fullmoon is shining untainted like the pure penance of Vishvaamithra."

On hearing these words, Vishvaamithra realised how mistaken he was regarding Vasishta and rushed into the aashram, fell at the feet of Vasishta and prayed to him to forgive him. Vasishta lifted Vishvaamithra and hailed him as Brahmarishi (a sage who has realised the Supreme Self).

Vasishta, who had previously described Vishvaamithra as a Raajarishi (a royal sage), spontaneously hailed him as a Brahmarishi. Vishvaamithra could not contain himself and asked

Vasishta on what grounds he was calling Vishvaamithra a Brahmarishi. Vasishta said:

"Vishvaamithra! Hitherto you were filled with self-conceit. You are born with ego, grew with ego, and never bowed your head to any one. Today you put an end to your ego and fell at my feet. This is the significance of egolessness. A Brahmarishi is one who is free from egoism, acquisitiveness, pride and arrogance.

A true rishi is one who is free from evil tendencies

A rishi is not one who is a great scholar or a ritualist, but one who is free from evil tendencies.

The transformation of Rathnaakara from a highwayman to a sage, who could compose the Raamaayana, was possible because of his association with great rishis. But association alone was not enough. He practised wholeheartedly what the sages taught him. He lost his body consciousness in the contemplation of the name of Raama to such an extent that an ant-hill rose over him from which vibration of Raama's name could be heard.

A similar transformation occurred in the case of Vishvaamithra also. From a Raajasik King he became a Brahmarishi by sacrificing all earthly pleasures and performing severe penance.

Coming to the Saathvik quality, it should be noted that its main characteristic is a perennial state of peace. Other traits related to Sathva are forbearance, compassion, truth and similar virtues.

The Saathvik quality gives no room for vices like lust, anger, greed and envy. The Saathvik person converts any action of anger into an act of love. If one cannot effect such a change, all his austerities are useless.

Devotees' failures to practise love

Now, I wish to refer to a matter which you should consider without any misunderstanding. I have been propagating the message of love for many years. In every discourse Prema (Love) is repeatedly mentioned. How many of you are comprehending this love or practising it? If any comes to you with a query, can't you give a loving answer? I have not seen a single individual giving a loving reply. Either in the Mandhir, or in the canteen or in the Book Stall, or in the Accommodation Office or in the Hospital or in any other establishment there is not a hint of the word 'Prema.' Why, then, should you listen to these discourses? If any newcomer asks about how to have dharshan of Svaami he is rudely brushed aside with a "get away!" Cannot you tell somebody calmly what you know? If educated persons are approached, they dismiss the seeker of information with a curt: "No, this is not my duty." Should answering a question be prescribed as a duty? What does anyone lose if he gives a calm and loving answer?

Whether it be women or men devotees who have been staying here for over two decades, no one has a loving heart. They profess to perform saadhana, or japa or meditation, but what for are they doing all this? What has happened to the love in them? They seem to be stifling it. They are developing ill-feelings. If you are really serious about listening to Svaami's teachings, why don't you put them into practice? People live in the aashram, but their practices are unbecoming.

Is anyone doing any duty assigned to him with dedication? Are they uttering truth? Are they speaking pleasantly? I have neither seen nor heard such things.

If anyone wants to talk to you, you can excuse yourself if you want to avoid any talk. You can explain sweetly: "Svaami disapproves of excessive talk. I have to adhere to His injunctions."

Open your hearts for God's love

I do not find any teachers or students, doctors or nurses talking lovingly. There should be some benefit from your listening to the discourses. But there is nothing of the kind. During bhajans the women are engaged in mutual recrimination. They quarrel over seats. "This seat is mine. That is yours." They compete for front seats. Cannot they experience

Bhagavaan wherever they are?

You have plenty of time and are receiving plenty of love. But you don't avail yourself of it. If you keep your pots topsy turvy, how can you collect any water even if there is a downpour?

Today those who listen to the discourses are keeping the pots of their hearts upside down. Hence not a drop of love gets into your hearts. Why, should you come here?

Cannot you live

elsewhere? What is the use of your coming here? What are you achieving from your stay? What bliss are you deriving? Nothing at all. It is sheer waste of time. Treat patients with love At least from now on, reply with love to anyone who comes to you. Those functioning in the Accommodation Office or Public Relations or other places in the aashram should not behave like bull-dogs or Alsatian hounds. We are spending crores of rupees on the hospitals. Why should not the patients be treated with love? Many patients will get well merely by kind and sweet words. But many of them are turned away rudely. This is totally unbecoming of persons claiming to be devotees. If they have come to serve Svaami, they should cultivate love as the first quality. Svaami is the embodiment of love from head to foot. I offer love. You accept it, but do not make good use of it. Embodiments of love! I continue to call you as such though you are lacking in love! You need not cultivate anything but love. That will be equal to any amount of penance you can possibly do. When new devotees come to the aashram you must welcome them as the air-hostesses do on a plane. In the Institute also, freshers who join in the new year should be welcomed and treated with special regard and affection. They should be made to forget the separation from their parents. In outside colleges, new entrants are subjected to ragging by the old students. This conduct is demonic. Is this the way to treat the new entrants, who should be made to feel happy and comfortable? Likewise new entrants to the hostel should be welcomed with love and helped to adjust themselves to their new life. It is only when you show them due consideration that you would have really understood Svaami's Prema-thathva (Love Principle). Stony devotion Learn to respect all. Only then will you earn the grace of the Divine who is the Indweller in all beings. Harming living beings and worshipping inanimate idols, what kind of devotion is this? Bullocks which work night and day are whipped, but a stone idol of Nandhi is adored by going round it. This is stony devotion! Not devotion from the heart. At least from now on, make your hearts pure. Fill it with genuine compassion instead of talking about compassion ad nauseam. You have been in this aashram for many years. Ashram means a place where there is no stress or strain. Many devotees feel that they are being driven about like street dogs outside the aashram and pray for at least a few quiet moments in the interview room. But, how many can be taken into the interview room? It is not possible to give an interview for all at one time. Hence, this open interview for all! All are being treated alike. Develop love. From tomorrow you must speak to one another lovingly. Get rid of your animal qualities. Love all. This is the true Saathvik quality. Manifest your humanness and progress towards the Divine. Get rid of animality and demonic qualities. To acquire Svaami's grace the path of love is the only royal road. Discourse in Sai Kulwant Mandap on 3-7-1996. Youth is the stage in life when the slightest turn towards wrong will spell disaster. Thoughts shape the career You plan to earn much wealth, because you imagine that rich people are very happy. The rich have plenty to eat, but they have no appetite. The rich wield power over others but they are held down by disease. The rich can have many servants but they cannot live in peace. So, plan to be rich in virtue, in devotion and dedication to good causes. Be rich in sovereign character. Baba 27. The human adventure Through meritorious deeds And acts of sacrifice, Developing love in the heart, Suppressing demonic traits, Fostering devotion to God, Lead your daily life, Oh Man! In boyhood man is immersed in sport; In youth he is lost in sensual pleasures; In old age, unaware of the Divine Lord, He pursues one thing or another; Unable to give up evil tendencies. Incapable of taking to the path of Devotion He wallows in the cesspool of Karma And makes human life a clod of earth. (Theugu Poem) Man intelligent being, but does not know how to utilise his intelligence. Some persons, even though they know how to use it, pursue wrong paths. If they are asked, why they behave like this, they glibly answer that the whole thing is Maaya, an illusion. Maaya is only called by the name illusion, but it has no existence in reality. People imagine that it is Maaya which produces the phenomenal world and makes it appear as real in all its varied forms. Scholars have described Maaya as a Narthaki (dancer). This Maaya is said to make every man dance. How is Maaya to be controlled? Read the word Narthaki in reverse and you have the answer Keerthana. This is proclaimed as the path of devotion.

Misconceptions about Saadhana

There are several misconceptions about Saadhana (spiritual exercise) for Self Realisation. For instance, some women devotees feel sad when they are unable to attend Bhagavaan's discourses because of their preoccupation with domestic duties and attending to their spouses and children.

What is the service they render by taking part in a Sathsang or a discourse? To attend to one's household duties, look after the children and attend to the needs of the husband and others at home constitute the right type of saadhanas. Even the preparation of meals in the home is a great saadhana. To remove the stones from the rice before it is cooked is one kind of yoga--- gunathraya vibhaaga yoga--the yoga of division of the three qualities. Every stage in the cooking of vegetables may be deemed a spiritual exercise. Likewise every household chore can be sanctified without a sense of regret that you are missing a bhajan or a discourse. Even the sweeping of the house may be considered as a process of purifying the heart. All such thoughts are spiritually exalting. Such actions are better than listening indifferently to a discourse and forgetting the teachings thereafter. Doing one's duty is the highest spiritual endeavour.

Giving up bad qualities is true renunciation

There are many ochre-robed persons going about flaunting their so called renunciation while they are full of pride and possessiveness. During an encounter between a renunciant and Ubhayaabhaarathi, wife of the scholar Mandana Mishra, she made the renunciant realise how he was filled with attachment and egoism in spite of his having renounced everything. The ascetic fell at the feet of Ubhayaabhaarathi and sought her forgiveness. He assured her that thereafter he would practise renunciation in the true sense of the term.

Thyaaga (Renunciation) does not mean giving up hearth and home but giving up bad qualities.

That alone is true sacrifice and real yoga. It is enough if man gives up raaga (attachment) and dvesha (hatred). If everyone adheres to his Aashrama-Dharma (the code of conduct pertaining to one's stage in life), devotes his time to meditation on God, he will be redeeming his life.

There is no need to go in search of Divinity elsewhere. The Divine is the Indweller in every heart like sugar at the bottom of a tumbler filled with water. If the water is stirred with the spoon of Buddhi (the intellect), Divinity will be experienced in the heart.

Have the conviction that God is within you and in every being. Hence bear no ill-will towards any-body. Show your love and esteem for everyone.

Sai is the Mother for the motherless

Let me refer to something, which I am not anxious to reveal. A young boy who gave his word to me years ago continues to stand by it to this day. The student who spoke first this afternoon is a boy from Shimla. I am seeing him today. Ten years ago he came as a small boy. He was studying in the primary school. A younger brother of his (who was in the Mandap) is also studying in the primary school. Their mother was brought in a stretcher from Himaachal Pradesh to Brindhaavan. I drew both the boys close to me and told the mother: "They are my children. Don't worry about them. Have no worry on their account." The mother gave her word to Svaami. "I am entrusting my children to you, Sai Maatha!" Uttering these words, she closed her eyes.

I brought the two boys from Brindhaavan to Prashaanthi Nilayam. They were very young at the time. The elder boy said at that time: "My mother is Mother Sai". The father also affirmed the son's words.

From that moment these two boys have not shed a single tear. These children at that tender age held fast to their words. In life once a promise has been made to the Lord there will be no room for grief. That is the meaning of Sharanaagathi (surrender to the Lord).

The mother was no more. Even the father appeared rarely. The children were left totally in the care of Svaami. Morning and evening I used to speak to the boys and enquire about their welfare.

Their tender hearts were filled with total faith in Bhagavaan. Today the elder boy spoke well about faith. He is full of that faith. They did not feel at any time the loss of their mother.

One day the warden brought the boy to me from the primary school, saying that he was feeling the absence of his mother. She told Svaami that the boy is not taking food and is weeping incessantly. He was five years old at that time. He was in the first standard. I took him inside the interview room, gave him a ring and spoke pleasantly to him and made him forget his loss. From that moment he has always been smiling and laughing.

What is needed is total faith

The hearts of the children are so pure. Today elders are unable to understand such pure love.

Love is so sacred. It confers limitless courage and forbearance. What would have been the plight of these children in any other place? They could get on here because they were with Svaami.

Svaami takes care of them with the love of a thousand mothers. This truth is not being understood even by many renunciants. They perform Japa and sit in meditation. But to what end? They are immersed in their egoism and attachment.

What is needed is total faith; in a simple word: Love. Abide by it and lead a worthy life. Love will confer every kind of strength you need to sustain you in life. If you recognise the Divine in all, you will be blessed with everything.

Svaami's boundless love

Students should understand that I take interest in the welfare of every child. I constantly enquire about all of them with the warden. Students who are not aware of Bhagavaan's boundless love, feel depressed when they think Svaami does not speak to them. But I am having my eyes on all of them. The boy who spoke earlier said that he had lost one mother but found a thousand mothers. How many will make such a declaration? He began his speech with an appeal to Mother Sai. It is this faith which is sustaining them and making them overcome all problems.

Hence, develop this Love Principle. Moreover, you have also got to develop discipline. In recent months, there appears to be a falling off in discipline in Prashanthi Nilayam. As soon as the bhats are over, the devotees get up and make a lot of noise. Similarly, when the people called for interview, go into the interview room, the people in the Mandhir verandah and outside get up after the door is closed and indulge in noisy talk as in a market-place. After Bhagavaan's discourse is over, devotees should ruminate over Svaami's speech and not indulge in idle talk. It is all one cacophony from both the men's and women's wings of the Mandap. There should be no such talking, not only in Prashanthi Nilayam but outside also, in the bazaars. Discipline is like a shadow. It should follow you wherever you may go. Bhagavaan desires from all of you only discipline. Hence, when the discourse is over or when the bhajans end, you should go out in silence. When you get back to your apartments you may discuss your private affairs. But as a rule observe restraint in speech everywhere. It helps to conserve energy. Excessive talk affects the nerves. You are liable to forget what you have heard.

Moreover, elders set a bad example to students by talking in front of them. You should realise that the voice of the Divine is heard in the depths of silence.

Restraint in speech also calls for the avoidance of harsh words.

Speaking lovingly and ever thinking of God, you will be oblivious to all worldly things.

Discourse in Sai Kulwant Mandap on 4-7-1996.

The very first lesson of the Primer of the spiritual text is Control of Speech. The speech is the armament of man; other animals have fleetness of foot, sharpness of clam, fang, horn, tusk, beak and talon. But man has sweetness of speech which can disarm opposition and defeat all the designs of hatred. Sweetness makes you Pashupathi -- Divine; harshness makes you Pashu beastial.

Mere outward politeness or sweetness is hypocrisy; sincere speech must flow from real sweetness of heart, a heart full of love.

Baba

28. Saadhana and sense control

Of what use is all Saadhana

without sense control?

Of what avail is practice of yoga

without forbearance?

Of what use is japa without

Peace of mind?

It is like ploughing a barren field.

STUDENTS! "By diligent efforts success can be achieved, says the adage. An ant can cover miles by continuous movement. But even Garuda (the celestial eagle) cannot soar two feet if it has no will to fly. Likewise, without good thoughts and good deeds based on them, a man cannot accomplish anything good. The child Dhruva could achieve what he desired because of his firm determination and the spiritual austerities he observed, despite the ordeals he had to go through.

By his sublime thoughts, he achieved the status of a star in the sky. Likewise, any man irrespective of age or abilities, who has faith and determination, can accomplish what he wants.

You are aware of the stories of many sages who embarked on severe penances but failed to complete them because of lack of faith and determination.

Vishvaamithra was repeatedly foiled

in this way by either loss of self-control or succumbing to temptation.

In every field Saadhana (steadfast performance) is essential. For instance, the participants in the bhajans have improved their singing by constant practice. The sage Dhurvaasa, despite all his penances, could have no peace because he could not control his temper.

Together with peace, the quality of Kshama (forgiveness) is also essential.

Forgiveness is truth, it is Dharma,

It is the essence of the Vedha,

It is non-violence and it Yajna,

It is the source of joy and everything else says a Thelugu Poem. Kshama (forbearance) is for every man a third eye.

Entire life is a dream

For all these, the primary quality that is necessary is love. Without love there can be no life. A student who spoke earlier said: "Life is a dream, realise it." What is a dream? Entire life is a dream. During the day you sit here and listen to Svaami's discourse.

This is not a dream. You see with your eyes, listen with your ears, absorb with your mind and chasten your heart. All these are apparently proofs of Prathyaksha Pramaanam (direct perception).

But how far is this real? When you go to sleep at night, all this direct perception vanishes. In your night dreams you experience joy and sorrow. How long do they last? Till you wake up. Then all the dreams become unreal. In the waking state, the dream world has no existence. In the dream state the waking world does not exist. So, what we have are a day-dream and a night dream distinct from each other. But you are present in both the states. Hence you are omnipresent. When both the waking and sleeping states are experienced as dreams life itself becomes a dream. Realise it. That means, you must realise the true nature of these states.

The student said: "Life is love, enjoy it." Verily love is God.

Purandhara-dhaasa sang about the glory of the devotee's love for God. "Even as a lotus adorns a lake, the moon adorns the sky and waves are the adornment for the ocean, for your devotees. Oh Lord! love is the greatest adornment." Nothing lends greater beauty to a devotee than his love for the Divine.

Love is like mariner's compass

Hence love is Divine. Have love for all. Impart your love even to those who lack love. Love is like mariner's compass. Wherever you may keep it, it points the way to God. In every action in daily life manifest your love. Divinity will emerge from that love. This is the easiest path to Godrealisation.

But, why are not people taking to it? This is because they are obsessed with misconception relating to the means of experiencing God. They regard God as some remote entity attainable only by arduous spiritual practices. God is everywhere. There is no need to search for God. All that you see is a manifestation of the Divine. All the human beings you see are forms of the Divine. Correct your defective vision and you will experience God in all things.

Love for Svaami has brought you here

Develop the sense of the spiritual oneness of all beings. The power of love is immeasurable. $o many of you have assembled here. What has brought you all here?

Love alone is the primary reason. You have gathered here in such large numbers because of your love for Svaami and Svaami's love for you. You have all come of your own accord. The binding factor is love.

Speak lovingly, act lovingly, think with love and do every action with a love-filled heart. There is no need for counting beads or sitting in meditation, while your mind is preoccupied with worldly matters. The japa you have to perform is constantly to remind yourself of the Divine within you. This is the supreme message of the Vedhas.

Realise that the path of divine love is the easiest, the sweetest and surest path to God.

Discourse on 5- 7-1996.

Whatever I do, it is for you, not for Me. For what is it that can be called Mine ? Only you.

Baba

29. Love for the divine transcends all kin

Happiness emerges from total love;

Truth and renunciation lead to peace;

Without love there is no well-being;

Hearken! oh valiant son of Bhaarith!

STUDENTS! There can be no human being who is unaware of love.

The universe is permeated with love. Love is beyond description. It is beyond the grasp of the mind and speech. Naaradha declared: "Love is beyond the scope of words."

How can an ordinary man, living in this phenomenal world, understand such love? This love is an expression of Divinity. Like the mariners compass, it always points to the Dime wherever it may be present. As oil makes a lamp burn, love illumines life itself.

What is termed love in ordinary worldly life is not real love at all. It is only one or other form of attachment based on human relationships in the family or in society.

True love is pure, selfless, free from pride, and is full of bliss. Such love can be got only through love. All worldly attachments are not real love at all. They are transient. The everlasting, pure love arises from the heart. In fact, it is ever-existing and all-pervading. How is it that man is unable to recognise such all-pervading love? It is because man's heart today has become barren and is polluted. The heart is filled with all kinds of desires and there is no room in it for pure, unsullied love to enter. It is only when the worldly attachments are expelled from the heart that there will be room for real love to abide in it and to grow. Quality of true love is to give and not to receive. As a man grows from childhood to manhood, his attachments change from the mother to friends, to wife and children, and then to the acquisition of wealth. In the ups and downs involved in the pursuit of wealth, he begins to feel the need for God. This perpetual alternation of attachment and separation cannot be called real love which is spiritual and enduring.

The quality of true love is to give and not to receive. How many are to be found today in the world who love to give? Even a father hesitates to part with his property to his children. Only God can be the infinite giver. Hence love is a divine quality. Although inherently love is present in every cell of the human being it does not manifest itself because of the pollution of the heart.

A man without love in his heart is as good as dead. Make the preceptor's message part of your being. Once a preceptor summoned all his disciples and told them that he was going to give them something extremely sweet which they should protect from insects and rodent. The disciples resorted to various devices to safeguard the guru's gift. However, one of them ate the sweet, digested it and derived considerable strength and energy from it. What is the lesson to be drawn from this story? It means that the teachings learnt from the preceptor are not to be merely preserved in safety. The nectarine message of the preceptor should be enshrined in the heart. It should be made part of one's being. Then the recipient acquires vigour and strength.

In the same manner, whatever you see or hear or read should be taken to heart and then put into practice. Only then you have the full satisfaction of benefiting from the teachings. Hearing is not enough. You must take in and digest what you have listened to. It must be put into practice in daily life. This was the prayer which the gopikas addressed to Krishna that the nectarine music flowing from His flute should fill their dry hearts with divine love. A pure heart is essential for progress in the spiritual or other fields. Divine love is all-compassing and the whole cosmos is contained within it. Hence it is essential for man to comprehend the nature of this love. Today, the world is riddled with disorder, violence and unrest.. Injustice, exploitation, corruption and immorality are 'ubiquitous. All these are the very antithesis of love. Only through the divine love can the world be transformed.

Aathmik love (Spiritual love) has to be distinguished from love or attachment related to the body, the mind or the intellect. These latter attachments are related to the world and they are the source of sorrow.

Four types of love

Love of the Divine is of four kinds. One is Svaartha-Prema (love based on self-interest). The second is Samanjasa-Prema, the third is Paraartha-Prema, and the fourth is Yatharthartha-Prema.

Svaartha-Prema is like a lamp kept in a room. The lamp illumines only the room. This kind of selfish love is confined to a limited group and does not extend to others.

Samanjasa-Prema may be compared to the light from the moon. This moonlight is visible both outside and inside. It is, however, not very effulgent. The light is dim. This kind of love extends to a wider group but is not very intense.

The third is Paraartha-Prema. It is like sun-light. It illumines both inside and outside with brilliance. But it is not continuous in the sense that the sun is not visible at night. But this is not a permanent absence, because the sun rises again. Actually, the sun is always there. Likewise, this selfless love may appear to be absent some times, but it will appear again.

The fourth one is Yatharthartha-Prema or Aathma-Prema. This love is present always, inside and outside, in all places and at all times, in all circumstances. This is Divine Love. It is imperishable. It is eternal. It is immanent in everyone. When this love is manifested by a person, he achieves the peace that passeth understanding.

Supreme example of Vibheeshana

How the love of the Divine manifests itself in a devotee is illustrated by the example of Vibheeshana, the younger brother of Raavana. Vibheeshana submitted himself to many indignities at the hands of Raavana out of the love he had for Raama. In the battle against the Raakshasas in Lanka, Raama and Lakshmana destroyed many of the great Raakshasa warriors on the first two days. On the third day a formidable warrior stood before them.

Vibheeshana told Raama: "If you conquer this warrior, the whole of Lanka will be yours. He is a greater warrior than even Raavana. Raama fought with this mighty Raakshasa the whole day, but could not vanquish him. Raama was on the point of giving up the battle for the day. At this stage-, Vibheeshana, who was behind Raama, said: "This is not the time to give up the fight. You must rally all your strength and destroy the enemy. You should not miss this chance. I am telling this out of my love for you." Egged on by Vibheeshana, Raama continued the fight and destroyed his opponent. The formidable warrior fell on the battlefield. The moment he learned that the warrior was dead, Vibheeshana also collapsed on the ground. Recovering himself after chanting the name of Raama, Vibheeshana got up and confessed to Raama: "Svaami! This is a mark of weakness on my part. I should not have succumbed to such weakness. Having filled myself with your love, how could I succumb to such weakness?" Raama observed: "That's all right. But why did you collapse so suddenly?" Vibheeshana replied: "Svaami! This happened because of bodily attachment. It was due to parental affection. That mighty warrior was my son."

He was Vibheeshana's son! See what Vibheeshana did. To ensure the victory of the Lord, Vibheeshana did not hesitate to get even his son killed in battle. God is greater than son

Raama asked Vibheeshana: "Why did you do this? Is it not wrong on your part? Why did you not tell me at the beginning itself that he was your son?" Vibheeshana replied: "When you are facing an enemy, you should not worry about any kind of relationship on the battlefield. In this war there is no room for considerations of relationship. When anyone takes up arms against you, he ceases to be a relation. Whether it is mother, father, son or anybody else, when he figures as an enemy especially against God, there can be no question of relationship. I have completely surrendered to you. I am your servant. I must be primarily be concerned about your victory and not about any temporary kinship. The only truth for me is your will." It is this abounding love of Vibheeshana for Raama, which contributed to Raama's victory. Love for the Divine should be inextricable bond. All other worldly attachments are impermanent.

Thaamasik bonds are like iron chains. Raajasik bonds are copper chains. Saathvik bonds are like chains of gold. But, whether the chains are of iron, copper or gold, they are chains all the same.

The nature of the metals may vary, but the chains are shackles nevertheless. Vibheeshana declared: "I have no use for any of these bonds. I am content with the pure love of Raama."

It is to demonstrate to the world the supreme quality of total love for the Divine that Vibheeshana acted in this manner.

Vibheeshana is a saathvik (Supremely sacred) friend of Raama. Despite his long intimacy with Raama, Lakshmana was not in the same category. He was a saathvik brother, not a saathvik friend. Sugriva was a Raajasik friend. Jaambhavan was a thaamasik friend. Vibheeshana, though he belonged to the Raakshasa brood, stands out as a saathvik friend (pure and selfless). It is in this unalloyed purity that love shines. It is utterly invaluable. Divine Love as glorified by the Vedhas

About Divine love the Shruthi (Vedha) declares: "It did not originate from the firmament. It did not grow from the earth. It has no birth and .death. It is all-pervading. It emerges from the heart when the knots of ignorance are broken." This is how the Vedhas glorified Divine Love. Even Naaradha, the author of the Bhakthi Suthras, could not describe the nature of Divine Love. He described in various terms the state of mind of the devotees filled with love of the Lord, but he could not describe prema (love) itself. He compared Prema to a priceless gem. Likewise Tulasidas also referred to Raama's name as a precious gem. Where is this love to be found? It can be got only from Bhagavaan Himself, who is the very embodiment of love. Do not treat lightly this infinitely valuable love, which is eternal, pure, sacred and powerful beyond words. Do not miss this opportunity given to you by Sai. It is only devotion to His feet that will redeem you. Do not be swayed by anyone's words. Come all of you! Come! Come along and bask in this blissful love!

Discourse in Sai Kulwant Mandap on 27- 7-1996.

My desire, if I can put it that way, is this: More and more should yearn for me. That desire can be realized only if I assume this form and come among you. Those of you who have been following the unfolding of my story will have discovered this by now ... My purpose can be understood in a general way only by earnestly and vigilantly watching, trying to get to the meaning of every word and action with patient attention.

30. Seek the guru within you
All the stars are Brahman;
The Sun is also Brahman;

The Moon is Brahman; Water is Brahman;
Svarga is Brahman; Vaikunttha is Brahman;
 Speech is Brahman; the individual is Brahman;
 Birth is Brahman; Sustenance is Brahman; Death is Brahman;
 All actions are Brahman; the body is Brahman;
 The whole of nature is Brahman;
 Life is Brahman. This assembly is Brahman.
 The Sai proclaiming this Truth is Brahman.
 The tree growing out of the soil returns to the soil;
 The individual arising from Brahman returns to Brahman;
 This truth is not easily perceived
 That is the mystery of this marvellous creation.
 EMBODIMENTS of Brahman! When a seed is sown in the earth, it sprouts as a sapling and grows in due course into a big tree. In the tree, the branches, the leaves, the flowers and the fruits all appear as distinct from each other. Moreover, each of them is used for a specific purpose. But all of them are different forms of the mud from which they have originated.
 Seeing a rope at a distance, suspecting that it may be a snake, a man develops fear. Soon another person arrives and assures him that it is not a snake but a rope. The moment he realises that what he feared was a snake, was only a rope, he gets rid of his fear. During all the stages, the rope was only a rope.
 Likewise, the ignorant man mistakes the phenomenal world for the Brahman, till a jnaani reveals to him that what he thought was Nature is in reality Brahman. All that one sees in the entire universe is a manifestation of the Brahman. Some people declare:
 "Where is Brahman and what are we, petty human beings? How can we be equal to the all encompassing Brahman?" This is not correct. You are that omnipotent, all-pervading Brahman.
 Because of your worldly attitude, you are not recognising the Reality. You are separating yourself from the Divine. All that you see is Brahman. To search for God as something different from you is a delusion. But this truth is not easily recognised by man.
 When you look at the ocean, its endless series of waves and the foam from the waves, they all appear separate from each other. But the truth is they are all one. The water in the waves and in the foam comes from the same ocean and has the same qualities.
 Likewise, from the infinite ocean of Sath-Chith-Aanandha (Being-Awareness-Bliss), innumerable living creatures emerge like waves. While the Divine is in the state of Sathyam-Inaanam-Anantham (Truth-Wisdom-Infinity) man is in the state of Sath-Chith-Aanandha.

 Fill your vision with love Embodiments of Divine Aathma! When you fill your vision with love, the whole creation will appear divine to you.
 The cosmos appears to you as a manifestation of diversity, but in reality there is no diversity. No one makes any effort to discover the unity that underlies the diversity.
 In every human being, both Divinity and the Maaya principle are immanent. How is this to be comprehended? Sath-Chith-Aanandha represent the Divine in man.
 The names and forms which man perceives are expressions of the Maaya principle.
 On the ocean, the wind is the cause of waves, on the ocean of Sath-Chith-Aanandha, the wind of Maaya gives rise to the innumerable living creatures. Therefore, the individuals who have emerged from the ocean of Sath-Chith-Aanandha are manifestations of the Divine. Divinity is everywhere. But because of man's ignorance, man is a prey to numerous troubles. Here is an example:
 Today is described as Guru Puurnima day. This is not quite correct.
 The day got its name because of some gurus who wanted to have an occasion for receiving offerings from their disciples. The right name for this day is Vyaasa Puurnima.
Vyaasa was born on this full-moon day. He completed the codification of the writing of the eighteen pure has on this day. Owing to the passage of time Vyaasa Puurnima came to be called Guru Puurnima.
 The Trinity and the three gunas
 The true meaning of Guru is "one who dispels the darkness of ignorance". Another meaning of the word is "one who is beyond attributes and forms, namely, the Supreme Self (The Brahman)".
 When this Self is within you where is the need to search for someone to teach you? A teacher who teaches others has had a teacher himself. The one who has no Guru above him is the true guru. The Sanskrit stanza which hails the guru as Brahma, Vishnu and Maheshvara and as Parabrahman is misinterpreted. The right approach is to consider Brahma, Vishnu and Maheshvara as the guru. These three are symbolised by the three gunas: Brahma is Rajas, Vishnu is Sathva and Shiva is Thamas. The whole cosmos is constituted by the three gunas. The three gunas are present in man. The Trinity are present in the form of the three gunas in every human heart.

Hence, you are your own guru. You need not seek him elsewhere. The so-called gurus of today seek to impart some manthras and receive fee-offerings as Guru-Dhakshina on Gum-Puurnima

day. The manthra is whispered in the ear and the palm is stretched for an offering. This is what happens today. It is not the proper sign of a guru.

You are a guru unto yourself. All potencies are within you. This is indicated by the Gaayathri

Manthra.

You have to feel at all times your inherent divinity, which is also present in everyone. When you help or feed someone you must feel that the Divine in you is feeding the Divine in others.

Follow Svaami to get the powers

Embodiments of Divine Aathma! For many years you have been pursuing wrong paths because of the feeling of separateness. The truth is you are part of the Samashti (collective). This collective is a part of Srishti (creation). Beyond creation is Pushti (the cosmic energy).. Transcending that energy is Parameshthi (the Supreme Omni Self). You are all these as an embodiment of the Divine. You have to proceed from the individual to a realisation of the Omni Self.

All are manifestations of the Divine. You may ask whether you can ever acquire the powers possessed by Svaami. Follow me. You are bound to get that power. That power is latent in you.

But you are not aware of it. You want to experience bliss. If you truly follow Svaami, you will discover that bliss within you. Nor is that all. You will find that bliss all around you, wherever you go. You cannot find that bliss in the physical world. It is wholly within you. Consider yourself as Brahman (Divine) at all times and in all situations. You will thereby become one with the Divine.

Turn your mind Godward and you will experience the bliss of the Divine. It is for this reason that Svaami gives you advice from time to time as to what you should do and what you should avoid.

All this is not for my sake but for your own good, to make you take to the path of God

Realisation, to teach you the Supreme truth about the Brahman and to make your sacred life an ideal one.

Every man should strive to become an ideal human being. This means that every one should testify to his Divinity. Imagine how happy everyone would be if the entire world was filled with this pure, sublime and sacred ideal.

Recognise that God is your preceptor. He is the preceptor of preceptors. When you have such an all-pervading guru, why should you hanker after gurus of lesser breed?

Names vary but the Lord is One

All are children of God. All are embodiments of the Divine, as declared in the Geetha. Vishnu is described as the Lord carrying in His four hands the conch, the discus, the mace and the lotus.

These four represent the cosmic power of sound, the wheel of Time, the puissance of the Lord and the heart in which the Lord dwells.

There is a certain naivety about the way in which Vaishnavites and Shaivites adore the same deity, Venkateshvara. Vaishnavites hail Him as "Venkataramana," while Shaivites hail Him as "Venkateshvara." The votaries of each sect derive some special satisfaction from using a particular name, though the Lord they worship is one and the same.

The names vary but the Lord is one.

Shiva is called Pashupathi (the Lord of cattle). Krishna is worshipped as Gopala (the Lord of cows). The emblems of Shiva and Vishnu have common characteristics. Sectarian differences are out of place in the worship of the Divine.

Students should learn a lesson from a musical instrument like the Veena. It has different strings producing different vibrations. But if the vibrations are discordant the music jars on the ears. Just as there should be harmony in playing on the Veena, there should be harmony among people in a country professing different faiths.

Shraddha and Bhakthi

Shirdi Baba used to ask for two rupees from devotees who came to him. The two rupees symbolised Shraddha (earnestness) and Bhakthi (devotion). These are the two qualities he expected from the devotees. The combination of the two is essential for spiritual progress. Only then bliss will emerge like a plant from a seed.

From this day onwards, give up all differences and concentrate on realisation of the Brahman

(the Omni Self). All are embodiments of Brahman. In due course all will realise this truth by eschewing narrow-minded differences. Develop the sense of spiritual oneness by continuous practice. This sense is bound to grow if you act upto Svaami's injunctions. The primary requisite is love for God.

Discourse in the Sai Kulwant Mandap on 30-7-1996.

31. The message of Vedhaantha

One may master the scriptures,

Or be a great composer of poems,

But without purity of heart

These accomplishments are valueless.

EMBODIMENTS of Divine Aathma! From ancient times Bhaarith has been famous for its exposition of the four Purushaarthas (the four goals of life--Dharma, Artha, Kaama and Moksha) and the teachings of the Vedhas and Vedhaangas. The Vedhas embody the sublime

truths experienced by the sages and the seers.

Vedha is derived from the root 'vidh.' It means knowledge. The Vedha proclaims the truths, which are valid for all time, for all the three worlds, relating to the well-being of mankind and the divinisation of human life. The Vedhas taught the principles of daily life and how people should order their lives. Their approach is dualistic, being concerned about how men should achieve the four goals of life in the world.

The Vedhas, which originally constituted a single body of hymns, were later divided into three sections: Rig-Vedha Yajur-Vedha and Saama-Vedha. The Yajur-Vedha later got subdivided into Shukla and Krishna Yajur-Vedha. Then came Atharvana-Vedha.

The nine Vedhas

The Vedhas are known by nine names. The first is Shruthi--that is, what is learnt by listening.

This was necessary in ancient times when printing of books was unknown. The others are:

Anushravana, Aamnaaya, Samaamnaaya, Chandhas, Adhyaasa, Gamana, Nigama, Aagama.

Nigama and Aagama refer to the breathing process of the Divine.

All the Vedhas relate to the affairs of the phenomenal world. Each Vedha has a Samhitha (collection) made up of Brahmanas, Aranyakas and Upanishaths. All these lay down the practices that should be observed in the stages of Grihastha (householder) and Vaanaprastha

(hermit leading an ascetic life). The practices were intended to control the mind. They are not designed to enable one to have direct experience of God.

It is Vedhaantha that deals with the question of Self-Realisation. For the spiritual journey, it is the guide-post and the destination.

There are three essential things to be understood regarding Vedhaantha. First is Thaarakam.

Second is Saankhya. Third is Amanaskam.

Thaarakam calls for the understanding of four, principles: Kesari,

Dhesari, Madhyama and Bhagavathi. Thaarakam calls for the investigation of five mudhras (ritualistic hand gestures) and after realising their spiritual insignificance, concentrate on Sath-Chith-Aanandha and merge the mind in the bliss of that experience.

Saankhya envisages twenty five entities made up of the five sense organs, the five sheaths, the five life-breaths, the five elements, the mind, the body, the intellect, the inner motivator and the individual soul. This system of yoga calls, for an enquiry into the reality of each of these entities leading to the discovery that the Reality, Sath-Chith-Aanandha, is beyond all these and to recognise one's identity with this transcendental Aathma. This calls for an exploring of both the external world and the internal world of mind and spirit.

Amanaskam means the realisation that the entire universe is nothing but Brahman, which is the only Reality. When there is this realisation of Brahman the one without a second--even the mind ceases to exist. It is only the operations of the mind that result in the perception of diversity in the universe. When oneness is experienced, there is no mind at all. All is Brahman in that state of consciousness. There is room only for Prema (Love) in this state. That love is Truth.

Power of love experienced in the state of oneness

The power of that love is illustrated by an episode in Bhaagavatham. Once Yashodha went in search of Krishna and could not find him anywhere. She met Raadha and asked her whether she had seen Krishna. Raadha closed her eyes and meditated intensely on Krishna. That very moment Krishna appeared there. Yashodha realised that the love of a devotee like Raadha for Krishna was infinitely greater than her own maternal love for him.

This is how the Divine reveals Himself to devotees. Krishna appeared instantaneously before Raadha because of her pure, selfless love. If the heart is polluted or filled with pride, God cannot be experienced even if one tries for endless years.

Yashodha confessed to Raadha that her devotion had removed the veil of ignorance and pride clouding her vision all along. She admitted that there were many who loved Krishna more than she did and requested Raadha to teach her how to love Krishna.

Raadha told Yashodha that this love cannot be taught by others. Each one has to develop it by one's own pure and total devotion.

After Krishna came home, Yashodha chided him for going to others houses to steal butter while refusing to eat what was available in plenty at home. The lesson to be drawn from Krishna's action is that He preferred to enjoy the devotion and love of His devotees rather than the maternal solicitude of Yashodha.

How to realise the presence of Divine within

This means that if you have pure, sacred, selfless love for God, the Divine will appear at that very instant.

How do you realise the presence of the Divine within you? Your body is made up of physical constituents like iron, water, phosphorus and lead, the value of all of which totals barely a few rupees. And yet within the body there is a power which can make millions. Wherefrom does that power come? Does it come from the mother who gave birth to the child? No. Till the child in the womb is four months and nine days old, the foetus is just a round mass of jelly. Then a force of vibration enters the embryo. Wherefrom does that vibration come?

That is the Brahma-Thathva

(Brhaman principle). That is the Praana-Thathva (Life Principle).

From that moment the child in the womb starts moving. Simultaneously the Brahman Principle enters the foetus. The combination of the two in the body is Thaarakam. This is one of the secret doctrines of Vedhaantha. This process is treated as a human phenomenon. It is not something human. It is a manifestation of Brahman.

When I speak through the mike you are able to hear me. But without the current the mike cannot function. The mike is matter. The current is energy. Their combination enables my voice to reach all of you.

Likewise, the coming together of Brahman and Maaya results in emergence of the Brihath-Svaruupa (the cosmic form of the Lord). Brihath-Svaruupa is the all-pervading energy.

How to realise the Self

You must realise that whatever scriptures one may master or whatever power and wealth one many acquire, without love one cannot achieve liberation. All of you are looking at the external world. Turn your vision inward. The external vision is useless. It is when you look inward that you will recognise your true form. The master of a house throws out all the useless things but safeguards what is most valuable inside an iron safe in the house. Each of you should realise what is most precious within you. The three processes of

Thaarakam, Saankhya and Amanaska

are extremely precious spiritual gems. They are within you, but you are not aware of their existence, because you have not related yourself to the owner, the Master within you. That owner is the Paramaathma (Supreme self). How to relate yourself to the owner and cultivate his friendship? To enable the students to understand this I am explaining this truth of Vedhaantha in simple terms.

Neutralise Maaya to reach the Paramaathma

The master resides in the upper floor of the house. You are outside the gate, guarded by a mastiff called Maaya. How, then, are you to approach the master, the Paramaathma? You shout His name. He comes down, recognises you and takes you inside. Maaya does not trouble you.

To neutralise Maaya, you have to prove your oneness with the Divine. This has been proclaimed in the Upanishathik saying: "Adhvaita dharshanam Inaanam" (The Supreme knowledge is the perception of the non-dual unity). This is the path of knowledge The other path is that of devotion. The Lord comes down to help you when you chant His name at all times. You may ask how this can be done when one has to attend to many other things everyday, including study of books etc. There is no room for this doubt. Consider every act of yours as an offering to God. Do what is appropriate for each action. All this is necessary till you secure God's grace. Thereafter, they are unnecessary.

Awareness consists in the conscious remembrance of God on all occasions.

In the presence of evil actions, the Godly man should not remain a silent spectator. He has to stand up for truth. Because of their failure to do so when the Kauravas were attempting to disrobe Dhruupadhi, Krishna accused Bheeshma, Dhrona and other Aachaaryas of being accomplices in Dhuryodhana's sinful act. Because of this grievous lapse on their part all these preceptors came to a sad end.

Lord's name should be remembered with total faith

Vedhaantha declares that three kinds of attachment--attachment to wealth, wife and children--are the cause of a great deal of sinful deeds. Hence, Krishna enjoined Arjuna to remember the Lord always and fight the battle. That will ensure his victory.

However, the Lord's name should be remembered with total faith. This is what the students should bear in mind. Krishna sought to instill such faith in Arjuna through the Geetha. Whoever it may be, if he carries out Svaami's commands with total, unwavering faith, he will have direct vision of the Divine in a moment. This principle is taught by Saankhya Yoga.

Vedhaantha in its essence is extremely simple. It is easier to grasp than butter. God is softer and sweeter than butter. To experience God you have to apply the heat of Inaana-Agni (the fire of spiritual knowledge) to the heart filled with love. You must come near to God and become dear to Him through your love. When that happens desires disappear.

Vedhaantha is replete with such profound truths expressed in short aphorisms. Dr. Jumsai (who had spoken earlier) said that all are children of God. In fact all are the Divine itself. Instead of being a lover, whose love is confined to a few, become love itself so that you can love all. This is the supreme truth proclaimed by Vedhaantha (Vedhic metaphysics). Discourse on 31 - 7-1996, in the Sai Kulwant Mandap.

What exactly is the aim and purpose of all the sastras, the Bhaagavatam, the Puraanas, these discourses and the harikathas? It is to tell man the truth about himself. There is no plot to mislead you. That is not the desire of the Sages who wrote down these annals and their own experiences. You know only the present and what is happening before your eyes. You do not know that the present is related to the past and is preparing the course for the future. It is like the head-lines and titles of a film on the screen; as the letters gleam one after the other, you read them and pass on to the next that comes to view. Each new letter or word wipes out the one already before your eye, just as each birth wipes out the memory of the one already experienced.

Baba

32. Man's true kith and kin

Truth is the mother;

Wisdom is the father;

Right conduct is the brother;

Compassion is the friend;

Peace is the spouse;

Forgiveness is the son;

These six alone are the Real relations for everyone.

IN THIS vast phenomenal universe, we consider the body as the mother. But the body is perishable by the very name given to it--Shareeram---that which decays. The bodies of the mother and the son are both impermanent. Hence for every human being the real mother is Truth--Sathyam Maathaa. Truth is that which remains unchanged for all time. Truth is eternal and changeless. Hence from ancient times the sages esteemed Truth as Divine. Truth, therefore, should be considered one's real mother.

Pithaa inaanam (Wisdom is the father). Is the one who fosters and protects your body the father?

He is only a guardian. The true father is wisdom, which is Divine. The Upanishaths hailed Truth and Wisdom as Divine.

Dharmo bhraatha (Righteousness is the brother). The uterine brothers who are elder or younger than one are not one's real brothers. From the worldly point of view they are one's brothers. But one's true brother is Dharma (Righteousness), which is Divine.

Compassion is one's true friend

Dhayaa Sakhaa (Compassion is the friend). People look upon associates with bodies as friends.

This is not correct. One's true friend is Compassion.

Shaantham Pathni (Peace is the spouse). One's true spouse is peace, without which no existence is possible. Peace is a shining ornament for man. It is Divine.

Kshama puthrah (Forgiveness is the son). This is not obtained easily by everyone. Today, because of the influence of the Kali age, sons are more keen on getting at the properties of their parents than on rendering them service or looking after them. Shri

Raama was a son who had such supreme regard for the honour and good name of the father that he willingly chose to go into exile to the forest and face all difficulties. Hence Raama is hailed as the very embodiment of Dharma Raamo vighrahavaan Dharmah. Such a son is verily the Divine. To have Kshama (forgiveness) as one's son is to possess the Divine.

These six qualities are the right relations for every man. Human birth has been conferred on humanity to acquire these relationships.

Today these basic human values have been forgotten. People remember what happened yesterday or today, but do not remember the great truths inherited from the past. With the result that man is plunged in misery and worry perpetually.

Men have forgotten their ancient culture. They are lost in the transient values of modernism.

Remembering this, you students should pledge yourselves to uphold human values.

You should become "Lovers of the Aathma"

What you should seek to acquire today are not scholarship and wealth. You must acquire the supreme quality of prema (love). The Vice-chancellor (in his speech earlier) said that you should prepare yourselves to become soldiers. You should become not "soldiers" but seekers of "souldears."

You should become lovers Of the spirit. The term soldiers has a political tinge. But you should become "Lovers of the Aathma" Cultivate human values.

Remember that you are born in Bhaarith, breathe the pure air of Bhaarith, live in Bhaarith and grow in Bhaarith. The denizens of Bhaarith have been described as Hindus. What is the meaning of Hindu? Anti Kumar said (in his speech earlier) that Hindus are those who have abjured himsa (harming others). This is not correct. Hindu stands for the five following qualities. "H" for Humanity. "I" for Individuality. "N" for Nationality. "D" for Divinity and "U" for Unity. These embody the Hindu tradition.

These five qualities are the Pancha-praanaas (five life-breaths). They are the Pancha-Thatthvas (five vital principles). The ancient Bhaarithheeyas, who have drawn sustenance from these five values, have esteemed them as the Samskrithi (essence of their culture).

Samskrithi means that which has been refined. To make a silver tumbler you have to subject a piece of silver to the process of melting, processing and shaping it into a tumbler. Only after the metal goes through all these processes can it become a tumbler. This applies to every object of utility. The raw material has to be processed before it can become a useful object.

The four goals of human existence Men should consider, however, of what use is their ceaseless pursuit of material objects, forgetting God? All day long men everywhere are pursued by endless desires and worries. Only a proper culture can convert these desires and worries into purposeful actions.

It is for this reason that the ancient sages placed before Bhaarithheeyas the four goals of human existence. Dharma (Right Conduct), Artha (the acquisition of material things), Kaama (satisfaction of desires) and Moksha (Liberation).

Today, people have given up the first and last of these four goals-- Dharma and Moksha--and are immersed only in the pursuit of Artha (wealth) and Kaama (sensory pleasures). What is necessary is to infuse Dharma (Righteousness) into the pursuit of Artha and Kaama. The acquisition of wealth and the enjoyment of sensory pleasures should be based on Dharma. The entire life should be founded on Righteousness. Only then wealth acquires real value.

Human life is related to both Artha (material) and Paramaarthaa (spiritual) wealth. The combination of material wealth for daily life and spiritual wealth for achieving supreme bliss constitutes the meaning and goal of human life. These basic human values have been forgotten today and human life has been devalued. Today the price of everything has gone up inordinately. Even a broomstick is very costly. But the value of man has depreciated, because men no longer possess the qualities which a human being should have.

Learn to speak sweetly and avoid excessive talk Human values are essential for man. They are the hall-mark of his humanness. These values should be manifested in daily life. Your words should demonstrate their sacredness. Your actions should sanctify these values.

Oh Students! Pay heed to my words! Eschew harshness in speech. Excessive talk is harmful. Idle strolling is a bad habit. Let your light shine; Become lamps for others.

The first thing students should learn is to speak sweetly and avoid excessive talk. They should avoid going from room to room like rats and cats. This is part of the culture they have to imbibe.

In the culture of Bhaarith, there are three basic elements: Naithikam (Morality), Dhaarmikam (Righteousness) and Aadhyathmikam (Spirituality). These are the threefold aspects of man.

First, Naithikam (Morality). This is based on pure thoughts. When there is purity in thoughts, there is righteousness in speech. Out of righteousness ensues spirituality. There should be unity in thought, word and deed. Love is the force that binds person to person Whatever you may learn or do, the fundamental requisite for right living is love. Love promotes truth in speech. That speech should be both pleasing and wholesome as indicated in the Geetha

"Sathyam Hitham preethikaram." There is love in Inaanam (wisdom). Without love wisdom is like bagasse after the sweet juice has been taken out of the sugarcane.

The dharma should be rooted in love. Of what use is charity or an act of goodness without love in it? There is love in peace and in all other qualities. It is the undercurrent flowing through truth and other qualities. Without love, there can be no genuine relationship between different beings.

Love alone can foster unity. Hence love and unity are essential for mankind. Unfortunately men have become morally blind without the two eyes of love and unity. Love is the force that binds person to person. Unfortunately today, though Bhaarith has achieved freedom, she is far from achieving unity. Let us have a look at the past. You know about

Emperor Ashoka. The top of the Ashoka Pillar, with figures of four lions looking in the four directions, is independent India's national emblem.

A lesson from Emperor Ashoka

Emperor Ashoka had established a certain custom of giving presents to his feudatory Kings on the occasion of his birthday. Today is India's fiftieth Independence Day. On the occasion of Ashoka's fiftieth birthday, all the feudatory rulers had assembled in the capital.

A ruler from the east submitted to the Emperor the following message: "Your Majesty! I have collected this time three, times as much revenue as in previous years and I am offering it to the Emperor's treasury." The Emperor appeared pleased with the offering and accepted it.

Then came a ruler from the western region. He said: "Your Majesty! I have cut down as much as possible the public expenditure in my kingdom, reduced the salaries of public servants and have brought six times as much tribute as I used to give in earlier years." The Emperor requested the King to resume his seat.

A ruler from the northern region made the following submission. "Oh Lord! I have been unable to bring any offering to your Majesty because of the failure of rains in my kingdom. Owing to the poor harvests I could not make any collections from my subjects."

The Emperor expressed his approval and requested the king to resume his seat.

Next came a ruler from the south. He informed the Emperor: "Your majesty! This year I havehad to raise the taxes, reduce the expenditure and put down unrest in different parts of the Kingdom and round up all the troublesome elements. As a result peace has been established all over the kingdom. This is the offering I am making to the Emperor." The King requested him to resume his seat.

Then the ruler of Magadha rose from his seat and approached the Emperor: "Your Majesty! My sole concern is about the welfare of my people. I have used all the taxes collected from the people for establishing schools and hospitals for the people and to provide other amenities to them. I got wells dug for providing drinking water to the people. I got tanks to be dug for storing water. Without causing any hardship to the people, I spent all the money collected from them for their own benefit. All the people are happy. I did not reduce the emoluments of public officials. I allowed them to use the money collected from the people to be used for the benefit of the people, thereby encouraging them to discharge their responsibilities with zeal. Hence, I could bring to the Emperor only my love on this occasion. I offer the well-being of my kingdom to Your Majesty. My people are living in peace and plenty."

Emperor Ashoka was supremely pleased on hearing these words. He summoned his attendants and offered to the ruler of Magadha presents of the kind he had not offered to anyone before.

Duty of rulers

What is the significance of this episode? This means that rulers should be concerned solely with the well-being of their people. They should seek to provide what is essential for the people. The king built choultries, constructed roads, set up schools, built hospitals for daily life. When these are provided there will be no discontent among the people.

To ensure peace among the people, the sense of spiritual oneness should be developed, as declared in the Geetha: "Mamaathmaa Sarvabhootha antharaathma" (I am the Indwelling Spirit in all beings). When this feeling prevails, there can be no room for any kind of differences and strife. If one sees the same spirit that is within him in all the others, how can he hate the others?

If one sees his image in a mirror, will he hate it? Everyone loves his own self.

What Syaami wrote as a boy

In this context, I may recall a poem I wrote at the age of seven. It was as follows.

To see your face in a mirror
do you need anybody's help?

Why do you need anyone's friendship for this purpose?

To view the moon in the sky
do you need a lamp?

To look at the moon shining in the sky
do you require any other source of light?

To know your own Aathma
why do you need a guru?

The Aathma is your God,
your Vishnu, Shiva and Brahma.

One who has realised this,
why does he need any preceptor?

Therefore, everyone should realise that the same Universal Divine Spirit is the Indweller in every being. All are embodiments of the Divine. When this sacred feeling fills everyone there will be no room for conflict or chaos.

Today people have forgotten this sacred truth. Hatred alone is ubiquitous. Envy is rampant.

Selfishness prevails everywhere. Self-interest is predominant.

Because of these evil tendencies,

pure human relations have been undermined.

The relationship which you should develop is that of spiritual oneness. "I and you are one." That is the truth you have to realise. Who is the "You"? It is also another

"I." Everyone knows himself as "I." In the declaration, "I and you are one," "You" stands for God (who is in everyone). The first name of God is Aham ("I"). Then came 'Aum.' Every person, in every reference to himself, describes himself as "I" (Nenu in Thelugu).

When a man declares that "I am a man," the reference to man is finite and impermanent. The "I"

is permanent, everlasting.

Brahman is infinite love

Hence, the scriptures declare: "Sathyam Inaanam Anantham Brahma." The Brahman is Truth.

Wisdom and everlasting. The term Aham applies to Brahman. Hence

the Mahaavaakya, "Aham

Brahmaasmi." Brahma here is not a four-headed deity depicted in the films, it refers to the Universal, all encompassing Spirit. Brahman is infinite love. It is all pervading in its expansiveness. This means that there is no place in the cosmos where love is not present.

This is illustrated by an incident in the Bhaagavatham. A gopika heard a knock at the door. She was in two minds whether she should open the door or not. Debating in her mind about this she realised that the one outside was the same as the one within her.

"That being so, what does it matter whether the door is opened or closed?"

The Brahman is the same effulgence shining within you and within everybody else. The gopika experienced the Divine as a cosmic mansion which had no exits and entrances. "When the Lord of the Universe is with- in me, where is the need for a door or a welcome?" (Bhagavaan sang with feeling a song expressing the dilemma of the Gopika and the delight that fills her mind when she realises her oneness with God).

All is within us. The heart is the container of everything. It is the source of strength and of weakness. The pure-hearted man is full of courage. The man with a guilty heart is weak.

Love is the source of strength. Get rid of all fear by developing love for God. Thereby the door of your heart opens and you experience Divine Bliss, which is symbolised by the term Kailaash, the abode of God.

Students! Purify your hearts by the waters of love. Apply the cleansing powder of Shraddha

(earnestness). The heart will shine like a star, "a diamond in the sky."

Every student should be like a star, twinkling in the sky.

Develop love and cherish concern for the welfare of the people.

Realise the goal of union with

God. (Bhagavaan explained the significance of Namaskaaram and how japa should be done).

Redeem your lives by loving all and serving all.

Discourse on 15-8-1996.

33. God is the sole refuge

The form of love is Brahman;

Brahman is permeated with love;

Love is bound to love alone;

If one is filled with love

He is eligible for union with God.

Not from the heavens above,

Nor from the netherworld, nor from the earth,

But by the destruction of

The knot of ignorance in the heart:

One gets liberation, declares the Shruthi.

EMBODIMENTS of love! Liberation will not drop from the sky. Nor can it come from the paathaala (nether world). Nor can it be found on the earth.

Liberation can be attained only when ignorance is dispelled. In this vast universe every creature lives according to the law of its being.

Man alone, who has the gift of this extremely precious human birth, is failing to realise the purpose of his existence and ignores his duties.

Immersed in sensual mundane pleasures, man forgets his spiritual destiny. All scholarship is valueless without Self-realisation. Raavana, Bhasmaasura and Kamsa were not lacking in scholarship or even religious practices. But all these were related to the Pravritthi-maarga

(externals) and not to the Nivritthi-maarga (cultivation of the Spirit inside). Hence their basic demonic qualities did not change.

It is only when impure and unholy thoughts are expelled from the mind that sacred feelings will enter it. To experience lasting bliss the heart has to be sanctified by filling it with love. Through that love has to be secured Inaana (the highest wisdom).

The goal for youth

The foremost goal modern youth should set before themselves is to sow the seeds of love, rear

the plant of forbearance and distribute the fruits of peace to society through dedicated service.

The secret of peace is not in the external world but is within each individual. He should realise that the whole universe is permeated by the Divine. Today the world is filled with strife. It is not possible to make a distinction between a human being and a demon. Man, who evolved from the animal, instead of proceeding towards Divinity, is regressing to animality. Man's primary duty is to uphold the human values of Truth, Righteousness, Peace and Love. Man today is enveloped in attachment and hatred. The moment he casts them off, he will realise his divinity.

Students! You must realise that the spiritual path is easier than the academic studies you pursue.

Education should serve to refine the heart, not fill the mind with useless lumber.

(Bhagavaan sang two poems deprecating the preoccupation with jobs for filling the belly, forgetting the Supreme Lord.)

The country today has lost all sense of ethical and spiritual values. The countryside is rampant with evil practices. Uncontrolled selfishness and insatiable desires are the root cause of the present evils. In the pursuit of worldly objects is there enduring happiness? Not at all. (Svaami sang stanzas from Bhaja Govindam to emphasize the point that youth, wealth and progeny are all ephemeral). Late in life, after going through all the experiences of family life, man even in his last years seeks a happiness that deludes him. Where is happiness to be found? The answer was given by Thyagaraaja when he sang that happiness is not to be got through wealth but only through the worship of Shri Raama.

The glory of sacrifice

Worldly comforts cannot be adjoined. But the spiritual goal should always be kept in mind. There should be a limit to the enjoyment of sensual pleasures. The money that is earned should be used for public good. Bhaaratheeya culture has always glorified the quality of renunciation.

Immortality can be got only through sacrifice, declare the scriptures.

Students should realise that God's love alone is totally selfless and boundless. Even the love of parents, wife or children is tainted by a tinge of selfishness. Dedicate all your actions to God.

Surrender to God all your bad qualities. God will offer you what is good for you.

How good are relations?

In this context I would relate the story of a student who used to go to a preceptor's hermitage in a forest for his studies.

The guru used to teach the student that there is no use in depending on one's mother, father, brothers, or relations or on wealth and property. All these are transient. Therefore he should be on his guard. 'Thasmaath Jaagratha! Jaagratha!' He also used to teach him that life is full of sorrow upto the very end and hence he should be always on the alert. The boy told the guru that this teaching might be all right for recluses like the guru, but was irrelevant for ordinary persons like himself. He told the guru: "My parents are exceptional, my wife is good, without me she will not take her food. All of them love me. How can I disown them?"

The guru said, "I shall prove to you the truth of my teaching." He gave a pill to the student and said that after taking it he will become almost lifeless, but he will be conscious of what is happening around him though others will consider him dead. "Then you will know the truth."

The lad returned home, took the pill and dropped dead (as it were). The mother came, called the father and started wailing over the death of the son. The wife came out on hearing her cries and seeing the husband's body started crying. "I am my father's only daughter. If my husband goes, what will happen to me?" Everyone wailing over the body cried: "What is to happen to me?"

Other relatives also gathered and lamented on the death of a young man who was virtuous and spiritually oriented.

At this stage, the preceptor came there. Everybody made way for him. The guru asked the mother, the father and the wife why they were wailing. They all mentioned the grievous loss of

they had suffered in the death of the young man. "What will happen to me?" was the refrain of each of them. He asked the mother to fetch a glass of water. He dosed his eyes as if in prayer and then told them: "If anyone drinks this water, that person will die but the young man will be restored to life." He first offered the water to the wife as the one dearest to the young man. She said: "I am the only child of my parents. If I die they will collapse. Hence I cannot drink the water." The guru said: "Your husband will live. Why don't you give up your life?" She replied:

"The dead man is no more in any case. Why should I die?"

The guru next asked the mother. She said: "My daughter has come for confinement. She is helpless. And I have two more young daughters to be married. How can I leave them?" When the father was asked, he replied: "I am the head of the family. If I go only two ladies will be left in the house, my wife and my daughter-in-law. My wife will become a widow. With no male member in the house, they will be helpless. How can I give up my life?" All the three declined to drink the water. They went inside the house and drew up a master-plan. They came out and said:

"Svaami! You are immensely compassionate. You have no other attachments. Please drink the water yourself and restore our son's life. We will build a samaadhi in marble for you."

At that moment, the guru sprinkled the water on the young man's body. He got up. The guru asked him, What did your wife say? And your mother and father?" He replied: "They all said, let me die."

God's love alone is unselfish

The guru observed: "The world is impermanent. Birth is a misery, old age is a misery. There is trouble with the wife. Entire life is miserable. Therefore, be careful!" says a Sanskrit sloka.

As long as one is alive, all seem to love the body. This is also for purely selfish reasons. God alone is utterly selfless. Loving that God, you can lead your lives in the normal way. There is nothing wrong. Whatever you do, treat it as an offering to God. See God in everyone. Don't have ill will towards anyone. Do not have excessive attachment for anyone. Direct all attachments towards God. Love all. But do not rely on anyone except God. Realise the impermanence of the body and place your trust solely in God. Seek refuge in Him.

The faith is what is most needed today in this Kali Age. It is the loss of faith that is responsible for all the strife and chaos in the country.

Dear students! You are the victims of a purely secular education devoid of roots in spirituality.

As often as possible, when you get the chance, meditate on God. That will ensure a good future for you. Earn the esteem of society by your service.

Discourse on 16-8-1996.

34. Man's debt to God

Fear of Sin has vanished;

Wicked deeds have become common;

Devotion to the Lord is gone;

Indescribable misdeeds

Have enveloped the world.

Oh man! Only the contemplation

Of the name of Hari, which is

The refuge of all renunciants,

Will confer happiness on You. (Thelugu Poem)

Devotion alone confers the Supreme gift;

Devotion alone destroys the disease of mundane existence;

Devotion alone stirs the yearning for the Divine;

Devotion alone is the means of Liberation. (Sanskrit Poem)

EMBODIMENTS of Love! To realise the Supreme, the path of devotion is the only royal road. It is the panacea for all worldly ailments and for the disease of birth and death. Devotion is the most effective means for awakening the spiritual urge.

The Upanishaths are the great spiritual legacy of ancient Bhaarith. "Ishaavaasyam idham sarvam" (The entire cosmos is the dwelling place of the Lord) declares the Upanishath. If the full import of this one aphorism is understood and practised by Bhaarithheeyas, the country will be free from all difficulties. Any person who has true faith in this declaration will be free from all troubles.

The Upanishaths declared: "Thath Thvam Asi" (Thou art That). This truth should get implanted in the hearts of devotees. Equally, the great saying, "Aham Brahmaasmi" should get enshrined in the hearts of all human beings. "Sarvam Khalu idham Brahma (Verily all this is Brahman). The Brahman permeates everything in the cosmos.

Prayer is essential for developing love for God

Man has to realise how much he owes to God who has provided so many things for his life and comfort. Prayer is the expression of man's gratitude to God. It is also the means of awakening an awareness of the eternal Divine within him. The Upanishaths beckon man to realise the bliss within him. Prayer is essential for developing love for God.

The prayer should be heart-felt. Raavana worshipped Shiva but without giving up his demonic nature. Hence he could not get the grace of God.

What pleases the Lord

The Lord is pleased with even the simplest things offered with full devotion to Him. It is enough if the devotee offers his body, mind, heart and the joyous tears flowing from his eyes.

Students should realise the supreme value of human birth. The indwelling spirit in every one is the same Divinity. Forms may be different but the Spirit in all is the same. It is pure, unchanging and timeless. It is ever blissful. It is nectarine. Everyone should recognise this Aathmik Principle.

The body is like a chariot. It is essential for the journey of life. But you are the charioteer, not the chariot. The four Purusharthas (Goals of life) are the four wheels of the chariot.

Students! In driving the vehicle, you have to be mindful of the state of the road. You have to see how the body is used for various purposes in society according to the prevailing circumstances.

You should know how to behave towards elders, teachers, parents and above all, how to love

God. You should use your discrimination in the discharge of your duties. Only then you can make the journey of life smooth and safe.

Look upon the body as a shrine in which the Dime is installed. Dedicate all actions to God.

Today many are becoming slaves to wealth, power, position or name. Students should not become such slaves. They should be upholders of sacred ideals. "Help ever; hurt never." Let that be your motto.

Discourse on 17-8-1996.

35. The Gospel of hard work

SCIENCE and technology have advanced so much that man is able to explore space and dive into the deep ocean. But he has not learnt how to live like a human being on earth. It is more important for man to learn how to lead a good life on the earth than explore space. Man's life is based on the earth.

Man's primary aim should be to recognise the unity that underlies the diversity in the phenomenal world. To break up what is one into many pieces is easy. But it is difficult to bring them together into a meaningful unit. It is in the unifying process that the utility of things can be understood. The role of both diversity and unity in life has to be properly understood.

When a tailor has to stitch a bush coat out of a piece of cloth, he has first to cut it into various pieces and then stitch them together to make a bush coat. The scissors are used to cut the cloth.

The needle is used to stitch the different pieces. Today human beings trend to behave like the scissors rather than as the needle. With the result that all man's intelligence is being used to divide society rather than unify it.

Beyond birth and death

There is a family of three, father, mother and the son. When the father brought home his earnings the mother felt happy. Whenever he came home empty-handed the mother used to get angry. The son watched the alternation of happiness and sorrow in the home. Unable to bear the troubles at home, the father went to a temple of Kaali. He prayed: "Oh Dhevi! I cannot bear these troubles. I cannot live with my wife. Please see that her life is ended soon." "Be it so!" declared the Goddess. The wife died.

Watching this, the son went to the Kaali temple. He prayed intensely to the Goddess. She appeared before him and asked what he wanted. "Please restore the life of my mother," he pleaded. "So be it!" declared the Goddess.

The father desired the death of the mother. The son desired her revival. Their prayers revolved around death and life. Have such prayers any meaning? How much more sensible would it have been if they had prayed for the gift of goodness. The father surely could have asked the Goddess,

"Oh Dhevi! Confer good sense on my wife." The prayers of the father and son only brought about death and birth.

(Svaami sang the Bhaja Govindam song in which Aadhi Shankara deplores the human condition which is caught up in the cycle of birth and death and Govinda is the only redeemer).

What folly is it to be caught up in the endless cycle of birth and death? What is the purpose of life? It is to live for some ideals. The Vice-Chancellor (who had spoken earlier) said that there is the practice of performing annual ceremonies for one's departed ancestors. The Vice-Chancellor said that while performing these ceremonies the young people should remember the departed ones with gratitude and love. The children should show their gratitude first and foremost to their parents because they owe their life and all that they enjoy to their parents. The anniversary of their passing should be remembered with grateful tears.

Students should recognise the supreme importance of time. Most of them are wasting threefourths of the time they have at their disposal. They indulge in useless gossip and scandal.

Abusing others amounts to abusing God.

Why borrow from others?

Bhaarith would be a land of plenty if people worked hard instead of being lazy and idle.

Bhaarith is well endowed with land, rivers and other natural resources. Bhaarith has become dependent on other nations because the people do not work hard enough. We are borrowing from so many countries. Why? Let us use our resources well. We can then easily feed our people. The people should work hard It is good for their health and happiness.

People today waste a lot of time and energy on meaningless arguments and controversies.

Students! Realise that what I think, say and do are in perfect harmony. Hence there is no loss of memory or weakness of any kind. Look at the young people in their teens. They have castor oil faces and look worn out. They should look happy and cheerful.

A lesson from history

Recall how a small nation like the British ruled over a vast country like India before we got our freedom. The British could do it because Indians betrayed the nation for selfish interests.

Every student should realise his potential strength. All of it is derived from the Divine. (Svaami sang songs from Thyaagaraaja to point out the power of devotion to achieve the impossible).

Students should cultivate moral values. It is the decline in moral values that is responsible for the deplorable state of the country. Three things are most essential today. Fear of sin, love of God and morality in society.

Discourse in Sai Kulwant Mandap on 18-8-1996.

Egoism is a thorny bush, which when planted and fostered, makes us suffer. It makes enemies even of close friends and does not allow men to work together. Grief follows ego like a shadow.

Baba

36. Shirdi Baba's first miracle

SEEN physically Nature alone is perceived. But seen with the spiritual vision the entire universe is Bhagavaan alone. From the perspective of Prema (love) everything will appear Divine.

A young man who had studied Aadhi Shankara's Philosophy, came to me and said: "Svaami! Shankara says' Brahma Sathyam: Jagath Mithya. Please let me know what is the truth and what is unreal."

Svaami told him: "You simpleton! Leave it to Nature to demonstrate what is real and what is unreal. Concern yourself with knowing your own reality. There is no need for you to enquire into the nature of Prakrithi (the phenomenal universe). Do not argue." A man who is not aware of his own true nature, how is he competent to know about the reality or otherwise of the cosmos?

A man regards his visible body as real and the invisible Spirit as unreal. He does not realise that the invisible is the cause of his pleasure and pain. "Let no one imagine that beauty, youth and vitality will last for ever. Old age is looming ahead and will bring in its train all miseries."

Dheha and Dhehi

There are two entities in man: the dheha (body) and the Dhehi (the Indwelling spirit). The body is governed by three factors: Vaatha (wind), Pittha (bile) and Kapha (phlegm). The wind factor is responsible for 80 types of diseases. The bile accounts for 82 kinds of ailments, phlegm is the cause of 224 types of maladies. In all, the three account for 386 types of diseases. Recognising the multitude of disease to which the body is prone, the sages of yore sought to give up attachment to the body, while taking care of it for essential purposes.

Many of these diseases are insidious and hence may not be noticed in an apparently strong person. Disease lies hidden in almost every action of man from breathing to eating. The body by its nature is perishable. But the Dhehi (the Indwelling spirit) is undying. Through the impermanent body, the eternal spirit has to be experienced. Men are immersed in seeking the passing pleasures of the senses forgetting the lasting bliss to be derived from the spirit. People should realise that true happiness can be got only by union with God.

Some people imagine that God bestows excessive grace on a few, appears to be indifferent towards some others, and totally to ignore some others. All these are only the aberrations of the people having such thoughts. For God all are the same. You can see your true image only in a glass covered on the rear with the mercury of love. Everyone says he has not experienced God, it is not God's fault. The feeling that God favours some and not others is born of jealousy.

I would relate an episode from the boyhood years of Shirdi Baba. Shirdi Baba and Venkuusa

When Shirdi Baba was about ten years of age, Patel took him to Venkuusa. Patel had a dream in which he was told: "Patel! You are not likely to live long. The boy whom you have brought up so far cannot be looked after by anyone. There is a person called Venkuusa in a certain place. You take the boy to him and leave him in his care."

Venkuusa was giving spiritual lessons to a number of boys. When the young lad was being brought to him, Venkuusa had a premonition of his coming. He called the lad: "Aaoji! Aaoji (Come, Come). I have been waiting for you all these years." He spoke lovingly to the boy and asked him to go in and have his food.

From then onwards, Venkuusa developed great affection for the boy. Seeing this, the other students felt envious and started talking about him among themselves. "How is it that the teacher is showing so much love for the new boy? We have been here for years. He has not shown us such Love." This was the way some of them spoke. Some others said: "He is lucky to have such love." Some others remarked, "perhaps our teacher expects some money from Patel, who is a wealthy man."

Plan to kill Baba

The attachment between Venkuusa and the young Baba grew steadily from day to day. One day both of them were going to a forest called Sikhaara. After they had gone, the other boys drew up a plan to do away with the young Baba. "Then Venkuusa will have greater liking for us," they thought. They went to the forest and took rest behind a hut. One of the bigger boys, according to the plan they had already made, took a big brick and hurled it towards Baba. Venkuusa had great love for Baba. Immediately on noticing the brick, Venkuusa stood in front of Baba and let the brick hit him. What was aimed at Baba struck Venkuusa. Blood was streaming from Venkuusa's head.

Baba immediately tore a piece of cloth from his robe and bandaged Venkuusa's bleeding head.

When Baba and Venkuusa were speaking about the wound caused to Venkuusa, some of the boys came rushing towards them bringing a dead body. That was the body of the boy who wanted to kill Baba. "Biter bit," says the proverb. (If you intend to harm others, you will be harming yourself).

The boys cried: "Gurujii! Forgive us" and fell at his feet. Venkuusa told them: "Children! I have grown old. This young lad is carrying on all the work I was doing. Love alone can protect you.

When there is no love no one can save you." On hearing these words, the boys fell at the feet of Baba and placed the dead body before him. Baba burst into laughter. Why did he laugh? Not because he felt that the boy who intended to kill him was dead. He knew that death could come at any time, in any place and in any situation. Even at the young age Baba had realised this truth relating to the body. Baba transcended time. Age did not matter to him. He was the Cosmic Person.

He told the boys: "Today this boy has died. Your turn may come tomorrow. No one is immortal."

The boys cried: "How can we explain this calamity to the parents?"

Baba told them: "Tell the parents what actually happened."

The boys realised that if they told the truth they would be put to shame. If they told what did not happen, they would be uttering falsehood. Recognising their dilemma, Baba asked them: "What is it you want now?

"Please restore the life of this boy." Immediately Baba placed the head of the dead boy on his lap and passed his hand over it. The boy revived. This was Shirdi Baba's first miracle.

Dust unto dust

Students should realise that the body is made up of materials coming from the earth and will go back to the earth when life is extinct. The body is like a mud pot which serves its purpose for a time and when it is broken, it becomes in the course of time one with the mud from which it was made. A seed sown in the ground grows into a tree with branches, flowers and fruits. All the things in the tree have come out of the earth. Likewise the body is made up of the five elements.

It must be used properly.

The essence of Vedhaantha can be summed up in one sentence: "The Aathma in you is the same as the Divine." Only those who have this feeling can experience God.

Discourse in the Sai Kulwant Mandap on 20-8-1996 when Bhagavaan narrated the circumstances in which Shirdi Baba, as a young lad of ten years, performed his first miracle by restoring to life a dead boy, who had intended to kill him.

One's duty is to act; act well, act in fear of God: act within the bounds of morality; act in love; continue acting; the consequences will naturally follow as the fruit flows the flower. One need not worry or exult. Act enthusiastically, with faith, success is yours.

Baba

37. Inaana and Bhakthi

EVERYTHING in the cosmos is made up of the five basic elements, which are manifestations of the Divine. The Divine has no separate form. This truth is not realised by mankind. Avathaars come to dispel the ignorance of humanity.

Avathaars do not come in unique form. The reason is all the creatures in the world carry out their specific functions. Animals, birds, insects, ants and mosquitoes do not deviate from their respective roles in leading their lives. But, man alone has forgotten his duties. Birds obey "reason and season." Man alone behaves without regard to "reason and season." Hence the Avathaar has to come in human form to reform man who has gone astray. Thus it is declared that "Dhaivam maannusharupena" (God comes in human form). If God comes in any other form, say, a bird, it will be driven away. Man will take no notice of it. If the Avathaar comes in the form of a buffalo, it will be driven away with a stick.

There is nothing greater than devotion

In this context, two points have to be noted. There were two brothers, Inaanadheva and Bhakthidheva. Both were going on a journey. On the way, they felt thirsty. Bhakthidheva asked Inaanadheva, "I am thirsty but I cannot see water anywhere."

Inaanadheva said: "Let us see whether there is any well nearby." After going some distance, they noticed an old well with water deep at the bottom.

Inaanadheva declared: "Inaanaath-eva-thu-kaivalyam" (Through Wisdom anything can be accomplished).

He immediately assumed the form of a bird, flew down to the water in the well, quenched his thirst and came up. Inaanadheva had the ability to assume any form because of the supreme knowledge of the Self.

Bhakthidheva could not get down into the well. He sat near the well and prayed to God with intense love. After sometime, the water in the well rose to the level of his feet. Noting the wetness of his feet, he opened his eyes and saw that the water in the well had overflowed.

Inaana requires a change in one's form. Bhakthi needs no such change. Intense loving devotion will suffice. What the devotee needs will come running to him. There is nothing greater than devotion.

Bhakthidheva wrote a letter to Inaanadheva. It was a blank piece of paper which he sent in a cover. When Inaanadheva opened the letter, he found there was no writing on it. Inaanadheva then started writing his reply in page after page. He could not come to the end of his writing. His entire life was spent on enquiry and investigation. There was no time for doing anything practical. The life of most scientists is spent this way: continuous experimentation, with no experience. This sort of endless pre-occupation with enquiry is of no use. Devotion is easier than Inaana maarga (the path of Knowledge). Through devotion, constant chanting of the name and loving remembrance of God, anything can be accomplished.

Never forget God

Students! See that the love that is inherent in you is not diverted in wrong directions, in antisocial activities, or in ways opposed to the wishes of your parents. So far as love for God is concerned, you need not submit yourself to anyone.

When you love God with all your heart, the bliss you experience is unexcelled. This was the experience of the Gopikas. This has been described as the fifth

Purushaartha, the experience of union with God Paramab-hakthi---Supreme devotion.

Students! Whatever you may do in life, never forget God. Whatever positions one may achieve, whether President or Prime Minister, if he forgets God he is nothing.

Hero becomes zero if he forgets God. These officers come and go. You must never give up your faith in the supreme.

That is the way to redeem human life.

Discourse on 21-8-1996.

38. The Lord and the devotee

Why do you search for God hither and thither?

Is He not present in your heart?

Offer service and receive the love of God.

This is the way to realise the Divine.

STUDENTS! Humility is the hall-mark of education. Humility calls for actions free from egoism and self-importance.

The inherent goodness in man is covered by the ashes of attachment and hatred. Remove the ashes and the goodness will manifest itself.

There are three ways of recognising the Self. One is to consider yourself as the Dhehaathma.

This is the dualism. The second is: "I am Jeewaathma." This is Vishishta-Adhvaitha (Qualified non-dualism). Aham Paramaathma (I am the Supreme Self). This is Adhvaitha (non-dualism). It will be seen that in all the three concepts, the common entity is Aathma. The Deham (body),

Ieeva (Individual) and Param (the Absolute) are separate. All the three are present in the same person as is clear from the Gaayathri Manthra. Bhur-Bhuvas-Suvah represent Bhu (the body), Bhuvah (the Life-Force) and Suvah (the Aathma). The body is inert matter. The Life-Force animates the body and is vibrant in every cell.

The power of the spirit is exemplified by the life of Kabeer. He was a poor weaver, who used to help the poor out of his earnings. While plying his loom, he constantly chanted the name of Raama. The clothes woven in such a devotional spirit were prized high. But he used to sell his cloth at fair prices and often gave it free to those who could not afford the cost.

Greek devotees: Bhakthi

In this context, I wish to refer to a current incident. Here are some 25 Greek devotees. They landed at Bangalore by plane. They strapped their baggage to their backs, carried water bottles in their hands and started walking all the way to Prashaanthi Nilayam. Such is their devotion! At every step they recited the manthra: "Om Shri Sathya Sai Baabaya Namah!" and reached Prashaanthi Nilayam. I went towards them and received them on arrival at the Mandhir. I asked them: "Do you feel pain in the legs?" They said: "Oh Lord! Not at all. We are ready to walk another ten miles if necessary, chanting all the way. If we had come by car, we could not have remembered the Lord's name.

Kabeer was in the habit of uttering "Raam! Raam!" at each step as he walked. The greatness of his devotion spread to all parts of the country. A ruler of that time also came to know about it.

Realising Kabeer's poverty and helplessness, the king sent various presents to Kabeer in a palanquin. Kabeer saw the palanquin nearing his house while returning from a bath in the river.

Astonished at the sight, Kabeer asked the four bearers of the palanquin: "What is all this? In our house, there are only two of us. For whose sake did four of you bring the palanquin? Both of us are quite hale." Kabeer hinted that only a dead body is carried on the bier by four persons.

"Please inform the king that we are quite well," said Kabeer.

The palanquin-bearers said: "We have brought in the palanquin clothes, provisions and other gifts from the king who sympathizes with your plight. The king has ordered us to offer them to you because he considers you anaatha (an orphan). How Kabeer delved into the meaning of Anaatha Kabeer said: "Oh! Did the king say so? But, I am not anathaa. Bhagavaan is my overlord. I am not without a protecting master. Raama is the only one who is an anaatha--there is no Lord above Him. You better offer all these things to Raama." See how Kabeer has delved into the meaning of the word anaatha. No one in the world is an anaatha (without a master). God alone is anaatha, as there is no naatha (master) above Him. Everyone has a master. God alone has no one above Him. Some people come to Svaami and say: "Svaami! Don't make us anaatha. I used to tell them: "It is not you who are anaathas. I am the anaatha (Master-less). Never consider yourself anaatha (helpless). Many people feel miserable and forlorn because they do not understand the ways of God. To those who firmly believe in God, there can be nothing lacking. First of all, you have to get rid of attachment and hatred. Develop love. Bhagavaan's example for egolessness Get rid of ego and possessiveness Here is a small example. Bhagavaan sets the best ideal for you. How? You are all seated where you are. I Myself walk towards you, bending my back, stretching my hand, to receive your letters. If I had chosen to sit and ask you to come and hand over the letters, what would be wrong? Still, with no sense of ego, I am going to each of you, to set an example. This is Sai's ideal.

So many who have come so far at such expense, will they shrink from walking a few feet towards Svaami? But to demonstrate that I am free from ego, I am acting in this manner to teach a lesson to you. I have no feeling of attachment to any one to treat some as mine and others as not mine. All are mine and I am yours. Every student and devotee should recognise this truth.

This is what the Geetha declares: "I am the indwelling spirit in all beings."

You may ask: "Why, then, is God not visible? Why are some near to God and others remote?"

God is not to blame. People are immersed in worldly concerns. Modern youth are all crazy over their games and pastimes. With the result that they sing ridiculous songs, indulge in silly games and revel in meaningless talk. They are not eager to take part in bhajans or interest themselves in devotional activities. Some listen to discourses with one ear and expel them out of the other. Very few listen and take to heart what they have learnt. Some merely repeat parrot-like what they have heard. Treat sensuous pleasures with contempt Unfortunately today there are no good teachers and very few earnestly interested speakers. Students must develop real interest in the teachings. They must convert all work into worship. (Svaami sang Thyaagaraaja's song to illustrate how the Lord should be worshipped as omnipresent). God does not judge anyone by his external appearance. This was the lesson which Ashtaavakra taught to the pandits at the court of king Janaka when they laughed on seeing the crooked body of Ashtaavakra. The latter laughed at them and told them: "I thought you were great scholars. I find you are only a set of cobblers. You judge a person by the skin on his body."

Students should have firm faith in God and minimise their desires. You must treat with contempt sensuous pleasures. Whenever any worldly desires arise in the mind, treat them as garbage that should be thrown only. By this means, students will enter on the path of purity. Then the Divine will welcome you and fill you with bliss. There is no greater goal, no higher destiny.

Discourse on 22-8-1996.

39. The greatness of Bali and Prahlaadha EMBODIMENTS of Love! In this phenomenal world, physical relationships like parents, brothers, sisters, wife and children are natural. But in the spiritual context, man should develop relations which are permanent, sacred and transcendental.

 One's true relations are Sathyam (Truth) as mother, Inaanam (Wisdom) as father, Dharmam (Righteousness) as brother, Dhaya (compassion) as friend, Shaanthi (Peace) as wife and Kshama (forgiveness) as son. The physical relations are temporary and bound to pass away. But the six great virtues are the true imperishable relations.
 The foremost duty of everyone is to make love of God flow towards all in creation.
 Every man lives not for his own sake but to render service to society.
 To forget concern for the body is the way to realise self-realisation.
 Of what use is human birth if you do not manifest unsullied love towards all beings? (Thelugu Poem.)
 Oneness with God
 Man performs a variety of spiritual exercises to achieve self-realisation and the bliss of oneness with the Divine. These include the nine forms of devotion. In these forms of worship God is regarded as mother, father, friend or master. The highest form of worship is to regard God and the individual as one. "You are I and I am you." This attitude flees man from bondage.
 Human beings are different in form and name. Oneness amongst them can be achieved only by a feeling of oneness in thought, by a recognition that the whole cosmos is permeated by the Divine.
 God is the cause, the world is the effect. In this marvellous universe, why is man unable to recognise his true nature? Divinity is present in every atom of the cosmos. You have to realise that you are that Divinity.
 This truth was declared by Prahlaadha long ago. Emperor Bali, whose return to the earth for one day in a year is celebrated today in the Onam festival, was the grandson of Prahlaadha. Bali belonged to a line of great renunciants. His father, Virochana was also known for his spirit of sacrifice. He regarded the welfare of his people as his own well-being. Mr. Wellington (who had spoken earlier) said that service to humanity is service to God. This principle was observed by Virochana. Emperor Bali also followed the same rule.
 Experiencing God by renouncing bad qualities Once several persons gathered round Buddha and asked him to teach them something about God as he had been pursuing the spiritual path for a long time. The Buddha remained silent. No one is competent to engage in discussions about God. God is in "Yes" and in

"No." He is in Dharma and Adharma, in Truth and untruth. How can you have an argument over one who is omnipresent? It is a waste of time. (God is the very embodiment of Dharma, of Sathya and of Ahimsa (non-violence). Hence, Vedhaantha exhorted mankind: "Speak the Truth, follow Righteousness.
 Some persons gathered round Raamakrishna Paramahansa and asked him: "Sir! Have you seen God?" Raamakrishna had a hearty laugh. He said: "Yes! I have seen God as I am seeing you. All are forms of God. However, your vision is different. You look at all persons as human beings.
 But all that you see is Divine. Why are you failing to see the Divine? You cry about your wife, your children, your wealth and your position. Have you ever cried for God in the same way? No.
 When you cry for God intensely, God will appear before you." Once you renounce you bad qualities you will experience God.
 When the Lord as Vaamana, was approaching Emperor Bali's yaaga, the Emperor received him reverentially and asked him what he wanted. He said: "I want three feet of ground measured by my feet." Ball said: "Why come all the way to ask for just three feet of ground?" Vaamana declared: "That is all I want." The Emperor's preceptor, Shukraacharya warned the Emperor against making the gift, as the seeker was no ordinary person. But the Emperor firmly declared that there is no greater sin than going back on one's promise. He kept his word.
 Emperor Ball stands forth as the great upholder of the plighted word. That is the reason why the people of Kerala worship him to this day and celebrate the festival of Onam in his memory.
 Love is the supreme value
 What is that is adored today? It is Truth. Without truth nothing has any value. Without the values of Truth, Righteousness, Peace and Love, all education and other attainments are useless.
 Love is the supreme value. It is not mundane love, but Divine love that is precious. That Divine love encompasses every other form of attachment to friends and others. Cultivate the enduring friendship of God.
 Emperor Ball was prepared to offer everything, including himself, to God. That is his greatness.
 It is not the gift of mere three feet of land. He offered himself to the Lord. "I am offering all that is mine, my family and wealth, and myself, keeping nothing for myself. Save me, Oh lord, who has sought refuge in you," says a Sanskrit shloka. "The heart which you gave to me, I am offering to you. What else can I offer at your Lotus Feet?" says a Thelugu poem. This is the spirit in which Bali surrendered to the Lord.

Prahlaadha's gift of his character to Indhra

Many students do not know the full story of Prahlaadha (grandfather of Bali). If you have to name anyone for his highest character, it is Prahlaadha alone.

Once, Indhra conquered Prahlaadha and enjoyed Swarga (the realm of the gods). Later Prahlaadha overcame Indhra and deprived him of Swarga. Indhra was forlorn and sought the advice of his high-priest for winning back his kingdom. The priest told him that Prahlaadha was performing a great yaaga called Vishvajith and Indhra should assume the form of a Brahmana and seek a gift from Prahlaadha. Prahlaadha will give whatever one seeks from him. Indhra went to Prahlaadha in the guise of a poor Brahmana. Prahlaadha welcomed him and asked him what he wanted.

As advised earlier by his high-priest, he asked Prahlaadha to offer him Prahlaadha's Sheelam (character). Prahlaadha enquired of the Brahmana of what use was his character to the seeker.

The Brahmana replied that there was no need to go into all that. He had expressed what he wanted in response to Prahlaadha's offer to give whatever anyone asked at the Vishvajith sacrifice. "Are you prepared to give or not?" Prahlaadha immediately gave what the Brahmana asked with due ceremony.

Within a few minutes, an effulgent flame emerged from Prahlaadha. Seeing the effulgent form, he asked: "Who are you?" The effulgent figure prostrated before Prahlaadha and said: "I am your character. Hitherto I was in you. I fostered your name and fame. Now you have given me away as a gift. Hence I am leaving you."

When character is lost everything is lost

When character left Prahlaadha, shortly thereafter another beautiful effulgent form issued forth from Prahlaadha. Prahlaadha asked him: "Who are you, oh King?" The radiant figure replied

"Prahlaadha! I am your Keerthi (Reputation). When character has left you, I have no place within you. Hitherto I was the servant of Character. When Character has left you, I have to follow suit."

Prahlaadha was puzzled. Then came another beautiful radiant female form from Prahlaadha.

Prahlaadha respectfully asked her: "Mother! Who are you?"

"Prahlaadha! After the departure of Character and Reputation, I, namely Rajyalakshmi, (the goddess of royal prosperity) have no place within you." Indhra, who had come in the form of a Brahmana, took all the three with him.

That very moment, Prahlaadha lost his kingdom. You can see from this how one's fame and prosperity are dependent on one's character. Character is a supremely Divine quality. Hence God is described as having six great attributes including Righteousness, infinite wealth, boundless prosperity, indescribable fame and unfathomable wisdom.

Prahlaadha was the embodiment of character. After Indhra had taken away his character from Prahlaadha, the latter got married and had a son by name Virochana.

You may realise from this episode what importance is attached to character in the spiritual process. This character should be offered only to God and none else. God is utterly selfless and therefore offering your character to God will mean no loss to you.

In the relationship between the devotee and God, no other relationship should be allowed to prevail. Ball ignored the warning of his preceptor in carrying out his promise to Vaamana.

Bharatha condemned his mother's action which resulted in his separation from Raama.

Prahlaadha did not submit to his father when it was a question of his devotion to Naaraayana.

Meera did not allow her husband's conduct to come in the way of her devotion to Krishna.

Do not give up God

Whatever may happen you should not give up God. God is the only unfailing protector.

Abhimanyu obtained his mother's blessings before going into battle at a time when Arjuna was away and Krishna was not available for advice. But her blessings were of no avail when God's strength was not available. Abhimanyu died in the battle valiantly like a hero.

All forms of strength, physical, material, manpower, etc., are of no use without Divine strength on your side.

Divine support and Dharma (Righteousness) are the two things essential for success. Whatever spiritual exercise one may practise, one should concentrate on achieving union with the Divine as the primary aim.

Discourse in Sai Kulwant Mandap on 27-8-1996.

40. Krishna's life and message

Sweeter than sugar, tastier than curds,

Extremely sweeter than honey,
 Is the chanting of the Divine Name.
 Recite, oh mind, the Nectarine Name
 Of Shri Krishna for ever.
 EMBODIMENTS of love! It is easy to criticize or belittle the leelas or infinite potencies of God.
 But it is very difficult to comprehend the truth about the Divine. The omnipresent Divine is present both in Truth and untruth. He is present both in Dharma (righteousness) and Adharma (unrighteousness). He is present in good and evil. With regard to such an all-pervading Divine, how can anyone determine what is good and what is bad?
 From the earliest times men have been proclaiming what is Divine. That the Divine has a form and possesses innumerable auspicious qualities was declared from their experiences.
 The cosmos functions on the basis of three types of actions. Creation, sustenance and dissolution are the three processes. The truth of this phenomenon cannot be denied by anyone at any time or place, whether he is a Vedhaanthin or a scientist, an engineer or a man of the world. While this has enabled people to describe the Divine, it has not served to demonstrate God. But they were able to indicate the means by which one can experience God.
 Experiencing the power of the Divine
 A distant star like the Dhruva nakshathra (Pole Star) can be pointed to some one by reference to some nearby physical object like a tree. Likewise the Vedhas and Scriptures, while not demonstrating the Divine, have helped to indicate the path leading to the realisation of the Divine.
 The spectacle of a dense forest confers delight. The sight of all tall mountain excites wonder.
 Seeing the torrent in a river one rejoices. All these are evidences of the power of the Divine.
 The stars shine. The planets revolve. The sun blazes forth. The wind blows. All these are signs of the Divine at work. When you see the spark of a fire, you can infer the nature of fire. If you know the nature of a drop of water, you can understand the nature of Ganga. Likewise, if you understand the nature of the atom, you can understand the nature of the entire cosmos.
 Recognising this truth, the Upanishaths declared: "The Divine is subtler than the atom and vaster than the vastest."
 The human is indeed a manifestation of the Divine with numerous potencies. It is the Divine that shines effulgently in every human being. But, because of his attachment to the body, he is unable to develop attachment to the Aathma (Spirit).

 Recognising the omnipresence of the Divine in all things, the quest for Truth should be undertaken. What is the Truth? Where is it? How to search for that which is everywhere? A distinction must be made between an apparent fact and the unchanging Reality. In daily life the sun appears to "rise" and "set" everyday, but in reality these apparent phenomena are due to the movement of the earth round itself and round the sun. Likewise what is apparently true about you, as is inferred from external observation, is not the real you. It is the effulgent Divine within you.
 The spiritual quest involves the churning of the heart by meditation. The qualities like compassion emerge from the heart. The human heart, which should be an ocean of milk, has been turned into an ocean of brine now infested with creatures like hatred, lust and greed.
 Krishna's leelas
 The childhood episodes relating to Krishna have an esoteric meaning. For instance, when his mother, Yashodha, chided Krishna for eating mud (as alleged by Balarama), Krishna replied: "Mother am I a child, or a silly brat or a crazy fool to eat mud?" In this way Krishna, even though he was a child, was affirming His divinity indirectly. The Divine teaches profound lessons to mankind in this indirect manner. God's actions should be understood not by the external events but by their inner meaning. Moreover, many changes in the ordinary ways of living are necessary to understand the ways of God. Aadhi Shankara indicated in the Bhaja Govindam song how even a brief experience of the Divine by a devotee fills him with ecstasy.
 This bliss can be got only through the Aathma. The experiences of the gopikas and gopaalas of Brindhaavan during Krishna's early years at Gokulam have been misunderstood and misinterpreted. Krishna was in the village for five years only. It is absurd to suggest that a fiveyear child behaved in an objectionable manner. After going to Mathura Krishna did not return to Repalle.
 Awareness of the Divine will confer bliss
 To ascribe anything improper to the pure and Divine life of Krishna is sheer blasphemy. The true nature of the Divine has to be fully understood. Divinity is the all-pervading Cosmic

Consciousness present in all. The nature of this consciousness should be understood. It is chith, which illumines every object in creation. Chith illumines what exists and thereby makes it cognisable. Existence is sath. Cognisability is chith. The combination of sath and chith confers thrupthi (satisfaction derived from enjoying the object). This Aanandha is thus the very nature of every being. The Divine pervades everything inside and outside. Awareness of the Divine will confer bliss. But few are able to realise this.

Once, an individual, unable to bear the difficulties in his family, left hearth and home. Later, after earning some money he set out to return to his house. A young son, who was in the house when the father left, was so grief-stricken over the father's absence that he died after sometime.

Before reaching his village, he took shelter in a choultry during a storm. There he had a dream in which he saw himself as a king in a palace living with six princely sons. He was enjoying the dream. A peal of thunder woke him up. He wondered what had happened to all the beautiful things he had been enjoying so far. He realised that it was all a dream. There was no trace of the six sons.

The reality in both dream and waking states

He reached his home in the morning. On seeing the husband, the wife broke into tears. On the one hand she was happy over the husband's return. On the other, she was filled with sorrow over the passing of her son. The father asked her: "Where is our son?" She replied that he passed away, unable to bear the separation from the father. The man was stupefied. He did not feel sad or happy. He stood transfixed like a statue. The wife asked: "How is it you are not moved by the loss of the son whom you loved so much? What is the reason?"

He then related to his wife the remarkable dream he had experienced the previous night. In that dream his six sons had died. "Am I to grieve over the loss of those six sons or over the loss of this one son?. For whose sake should I weep? They were my children in the dream state. This son was my child in the waking state. What was present in both the state is the reality. All other things are transient." This realisation came to him.

If people today wish to achieve spiritual bliss, they have to follow three principles: First, they must know what has to be known. Second, they must give up what has to be renounced. Third, they must reach the goal that has to be attained. By observing these three, bliss can be realised.

What is it that has to be known? What is this world? How long will I live? We see many passing away. Coming and going are continually happening. When the transient nature of the physical world is understood, bliss will be realised.

Next, what is it that you have to give up? The delusion under which what is unreal is considered real and what is real is treated as unreal. People consider that they are in the grip of Maaya and that they are caught up in misery. Misery has no limbs to hold you. It is you who are hugging misery. This is due to your ignorance. When you get rid of this ignorance you will experience bliss.

We have to go back to our source

What is the goal you have to reach? You have to go back to the source from which you came.

You have come from the Aathma and you have to return to the Aathma. This is what the Upanishaths sought to convey when they declared: "Asatho maa sadhgarnaya" (Lead me from the unreal to the Real). Where there is truth, untruth exists as its shadow.

"Thamaso maa jyothirgamaya" (Lead me from darkness to light). What is darkness and what is light? Light alone exists. Darkness is only the absence of light. Discovering the light leads to the elimination of darkness.

"Mrithyor-maa Amritham gamaya" (Lead me from death to Immortality). Birth and death are incidental to the body alone. Your Self has neither birth nor death. What is born (the body) dies.

Death relates to the body and not to the Aathma. The Aathma is eternal. It is the truth. You have to acquire this awareness to experience lasting bliss. To experience permanent bliss one has to develop firm faith in God.

The distinction between Krishna and Raama

Today we celebrate the birthday of Krishna. Where was he born? In a prison. What were his possessions? Nothing. Born in a prison, he was taken to the house of Nandha and then he went to Mathura. He owned nothing. But he became the greatest figure in the world. What does this show? Worldly possessions are not the secret of greatness. Krishna's greatness consisted in his permanent state of Aanandha (bliss).

If you recognise the distinction, between Krishna and Raama, you will appreciate better the nature of Krishna. Krishna always smiled at the outset and carried out his task later. For Raama, the deed came first and then the smile. Krishna made women cry. Raama wept for the sake of women. Raama went into the battle only after having a strong cause for it. Krishna first provoked the conflict and then determined its outcome. The Krishna principle revels in delight. The Raama principle is based on the concept of baadhyatha (obligation). The Raamaayana is intended to promote the reign of Truth and Righteousness on earth. The Krishna Avathaar was intended to give a perennial message to the world. He sought nothing for himself. He kept nothing for himself. He gave away everything to the people. He slayed his maternal uncle, Kamsa. He installed on the throne Kamsa's father Ugrasena. He did not covet the Kingdom. He befriended the Paandavas, defeated the Kauravas and crowned Dharmaja as the emperor. He did not make himself king. He was a king without a crown. He was the king of kings. He had no kingdom of his own. But he ruled over the hearts of the millions. It is this profound truth that is proclaimed by the Krishna-thathva (Krishna principle). If you enquire deeply, you will find that every Avathaar has incarnated to convey a special message and carry out a particular mission. Krishna's divine power The gopikas used to complain to Yashodha about Krishna's pranks. But whatever Krishna said in fun or did as a prank was based on truth. Krishna never indulged in untruth even by way of a joke. But those who could not understand the inner meaning of His statements used to accuse him of lying. This kind of misunderstanding has been a disease in all yugas (ages). When a gopika complained to Yashodha that Krishna had entered the house of a cowherd at night and played some mischief, Krishna pleaded before his mother how he could have gone out anywhere when he was sleeping beside her. The truth was that Krishna was in both places because of His Divine power. Krishna displayed any number of such baffling miracles. (Bhagavaan sang a series of songs about the complaints of the gopikas to Yashodha against Krishna). Against each complaint Krishna had a convincing alibi. Indirectly Krishna was revealing His divinity. Krishna explained to His mother the ways of the Divine in a way she could understand. Krishna used to visit the houses of the cowherds and drink curds and milk. The symbolic meaning of this action is Krishna's preference for sathva, represented by the pure white curds and milk. Krishna explained to Yashodha the reason why he preferred the butter in their homes to the butter offered by Yashodha. The hearts of the gopikas were pure and filled with selfless devotion to Krishna. Their devotion was superior to the maternal affection of Yashodha, which bore a taint of selfishness. Krishna told Yashodha: "I am attracted to the hearts of those who are pure and selfless." Follow the footsteps of the Lord Krishna had always eluded the gopikas after playing his mischief. But once, out of compassion for them, he wanted to provide a clue by which they could trace him. One day they all lay in wait round their houses to catch Krishna. Krishna went into a house stealthily, broke a pot of milk and quietly hid himself. The gopikas found that he had broken the pot and tried to trace him. The milk white steps which he had left revealed to them his hide-out. Then, Krishna revealed to them the spiritual truth that if they cling to the feet of the Lord they realise Him. "Follow my footsteps and you shall find me," Krishna told the gopikas. In the Bhaagavatham, the lessons you learn are according to the state of your mind. To understand the glories of the Lord as related in the Bhaagavatham, you have to enjoy the leelas (frolics) of Krishna and realise their inner meaning. For instance, the real meaning of the story about Krishna taking away the clothes of the gopikas while they were bathing is that to realise the Lord they have to abandon the attachment to the body, which is the vesture of the Spirit. These stories should not be treated in a spirit of levity or profanity. Krishna dedicated the flute to delight Raadha. In the case of Raadha, Krishna churned her heart and gave her the nectar of Divine bliss. Raadha had no attachment to any of her kith and kin. (Svaami sang sweetly a song of Raadha expressing her grief over separation from Him). Krishna appeared before Raadha before she gave up her life and blessed her. God will give anything for the devotee including Himself. No one can equal Him in the sacrifice He will make for the sake of the devotees. Krishna asked Raadha what she wanted at the last moment of her life. Raadha said: "I don't want anything except to listen to the music of your flute once before I pass on." "Sing, Oh

Krishna, speak to me to fill my heart with bliss," sang Raadha. "Distill the essence of the Vedhas and make it flow into the eternal music of your flute, Oh Krishna." Krishna took out His flute and played on it and when Raadha closed her eyes, He threw it away. He never touched it again. He dedicated the flute to give delight to Raadha. Thus, all the mysteries of Krishna served to relieve the distress of the devotees. Krishna used all His powers to serve the devotees. When the purport of the Bhaagavatha stories is properly understood, one can realise the pussiance of the Lord. In the life of Meerabai, for instance, when the Raana's sister gave to Meera a cup of milk containing poison, Meera drank it as an offering to Krishna. The result was Krishna absorbed the poison and left the sweet milk alone for Meera. By making an offering of all that you eat to God before taking it, the food gets purified and sanctified. The gopikas were illiterate and totally innocent. But their love for Krishna was unalloyed and exclusive. Even while engaged in their daily activities, their thoughts were centred on Krishna. Hence they experienced indescribable joy. Proclaim the message of unity. Devotees should cultivate unity, transcending all barriers of caste, creed and nationality. (Svaami then related the story of Suguna who was oblivious to her hand getting burnt because she saw the figure of Krishna in the flame of a lamp. Svaami sang a song expressing the delight of the gopikas on seeing Suguna in the state of Divine forgetfulness). Krishna's mystery and miracles are beyond words. He was all things to all people. He is the indweller in the heart of everyone. There is no room for religious differences. Students should resolve themselves to restore the pristine glory of Bhaarith by leading ideal lives. Proclaim the message of unity to the whole world. Before concluding My discourse, I would make an announcement to the students. In view of the ever-growing number of devotees coming to Prashaanthi Nilayam Svaami is not in a position to devote individual attention to students. Those who wish to get married and settle down in life, might happily do so and come to Bhagavaan for His blessings. Svaami will not perform any marriages in the Nilayam. But the Kalyana Mandapam can be used for marriages if they desired. Svaami will perform, however, mass marriages and mass

Upanayanams. Svaami's grace and love will be available to you wherever you may be. You may get married, lead a worldly life as householders and serve the nation. Today is Gokulaashtami, the day celebrated as Krishna's birthday. But it is not this celebration that is important. What is important is the adherence to Krishna's teachings. Krishna is not different from His teachings. The Geetha is Krishna and Krishna is Geetha. Discourse in the Sai Kulwant Mandap on 4-9-1996. Develop Prema (Love) towards the Lord, the Parama-Prema (Highest Love) of which He is the embodiment. Never give room for doubts and hesitations, for questions, to test the Lord's Prema. Baba 41. The power that draws devotees The unwise man thinks about the external world; The man of wisdom contemplates on Vishnu; The former becomes a worldy man; The other realises the Divine, Harken! Oh valiant sons of Bhaarith. EMBODIMENTS of Love! Man, although he is inherently the embodiment of Sath-Chith- Aanandha (Being-Awareness and Bliss), unaware of this truth, seeks this bliss in the phenomenal world. This is because he considers the physical world as the ultimate reality and forgets his own true Divine nature. This is a mark of his Ainaana (ignorance). When one's vision is turned Godward, this ignorance disappears. Many persons yearn for God, worship God or contemplate on God. God cannot be realised by any of these means. All these activities are based on separating themselves from God. What is needed is a sense of oneness. How is this to be obtained? When you cultivate the feeling: "I and you are one." This oneness is beyond the grasp of the mind and the senses. It is only the Buddhi (Intellect) that can experience what is beyond the senses. The message of Vedhaantha There is no need for penance or japa or other austerities to realise oneness with the Divine. Love alone is enough. This is the message of Vedhaantha. When Aadhi Shankara set out on a tour of the country to propagate Adhvaitha, he met Mandana Mishra, a great Vedhik scholar. They wanted to have a philosophical debate. They had to choose a judge to declare who had won in the debate. Aadhi Shankara, who was a thrikaalajnaani (one who knew the past, present and the future), chose Mandana Mishra's wife, Ubhaya-bhaarithi, as the judge. She was a lady who could rise above personal attachments.

The debate was held and Ubhaya-bhaarithi adjudged in favour of Shankara. She declared in unqualified terms that Mandana Mishra had lost in the debate. Immediately the verdict was declared, Mandana Mishra took to sanyaasa. Thereafter, Ubhaya-bhaarithi also, as Mandana Mishra's better half, followed suit and became a renunciant.

Ubhaya-bhaarithi established an aashram of her own to which only women were admitted as disciples. One day she was going with some of her disciples to the river Ganga for a bath. On the way she saw an ochre-robed saadhu resting under a tree with his head on a Kamandalam (a vessel used for keeping water). He was a renunciant only in external vesture but not a wholehearted renunciant. He kept the gourd water container under his head lest some one should take it away when he fell asleep.

A lesson for the saadhu

To teach the saadhu a lesson in genuine renunciation, Ubhaya-bhaarithi spoke loudly to her disciples: "Ladies! Look at the man's renunciation! He has not given up his attachment to his worthless Kamandalam and is concerned about its safety." On hearing her words, the byraagi (renunciant) got angry. When Ubhaya-bhaarithi was returning from the river, he ostentatiously cast off the gourd-bottle. Ubhayabhaarithi then exclaimed: "What a pity? I thought the saadhu was only a victim of Abhimaana (attachment). I find that he is also filled with Ahamkaara (egoism). If he was not so egoistic would he have thrown his Kamandalam at me?" She stood before the saadhu, and told him: "Your egoism is growing along with your attachment. This does not befit the robe you are wearing. You cannot be a real renunciant as long as you are filled with attachment and egoism. Give up attachment to the body and develop attachment to the Aathma"

She taught this lesson in a quiet and convincing manner.

In the sphere of wisdom, there are no distinctions of sex, or creed.

Hearing Ubhaya-bhaarithi's words, the saadhu came running, fell at her feet and sought her forgiveness. He said: "Oh

Mother! Because I had no one to teach me the truth in this manner, I was leading this double life.

From now on, you are my guru.

The Lord's grace

In human life, many pursue different forms of spiritual exercises.

Whatever ochre robe they may don,

Whatever sacred garland they may wear,

However fast they may roll the beads,

Finally they have to come to Baba.

His grace is essential

For anyone of any eminence.

Only His grace can redeem you. (Thelugu poem)

So many are engaged in formal spiritual practices of various kinds.

But of what use are they to win the grace of the Divine? Are you searching for the path that will help you to earn God's love? When you earnestly search within, you will get the answer.

Among the nine forms of devotion, the foremost is the cultivation of the sakhya (friendship) of God. Friendship is followed by total surrender to the Divine.

A great devotee once lamented that all his limbs and organs were utterly useless unless each of them was used to serve the Divine, to see the Divine or to listen to the glories of the Divine. The same feeling was expressed by saint Suurdhas when he said that the gift of eyesight was of no value if the eye did not see the beauteous form of the Dime. Those with ears who would not listen to the songs in praise of the lord might as well be as deaf.

(Svaami sang a number of songs which deplored the pitiable plight of those who did not use their God-given organs for experiencing the Divine). True humanness consists in using all one's senses and limbs for sacred purposes and not misusing them in various ways.

The man of faith need not worry about who will take care of him if he devotes all his time to thoughts of the Divine. The Lord who is the universal provider will take care of his devotees.

This faith in the Lord was emphatically proclaimed by Purandharadhaasa in his songs.

Recognise the miraculous powers of the Divine

How many realise the wonders in God's creation? There is a chick inside the egg. A huge tree comes out of a small seed. A human being is born from a human being. Who is responsible for all this? Only the Divine will. Without recognising these miraculous powers of the Divine, people make much of human achievements.

Look at what is happening here. What is it that makes people from Australia, Argentina and other countries come here? What is the power that draws them here? Without the power of the Divine, will they come here? Thyaagaraaja glorified the power of Raama in a song in which he extolled how Raama's Divine power enables Hanumaan to leap over the ocean and how it induced Lakshmana and Bharatha to worship Him.

It is the same Divine magnetic power which is attracting people from all over the world to come to Bhagavaan.

Once Raama desired to install a linga of Shiva while He was going to the south for the recovery of Seetha. He had asked Hanumaan to bring a linga from the Himaalaayas within a stipulated time for performing the installation. As Hanumaan did not come in time, Raama created a linga and performed the prathishta ceremony. Hanumaan, who adored Raama more than any other deity, threw away the linga nonchalantly.

Later, while walking, Raama's foot hit against a stone in the ground. Raama appeared as if he had lost his balance. Lakshmana asked Raama what had happened. Raama said that it was a small stone. Hanumaan came forth and said that he would pull out the stone lest some one else should stumble on it. Raama was inwardly seeking to test Hanumaan and teach him a lesson.

He remarked: "Hanumaan! You are capable of carrying mountains. Why do you bother about this small pebble? I shall walk more carefully. It is no fault of the pebble." Hanumaan, however, was determined to remove the pebble. It was a mark of his simian nature. He tried to remove the pebble with his left hand. He could not remove it. Later he used all his strength, but the pebble could not be removed. He was surprised and asked Raama: "Lord! What is this mystery?" Raama remarked: "Oh! It's nothing." He steeped forth and lifted the pebble with a toe and flung it afar.

That pebble was in fact the linga which Hanumaan had cast away.

An effulgence emerged from the linga and merged in Raama. And an effulgence from Raama entered the linga. Raama thereby wanted to demonstrate to Hanumaan that there was no difference between Him and Shiva. He taught that both Vishnu and Shiva should be adored alike.

Today people have their own preferences regarding the deities they adore: Raama, Krishna, Shiva, Sai and so on. Why cherish such differences? God is one. Names and forms differ according to differences in taste. But the Divine is one alone. When you develop the feeling of spiritual oneness of all beings, you become one with the Divine.

Students! Do not consider God as distant from you. Do not also entertain the crazy notion that if you worship Him, He will appear before you. Offer yourself to Him and in a moment you will experience Him within you. There is no need for any other severe penance.

Truth is God. Wisdom is God. Everything is God.

Discourse on 5-9-1996.

The Inaani says, "Sarvam Brahma mayam" (God is All); another, a Yogi, says all is Energy; a third, who is a Bhaktha says all is the play of Bhagavaan. Each according to his taste and according to his progress in spiritual saadhana. Do not blame or ridicule them, for they are all pilgrims trudging along the same road.

42. Ways of the Divine : Advent of Shankara

LAY is one substance. But out of it a variety of products with different names and shapes can be made. Likewise, out of gold, a variety of ornaments can be made. The same white milk is got out of cows of different colours. The Supreme Self is one, but dwells in innumerable bodies, with different names and forms.

If you examine the cosmic scene, you will find that out of the same basic substance a variety of objects with different forms are produced. For instance, out of a single seed, comes a tree with various branches, leaves, flowers, and fruits. These different things vary in form, name and use.

But they have all come from one seed.

"Ekoham bahusyaam" (The One chose to become the many).. There are three factors involved in this. For making a pot, a potter is the cause and the pot is the effect. The base for the production of the pot is clay. The pot may break but the clay remains as such. Out of the permanent substance, clay, the potter makes a pot. The fate of the pot does not affect the potter. The clay in the pot also remains as such.

The analogy applies equally to gold, the goldsmith, and the jewels made from gold.

On the same analogy, God is the changeless creator who creates the innumerable objects in creation which are subject to changes in names and forms. The relations between the three entities involved should be properly understood. The potter cannot make a pot without clay. No pot can be made if there is clay alone but no potter. Both potter and clay are necessary for making a pot.

Five forms of the Lord

The Creator is the nimitha-kaarana (instrumental cause of creation). The bodies are like the pots.

They are used for various purposes and are a source of enjoyment. But, like the pots, the bodies are perishable. When their time is up, they fall away. But the Creator is permanent. The elements out of which the bodies were made remain. Only the bodies have gone. The bodies are capable of being put to good or bad uses.

Divinity has five names. The first is Para-naamam. Second, Vyuha-naamam. Third, Vibhavanaamam.

Fourth, Antharaathma-naamam and fifth, Archana-naamam. The Divine functions in the cosmos in these five names.

Para-naamam refers to the abode of the Supreme, Vaikunttha. Vaikunttha means that which is unchanging. There the Supreme Lord dwells under the name Para-naamam.

No one can enter that abode of the Lord. The Lord dwells there as an effulgence. He oversees everything. But He is not visible to anyone and no one can see His form.

The second is: Vyuha-naamam. This name refers to the Lord who reclines on a serpent on the ocean of milk. The Lord in this form can be seen only by Dhevas (the various deities).

Only those with special powers can see the Lord here. Ordinary beings cannot do so. But the Lord in His Vyuha form fulfils the desires of the: Dhevas. You are aware of the story of Hiranyakashipu. He was harassing the Dhevas in various ways. So, they went to the Lord's couch on the ocean of milk and prayed to Him. In answer to their prayers the Lord agreed to incarnate on earth.

Various human forms in which Lord incarnates

Third is: Vibhava-naamam. This refers to the various human forms in which the Lord incarnates on earth as Avathaars of Raama and Krishna to protect the good and punish the wicked and turn them to the righteous path. The incarnations that are adored as the ten Avathaars belong to this category of Vibhava-naamam. In this form, the Lord manifests the relationship between God and the devotees.

The fourth is: Antharaathma-naamam. In this form, the Lord pervades every part of a human being as an indwelling spirit. This indwelling spirit is Divine.

The fifth is: Archana-naamam. This refers to the form in which the Divine can be worshipped, praised and adored for securing His grace.

Man through the aeons

Avathaars of the Lord in these different forms have been manifesting themselves for aeons and aeons. This may be quite astonishing to children of today. For instance, when they hear about the state of things in the Kritha Yuga they will feel that they are amazing and incredible. Human beings in that age used to live for hundreds of years. Moreover, their bodies were not as small as in this age. They were gigantic figures, with arms as long as six feet.

What kind of life did they lead? In the Kritha Yuga, life remained in the body as long as the bones were intact. All other parts of the body may disintegrate, but life remained in the skeleton. In Thretha Yuga, the height of human beings was less. The longevity was also less. Life remained as long as muscles and flesh remained in the body.

In Dhvaapara Yuga, life remained as long as blood circulated in the body. As you may know, Bheeshma lay on a bed of arrows after he had been wounded in the Kurukshethra war. As long as blood remained in his body, he lived. His life lasted for 56 days.

In the present Kali Yuga life lasts as long as there is food in the body. Without food man cannot survive.

In Kritha and Thretha Yugas, men had intimate relationship with God. Food was not so important. In Dhvaapara Yuga, the head became important.

In the Kritha and Thretha yugas, Dharma was all-important. Dharma muulam idham jagath (The cosmos is based on Dharma). In Dhvaapara Yuga, the decline started and wealth became all important. Dhana muulam idham jagath (The world is founded on wealth). The war between the Kauravas and the Paandavas was over property rights.

In the Kali Yuga, neither Dharma nor Dhana (wealth) is as important as Dhaya (compassion). It is because of the absence of compassion that the world today is afflicted with so many troubles.

The advent of Shankara

In the early centuries of this Kali Age, Buddhism and Jainism mere predominant religions. At that time, a young child was born in a village called Kaaladi in Kerala to a couple, Shivaguru and Aryaamba. In those days, there used to be frequent wars between Kings of different territories.

These wars generated hatred between peoples of different regions. The feeling of national unity was lost. With the loss of unity, all kinds of bad practices developed.

Untruth, injustice, dishonesty and disreputable conduct became the order of the day.

Nor was that all. Even the learned pandiths, scholars and intellectuals of the time started interpreting the Vedhas in perverse ways. The very face of the scriptures was blackened. With the result that the people's faith in the Vedhas and scriptures was undermined.

At such times, God or a divinely inspired saint or messiah makes His advent on earth to reform the wicked and restore the reign of Dharma. Such incarnations are known as Archana-naama forms of the Divine. In this Archana-naama form, the manifestations are regarded as Amsaavthaars-- manifestations of aspects of the Divine.

The Vibhava avathaars (like Raama and Krishna) are Puurna-avathaars (total manifestations of the Divine). The Archana-avathaars are Amsa-avathaars (partial manifestations). Such avathaars incarnate from time to time, not only in India but in all countries.

Jesus declared at first that He was "a messenger of God." Who are these messengers? They are of two kinds: Yamadhuutha and Avadhuutha. Yamadhuuthas are messengers who inflict harm on people. Avadhuuthas are messengers who protect. Jesus belonged to the second category. In due course, he recognised his own inner divinity. Then he declared: "I am the Son of God."

Thereby he proclaimed his right to a share in all the qualities of God. When he acquired all the qualities of the Divine, he announced: "I and my Father are one." The same threefold progress can be seen in the pronouncements of Zoroaster. First, he declared:

"I am in the light." Then he said: "The light is in me." Finally he declared: "I am the light." These declarations can be compared to the three systems of Indian philosophy Dualism, Qualified Nondualism and Nondualism. In propagating the doctrine of Non-dualism, Shankara considered himself a servant of God.

Shankara and his guru

Shankara's father, Shivaguru, passed away when Shankara was barely three years old. In this context, it is interesting to note how the Divine operates. Ten days before his passing, Shivaguru had a vision of an effulgence. The effulgence conveyed a message to Shivaguru. "Perform the upanayanam of your son," was the message. Shivaguru hurriedly arranged to have the upanayanam performed for the three-year old child. The little boy started reciting the Gaayathri

Manthra.

After the passing of Shivaguru, the grief-stricken mother devoted herself to bringing up the little boy. She took him to a guru, who taught the boy all kinds of scriptural knowledge. By the time he was 16, Shankara had completed study of the four Vedhas and the six systems of philosophy.

Normally even 50 years would not have sufficed for such study.

Shankara was a prodigy. He could grasp anything at the first mention of the subject. Even the guru was astonished at the boy's genius.

Meanwhile, the mother, was anxious to get the boy married and broached the subject with the guru. The boy was totally opposed to marriage. "I want to be a sanyaasi (renunciant)," he said. "I want to dedicate my body, mind and all else to God. They are all gifts of God. I have surrendered myself to God."

How Shankara obtained sanyaasa

The mother was in deep distress over the son's resolve. One day she was going to the river to fetch water. The young Shankara followed her earnestly pleading: "Mother! Permit me to take to sanyaasa." She did not agree. When she got into the river for her bath, Shankara jumped into the river and going down the river for a while, he raised one hand and shouted: "Mother, a crocodile has caught hold of me. At least now permit me to become a sanyaasi." The mother said: "If you can be saved from the crocodile by taking to sanyaasa, you better do so, so that you may live."

Shankara then came out of the river and told his mother: "In the ocean of samsaara I was about to be drowned by a crocodile in the form of a wife. When you let me become a sanyaasi I was free from the hold of the crocodile. No one could marry a sanyaasi."

Sanyaasa does not mean a mere change-in the colour of the robe. It is really a change in one's qualities.

Shankara prostrated before his mother and took her leave to embark on his career as ascetic. At that time, the mother made Shankara take a pledge that he should come and see her at her last moments.

Triumphal tour to all sacred shrines in the land

Shankara set out on his wanderings, visiting all the sacred shrines in the land. All travel had to be done by foot. He went to every assemblage of scholars and vanquished them in debates. He propagated the Adhvaithik doctrine. He declared: "The bodies are different, the forms are different, but the inner Self is one alone. The Divine is present in all like sugarcane juice which is the same, regardless of the cane from which it is got."

He had an encounter with Mandana Mishra, who was an upholder of the Karma siddhaantha (the doctrine of action). He defeated Mandana Mishra in the debate.

In this manner, Shankara went all over the country, from Kashmir to Kanyaakumari, several times. He convinced the scholars of the truth of Nondualism. "Ekam eva Adhvitheeyam" (The Self is one only; there is no second).

Aadhi Shankara was able to convince all the scholars about the truth of Adhvaitha. People are deluded by the multiplicity of names and forms. But the basis for all this diversity is the one Divine. Without the basis nothing can exist. This fact is recognised by all faiths. God is one and the goal is one. The doctrine of Adhvaitha is not easily understood. It has to be explained to the students in simple and intelligible terms.

Shankara passed away at the early age of 32. But he completed the mission for which he had come. Before his passing, he collected five lingas and installed them in five different centres:

Puuri, Dhvaaraka, Shringeri, Benares and Kaanchi. At Kaanchi he installed the Yoga Linga. One of the pontiffs was Suresha, who was none other than Mandana Mishra before he took to sanyaasa.

By establishing these mutts and promoting the sense of spiritual oneness among the people,

Aadhi Shankara promoted harmony in the country. Unfortunately some of his disciples started distorting Shankara's doctrines and attributing their own views to Shankara. Ultimately the disciples fell out and opposed each other's views.

Similarly, among Christ's eleven disciples differences developed and they fell apart. Only Mathew remained true to Jesus. He propagated the gospel. Peter was the first among Jesus's disciples. But he denied Christ when the authorities questioned him.

Raamaanuja who came after Shankara enunciated a modified version of Shankara's Non-dualism.

Then came Madhvaachaarya, who propounded dualism. I would explain their doctrines in subsequent discourses.

Discourse on 7-9-1996.

43. The glorious saga of Shankara

When the branch of a tree robs

against another branch incessantly,

Fire emerges from the branches.

When you repeatedly chum buttermilk

you get butter from which ghee is got.

By engaging one's self in a continuous process of enquiry

One realises the Divinity within. (Thelugu Poem).

BY perseverance anything can be accomplished, says a Thelugu proverb. The Geetha declares that by repeated practice one acquires the wisdom that ultimately leads to Thyaaga (renunciation). Every activity in life is based on practice. Likewise, to realise the Divine, constant practice is necessary. Mere repetition of the lord's name is not enough. Devotion should express itself in social service. Any service done with social well-being in mind will become service to God.

"The one Self dwells in a myriad bodies like butter in milk, oil in thil seeds, fragrance in a flower, sweet juice in a fruit and fire in a faggot," says a Sanskrit sloka. This is the truth proclaimed by Vedhaantha. Today, modern youth, not realising this truth, are wasting their lives in every way.

The doctrine of Adhvaitha

Aadhi Shankara demonstrated that underlying all forms, names and qualities, there is one basic reality which alone is real and changeless. This is the doctrine of Adhvaitha (Non-dualism). Out of a mango seed comes a tree with branches, leaves, flowers and fruit each with distinct forms and uses. But all the myriad things that have come from the seed owe their existence to the seed from which the tree arose. This truth was declared by Krishna in the Geetha when He said:

"Beejam maam sarvabhoothaanaam" (I am the seed that is the origin of all beings). All things in the universe are manifestations of the One Divine.

Yesterday I related the story of how Aadhi Shankara took to sanyaasa at an early age and came to his guru, Govindha. The preceptor for Govindha was Gaudapaadha. Gaudapaadha distinguished the Riks in Rig-Vedha which proclaimed the oneness of the Divine. Shankara received this teaching from Govindha and mastered all the Vedhas and Shaastras by his fourteenth year. Earnest pursuit of knowledge leads to total understanding (Inaana).

Shankara's debate with preceptor

One day, to test Shankara's mastery of the scriptures Govindha engaged Shankara in a philosophical debate. It was a debate between the preceptor and the disciple. Shankara was full of humility and reverence for the guru Hence, before entering on the debate he prostrated before the preceptor and prayed to him for permission to argue with him.

With the guru's sanction he began his argument with amazing skill and demolished, with due scriptural authority, the propositions of the preceptor and presented his views in accordance with Vedhik authorities with due regard to worldly understanding and showed how the Nivritthi (inward) path could be harmonized with the Pravritthi (external) path.

Shankara was deeply perturbed over the conduct of great Vedhik scholars of those times who were concerned about making a money out of their scriptural scholarship than to gain spiritual wisdom from it. They forgot that knowledge should not be used for commercial purposes. Even today many students consider education as a means for earning a living. This is utterly wrong. One should work for a living. But knowledge should be sought for acquiring wisdom. Shankara sought to bring about a change in the use of scriptural knowledge. Of what use is the acquisition of all kinds of knowledge if One does not think of God and use his hands for the adoration of the Divine? All such knowledge is a sheer waste, says a Thelugu poem.

Shankara was deeply distressed over the conduct of the scholars. His preceptor Govindha observed Shankara's sadness. Govindha's guru, Gaudapaadha, also felt unhappy over this state of things. Both of them were elated at the sublime feelings of the young Shankara. They both realised that Shankara was best qualified to use the sacred teachings of the Vedhas to combat the prevailing unrighteous and immoral tendencies in the society. They summoned Shankara and told him "Child! There is no need for you to stay here any longer. Leave for Kaasi tomorrow. You must meet the great pandiths in Kaasi and propagate the doctrine to the whole world. Nobody else can carry out this mission." Students today should realise that they are the most powerful instruments for rectifying all the evils rampant in our society today.

Shankara's journey to Kaasi

With the permission of the two preceptors, Shankara set out for Kaasi. No modern means of transport were available in those days. Shankara had to walk all the way to Benares. The sixteen-year-old lad gathered his disciples and left for Kaasi. On the way he saw a pandith sitting under a tree and cramming the rules of grammar. At that moment, he began composing the famous hymn. "Bhaja Govindham." (Syaami recited the opening stanza from Bhaja Govindham). "You dull-witted fellow! Why do you immerse yourself in the rules of grammar? They will not save you when death knocks at the door. Instead, worship Govindha!" At the time of death nothing and nobody will follow the departing soul when it leaves the body. Only the remembrance of the name of the Lord will keep you company at all times. Shankara advised the pandith to chant the name of the Lord instead of conning the rules of grammar.

After teaching him this lesson, Shankara proceeded to Kaasi with his disciples. Shankara's teachings were spreading far and wide. The of Benares arranged for a grand assembly of scholars in the holy city.

Shankara and the scholars

Many scholars had gathered there in all their regalia. Nothing was lacking in terms of ostentation at that assembly. Shankara entered in a simple way, wearing a dhoti covering upto his knees and a towel over his shoulder. On seeing him, the pandiths seemed to feel that it was all a joke.

Some pandiths remarked: "He does not even wear a rudhraaksha maala (a garland of beads). Apandith should have an imposing figure. What is it that this stripling can tell us?" They addressed him thus: "We have come to know that you are proficient in all the Vedhas and Shaasthras, an authority on grammar and logic and a great exponent of the Adhvaita doctrine."

Shankara then sang the Bhaja Govindham songs, pointing out the transitory nature of material wealth and exhorting all to give up worldly desires. He declared that pandiths should be equalminded and should give up the desire for wealth, which is the result of one's actions. "Give up this thirst for money. Develop the thirst for God," declared Shankara in strident terms. Then he gave a superb exposition of the metaphysics of Adhvaita. All the pandiths and their disciples were astonished at the performance of the young Shankara.

They realised that here was one who was not only a great teacher but one who practised what he taught. This unity in thought, word and deed is the mark of greatness. Shankara was the very embodiment of unity and purity in thought, speech and action. Many pandiths got up and plied Shankara with questions. He answered them all with perfect ease. He declared that Adhvaita means oneness of the spirit and awareness of this oneness is true Inaana (wisdom). Spiritual wisdom alone is true wisdom. Pandiths today, he declared, are not having this realisation. Exposition of Adhvaita

Shankara pointed out that though names and forms may be many, the Self is one only. That Self resides in everyone's heart. He exhorted the pandiths to purify their hearts and follow the dictates of the conscience. Shankara made it clear that creeds may vary but God is one.

Shankara called upon the pandiths to be content with moderate incomes and not hanker after riches. Vast knowledge and petty desires go ill together.

 Students should realise how a young lad born in Kaaladi brought greatness to Kerala and Bhaarath.
 Students should cultivate human values like love, compassion, righteousness and truth and become truly human. Every student should strive to lead an ideal life like Shankara.
 In this context, I should like to mention that in Bhaja Govindham Shankara commends renunciation of all worldly attachments. People may feel that Svaami is telling the students these unworldly teachings. This does not worry me, because what I am saying is the Truth. Is renunciation acquired so easily? No. People who have been listening for years have not changed to the slightest extent. To imagine that a single discourse is going to make a big change is fanciful. Only a fortunate few experience such transformation. If real renunciation is promoted in anyone, there can be no greater blessing than that. Nearness to God will inspire the spirit of renunciation even without one being conscious of it. In that renunciation lies fulfillment. And one's life is redeemed. Discourse in Sai Kulwant Mandap on 7-9-1996. Steady adherence to Truth, Renunciation, Genuine Prema (Love), Self-less service these are the essential components of character. Follow the dictates of your conscience. You can never be wrong. Baba
 44. Vedha and Vedhaantha
 One may have mastered the Vedhas
 Or be a versatile writer;
 But, without purity of mind,
 He will take to bad ways.
 Hearken, oh son of Bhaarath!
 To this good counsel.
 EMBODIMENTS of Love! Shankara propagated the view that the Vedhas uphold Dhvaitha (dualism) and Vedhaantha teaches Adhvaitha (non-dualism) on the basis of citations from the scriptural texts. The difference between the Vedhas and Vedhaantha is like the differences between various organs in the same body. The eyes, the ears, the nose, the arms and the feet are different parts of the body. The individual is a limb of society. Society is a limb of humanity. Humanity is a part of Nature or the phenomenal world. Nature is a limb of the Paramaathma (Supreme Self). In Kaasi (Vaaranaasi), at the assembly of scholars, debates raged over many philosophical issues. Amused at this spectacle, Shankara remarked: "Vaadhe Vaadhe Vardhathe Vairam" (Enmity grows with controversy). Continuous disputation only results in increasing bitterness among the disputants. Argumentation is not the proper method for setting spiritual issues.

 Dualism of the Vedhas
 Man is obliged to resolve problems in life. In daily existence man will never be free from worry.
 From birth to death man is confronted continuously with worries. The only way out of them is for people to develop love for God. Love is the sovereign remedy for all ills.
 The Vedhas, however, have not given sufficient importance to this love. Their emphasis is more on aasavam (aspiration) than on anubhavam (experience). There are innumerable Vedhik scholars who ceaselessly chant the Vedhas. All this is verbal and not concerned with active practice. This attitude was described by Shankara as Dhvaitha (dualism). All the Vedhik manthras were in the form of prayers for favours. (I want this, I want that). Desire is at the root of dualism. Desire arises because of the feeling that there is the "other." The one who desires and the object that is desired are two things apart from each other. True non-dualism is the extinction of this separation by the unifaction of the subject and the object. Dualism exists when the object that is desired, for instance, a kerchief, is distinct from the person who desires it. Non-dualism can only be experienced. Non-dualism is a state of consciousness which can only be experienced and not described in words. In this regard, the Adhvaithin is like a dumb man who has enjoyed a delightful dinner but cannot describe the taste of the dishes he has consumed. There are two kinds of proof for the existence of anything. Prath yaksham (direct perception) and Paroksham (indirect proof). The bliss derived from the Adhvaithik consciousness is beyond words. It can only be experienced, but cannot be described or explained. In this matter, if indirect proof did not exist, direct perception would be out of the question. Unfortunately, today people attach value to direct perception alone and have scant regard for indirect evidence. This is not the right attitude. For instance, one sees a block of ice. It appears solid, but it is entirely made up of water, which is a liquid. Thus water, whose presence is inferred indirectly, is the basis for the solid block of ice that is seen by direct perception. Thus it can be realised that what is indirect is the basis for what is perceived directly.

Likewise, for this visible phenomenal universe, the invisible is the Divine. Not recognising this truth, men go by the Vedhik conception of dualism instead of recognising the truth of the Vedhaanthik doctrine of non-dualism.

Man spends his life immersed in worldly affairs. To point out to mankind the more vital inward path, Shankara dedicated his life. His preceptor, Gaudapaadha, gave Shankara all help and encouragement. Despite being young in years, Shankara showed great determination and strength of conviction. At the age of 16 he could convince the venerable pandiths of Kaasi about the validity of the Adhvaithik doctrine.

What is Adhvaitha? The oneness of everything is Adhvaitha. The scriptures have declared that the cosmos is permeated by the Divine. It is the desire of devotees to worship the Divine under different forms and names that is the reason for the various creeds and sects.

The form and the substance

An affluent devotee, filled with dualistic feelings, adored the form of Krishna. He wished to offer worship regularly to an idol of Krishna. He got a gold idol of Krishna made by a goldsmith out of 20 coins. He got a golden cow made to match the idol. He got made a peacock and a golden cup to perform the abhishekam for the idol, both of the same weight as the idol.

Everyday he used to perform the abhishekam and enjoy the worship of Krishna. But the tide of time brought in its wake a decline in his fortunes and he found himself nearly destitute. He collected all his golden articles of worship and took them to another rich man to sell them. Each of the four items was weighed and valued at Rs. 60,000 each. The old devotee could not bear to learn that his revered Krishna idol was valued at the same price as the cow, the peacock and the cup. He said that more should be paid for the Krishna idol. The intending purchaser said: "Sir, for you the Krishna form is more precious than the other. But for me only the weight matters, not the form."

What is happening in the world today is that men are attaching value to the external forms and not to the Divine substance which is common to all of them. The five elements constituting every being are Divine. Apart from the five elements there is no sixth element. People imagine that.

there is a sixth element and go after it.

This crazy desire is the cause of much of man's misery. Desires are inescapable. But there should be a limit for them. In the story of Midaas, he prayed and got a boon that whatever he touched should turn into gold. He soon found that he could not even eat his food as it turned into gold at his touch. He prayed again to the good fairy to take back the boon she had given to him.

It is evident from this story what will be the grave consequences of insatiable desires. Those who act upto Divine injunctions will be happy and prosperous.

Shankara, therefore, warned mankind against the mad pursuit of wealth and exhorted everyone to reduce one's desires. (Svaami sang a Thelugu song. "One gets wealth according to his Kanna.

Therefore be content what you get.").

Control your desires

Control your desires. Cultivate love of God. That love will confer on you everything according to your needs. There is no need for you to ask for anything from God.

"Did He not give to Shabari what she needed without her asking? Did He not bless Jataayu with His grace?"

Dhasharatha had prayed for so long that his son should perform the last rites for him. But he did not get it, while the bird Jataayu had the privilege of getting his last rites done at Raama's hands.

Jataayu got liberation after receiving the saving drops of water from Raama. Shabari was eagerly waiting for the arrival of Raama and made all the arrangements to welcome him and offer him the sweetest fruit. Shabari's intense devotion to Raama got its reward.

God confers His grace according to each one's deserts. The Divine is marked by Anugraha

(Grace) and not Aagraha (anger). But devotees tend to judge the ways of God according to their own predilections. A man standing before a mirror will see his moods reflected in the mirror.

It is impossible to escape from karma

No one can escape from the consequences of his actions whatever efforts he may make to run away from them. (Svaami sang a song with the refrain, "Karma-dhaatha vasamaa, naanaa"--Is it possible to escape from Karma, oh man?) As are your actions, so are the reactions.

In the cosmic context, nature is the mirror. God is the viewer. All that is reflected in nature is Divine. The One alone exists. The object and the image appear because of the presence of the mirror. When there is no mirror there is no image. This is the mystery relating to nature and the wonders of the Lord. The glories of the Lord are multifarious and marvellous beyond words.

God's arithmetic is different from man's. For instance, when a mirror is placed before you, you have three entities. Yourself, the mirror and your image. When you take away the mirror, according to ordinary arithmetic, three minus one should be two. But when the mirror is removed only you remain. Three minus one becomes one!

Many people think and many people say: "Money makes many many things." But I say: "Money makes many wrongs."

Only when the distinction between the worldly point of view and the Divine point of view is understood that people will learn to make proper use of money.

"You and I are one"

This is the distinctive significance of Shankara's non-dualism.

Shankara related the experiences of daily life to the doctrine of Ekathvam (spiritual oneness). The Divine is one, but is adored under different names and forms: Allah, Jesus, Buddha, Zoroaster, Raama, Hari or Hara. All are the same. Shankara did not approve of God being described as mother, father, etc. The relationship between God and man is oneness. "You and I are one." This is the essence of the Adhvaithik doctrine. This awareness of oneness can give infinite joy, according to Shankara.

This experience does not come easily. One has to undertake intensive enquiry and also practise samskaaras (spiritual discipline). When the samskaaras lead to the refinement of the spirit, the experience of oneness with the Divine comes. How fortunate is the one who gets that experience!

None can be more fortunate.

The one who gets this experience is the Lord of the universe. As the Master of the Self he is the Lord of the Cosmos. This Aathma is present in every cell of the human body. When this nectarine truth is realised, man will not seek the ephemeral.

Everyone should therefore seek the nectar, of enduring Aathmik bliss.

Shankara made all endeavours to propagate the Adhvaithik message to the entire country and to every person whether he was a king or a commoner, scholar or ignoramus.

Pledge to the mother

Shankara had given a pledge to his mother that he would, reach her in the last moments and perform the last rites for her. Being a pure and high-souled being, he was determined to keep his word. For the pure-hearted the plighted word is bound to be kept.

Moreover, whatever they say will happen.

The Divine chooses the time and the situation for showering His grace and conveying His message. In the case of Arjuna, the Kurukshethra war was the right moment for Krishna to test

Arjuna's total faith in Krishna and his deservedness for receiving the message of the Geetha.

Discourse in Sai Kulwant Mandap on 8-9-1996.

The true strength can be acquired only through Love. All other efforts are of no avail. Thus we should seek from God only the strength of LOVE.

Baba

45. Shankara's call to youth

What does it matter

If the petty-minded

Slight noble souls?

Does mighty elephant lose

Its grandeur when dogs bark?

EMBODIMENTS of the Divine Aathma! All objects in the world which you see display some kind of colour. We think that these colours are natural to those objects. It is not so. The colours are really a reflection of our own vision. The sky appears blue when we look at it. The ocean appears dark blue in colour. We say that the sky is blue, the ocean is blue. This is incorrect.

Neither the sky nor the ocean is blue in colour. It is the vastness of space and the depths of the ocean which produce this impression of bluishness. When you take a handful of seawater and look at it you will find that it is colourless. It will not show the colour that you fancy.

Likewise, good and evil depend on one's thoughts and feelings. The true colour of any object is not perceivable. Equally, the true form is not apparent.

Electrical energy is generated from a hydroelectric power station.

The electric current is not visible to us, though the different uses to which the energy is put are obvious. Likewise, all beings, all living creatures, emerge from the Aathmik Principle. But this Principle is not apparent.

We can see the beings arising from this Principle and their behaviour, good and bad.

A promise fulfilled

After Shankara propagated his Adhvaithik doctrine from Kaasi, there was an assembly of great scholars in the holy city. Shankara, who was in that assembly, closed his eyes for a moment and experienced the vision of his mother in great distress. Immediately he dispersed the assembly and left for Kaaladi. He reached his mother in her last moments, as promised, administered

thulasi water to her lips and discharged his duties to the mother.

At that time, the people of Kaaladi did not view with approval the actions of Shankara, because in their view, one who had taken to sanyaasa, should not revert to the activities of a householder and perform rituals. Sanyaasa means giving up all desires. The view of the orthodox pandiths was that once a person had taken to sanyaasa he should not perform the last rites for a mother or a father which are the obligations of a householder.

To enable the students to understand the implications of this incident, I shall explain what sanyaasa means. Before one takes to sanyaasa, the Viraja Homa is performed which signifies that the person dies as it were and gives up all his previous worldly commitments and enters on a new life, assuming a new form and wearing a new robe. The old form is cast away and the former name is also given up. He gets a new name related to the ascetic order. The suffix Aanandha is tacked on the name, though few of them, experience Aanandha! After going through this ceremony, where is the place for mother or father?

Svaami's visit to Hrishikesh

In this context, I should like to recall an incident which happened when I was travelling with Burugula Raamakrishna Rao, the then Governor of Utthar Pradesh. He was a good devotee and was proficient in a number of languages. He was a very intelligent person. He resolved to make the trip to Badhrinaath and Kedhaarnaath "in the company of the Lord Himself (Bhagavaan Baba)." On learning that Svaami was going to Badhrinaath, nearly 200 devotees joined Bhagavaan's group. The Raamakrishna Rao couple were very pure and pious people and every day they would take their food only after the 200 devotees with Svaami had taken their food.

Such was their devotion! When the devotees sat for the meals, Raamakrishna Rao himself would serve water for all of them. He would not allow his A.D.C. or others to do this service. He used to declare-"I am a servant of Svaami, not a Governor."

Raamakrishna Rao was previously Chief Minister of Aandhra Pradesh at Hyderabad. When

Svaami went there during that period, thousands of persons were lined up in a queue for dharshan of Svaami at Malakpet. The volunteers were hustling the devotees in the queue to save time.

I should like the students to realise what a tender heart

Raamakrishna Rao had. He joined the queue. The Inspector General of Police approached Raamakrishna Rao and appealed to him to come separately and not join in the queue. Raamakrishna Rao told him: "Politically I may be Chief Minister. Spiritually I am a cheap devotee! I am not such a great devotee." Such was the devotional spirit of Raamakrishna Rao!

Svaami and Shivaanandha

All of us reached Hrishikesh. Raamakrishna Rao had arranged for the stay of the entire party in a big guest house and nearby cottages. At that time, Shivaanandha and a group of his devotees came to the guest house and requested Svaami to visit Svaami Shivaanandha's aashram the next day, which happened to be Shivaanandha's seventieth birthday.

Svaami remarked: "It is not

Shivaanandha's birthday but Kuppusvaami's birthday. Before he assumed the name.

Shivaanandha, as a renunciant, his name was Kuppusvaami. He was a doctor. That Kuppusvaami ceased to exist with the taking of Sanyaasa. He then adopted the name Shivaanandha. That was 26 years ago. Hence the Svaami is only 26 years old as Shivaanandha. It is the 70th Birthday for Kuppusvaami and only the 26th Birthday for Shivaanandha!" Shivaanandha said: "Svaami! No one has told me this truth so far in this forceful manner."

This body is 70 years old. People recognise the physical, but do not recognise the basis that sustains it. This truth can be understood only by Divine personalities like avathaars and not by others. From the moment of birth till the end of this body it will bear one form and one name.

People who profess Adhvaita, often remember their pre-sanyaasa life and continue to think of it while carrying on their life as renunciants.

Practice of cremation in the backyard in Kerala

Shankara was confronted with a difficult situation. No one in his village was willing to help him.

He had to perform the obsequies for his mother. The local Nambuudhiri Brahmins declared that they could not touch the body. They felt that Shankara was going against scriptural injunctions.

Utterly helpless, Shankara carried the body himself to the backyard of the house and cremated it.

What Shankara did then is practised even today in Kaaladi. When any elders pass away, their bodies are cremated in the backyard of their houses. There is no separate cremation ground for them.

When you go to Kerala you will find houses facing the street but the backyard will be open space. Anyone who goes there will have to take a purifactory bath. In this manner Shankara fulfilled the promise he gave to his mother.

Shankara then left for Kaasi. He was deeply pained at the attitude displayed towards him by the people of Kaaladi. Shankara was walking all the way to Kaasi, with just a stick in his hand and an oil torch to light his way at night.

Advice to the young

Looking at young men and women going about on his way, Shankara remarked to his disciples that young people were more keen about sensuous pleasures than to enquire about the Aathma. It is a pity that people are attached to the body which is a container of many filthy objects. They are carried away by the external physical attractions of the body. It is a crying shame! What a pity that people should be so attached to this impermanent body! How long can youthhood last?

Shankara then and there taught the people about the transitoriness of carnal pleasures.

His message was a warning to youth to be very careful in the life they led. They should give up attachment to the body. In this context I would relate the story of a prince who wanted to marry a merchant's daughter for her beauty. The girl who was devoted to God and wished to remain single, devised a plan to rid the prince of his infatuations. She sent word that she would agree to marry the prince if he approved of her after a week. Meanwhile she took a series of purgatives, collected all the purgings in vessels and went to meet the prince. By that time she was so emaciated that all her youthful charm had gone. She told the prince that the beauty he saw in her was all contained in the vessels. The prince learnt the lesson and decided also to remain single and devote himself to serve God.

Shankara sought in this manner to turn the minds of the people away from sensual pleasures to thoughts of God. Shankara did not call upon all young men to take to sanyaasa. He exhorted them to do their duty and dedicate the body to the service of the Divine. He preached the truth, practised it and broadcast it to the world.

Young people today have become slaves of the senses and are behaving like the lower animals.

Shankara pointed out how worldly life is like the scenes on a screen. They come and go, but the screen remains. He declared: "Brahma Sathyam. Jagath mithya" (The Self is real. The world is illusory). Shankara also declared: "Sarvam Vishnumayam Jagath" (The Universe is permeated by God). When scholars pointed out the contradiction between the two statements, Shankara said:

"Worldly life is illusory because it is continually coming and going." At the same time, this worldly life is lived like the moving scenes on a permanent screen. In this process the world and the Divine become one as it were like the oneness of the screen and the pictures on it. This is the basis for the statement: "Sarvam Vishnumayam Jagath." Hence, the Upanishathik declaration that the whole cosmos is dwelt in by God.

Adhvaita and worldly duties

This was the non-dualism preached by Shankara. Consider the Divine as the fundamental basis and lead your worldly life recognising its impermanence. Without the Divine the cosmos has no existence. Hence man must recognise the one Divine Aathmik Principle that is present in all beings. It may be called by different names. The Eternal Divine is birthless and nameless.

(Svaami described Shankara's successful debates with Mandana Mishra and his wife, Ubhayabhaarathi, both of whom took to sanyaasa thereafter. Shankara then went to Kashmir.)

Shankara's atonement in Kashmir

The ruler of Kashmir was a great patron of scholars. Shankara wanted to defeat them in debates.

The moment Shankara entered Kashmir, the gates of the temple of Kanaka-dhurga closed. All the efforts to open them proved fruitless. All the pandiths went to the temple and prayed to the goddess. In answer to their prayers the Goddess spoke in an ethereal voice: "Shankara is a great Achaarya (preceptor). But he suffers from one taint. Only when the taint is removed will these doors open." Shankara then sang hymns in praise of Shiva. Shankara realised that he had committed a mistake in entering the dead body of the king of Kaasi to acquire the experience-of a householder for carrying on the debate with Ubhayabhaarathi, the wife of Mandana Mishra. To atone for this lapse he decided on a eleven days fast, without food or water, to perform a thapas.

On the twelfth day, the doors of the temple opened of their own accord. This showed the power of Shankara's determination and penance.

Krishnamurthy and Sandipan Chatterjee (who had spoken earlier) referred to Prema and called upon the students to cultivate love. What is the kind of love they should develop? Shankara has given the answer. The love should arise from the Aathma. True prayer should stem from the soul and not the body. That love is God. Live in love. Develop detachment Shankara continuously preached the doctrine of detachment to young people because he realised that attachments developed over many lives cannot be shed by listening to one or two speeches.

There was a businessman who feared that his son might develop aversion to the world if he listened to the discourse of a pandith who was expounding the greatness of renunciation. The pandith assured the merchant that one day's talk was not going to reform his son, when a series of talks had no effect on the father. When there was need for constant purity in daily life, the efforts at spiritual cleansing should be continuous. This was the way Shankara was preaching to the young the philosophy of renunciation and detachment. Students should hold fast to God as the only true friend and supporter. When you have firm faith, the Divine will manifest Himself to you. This is the truth, the truth and nothing but the Truth. Today several pandiths expounded Adhvaitha, but few practise it. Adhvaitha should be lived, not merely repeated in words! Realise the truth: "Sathyam, Inaanam, Anantham Brahma!"

Discourse in Sai Kulwant Mandap on 9-9-1996.

46. The conquest of attachment
With what ingenuity does the tongue
Manage to move about in the mouth
Without getting caught between the teeth!
Man also should behave likewise
To avoid the perils of life.
Forget not these good words, Oh man!

SHANKARA looked upon man's existence in the world as that of an actor on the stage, who plays his part, by being born, growing and dying. Man's life is like a drop of water Shimmering without rest on a lotus leaf. It is filled with grief and sorrow. Give up attachment to this life And start worshipping Govindha. Oh man! lacking in wisdom. (Thelugu Poem).

Human life is like a house filled with many rooms in the form of desires. Desires and disappointments are the order of the day. Doubts are rampant. Man is racked by fears. Fear haunts him wherever he goes or remains. He is caught up in a maze of troubles. How is he to escape from it? Even the happiness which he seems to derive from life is coupled with fear.

There is no freedom from fear. How is it to be got? Where there is no attachment, there is no fear. How is this state to be got? By proximity to the Divine.

Shankara exhorted mankind to banish fear by cultivating vairagya (detachment) and journeying towards the Aathma (Self). It is through Self-Realisation that the true nature of fear is understood. Joy and sorrow, profit and loss, light and darkness are pairs of opposites in which the absence of one is the sign of its opposite. For both, the root cause is the Aathma. All things originate from the Aathma. Here is a flower. It has many petals. These petals appear distinct from each other. But all petals have emerged from the same single stem. The stem is the seat of the Aathma, from which the petals have emanated. But we view the flower as a single object. The flower is one, but the petals are many. The petals have come out of the one stem.

The ocean, waves and foam
The analogy is applicable to the endless number of waves arising on the ocean. The waves are many and distinct. But they are of the same stuff as the ocean. From the waves arises the foam, which has the same properties as the waves and the ocean though different in form and name.

These three are based on the ocean. The three represent the three kinds of proofs in logic Prathyaksha (direct perception), Paroksha (indirect evidence) and Anumaana (inference). This is the logical basis for Adhvaitha. It is termed Thriputhi--the three-in-one--the Aathmik principle. In the human, this three-in-one is found in the unity of the body, mind and Aathma. The body functions on the basis of the mind. The mind is based on the Aathma. The Aathma is the basis for everything. For humanness, the Aathma is the basis. This is the doctrine of Non-Dualism.

Ignoring this truth and pursuing the myriad ephemeral objects of the phenomenal world, people ultimately come to a realisation of the Aathmik Principle.

Siddhaarth's discovery
After a long period Shuddhodhana had a son, named Siddhaarth. The King kept Siddhaarth entirely within the palace so that the boy should have no knowledge of the sufferings in the world outside. Once Shuddhodhana introduced his son to a high-souled pandith who had come to the palace. The pandith was an oracle. He told the king: "Shuddhodhana! This lad will become a renunciant. Moreover he will become a great teacher of wisdom to the people." Shuddhodhana was alarmed on hearing this.

 Apprehending that the prince might develop Vairaagya (total detachment) if he went out, he kept the prince from going out. The king got him married when he reached his eighteenth year and crowned him Heir-Apparent. After his coronation as Yuvaraaja, Siddhaarth desired to go round the kingdom. There was no meaning in a ruler confining himself to his palace. He should know how the people lived. Hence he wanted to go round the country. Despite his apprehensions, the king agreed to the prince's request because he was now married and was unlikely to break away. Old age, disease and death Siddhaarth got into his chariot and set out on a tour of the capital. He saw an old woman, bent with age, trudging, on the road with a stick. He asked the charioteer: "Who is this strange creature moving on the road?" "Lord! When one grows old, the back is bent and one becomes infirm. This is an old woman." The prince asked: "Does this happen to everyone as a result of old age?" He replied: "It is inescapable. It is a law of Nature." The chariot went further. A sick man was sitting under a tree, coughing and wailing. The prince asked what the matter was with the man under the tree. The charioteer replied: "The human body is subject to a variety of ailments. That man is suffering from a severe ailment. No one can tell when anyone may be afflicted with disease." The prince took note of this. The chariot proceeded further. A dead body was being carried by four persons on a bier. The prince asked what it was that the four men were carrying. He replied: "It is a dead body." "What is a dead body?" asked the prince. The charioteer replied: "A dead body is without life." "What about us?" asked the prince. "We are Shivam (alive)." The prince asked: "Does everyone lose his life?" "Yes. Death is unavoidable, sometime or other." The prince heard this. He dropped the sword in his hand and returned to the palace. He did not eat that night. He went to bed, but could not sleep. By his side, his wife Yashodhara and his young son were sleeping. He looked at them intensely. The thought flashed in his mind: Sarvam duhkham (All is sorrow). Then he declared: "Sarvam Bhayam, Bhayam, Bhayam" (All is filled with fear). Next, he declared: "Sarvam anithyam, anithyam, anithyam" (Everything is transient, transient, transient). Then, he declared: "Sarvam shuunyam, shuunyam, shuunyam" (All is emptiness). Making these declarations, he left the palace. What great renunciation is this! We see any number of ailing persons, old people and dead bodies. How many get the feeling of renunciation after seeing these scenes? Only Siddhaarth got this feeling. To acquire such a control over the senses (as to give up all attachments) God's grace is necessary. The Jithendhriya kingdom Likewise, a prince went to a forest for hunting. Feeling tired and thirsty, he went to an aashram for rest and water to drink. The sage of the heritage asked the prince who he was and what brought him to the aashram. He said: "My name is Jithendhriya. I have come from the kingdom of Jithendhriya. I need some water." The sage offered water and asked him to sit. The sage wanted to find out whether the stranger was one who lived upto his name. (Jithendhriya means one who has conquered his senses). There are many persons who have names like Dharmaraju, but who belie their names. The sage asked the prince to hand over his royal clothes to him and wear an ascetic's robes himself. He took the prince's clothes, sprinkled some red powder on them and set out for the kingdom of Jithendhriya. At the palace gate, the sentry greeted the sage with reverence and asked him the object of his visit. The sage told them that the prince had been killed by a wild animal in the forest and that he had brought the prince's clothes. He asked them to convey this message to the king. The gatekeeper smiled and asked: "Who is free from death? Everyone that is born is bound to die. Birth and death go together." There is a practice in the railways to stamp on every railway wagon the date on which it has to be returned to the workshop for repair and repainting. Likewise everybody has a return date, though it is not visible. Indifference to death After hearing the sentry's words, the sage went in to meet the king himself. He told the king that his son had died and started crying. While the Sanyaasi was wailing, the king was having a laugh. The king said to him: "You are wearing the ochre robe. But your words are unbecoming of a renunciant. Why do you cry? This is no matter for grief or worry. At dusk hundreds of birds return to a tree for rest. The next morning they fly away. What is the relationship between the different birds? Likewise on the tree of my family, birds like wife and children rest for a while and depart. No one can tell when and where any of them will leave.

There is no cause for grief over their departure. It is a law of nature." The sage felt that the king was a heartless man. He then went to the queen, thinking that as a mother she would grieve over the death of her son. He told her: "Mother! Your son is dead. Here are his clothes." She too laughed. "Oh Saadhu! You are one who has renounced everything in the world. How can you entertain any concern for the ephemeral? Life is like a choultry where wayfarers stay for a while and then pass on. Each has his own time of departure. There is no need to grieve when any one leaves the world."
Then the sage went to the prince's wife to find out whether she at least reacted differently. He broke the news about the death of her husband. She remarked:
"When it rains, leaves fall away from a tree. When there is a flood, two pieces of wood come together for a while and separate again. In this ocean of life I am one such piece. The prince was another. We came together and we have gone apart. Why be surprised or lament over this? For all these, the cause is either attachment or possessiveness. The events themselves are not to be blamed. They are bound to happen. Why worry about them?"
True detachment
The sage realised that what the prince had said about the kingdom was all true. Yet, he wanted to test the prince himself. He returned to the hermitage and exclaimed before the prince: "Oh prince! Your kingdom has been overrun by invaders and your father and mother are kept as prisoners. You must leave immediately to recover the kingdom and release your parents. Get ready for war."
The prince replied: "All that has happened is according to the Will of God. I did not bring that kingdom with me when I was born. Can I take it with me when I die?
Why should I wage war to recover it?
It is not my kingdom. My kingdom is the kingdom of the Aathma (Spirit). I am striving to realise it. That is the Kingdom of Heaven: That is what I seek to secure. It cannot be got by waging by war. It has to be won through love alone. I have no interest in other kingdoms."
Be true to your role
Then, the sanyaasi prostrated before the prince and confessed: "We don the robes of renunciants, but we have none of the qualities of true renunciants. How many householders are leading lives free from worldly attachments."

I would relate another story, to show that whatever role one has to play in life, he should, be true to it. Once an actor appeared before the court of a king in the guise of Shankaraachaarya, declaring in strident terms the unreality of all human relationships and the impermanence of worldly possessions. The actor gave such a powerful exposition of Adhvaitha that the king directed his minister to present the actor with a plate of gold coins.
But the Shankaraachaarya firmly refused to accept the present, saying that it would be unworthy of him to receive it in his role as Shankaraachaarya. The next day the same actor appeared in the role of a beautiful dancer:
and performed an excellent dance before the king. The king was so much impressed with the dance that he directed the minister to present a plate of gold coins to the dancer. This time, the dancer declined to accept what was offered as too small a reward for his performance. The minister who realised that the dancer was the same person who had come as Shankara the previous day, then asked the actor what was the reason for his refusal to accept the plate of gold coins the previous day and to ask for more that day. The actor explained that he declined the previous offer in keeping with his role as renunciant. But, in the role of a dancer he was free to ask for more as it was natural for dancers to make as much money as they could.
Shankara's call to humanity
Shankaraachaarya called upon mankind to realise that as human beings they should cherish human values and practise them. Otherwise they would be betraying their true role in life.
Shankara went round the country exhorting people to lead spiritual lives, shedding their animal qualities. His disciples imbibed the essence of Shankara's doctrines and became proficient in expounding Adhvaitha. For a time the Adhvaithic doctrine held sway all over Bhaarith. In course of time, however, the doctrine lost its hold.
Students! I do not want you all to become sanyaasins and to give up everything. All that I want you to do is to carry on your duties, place your faith in God and realise that there is one fundamental Reality underlying all things. When you get this realisation, detachment will develop in you of its own accord. Detachment is not acquired by compulsion. As love of God grows, indifference to worldly things develops naturally. Discourse in Sai Kulwant Mandap on 10-9-1996.

47. The Vinaayaka Principle

EMBODIMENTS of Love! When you rub piece of sandalwood on the grindstone, the more you rub it, the greater the fragrance it emits. As you chew a piece of sugarcane, the more you chew the greater the sweet juice you get from it. As gold is heated more and more in the crucible, it acquires greater brilliance, getting rid of all impurities. A noble being displays his good qualities, however much he might be subjected to trials and tribulations. Thereby he stands out as an example to the world. (Svaami explained the purport of the opening Sanskrit stanza thus).

God is the embodiment of bliss. He is eternal. Every living being originates from bliss, grows on bliss and merges in bliss.

Among the myriad names of God, the foremost is Sath-Chith-Aanandha. Sath is that sacred thing which has no change in the three worlds and in the three categories of time (past, present and future). It is permanent. Chith means total awareness. When Sath and Chith become one, Aanandha (bliss) is realised. Hence, the Divine is described as Sath-Chit-Aanandha (Being-Awareness-Bliss). This principle is all-pervasive. It is present in all. The scriptures declare:

"Sarvam-Vishnumayam jagath" (The cosmos is permeated by the Divine).

Failing to recognise this truth and treating the body as the only reality, man distances himself from bliss. Men identify themselves in terms of their professions or nationality. But all these are acquired characteristics and not innate to the persons concerned. Essentially everyone is an embodiment of the Aathma (the Self). All the other aspects are transient. To identify yourself with the body is to mistake the dwelling for the indweller. When the truth is investigated in this manner, spirituality will become apparent.

Aathmik principle resides in everyone

The basis of the Adhvaithik doctrine is the spiritual oneness of the entire cosmos. It is the Spirit that is common to all beings. The Spirit is the source of all beings and their ultimate destination.

The Aathmik principle resides in the heart of every being. Hence there is no need to go in search of God. You are the Divine.

Today the nation is racked by divisions of all kinds based on religion, language and region.

People should strive to realise the underlying unity of all religions, languages and regions. God is called by different names by people of different faiths. But all names signify the same God. All of them stress the unity that underlies the apparent diversity.

Vedhaantha indicates the four stages in realisation of the Divine.

Saaloka (perception of the Divine), Saameepya (proximity to the Divine), Saaroopya (experiencing the vision of the Divine) and Saayuiya (merger in the Divine). The Divine as such has no form. Whatever the form in which the devotee worships the Divine, the Divine assumes that form for the devotee.

However, all forms are His. "Sathyam, Shivam, Sundharam." Truth is God. Beauty is God. The unity of Truth, Goodness and Beauty is Sath-Chith-Aanandha.

Emperor Janaka's transformation as a Raja-Yogi took place after he learnt from Yaajnavalkya that his present queen was in his previous birth his mother. This knowledge immediately made Janaka renounce everything and become a seeker of the Divine.

While Yaajnavalkya hesitated to reply to the King's persistent query about his previous birth, once he revealed the truth, the king considered it a blessing and became a yogi.

Worship of Vinaayaka

Today we celebrate the birthday of Ganapathi. What is the significance of this term? Ga means Buddhi (the intellect). Na means Vijnaana (wisdom). Pathi means Master. Hence, Ganapathi is the master of the intellect and wisdom. Another meaning of the term is Master of the Ganas (the hosts of spirits). The name Vinaayaka means one who has no leader above him.

Before we commence any activity we offer prayers to Vinaayaka so that the action may be successful without any impediments. Vinaayaka is worshipped not only in Bhaarath but in many other countries. The worship of Vinaayaka has been prevailing from the times of the Rig-Vedha.

The Vinaayaka principle protects man from the various hurdles in life and ensures peace and security. Hence on every auspicious occasion Vinaayaka is worshipped.

The devout offer worship to Vinaayaka with the well-known prayer beginning with the words,

Shuklaambara-dharam (The one who wears a white garment). Vighneshvara is described as one who is white like the moon, who has four arms (two for giving worldly protection and two for spiritual benediction), who has an ever-pleasing countenance and to whom obeisance is offered for removing all obstacles. While the pious used this prayer in a devout spirit, the impious misused the words to distort the meaning and make it a prayer to a quadruped which is employed for carrying washed clothes. It is by such misinterpretation that some people have sullied the great culture of Bhaarith and undermined faith in God. Fill your hearts with love

Students! Instead of filling your minds with scriptural knowledge it is enough if you fill your hearts with love. One ounce of practice is worth tons of spiritual knowledge. Today men should show their humanness in action and not their physical features. Students should be filled with idealism and serve the Motherland in a sacred spirit, with firm faith in God.

The preciousness of human birth is indicated by the declaration in the Geetha that every human being is a spark of the Divine. Everyone should look Godward while attending to worldly duties.

If you dedicate all actions to God there will be no obstacles. Good thoughts will lead to good actions which produce good results.

Students! You should seek to earn the love of God and His grace. All other acquisitions are worthless and impermanent.

Discourse in Sai Kulwant Mandap on 16-9-1996.

Bhaarith has been blessed with many saints and sages and with many manifestations of Divinity in Human Form. A doubt may arise why such appearances take place in Bhaarith, more than in any other place, when the world is so big and we have humanity everywhere to be saved and guided. There is a reason for this, believe Me! Well, why should, in all India, Kolar alone have gold? Where there is a gold mine, there is the need for mining engineers and chemists who will extract it, separate it, purify it and distribute it to the various places where gold is in demand, is it not?

Baba

48. Who is dear to the Lord?

EMBODIMENTS of Love! Human life is precious, noble and virtuous. It is a pity human beings do not realise this. The whole purpose and goal of human life is to know one's true nature.

Forgetting one's true nature, man is caught up in worldly concerns and plunged in misery. The ancient sages indicated the path to be pursued for the redemption of mankind.

They commended nine forms of worship any one of which could confer bliss and redeem a man's life.

To experience the proximity of the Divine the easiest path is Naama-smarana, remembering constantly the name of the Lord. Sage Vedha Vyaasa declared that in this Kali Yuga there is nothing greater than chanting the name of Hari for realising God. It is the easiest path for one and all, the scholar and illiterate, the rich and the poor.

In the Geetha, the Lord has indicated the qualities which a devotee should possess to enable him to earn the love of the Lord. Among these qualities, Krishna declared Anapeksha (desirelessness) as important. Today there are few without desires of one kind or other. All sensual pleasures are ephemeral. But most people are content with them. Greater than the sensual is the transcendental path, Shreyo maarga, which confers lasting bliss.

When one does any action as an offering to God, it gets sanctified. Such an act becomes anapeksha (desireless act). Every selfless act of devotion becomes an action free from the taint of desire.

The second quality is Suchi (purity). What is required is both internal and external purity. God cares only for Chittha-shuddhi (internal purity of the mind). Faith and service

The third quality is dhaksha. This means that the devotee should be steadfast and unwavering in any situation. With his mind firmly rooted in God, he should engage himself in service to others and perform actions in a spirit of detachment. Only such a devotee is eligible for God's love. He is unaffected by pleasure or pain, gain or loss or what happens in the mundane world. The fourth quality is Udhaaseenah indifference to external happenings. The fifth quality is freedom from egoism and possessiveness. One should get rid of the idea of doership and ownership and surrender everything to God.

Today all spiritual exercises are ostensibly undertaken for realising God. But there is no need for undertaking them. Human birth itself is a mark of Divinity. What is essential is to recognise the indwelling Divinity and live on that basis.

Where is God? Not in temples or pilgrim centres or other places. He dwells in the heart of everyone. To experience the Divinity within, one has to see the Divine in all others and render them service in that spirit.

Worship of paadhukas

Today we are celebrating the worship of paadhukas (sandals sanctified by the touch of the Lord's feet). Worship of paadhukas is not of recent origin.

Even during the Kritha Yuga, the sages used to worship paadhukas, experience divine bliss and share it with others. By worshipping the Feet of the Lord, they achieved the goal of their penance.

In the worship of Dakshinaamurthy, adoration of the sandals of the Lord as guru (preceptor) is considered important. Even Shankaraachaarya resorted to the worship of the Lord's Feet as essential. In a famous hymn, he extolled the Lord in many ways and declared that he was taking refuge in the Lord's feet (Shambhu). He declared that Shiva's feet were enshrined in his heart and not elsewhere.

The glory of the Lord's feet is demonstrated by a significant episode in the Raamaayana. After

Raama left for the forest, Bharatha came to him and pleaded earnestly with him to return to

Ayodhya. Raama was equally determined not to return. Vasishta noticed the equal determination of the two brothers. The sage told Bharatha: "Raama has come to the forest to carry out the command of his father. It is not right on your part to ask him to change his mind. Let us take his paadhukas to Ayodhya. Those paadhukas will reign over the kingdom." Vasishta gave this timely advice and persuaded Bharatha to take Raama's sandals and install them on the throne in Ayodhya.

These incidents show that the worship of the Lord's feet and of the Lord's sandals has a long antiquity. The sacredness of this worship was propagated to the world by Bhaarith from ancient times as part of its spiritual message to mankind. Indians today have largely forgotten this ancient practice. In those days it was the practice of the disciples, after the completion of their education at the guru's aashram, to take with them paadhukas of the guru to worship them on their return to their homes. But even the worship of paadhukas is an external activity. True devotion calls for the installation of the paadhukas in the heart.

This means that starting with the external form of worship, we should in due course make it an internal exercise.

Karma, Bhakthi and Inaana

All these are related to the Karma Maarga (path of Action). Beginning with the path of action, progressing towards the Bhakthi Maarga (path of devotion), one should ultimately achieve-

Kaivalya (Self-realisation) by the Inaana Maarga (the Path of Wisdom). "Inaanaath eva thu Kaivalyam" (Realisation is only through Wisdom), declares the scripture.

The entire life should not be spent on only worldly duties. One must progress spiritually from stage to stage. Karma-Upaasana-Inaanam (Action-Devotion-Wisdom)--these are the three steps in Self-Realisation.

Subramania Chettiar has been engaged in these devotional activities for a long time. Looking at his age, you can realise that physically he is not fit to undertake long journeys. But because of his intense devotion and strong faith in Bhagavaan he has been able to carry on this work. The Divine grace has been giving him all this abundant energy.

So far as the worship of the paadhukas is concerned you need not bother about what others think.

Every man should take up such sacred activity to get nearer to God.

To get close to the Divine, you have to engage yourselves in activities which please the Divine.

The supreme maxims of the Bhaarithheeya culture are: "Speak the Truth. Follow Righteousness."

When you adhere to these two maxims, all your actions will be sacred.

The Purusharthas

Of the four goals of human life prescribed by the scriptures, the first is Dharma (Righteousness).

It is the feet in the human body. The entire body rests on the feet.

Artha, the second goal, rests on the feet. Hence, the acquisition of wealth should be based on righteous means. The third goal is Kaama (desires). For the fulfillment of desires you need the Bhujabalam (strength of the arms).

Both Kaama and Artha are based on Dharma. Moksha is the culmination of a life based on Dharma.

Today people have forgotten Dharma and Moksha and are immersed only in Artha (acquisition of wealth) and Kaama (the pursuit of sensual desires). For the realisation of the goal of human existence, you have to rely on the feet, namely, Dharma, and the head, namely Moksha

(Liberation). This is the meaning of the symbolic description of the Cosmic Person in the Vedhas. The face of the Cosmic Person symbolises the Brahmik Principle. The feet symbolise

Dharma. Thus basing oneself on Dharma, one should pursue Artha and Kaama to attain Moksha.

People should seek the Divine in all possible ways. In the worship of the paadhukas, devotees should offer worship with all their heart and not as a mechanical ritual.

How to recite manthras

For instance, when the chief priest was reciting the manthras, anyone would have been deeply moved by listening to them. Our pandith pronounced the words with extreme clarity. Let me not be misunderstood when I say that, whether in Thamil Naadu, Kerala or even in Northern India, Sanskrit words are not pronounced correctly. But the pandith pronounced all the words very clearly this morning. Every syllable was pronounced in such a way that it appealed to the heart.

His assistants were also closely following him.

Governor Burugula Raamakrishna Rao took one group to Badhrinaath. The priest in the temple there was a Nambuudhiri and a Sanskrit pandith. Yet, when the pandith was reciting the manthras, Raamakrishna Rao closed his ears. Raamakrishna Rao exclaimed: "Oh pandith! Do not massacre our Sanskrit!" The pandith was saying:

"Ianthaagaaram Bhujaga Jayanam

Badmanaabham---(laughter) instead of saying "Shaanthaakaaram bhujagashayanam Padmanaabham " What humiliation is inflicted on the Sanskrit language! It is praiseworthy that a pandith living in Tamil Naadu should pronounce Sanskrit manthras more clearly and correctly than even Aandhras.

It is because of the help of such pandiths that Subrahmanya Chetty's burdens are lightened.

A blissful experience

The spectacle you witnessed this morning was indeed a blissful experience for one and all. It looked as if all were in Vaikunttha (the Abode of the Supreme Lord) or Svarga (the abode of Indhra). It was not at all a command performance. Everyone silently performed the puuja (worship of the paadhukas) with his/her full heart in it. The pandith explained the meaning of every word in the manthra. It is rare to find pandiths who recite the manthras so clearly and explain their meaning intelligently. This has been the problem in Bhaarath for quite a long time.

Very few are concerned about the well-being of society. People carry on their work, professing that duty is God. That was not the case with the pandith who officiated at the function today. It is thanks to such pandiths that we have devotees who practise the rituals sincerely.

Now, let me say a word about Dr. Gadhia (who has addressed the meeting earlier).. You know about him. His grandfather, Kaaka Dheexith, was in Shirdi. He has not seen the old man. But I have seen him. Kaaka Dheexith's son came to Bhagavaan and stayed with Svaami for 30 years in Brindhaavan. He showed to Svaami the diary written by Kaaka Dheexith. The Dheexith family had relations with Svaami which have continued to this day.

Dheexith stayed with his wife in Svaami's aashram. He showed to Svaami Kaaka Dheexith's diary. In it he had written what Shirdi Baba told him: "Child! you will again be close to Baba.

Whatever troubles may come, do not give up your faith." Then Gadhia came to Baba. I sent him to Manipal to study a course in Medicine. After completing his medical studies in Manipal he came to Bangalore. I told him that there was no point in his remaining in Bangalore and directed him to go to London.

In this manner, Gadhia and his ancestors have been associated with Sai! Like this, many devotees have been associated with Svaami over many lives. Without such association in the past it would not be possible for all of you to come here. You are not aware of this but I know it all.

These sacred associations have been maintained over many life-times.

Association with Sai

Thus, many of you have from immemorial times had links with the Aathmik Self. This link is unbroken. It is eternal, infinite. Such sacred relationships should never be given up. All should return to the place wherefrom they came. That is the strident declaration in the Bhaagavatham:

"It is natural for every living creature to go back to the source from which it came." You have come from the Aathma and you must merge in the Aathma. Till the goal is reached you must not treat lightly the sacred journey of life.

People forget the route by which they came and are searching for new paths. Many approach me anti ask: "Svaami! show a way." I tell them: "There is need for me to show you a path. You go back by the route you came.

Wherefrom did you come? Not from your mother. Nor from any particular place. The body came from the mother, but the Aathma came from the Aathma. You are not the body or the senses or the mind. You are the Aathma alone. You are the son of immortality. Being an Amritha-puthra (son of immortality), why are you seeking this anrutha (untruth).

What is the way to immortality? Removal of immorality is the only way to immortality. If you get rid of evil qualities like attachment, hatred and envy, you will realise immortality. These bad traits make you remote from God. When you get rid of them, God becomes close to you.

The Lord is with you

Hence, gradually: you have to give up the animal qualities and develop godly qualities such as truth, righteousness, justice and morality. By a process of self-enquiry you can get rid of your animal qualities like anger. How long are you going to remain in the same round of birth and death without realising the goal of human existence? All puujas, rituals and penances are performed for this realisation. You have secured an extremely precious gift by your present birth.

Do not waste it. Utilize every available moment for a worthwhile purpose. Devotees are yearning to realise the Divine by worshipping the Lotus feet and offering their worship to the paadhukas.

Have the conviction that when you have the sanctified paadhukas with you, the Lord is also with you. When you enter the Mandhir you leave your shoes outside. But the Lord's feet are present wherever His sandals are kept. Bear in mind this sacred idea. Live upto the conviction that the eternal Divine is omnipresent. Maintain purity and harmony in thought, word and deed. That is the way to secure Inaana-shuddhi (Divine Wisdom).

Thanks to many meritorious lives in the past, you have got this sacred opportunity. Of the hundreds of millions in Bhaarith, how many have got this opportunity? Many who wished to come here have been unable to do so for one reason or another. Make the best use of the rare and sacred opportunity that has come your way.

Spread the message of worship of Paadhukas. Dr. Gadhia observed that many significant events are likely to take place before 1998. Dr.

Gadhia invited Svaami for a big paadhuka celebration to be held in Birmingham in 1998. In accordance with this desire, Subramania Chettiar should be blessed with the necessary health and strength. He is willing to take on any burden, but is physically weak. But his faith and determination will give him the strength he needs. Our Shaasthri (who officiated at the function in the Nilayam) should also take a resolve.

He should spread the message of the worship of the paadhukas among wider sections of the people and dispel the darkness of ignorance. Whoever carries on the divine mission, unaffected by success or failure, joy or sorrow, will be the recipient of God's grace. Krishna has declared that such a devotee is dear to Him. Such a devotee develops detachment towards all worldly concerns and is indifferent to the happenings in the phenomenal world. He is indifferent to praise or censure, pleasure or pain.

The next quality a devotee should have is giving up attachment to the fruits of one's actions.

Even the egoistic sense of doership should be given up. Everything belongs to the Divine.

Engage yourself in good acts and experience the Divine. (Bhagavaan then honoured the Pandith with a gold kankanam and fastened a gold wristlet on Subrahmanya Chettiar. The entire gathering broke into applause. Bhagavaan also presented shawls to the other pandiths who had participated in the function).

Discourse in Sai Kulwant Mandap on 3-10-1996.

It is here in India that there is a mine of spiritual wisdom and spiritual treasure: the Dharshanas, Upanishaths and the Geetha and the Vedhas. This has to be distributed, pure and unsullied, guaranteed in value and quality, to eager aspirants everywhere and so, we have here a succession of sages and saints. On account of the teachings and the lives of these people, there is a vast field of spiritual virtue in this land, which needs only a little care to yield a rich harvest.

Baba

49. The devotee's ordeals and God's grace

YOU must acquire the friendship of God. Once you acquire that friendship you can achieve anything. All happiness can be derived therefrom.

You know how Kuchela was a friend of Krishna in their boyhood. Because of his prolific progeny, Kuchela was immersed in a sea of troubles. His wife reminded him that if he went to

Krishna, who was his boyhood friend at the guru's aashram and who was now a ruler at Dhvaaraka, Krishna would relieve him of his poverty. While he had some apprehensions whether Krishna would remember him and receive him, he got over them and set out for Dhvaaraka.

Though Kuchela was in tattered clothes, the moment Krishna learnt that his old friend had come,

he rushed towards him and embraced him. He exclaimed: "How long ago is it since we last met?"

Where have you been all these years? How have you been faring?" Kuchela remembered the Lord only because of his troubles.

Another example may be found in the Mahaabhaaratha. After completing their years of exile, the Paandavas returned to their capital. Happy over the safe return of her sons, Kunthi went to Krishna to offer her salutations. Krishna said: "Dear aunt! Are you happy? Is there anything more you want? I shall fulfill your wishes." Kunthi said: "Krishna! I don't need anything. I have to enjoy your support, your guidance and your nearness at all times. I must be blessed with troubles always. It is because my children experienced innumerable troubles during our exile in the forest, living on roots and fruits, that we found you were always with us, beside us and behind us and you saved us so many times. If we are to enjoy your proximity we have to face troubles."

Experience of two students

In this context, let me reveal a significant episode in Sathya Sai's career which is not known to anyone. Every year summer courses used to be conducted in Brindhaavan. In view of the growth in number of students at Brindhaavan, we undertook to build a new hostel for them. That year I took all the students to Ooty during the summer. All the arrangements for the summer course were completed successfully. Svaami told the students a day before they were to leave Ooty:

"Boys! You have had the chance to come to Ooty. You had better go on a sight-seeing trip and enjoy the grandeur and beauties of the Lord's creation." Svaami asked them to go out sightseeing, but they insisted on Svaami also coming with them. The boys are a stubborn breed.

Svaami told them that if He came with them, large crowds would gather wherever He went and they would not be able to see anything.

Modern boys have a stubbornness of their own. They said they would not leave unless Svaami also came with them. Svaami relented and made arrangements for all the students to leave by buses for Doddabetta, the highest point in the Neelgiris range (above 8000 feet altitude). They wanted to take photographs with Svaami on the top of the hill and Svaami agreed to follow them to take photographs with them. Svaami left half an hour later from Nandhavanam to Doddabetta.

Two young men went to Nandhanayanam to see Bhagavaan. They were told that Svaami had left for Doddabetta. Immediately the two young men got up on their motorcycle and started driving at high speed to catch up with Bhagavaan's car on the road to Doddabetta. Their only anxiety was somehow to get a glimpse of Svaami.

Svaami noticed the boys and wanted to know who they were. Someone in the car remarked:

"They might be some rowdies." Svaami remarked: "No, no. Without knowing the truth you should not make such remarks. They might be boys eager for Svaami's dharshan." When Svaami's car was taking a turning, the boys came at high speed near Svaami's car. At the turning the motorcycle fell on a side. Both the boys fell down from the vehicle. Immediately, I stopped my car, went near them, wiped the mud from their bodies and enquired of them: "Boys! Have you suffered any injuries! Why did you drive at such a high speed? You should not have done so.

If you wanted to see me, you could have come to Nandhavanam." I sought to comfort them and gave them two Kamala oranges to eat.

The two boys, who were local college students, said: "Svaami! We came to have your dharshan.

Because of this mishap, we not only got Svaami's dharshan, but also sparshan, sambhashan and prasaadham If this accident had not happened, would Svaami have come near us, wiped our backs and spoken so endearing to us? Svaami! We yearned for your dharshan. We earnestly sought you. We got all three dharshan, sparshan, sambhaashan (see you touch you and speak with you). Any trouble is worth while if these three can be got. Please give us always such troubles."

There is no pleasure and pain for the Lord

Kunthi prayed likewise to Krishna. The benignity with which the Lord considers a devotee in the moment of his troubles, He is not likely to show at other items. Of course, the Lord thinks of the devotee even at happy occasions. For the Lord there is nothing like pleasure and pain.

When Kuchela was in Krishna's palace he forgot to ask Krishna what he had come to ask. But there is no need to ask the all-knowing Lord. After lavishing all the hospitality on him, Krishna sent Kuchela back in a palanquin. After going some distance Kuchela reflected on his folly. "I enjoyed all the sumptuous feast Krishna gave me, but I forgot all about the plight of my children.

I forgot to ask Krishna what I had gone to ask him. What a fool I am!" But when he neared his old home, what he saw was a magnificent mansion. His wife was dressed in fine clothes and was shining with all ornaments. She came out to welcome Kuchela like a queen. Kuchela wondered whether she was some princess or his wife.

She approached Kuchela and asked him: "Lord! What did Krishna tell you?" Kuchela described how lovingly Krishna rushed to meet him and embraced him endearingly. "How can I describe his all-encompassing love? He is love itself. Is there anyone who could confer countless blessings in return for a handful of Kuchela's parched rice!" (Svaami sang a Thelugu song).

"What a fool I was not to realise the boundless grace of such a Lord!"

Reflecting like this

Kuchela went round the mansion, deeply moved by Krishna's love for him.

Believers will never suffer

Nothing will be lacking for those who believe in God. Many non-believers have suffered in life in various ways, but no one who had full faith in God has ever suffered. There are none such sufferers, none at all. Unfortunately many suffer because of lack of faith. Very often they suffer disastrous losses. On the other hand, the real believers are often carried from the depths of life to the Abode of the Lord! Hence, faith is supremely important. Faith is everything. This faith can be acquired and strengthened only through love.

During the past four days, innumerable devotees from all parts of Andhra Pradesh have come here and experienced the bliss of heaven on earth. All of them are utterly innocent people. Their hearts are pure and unsullied. They have firm faith in God.

Bhaaratheeya culture today survives

to some extent only in the villages.

No one can adequately describe the joy experienced by these innocent villagers. That is true devotion. All other devotees present in Prashanthi Nilayam were deeply moved by the devotion of these Aandhra village folk. I bless all of them to be happy, to be ever blissful and lead sacred lives.

Discourse on 22-1 Q- 1996.

Love for the Lord should not degenerate into fanaticism and hatred of other names and forms. This type of cancer is affecting even eminent men nowadays. But you must avoid-it. Believe that all who revere the Lord and walk in fear of sin are your brothers, your nearest kith and kin. Their outer dress or language or skin-colour, or even the methods they adopt to express their reverence and ear are not important at all.

50. The glory of Bhaarith's women

Fear of sin has gone,

Evil deeds are rampant,

Devotion to God is wavering.

To fight these tendencies

Chanting the name of the Lord

Is the only remedy, oh man!

If women go out for jobs

Who will take care of the homes?

If husband and wife go to offices

Who will look after the children?

Earning money may solve some problems

But how will it resolve domestic problems?

Truly speaking, working women

Do not enjoy much happiness.

LOVING Embodiments of the Divine Self!. It is not my view that women should not get educated.

They should have education. You may also take up jobs. But you should live up to the obligations and glory of womanhood. The first title given to a woman is GrihaLakshmi (the goddess of Home). A woman is expected to confer all prosperity, honour and good name on the home and the family. She is characterized as Grihalakshmi and not Office-Lakshmi.

Another title for a woman is Ardhaangi (The better half. This means she is the better half of the husband and not a partner in his job.

The third title is Ilalalu (the Mistress of the Home). She is the mistress in the house and not in the office.

Dharmapathni is the fourth title conferred on a married woman.

This implies that the home is the dwelling for all righteousness. The home is the birth place of all the Dharmas (rules of right conduct) hallowed by usage from ancient times.

What we have to safeguard and protect today are Truth and Righteousness and not the nation.

When Truth and Righteousness are protected, they will protect the nation. Hence righteousness should be fostered in the home. A home is no trivial place.

The home is a veritable university teaching many subjects,

The home is centre of comfort and pleasure conferring joy;

The home is a stone that can make even the creator,

Brahma, sing and others dance.

The home with the husband

Is a school for the wife. (Thelugu poem)

The home is the abode of Dharma, which protects and safeguards the country. The home is beacon which illumines the world and sustains it. Women should realise that, irrespective of their education or position, their foremost obligation is to protect the home. For laks of students and children who go to school, the mother is the first teacher. From the moment of birth, for every one the mother is the preceptor. If such a teacher leaves her home to teach other children, who will teach her children?

For Bhaaratheeya women, the first duty is to reform the home and run it along ideal lines.

The home and the family is the basic social institution everywhere in the world. When the home improved, the whole world will be better.

The home is a heaven itself

In this phenomenal world, whatever pleasures and satisfactions one may derive elsewhere, if there is no joy at home, it becomes a veritable hell. The home is heaven itself. It is the duty of women to maintain it as such.

There is a proverb in the Aandhra Country: "First care for the home and then think of other things." Since ancient times, Bhaarith's name and fame have rested on the greatness of women (Bhagavaan sang a song in Thelugu, praising the greatness of Saavithri, who made the Lord of Death restore the life of her husband, the power of Chandhramathi, who stood by her husband's determination to sacrifice everything for Truth, the chastity of Seetha who went through an ordeal by fire, and Damayanthi, who shared all her husband's troubles with fortitude. Bhaarith was noted for such heroic women whose chastity and courage are an example for all humanity).

To be born as women in such a country where there were such heroic women, is indeed a privilege.

Should not the sacred river Ganga be worshipped as a mother? Is not Bhaarith the home of Gomaatha, Bhuumatha and Vedhamaatha--the land in which the cow, the earth and the Vedhas are worshipped as a mother? It must be realised that it is not proper for Bhaarithheeya women to forget their sacred vocation and engage themselves in outside activities contrary to their great heritage.

(Bhagavaan sang a song glorifying the quality of forbearance, which was the hall-mark of people in this sacred land, the love for mother and the Motherland, and the readiness even to sacrifice one's life to uphold one's honour). Unfortunately these values have been lost today. Bhaarith was the leader for the entire world in the realm of spirituality. Hindu tradition stood for the welfare of all mankind all through the ages. To uphold these ideals the kings and women in ancient Bhaarith made great sacrifices. Everyone must take a pledge to revive and uphold these great ideals.

Consequences of uncontrolled immoral desires

The great epics, the Raamaayana and the Mahaabhaaritha, and the supreme Puraana, the Bhaagavatha, have taught the great lesson for all mankind regarding the disastrous consequences of uncontrolled immoral desires. Raavana, who Was a great scholar and warrior, became victim of an evil passion. Hiranyakashipu met with his end because of his intense hatred for God, despite the fact that he was a master of all sciences and had acquired many powers by his penance. Dhuryodhana was the victim of incurable jealousy and insatiable desire for power and property.

Many women have played a great role in the past in trying to restrain husbands from indulging in evil deeds. Mandodhari was a notable example of such a woman who tried to impress on Raavana the error of his ways. But Raavana paid no heed to her.

Women who are the embodiments of the Divine spirit! At least from now on you must strive to sanctify the home and turn the family towards the Divine path. Mind can make one a demon or Divine

Women must realise the enormous power of the mind for good or evil and see that its power is used only for doing good. The mind can make a person a demon or Divine. The mind is under the control of the intellect. The intellect is governed by the Aathma. Self-realisation will bring about control over everything.

The dire conditions prevailing in the world are known to everyone. The root cause of all this is the failure of people to realise their inherent divinity. Excessive desires, fuelled by selfishness, are the cause of all troubles. The primary requisite is confidence in one's self. Without that confidence, nothing can be accomplished.

Men are in quest of peace. But how is it to be secured? Faith in God is essential. That faith has to be generated in the family. Then alone the children will develop sublime thoughts. They are the future citizens of the nation. Hence they have to be brought up well. Unfortunately today mothers in affluent families neglect their children. They leave the children in the care of nannies and the children have more love for the nannies than for their mothers.

In ancient times, children who were fed on their mothers milk developed into good persons.

Today the children are fed not on mother's milk but on tin milk. With the result the children develop a "tin" mentality.

Only women can restore the glory of the land

If the mothers take care of the homes on right lines, they will be protecting the nation. Mothers should foster in the children love for truth and righteousness and tell them stories about the lives of great men and women. In olden times, the elders used to tell the young children all about the nation's great heroes and saints. Where are such elders today?

Modern youth even mock at such old people. It is the seed sown by those elders which has kept our ancient culture alive to this day. Only the women of the nation can revive and restore to its glory the ancient culture of our land.

The culture of Bhaarath is a hallowed one. Everyone got up from bed with the name of God on his lips. You are all aware that in Kaashi (Vaaraanasi) there is the practice of reciting the name of Raama in the ears of dying persons. The idea is to remember the name of the Lord at the time of death because of the belief that one's rebirth is related to one's thoughts before death.

Teach the children sacred things and not nonsense verses. In the old day, the first words a child was taught at school were "Om Namasshivaaya" (the five-letter Divine manthra) or "Om Namo Narayanaaya." Today, as the sacred ritual of initiating, a child is taught a nursery rhyme like "Baa baa black sheep," or "Ding dong Bell, Pussy is in the well." Is this the kind of stuff that should be taught to our children? What should be implanted in the hearts of our children are sacred names like Raama and Krishna.

How should devotees conduct themselves?

Chaithanya used to exhort his tongue to glory in chanting sweet names of the Lord, "Govindha, Dhaamodhara and Maadhava." (Bhagavaan sang sweetly the song of Chaithanya). How should devotees conduct themselves today? Their looks should be cool and soothing like the moon.

Their speech should be soft like butter. Their hearts should be sweet like honey.

Seethalakshmi (who had spoken earlier) had quoted part of a poem of Svaami. (Svaami recited some other passages from the poem). "Oh brother, open your eyes and see the Lord Sai, who is in your hearts and not in Shirdi or Parthi." Fill your hearts with divine thoughts and feelings.

How do devotees behave today? Thinking that God is in Badhraachala, Thirupathi, Badhrinaath or Kedhaarnaath, they prepare themselves for long pilgrimages. But they will not appreciate the statements that God is in one's own heart and there is no need to go out in search of him. They have no faith in the God who is so close to them. They are prepared to incur any expense to go in search of God who is declared to be in some distant place. The statement that God is somewhere else is bhrama (delusion). The truth is God is within you. People forget that the divinity within you is there to guide you. Everyone should be good, think good and do good and enjoy good results. This is true Vedhaantha.

Have full faith in God as your Indweller. Develop pure sublime love. That alone will be lasting.

All other qualities come and go. Learn to live in love. Women are the fountain-source of love.

Bhakthi is considered a feminine quality while Inaana (wisdom) is considered masculine. Let me not be misunderstood if I say that for the presence of all the male devotees present here, women alone are responsible. It is they who by their sacred feelings brought their menfolk here. Their work is sacred in every respect. They seek not only to sanctify their lives but the lives of all others in the family.

It is sinful to look down upon women

Women are not to be treated lightly. The Geetha says that women are endowed with seven kinds of powers while men have only three. It is sinful to look down upon women.

Consider, for instance, this fact. There are any number of women who have tried to bring back their dead husbands or to venerate their memory. How many men have done likewise for their wives? Many hasten to acquire a second wife.

In this respect, Bhaarath has been an example to the world.

Wherever women are honoured, there is prosperity and happiness.

Women should never be slighted or treated with disrespect. A home in which the housewife sheds tears will be bereft of all prosperity. This is the ancient conception of the role of women in the home.

Discourse in Sai Kulwant Mandap on 19-11 -1996.

You might say that the karma of the previous birth has to be consumed in this birth and that no amount of grace can save man from that. Evidently, some one has taught you to believe so. But I assure you, you need not suffer from karma like that. When a severe pain torments you, the doctor gives you a morphine injection and you do not feel the pain, though it is there in the body. Grace is like the morphine, the pain is not felt though you go through it.

Baba

51. Adhere to Sathya and Dharma

This motherland of ours gave to the world Noble souls renowned in all the continents; It is the land which freed The nation from Western rulers.

This Bhaarath is reputed for its scholars hip. It is the sacred land which stood forth As the master in the realms of music, Literature and sacred lore; Born in the land of Bhaarath,

Noted for its fine arts and natural beauty,
 It is your bounden duty to foster
 The glory and prosperity of the Motherland.

BHAARATH, which in the past was noted for its educational achievements in various spheres, is today confronted with a crisis in its educational system. The system attaches value only to the acquisition of degrees. Is it for earning a mess of pottage that these degrees should be got? Or should they be acquired for rendering service to society? Or are they to be acquired for getting Vijnaana (wisdom)? Neither students, nor the authorities, nor the parents appear to be bothered about these questions.

The educational system of today
 Can an education which is not of use to society or the nation be called education at all? Every year the colleges are letting loose upon the world lakhs of degree-holders. What is their future?

What is the goal of the educational system? When you pose these questions, the answer you get is that the educational system has become mechanic. In today's education you find no trace of character-building, respect for values and regard for tradition. Education is pursued for selfish purposes and not for serving society.

There are in Bhaarith today 200 universities, 90,000 colleges and nearly a crore undergraduate students. What is the outcome of all this prodigious educational effort? What is happening to these millions of students and how is the outside world affected by them? The educational institutions appear to be mainly factories turning out graduates. Even the educational authorities seem to be content with statistical progress rather than the real achievements of the educational system. Schools and colleges are mushrooming everywhere, with or without official sanction.

There is a pretence of acquiring education, without anyone being aware of what it really means.

Knowledge against Character
 "Of what use is the acquisition of all kinds of knowledge if one has not good qualities and has no moral values?" says a Thelugu Poem. What for is academic knowledge acquired? Is it for deceiving others? Or is it for promoting one's selfish interests? Or for the selfish enjoyment of pleasures? Education today is being, used largely for these purposes than to promote the wellbeing of society or the nation. An education that serves no useful purpose in daily life is utterly worthless.

Education today promotes largely intellectual cleverness.
 What is the use if the head is filled with bad thoughts,
 If the ears listen only to scandals,
 If the eyes look enviously
 And the mind is plotting misdeeds? (Thelugu poem).

All that is noble in human life is being destroyed. The students of today are divorced from all that is ennobling.

Educated youth, instead of going to the relief of the suffering and the needy, are raising problems for society. But they are not to blame. The fault lies with the educational system. Governments in India set up many committees to report on the reform of the system. From the time of Morari Dhesai till today these committees have been set up. No one knows what happened to the reports of these committees. There is no evidence that anyone in authority is concerned about training our young people to be useful and ideal citizens of the nation. In the place of high ideals, students today are cultivating high ambitions. What is required is not Aasa (desire) but the Aasana (ideal).

Students have no awareness of the greatness of humanness. They do not understand the significance of unity in thought, word and deed. Instead of unity and harmony, you have only discord and division. All problems arise out of this discord. Respect for culture undermined
 What is important is samskaara (culture) much more than mere knowledge.

Occidental education has undermined Respect for Indian culture,
 Eclipsed Truth and Righteousness in daily life,
 Encouraged fascination for foreign languages
 And eroded the love of native languages,
 Broken the norms of social behaviour,
 And destroyed the respect for teachers.

(Thelugu Poem)

The higher values of education are being eroded continuously. Education is getting increasingly commercialized, especially in professional courses like engineering and medicine. I am unable to understand what joy the students derive from going through these excessively expensive courses.

Students should first of all know how to deal with the problems of daily life. They have to acquire general knowledge and common sense. Practical knowledge is more important than familiarity with books. It is this kind of bookish education that has led young people astray and made them lead worthless lives.

Serve the Motherland
 Students! You are the children of Mother Bhaarith. You must cherish and foster the great culture of Bhaarith. Born in this motherland, you breathe her sacred air, drink her holy water and are sustained by her produce. Follow her sacred footsteps, engage yourselves in service to society in a spirit of dedication. You have to transform yourselves in accordance with our ancient culture.

Only then will your humanness be vindicated. Otherwise all your education will be like cultivating a barren land.

Your own conduct accounts for how you live. There is no need to blame anyone else. Begin with the purification of your minds. Then your thoughts, your looks and your behaviour will become pure.

Today men's actions are governed by selfishness and self-interest. Even when one appears to love another, it is only out of self-interest. Self-interest is bound to exist. But there should be a limit to it. As long as they remain as students, the young people appear well-behaved. But the moment they get out of colleges and enter the outside world, they get polluted.

Students! Wherever you may be, remain in good company. Entertain and do good deeds. Adhere to good conduct.

Inherently all students are good. But the social environment pollutes their minds. They are spoiled by bad associations. Hence they should take good care about the company they keep.

They must bear in mind three vital maxims: One, "Sarvabhuutha hithe rathah" (Rejoice in the well-being of all living creatures). Two: "Sarvajnaana samayukthah" (Have comprehensive knowledge of all things). Three: "Sarvaguna Samayukthah" (Develop all qualities equally).

When you develop these qualities, your life becomes exemplary.

Today the world is filled with violence and fear. The root cause of all this is selfishness. Adhere to truth. Truth is your life breath. Truth transcends the categories of time. It is changeless. It is invincible. "Sathyameva Jayathe" is our national motto. The Chinese, though different in culture from us, also adore Truth. Truth is the basis of genuine prosperity.

The importance of Truth

There is a story relating to Prahlaadha. Once Indra secured from Prahlaadha the gift of his Sheelam (character). When character left Prahlaadha, the goddesses of Fame, Royal Prosperity and Prowess left him one after the other. Prahlaadha allowed them to go. But when Sathya (Truth) started to leave, Prahlaadha prayed to the goddess not to leave him. The moment Truth stayed with Prahlaadha, the other deities representing Fame, Prosperity etc. also returned.

Students! In whatever situation you may be placed in your official careers, never give way to untruth. You must uphold Dharma, which means acting according to your conscience. Always follow the dictates of your conscience. This is the meaning of the Upanishathik dictum: "Sathyam Vadha, Dharmam Chara" (Speak the truth, follow righteousness). This was the advice given by the Rishis to their disciples when they completed their studies.

Students! This is a great opportunity in your lives. Esteem this day of the Convocation as a sacred day. Take to your hearts the good counsel given to you. Dedicate your lives to righteous ways. Earn a good name for yourselves. That is all that I desire. Bring a good name for your parents and for the Institute where you have studied.

Shed all fear except the fear of swerving from Truth. You should not be afraid because you are not an animal. You should not cause fear in others because you are not a wild beast. You are human beings. When you act upto this truth, you will benefit society. I bless you all with the hope that you will not onlylead good lives but make your friends and all others with whom you are associated lead worthy lives.

Discourse to the Fifteenth Convocation of the Shri Sathya Sai Institute of Higher Learning on 22-11 - 1996, in the Puurnachandhra Auditorium, Prashaanthi Nilayam.

Values for Education; Education Jar Life; Life for Love;; Love for Man; Man for Service; Service for Spirituality; Spirituality for Society; Society for Nation; Nation for World; World for Peace.

52. Fill your hearts with love
 Whether one is a great scholar
 Or a ruler living in a mansion,
 Or a hero who has won great victories,
 Or a destitute grovelling in poverty,
 Without love in his heart, he is nothing.
 A devotee with love is more worthy of veneration.
 Of what use are men in Bhaarith
 Who can make the stones sing in joy,
 Men who can play with the heads of the enemy,
 Men who can wield power over the land,
 If they have no awareness
 Of the wail of the oppressed,
 When will they respond

To the cries of the poor?
 EMBODIMENTS of Love! The cosmos is filled with love. Love is Righteousness. Love is Truth.
 The universe is based on love. Lost in the transient pleasures of worldly life, man is forgetting this supreme Love Principle.
 What is the reason? Selfishness has grown and selflessness has declined. Narrow-mindedness is widespread. Broadness of heart is on the wane. Desires have increased. Ideals are vanishing.
 Human life is dominated by selfishness and self-interest.
 The ancient sages enthroned thyaaga (sacrifice) on the highest pedestal. They adored Righteousness. Today these sublime ideals are forgotten in Bhaarith. As a consequence the country is racked by every kind of trouble.
 A heart without love is a cemetery. Love demonstrates the existence of the Divine. It is allpervasive.
 It is the basis for human unity. Only when selfishness goes and faith in the Divine grows will human unity be achieved.
 Hence, every human being should fill his heart with love.
 God is love; Love is God.
 Love is linked to love.
 When one is full of love
 He is fit for oneness with God.
 It is most vital for everyone to recognise and practice this Love Principle. At all times love has existed among the good and the bad, in the forest or in a palace, in attachment or in separation, in one's conduct as well as in one's speech, in the mind as well as in action. It is all-pervasive.
 The power of love
 The most powerful weapon to destroy the forces of evil rampant in the world today is love.
 Unfortunately men are not pursuing the right path to acquire this sacred love.
 Love is the seed of love. It is also the branches, the flowers and the fruit. To enjoy the fruit of love, one has to practise Love.
 Instead of seeking to know the true nature of love, man is engaged in the pursuit of wealth and power. No doubt wealth and power are necessary, but only within limits. The vast ocean, when it swells beyond its bounds, is censured for its misbehaviour. The human body and mind will be healthy only when food is consumed within limits. Excessive eating causes various disorders.
 Everything in the world is governed by the bounds set for it. However, love has no limits.
 "Anirvachaneeyam Prema" (Love is beyond the power of words), declares the sage Naaradha.

The flow of love is the life-giving water for everyone. How is this love to be secured by one?
 Not by Japa (chanting the Lord's name) or meditation or by studying the scriptures. God does not dwell in the Vedhas or the Puraanas. God dwells in the heart and should be sought there.
 People should close their mouths and open their hearts. Then they will experience the divine bliss.
 Today love has been almost totally banished. Where love should prevail hatred has taken its place. Petty jealousy has usurped the place of compassion. Man can experience true happiness only when the appropriate qualities reside in their allotted places.
 Transform your entire life into a saga of love. You will then lack nothing to make you happy. All wealth and position will be added unto you. Love conquers all.
 Have a feeling of total surrender
 What is the nature of this love? When praying to God, you should have a feeling of total surrender. If you are really keen about realising God, if you are hungry and thirsting for God, then you should cultivate this all-absorbing love. Mere expression of desire is not enough. You should endeavour to experience union with the Divine. If your heart is full of selfishness, how can you experience the Divine merely by a wish?
 There is love of sorts today. It is related to the body consciousness and not to the Self which is the basis. Spiritual love begins with the concept of Dhaasoham (I am your servant) and culminates in the concept of Soham (He and I are one). Without the feeling of Dhaasoham, you cannot experience the feeling of Soham. Soham is the expression of divine oneness. "The Aathma and I are one."
 That Aathma is Brahma. That is love. That is Truth. That is Righteousness.
 Men have been concerned with the four goals of human life--the Purusharthas----Dharma, Artha, Kaama and Moksha (Righteousness, wealth, sensuous desires and Liberation). But there is a fifth goal: Love. Only when love is achieved will the world become an earthly paradise.
 Where love prevails, there will be no room for hatred or envy. Love can have no truck with evil thoughts and actions. Love should be steadfast and unwavering. If one goes on hopping from one Svaami to another, from one form of worship to another, he will never experience love of the Divine. "One word, one path"----that should be the aim.
 Today thousands of people have gathered here. What has brought them together here? Love is the main cause. Without love few of you would have come from such distant places. How does this love express itself? It is a process of give and take. You have to receive God's love. And you have to offer your love. But both are one and the same love. God's love is reflected in your bodies. That is the meaning of the Geetha declaration: "A fragment of mine is present in everyone in the cosmos."

 Use the Divine element for the benefit of others
 That Divine element in you should not be misused. It should be used for the benefit of others.
 The Divine principle of love is being treated with narrow ideas. From ancient times the sages welcomed this Principle with open arms. Naaradha declared: "Ya- labhdhvaa pumaan siddho bhavathi, amrutho bhavathi, thriptho bhavathi" (Having gained Divine love, Parama Prema, a person becomes perfect, immortal and contented).
 He considered Divine love as supreme over all things. Just as without sugar, no sweet will have sweetness, without love nothing in life can have any value. Your heart is inherently filled with love. But you are ignoring this plenitude and going after the trivial.
 Your real sustenance will come from this Divine love and not from other petty pleasures.
 Every cell in the human body is filled with love. It is this microcosmic love that fills the entire cosmos.
 Investment in devotion
 You have no need to go in search of love elsewhere. It is all within
 you. A man makes every effort to accumulate wealth. An equal effort is needed to acquire the wealth of love. Men today invest their assets of love in pitiful ventures. Instead they should invest all their love in the Divine bank of devotion. This deposit is not only safe but will yield you increasing returns in terms of bliss. Your heart is the bank where your love for God should be deposited. Deposits elsewhere are insecure. Deposits of money may be in danger of being lost. But the deposit in your heart is immune from any kind of theft or loss. Make your deposit safe by "insuring" it within your heart. It is totally safe, though it has no bolts, doors or locks. This love has been characterized as Amritha-svaruupa (the form of eternal nectar).
 Nectar pleases only the palate.
 But Divine love confers eternal bliss which is sweeter than nectar.
 Everyone should resolve to acquire this nectarine Love.

Today your foremost duty is to enthrone thyaaga (sacrifice). Only when sacrifice reigns, love will come into its own. All your latent potentialities will then manifest themselves. You will succeed in all your legitimate undertakings. When love becomes the ruling principle, sorrow and disappointment will disappear. That was why the Vedhas declared that sacrifice alone is the key to immortal bliss. "God is love. How can you hope to realise God without love?" (Thelugu
 poem).
 How to manifest that love that is within you? You have to engage your hands in clapping as you chant the names of Raama, Krishna and others. Recite the names of the lord with your mouth. If you really desire to experience God-, you must remember the name of the Lord always like Prahlaadha: "Om namo Naraayaanaaya." Sing the praises of the Lord like Raadha and Meera.
 Worship the Lord like Jayadheva, Gauraanga and Thukaaraam.
 Shed tears in devotion before the figure of the lord like Raamakrishna Paramhamsa. Then you will experience the Lord. People shed tears over petty things, but do not shed a single tear for the Lord. There are two kinds of tears: tears of joy and tears of sorrow. What you have to shed for God are tears of joy.
 Power of the Lord's name
 When Krishna was being weighed in a balance, all the jewels of Sathyabhaama could not balance
 His weight. Rukmini then came and declared that the mere chanting of the name of Krishna would be equal to His weight. By the additional offer of a leaf, a flower or a little water, the scales will be tilted against Krishna. So saying she placed a thulasi leaf on the scale. And lo! it went down. The tulasi leaf carried the full weight of Rukmini's boundless love for Krishna. All the jewels of Sathyabhaama were of no avail. But Rukmini's invoking the name of Krishna and offering a thulasi leaf with a love-filled heart tilted the scales against Krishna. Such is the power of the Lord's name and a love-filled offering to the Lord. The Lord is not swayed by wealth or scholarship, power or position. Love alone can move Him.
 If you wish to sway the lord, you must offer love and love alone.
 Today unfortunately love has become scarce. Even material love is disappearing. But God's love is boundless. In whatever manner you may love Him, He responds in equal measure. But without love, you have no right to seek His love. Filled with bad feelings and thoughts, if you pray to the pure and unsullied Lord, how do you expect to win His grace? If you remain pure at least in your shrine, you may acquire some fragment of divine love.

There are any number of able exponents of spirituality. But of what use are their discourses if they do not practise what they preach?
Manifest your love
Embodiments of the Divine! If you are really filled with devotion, manifest your love for God who is the very embodiment of love. If you are genuinely hungering and thirsting for God, partake of Divine love to appease your hunger and quench your thirst.
Divine love is the only panacea for all your troubles and miseries arising from insatiable desires and frustrated ambitions. God's love is like a lighthouse beacon. It shows you the right path.
Divert the boat of your life towards the lighthouse of Divine love. You are then bound to gain the shore of bliss.
You do not need any special type of penance or meditation. Meditate on love. Fill your mind with love. Even while attending to your daily chores, regard all of them as offerings to the Divine. God is omnipresent. See God in everything and every being.
Let love grow in your hearts like the waxing moon. Divine love will not wane like the moon.
Let such steadfast love be enshrined in your heart. As Thukaaraam said: Dhil me Raam, haath me kaam (Raam in the heart and work in the hand).
The duty of everyone from today onwards is to cultivate true, unsullied love. With love of God you can secure anything. Without that love, you will only be steeped in misery.
Do not divorce yourself from Nature Let the Buddhist prayer be your guide. First, take refuge in your intellect--Buddham Sharanam
Gachchaami. Divert that intellect to the service of society--Sangham Sharanam Gachchaami.
Then you will find refuge in Bliss--Aanandham Sharanam Gachchaami.
Do not divorce yourself from Nature. "Sarvam Vishnumayam Jagath" (The cosmos is permeated by the Divine). Hence recognise the Divine even in your enemy. His heart is bound to change.
When you love even the one who has harmed you, he is also bound to change. Do not allow your love to be affected in any way.
When people pray to God, sometimes doubts may arise as to whether and how the Lord will respond. Such doubts arose even in the mind of Raadha. But all doubts disappeared when she realised that the whole universe was the mansion of God and there was no need to keep any door open or closed. All that was needed was complete surrender to God.

The mystic significance of the songs of the saints and devotees like Raadha and Meera should be rightly understood.
(Bhagavaan sang a Meera Bhajan, "Chalo re man" to explain the esoteric meaning of the song).
Sing the glories of God God is moved by the devotee's heart-felt song. He becomes one with the devotee. No other form of worship has the same effect of God. It is enough if you do the singing within yourself.
(Bhagavaan demonstrated by singing the opening lines of a song, "Raama nannu kaapaadu", how a melodious prayer can move the heart of anyone). Make music the passport to merger with the Divine. Music is the gift of God. Only the gifted ones can sing sweetly, appealingly and delightfully. We have here M.S. Subbalakshmi. From her early years, she dedicated herself to music, which filled her heart. This kind of soulful music cannot be acquired by anybody. It can come only through God's grace.
When you sing in public you can give delight to many. But if you cannot do so, you can sing to yourself. It will delight your heart and sweeten it. Immerse yourself in all work with love.
Whatever you do, consider it as gifts from God. When you have malaria, you have to take the bitter quinine mixture. But that is the medicine for your ailment.
Likewise, when adversity confronts you, treat it as a kind of medicine for your good. God has to be melted and beaten to make a jewel. A diamond is cut to make it more brilliant. Likewise troubles in life serve to refine a person. Love should enable you to welcome even hardships as meant for your own good.
Today this body enters on its seventy first year. This body is made up of the five elements and is essentially impermanent. Do not attach much importance to the body.
Take to heart the Love Principle that is being conveyed to you. My entire life is filled with love. I have never put anyone at any time to any kind of suffering. I have never done any harm to anyone. I have hated no one.
I have no aversion to anybody. What is the reason? It is my love that is transforming others. I am now 71. But no one can know what accounts for my condition. I may act as if I am angry on some occasions, but the anger does not stem from the heart but is confined to the tongue. From head to foot I am filled only with love. It is this love which has attracted the whole world.

I do not desire anything. I have three P's. One is Purity. Second is Patience. Third is Perseverance. It is these three which have secured the world's regard. No invitations were issued to those who have gathered here. Svaami's love alone attracted them all like a magnet. Some may ask why they are not attracted to Svaami if that magnet is so powerful. The reason is that these persons are like rusted iron which no magnet can attract. Let them remove the rust and dust and they will be drawn to the magnet. Their hatred and desires, their envy and greed are the rust and dust covering them. If you cleanse yourselves of these, wherever you are, you will be mine and I will be yours. The hapless and the forlorn, wherever they may be, are the concern of Sai.

Promote sacred love in your hearts. That love will not only redeem your lives but will promote the well-being of all around you.

You need not offer anything except love. In Prashanthi Nilayam no offerings are permitted.

Only love is allowed entry.

Discourse on 23-11-1996 in Sai Kulwant Mandap.

53. Realise God through love

ASTHIRAM Jeevitham loke (Life in the mundane world is impermanent). Life in this phenomenal world is not permanent. "Asthiram yauvvanam

dhanam" (Youth and wealth are not lasting). They are like passing clouds. "Asthiram dhaara- puthraadhi" (Wife and children and other relatives are liable to vanish like white mist in a moment).

"Dharmam Keerthi dhvayam sthiram" (Righteousness and fame endure forever). In human life, righteous living and a good reputation are the two that are everlasting.

In the history of mankind several religions arose to promote the moral advancement, the prosperity and the welfare of humanity.

Vaishnavites have esteemed Vishnu as the Supreme Shaivites have given the highest place to Shambhu

The worshippers of Ganapathi accord the highest place for Ganesha;

Saraswathi is adored as the Supreme

by the seekers of knowledge;

Muslims regard Allah as the Supreme Lord

While Christians hail Jesus as the Saviour;

Buddhists worship Buddha as the Supreme

Enlightened One;

Jains accord the highest place to Mahaveera;

Paarsis adore Zoroaster

Sikhs deem Naanak as the Supreme teacher

Baba devotees adore Sai as the Supreme

The wise regard all of them as equal.

All religions should be revered equally

Because God is one and the same God for all of them.

God is Truth. He is Righteousness.

He is peace. He is the embodiment of love.

(Thelugu poem).

Embodiments of Love! It is essential to realise and act on the basis that the purpose of religion is to promote unity in diversity, banish divisive tendencies and make human beings lead ideal lives.

The common essence of all religions

The essence of all religions, the message of all scriptures and the destination for all mankind is the same. But because of selfishness, narrow-mindedness and concern for self-interest, religion is used as a pretext for promoting differences and conflicts. "All religions teach only what is good if they are studied intelligently. If your mind is good, what religion can be bad?" says a Thelugu poem. Morality and integrity, righteousness and charity, truth and tradition, forbearance and nonviolence are basic tenets of all religions. These basic truths are common to all religions. But over the years men have forgotten these truths and have fostered divisive tendencies in the place of unity. As a result, respect for human values has gone. It is essential to recognise the Divine unity that suffuses all the diversity in human existence.

The life of Jesus

(Bhagavaan gave a brief account of the Jewish concept of the creation, of the cosmos and referred to the birth of Jesus as the son of Mary and Joseph). As the name and fame of Jesus spread, opposition to him developed among a section of Jews. After his father's death, young

Jesus considered it his duty to help his mother and revere her as divine. Jesus preached the primary obligation of everyone to show one's gratitude to the parents. Jesus came with his mother to Jerusalem when he was eleven years old. His mother was worried about the activities of Jesus. Jesus was critical of the ways of the Jews in the temple in Jerusalem.

He came out against the harmful practices in the temple and preached the omnipresence of God in all living beings. He exhorted the people not to cause harm to anyone.

What he preached was in accord with the basic teachings of all religions. He engaged himself in a mission of mercy to the sick and the poor. He offered food to the hungry. Seeing his acts of love and kindness, people declared that he was a "Messenger of God." Jesus constantly referred to God as the father. Later he declared: "I and my father are one." Jesus dedicated his life to the propagation of faith in one God who is common to all mankind. Men today celebrate the birthdays of great holy men but they do not follow the teachings of the masters. There is nothing great about the celebration of birthdays. People must resolve to uphold their ideals and act up to their teachings.

A unique book

There is a book compiled in Britain around 1530 A.D. containing all the information about Jesus gathered during the preceding centuries. The Russians condensed all this material in a small book which they preserved in a place on the Black Sea coast. (Svaami produced the little book by a circular wave of His hand and held it before the audience). This is the book. You can see the cross on the cover page. The book was designed to demonstrate the common features of all religions. What is contained in this book is not to be found even in the Bible. It contains an entirely new account of the life of Jesus.

It is not open to all to understand the ways of the Lord. To know about God one has to develop godly feelings. In this book, there are bookmark threads which distinguish every faith by a shloka relating to it. There is one page which contains the shloka from the Bhagavath Geetha in which Krishna exhorts Arjuna to give up all beliefs and take sole refuge in Him and assured Arjuna that thereafter he will absolve Arjuna of all the sins (Cheers).

The essence of all creeds is one and the same thing. Man's primary duty is to surrender to God.

"Surrender" means attaining the state in which the devotee feels he is one with God. This feeling arises out of the conviction that the same divinity is present in all. Bodies of human beings are varied like bulbs, but the current passing through them is the same. The colour of the bulbs or their wattage may vary. But the current activating them is the same. This book contains the Vedhic saying: "Ekoham bahushyaam."

Follow the conscience

The same God dwells in all beings. There is no justification for differences on the basis of religion. It is attachment to the body which accounts for religious differences. Do not regard the body as permanent. It is a water bubble. The mind is a mad monkey.

Don't follow either of them.

Follow the conscience. That is the main message contained in this little book. The culture of Bhaarith has experienced this truth in the concept of Sath-Chith-Aanandha (Being-Awareness-Bliss).

Today people read all kinds of books and go after all sorts of "great persons." They do not enquire about what constitutes greatness. Realise that there is no one greater than each of you.

But you have not discovered the real truth about yourself, like an elephant that does not know its own strength. A mahout with a goad is able to control it.

Recognise the fact that the whole universe is within you. You have all the powers in you. They are derived from the Divine Spirit within you. It is the Divinity which endows you with a Free

Will. Forgetting the supreme power of the Spirit, people place their reliance on the powers of the body, the mind and the intellect.

Love binds all people

Embodiments of Love! If you want to realise God, if you wish to experience the Divinity within you, if you want to know your true self, you have to develop pure, unsullied love. It is this that binds all people. It is described as the Prema-paasham (tether of love).

Today there are numerous sects within Christianity all of which are engaged in propagating their respective doctrines. While this preaching goes on, there is very little of practice in daily life.

Practice is most important. People may be entitled to propagate their creed. But that does not achieve anything lasting. Only practical example matters. When you practise what you preach, others will be inspired by your example. No one will care for the teaching of a person who does not practise what he preaches.

I have often told the students that of all forms of knowledge, the one that is most beneficial is practical knowledge which is relevant to everyone. You have to act on the conviction that the same Divine Spirit dwells in one and all.

Oblivious to this truth, man is immersed today in selfish pursuits. This selfishness is degrading man to the lowest levels. To develop true humanness, everyone has to foster the feeling of spiritual oneness. This sense of oneness constitutes true religion. Religion means "realisation" of your true self.

Develop the love of God. All other forms of love are not love at all, but only fleeting and impermanent attachments. Man's biggest folly is forgetting his divinity. All should realise that they come "from God." All are children of God. Everyone should seek to get nearer and nearer to God. That is saadhana. You must feel that God is Hridhayavaasi (dwells in the heart). You must develop compassion in the heart, because without it the heart is only a stone.

That is the message of Jesus--the message of love. Love is God. Live in love. Start the day with love. Spend the day with love. End the day with love. This is the way to God. Only the person who is filled with love will be dear to the Lord. God is your unfailing friend

This book contains the declaration: "Yo madhbhakthah." "The devotee who is filled with love of God is dear to me," says the Lord in the Geetha. God is your unfailing friend in weal and woe.

You must acquire His friendship.

There are many devotees from overseas here today. They should be firm in their devotion whatever changes in the situation they may face.

You may begin worshipping God with specific form and name (saakaara). But when you are faced with difficulties you experience God as a helper. When you have some desires, you pray to God for fulfilling them. You are then an artharthi (seeker of favours). In these different ways the devotee has to develop his relationship to God.

To illustrate how God responds to the prayers of devotees, I would relate the story of a rich man with four wives, who expressed what they wanted him to get for them during a trip abroad. The first wife, who was spiritually enlightened, prayed for his safe return. The second wife wanted him to bring some sacred books. The third wife, who was ailing wanted him to get some medicines. The fourth wife, who was a "modern", asked him to get her sarees and jewellery. The merchant on his return gave the three wives what they wanted and stayed with the first wife because she had no other desire except to have him back.

How God responds to devotees

God responds to devotees in the same manner. To those who aspire for wealth, he gives wealth.

Those who seek knowledge, He will help them to acquire it. Those who are ailing and who pray to God will get the relief they pray for. God builds hospitals for their treatment. Those who pray to God for oneness with Him, will realise Him. This is the way God responds to the four kinds of devotees.

The devotees should consider God alone as important and not other mundane desires. If you have God with you, all other things are got easily. So, God is your real wealth. Real health is God.

Men should strive for God-Realisation because they came from God and should go back to Him.

Today there are devotees here from many countries--Germany, Japan and others. Whatever happiness you may have experienced here, you will have to go back to your countries when your money is exhausted or your visa expires. Your aim must be to acquire a permanent visa to stay here permanently. That is got by God's grace. You can get it through love and love alone. When you have that love, your proximity to God is ensured for ever.

Embodiments of love! There is love in everyone of you. Develop that love. Share it with others.

When you have this love there is no need for you to go in search of aashrams. There are some foolish, persons who go on hopping from one aashram to another. This is sheer folly. There is no need to go anywhere. The Divine is in your heart. Adhere to one belief firmly. Do not change your faith from day to day. Follow one path with firm faith. That is the Love principle.

Discourse on 25-12-1996, in the Sai Kulwant Mandap.

Grace takes away the malignity of the karma which you have to undergo; you know there are dated drugs, which are declared ineffective after a certain date; well, the effect of karma is rendered null, though the account of karma is there and has to be rendered or, the Lord can save a man completely from the consequences, as was done by Me to the bhaktha whose paralytic stroke and heart attacks I took over, some months ago, in the Gurupurnima week! Baba

1. Let Prema and Thyaaga be your ideals

Uthsaham, Saahasam, Dhairyam, Buddhi, Shakthi, Paraakramam, Shadaithe yathra thishtanthi, Thathra Dheva-sahaayakritham.

(Where the six qualities of zeal, determination, courage, intelligence, ability and heroism are present, there Divine help is manifest).

STUDENTS! Embodiments of love! In any field, at any time, for any man who is endowed with all these six precious qualities, success is assured. These qualities contribute to the all-round prosperity of a man. All success attends on one with these six qualities.

However, these qualities confront various difficulties from time to time. Just as a student has to face various tests, these qualities are also subject to trials. Such trials should be regarded as stepping stones to one's high achievements. These trials are in the form of losses, troubles, pains, sufferings and calumny. One has to overcome these troubles with courage and self-confidence and go ahead.

Students in particular have to develop self-confidence. Without self-confidence the six qualities cannot be acquired.

In fact, self-confidence should be the life-breath of every person. Unfortunately, students today lack self-confidence and have become a prey to peacelessness because of their involvement in sensual pleasures.

Students should develop self-confidence and embark on the journey of life with faith in God.

Vishvaamithra relying on his intelligence, physical strength and the power of his weapons, sought to wage a war with Vashishta, who relied upon the power of the Divine. Ultimately he realized the truth that his powers were of no avail against the power of the spiritual, and giving up his kingdom undertook a severe penance.

Physical prowess is no power at all. It is really a sign of weakness. All physical powers are indeed powerless. All worldly wealth is impermanent. Man today pursues these fleeting pleasures, forgetting his inherent divinity.

Cultivate self-confidence

Students should cultivate self-confidence and manifest their divinity in their speech, their songs, their sports and all actions. However, occasionally the weakness in them may come out. For instance, when they succumb to troubles, are overcome by grief and are unable to face losses, they show their inner weakness.

Students should confront such situations with fortitude. Be fearless.

When you face difficulties with courage, you are bound to succeed. Hence, have confidence in yourself and achieve success in all areas of life.

It may be asked: "What is the benefit one derives from these six good qualities?" The answer is that you will secure both worldly and spiritual benefits from these qualities.

Good qualities enable one to lead a good life

Self-confidence is helpful to secure advancement of the individual, but it is not enough to promote the welfare of the society or the world. A whetstone is used for sharpening the razor and nor for making the stone smoother. Similarly good qualities have to be fostered for refining one's nature. These qualities are essential like the different limbs in a body for its well-being as a whole. People should realize that human birth has been given to them to lead ideal lives. Good.

qualities enable one to lead a good life. But even for the good life a price has to be paid. That price is good conduct. This means that you derive the happiness that results from a good life only when you discharge your duties. Pleasures are of two kinds: temporary and lasting. Permanent happiness can be got only by performing your duties. First do your duty and then enjoy the fruits.

Today people do not discharge their duties but wish to enjoy the fruits thereof. This cannot give them happiness.

Everyone should realise that he is born to discharge various obligations and not to enjoy rewards for unrendered services.

Man should realise that he has no claim to rights. His role is to carry out his duties. When he performs his duties, he will reap the rewards in due course. People today do not discharge their duties but fight for their rights.

Student's! At the outset, realise your duties and carry them out. Duty is God. Work is worship.

It is foolish to expect rewards without performing one's duties.

People are wasting their sacred human birth by neglecting their duties.

Students Should realize that neither youth, nor wealth, nor wife and children are permanent.

Only truth and righteousness are everlasting. You must base your lives on truth and righteousness and should be prepared to face any challenges with courage and confidence.

Five advisers in everyone's life

Everyone has five advisers in life. They are who; when, where, what and how. Before undertaking any action, answers should be got for these five questions. When the correct answers are got, the actions based on them will be the right one. People today act without concern for these factors. In this matter everyone can rely on his own judgement using his powers of observation and discretion. All the instruments for this purpose are available to everyone in his organs of perception and action. In every limb and organ there is a divine power. This divine potency is called Angirasa. The name is derived from the fact that the Divine is present in every Anga (limb) as a Rasa (essence). There is no need to search for the Divine outside yourself. You are Divine. All your powers are Divine potencies.

Develop the conviction that whatever happens to you is for good.

Education is not solely for a living. Essentially it is a process of Self-realization. Without understanding his own Self, how can one understand the world or achieve anything worthwhile? Without Self-knowledge what is the Vijnana (scientific knowledge) he can acquire? What is the value of scientific knowledge without wisdom? Hence one should acquire, along with scientific knowledge, discriminatory wisdom and Aathma-jnana (awareness of Self). Significance of Bhaaratheeya festivals All Bhaaratheeya festivals have esoteric significance. They have a deep spiritual meaning. Today's holy festival is related to the beginning of the Uttharaayana (apparent northward movement of the sun). The sun moves every month from one house of the zodiac to the next. Today the sun enters the house of Capricorn--Makara---and hence it is known as Makara Sankraanthi. This auspicious day heralds the conferment of many worldly and spiritual blessings on man. The Sankraanthi day is a witness to the prospective successes of man in many fields. The advent of Sankraanthi is glorified in a song which describes how farmers greet the sun and celebrate the gathering of harvest and enjoy the fruits of their labours. Sankraanthi day marks the arrival in the farmer's houses of the grains which are the fruits of their labours. Sankraanthi is a holy festival for a worldly achievement. It is also a cherished day of rest in the cool atmosphere. Man needs days of rest after a period of hard work. Only then he can enjoy peace of mind. "Samyak kraanthi ithi Sankraanthi" Sankraanthi confers peace and heralds a welcome change. It brings out the inner joy in people. It effects a change in the life-style. It generates sacred thoughts. People today do not recognize these sacred changes. They are all immersed in worldly acquisitions and have no regard for higher things. They should instead seek every opportunity to cultivate good qualities. These good qualities are the six mentioned at the beginning of the discourse. When these qualities are present, there will be no room for any bad tendencies to develop. Today, students suffer from two bad qualities which are undermining their humanness. These are asuuya (envy) and dhvesham (hatred). These two are partners in evil. They are twin pests. A beautiful tree with rich foliage can be destroyed by a pest operating at its roots. Envy is such a pest. It converts even a happy, affluent person into a miserable being consumed by envy. In the Mahaabhaaratha, Krishna described to Arjuna how the Kauravas were consumed by envy towards the Paandavas even though they were enjoying the kingdom. The demon of envy had seized hold of a good royal family and was ruining it. Students feel envious towards a boy scoring good marks. Envy rears its head when a boy is exceptionally intelligent. Some feel envious seeing a person who is well-off and happy. Some tend to be envious of those who appear to be cheerful and confident. Envy has no limits. Students should see that they give no room for envy. Envy is a self-consuming malady. It is incurable. One who is always blissful will overcome all difficulties. The courageous man can face death without fear. Fill your hearts with selfless love. Students! You must understand that the Sankraanthi festival has come to remind you of your latent potentialities. People look forward to many worldly benefits also from this sacred occasion. It is also celebrated as a day, when a sacred bull is taken from house to house, while the owner recites the Raamaayana story. The festival is also a joyous occasion for the young folk. The Sankraanthi festival is more important than any other festival because it is the day when the newly married son-in-law visits the home of his bride and is entertained lavishly. From ancient times such festivals have been a source of joy to the people of Bhaarith. Alas! Such festivals have gone and the people have taken to purely worldly pleasures. Of what avail are these pleasures? They are artificial. People have forgotten the heart and lost their peace in the bargain. The whole world is ravaged by unrest and fear. Man is haunted by fear wherever he goes or stays. The only way out of this situation is for people to take refuge in God. The protective grace of the Divine will free men from fear. Where devotion and love exist together, there will be no room for fear. It is their absence that is the cause of fear everywhere. Students! In whatever you do, either studies, or games, or singing or in the jobs you may take up, see that you invest them with sacredness and purity. In the songs you sing, if there is no joy for the listener, what is the use of your singing?

Why sing if you cannot be melodious?
 What is the use of education without humility?
 Without a pure heart, why worship Shiva?
 A heart without love is a block of stone. (Thelugu Poem)
 Fill your hearts with love. That love should be pure and genuine.
 Today mutual courtesies have become artificial and insincere. Students should cultivate selfless love as one of the basic human values. Position, wealth and strength may come and go. Only divine love is permanent. Love is God. God is love. That is the truth irrespective of nationality, race or religion.
 Develop self-confidence and spirit of oneness Education should be divorced from jobs. Its purpose should be the acquisition of Vijnaana (the highest knowledge). That is the concept upheld by Bhaaratheeya Culture. Students will be ideal citizens of the nation only when they develop self-confidence and the feeling of spiritual oneness. Develop the spirit of sacrifice and become defenders of the nation's integrity and honour. You must strive to promote the welfare of society. Eschew ideas of "me" and "mine".
 You will then become one with the Divine. When you identify yourself with all, you can derive infinite joy.
 Once upon a time the demons were present in small numbers. But today it is difficult to tell who is a demon and who is a human being. Get rid of any trace of demonic qualities. Become human and then go towards divinity.
 Students! You have received today prizes for your success in sports.
 In the same manner, you should score successes in your lives in the outside world.
 Develop forgiveness, forbearance and detachment Develop the quality of kshama (forgiveness) and refrain from harshness in speech. Sai is the example for you in this regard. All sorts of people indulge in calumny and criticism. Syaami remains totally unaffected. Why should I follow their example? I must follow my own way. If I follow another I am a slave. Therefore, I never follow another's ways.
 I adhere firmly to what I deem as good.
 You must realize that if you give up forbearance and forgiveness, you will have no peace. I am always at peace. What is the reason? Because I am always patient. You must also remain
 likewise. Whatever any one may do to you, do not bother about it.
 What is it you lose on account of their behaviour? If you resort to retaliation, you will worsen your condition. You have no idea either of your strength or of your disability You must face boldly such attacks and not allow yourself to get agitated over them. Students should win by their forbearance. Forbearance should be your life-breath and your ideal. By your fearlessness set an example to the world.

 It is an auspicious coincidence that today you have both the prize distribution function and holy festival of Sankraanthi. On this doubly blessed day you have to enjoy the sweetness of this combination, like the mixture of sugar and milk, and pledge yourselves to lead a dedicated life.
 The Upanishaths have described the Lord as verily sweetness itself-- "Raso vai sah." You have Karunaarasa (the sweet essence of kindness) in you. You are also filled with compassion and peace. Luckily you are free from Shokarasa (grief). You are free from bad qualities. Do not let them in. Foster the spirit of kindness. Treat life as a great game and be victorious in it by leading an ideal life.
 Life is a game, play it!
 Life is a challenge, meet it!
 Life is a dream, realize it!
 Life is love, enjoy it!
 This is what you have to achieve. Therein lies your true human worth.
 Human life does not consist in getting married, bringing forth children and being caught up in that endless round.
 They are the routine of worldly existence. There is nothing wrong in it, but it should, not be your ideal. Whatever you may do in your ordinary life, base your life on the ideal.
 In the army, people are assigned different duties. But two things are common to everyone parade (drill) and use of the gum. Likewise, two things are essential for students: prema (love) and thyaaga (sacrifice). Adhere to these two ideals. Love all. Be prepared for any kind of sacrifice.
 Without the spirit of sacrifice life has no meaning. For the sake of helping others or for promoting the welfare of the society, you must be ready even to give up your lives. To realize God, continually yearn for Him. You must constantly pray for the opportunity to experience
 God. Raamakrishna Paramahansa used to feel sad if he did not have the vision of the Mother on any day. Pine for God at all times. When you get God's grace, all the planets will be in your favour. You must ceaselessly try to win God's grace. Never give up the search. Do your duty and God's grace will follow. Pray from the depth of your heart for the well-being of all people.

Discourse on 14-1-1997.

2. Be prepared for a life of sacrifice

The moon illumines the night,

The sun illumines the day,

Dharma illumines the three worlds,

A good son is the lighter his lineage.

IT is the moon that sheds light during the night. During the day the sun gives light and shows the way. For the three worlds the illumination comes from Dharma (Righteousness). A good son is not only a beacon for his family, he is the light for his entire Jaathi (community).

Education is the means of unfolding the moral and spiritual potentialities of man. Education reveals to man what is right and what is wrong.

For a good son, who is a student, five things are essential. First is Vidhya (right education).

Vidhya means that which expels darkness (the darkness of ignorance). Second is Vijnaana (discrimination). This refers to the power to discriminate between the permanent and the transient, the true and the false. Third is Kramashikshana (discipline). Discipline is not got from books. Fourth is Dheshabhimaanam (love for one's country and people). Fifth is Sathseelam (good character). Only the person endowed with these five qualities can be regarded as a man of virtue.

Students should recognise these five qualities as their Pancha praanas (five life-breaths). It is only a virtuous, son endowed with these five qualities who lends lustre to his family and his nation.

True learning is character, morality and spirituality

The social scenario and the educational system today are riddled with many defects. Education today is concerned with imparting worldly knowledge, with no place for ethics or spirituality It does not equip the student with competence or capability. It is essential to carry out a total, radical change in the educational system. What is needed is a total revolution. Only then the value of education will become apparent.

In this context, a change in the student's attitude is also necessary. There should be a change in the student's approach to the educational process. Only then can he secure true education. All along education has remained an exercise in acquiring bookish knowledge. What is needed today is practical knowledge. Every student should acquire a good character, moral values, and develop a spiritual bent of mind. These three constitute true learning. These three have been held in high esteem from ancient times. Unfortunately from the beginning of the modern era, morality has disappeared from the scene. Righteousness and spirituality have vanished. Neither the teachers nor the educational authorities have shown any concern for these vital elements.

Indian culture is sublime. The Vedhas, Upanishaths, Puraanas and the great epics are veritable oceans of supreme wisdom. The sun turns every day vast quantities of water from the ocean into vapour and gives it back to the earth in the form of rain to sustain nourishing crops for mankind.

Although the amount of water vaporised by the sun is immense, the ocean's depth does not diminish. Nor does the level of the ocean rise even by a little despite the inflow of waters from the rivers. The immensity of Bhaaratheeya Culture is like the ocean which neither swells nor goes down. From days of yore, the sages of India absorbed this culture and propagated it among people and ennobled their lives. Bhaaratheeyas today have not attempted to understand the greatness of their cultural heritage. On the other hand, many people in foreign countries have explored the treasures of this vast reservoir of knowledge and benefited from it in many ways.

The Russians and the Germans made ample use of the Rig Vedha and Atharvana Vedha to promote their national interests. The Atharvana Vedha is a source of valuable knowledge regarding the arts and weapons of war. In India today no one seems to bother about the Atharvana Vedha.

Recognise the greatness of Sanskrit

Bhaaratheeya culture is entirely based on Sanskrit. All

Bhaaratheeya students should recognise

Sanskrit as the mother of all Indian languages. Without a knowledge of Sanskrit, one cannot understand the elements of Bhaaratheeya culture. Recognising the value of Sanskrit, Russia, Germany, Japan, Malaysia and other countries are introducing the study of Sanskrit in their educational curriculum.

The intimate relations between foreign countries and Bhaarith from ancient times have not been understood by most Bhaaratheeyas even today.

Indonesia cherishes Mahaabhaaritha

You may be aware from your study of books or from other sources that Indonesia has named its airlines as Garuda Airways. Garuda is the divine bird which is the vehicle of Vishnu, according to Indian mythology. The banks in Indonesia are named after Kubera, the Hindu deity representing wealth. Whiz Bhaaratheeya culture is surviving so prominently in overseas countries, it is not so well appreciated in Bhaarith itself.

The first President of Indonesia was Dr. Sukarno. His father was a great student of the Mahaabhaaritha. Admiring the great qualities of Karna as a warrior and a magnanimous donor, who never refused anything which a supplicant sought from him, the father named his son Sukarno, though he was a Muslim. In this manner, foreigners cherish what is great in Bhaaratheeya culture. But, Bhaaratheeyas, oblivious to the glory of their culture, are imitating occidental practices.

It would be good to remember the supreme sacrificing spirit of Karna. Although because of his association with some evil minded men, his name got tainted, no one can equal the spirit of sacrifice of Karna.

The great Mahaabhaaritha war came to a close on the seventeenth day with the fall of Karna.

The Paandavas were celebrating their great victory over Karna. The Kauravas felt utterly hopeless as Karna was their greatest warrior. The Paandavas rejoiced in the fall of their most powerful opponent. But, Krishna was sitting apart and appeared to be immersed in sadness.

Arjuna went to him and asked why he was feeling sad on a day when they should be rejoicing over their victory. Krishna told him that Bhaarith had lost its most heroic warrior that day. The hero who had brought glory and good name to Bhaarith had fallen. "I feel immensely sad because the country is losing such a great hero."

On hearing these words, Arjuna looked at Krishna with a feeling of amused surprise. He said: "Krishna! To ensure the victory of the Paandavas you chose the role of charioteer. Because of that, Paandavas won their victory. Instead of rejoicing over this victory, why are you feeling sad over the fall of our enemy?"

Karna's greatness as warrior and donor

Krishna replied: "Karna is the very embodiment of sacrifice. Sacrifice is a synonym for Karna. In the entire world you can not find one other man equal in the spirit of sacrifice to Karna. In weal or woe, triumph or defeat he could not forget the quality of sacrifice. Have you got that spirit of sacrifice? No." Krishna then asked Arjuna to follow Him.

Darkness had enveloped the battlefield. Krishna was proceeding with Arjuna. In his sweet voice, Krishna was exclaiming: "Karna! Karna! Karna was gasping for breath in his last moments. He cried: "Who is calling me? I am here." Following the direction from which the words came, Krishna went near Karna.

Before approaching Karna, Krishna assumed the form of an indigent Brahmin. Karna asked him- "Who are you, Sir?" Karna was nearing his last breath. Even at that moment, without any hesitation or faltering in his voice, He put that question to the stranger Krishna, as the Brahmin replied: "For a long time I have been hearing about your reputation as a charitable person. You have acquired fame as Dhaana. Karna (Karna the great giver). Today, not knowing about your plight, I came to ask you for a gift. You must give me a donation." "Certainly, I shall give you whatever you want," replied Karna. "I have to perform the marriage of my son. I want a small quantity of gold," said Krishna. "Oh what a pity! Please go to my wife, she will give you as much gold as you need," said Karna.

The "Brahmin" broke into laughter. He said: "For the sake of a little gold have I to go all the way to Hastinapura? If you say, you are not in a position to give me what I ask I shall leave you."

Karna opened his mouth, showed the gold fillings in his teeth and said: "I shall give this to you. You can take them." Assuming a tone of revulsion, Krishna said: "What is it you suggest? Do you expect me to break your teeth and rake the gold from them? How can I do such a wicked deed? I am a Brahmin."

Karna offers his heart itself to Krishna

Immediately, Karna picked up a stone nearly, knocked out his teeth and offered them to the "Brahmin". Krishna in his guise as "Brahmin" wanted to test Karna further: "What? Are you giving me as gift teeth dripping with blood? I cannot accept this. I am leaving," He said. Karna pleaded: "Svaami, please wait for a moment." Even while He was unable to move, Karna took out his arrow and aimed it at the sky. Immediately rain dropped from the clouds. Cleaning the teeth with the rain water, Karna offered the teeth with both his hands. Krishna then revealed his original form. Karna asked: "Who are you, Sir?" Krishna said: "I am Krishna. I admire your spirit of sacrifice. In any circumstance you have never given up your spirit of sacrifice. Ask me what you want." Beholding Krishna's beauteous form, Karna said with folded hands- "Krishna!

Aapadh-baandhava (reliever of troubles)! Lokarakshaka (protector of the world)! Oh Lord, who holds the universe in yore palm, what can I seek from you? At riffs moment of my passing,

I am fortunate to close my eyes gazing at your Divine form. This is my greatest blessing. This is boon enough for me. To have the vision of the Lord before one's passing is the goal of human existence. You came to me and blessed me with your form. This is enough for me. I offer my salutations to you,"

Arjuna was observing the whole scene. Krishna turned to him and said: "Are you prepared for this kind of sacrifice?" Arjuna bowed his head in silence. The Lord praised the greatness of the quality of sacrifice in man. Of all kinds of sacrifice, the greatest is the sacrifice made for God.

Oh Lord! That heart which you gave unto me, I am offering to you. What else can I bring to offer at your lotus feet? I prostrate before you. Please accept my offering." This was the prayer addressed by Karna to Krishna.

Keep faith in God steady like life-breath Man forgets his true nature because of attachment and egoism. Man should develop Erin faith in

God. Faith should be like your life-breath, which goes on inhaling and exhaling at all times without respite. Respiration goes on whatever work you may be doing and whatever be the state of your mind.

Likewise, in all situations and at all times, your faith in God should never leave you. It should not change according to whether your desires are fulfilled or not. Like your lifebreath, your faith should remain steady, through joy and sorrow, loss and gain, pain and pleasure. Treat whatever happens as good for you. Have that sense of fortitude. When you have faith in the Self, even wild animals will be gentle towards you.

Every man should recognise that the body has been given to him to render service to others. You must use the body for promoting the welfare of society. Of what use is the endless study of books if you do not use your knowledge for the good of others? A mind that is not utilized for imparting joy to others or a body that is not used for the service of others is totally useless. The way to love God is to love all and serve all. Students should imbibe this ideal.

Man should strive to become good and virtuous. Only when a man is filled with good thoughts and feelings and performs good deeds will his life become meaningful. These good qualities will serve to make a better man of you. That is the purport of the saying: "Suputhro Kuladheepakah"

(A good son illumines his lineage). As good sons all of you should pledge yourselves to serve and protect the nation.

Avoid bad company and develop spirit of sacrifice

Students! Your secular studies will help you in worldly life, but will not promote your spiritual progress. Without spirituality, all worldly accomplishments are worthless.

With all his prowess, why did Karna come to a bad end? Because of his association with the evilminded

Dhuryodhana. If he had not made common cause with Dhuryodhana, Karna would have become an effulgent star in the firmament. All his native good qualities turned into ashes because of bad association. Your company determines your character. Hence from the outset, cultivate the company of godly men. Without it, all other things are useless. Today wherever you turn in Bhaarath you see only disorder, violence and fear. What is the reason? People have lost their faith in the Self. They are fostering attachments to worldly objects. They are forgetting that true bliss is derived from the Divine.

Students! Develop broad mindedness. Cultivate unity. It was because of lack of unity, Bhaarath came under the rule of a small nation like the British, though it did not lack great warriors, scholars and administrators. Today the nation is afflicted with two bad qualities lack of unity and insatiable greed. Education should be pursued for the sake of wisdom and virtue, and not for securing jobs.

Develop the spirit of sacrifice like Kama. Honour the plighted word. Dedicate all your actions to God.

As alumni of our Institute you should stand out as ideal students and as examples to the world.

Realise that there is no greater quality than truth. Truth is God. Dharma is His ornament. Adhere to these two as the highest attributes of humanness.

Students! Your hearts are tender and unsullied. From this age itself you must foster pure thoughts. Plant the seed of love in your pure hearts. From that tree of love you will have the fruits of forbearance, compassion and kindness. Always be smiling. Face every situation in life, including death, with a smile.

Earlier, there were speeches by some students. The students spoke very well, sweetly and delightfully. Their speeches would be immensely effective if the words came not merely from the lips but from their hearts. There should be complete harmony in thoughts, words and deeds.

I desire that you should all redeem your lives by contemplating on God, cherishing good thoughts and engaging yourselves in the service of your fellow men. I bless you all.

Discourse in the Institute Auditorium on 19-1-1997.

You have to busy yourselves with activity in order to use time and skill to the best advantage. That is your duty and duty is God.

3. Have firm faith in God

Like the moon that illumines the night,
The sun that illumines the day, and Dharma that illumines the three worlds,
A good son sheds light on his entire lineage. (Sanskrit poem)

THIS vast world needs light for its existence. A man of wisdom is more powerful than a physically strong man, just as a puny mahout is able to control an elephant. It is not enough for people to rely on physical strength alone.

Man depends on four sources of light for dispelling darkness. The moon dispels darkness at night. No one except thieves loves darkness. Good people, well-intentioned persons have no liking for darkness. Darkness also signifies ignorance.

During the day the sun is the natural source of light. Human life will be impossible without the light of the sun. The sun is the cause for rains, which enable crops to grow and sustain human life. Sun is also the source of health and of happiness.

Dharma (right conduct) illumines the entire world. The word Dharma means that which "upholds". It is Dharma which teaches the right relationship between man and man, man and society and society and society. Dharma reveals to man through his heart what is right and what is wrong, what is true and what is false. It is Dharma which promotes the welfare of society.

Dharma protects its protector. The world cannot exist without Dharma.

A good son is one who sets an example by his conduct: One who pursues selfish ends cannot be a good son. A good son is one who reveres and serves his parents, who honours his preceptor, who is humble and respectful towards elders and who cams a good name by his service to society. It is because such sons have become rare that the country is today bedevilled by wickedness and evil practices.

Your foremost duty is to revere your parents

Boys and Girls! Your foremost duty is to revere your parents. The mother gave birth to you. The father protected you. You have to esteem the preceptor as divine because he imparts knowledge to you. Without reverence for these three, all your other achievements in life will be worthless.

The mother, the father and the preceptor represent the Divine Trinity--Brahma, Vishnu and Maheshvara as creator, sustainer and remover of ignorance respectively. But above all of them is the one God who is in all beings. Develop love for God and there by show your reverence for all.

Moreover, faith in God will ensure you what no one else can give. Maarkandeya was allotted only a life-span of sixteen years. The mother looked after him all those sixteen years as the apple of her eye. The father protected him from all dangers from any quarter. The teacher took care of his education. But none of them had any control over his lifespan.

The lad realised this truth. Hence he placed his reliance on God regarding his destiny. A few days before he was to complete his sixteenth year, he went to the Shiva temple and prayed:

"Oh Lord! My parents have protected my body. The teacher looked after my education. Bur God alone can protect my life. Hence, make me one with you." Placing his head on the Shivalinga, hugging the linga, with both his arms, he declared: "Eeshvara! You are my sole refuge!" Saying so he closed his eyes.

How Lord Shiva protected Maarkandeya

When the sixteen years were over, the Lord of Death arrived and cast his noose to take the life of Maarkandeya. The noose did not cover Maarkandeya alone. The Shivalinga was also caught in the noose because Maarkandeya was embracing the linga. When the Lord of Death started drawing the noose, Shiva emerged from the linga. Shiva asked the Lord of Death: "How dare you cast your noose on the one who had become one with Me and also cast Me in the noose?"

Shiva chastised the Lord of Death saying that he would be entitled to take the life of Maarkandeya if he had been alone, but not when he had become one with Him. "No one is entitled to touch a person who has united himself with Me," said Shiva.

Shiva chastised Yama and protected Maarkandeya with immortality. With the grace of the Divine, Maarkandeya got the blessings of all--his parents and preceptor.

Students should not only revere parents and teachers but also strive to earn God's grace. A young student who had spoken earlier had said that truth is the ornament for speech. Students should always speak the truth. There should be harmony between thought, word and deed.

Students! Apart from your studies, you should try to earn the grace of God by making your heart pure. You must remember the example of Raama who sacrificed the kingdom for honouring the words of his father. Dhasharatha yearned for Raama to administer water to him in his last moments. Unfortunately he did not get it. But Raama performed the last rites for the eagle Jataayu, when he cried "Raama! Raama!" in his last moments.

Jataayu secured the ministration

which even Dhasharatha could not get.

For receiving God's grace there is no distinction such as an animal, a bird or any other creature.

Wherever there is devotion, there God's presence can be experienced.

Give up all senses of "I" and "mine"

Students! You must acquit yourselves well and cam a good name even after you leave the Institute. You must bring a good name to the Institute among all the people you meet. Together with your academic knowledge, you must develop good conduct. In this troubled world, deem

God as your sole pro-rector and guide.

True devotion consists not in merely chanting the name of Raama bur in rendering help to the society and offering help to the needy. Only then can you become worthy of God's grace.

Hanumaan exemplified the ideal of implicit obedience to God's injunctions. The true devotee should give no room for doubt. He must act with full faith in God. He must realize that everything belongs to God. He should give up all senses of "I" and "mine". This was the lesson which Raama taught to Kaikeyi when she sought his forgiveness for all the wrong things she had done to Raama.

There is a basic difference between the attitude of the Gopikas to Krishna and that of Yaadhavas in Dvaaraka. The Gopikas felt: "Krishna! We are yours" The Yaadhavas felt: "Krishna! You are ours." Their attitude was based on Ahamkaara (sense of possession). That was responsible for their ultimate destruction.

You should all realize that God is present equally in all beings. The spiritual, oneness of all was taught to Shankara by Shiva in the form of an untouchable, when Shankara bade the

"untouchable" not to approach him. Shankara immediately prostrated before the untouchable as a preceptor who had taught him Samathvam (spiritual equality).

Bodies and temperaments may differ from individual to individual, but the Divine is one and the same in all.

Students! Cherish faith in God as your life-breath. The faith will sustain you at all times and in all situations.

Once Eeshvar Chanudhra Vidhyaasaagar happened to travel by train in a compartment with some English men. He sat between two of them. One of them asked:

Who is this donkey?" The other one asked: "Who is this pig?" A third English man asked: "Who are you?" Eeshvar

Chandhra coolly replied: "I am a human being sitting between a donkey and a pig." The two English men felt ashamed of themselves. They felt even more ashamed when they saw a large crowd of persons with garlands waiting to receive Eeshvar

Chandhra when he got down from the train. The English men then realised that though Indians might appear simple they were inherently noble and gentle.

Students! You should maintain the highest standards of Bhaaratheeya culture.

Discourse in the Assembly Hall of the Primary School on 23-1-1997

4. The gospel of work, love and sacrifice

There is no penance equal to a peaceful mind;

There is no greater happiness than contentment;

There is no worse disease than desire;

No righteousness can equal kindness.

EMBODIMENTS of Love! There is no penance superior to peace of mind. Every individual, every family, every society, every nation seeks peace in all possible ways. Every man should strive in every way to achieve peace as the most desirable objective.

There is no greater happiness than Santhosham (contentment). Man is perpetually in quest of happiness. But what is the happiness he seeks? Worldly happiness?

Transient pleasures? These cannot confer true happiness. Only spiritual happiness can give true happiness.

Why has man lost this happiness? Because man is afflicted with insatiable desires. These desires are the cause of various maladies. It is only by limiting desires and thereby eliminating the diseases arising from them that the man can secure peace.

Next, what is meant by Dharma? Charity alone does not constitute Dharma (virtuous action).

Charity is quite different from righteousness. A temporary, worldly act is equated with Dharma.

Dharma in its true sense refers to something which is lasting.

Aathma-Dharma (the Dharma of the indwelling Spirit) transcends all worldly actions.

Difference between Dharma and Religion

Many people in the world consider religion as identical with Dharma.

But Dharma is quite different from religion. Religion is like a river Dharma is like the ocean. There is well-known saying: "The ocean is the final destination of all rivers." All rivers ultimately merge in the ocean..

The essence of all religions, the goal of all scriptures, the objective of all aspirations is Dharma.

It is totally wrong to equate the vast ocean of Dharma with the river of religion. "Religions are many, but the path is one. Jewels are many, but the gold in them is the same. Cows are of many colours, but their milk is white. Living beings are numerous, but the Indwelling Spirit is one and the same. Flowers may be many, but the worship is one only."

(Thelugu poem).

Religions have come into existence for the purpose of regulating human life. What is common to all of them is the Prema-thathva (principle of Divine love).

Man is governed by morality. In all countries morality and integrity should be like the lifebreath.

It is only when men adhere to morality that human ideals like fraternity, equality and liberty can become meaningful in daily life. It is because moral values have been given the go-by that you find today society bedevilled by disorder and unrest. The world will have respite from violence only when progress in science and technology is accompanied pari passu by development of ethical and spiritual values.

In the economic sphere, when human desires are governed by righteousness, a divine impulse will arise in man. When the quest for wealth and the concern for sensuous pleasures are based on Dharma (righteousness), the mind will spontaneously turn towards God.

Man's misbehaviour and natural disasters

In the vast cosmos, man is like a speck. Essentially, there is no conflict between man and creation, just as a child is entitled to enjoy the milk from its mother and the bee is entitled to enjoy the honey from flowers, there can be no objection to man enjoying the resources of nature.

But as a result of uncontrolled desires and reckless exploitation of natural resources, Nature is exhibiting frightening disorders. Natural calamities like earthquakes, volcanic eruptions, droughts and floods are the result of disturbances in the balance of Nature caused by reckless exploitation of natural resources. Mankind today appears like a foolish man who is wielding the axe at the branch of a tree on which he is sitting.

Men have to develop a sense of spiritual oneness. Out of that sense of oneness, love will grow.

Love alone can bind the whole of humanity into one unit.

What do you see in this hall today? Here are people gathered from Japan, Indonesia, Malaysia and other countries. What is it that has brought them together in this small village? It is only love and the sense of oneness with others. The bliss of life is embedded in this love. Pure bliss is derived from this love. When this love is shared with others you have the bliss of collective joy.

When your life dances on the waves of this love it attains the fulfilment of humanness.

Man today does not recognise this sense of oneness. Man does not mean the body alone. Man has the mind, the intellect and the Aathma (the Spirit). It is the combination of all these that constitutes true humanness. When the balance among these four constituents is upset, man is plunged in troubles. When man maintains the balance among these four, the nation will prosper.

The transformation process of man

The transformation of man is based on transformation of the mind.

When men are transformed, the nation is transformed. When nations change, the world is transformed. Hence, if the world has to be changed, there has to be a mental transformation at the individual level. The human mind should be filled with love.

The mind is a remarkable entity. When it is filled with wisdom, it makes a man a saint. When it is associated with ignorance, it turns into an agent of death. Hence it has been declared that the mind is the cause of human bondage or liberation. All change, in education or other spheres, has to begin with transformation of the mind.

Indifference, bad company, disrespect, arrogance and jealousy, these five tendencies reduce man to the level of the animal. No one with these vices can be called an educated person. To get rid of these vices, it is necessary to take note of some of the good qualities in animals and birds. Man can learn any number of good qualities from animals, birds, insects and worms. One animal which is viewed with contempt is the donkey. But there are quite a few virtues man can learn from the donkey. The quality of patience to be found in a donkey is not found even in man.

Whatever burdens may be heaped on its back, it bears them all with forbearance. It puts up with any amount of beatings. Even when it is starved of food and water, it presents a calm face. Man has thus to learn the quality of forbearance from the donkey.

The ant is one of the tiniest among insects. But there are many lessons to be learnt from it. The ant has a capacity for foresight. With foreknowledge of the rainy season ahead, the ant starts storing food from three months in advance.

Then, there is the spider, from which lessons can be learnt.

Determination is one of its traits.

How many times its web may be destroyed or broken, the spider will go on remaking it with relentless determination.

Then, there is the dog. The dog is treated with neglect and indifference. But the fidelity displayed by a dog is not found in any other creature. Getting a few morsels of food from a man, the dog shows its gratitude to him by following him and wagging its tail out of affection. But such gratitude is lacking among students who have been nourished, educated and placed comfortably in life by their parents. Many do not have even a fraction of the gratitude displayed by dogs. Has their education or intelligence any meaning?

The supreme virtue of monogamy among birds

Next, take the example of the parrots. Conjugal fidelity is supreme quality among parrots. The firm attachment to each other in a parrot couple is not to be found even among highly developed human beings.

The story of how Vaalmeeki was deeply moved when a hunter killed one of two birds who were a loving couple is well known.

When one of the birds died, its mate followed suit, unable to bear the pangs of separation. Out of the intense sorrow and compassion of Vaalmeeki, the first shloka emerged from his lips and that was the beginning of the great epic.

When its mate dies, a bird will not seek another partner. It will starve itself to death. How many men care to follow the example of the birds in their devotion to monogamy? Many are ready to remarry after the loss of the first wife. The supreme virtue of monogamy is a quality man can learn from birds.

Thus, there are many useful lessons to be learnt from animals, birds and insects. Book knowledge alone is of little use.

In fact, the human heart is the best teacher in the world. Time is a supreme preceptor. This vast

Cosmos is the ideal book for all. And there is only one true friend and that is God. There is no need to go in search of a preceptor Your heart is enough. If you follow the dictates of your heart, every action will be sanctified.

It is necessary also to recognise the importance of Time. Time determines many of our actions in life. Time is a great teacher.

The universe is a vast text-book. By properly studying what is happening in the cosmos you can learn any number of lessons. God is your best, unfailing friend at all times. All others are mere time-servers. People waste their lives believing in such petty fair-weather friends. Your best friend is residing in your heart as the Indweller.

"Your heart is your country"

Today the Chinese devotees are observing their national New Year Day here. What is the origin of the word "China"? It is derived from the two words "chung" and "kuo". "Chung" means the human heart. "Kuo" refers to the country. The word "China" therefore means that "My heart is my country". This concept is applicable to all countries and all religions. For instance, Bhaaritha. It is derived from, the two words- "Bhaa" meaning "effulgence" and "Ratha" meaning "to rejoice". The heart is the source of effulgence.

Bhaarithheeya is one who rejoices in the effulgence emanating from the heart. Every man is attracted to the heart. God is not confined to any particular place. His mal abode is the heart.

The Chinese have esteemed the heart as their native land. the heart is subject to troubles and difficulties. From ancient times and to some extent even to-day, the Chinese have observed one ritual every morning before beginning their day's chores. They declare: Difficulties are our friends. Let us invite them." The Chinese have looked upon difficulties as their friends. They have recognised that without trouble no good can be realised. They used to start the day's work with this thought before them. The Chinese also realised that true happiness comes from the satisfaction of a task well done. In Bhaaritha also there is the dictum, "Uddhareth Aathmanaaathmaanam"

(Raise the Self by the Self). What is it that can raise the Self? It is our own good conduct. Our good conduct is not for elevating the country, but for elevating ourselves. A whetstone is used for sharpening a knife, not for making the whetstone smoother. Likewise, in this world, your good conduct improves you and, as a result the world.

Work hard and follow the dictates of your conscience

There is a proverb current in China: The most delicious food is that is got by hard labour." What is got by arduous effort is relished with joy. One who enjoys his food without having laboured for it is an idler In China everyone works hard to cam his living. This cult of work should activate every human being. Unfortunately this is forgotten today

From very ancient times, there have been close relations between China and Bhaarith. A short while ago a speaker mentioned how in the Chinese pantheon there are deities corresponding to the deities worshipped in Bhaarith like Lakshmi, Bhuudhevi, Kubera and others.

Similarly a common saying current in China regarding government regulations is applicable also to the situation in Bhaarith. Comparing Government regulations to a net, the Chinese used to say that the very small fish escape through the holes in the net, while the very big break through it.

Only the middle sized fish get caught in it. In Bhaarith also it is a fact that the lowest among the people are unaffected by Government regulations. The very rich and powerful drive a coach and force through them. It is only the middle class that suffers most from these regulations.

I have often indicated the rule by which people should govern their lives. They have to follow the dictates of their conscience. Make conscience your master. You can then face any difficulties in life and overcome them. Never give way to despair in the face of difficulties.

Enshrine God your heart; Help ever and Hurt Never Realise the relationship between your body and God. You are a limb of the society. The society is a limb of the world. The world is a limb of nature. Nature is a limb of God. Instead, of realising this integral relationship between man, nature and God, people are lost in the pursuit of wealth. This is totally wrong. People should enshrine God in their hearts and contemplate incessantly on the Divine. People today think of God only for money. God is sought only for money. Men resort to all devices to get money. Men go round wealth in adoration like the earth round the sun. This is the travesty of devotion that we witness today. Think of God. Money will come of its own accord. Today money rules every aspect of human life. Money has its place in life. But excessive wealth is a source of harm to the individual and the nation. You must strive to acquire wealth that will give you real happiness.

Today there are millions of devotees all over the world. The world would be a much better place if all of them practised at least one good principle in their daily life.

Jagadeesan from Malaysia who had spoken earlier called upon the devotees participating in the Chinese National Day festival in Prashaanthi Nilayam to give up one bad habit and cultivate one good habit as a mark of their visit to Prashaanthi Nilayam. In respect of Sai, it is enough if you observe one good precept, namely, "Help ever, hurt never." Indeed, you should cultivate the spirit of sacrifice. When you cultivate love with sacrifice, you will progress spiritually

When you plant a sapling you have to water it and manure it to make it grow. Likewise, for the plant of life, you have to provide the water of love and the manure of sacrifice to enable it to grow well.

Sacrifice! Sacrifice! Sacrifice!

The obsession with money is totally meaningless because you come with nothing in the world and leave it with nothing. Is it not more desirable to utilise the money on acts of charity? Many persons in Bhaarith deposit their ill-gotten wealth in Switzerland or some other country and leave the world empty-handed. The money you make in Bhaarith should be spent here for the people's welfare. Help the poor and the needy. Support educational and medical institutions.

Money is given to you only for helping others. There is no meaning in hoarding it.

Sacrifice! Sacrifice! Sacrifice! That is the supreme quality you have to cultivate. The Vedhas have stridently proclaimed that immortality can be got only through sacrifice and not by any other means. Only through sacrifice can there be real enjoyment of what you acquire. What you earn with one hand, give away with the other. Without sacrifice life is a waste.

I give you three formulae: One--work, work and work. Two--enjoy the fruits of your labour.

Today there is no gospel of work in the country. Everyone wants to enjoy without doing hard work. Whatever be the troubles, work hard. Three--use your earnings for public good. When this kind of renunciatory outlook develops among the people, the nation will prosper immensely.

Love all and Serve all

Prema and Thyaaga (Love and Sacrifice) are the two most important ideals in life. Love all, even those who hare you. That is the index of your devotion.

In the name of devotion, people are flocking to Prashaanthi Nilayam at great expense. What is it you have accomplished by coming here? What have you learnt? Being a Sai devotee, if you practise even one or two good qualities like morality and integrity the nation will benefit immensely. There is neither truth nor morality among most people. "A people without morality are worse than a monkey," goes the saying. A great monkey served the Divine and became the recipient of His grace. Men today talk about devotion, but have no regard for the Divine injunctions.

Peace, truth and love are inherent in man. Why do you search for them outside? Manifest these qualities which are within you. You must cultivate forbearance and compassion. This is the way to foster the love principle.

Today the demon of selfishness has reared its head everywhere. If selfishness goes, divinity enters.

Today people are steeped in desires (aashalu in Thelugu). How many live for the sake of ideals (aashayaalu in Thelugu) ? People develop dheha-abhimaanam (attachment to the body), but do not care to develop dhesha-abhimaanam (love for the country). Man's primary spiritual effort today should be in the direction of getting rid of selfishness, narrow-mindedness and attachment to the body, and developing love of God, a broad outlook and devotion to the nation. Develop confidence in the Self.

Today is the Chinese New Year Day: It is a new year for the whole world, because every one's heart is his native land. Every human being is a resident in the kingdom of the Heart.

Everyone should recognise his responsibilities in the kingdom of the Heart and not be concerned about his rights. What meaning is there in fighting for rights with a polluted heart? Your rights will be ensured if you discharge your duties prop-crime. There are officials who receive salaries in thousands. Are they doing enough work to justify those salaries? One who does not do enough work to justify his salary is a traitor to the nation. He is cheating the people. When you do enough work to justify your salary, you will be deriving boundless satisfaction. Duties must come first. That is the basis of Indian Culture.

A dog's example of Love and Loyalty

Let me tell you a story from my early years. I was then staying in the old mandhir in Puttaparthi.

An English couple were living with Me at that time. They presented Me with a couple of puppies. They said that the presence of the puppies with Svaami would give them the feeling that they were with Svaami even when they were away. I accepted the puppies. They had been named Jack and Jill. How did they live with Me? At night when I went to bed, one would sleep near My head and the other at My feet.

One day, the Mahaaraani of Mysore came to Puttaparthi. She was a very orthodox lady. She would not take her food if she heard the bark of a dog. She sent a message to Svaami that if there were any dogs in His premises, they should be kept confined in a room. In those days there was no direct approach road to Puttaparthi. The Mahaaraani kept her car in Karnatapalli (on the other side of the Chithravathi) and came walking to Puttaparthi. There were no hotels at that time. The driver of the car had to come to Svaami's place to take his food and get back. The Mahaaraani said she was staying in Puttaparthi that night. The driver took his food and was returning to the car at night. As the driver would not be able to find his way in the darkness I told one of the dogs: "Jack, you better go with the driver and come back in the morning."

Jack led the way and the driver was following the dog. They reached Karnatapalli. Then the driver slept in the car. Jack slept underneath the car. The driver got up in the morning. It was chill outside. He was in a hurry to start the car and keep it ready for the Mahaaraani. He reversed the car for short distance. One of the wheels ran over the sleeping Jack and its back-bone was broken.

Students and scholars and all others should note how much devotion the poor dog had for Bhagavaan. In great pain, the dog came dragging itself all the way to Svaami's residence. It had to drag itself over the Chithravathi sands. It was profusely bleeding. At the gate of Svaami's residence there was a watchman called Chaakali Subbanna. He rushed to Svaami and said- "Svaami! Our Jack's spine is broken. It is crying as it is dragging itself." Bhagavaan came out and called out: "Jack!" The dog came crying, collapsed at my feet and passed away.

See, what devotion in an animal! It dragged itself all the way to give up its life at the feet of Svaami. Before it passed away, it was gazing at Svaami. I got some milk to be brought and gave it to the dog. It placed two of its front paws on my palm and gave up its life. What an amount of devotion in an animal!

After Jack's death, Jill gave up eating food. A few days later Jill died. Today, behind the old Mandhir, there is a samaadhi for the dogs.

What loyalty and what devotion in a dog! How much better mankind would be if only people had a fraction of the love and loyalty displayed by that dog?

Give up the bad and take the good

Today people have no faith. They remember God in times of difficulty and forget Him when they are all right. How many follow the ideals of Svaami? They only multiply their desires. What greater folly can there be than this?

There is one thing to be learnt by all people whether they are from China, Japan, India or America. The God who is in all of them is one and the same. Your love of God should remain unwavering, whatever may happen. Love is God. Live in Love. This one truth will protect you at all times. Leave all your bad qualities here and take back good thoughts and good habits. That alone will justify your coming here. Become good and improve the society

When you go back to your country with good qualities, people will mark the change in you after your visit to Puttaparthi. Treat Prashaanthi Nilayam as a spiritual workshop. No charges are levied here. Everything is free. I am ready. Make the best use of your stay here.

Discourse in the Sai Kulvanth Mandap on the morning of 13-2-1997, Chinese New Year Day

5. Transcendental value of Sathya and Dhama

WHEN people from every part of the world have gathered here to rejoice in a great celebration, they are being described as "foreigners" and the residents of Prashaanthi Nilayam as "natives."

Who are the natives and who are the foreigners? When this question is examined, it will be seen that wherever Truth and Righteousness are respected and practised, the people there are to be deemed Bhaaratheeyas. By merely being born in Bhaarith, people do not become Bhaaratheeyas.

Bhaaratheeya culture proclaims the two virtues- Sathyam vada; Dharmam chara (speak the truth; follow righteousness). Whoever practises these two principles is a Bhaaratheeya.

The whole world is one vast mansion. It contains many rooms. Each country constitutes one room in this mansion. Hence, the whole world should be considered as one home. When you regard all the limbs as parts of a body, you should consider the function of the heart in it. It is the heart that supplies blood to every part of the body. Likewise, Sathya and Dharma (truth and righteousness) constitute the blood sustaining all countries. Cultivate the idea of oneness of humanity

God is considered and adored as the creator. God created the living creatures but these beings are "creating" God. Hence these beings are also creators. God is not created by Himself. It is the devotees who are "creating" God.

The supreme devotee, Prahlaadha, was able, by the intensity and sincerity of his devotion, to make God manifest in a pillar. The child Dhruva could make Naaraayana manifest Himself in a forest. It follows that every being is a creator. Every human being is Divine. But, because of identification with the body, man considers himself an ordinary being. The difference between creation and the Creator relates only to the external forms----

Upaadhi. When the physical form is ignored, what remains is the Spiritual Reality.

In different countries, peoples of the world observe their respective festivals. Today is considered as the beginning of their new year by the Chinese. There is no difference between Bhaarith and China with regard to the calendar. The Chinese have dates which, represent Uttharaayana and Dhakshinaayana (the apparent northward and southward movement of the sun). In Bhaarith we have lunar and solar months. In China also there is such a two-fold division. In Bhaarith in some parts of the country, the beginning of Uttharaayana marks the commencement of the new year. They base their calendar on the lunar cycle--chandramaasa. In other parts of the country, they go by the solar time---suuryamaasa. In China, they have a lunar and a solar year. In the Bhaaratheeya view, there is an intimate connection between the moon and the mind and between the sun and the eye.

In this perspective, we can see that basically there are no differences between different countries regarding matters like the almanac and the celebration of festivals. For all things, the root cause is the human heart. When the idea of oneness gets entrenched in the human heart, the ideal of human unity will be realised.

Sarva-ruupa-dharam Shantham
Sarva-naama-dharam Shivam

Sath-chith-aanandha Ruupam Adhvaitham

Sathyam Shivam Sundaram

(The One Absolute, who is Being, Awareness and Bliss, is the embodiment of peace in all His forms. All His names are auspicious and He manifests the triune attributes of Truth, Auspiciousness and Beauty). Truth, Goodness and Beauty constitute humanness Sathyam, Shivam, Sundaram--Truth, Goodness and beauty---these three constitute the essential nature of humanness In ancient times, this was the description given by Plato, the Greek philosopher. The Greeks could see the oneness underlying these three attributes. Plato expatiated on "Truth, Goodness and Beauty." Bhaaratheeyas expressed the same thing in the terms Sathyam, Shivam, Sundaram. Though there is a difference in the language of the words used, their essential meaning is the same. Such correspondence between concepts in Indian metaphysics and the doctrines of Christianity and other faiths exists in respect of ideas regarding the relationship between man, nature and God. Based on their different regional and ethnic differences, people in different regions of the world developed different faiths and cultures. But the essence of all their beliefs is one and the same principle. That is the principle of love. There is no human being in the world without love. However, that love expresses itself in many ways. In a mental asylum there are people with many kinds of delusions. In a sense, the entire world may be considered as a mental asylum. There are in the world people crazy about money. There are others who have obsessions regarding their health and sickness. There are others who are crazy about power and position. In this manner every individual is obsessed with some desire or other. There are, again, some who are obsessed with the idea of God. Of all these forms of madness, the madness for God is most commendable. Pray to the Divine and redeem your life From birth to death, man is haunted by twelve kinds of worries. By worrying about God all other worries can be got rid of. You must seek to know that, by knowing which all else can be known, by attaining which everything else can be attained. The Upanishaths have declared: "If you knock, the door will open. If you ask, he will answer. If you seek, he will give you what you want."

Every one knocks at the door and asks. What does he ask? he does not knock at the right door.

You must knock at Moksha-dhvaara (the door leading to liberation). Man today knocks at the door leading to hell. Man, who should seek the Bliss of the Spirit craves for earthly pleasures.

Instead of seeking the presence of the Lord as the supreme bliss, man is distancing himself from the Divine.

You must pray to the Divine and redeem your life. You must enter the door leading to spiritual liberation. Today people are not seeking the grace of the Divine but are appealing to the devil for favours. How can divinity be experienced by such people? You need not go anywhere in this quest. All that you have to find out is what belongs to you. Your words or your writings do not belong to you. Only your actions are yours. Today there is no harmony between deeds and your words. Your writings have no relation to your real experience. Hence, you are unable to experience real bliss.

It is better to act than to speak. Speech is easy. Practice is difficult.

There is real saadhana only when you practise what you profess. There must be complete harmony between thought, word and deed. The ancients proclaimed the supreme quality of this Thrikarana Suddhi (triple harmony and purity). Where there is divergence between thought, word and deed, Vedhaantha declares that it is evil. The triple harmony is the mark of high souled beings. The wicked revel in disharmony.

See Unity in Diversity

People should develop spiritual oneness and the triple purity. Then Divinity will manifest itself.

The Divine is within you. Sin and merit are related to your actions. Hence, men should engage themselves entirely in pure and sacred acts. Vyaasa defined merit and sin in terms of the good or harm you do to others---Paropakaaram and Parapeedanam. Para should be understood as referring to the Divine. Whatever action is conducive to Self-realization is meritorious. Whatever action is unspiritual---antagonistic to the Self--is sinful. The one Self is present in all beings. To differentiate between different beings is sinful. To consider what is one as separate and divided is a sin. Paropakaarah-punyaaya (To help others is meritorious). The real meaning of this statement is "nearness" (upa) to the Divine (Para) is meritorious.

Merit consists in getting closer to the Aathma (the Self). This is the inner meaning of Vyaasa's statement.

Hence, you should not regard countries as different and languages as barriers. The underlying unity has to be understood. Different people use different words to describe the same thing, for example, watch Whatever be the words used, the substance is the same.

It is essential to see the unity that underlies the apparent diversity. When more and more people recognise this unity most of the world's problems will get solved. All social con-flictors will end when people learn to see the one Divine in all beings. It is the hatred born of divisive feelings which is the cause of deadly discord in society. The Aathmik Principle is the means of liberation.

Self-control is the means to secure divine grace.

Develop self-reliance with faith in God

Embodiments of love! There is no need to celebrate the year. Every second is the beginning of a new year. People celebrate year after year new year days, but there is no change in their lives.

The body grows from year to year but the life span is ebbing away at the same time. People should be concerned about this. Time is most precious. God is the over-lord of Time. Time wasted is life wasted. Never waste time because lost time is beyond recall. Do not waste time in idle gossip. Today you are celebrating the new year instead of thinking about God, who presides over the passage of years.

God is the basis for all that exists. Rely on God rather than on things which are dependent on

God. Develop self-reliance on the basis of faith in God. This was the lesson which Jesus taught to a man who was starving. On the first day he gave the man some fish to eat. The next day Jesus met the man and asked him: "You ate the fish I gave you yesterday. How are you going to get the meal today? How long am I to relieve your hunger by giving fish day after day? You must know how to secure fish for appeasing your hunger. Then you will have no need to depend on others."

What everyone has to learn today is how to be self-reliant and not depend on others. How is one to be self-reliant? By developing Aathma-Vishvaasa (Self-confidence). From the moment Bhaaratheeyas lost Self-confidence, all institutions in the country started to decline. People have to develop Self-confidence. They must adhere to Truth and Righteousness. Whoever has confidence in the Self and follows Truth and Righteousness is a Bhaaratheeya, no matter who he is. It is not the accident of birth that makes one a Bhaaratheeya.

The three basic verities should be practised. Terms like "natives" and "foreigners" should not be used on territorial considerations. The terms should be applied on the basis of their beliefs and practices.

Realise that the Divine is within you

People should realise, as Shankara said, that only Truth and Righteousness are lasting and all other things, including this body, wealth and kinsfolk are impermanent. Manifest the truth within you and put into practice that truth. What you need for spiritual progress are three things. A heart free from attachment and hatred, a tongue that is not tainted by untruth, a body not polluted

by violence---the one who has these three is of sacred birth. Without these three, all penances and religious practices are of no use. You have to pray incessantly for Divine grace to confer these qualities. Realise that the Divine is within you.

Life is given to you to realise lasting bliss by the right use of the body, the mind, the intellect and the inner motivator - Anthahkarana. You have to acquire the wisdom to lead such a life based in the love of God. Discourse in Puurnachandhra Auditorium in the afternoon of 13-2-1997.

6. Service, love and sacrifice

The individual self is always the eternal Self (Shivam);

Shivam is ever the indwelling Spirit in the individual;

The one who is aware of this oneness

Is verily the knower of the Self, none other.

EMBODIMENTS of Divine Love! Only the one who realises that there is no difference between Shiva and the individual is a true Aathma-Jnaani (knower of the Self).

Scientists are seeking to explain the mystery of creation in various ways. The Science of spirituality has also been explaining creation in various ways.

Whatever any one may say, what is perceived by us is the atom. Without the atom there can be no universe. Rocky mountains, wooded forests, the waters of the ocean, the mud of the earth and the flesh and bones of the body are all composed of atoms. No object will be perceivable without the presence of atoms. The food you eat, the water you drink, the objects you see and the earth you tread upon are all made up of atoms.

When you enquire into the nature of the atom, you realise that the whole world consists of atoms.

The Vedha described the Divine as "Anoraneeyaan mahatho maheeyaan" (subtler than the subtlest atom and vaster than the vastest object). Many regard the atom as something which is not visible to the eye. This is wrong. The atom consists of particles which are not visible. The ancient sages considered that the Divine was immanent in the atom. "Oh Lord! You are extremely subtler than the atom and vaster than the vastest object. You are said to be manifest in the 84 lakhs of species in the universe and declared to be omnipresent throughout the cosmos. How can we hope to recognise you?" (Theugu song). Science and the Vedha For a thousand years scientists have been trying to explore the nature of the atom. But a long time ago, the young lad, Prahlaadha, knew that God was immanent in the atom and proclaimed that truth. He stridently told his father: "Do not have any doubts as to the presence or absence of the Divine from one thing or another. The Lord is all-pervasive. You can find Him wherever you seek Him!" (Theugu poem). Young people should realise the superiority of spiritual power over the power of technology Om, the Pranava Manthra contains within it the powers of Shiva and Shakthi. These two powers, Shiva and Shakthi, correspond to what scientists call electron and proton (the two constituents of the atom). Proton forms the nucleus of the atom. The electron is moving at great speed round the proton. The Vedha has described the phenomenon in different ways. It has declared that Shiva and Shakthi are inextricably associated with each other. This corresponds to the relationship between the electron and the proton. Anterior to the electron and proton is the particle known as neutron. This corresponds to what the Vedha has called Sath. In common parlance Sath is regarded as something effulgent. This is not correct. Sath, in fact, means darkness. Out of this darkness is born light. Out of the darkness called Ashaanthi, comes the effulgence of Prashaanthi. Thus darkness is called Thamah. One meaning of Tha is "nectar." The other meaning is garbha (womb). This womb is called by the scientists as "space". The second syllabic mah means poison or Time. Thus the word Thamas encompasses space and Time, which are the determinants of the human predicament. Realise the oneness of individual and Divine What is the origin of man? At the beginning there is garbha (space). In this garbha (womb or space) human life originates and has the form of a bubble on the seventh day. On the 15th day it takes the form of the embryo. On the 30th day it becomes foetus. On the 60th day, the head starts taking shape. On the 210th day, the foetus quickens with life. On the 240th day, the full body is formed. On the 270th day the child, comes out into the world. the Vedha declared that space and Time are essential factors in human birth. Instead of understanding the miracle of human existence, men are wasting their lives in the pursuit of transient worldly pleasures. Although superficially it may appear as if there are differences between the findings of science and the declarations of the Vedha, essentially there are no differences. The Vedha has revealed many truths not discovered by science. Science has not yet found many of the truths declared by the Vedhas. People should try to find out how much of the powers of the Divine are present in man. Jeevi (individual) and God are not different from each other. The individual however, by his attachment to the body, is leading a mundane existence. The day man develops love of Spirit, he will realise the oneness of the individual and the Divine. The external world is a reflection of the inner being. Men should understand the true relationship between the external phenomenal world and the world of the Spirit inside. The external world is a reflection of the inner being. All the happiness that he seeks from external objects is within himself. Take the example of the ocean. The water that turns into vapour from the ocean assumes a different form and quality. It acquires purity and sweetness and returns to the ocean in another form. Look at the changes it goes through in this process. Going up as vapour, becoming a cloud, coming down as rain, flowing as rivulets, it joins the ocean as a river. The change into vapour is Sathya (Truth). The formation of the cloud is Dharma (Right Conduct). Coming down as raindrops corresponds to Prema (drops of love). When the drops join to become a river, there is the flow of Aanandha (Bliss). This stream of bliss merges in the ocean of Grace. Sometime or other what has come from the Divine has to merge in the Divine. This is the natural destiny of all living beings. Taking birth as a man, leading a godly life, one ultimately merges in the Divine. Considering the Divine as formless, some scholars have raised controversies regarding this process. The truth is that there is no object in the world, which is formless. Even the minutest sub-atomic particle has a form. Only the ignorant can think otherwise. It was for this reason that the ancient sages adored the Divine in various forms. Holding that all forms are made up of atoms, they recognised the Divine in all forms. Holiness of Shivaraathri: Dedicate all actions to Divine Shivaraathri has a variety of mournings. Raathri implies the darkness of night. But Shivaraathri connotes not darkness but the special sacredness of this night. There is darkness in this night also. Bur this darkness is invested with auspiciousness. The reason is on this Chathurdhasi day (14th day after the Full Moon), the moon, who is the presiding deity for the mind, has shed fifteen of his sixteen digits. This is an auspicious time for having proximity to God. (Bhagavaan sang a Thelugu song to extol the days when good people gather to meditate on God, when kith and kin fraternise in the home, when hospitality is extended to strangers and when the needy are helped. These alone are real days, all other days are indeed days of mourning).

The Upanishaths refer to the attributes of the Divine as Sathyam, Shivam, Sundaram. Plato regarded Truth, Goodness and Beauty as the attributes of the Divine. Shivam represents the principle of auspiciousness. It is associated with Truth on the one side and Beauty on the other. Shivaraathri was regarded as a sacred day by the ancients. Experiencing bliss on that day they offered it to the world. People should realise the impermanence of worldly pleasures and the transient nature of youth, wealth and progeny. People should turn their minds towards the eternal Divine. It may be asked: "If the Divine is present in all things, is there no difference between good and bad, truth and falsehood?" For the person who has the conviction that the Divine is present in everything, there is no good or bad. He sees the Divine equally in all things. Good and evil exist for the one who looks at these things in terms of these differences. In the Geetha, Krishna pointed out to Arjuna how he was the active force behind all events and that Arjuna should consider himself as an instrument of the Divine. When anyone acts out of the firm conviction that he is an instrument of the Divine and dedicates all his actions to the Divine, he will see no distinction between right and wrong. It is attachment to the body that produces the illusion of individual doership. When that attachment goes, there is realization of oneness with the Divine. No doubt the body is necessary for certain purposes. But it should be regarded as an instrument and all actions should be performed as offerings to the Divine. God is present in all irrespective of beliefs. Divinity is present equally in all, irrespective of their beliefs. The believers should conduct themselves on the basis that the Divine is present in them and redeem their lives by acting up to the injunctions of the Divine. Some scientists may deny God, but they do not realise that the powers of the electron and proton are derived from the Divine. God may be called by any name, bur God is one. The atheists may adore something without calling it God, but nonetheless the Divine is present in it. Once some persons approached Buddha and put to him questions about God. Buddha told them: Why are you wasting your time on these futile controversies? If you were told about God, you will not believe. Why should you waste my time on this matter? The basic requisites for life in this world are Sathya, Dharma and Ahimsa. (Truth, Righteousness and Non-violence). Regard Truth as God. Adhere to Truth. You will realise everything." Some people ask, "How are we to believe in God when we have no notion of his form?" This is sheer folly here is a flower. It has a form, but the fragrance emanating from it has no form. Can you deny the reality of the fragrance because it has no form? Fragrance has a form, but that form is manifested in the flower. God acquires the form in which the devotee worships. Take, for instance, Prema. (love). What is the form of love? It is your fault if you do not recognise its form. Love has a form derived from the persons who exhibit love. Without someone expressing love, love cannot exist, just as fragrance cannot exist without a flower. So, in these examples we can see the inextricable relationship between what appears to be formless and the source of its form. To take another example: Here is a person whose form can be described in terms of various physical features. But does this description in terms of height, weight reveal anything about his internal qualities like forbearance, peacefulness, compassion, love and sacrifice? Are not these qualities very real and significant? he is prized mainly for these qualities, not for his physical features. To judge him only in physical terms is meaningless. His formless virtues are more important.

When one is judged in respect of his qualities, the form is irrelevant.

The utter ridiculousness of judging a person solely on the basis of his physical form was demonstrated by Sage Ashtaavakra to the learned Panditts in Emperor Ianaka's court when all of them laughed on seeing the crooked figure of Ashtaavakra. The sage laughed even louder at all of them. When they asked him for an explanation, Ashtaavakra told them that the scholars who laughed at his uncouth figure were no better than cobblers who judged things by the nature of the skin. Ashtaavakra told them that "Pandithaah Sama-dharshinah" (the truly wise person sees the Divine in all beings). Those who judge by the external form are no better than the cobblers. "I laughed at all of you because I wondered how the Emperor happened to esteem you all as scholars."

This means that those who judge anything on the basis of the external form are utterly foolish.

No purpose is served by trying to explain to a blind person the nature of something he cannot see. Likewise, how can anyone speak about God to a person who has no intimacy with the Divine or yearning for God?

Your conscience is the Divine. God dwells in the heart as a witness.

This is the truth about the omnipresence of God. To experience the Divine within you, you have to cherish godly feelings.

To acquire such feelings you have to perform certain Spiritual exercises.

The formless Divine has to be worshipped in the form of Kaama, Krishna or other forms according to one's preference. Just as air or water assumes the form of the container in which it is kept, God acquires the form in which the devotee worships Him. All forms are His.

To worship God as immanent in every atom or cell in the body is the highest form of worship.

The Divine is both the lover and the loved

Embodiments of Love! Through love you can achieve anything. A man without love is as good as dead. Serve all with love. The Divine is both the lover and the beloved. He is the director of the play and he is also the actor. (Svaami sang in Thelugu about: the double role of the Divine in human affairs).

He will bring tears to your eyes;

He will wipe away your tears.

How does He do it? When you are immersed in worldly affairs He brings tears to your eyes.

When you are immersed in spirituality He wipes away your grief.

He will drive you crazy.

He will drive away your madness.

Verily He is the ever blissful Sai.

He makes the devotee crazy about Svaami and makes him cry:

"Svaami! Svaami! Svaami!" he rescues the devotee from the crazy attachment to the world.

He will make the hedonist miserable;

He will make the miserable happy.

An affluent pleasure seeker is rendered miserable. A miserable person is made happy. When a man becomes affluent he gets afflicted with the disease of worldly attachments.

Rid the country of the seven maladies

Today the world is afflicted with seven kinds of diseases.

First: Business without morality. This is a major malady afflicting the world.

Second: Politics without principles.

Third: Education without character

Fourth: Sustenance without sacrifice.

Fifth: A harvest without labour.

Sixth: Humanness without virtue.

Seventh: Devotion without faith.

What is the use of devotion without faith? What is the use of claiming to be a man without human qualities? How can you expect a crop without cultivation?

What is the use of education without character?

Three things are most essential today. Morality in business, politics with principle and education with character.

Today the above mentioned seven diseases are causing all the troubles to the nation. Wherever you turn, there is disorder, misery and lean. Everyone should resolve to rid the country of these seven grievous ills.

Love is Divine: Live in Love

How are these diseases to be got rid of? Love is the only means. Love is God. Live in love.

When love is developed, hatred will have no place. Injustice will be out of bounds. People will not indulge in falsehood. They will not resort to wicked ways. People will follow the right path.

Therefore, deem love as God. Buddha declared: "Ahimsa is the foremost virtue." Sathya Sai declares: Love alone is the form of the Divine."

Love all. Love is God's only property. It does not belong to man. It is not a purchasable commodity. It issues from the heart. It alone can be said to be divine.

Divine love is different from human attachments. It is timeless. It is omnipresent. Make it your sole ideal. It is inherent in you. Manifest it in the proper way. If there is sugar at the bottom of a tumbler filled with water, you can make the whole water sweet by stirring the sugar and dissolving it in the water. Likewise, your heart is a tumbler. At the bottom, there is Divinity. Take the spoon of Buddhi (intellect), stir the heart by the process of saadhana. Then, the Divinity in the heart will circulate through the entire body. Then, every action of yours will be sweet, your speech will be sweet, your walking will be sweet, your looks will be sweet, your thoughts will be sweet. You will be sweet all over. Realise that sweetness is within you. Turn your intellect inwards and discover that sweetness by filling the intellect with love. Saint Raamadas proclaimed the same truth when he sang his song calling upon all devotees to share the sweetness of the Raama-naama. "Here is the Sweet of Raama's name. Eat it and enjoy the bliss. Do not go after any other silly things sold in the bazaar. This sweet has been made out of the flour of the Vedhas, mixed with the milk of the Mahaavaakyas, and is offered to you by the ancient sages. They made it with the sugar of inward contemplation and the ghee of pure thoughts, removed the taint of falsehood from it." The chanting of Raama's name costs you nothing. Why do you go after bad things, paying a heavy price for them? The blissful name of Raama contains the essence of Vedhas, is the goal of all spiritual endeavour and is the essence of all spirituality. All things can be accomplished by churning the Lord's name. Strive to destroy the ego. Do not look upon Shivaraathri as only an annual festival. Deem every night as a Shivaraathri (holy night). Whatever and whenever you entertain sacred thoughts and contemplate on God, you have Shivaraathri then and there. Shivam means goodness. It calls for the eschewing of egoism. Those who know Thelugu can see how the letter Sa becomes Si by the shortening of the mark at the end of the letter Sa. The elimination of the ego makes all the difference between Shivam and Shavam (a corpse). Every human being should strive to destroy the Ahamkaara (ego). Unless the ego is eradicated, Divinity cannot be realised. Consider this example. Here you are, devotees who have come from distant parts of the world at great expense and trouble. Who sent you any invitation? Why have you come here? You have come to experience the love of Svaami. Svaami is moving amongst each of you with joy and laughter and filling you with happiness. It is because of Svaami's abundant love that you are drawn to this place. If ego prevailed here, none of you would come here. It is the total absence of ego that attracts you to Svaami. This was the feeling that animated the gopis of Brindhaavan. Their only desire was to be near Krishna at all times and in any condition. This is true relationship between the individual and God. But people are forgetting this and wasting their time. They should be prepared to make any sacrifice to realise God, which is the primary purpose of human birth. Follow the example of Raama. Students! Whatever may be your parents plan for you or your own plans for your future, never give up meditating on God. Serve your parents. Follow the example of Raama, who became adorable as a God by His exemplary life. He sacrificed everything to uphold the plighted word of his father. Doing your duty is true yoga. Your duty as a student is to respect your teachers, revere your parents and earn a good name in society. After you get married, you must lead a virtuous and purposeful life in society. This is the culture of Bhaarith. It calls for a life of purity in thought, word and deed. This is the primary message of Shivaraathri. I am giving you three maxims which you have to bear in mind: "Seva, Seva, Seva." Never forget the duty to serve. For this you have to develop love. To develop love, you have to promote the spirit of sacrifice. Service will become meaningful when it manifests love that issues from sacrifice. Consider service as conducive to your own spiritual development. "Be good, do good." Discourse in Sai Kulvanth Hall on the evening of 7-3-1997. 7. Bhajans and bliss The goddess of prosperity walks in the wake of Truth; Fame follows sacrifice; Knowledge follows diligence; The intellect is governed by actions. (Sanskrit Shloka) SATHYA-ANUSARINI Lakshmi (As long as people adhere to Truth, prosperity will attend on them). Truth is that which is valid for all the three categories of Time-past, present, and the future. Truth is Divine. The one who ad-hems to Truth will lack nothing in the world.

"Thyaaga-anusaarini Keerthi" (Fame will follow the man who has the spirit of sacrifice). In the world today both truth and sacrifice are rare. These two are the proper goals for human existence.

"Abhyaasa-anusaarini Vidhya" (Knowledge is gained by the extent to which it is diligently pursued). Diligent study is essential for the acquisition of knowledge. The Geetha has declared that earnest practice leads to success in meditation. Meditation helps to promote the spirit of sacrifice. Peace is secured from sacrifice. Hence, diligence is essential for achieving anything.

All actions in one's life are performed well through Abhyaasa (constant practice).

Bad actions pollute the intellect

"Buddhih Karmaanusaarini" (Actions determine the course of the intellect). In the actions performed by the person, there are two types: the proper and the improper. Man's intellectual tendencies depend on the nature of his actions, good or bad. Bad actions pollute the intellect.

Good deeds purify the intellect. Hence the condition of the intellect is determined by one's actions.

To ensure that one's actions are good, one has to cultivate good company. Association with the good influences the intellect in the right direction. Your company shows what you are. It is, therefore, necessary to cultivate the company of good people and foster good qualities.

In this world, who is a true preceptor? One's heart is the true preceptor. Time is a true teacher.

The world is the best guide-book. God is the ideal friend. Hence, there is no need to search for a preceptor. The heart is your conscience. When you consult your heart or conscience, it tells you what is right. It is the right preceptor. It will not let you go astray.

Then you have Time. It is going in the right direction. In any circumstance you cannot go against

Time. Teachers are of two kinds: the painful and the illuminating. Time belongs to the type of teacher who illumines. Time is the devourer of all things in due course. But the Lord, Eeshvara, is master over Time itself. Therefore, one should act according to the needs of the Time, with full faith in the Lord. This is the proper way to act.

The cosmos is the best text

People read all kinds of sacred books- the Geetha, the Bible, the Quran, the Granth Saheb and others. All these books confine their reachings to specific subjects.

They do not cover other subjects related to the physical, the social etc. Bur the cosmos itself constitutes the most comprehensive text-book, covering all subjects, the physical, the mundane, the ethical and the spiritual. The cosmos is therefore the best text. There is nothing you cannot learn from the universe.

However intelligent a man may be, he learns all that he knows from the world around him.

Without the world knowledge cannot exist.

In the distant past, the world was enveloped in darkness. For millions of years the world was covered by a heavy mass of clouds. Then started a downpour which lasted for thousands of years. This was followed by the formation of oceans, mountains, rivers and forests on the earth.

The dissolution of the clouds gradually dispelled the darkness enveloping the world. Then, the sun and the stars became visible from the earth. Man has to learn many things from the phenomena taking place in the universe.

Next, there is the question: "Who is one's best friend in the world?"

There are any number of fair-weather friends. Who is a lasting friend, who will stand by you in weal and woe, who is pure and unselfish? God alone is such a friend. When you make God your friend, you will be free from all troubles. Your worldly friends may desert you any moment. But God will always be with you, above you, around you. Your dearest and unfailing friend is God alone.

All of you were engaged in the bhajans whole of last night. They appeared to be largely Vyaavahaarika (kind of ritual). What is the origin of this worldly ritual? It has come from Paaramaarthika (the spiritual). This shows that there is an element of spirituality even in worldly actions--whether it be the practice of a profession, or a business or the pursuit of knowledge. Worldly activities get sanctified by association with spirituality.

Equanimity is characteristic of the ocean

From the worldly activities arise what are called Praathibhaasika activities (reflections of the worldly activities). What is the relationship between these three types of activities? The Paaramaarthika (spiritual) is like the ocean. From this arise the waves of vyaavahaarika

(worldly activities). The main characteristics of the ocean are to be found in the waves also like chillness, saltiness, etc. Praathibhaasika is represented by the foam arising from the waves.

The foam has all the qualities of the ocean. The relationship between these three types has to be properly understood. Without the ocean, there can be no waves.

Without the waves, there can be no foam. It is clear that without the Paaramaarthika (the spiritual) there can be no

Vyaavahaarika (worldly) phenomenon. Without the Vyaavahaarika waves, there can be no

Praathibhaasika foam. Their interrelationship is comparable to a grandfather (the ocean), father

(waves) and son (the foam). The ocean is not diminished by evaporation or swollen by the flow of river waters. This equanimity is characteristic of the ocean. It is free from egoism and possessiveness.

People, however, consider the three states. Paaramaarthika, Vyaavahaarika and Praathibhaasika-----as different from each other. This is totally wrong. The Vyaavahaarika (worldly activities) should not in any way be divorced from the Paaramaarthika (spiritual). Only then can peace be got from worldly activities. What is the cause of sorrow in this world? It is the result of separating the worldly activities from the spiritual and considering them as distinct from the other. The transient nature of worldly activities should be understood. It is associating them with the spiritual that they acquire sanctity. The spiritual basis of all activity should never be forgotten.

Spiritualize the Bhajans with heart felt devotion

The bhajans this time were done in a ritualistic fashion. Greater attention was paid to raaga, thaala, laya and shruti (the melody, the beat, the rhythm and the tone). All these are vyaavahaarika (conventional qualities). To elevate the bhajans to a spiritual level what are required are true feeling and ecstasy of devotion. The songs should flow not from the lips but from the heart. When the songs come out of the heart they will be blissful for the ears.

That heart is comparable to the ocean. Hence, the Lord is described as Hridhayavaasi (the Dweller in the heart). The heart is the seat of compassion in man. Only when men are kind, you can call humanity "mankind".

Do not think that God dwells in some temple, shrine or place of pilgrimage. He is omnipresent and His abode in man is the human heart.

When Naaradha sought to know from Vishnu what was His permanent abode, the Lord replied:

"Wherever my devotees chant my glories, I am present there." When God dwells in the heart, why should devotees seek Him elsewhere?

Conduct your bhajans with a pure unsullied heart, oblivious to all worldly desires. When you chant the Lord's name with a pure heart, you will experience the Divine. "If a man, devotes one moment of the time devoted to thoughts of family, friends, business and wealth, to thoughts on the Lotus Feet of the Lord, he will have no need to fear the messengers of death." Men's thoughts today are wholly concerned with acquisition of material possessions, power and pelf. How much happier would they be if they devoted a fraction of their time to contemplate the glories of God.

Hours, days, years are wasted in the pursuit of things of the world.

One moment devoted to the thought of God will make all the difference.

What meaning is there in acquiring millions? A contented man is happier than a millionaire. The poorest man in the world is the one who has insatiable desires.

Be content with what you get and carry on your duties. This is Thyaaga, a life of sacrifice.

Adhere to Truth and Sacrifice

Today the world needs Truth and Sacrifice. What does sacrifice mean? Today there are millions of people who consider themselves Sai devotees. There is no need to go outside the Sai fold. If the Sai devotees alone adhered to Truth and Sacrifice, the entire world will be transformed.

If you wish to change the world, these two principles are the recipe.

Sathya (Truth) purifies the heart. Thyaaga (sacri-fice) transforms the physical environment. By this double transformation the entire world is divinised.

How long will men continue to wallow in the mundane world, forgetting the Divine? You must yearn for God and redeem your life.

Men desire to become millionaires. But how many of the millionaires have peace of mind?

Money can give many things that are conducive to Comfort. But it cannot give peace of mind.

It should be realised that the body and all the appurtenances of the mind have been given to man to enable him to achieve Aathma-shaanthi (spiritual peace). If spiritual bliss is not attained, all other physical attachments are worthless.

Man has been endowed with a body to practise righteousness. Man has to rise above the level of birds and beasts. Dedicate your lives to the service of your fellowmen. Do not lead an idle life.

Bhaarith has any amount of land and water. Why should people suffer from want? Because they are not engaged in the right type of activities. Many are wasting their time. Time is God. Time wasted, is life wasted.

Pray to God and transform work into worship
In the worship of the Divine, there are two schools of thoughts--- those who worship the formless and those who worship the Divine in different forms. The differences over this issue are fruitless. Water that is formless acquire a form when it becomes ice.
The formless water
molecule and the ice block with the form are one and the same.
Vedhaantha has clearly pointed out the futility of this controversy.
People get confused by the way some scholars deal with spiritual subjects on the radio and TV.
The teachings are often based only on bookish knowledge without any practical experience, Knowledge should be based on experience. For instance, the saltish water from the ocean that is turned into vapour by the rays of the sun becomes pure and sweet. It has no trace of salt in it. It has been transformed.
The same process takes place when the grace of the Lord's rays falls on the polluted mind of man and transforms his thoughts into pure and sweet feelings.
The importance of the mind in the process of transformation should be properly understood because the mind is the cause of bondage or liberation. Your actions are the cause of your happiness or sorrow. Do not blame others for your condition. Every thought, every word and every action has its reflection, resound and reaction. It is a sign of weakness to blame others for your troubles. You have to bear with the consequences of your actions. If they are unbearable, pray to God for relief. God alone can give relief in such cases. He is all-powerful and therefore take refuge in Him.
Pray to God and draw from Him the magnet of His grace and offer to the world the power of His electrical energy.
This is the energy which man can mobilise for the good of all. It is all-powerful, because it is Divine. It is within you. What a pity that people should be unaware of this and feel themselves powerless! All energy and all bliss are within us. Because of ignorance people are resorting to all kinds of useless exercises. They are unnecessary. Have full faith in your Aathma-shakthi
(spiritual power). Adhere to the truth of your faith, without criticising others.

Whatever you do, have the name of the Lord on your lips and faith in God in your heart. Thereby work will be transformed into worship.
Enjoy bliss in silence Today, you have to open your hearts and close your mouths. But people are doing exactly the opposite. This is treason to God. Practise silence as far as possible.
The ancient sages practised mounam (absolute silence) as a spiritual discipline. Today people indulge in excessive talk over the trivial and the unimportant. When silence is practised, bliss will manifest itself. The one who talks much will do little. One who acts will talk little.
I have been observing how the bhajans are sung. When the girls sing, the boys do not follow in chorus. When the boys sing, the girls do not respond. When both are singing the Divine name, why should not they sing in unison? What is the reason for this narrow separatism? This should be given up.
Once Emperor Akbar asked his court musician how would he account for the fact that a wayside beggar's music moved him more profoundly than the music of the state musician. The latter replied that while the beggar sang from his heart to please God, his music was constrained by the desire to please the Emperor.
You should sing whole-heartedly with the desire to please God. God makes no distinction between a proficient musician and a beggar in the street. It is the devotion and sincerity that matter. Merge your soul in the bhajans you sing. Spiritualise your bhajan-singing. Then you will experience real bliss.
Don't distort Svaami's teachings for convenience
In following Svaami's teachings people tend to follow them according to their convenience. For instance, when Svaami said that there is only one caste, the caste of humanity, this statement is used as authority for uninhibited marriages between any two persons. This is a travesty of Svaami's teaching. Caste differences are to be eliminated. Bur cultural differences should be respected. Svaami has emphasised that every cultural group should adhere to its culture.
Svaami's reachings should be adhered to in their entirety and not selectively according to one's convenience.
I fervently appeal to all devotees to participate in the bhajans with their heart and soul and make community singing a blissful spiritual experience for one and all.
Discourse on the morning of 8-3-1997.

8. Right use of Time

Like the oil that is in the til seed,
Like the presence of ghee in milk,
Like fragrance in a flower,
Like juice in a fruit,
Like fire in a piece of wood,
So does the Divine permeate the cosmos.

IF WE wish to discover the presence of the all-pervading Divine in the universe, we have to recognise the Divine in our daily life. Like the power of sight in the eye and the power of hearing in the ears, God manifests as consciousness in the human body. There is no place in the world where God does not exist.

Creation is a manifestation of God. It is the form of God. It is called Prakrithi (Nature). Hence, man, who is a child of Nature, is inherently Divine.

Man is born with Divine qualities. Just as a sapling grows out of a seed, a flower from the sapling and fruit from the flower, God is the seed of the entire cosmos..

Man is intrinsically a combination of morality, righteousness and spirituality. Unfortunately, forgetting these basic qualities, man today is bereft of morality, righteousness and spirituality.

When we consider the sacredness of human birth, it is a shame that man should be so degraded today.

Man is an embodiment of Sath-Chith-Aanandha (Being-Awareness and Bliss) which are the attributes of the Divine. But forgetting his humanness, man has descended to the level of the animal and behaves like a demon. People do not respect the words of elders or follow the reachings of the wise.

In the land of Bhaarith where virtues like truth, righteousness, forbearance and compassion were highly esteemed, today cruelty, selfishness, intolerance and ill-feeling are rampant. Love is hardly present anywhere. What passes for love is not real love at all. There is a simulacrum of love for selfish purposes.

Many people are installing the statues of great men. While installing these statues, they are giving a burial to the teachings of these great men. Why carry on these ostentatious shows? It is not fitting for human beings to install statues and ignore the reachings.

The trinity in man: Purity in thought, word and deed

The true nature of the trinity--Brahma, Vishnu and Maheshvara---should be properly understood.

They symbolise the qualities of Sathva, Rajas and Thamas which are present in every human being.

Who is Eeshvara? The Vedha has described Eeshvara as Aathma. It has proclaimed the identity of the heart with Eeshvara. "Eeshvaras-sarvabhoothaanam" (Eeshvara dwells in the region of the heart of every living being) declares the Geetha. Hence, Eeshvara is described as

"Hridhavesvara" (the Lord of the heart).

The seat of thoughts is the mind. The mind has been described as symbolising the form of Vishnu. Vishnu means one who pervades everything. The mind has the power to reach out for anything in the universe. Hence the cosmos is rooted in the mind.

The thoughts emanating from the mind find expression in Vaak (words or speech). Thus, the heart, the mind and speech together constitute humanness.

Sanctifying these three has been described as Thrikaranasuddhi (purity in thought, word and deed).

The worship of the Trinity really calls for purification of Vishnu (mind), Eeshvara (heart) and Brahma (speech). Men today are immersed in transient worldly activities. They should sanctify all actions by purifying their feelings.

Develop good thoughts and do good deeds

We are celebrating this day as New Year Day. The new year is called Eeshvara. Eeshvara means one who is endowed with all forms of wealth. People greet the new year as if it is going to confer on them some new benefits. The good or evil, the gains or losses, the renown or infamy experienced by people are not the outcome of the passage of years. They are the consequences of their own actions. Samvathsara (the year) is one of the names of God. Because God is associated with time. He is also known as Kaalaathmaka (Time-spirit). Hence, we should not consider the Lord, who is the spirit of Time, as likely to cause good or ill to us. Our actions, good or bad, bear fruits, according to their nature.

There is no need to wait for a new year to bring new tidings. Every moment is new. Many are wondering what troubles and losses the new year will bring. For all our troubles and difficulties

the year is not responsible. Our conduct alone is responsible. If our actions are good the results will be good. Bad actions will lead to bad consequences. People think that good and bad are related to bad time. Not at all. Their thoughts are the cause. Hence, they should develop good thoughts and do good deeds. They should cherish good feelings and associate with good persons.

People should realise the preciousness of Time. Most of the time available is wasted by people.

This is utterly wrong. Time should be used always for right purposes. That is the foremost duty of every man. Waste of time is waste of life. The Lord of Time protects those who take refuge in Him, even against the Lord of death, "Kaala". Time takes its revenge on those who misuse it. A nation's prosperity is dependent on how people make use of their time in the performance of good actions.

Lack of unity is the cause for present situation

Bhaaratheeya culture is based on two fundamental principles- "Speak the truth. Follow righteousness." The heart is the seer of righteousness. It should be filled with compassion. As the

In-dweller in the heart is the same in all beings, people should cultivate the spirit of unity.

Shivaraj Patil in his speech earlier pleaded for unity among the people he also urged that in addition to unity and purity, there should be love. When unity, purity and love come together, oneness is experienced.

What is the situation today? Where is unity to be seen? Today nation is divided against nation.

There are conflicts between states and within them. There are disputes over borders between states. When there are inter-state disputes, how can there be unity in the nation as a whole?

All are brothers; all belong to the human fraternity. There should be unity among all the people.

All should strive to promote the reputation of the nation. No one can claim any right to a particular state. All have equal rights.

"The one Spirit is the Indweller in all beings." If this truth is recognised there will be no room for internecine conflicts. Selfishness is at the root of all conflicts in the world. All are human beings.

The Caste of Humanity. The Religion of Love. The Language of the Heart. This unifying truth should be recognised. Everyone is constituted of the same five basic elements. Why, then, there should be differences between them?

Render benefit to society

All claim to be devotees. But if they are real devotees, why should there be differences amongst them? What is the source of these differences? What is the cause of envy?

The truth is that people merely call themselves devotees. It is a delusion. They should examine whether they have the qualities of devotees. Everyone seeks to know what good he can derive from other individuals or from society. No one asks himself what good or benefit society derives from him. Start with rendering benefit to society.

Everyone goes about trying to see what he can get from society.

Today, thanks to the influence of the Kali Age, two kinds of diseases have grown.

One is the insatiable thirst for wealth. In every city there is a mad rush for making money.

Everyone is caught up in this craze for money. No doubt money is necessary, but only up to a limit to meet one's needs. Owing to excessive desire people lose all sense of proportion. Men turn into demons in the pursuit of wealth. It may be asked whether at least they make good use of their immense wealth. No, ultimately, the money may fall in the hands of robbers or others. What you get from society, give it back to society. That is the primary value to be cherished by every one.

The second malady is the thirst for power. The thirst for power and position is unquenchable.

Afflicted with these two maladies man is converting the whole world into a madhouse.

Do your duty sincerely

The desire for wealth and power is not wrong as such. Bur wealth and power should be used for right ends. Whatever position you occupy, see that it is used worthy.

A cobbler stitching shoes is pursuing as worthily an occupation as a Prime Minister governing the country. Therefore, everyone has to do his duty properly. There is no high or low in these matters. To each person, his occupation is a matter of pride. Hence, do your duty sincerely.

Everyone should be filled with this feeling. He should see that he does his job well without any lapse or defect. When everyone does his duty in this spirit the well-being of the whole world will be automatically ensured.

People proclaim that they desire the well-being of one and all in the world, but they do nothing to promote it. They are concerned only about their own well-being.

This is not the right attitude at all. This year goes by the name

Eeshvara. At least in this year everyone should cultivate the Eeshvarabhaava (godly feeling) and live in amity with each other.

Every one should be filled, with the feeling that the Divine dwells in his heart--that the heart is Divinity itself--that mind should be filled with godly thoughts as it symbolizes Vishnu. No mean thoughts should be allowed to enter the mind. The mind should not be allowed to go astray.

Brahma is said to have emerged from the navel of Vishnu. He symbolises speech. When the trinity are seen as symbols of the Divine qualities in man, man will discover the divinity within him. There is no need to seek the Divine outside one's self. It is futile to go on pilgrimage. The scientists are committing the same mistake. They are exploring outer space, but are making no effort to explore the heart within. Service to society is service to God. The devotees are going from one mutt to another. Of what avail is it? The Divine resides in your heart. Seek Him within you. God is omnipresent. God is in everyone of you. All of you are Divine. Do not harm anyone. Develop such qualities. Sage Vyaasa's ultimate advice was: "Help Ever; Hurt Never."

It is disingenuous on the part of people to plead that in their busy preoccupations they have no time to think of God. Persons who waste their time watching TV or playing cards in clubs cannot pretend that they cannot spare a few moments for God. Make proper use of time. Time is Divine. Dedicate every activity to God. Seek to serve society and your fellow-beings. There is no need to worship inanimate idols, but ignore the needs of living beings around them. What kind of worship is it which ignores the needs of fellow human beings? God comes in human form. Human beings are Divine.

Once Emperor Ashoka was going round his empire together with his minister. At one place he saw a Buddhist monk. He went up to the monk and bowed his head before the feet of the monk. The minister felt unhappy over the emperor's action. "Should the head of the great Emperor Ashoka be placed at the feet of an ordinary monk?" he thought. After returning to the capital, the minister expressed, his feelings to the emperor. He told Ashoka: "The head of the emperor is supremely precious. Is it fitting that it should be placed at the feet of a mere monk?" This, he said, saddened him. Ashoka did not give any reply. He smiled and retired, to his apartment. Ashoka teaches a lesson of humility. Ashoka was waiting for a suitable time. After a few days, he summoned the minister and told him: "I want three heads." "What are they? I shall certainly get them," said the minister. Ashoka said: The heads of a goat, a tiger and a man." The minister went out, found a goat and got its head. He went hunting in a forest and obtained the head of a tiger. He went to a cemetery and got the head of a dead man. He informed the emperor that he had brought the three heads as desired by Ashoka. The emperor directed the minister to rake the three heads to the market-place, sell them and bring proceeds. In the market, the goat's head and the tiger's head found ready buyers. But there was no buyer for the human head. The minister returned to the emperor and told him that no one was willing to buy the human head. The emperor told him to give the head free to anyone who might accept it. No one came forward to accept it. The minister reported to the emperor that there was no one to receive the head even as a free gift. The emperor then told the minister: "This head has value only when there is life in the body. When life is gone, it is utterly valueless. Therefore, even while there is life, place your head at the feet of the noble ones and secure their blessings." The moral of the episode is that you must make proper use of the body while there is life in it. What is wrong in prostrating before a monk? Many atheists as well as believers criticise those who offer their prostrations to holy persons. Such prostrations represent use of the body given to human beings. What is meant by siras (the head)? It is the storehouse of intelligence. "Prajnaanam Brahma" (constant integrated awareness is Brahman) declares the Upanishath. The head bears prajnaanam as long as there is life in the body. When life leaves the body, prajnaana also goes. In the Mahaabhaaratha war, towards the end, Dhuryodhana was on his last legs. Bhima was approaching him with intense bitterness. Dhuryodhana lay on the ground gasping for breath. Bhima kicked Dhuryodhana's head with his foot. Dhuryodhana said: Bhima! I could have shown my strength if I had been in possession of my vital powers. To kick my head when I am dying, is it heroic on your part? Very soon, crows and vultures will feed on my dead body." The head has its value while there is life. Hence, the head should be used while, you are alive to acquire merit by placing it at the feet of the holy ones. This is the value of prostrating before noble souls. God is the only constant companion. Hence, while one is alive, one should engage himself in good deeds and lead a sacred and meaningful life. All relationships are confined to the living. God alone is the only unfailing

kinsman throughout life and beyond it. He is the only constant companion wherever you may be. Realise that life is impermanent. Only your good deeds will protect you. Peace, truth and virtue have to be acquired only through your actions. Achieve proximity to God and then become one with God.

Today you call yourself human. If you develop your devotion to God, you can divinise yourself.

Divinity is your real nature. This has been proclaimed by the Upanishaths in the famous declarations 'Aham Brahmaasmi,' Ayam Aathma Brahma," and "Thath-thvam-Asi" (I am Brahman, This Aathma is Brahman and That thou art). Develop this conviction, with confidence and courage.

You are prepared to believe in the words of an astrologer. Once a king Summoned an astrologer, who had acquired some reputation. The astrologer felt proud that he had been invited by the king himself. Most astrologers are full of ego and conceit. The astrologer examined the king's horoscope. Because of his conceit, he did not realise how he should speak on specific occasions.

He told the king after examining the horoscope that all his sons would die early. The king was very angry. He ordered the servants to take the astrologer to prison.

The prediction was correct, but it should have been conveyed to the king in an appropriate manner that would not cause consternation. The king summoned another astrologer to verify whether the earlier astrologer's prediction was correct. This astrologer was a man of humility. He examined the king's horoscope and said: "Mahaaraaja! You have a very long life. Your sons may not live so long." This manner of conveying the prediction was more satisfying to the king.

Sweetness in speech is essential

Sweetness in speech lies in the words you use and the manner of speech. The first astrologer, by predicting the premature deaths of the king's sons, provoked his anger and displeasure. The second astrologer conveyed the same prediction in a less unpleasant way by predicting long life for the king, though it would mean his outliving his sons.

This means that even in conveying truth one should see that it is not conveyed in a harsh or unpleasant manner. Even an unpleasant truth should be conveyed in soft words. For instance, if you see a blind man, you should not ask him brusquely: Oh you blind fellow! Come near me."

It is bound to wound his feelings. How much better is it to go near him say, "Oh Surdas! Please get up."

The words you use should be sweet and pleasing. For this, you should have love in your heart.

Only the man who fosters love in his heart is a true human being. A man without love is a lifeless corpse.

This is the New Year Day. Its name, "Eeshvara", holds the promise of all prosperity in the coming months. It is also associated with the heart which is the abode of the Eeshvara (Divine).

From today try to cleanse the heart of whatever impurities there may be in it. How is this to be done? One, by meditating on God. Secondly, by service to society By these two alone is purity of the heart achieved. If you secure the love of God, you can secure anything. There is love in you.

Use it to win the love of God.

Pray for God's love and bliss

Embodiments of love! Many pray to God all over the world. They pray for the realisation of worldly desires of one kind or another. This is not the right kind of prayer. You should pray to God for the grace of His love. That love is everlasting. It is infinite.

God has another attribute. He is the embodiment of bliss. He is Sath-Chith-Aanandha (Being-Awareness-Bliss). Pray to God to confer that bliss on you. God's bliss is boundless and everlasting. All mundane pleasures are transient and ephemeral. Only he is a true devotee who prays to God for his love and bliss. One who prays for other trivial things is no devotee at all.

Worldly benefits come and go. They are not the things for which you should pray. Seek what is eternal.

Pray for God's love and bliss. Seek to realise your Divinity. Then you will experience the Divine in the entire cosmos. You will experience the bliss that fills the universe.

When you see the world with the eye of divine bliss, you will find bliss everywhere. If there is hatred in your vision, you will see hatred everywhere. Hence, change your vision to start with.

Look at the world with the vision of peace, love and compassion. Then the whole world will appear loving and peaceful. When your heart is filled with love, you will experience the Divine in the entire cosmos. See the Divine in everyone. Eschew hatred and ill-will.

After years of devotion, many still lack a broad outlook and an all-encompassing love.

Embodiments of love? Promote love in your hearts incessantly---the love that is immortal and infinite.

Discourse in the Sai Ramesh Hall, Brindhaavan, on 7-4-1997.

Young men have to spring into the sphere of action and strive to the best for the building up of a happy peaceful world. They must shed the desire for power. The desire to uproot corruption and immorality, and the urge to work hard should firmly be implanted in the heart of every student. Mother India's future depends on them and she is waiting for them. Even as it is the duty of children to serve and please their mother, it is the bounden duty of every child of Mother India to make her happy. To serve the Motherland selflessly should be the sacred ideal of one's life.

9. The Saints of Thamilnadu

EMBODIMENTS of love! The human being is a combination of Naithikam (morality), Dharma (righteousness) and Adhyaathmikam (spirituality). All three constituents are con-rained in man.

Hence, to recognise the Divine in man, his humanness should not be divorced from his Divinity.

Divinity is immanent in man. Men consider themselves as mere human beings. This is nor so.

All of them are manifestations of the Divine. It is because men do not recognise this fact, all kinds of confusions arise in respect of human activities in the phenomenal world. Every person should develop the awareness that he is Brahman-- "Aham Brahmaasmi." Only then will he understand his true nature. God is not distinct and apart from man. Bhaarith has been conveying profound truths to the world from ancient times. It proclaimed the universal message: Lokaassamasthaas-sukhino bhavanthu" ("Let all people everywhere be happy"). Unfortunately, because of attachment to the things of the world, the people have lost this sense of universal well-being and are wasting their precious lives. Worldly wealth and comforts are transient. Bhaarithheeya culture has glorified adherence to Truth and Righteousness.

There is nothing greater than forbearance

God is the Indweller in the human heart (spiritual heart). There is no meaning in going elsewhere in search of God. Realising this, men should lead a life of kindness to all beings. A man without kindness is an animal.

There was once a person in Thamilnadu who belonged to a place named Puumpuhaar on the banks of the river Kaaveri. He used to earn a living by weaving cloth and selling it. In the same place there was a rich man whose son was a naughty boy. This lad came to the weaver and asked what was price of the sari he was selling. The man replied: "Three rupees" (the price of those days). The lad tore the sari into half and asked what was the price of half the sari. The weaver replied- "A rupee and a half." The lad tore it again into two and asked what was the price of the torn piece. The man replied-"It is worth twelve annas" (three-fourths of a rupee). The weaver did not get angry at the lad's behaviour. He was calm and unruffled. The young lad was astonished.

He asked the weaver: "How did you acquire this quality of Kshama (forbearance)?" The man replied: "Forbearance is truth. It is right conduct. It is non-violence. It is a source of joy. It is heaven itself. It is the summum bonum in this world. There is nothing greater than forbearance in this world."

The weaver composed numerous poems in praise of Kshama (forbearance). This work is known as "Thiruvaachakam." Its author is none other than the Saint Maanikkavaachakar.

Maanikkavaachakar, who achieved the highest goal of life by the quality of forbearance, brought glory to Thamilnadu by his devotional songs. Over the centuries many other saints known as Aalvaars were born in Thamilnadu. "Everything belongs to God"

Here is another example: Among the various Thamil kingdoms, the reign of Paandyan Kings is famous. One of the paandyan rulers wished to develop his kingdom by breeding horses. He had a young minister in his court. He was a man of character, full of piety and devotion. He led a pure life. He led a life of integrity and dedication. The king gave him the necessary money and commissioned him to purchase horses. The minister set out on his mission with his escorts. On the way he saw a Shiva temple in ruins. There he saw a holy man, Shivayogi. Conversing with the yogi and listening to his reachings, the minister stayed with him as a disciple. He lost interest in the mission of buying horses. He was immersed in the contemplation of God. He used the money he had brought with him for the renovation of the Shiva temple. This news reached the Paandyan King. He summoned the minister and charged him with misusing the money that had been given to him for buying horses. The minister replied: "I have not misused the money. Everything belongs to God. I have used the money as an offering to God."

The king asked: "Who gave you the money?" he replied: "It all came from God. You did not cam it. It was all a gift from God. And I offered it to God".

The king sent the minister to prison. But because an innocent man had been sent to jail, the king could nor sleep or rake food. The prisoner was singing poems in praise of God. These poems have become famous as "Thirumanthram." This work is esteemed as another Vedha in Thamilnadu. The author is known as Thirumuular.

Such a sacred land as Thamilnadu has witnessed a decline in spirituality. Selfishness is rampant.

Very few are filled with fear of sin or love of God. Fear of sin, love of God and morality in society have become scarce. People can experience God if they adhere to the path of truth. Very few pray to God for His grace. Most people pray for material benefits which are ephemeral. The sacred and precious human life is being wasted in the pursuit of trifles. Men are stricken with the maladies of the craze for wealth and power. What is earned should be used for the benefit of the society

There is one other disease with which all are afflicted to varying degrees. It is the disease of Ahamkaara (egoism). There is no basis at all-for this conceit. There is no mason at all for anyone feeling proud about one's wealth or any other possession. The only thing about which one should feel proud is one's goodness. People should cultivate love and cherish the feeling of oneness with all beings.

Embodiments of love! All your bhajans, penances and the like are of-no avail unless you have a pure heart filled with love. It is like preparing food in an untinned vessel. It is bound to get spoilt.

It is to develop a loving heart that you have to embark on the spiritual path. This pure love is the direct path to God. It is love which is unbounded and divine.

The love of God should not depend on whether your prayers are fulfilled or not. Remember what ordeals the sages and saints passed through in their devotion to God. They braved all difficulties and earned lasting fame as great devotees. Life is a challenge- Meet it! Life is a game- Play it!

Life is love- Enjoy it! Life is Awareness! The best way to love God is to love all, serve all.

Discourse in Sundharam, Madras, on 10-4-1997

10. Serve the Nation with pure hearts
Life in this world is impermanent;
Youth and wealth are transient;
Wife and children are not lasting;
Righteousness and renown alone are lasting.

IN this mundane world, human life is like a water bubble. Truth is like a fleeting cloud that does not stay long. Wealth is impermanent. Wife and children are equally impermanent. Dharma and fame are the only permanent things in the world.

Fire emerges from the rubbing of two sticks.
Butter emerges from the churning of milk.
By constant meditation on name and form
Divinity is experienced.

Listen, oh valiant son of Bhaarith! (Thelugu poem).

God is omnipresent. Just as there can be no light rays without the stra, this cosmos cannot exist without God.

In the modern age young people consider the phenomenal world as the only reality. This is not so. "Having taken birth in this impermanent and sorry world, adore Me," says Krishna in the Geetha.

The life span of man is melting away every moment like a block of ice. Youth is transient. The only permanent and changeless entity is the Divine. Forgetting this, man is going after fleeting, trivial pleasures.

What is it that is permanent in this world? What is the purpose of human life? When one puts these questions, he does not get the right answers. Men pursue studies, jobs, wife and children in the search for happiness. They find no peace in any of these. Why? Desires are the cause of peacelessness. Without purifying the heart, all desires can only lead to unrest. Moreover, impurity in the heart is the source of many diseases. When the heart is pure, man will be free from disease.

How, then, is the heart to be purified? There is no other way except cherishing godly thoughts.

All other rituals are of no avail except to provide temporary mental satisfaction. But the mind does not get satisfied easily. It is continually wavering and is uncontrollable. What should be done is to divert the mind towards God.

The greatness of Ramaa's name

Once, a lady approached Kaushalya. When Kaushalya enquired who she was, the lady replied:

"Mother! Don't you know that my son leapt over the sea in one jump? I am the mother of Hanumaan."

A short while later, another lady came there. She informed Kaushalya that the sea over which Hanumaan leapt in one hop, was drunk by her son in one gulp. "I am the mother of Agasthya, who performed this feat," she said. Kaushalya smiled on hearing their claims. She said: For your son leaping over the sea or for your son drinking the waters in one gulp, it was the name of Raamachandhra which made it possible. I am the mother of Raama." The three ladies were conversing in this manner. There is a saying that when three ladies meet even stars will tumble down during the day! While they were discussing who among them was great, Raama joined them. "What are you discussing?" He asked. Kaushalya said: "Son! By chanting your name Hanumaan was able to leap over the sea. This was possible because of your grace." She went on: "Again, by the power of your name, Agasthya drank the sea in one gulp. This also was by your grace. I am supremely fortunate in giving birth to such a son." Raama, who was utterly egoless, then told the three ladies: These fears are not the result of my grace. This body was given the name Raama at birth. It is the power of this name that has enabled them to accomplish such heroic feats. It is because this name was given to me I was able to overcome the valiant Raavana." Thus, the name of the Lord is all powerful. By chanting the name of God, all latent powers in man are awakened. Only the Divine name helped Dhiraupadhi. You all know Dhiraupadhi. Her husbands were great heroes including the powerful Bhima and the valiant Arjuna. In their presence, Dhuryodhana sought to humiliate Dhiraupadhi in the open assembly. Neither the powerful Bhima, nor valiant Arjuna, nor the very embodiment of Dharma, Yudhishtira, ventured to come to her rescue. Ultimately she cried out: "Oh Krishna! The kinsman of the hapless!" Physical prowess did not come to the rescue of Dhiraupadhi. Only the name of the Divine came to her help. People tend to treat lightly the name of the Lord. They do not realise the potency of the two syllables in the name of the Lord. All the powers of the cosmos are contained in those two letters. You must understand properly the significance of the name and use it the right way. Naamasmarana (chanting the Lord's name), is the panacea. It is the easiest path to Godrealisation. It is the boat that will take people across the ocean of mundane existence. How does the chanting of the Lord's name transform the devotee? Every word that we utter sets in motion waves that fill the world. The radio waves sent out from the broadcasting station in Delhi reach out to every part of the world. Naamasmarana is the best way to purify the heart. Today the atmosphere is filled with the discordant and disturbing noises of various kinds. These radio waves get into the minds of people and pollute their thoughts. Hence, if we wish to listen to pure sounds, the atmosphere must be free from pollution. The pollution cycle starts from smoke and clouds and ends in the food we eat. Hence the state of our minds depends on the kind of food we consume. The nature of the food depends on the environment. The environment is determined by human actions. Today men's actions are not along right lines. Most devotees are like the fruits of the fig tree' attractive to look at from the outside, but infested with worms inside. Devotees should strive to purify their hearts. For this purpose they have to chant the Lord's name. The effect of Naamasmarana has to be properly understood. Chanting the Lord's name purifies the environment. The first step is to purify one's own heart. Transform yourself before you set out to transform others. The role of bhajans in purifying the atmosphere should be recognised. In this context, the role of community singing should be understood. Singing bhajans in your home, you may indulge in your fancies and derive whatever joy you get therefrom. Sankeerthan (community singing) calls for whole-hearted, soul-ful singing, which moves the hearts of the listeners. Bhajans should not be a routine ritual. You must put your heart and soul into the singing. In reciting the names of the Lord you have to bear in mind another her. When you recite the names thousands of devotees are listening. You must chant names which are familiar to all of them. You should not expect people to follow whatever you sing. You should see that they can easily respond to your song. The names you chant should be short and sweet. If you use big words and complicated terms, the devotees will not be able to follow you. In that situation they may get depressed. What can they do when they do not hear you properly and cannot respond in chorus? They get disgusted. Simplify the bhajans. Therefore, in your bhajans use short names like Raama, Krishna, Allah, Yesu and so on. Then all would be able to follow you with ease. If you use high-sounding words, few can follow you.

Eschew any aversion to any faith or nation. Have no ill-will towards anyone. Do not cause hurt to anyone. Look upon all alike. This feeling of oneness should spread all over the world.

Krishna declared: "The entire cosmos is sustained by a fragment of my potency" This means that the Divine permeates the entire cosmos. What, then, is our duty? To fill our hearts with love.

Then the whole universe will be filled with love.

There is no use in singing bhajans if the singers hearts are filled with jealousy and hatred.

There is no greater spiritual recipe for people in the Kali Age than the chanting of Hari's naama.

Foolish people speak derisively about the bhajans conducted in the presence of Svaami. They have no idea of the joy derived by the devotees from the singing of the Lord's name.

Will the bees which are fond of honey

in the lotus go after any other flowers?

By constant eating even the bitter leaves of the neem tree acquire a sweetness of their own.

By spiritual saadhana all objectives are achieved.

(Thelugu poem).

Aadhi Shankaraacharya's "Bhagovindham"

Wherein lies the greatness of chanting the Lord's name? This was the discovery made by Aadhi

Shankaraacharya, the supreme exponent of Adhvaita (Non-dualism), who declared that there was only one Absolute and no second. Even he had to seek recourse to dualism because he found that apart from chanting the Lord's name there was no easy way to experience the Divine. Our of this conviction was born the famous devotional song

"Bhagovindham" (Svaami sang stanzas from the song).

The message of the song is clear. There is no meaning in dry scholarship. The only thing that will save a man in his last moments is adoration of Govindha.

Shankara called upon youth to realise that there is no room for feeling proud about one's youth and wealth, which may vanish in one moment in course of time.

Hence, when participating in bhajans, you should enjoy the singing and share that joy with others. Do not be indifferent to the reactions of others to your singing. Leaders in bhajans should realise that many overseas devotees are deeply interested in bhajans and are eager to take part in them. The bhajans should be simple and easy for them to follow.

The goal of all religions is one. The underlying meaning of all names is the same. You must appreciate this oneness. Whatever be the name used, all are children of one God. All belong to the caste of humanity. The distinctions between religions are the result of historical and geographical factors. People may use diverse names for God, but God is one alone.

Having been born in Bhaarath, you may feel legitimately proud about Bhaaratheeya culture. But mere birth, alone does not make one a true Bhaaratheeya. All those who adhere to Sathya and Dharma. (Truth and Right conduct) are Bhaaratheeyas. They may belong to any country--

America, Japan or Germany. Truth is God. This is the cardinal principle of Bhaarath.

Recognising this fact, people must strive to spread the message to all.

Two ways of God-realisation-devotion and knowledge

Sai devotees should understand the essence of our culture. Sacrifice and service are the two basic elements.

There are two ways of God-realisation. One is the path of devotion where the devotee considers himself a servant of God. By repeatedly declaring, Dhaasoham (I am your servant) he goes on reducing his ego till the bondage of worldly attachment falls off. The other means is Jnaanamaarga

(the path of knowledge). By constantly developing the sense of oneness with the Divine-

-Shivoham (I am the Divine) his consciousness expands to the point where it becomes one with the universal consciousness and all worldly bonds are snapped.

Give no room for the ego. If any one examines his position in this vast cosmos, he will realise his infinitesimal smallness. Egoism arises out of ignorance. Expel the ego and develop love. With love, develop the spirit of sacrifice. Sacrifice alone can confer immortality, says the Upanishath.

Sacrifice can confer bliss and health. Experience the joy of sharing. Renunciation is the key to sound health.

Do not indulge in criticism of others. Count your own faults and rectify them. See the Divine in one and all.

Elevate the quality of human life by living in amity with all. Chanting the name of God is the sure means of cultivating this universal love.

Melodious music can move the Lord

There is special merit in singing the Lord's name with due regard for melody and rhythm. The Lord is a lover of music. Moreover, when singing is done with fervour, it helps to drive out all bad thoughts from the mind.

Melodious music can move the Lord and move all the participants.

(Svaami demonstrated the effect of melodious singing by rendering the song; "Raama! nannu-kaapaadumaa" -- 'Oh Raama, protect me'). Melodious music will move the Lord Himself. Hence, when you take part in bhajans sing with all your heart and soul. You must sing with such love for the Divine that you forger yourself. When you sing the praise of God with a pure heart, you will purify your environment, your country and the world.

People are looking forward to April 14th as the New Year Day. The name of the new year is "Eeshvara." What does Eeshvara mean? As Chittibabu (who spoke earlier in Thamil) said, the Lord is "Ammal-Appa" (mother and father). Their coming together is represented by the concept of "Ardhanaareeshvara" --- the Divine couple in one body. Every man is a symbol of "Ardhanaareeshvara". The body is inert. The Aathma is Consciousness. The body is Prakrithi (Nature). The Aathma is Eeshvara. The combination of Prakrithi and Paramaathma constitutes humanness.

Therefore, you should regard yourself as a symbol of "Ardhanaareeshvara" (The Divine Couple in one body). Do good and reap good results As the new year approaches people are wondering what it has in store for them. It is not the year that brings good or ill. Your actions determine what you will get. What have the years that have gone brought you? Each year brings you the fruits of your past actions. Do good and reap good results.

Your conduct should be good, befitting your human condition. Revere elders. Love all. Honour your nation. Give up attachment to the body. Then you will have fulfilment in life.

You all know what troubles the country is going through on account of the political situation. The basic cause is selfishness. Leaders are fighting for their own personal ends and not for the sake of the country. No one seems to be bothered about what is happening to the society, to the people and the country. "My power and my position" is all that each one is concerned about.

How long will the chair last? When the body itself is impermanent, what is the meaning in chasing the chair? Hence, all should develop a broad outlook. Banish narrow considerations. From the new year, cherish broad ideas, truthful ideas, loving thoughts and noble ideals.

Only then the nation will be peaceful and prosperous.

Bhaarath lacks nothing by way of natural endowments. It is a misfortune that it is in its present plight today. Realise the sacredness and great culture of Bhaarath. I bless you all that from the new year you should lead pure lives chanting the Lord's name and promote the prosperity of the country.

Discourse in Sundharam, Madras, on 11-4-1997.

11. The perennial message of the Raama story In this phenomenal world, all forms manifest peace. All names are auspicious.

Sath-Chith-Anandha express the One Absolute. Its attributes are: Truth, Beauty, Goodness. The Supreme, that is to be Comprehended through the Vedhas. Took birth as the son of Dhatharatha. Became the soul of Raamaayana of Vaalmeeki (Sanskrit verses).

VAALMEEKI proclaimed in the Raamaayana that the supreme Lord took His birth as the son of Dhatharatha and shone as the embodiment of the Vedhas. Nevertheless Vaalmeeki described the saga of Raama as that of an ordinary human being. Vaalmeeki saw the Divine in Raama as an ordinary human being. Raavana saw Raama entirely as a mere man. The entire Raamaayana is like a game of chess. The scene in the Raamaayana is a kind of battlefield. It is a battlefield where the forces of right and wrong are waging war. Raama represents righteousness and Raavana represents unrighteousness. The battle between the two is the war fought on the battlefield. Selfish desire is the root cause of Raavana's ruin Raavana taught a great lesson to the world. He exclaimed: "Oh men! Do not live as I have lived and ruin your lives." What is the root cause of Raavana's ruin? Unable to conquer his desires, unwilling to get rid of his impulses, he ruined his entire clan. His sons were killed. His brother and other kinsmen were killed and ultimately his country itself was reduced to ashes. Raavana confessed- "In the end I ruined myself." This was the message Raavana gave to his countrymen in his last moments.

Only by suppressing desires does a man manifest his humanness. A man who is unable to put an end to his desires, puts an end to himself. A good man by his good conduct achieves greatness. Raavana sought to achieve greatness but did not strive to lead a good life.

Raama's career is different. He aspired only to be a good man and did not seek greatness.

The world today is in dire need of the message of the Raama story. For one thing, sons today do not follow the injunctions of their fathers. Fathers do not set the right example to the children.

Disciples do not respect the preceptors properly. Preceptors do not treat the disciples with affection. There is no love lost even between friends. Relations are estranged among themselves.

In all fields of life---in the administration, in agriculture or in business or politics-----discord is rampant. Divisions and conflict prevail in social, political and even spiritual fields. If you enquire into the causes for this situation you find that selfishness is at the root of it all.

The basic elements are common to all mankind. The world itself is one family. All men are brothers. Raama preached to the world this basic truth. He taught the world the duties of everyday life, the social duties and family obligations. This triple stream of duties is the message of the Raamaayana. Whoever bathes in this triple stream is absolved of his sins and is redeemed.

Such a great work as the Raamaayana has to be read, reread and lived upto by everyone.

The great qualities of Raama are countless

It is impossible to describe the greatness of the life of Raama. The great qualities of Raama are countless.

Vaalmeeki wrote his Raamaayana while Raama was still reigning over the kingdom. Raama was ruling over Ayodhya at that time. What does Ayodhya signify? It symbolises the place which cannot be penetrated by evil forces and which is invincible. That place is the heart. That is the place where Raama resides.

What is needed today is to make every human heart an Ayodhya. It should be free from any kind of pollution. It should be pure and firm. Then there will be room in it for the story of Raama to enter.

After completing his great epic, Vaalmeeki was considering how to make it known to the world and how to sanctify the lives of people by spreading its message. The Raamaayana evokes joy in the listeners by the very sweetness of its poetry. Its shlokas (verses) relieve people of their sorrow. Kusha and Lava (the sons of Seetha) who were dressed like ascetics and who could sing melodiously and move the hearts of the listeners by their charming music, came to Vaalmeeki and offered their salutations to the sage. The two children were like twin birds. They were extraordinary children. They were utterly fearless. They would not shrink from anyone out of fear.

When the two appeared before Vaalmeeki, the sage told them-"Children! I have composed the Raamaayana with a pure and unsullied heart through arduous effort. You should proclaim to the world this sacred story." Lava and Kusha reverentially accepted the sage's command. They offered their pranaams (salutations) to Vaalmeeki and said: "Guruji! Give us your benediction.

We shall go forth into the world and make the Raamaayana known to every nook and corner of the land."

At one place, many sages had come together in a big assembly. Lava and Kusha went to them and sang the Raamaayana in their sweet voice. The sages listened to their recitation in rapture, oblivious to everything. They felt that such moving story should be propagated to the whole world.

The Raamaayana in blissful song

The two boys went along singing and entered Ayodhya. Standing in the heart of the city they went on singing the Raamaayana.

All the people strolling on the road stopped to listen to the song. They were rooted to their places and were lost in the music of the great epic. This is known as Bhaava-samaadhi (the state of blissful feeling). The hearts of the listeners were filled with the bliss of the soulful music. At that moment Raama was coming in his chariot to the spot. He heard the singing. Returning to the palace, he sent word to the two boys to come to his palace for singing their songs. In this manner

Lava and Kusha sang the story of Raama in a manner that moved the hearts of one and all--from commoners to King Raama himself.

Raama story: great ordeals met with fortitude

Thus Raama himself enjoyed the narration of his story in song. He posed as if he did not know his own story. In this context, the human aspect of Raama should be noted. He lived like a common man, but ordinary men did not live like Raama. That is the secret of this phenomenon.

Though Raama was divine, he moved about like an ordinary man. Common men should live like Raama to manifest their divinity. It is not enough to recognise the human aspects of Raama.

People should also realise the divinity in everyone.

Raama dwells in the heart of everyone. "Ramayathi ithi Raamah"

(Raama is the one who pleases). The word Raama has another meaning. It refers to a three (woman). Raamaayana means that it is the story of Seetha. Hence Raamaayana is esteemed as the story of both Raama and Seetha.

In the sacred epic of Raamaayana many profound secrets and truths are embedded. But Raama did not impart these secrets to anyone at anytime. What is the reason? A ripe fruit is bound to fall. Raama felt that people will realise the truth spontaneously when their hearts ripen in due course. Because Raama faced all the ordeals, troubles and difficulties of life with great fortitude, he was hailed as Raamachandhrumurthi. Raama taught the world how to remain unruffled in the presence of difficulties or joys, in pain or pleasure. He responded with a smile to any criticism.

He did not exult over praise. Thus he displayed total equanimity in weal or woe, success or defeat, gain or loss. This is the attitude which everyone should cultivate.

Today devotees tend to get elated when they experience pleasure and get depressed when they face adversity. This is the result of attachment to the body. In Raama's days, there was not this body consciousness. People were indifferent to the body. They were immersed in Aathmaanandam (the bliss of the Spirit).

Aathmaabhiraama and Abhinaya-raama (Raama the Divine Spirit and Raama the actor). Raama acted his role without attachment to the body. People today perform many spiritual exercises.

They study many scriptures and engage themselves in meditation and bhajans. They sing the glories of God and offer prayers. All these are external exercises. No one asks himself what for all these are being done and for whose sake. They are being done with selfish interests in view.

Revere the Guru truly and not out of self interest

There used to be a preceptor and a disciple. The disciple used to carry out the preceptor's commands. He did not know what for he was doing all that the guru asked him to shut himself in a room and perform saadhana. The disciple was doing as he was told. Meditation had to be done three times a day--morning, noon and evening--according to the guru's directives.

One day he was offering worship to the guru at noon. At that moment the guru came to his house. It was very warm outside. The heat was scorching the feet. The preceptor could not bear the heat and cried out- "Shishya! Shishya!" and knocked at the door.

The disciple asked from inside, "Who are you? You are disturbing my puuja." The preceptor answered. "I am your guru." The disciple said: "You should not interfere with my saadhana. Please wait for a while."

The guru asked- "Whom are you worshipping?" The disciple replied, "I am worshipping you."

The disciple was worshipping the guru, but kept him standing in the scorching heat. This is the way spiritual saadhana is being done these days. What is the purpose of worshipping the guru ?

Why all this saadhana? They are being done out of self-interest and not to revere the guru truly.

Likewise, what is the use of claiming to worship Raama without realising Raama as the indweller in the heart? It is only a physical exercise related to the body. The first requisite for all spiritual aspirants is Aathma-abhimaanam (spiritual yearning). Attachment to the body should be given up.

True devotion calls for control over senses

It was because of his attachment to the body that Raavana was a prey, to all kinds of troubles.

This was the message given by Raavana: "Oh people! Because I could not kill my bodily impulses I killed myself. I destroyed my entire breed. Hence, be warned from my fate."

Raama's message was: Citizens! Live like me and achieve a worthy end."

Raavana met with a Dhurgathi (bad end). Raama achieved a Sadhgathi (glorious destiny).

Raavana had Dhurmathi (a wicked mind). Raama's was a Sumathi (pure mind). Raama's word's were righteous. Raavana's words were evil.

Hence, people should strive to have pure minds. People take any number of births but there is no transformation of their minds. Without such transformation all spiritual practices are utterly useless. The Raama principle offers to the people a sacred path to God-realization.

After the completion of his Yaaga (sacrifice), Vishvaamithra took Raama and Lakshmana to Mithila. Both of them saw the beautiful places in Mithila. They knew that they would have to witness the lifting of Shiva's bow the next day and then return to Ayodhya. They wanted to go round, the great city of Janaka. Raama told Lakshmana that they were under the care of Vishvaamithra and should not do anything without the permission of the guru (sage). They approached the sage with their request. He told them, "You have incarnated on earth to protect all the world and put down the evil forces. Do go round the city of Mithila and sanctify all the people of the city"

Raama and Lakshmana set out to go round the city. As they were going, it seemed as if they were illuminating every place where they went. Everywhere the people looked at them without a wink. Children playing on the streets rushed towards them on seeing them and lovingly clasped their hands. "Uncles! Where from have you come? Please visit our homes," cried all the children.

Everyone was attracted by the brothers. Ladies going on the toads were keen to see the beautiful eyes of the two brothers. They scattered flowers in front of them hoping that Raama would look at them. But Raama never looked at women. He went on with his head bowed. This was one of the lessons taught by Raama. True devotion calls for control over the senses (the eyes, the ears, speech, etc.) Because Raama had control over senses, he could win the hand of Seetha (daughter of the Earth). If we wish to control the external world, we have to control our vision. One who has no control over his vision becomes a slave to the world. Such profound lessons can be gathered from the illustrious story of Raama.

Dhasharatha's readiness to hand over rulership to Raama

Here is another episode- Dhasharatha was sleeping in his palace. He had a dream. In that dream he saw that the whole ocean had dried up, the moon was falling in a myriad pieces, an elephant in rut was tumbling down and collapsing, with the howdah on its back falling apart. He woke up with a start. "What is all this? It is said that a dream in the early hours of the morning portends what is to happen. It is now the fourth quarter of the night. What does this dream portend?"

thought Dhasharatha. He got up from his bed. He stood before a mirror. He noticed a bizarre change in his face. He saw grey hairs stretching out between his two ears. He realised that old age was creeping on him. He tried to drink a glass of water. He noticed that his hand was trembling. He could see that his organs were beginning to fail. He felt that he could carry on his reign as long as his senses were perfect. But now they were declining.

He went out and summoned all his ministers and the preceptor. He told them: "I have reigned for as long as I could. I sought always to please my subjects in every way. I looked after their welfare as that of my own children. This kind of feeling is possessed only by Raama. The time is appropriate to install Raama as the heir to the throne."

The subjects and ministers present suggested that the king was fit to continue to rule for some more time. Dhasharatha felt that perhaps they were not in favour of Raama's coronation as king.

They submitted to the king: "Mahaaraaja! We are well aware of Raama's sterling qualities. But he is still inexperienced in the arts of administration. You may install him as Yuvaraja (Crown Prince) and give him guidance."

But Dhasharatha told them that when his senses had begun to weaken, it was not proper for him to continue as king.

Sing the glories of the Lord like Lava and Kusha

Today, people who have lost their sight, are hard of hearing and are not able to move about, still want to stick to their offices. The reign, of Dhasharatha was different. He was a Dhaarmik ruler.

It was a government based on justice and morality. When Lava and Kusha went about singing the glories of Raama they had no nervousness or apprehension. Today, young persons hesitate to put on any auspicious marks on the forehead when they visit temples and do not venture to fold their palms in reverence when they meet elders. On the contrary, Lava and Kusha forgot all bodily considerations and sang from their hearts the glory of Raama. They thus taught what is relevant to youths today--the path to a God-oriented life. There is nothing greater than chanting the name of the Lord.

People are eager to listen to gossip. But the ears are deaf to the sweet names of God. You do not hesitate to go to the films endlessly; But your eyes find it hard to look at God in the sanctum. What for are the eyes given? What for do you have cars? You should remember God's name and go to the abode of God.

In this manner Lava and Kusha went about glorifying the greatness of Raama joyously and telling the people how they should adore God.

Naamasmarana should emanate from the heart

Today's youth should take a resolve to spread the love of God among the people without any hesitations or fear. They should make every man realise the sweetness of the Lord's name, the divinity enshrined in it and the purity associated with it. These feelings should emanate from the heart. That is true naamasmarana (reciting the Lord's name).

The Raamaayana propagated the great ideals of Raama in song and story. Raama was ever auspicious, ever the heroic wielder of the bow (Kodhanda-Raama), ever the anointed ruler

(Pattaabhi-Raama), and the Divine indweller in the heart. People have to enthrone Him in their hearts and adore Him. Thyaagaraaja grew ecstatic when he sang about Raama and His various attributes and glories. (Svaami sang melliflously Thyaagaraaja's song beginning with the words:

"Raama! Kodhanda Raama! Raama! Pattaabhiraama!"----

"Raama! You stand by the word you have given. For me, you are the only wealth. Your song is the only song. Your path is the only path. Raama! You are Seethapathi (the consort of seetha). You are the Gathi (the goal). I bow to you. I surrender to you, Oh Raama. Raama! Your name is supreme.

Raama! Thoughts of you are enough. Raama! I am yours. Please speak to me.")

The great devotees of Kaama revelled in singing the glories of Raama in this manner.

Such a moving and inspiring story as the epic of Raama cannot be found in any other country or language. Even after thousands of years, the story of Raama continues to be related in innumerable villages and cities.

Experience Raama in your heart

In Bhaarith today there is no place where Raama's name is not chanted or dhaanam (charity) is not practised. Even in the tiniest hamlet there will be a small Raama temple. But these temples are not so very important. The temple in which Raama should be worshipped is your heart. God is the Hridhayaavaasi (dweller in the heart). You need not seek Raama anywhere else. Without going out anywhere, without incurring any expense, you can experience Raama in your heart and achieve liberation.

Today, on Shri Raamanavami Day, in spite of the good fortune of being born in the Raama

Ianmabhuumi (sacred birth place of Raama) you are not recognising the Raama Principle. There is nothing great about celebrating the birthdays of great persons. You must put into practice the teachings of those great figures. What is the use in celebrating birthdays and ignoring the teachings? Practice is the touchstone of devotion.

Knowing the ephemeral nature of the body, people should follow the conscience and lead a godly life. That is true devotion to Raama. You should dedicate your body, mind and everything, to God.

God is the embodiment of love. You should promote love in your hearts. Turn your mind to God

before the end comes. It may come at any time.

Outgrow body consciousness in divine feelings

Vaalmeeki prostrated before Raama and confessed- "I have done no penance or spiritual experiences of any kind. By the constant chanting of your name I have been blessed with this beautiful experience. In my youth I had committed many atrocities and incurred many sins out of selfish motives. But, ultimately, chanting your name, I forgot my body altogether. An anthill grew over me. But the name Raama came out of it."

That is what everyone should aim at. Outgrow the body consciousness and merge in the Raama principle. You must eschew all worldly attachments and fix your mind on God.

Make good use of the Sai who has come to you.

Adore the feet of this Lord at Parthi.

Offer your devotion and achieve liberation.

Do-not go after all and sundry.

Awake! Abandon your delusion.

(Thelugu poem)

Develop such divine feelings. Do not go after power and pelf. The people of Ayodhya

concentrated on their dutes. They considered duty as worship.

When Raama was leaving for the forest the people of Ayodhya were in deep distress. They did not want to stay in Ayodhya without Raama there. Every man, woman and child was in agony at that time. That was the intensity of their devotion to Raama. The same devotion should fill your hearts today.

Dhasharatha had eight dedicated and truthful ministers. He had great sages like Vasishta and Vaamadheva as preceptors. If we had such. ministers and preceptors today we can have Raama

Raaiya.

Develop faith in Raama and cultivate love for Raama. Love and faith are most important.

Discourse in Sai Ramesh Hall, Brindhaavan, on 16-4-1997.

You have to busy yourselves with activity in order to use time and skill to the best advantage. That is your duty, and duty is God. The dull and the inert will hesitate to be active, for fear of exhaustion or failure or loss. The emotional, passionate individuals will plunge headlong and crave for quick results and will be disappointed if they do not come in. The balanced persons will be active, because it is their duty; they will not be agitated by anything failure or success. The godly will take up activity as a means of worshipping God and they leave the results to God. They know that they are but instruments in the hands of God.

12. Mother's Love and Divine Grace

EMBODIMENTS of Love! There is no nobler quality in the world than love. It is wisdom. It is righteousness. It is wealth. It is Truth. Everything is permeated with love. Everything in the cosmos arises from love, grows by love and merges in love. Every human being is born from the mother's womb. He is fostered by the mother's love and enjoys many things in life because of the mother. He enjoys, all happiness in life because of the mother's love. Hence, there is no higher divinity than the mother. But this divinity relates to the body alone. Man has to recognise the truth that the food which sustains his body is derived from the sun. The sun helps food crops to grow. Hence, without the sun man cannot have food to sustain life. The term Sathyam (Truth) is made up of three syllables which represent life, food and the sun. It follows that man is inherently an embodiment of truth. As such, he should lead a life based on truth. Unfortunately, man today leads a life divorced from truth. Consequently, he becomes a prey to innumerable troubles. He has no peace. He is racked continually by many afflictions. Man has to recognise the significance of Love and Truth, which are fundamental to human existence. The mother represents these two basic qualities. Love the mother and revere the father Raama attained godhood because he was the son of Kaushalya Lava and Kusha became heroic children because of their great mother, Seetha Dhevi. It is the noble thoughts of the mother which make the children great. A mother may go wrong in other respects, but she will always strive for the well-being of her children. Hence every son has to love the mother as the primary duty. Then he should love the father and revere the preceptor. The mother confers the body. The father protects it. The preceptor imparts knowledge and wisdom. For every human being all three are essential for getting on in the world. Many great men have embarked on noble deeds after securing the blessing of their mothers. For instance, before going to battle to fight against the demon, Taarakaasura, Sanat Kumaara got the blessings of his mother, Gowri. Similarly, Parasuraama received his mother's blessings before he went to fight his foes. Likewise, Vinatha blessed her son Garuda. Every mother similarly blesses her son by saying: "Shri Raama Raksha" (May Shri Raama protect you always.) It is because of the blessings of noble mothers, the wives of great sages, that many men were able to perform heroic deeds. Shankaraachaarya taught that sons who did not get the blessings of the mothers suffered from various vicissitudes in life. Those who had the blessings of their mothers often secured freedom from rebirth. Many high-souled men have extolled the greatness and power of mothers. It is the foremost duty of children to secure the blessings of their mothers for their worldly well-being. However, spiritually man's obligation is different, according to Vedhaantha. Here, there is room in the heart only for the love of God. Affection for the mother and reverence for the father are necessary. But parents and preceptor are transient. Even friends are impermanent. God alone is permanent and unfailing and God alone should have the permanent place in the heart. Use the body as a divine instrument. The human body acquires its sacredness from the fact that it is the abode of the Divine. The Geetha refers to the body as Kshethra (sacred field) and the Divine Indweller as the Kshethrajna. Because of the sacredness of the body, it should be used properly as an instrument of the Divine. Man should develop faith in God. Without that faith, life will be meaningless. Man can have no happiness or satisfaction in life without the grace of God. Men today are too much immersed in affairs of the world. The result is they have no peace of mind. They can have peace only from the supreme embodiment of peace: God. He is the abode of infinite love and enduring peace. God's love should be secured by chanting the Lord's name. You should be grateful to your mother for endowing you with a body which enables you to chant the Lord's name. The greatness of the Lord's name is illustrated by the following episode. Once, Hanumaan's mother Anjana, went to Kaushalya because her son was a great devotee of Raama. Kaushalya did not know Anjana and so she asked Anjana who she was in a sweet tone. Anjana was proud about her valorous son. She replied: "Mother! Have you not heard about me? Hanumaan is my son. He leapt over the ocean in one jump. How is it that you did not know about one who had performed such a great feat? Staying in this palace you did not know about my son?" Kaushalya replied in a soothing tone- "Dear mother! I now know that Hanumaan is a really great hero." While the two were conversing in this fashion, the mother of the sage Agasthya came there.

Kaushalya made kind enquiries about her. She replied: "I am the mother of Agasthya. Don't you know that my son drank in one gulp the ocean over which Hanumaan merely leapt? Are you not aware that I am the mother of such a pious saint's son?"

Then, Kaushalya addressing the two ladies said: For your son's leaping over the ocean and your son's drinking the ocean in one gulp, it is the name of my son that enabled them to accomplish these exploits. Because they remembered his name they could do these marvellous deeds."

By then, Kaama arrived on the scene. He was apprehensive about disagreement among the three ladies. Raama was totally free from pride and egoism. He was pure in heart and free from selfishness. He told his mother: "Mother, it is not because of my name that Hanumaan and Agasthya performed their great exploits. This body of mine was given the name of Raama. The greatness of the name Raama enabled Hanumaan to leap over the ocean and Agasthya to drink it one gulp. The power of the name is at the root of their achievement."

Thus, the power of the Lord's name is incalculable. However great a mother may be, if the son does not have the grace of the Lord he will not be able to accomplish anything great. For this reason, mothers always pray to the Lord to shower His grace on the children.

Aadhi Shankara's intense yearning for Divine Mother

Here is another illustration from the life of Aadhi Shankara. He was born in Kaaladi in Kerala.

When he was a six-year old boy, his mother, Aaryaambha, told him- "Son, your father was a very pious person and. He used to worship God according to the prescribed rituals. You must follow his example. You are very lucky. I am always devoted to God.

Having taken birth as my son, you should conduct yourself in such a way that you achieve great name and fame and bring a good name to me. Act according to your father's example. It is the mother who makes the son noble and great. It is a noble son who brings glory to the mother.

Hence, remembering this, act

according to your father's injunctions."

The father of Shankara was a regular worshipper of Dhevi Raaja-raajeshvari for many years. He used to offer milk every day to the goddess. One day, when Shankara was barely four years old, the father had to leave his home to visit a neighbouring village. Every day after finishing his puuja and offering milk to the goddess, he used to distribute the remaining milk to his wife, son and others as prasaadham. He told the boy: "Son, your mother cannot perform the worship which I do. You better do the worship today."

After the father left, the boy followed the father's instructions. He filled a tumbler with milk, placed it before the image of the goddess Raaja-raajeshvari and prayed "Mother! Accept this offering of milk." He went on praying to the goddess. When he found that the milk remained untouched, he was in great anguish. He cried: "Oh Mother! What crime have I committed? When my father offered the milk you used to take it. Why are you not taking it when I am offering it?"

He was in deep distress. He was thinking whether there was any lapse on his part. He became desperate. He declared in agony: "Mother! If you don't take the milk I shall end my life. I would have dishonoured my father. I would also be guilty of failing to fulfil my mother's command. If I cannot please my parents, what use is there in my living?"

Cherish the mother and seek God's grace

He prayed intensely to the Goddess in great agony Moved by the naive entreaties of the boy, Raaja-raajeshvari appeared before him. She told him, "Child! Be happy. I am immensely pleased with your devotion. I shall drink the milk." So saying, she drank all the milk offered in the tumbler. The boy was aghast to see that the whole tumbler was empty.

"Oh mother!" he cried. "If you drink all the milk, what is left for distributing as prasaadham?"

My mother will think I have drank all the milk. I have to give praasadham to her. My father used to give some milk as prasaadham to others also. Therefore please restore some of the milk in the tumbler."

How can the milk once consumed be brought back? Can the river that has joined the ocean be made to return? Can an apple that has been digested be brought back?

The goddess told the boy that it is impossible to bring back the milk that had been consumed and vanished.

The boy was in deep distress again. He thought within himself.. "I will get a bad name from my mother." He prayed: "Mother! Please give at least a little quantity of milk." Responding to the prayers of the young boy the goddess drew milk from her breast and gave it to the boy It was the sacred power of the milk which enabled Shankara in later years to master all the scriptures and earn lasting fame as a great spiritual teacher, revered by all. Knowledge of all the Vedhas came to him effortlessly: It was due to the grace of the Divine Mother and the love and blessings of his own mother. When one is blessed with Prema and Anugraha (love and grace) he is transformed from the human to the Divine. Hence, every person, man or woman, should respect the parents, install the Divine in the heart and pray to God constantly. It is everyone's duty to bring a good name to one's parents. When the children are good, they bring a good name to the parents. It was because of the noble behaviour of Lava and Kusha that their mother, Seetha, became renowned. When Lava and Kusha were engaged in a battle with Raama, Lava aimed an arrow at Raama with the prayer that if his mother Jaanaki was a Saadhvi (a supremely noble woman) the arrow should render Raama unconscious. Raama became unconscious when the arrow hit him. See what happened. The mere thought of his mother lent so much power to his arrow! This shows that when you cherish the mother and seek God's grace, the blessings of the mother become more powerful. God-realisation is the supreme achievement. In the world today such mothers are rare. Many mothers are worried about the future of their sons if they adhere to the righteous path. They fear that such children may not be successful in life. In ancient days mothers thought otherwise. They would be immensely happy if they found the children devoted to God. They would feel happy with the thought. "My son will be a good man. He will cam a good name." Even now, in this sacred land of Bhaarith, parents should strive their utmost to bring up their children on right lines. Children also should revere their parents, who account for their physical existence. But they should realise what they owe to God, who is the basis of all life. Recognising this double obligation to the mothers and to the Divine--they should redeem their lives by purposeful living. There are greater things than even life itself. The supreme achievement is God-realisation. It is the summum bonum of human life. This was the lesson which Aaryaamba taught to Shankara. She assured him: When you have secured the grace of Dhevi, what is it that you will lack in your life? You will bring fame to the country as a whole.

Achieving a great name, however, is not all. Shankara lived in a state of perpetual bliss. Within a short span of 32 years he achieved incredible things. All because of Dhevi's grace. I wish all young people to develop faith in God and lead worthy lives. Discourse in Kodaikanal on 6-5-1997. You wear coloured glasses and see everything through these glasses. Correct your vision; the world will be corrected. Reform yourselves; the world will be reformed. You see many because you seek the many, not the One. Baba

13. Purity--the path to Liberation

EMBODIMENTS of Love! Inaana (Knowledge) does not an mere acquaintance with books. Nor is it worldly knowledge. Only the person who has recognised the oneness of the Jeevaathma (individual spirit) and the Universal Spirit is a real Inaani (one who possesses the supreme wisdom). True wisdom consists in the awareness of the rarity of the individual and the Samashti (collective whole). How can a man who is not aware of his humanness recognise the Divinity within him? Hence the first requisite is the recognition by everyone of his human essence. Basing on this truth, Buddha declared that everyone should cultivate at the outset Samyag-dhrishti (a pure vision). it is only when man has a pure vision that he can get rid of impurities in the body, speech and mind. It is this purity that can protect man from invasion of impurities through the eyes and the ears. Hence the first requirement for every man is Samyag-Dhrishti. The second quality that is needed is Samyag-Sankalpa (pure thoughts). Everyone should have pure thoughts. Only the person who has developed purity in vision can have purity in thoughts. The third requirement for every man, along with purity in vision and thought, is Samyag-Karma (pure deeds). Everyone should do pure deeds. Through pure deeds man is able to recognise his human essence. Man is not merely an embodied being. By his capacity for developing good vision, entertaining good thoughts and performing good deeds, he has the power to transform humanness into Divinity. A fourth requirement for man is Samyag-Shruthi (listening to sacred words). When one listens to unsacred words he can have only unsacred thoughts. The fifth quality prescribed by Buddha is Samyag-Jeevanam (living a pure life). What is meant by "living"? It is not leading a worldly life attached to worldly pursuits. True living means making one's life meaningful by ideal actions. Man's life must be governed by idealism in action.

Real saadhana is to remove all impurities from mind

Next, Buddha declared that everyone should aim at Samyag-

Saadhana (Achievement of the highest good.). Saadhana means elimination of the evil tendencies in man and acquiring good and sacred qualities. True saadhana is the eradication of all evil in a man. Study of sacred texts, meditation and penance do not constitute the whole of saadhana

(spiritual exercise). To remove all the impurities in the mind is real Saadhana.

After this comes what Buddha called-Samyag-Samaadhi or Nirvaana (Pure Realisation or Liberation). What is meant by Samaadhi? It means treating pleasure and pain, gain and loss alike. Sama-dhi (equal mindedness) is "Samaadhi". To look upon light and darkness, pleasure and pain, profit and loss, fame and censure with an equal mind is Samaadhi. Buddha termed this equal mindedness as Nirvaana.

It is the recognition of the sacredness of the qualities of all the senses in man that constitutes real humanness. At the very outset, one has to keep the tongue pure. This was referred to as Samyagvaak

(purity in speech). The tongue has to be sanctified by refraining from falsehood, slander and abusive speech.

Next comes Samyag-Dharshanam (seeing only things that are holy).

You must see only things which please your conscience. Seeing all worldly things is not proper seeing at all.

Buddha laid emphasis on seeing good, thinking good, speaking good and doing good. Seeing all sorts of things is not good for anyone. The eyes should be used for seeing only what is pure,

what is holy and what is edifying.

Buddha's search for Truth

Although all Avathaars (divine advents) have been preaching only good things, men today are content to observe their birthdays without following their precepts.

Buddha did not attach any importance to yajnas and yaagas and other religious rituals. The reason is he felt that it was more important to ensure that the five sense organs were pure to begin with. Buddha sought to find out why the mind gets disturbed. He could not bear to see-anyone suffering. He was deeply grieved at the sight of persons afflicted with old age. He was intrigued at the sight of a dead body. None of these natural happenings gave him peace of mind. Buddha considered the movements of the planets and the sun and the stars as natural phenomena. He undertook many spiritual exercises to find out what transcended these natural phenomena. Failing to find the answers by these exercises, he approached many great elders to find the answers. None could give him satisfactory answers. Ultimately he reached Gaya and sat under a banyan tree to meditate on the problems that worried him.

"Ahimsa Paramodharmah"

Because Buddha did not interest himself in the study of the Vedhas or in the performance of yaagas and yajnas, he was dubbed an atheist. This is utterly wrong.

Buddha was a pure hearted person. When he was born, a renowned astrologer had predicted that he would be either a great king or a great renunciant. On knowing this, Buddha's father, Shuddhodhana arranged m keep out of his son's sight all unseemly worldly sights of happenings in this world. from his childhood, Buddha could not bear the sight of anyone in pain. He was saddened at the sight of the old ill-treating the young, of men in authority harassing the people and the big fish swallowing the small ones. He realised that it was wrong for anyone to cause harm to others.

Hence he declared: "Ahimsa Paramodharmah" (Non-hurting is the Supreme Dharma). No one should cause hurt to others by speech, action or in any other way.

According to him true Dharma

(Righteousness) consists in refraining from causing harm to anyone in thought, word or deed.

Truth is God. Buddha taught that people should adhere to truth and uphold it.

Among Buddha's teachings the foremost were Sathya (Truth) and Dhaana (Righteousness).

These two are the teachings of the Vedhas: "Sathyam vadha, Dharmam chara" (Speak the Truth, practise righteousness').

The name given to Buddha at the time of birth was Sarvaartha

Siddha. Shuddhodhana got his son married to Yashodhara, daughter of his brother-in-law,

Shuddhabuddha. He apprehended that his son may become a recluse and turn away from the world if ha was left to himself. But Buddha did not feel that a married life was the proper thing for him.

Buddha felt that man was bound by various attachments in worldly life. Friends and relations were the cause of this bondage.

Various human relationships were the cause of sorrow in the world. So he declared:

"Sarvam dukkham dukkham" (All is sorrow) He also declared:

"Sarvam Kshanikam, Kshanikam"

(everything is momentary). "Sarvam nashyam nashyam" (everything is perishable).

Buddha felt that nothing was truly lasting. Parents were subjecting their children to various kinds of bonds and making their lives miserable. As soon as the children come of age the parents are keen to get them married. They do not know what kind of happiness he can get from married life.

What happiness have they derived from their own married life physically, mentally or otherwise?

No person, however intelligent, thinks about this matter. Even eminent scholars do not care to examine whether it is worthwhile pursuing sensuous pleasures instead of seeking what is beyond the senses. Buddha felt intensely unhappy that his parents and others combined to commit him to the bondage of married life. One day, at midnight, Buddha left the palace, giving up his wife and young son, Rahul.

Nirvaana is the only truth

He abandoned everything out of the conviction: "There is no mother or father, no kinsman or friend, no home or wealth. Awaken yourself!" He resolved to find out something which transcends all worldly relationships and pleasures.

Buddha asked himself: "What is this life? Birth is misery. Old age is misery. Wife is a cause of sorrow. There is misery at the end of life. Therefore, be alert and awake."

Happiness is not to be found in any of the things of the world. Everything is fleeting. Man is wasting his life in the pursuit of petty ephemeral pleasures. Nirvaana is the only truth. It is the sense of oneness with all life. To turn the mind towards that which is permanent is Nirvaana.

Before he attained Nirvaana, Buddha summoned his stepbrother Aanandhabuddha. Buddha's mother Maaya Dhevi passed away on the seventh day after his birth. Shuddhodhana's second wife Gauthami, brought up the child. Because he was brought up by Gauthami, he was named Gauthama Buddha. At the age of 28, he gave up everything and turned a renunciant. What is the significance of this step? Buddha declared: "Sangham sharanam gachchaami", "Hands in the society, head in the forest." He renounced everything to think about promoting the well-being of society.

He declared: "Dharmam sharanam gachchaami." What is this Dharma? "Ahimsa paramodharmah. "Dharma means causing no harm to anyone.

The decline of Buddhism

Basing his reachings on these two declarations, Buddha went about preaching his message.

Buddha's message spread to many countries like Tiber, China, Ceylon, Burma, Thailand and Japan.

In course of time schisms developed which led to the decline of Buddhism.

Buddha's emphasis was entirely on purity in every aspect of daily life. Purity in vision, purity in thought, purity in speech and purity in action. He considered the spirit of sacrifice as true yajna.

Sacrifice is the means for attaining Nirvaana (freedom from the bondage of mundane existence).

Buddha was totally opposed to anyone being forced to lead a worldly life against his will.

When Buddha was going round begging for alms as a mendicant, his father, Shuddhodhana, called him and said: "Son! Why are you going about as a beggar? I am a king and you are leading the life of a beggar. This is not proper at all." Buddha gave him a fitting reply. "Sire, you are Brahman and I am Brahman. You are not father and I am not son. Both of us are Brahman.

In the phenomenal world, you belong to the lineage of rulers. I belong to the lineage of renunciants. All those who follow my ideals are all renunciants. Your lineage is based on Raaga

(attachment). My lineage is based on Viraaga (renunciation). To those who have attachment, it becomes a toga (disease). To the renunciants, detachment becomes the means to Nirvaana (liberation from bondage)." Buddha taught his message in this way to his father, wife and son.

True meaning of the Buddhist prayer

The Buddhist prayer must be properly understood. When the Buddhists say: "Buddham sharanam gachchaami, Dharmam sharanam gachchaami, Sangham sharanam gachchaami," the real meaning of the prayer is: You must divert your Buddhi (mind) towards Dharma (right conduct). And the right conduct should aim at serving society. When this is done, society gets purified.

It is not enough to read the lives of avathaars and messiahs. Their teachings should be put into practice as much as possible. People must gradually outgrow their material attachments and develop divine love.

Shuddhodhana tried to protect his son from all external worldly influences by keeping him in the palace and not even sending him to school. What happened ultimately? Buddha decided to renounce everything in quest of the truth about human existence and he declared Ahimsa (nonharming) as the supreme good.

What is it that people need today? These are three things: A heart pure and white like the moon, speech soft and sweet like butter, a face that is loving and kind. These are lacking in the world today The entire atmosphere is frightening. There is harshness in speech. There is no softness in the heart. The heart should be pure and soft like butter. Today, on the contrary, people are hardhearted.

Fill your hearts with compassion. Let your speech be sweet and truthful. You will then be truly human.

Ahimsa is the supreme virtue Buddha taught one great, truth to the world. He declared that it is not what the Vedhas and Scriptures say that constitutes truth. People should bear in mind that non-harming is the supreme virtue. Do not cause harm to anyone by thought, word or deed. The tongue is given to you to utter truth. Jayadeva exhorted his tongue to manifest its sweetness by chanting the names of the Lord Govindha, Dhaamodhara, Maadhava.

Whatever be the number of religions, their goal is one and the same. (Svaami sang a song pointing out how faiths may be many but God is one only). To carry on daily life in the world people pursue many vocations. But does all this constitute real living? Can a life led without remembering God be called life at all? What kind of life is it where there is no purity, no morality and no spirituality. Morality and integrity alone can lead to Nirvaana (liberation).

Today these two are absent. People must strive to base their lives on Neethi and Nijaayathi (morality and integrity). They should become, as Jesus said, messengers of God.

Embodiments of Love! We are celebrating today Buddha Puurnima or Buddha Jayanthi. What does Puurnima (fullmoon) signify? It signifies wholeness. When the mind is filled with love, it achieves fullness. As long as the mind is filled with darkness (evil thoughts) there is no meaning in celebrating Buddha Puurnima. Get rid of this darkness. Without the light of love in the heart, what use is there in having illuminations outside? Light the lamp of the Divine in your minds.

Banish hatred and envy from your hearts. Man is the victim of two evil planets: attachment and hatred. To escape from their grip, the only way is to cultivate love. Discourse in Sai Ramesh Hall, Brindhaavan, on 15-5-1997.

Temples are intended to instruct men in the art of removing the veil of attachment that lies over their heart. That is the reason why Thyaagaraaja cried at the temple in Thirupathi, "Remove the veil within me, the veil of pride and hate." The fog of Maaya melted away before the rays of grace and so, he could discern and describe the image of Divine charm in the song, "Shivudano Maadhavudano" and drink deep this sweetness of that Form. The churning of his heart by the Divine formula produced the spark of Inaana, and grew in to the flame of Realisation.

14. Role of Sai Youth in World Crisis

Wealth once lost, can be regained;

A lost friend can be retraced;

A lost wife can be replaced;

A lost land can be recovered;

But the time that has gone cannot be recovered.

EMBODIMENTS of Love! Young men and women! Future citizens of the world! When one's wealth is lost, it can be acquited again. If one friend is lost, another can be got. If the wife passes, one can many again. If land is lost, it can be acquited, again. But if time is lost it cannot be got back.

In this vast cosmos and among the myriad species, man is the highest and noblest being. He is sublime. He is full of good traits. If a man loses these attributes of humanness, they cannot be easily regained.

Young men and women! The prosperity and well-being of the world depend on the conduct of the youth. Only when their conduct is good, the world can have an ideal future.

The night that has passed Cannot be recalled by any means. The waters of the Yamuna, once they have merged in the ocean, cannot be turned back. A fruit that has been eaten and digested cannot be recovered. Man is spending his days aimlessly without any awareness of what is in store for him in the future. He is not aware of the continuous erosion of his life-span by the passage of time.

Life is like a mega-clock. Its three hands indicate the rate at which the days, months and the year are passing. Man rejoices in the movement of the clock's hands but does not realise that every movement is a reminder of his diminishing lifespan. Hence, before the final hour strikes, every man should realise what his duties are and see that the remaining time is well spent.

What is the root cause of man's birth in the world? What are the duties of man? No one seeks to recognise the inherent divinity in man. Young men and women today waste a good deal of their time, without realising, the preciousness of human life.

Transform from the human to the Divine
There are two qualities in man. One is the animal nature; the other is humanness. Unfortunately man is forgetting his humanness by falling a prey to the six enemies-- lust, anger, greed, envy and others--and misusing his God-given talents. He thereby degrades himself to the level of the' animal. On the other hand, man should use his mind, status, and talents to become virtuous, pursue the path of righteousness and strive to raise himself from the human to the Divine. All things in the world should be used properly, and not misused. A knife can be used for cutting vegetables or another's throat. How a knife is used depends on the man using it. His mental state should be in proper condition. A man's conduct is related to his thoughts and feelings. The heart is inherently pure. But one's thoughts can pollute it or keep it pure.
One can make or mar his destiny by his thoughts and actions.
Today everywhere the world is haunted by suffering, tin-rest, disorder and agitations. Any country filled with noble beings is bound to be peaceful and happy.
What is the mason for the sad plight of a country? It is the absence of men and women of high character. To protect a country it is not so important to have arms and missiles and atom bombs. It is most essential to have men and women of great virtue.
The World's prosperity or otherwise is based upon the character of the youth--men and women.
Hence, young men and women should be pure hearted and render selfless service to the country.
They should keep the company of the good and godly. Losing Paapabheethi (fear of sin) and not cultivating Dhaiva preethi (the love of God), men today have lost the essential quality of humanness. This has resulted in the loss of peace in the world.
Show your gratitude by serving the society Every one should realise what one owes to the society in which one is born and from which one derives so many benefits. Young people should reflect on the question what gratitude they can show to the society which has given them so much. What service are you doing to society?
Every man should show his sense of gratitude to society by rendering selfless service. It was for this purpose that the Seva Organization was started. But even here the Seva Organizations are being used to promote one's name and fame and not to render service for its own sake.

The body is given for rendering service to society. Today wherever you turn---in the administration, in the business world, in politics or other fields--you see no spirit of sacrifice. In every field the atmosphere is saturated with pollution. This foulness has to be removed. Today the pollution affects people in authority, the parents, the educationists and intellectuals. Those who preen themselves on their scholarship have no humility that should characterise genuine scholarship.
People should consider the whole world as the mansion of one human family, when this spirit of oneness prevails, there will be no tendency to harm others. You should forgive even those who harm you. The youth should cultivate the quality of forbearance.
Forbearance is a supreme virtue in man.
Love of God is selfless and everlasting Embodiments of Love! Man should be free from fear. Animals inspire and birds are subject to fear. But man should neither cause fear in others nor be afraid himself. Today's young men and women should develop fearlessness as a principal quality. You should be afraid of only one thing: fear of sin. God is the only being to be loved. All other forms of love are transient and selfish. Love of God is selfless and everlasting.
God seeks nothing from you. He is utterly selfless. Today if you wish to earn the esteem of society you have to secure Dhaiva preethi (the love of God). For this you have to entertain fear of sin. What is sin? It covers all those activities which are motivated by selfishness born out of regarding the body and sensual pleasures as the primary things in life. Punya (merit) arises from all actions which take one nearer to God para + upa + kaara = Paropakara. Sin has been defined as Parapeedanam (causing harm to or forgetting the Divine). To remember the divinity in everyone is the means to acquire merit.
Young people today have lost the feeling of forbearance and as a result have become a prey to many bad qualities like anger and envy They should remember that today most young people are afflicted, in vating degrees, with Ahamkaara (the disease' of egoistic pride). And this is the cause of all sickness in the world. This egoism has no real basis because the individual is an insignificant speck in the vast cosmos. it is born of ignorance. This ignorance will go if man

realises that the whole universe is permeated by the Divine and belongs to the Divine. Everyone should do what is good and never forget God. That is the way to overcome egoism.

"Hands in the society, head in the forest"

It is the privilege and duty of the young men and women to promote the welfare, progress and peace of the world. Transform all your actions into sacred duties.

Experience the love of the Divine. That is the meaning of Svaami's declaration: "My life is my message." Adhere to the ideals set before you by Svaami.

Today people tend to forget Aaashayaalu (ideals) and foster Aashalu (desires). Selfishness prevails over patriotism. This should change. Never forget your motherland. Remember that our ancestors enthroned sacrifice as the supreme virtue. They stood for justice and truth. And as a result they enjoyed peace.

Today humanity is haunted by fear because there is no spirit of sacrifice; righteousness is at a discount and truth has become rare. Young people should enthrone

Thyaaga (sacrifice) in their hearts, wear the crown of justice on their heads and carry the sword of Truth in their hands.

These are the weapons needed, to defend the nation.

Young people should consider the true purpose of life. They should get rid of all the impurities in their hearts. With pure hearts they should embark on service at all times and everywhere. "Hands in society, head in the forest." From today develop an unwavering mind and a steady vision.

That is the way to divinise the world.

Goodness is more vital than greatness

People should realise the distinction between "greatness" and "goodness". Most parents want their children to acquire greatness. But they have no true idea of what is greatness. They may desire that their children should become great scholars, get big jobs and the acquire large wealth.

Do these constitute greatness? No. Man is the one who sees the human in God. But the one who sees God in human is a good man. The mark of goodness is to see the divinity in every man.

There is no use in acquiring greatness without goodness. You must seek goodness and not greatness.

Today there are many "great" men in this country. What is the benefit the country has derived from them? Raavana was a great scholar. Raama was equally great as a scholar. But he was much more than that. He was a good man. Raavana performed rigorous penance and mastered a vast deal of knowledge. The result was ignorance arising from indigestion. Unable to control his desires, he brought ruin on his clan and his kingdom. All his studies did not save him from his evil qualities, which brought about his ruin. The only desire all should cherish is to win Dhaiva preethi (the grace of God).

Raama was devoted to truth and righteousness. Hence he became a good man and not a mere great man. After thousands of years, the very name Raama evokes veneration. Raama manifested divinity in the human. That is the sign of goodness. To see humanness in Raama is nothing special. Being human yourself you see the human traits in others.

What you must see is the divine in human beings.

You must realise that greatness related to power, position or wealth is transient. It is lost when power and position go. But goodness is respected always. Therefore dedicate your lives to goodness. What is goodness? It is living according to Dharma and justice, to love all and cherish faith in God, to help the needy and raise the lowly--all these constitute goodness.

Young men and women! Today at the inaugural function only the broad pattern of the tasks before you has been presented. In the ensuing days the details of the duties you have come to discharge and the programme of activities you have to rake up, will be considered. What is basic to all these in the spiritual path is the chanting of the name of the Lord. By this means you can experience God. You must chant the name with love.

Inaugural discourse to the Sai World Youth Conference in Sai Kulvanth Mandap on 16-7-1997.

Transformation of the heart is what is called for. All that you do should lead you nearer to God. When you act in this way nothing bad will touch you.

Baba

15. Love God, fear sin, guard Human Values

If free from arrogance, you are loved.

If free from anger, you are free of sorrow.

If free from desires, you gain wealth.

If free from greed, you become happy. (Sanskrit Shloka)

EMBODIMENTS of Love! So long as a man is puffed up with pride, none, not even his wife and children will love him. One should shed his ego and arrogance, if he wants to be loved, by others. One has to stiffer grief and misery as long as he is prone to anger. It is only when he gives up anger he can be happy. So long as one goes on multiplying his desires, he will continue to be in want. When he controls his desires, man attains prosperity. Greed makes a man unhappy and miserable. Only when greed and miserliness are given up can one have an enjoyable and peaceful life.

The whole world and the objects therein are inter-related by the bond of love. It is love that binds the human race together. The world cannot exist without love. God is love and resides in the heart of every one as embodiment of love. Based on this Truth we pray, "Lokaas-Samasthaas-Sukhino Bhavanthu" (all the people in the world should be happy).

In ancient times, the sages and saints sacrificed everything for the sake of the welfare of humanity. Even the youth of those times followed suit. They are remembered even today because of their spirit of selfless sacrifice. On the contrary, the youth of today are becoming exceedingly greedy and totally selfish and harbouring feelings of hatred and jealousy, while those in the ancient times were leading a life of Thyaaga and Yoga (sacrifice and sense control). The present day youth want to lead a life of Bhoga (enjoying worldly and carnal pleasures) which results in toga (disease).

Make God your friend

On the journey of earthly life, people take some wealth for expenses and when they finish the journey and reach the goal, they hand over the balance to some trustworthy friend and sleep soundly. Everyone brings the wealth of love from the moment of his birth. In this Karmakshethra (field of activity) that is the world, it is difficult to safeguard the treasure of Prema (love). Therefore, everyone should look for a faithful friend.

To-day, the only true friend is God. When you hand over the wealth of love to God, it will be easy for you to can?" on a life of security and peace.

There is no greater teacher than your heart. Time is a great preacher. The world is a scriptural text. God is the great friend. With full faith in these four entities, one should lead his life on this earth. Prema (love) is the natural possession of every human being. It is the fruit of the tree of life. There are certain impediments in your enjoyment of the fruit. But, before tasting a fruit, you have to remove the skin and rind covering the pulp inside and also cast off the seed. The fruit of love is covered by the thick skin of ego. You have m peel off this skin of 'mine' and 'thine.' Then only you can taste the sweet juice. That is why the Vedhas describe God as Raso Vai Sah (Supreme sweet essence).

By pure love, you should establish unity with the Divine. The path of Prema (love) is the straightforward toad to realise the Divine. The human life is a journey from 'I' to 'We'. It is also progressing from Svam to Soham (individual self to the state of merger with the divine).

Three types of Prema

This means that everyone of your actions must be done as an offering to God. But, nowadays people start their journey from 'I' and come back to the same "I". This is selfishness. The day you give up selfishness you are on the right path. You experience love in three ways- Svaartha Prema (self-oriented love), Paraartha Prema (love towards all fellow beings) and Anyonya Prema (mutual give and take type of love).

"I should be happy. I should enjoy all pleasures and be comfortable. I do not care for others."

This is the attitude of Svaartha Prema (selfish love). Anyonya Prema represents the feeling that not only himself but also his relatives and friends should be comfortable and enjoy a good life.

But, Paraartha Prema represents the feeling that all should be happy in the entire world. This is the highest type of Prema.

There are three examples to illustrate these three types of love.

Svaartha or selfish love is comparable to the bulb that illumines just one single small room. This cannot be called love at all. Anyonya Prema is like moonlight. Though it illumines all directions, it is very dim. It does not help one to have a clear perception. You may mistake a rope for a serpent and a stump of wood as human body in moonlight. Similarly, you may mistake a good man to be a wicked one and vice versa due to illusion. But Paraartha Prema is like Sunlight which is very bright and will not give room for any doubt. The confused person will be overpowered by delusion. He may believe the words of wicked persons which may appear to be sweet. The words of wise people may appear to be unsavoury but they communicate nectarine Truth. Divine love is like a downpour of rain, although sometimes interspersed with hard hailstones hurting you. But remember! They melt into the water of love for you. Similarly divinity sometimes may appear to be hurting you. But you should realise it contains nothing but love. God is love. Love is God.

Live in Love. You should make an effort to lead such a life.
 Look for your own defects
 Some persons consider small defects in others as huge mistakes and criticize them while they ignore even great drawbacks in themselves. This is highly improper. The correct method is to magnify your own small mistakes and consider them as big mistakes and the big mistakes of others as small ones of no consequence. That is how you can control the commission of errors.
 With this attitude, you will be able to realise the Divine. The Love of humans is earthly and selfish while Divine love is spiritual and selfless. it is pure love. The ancients described the Divine as eternal, immortal, pure and unsullied. In order to experience Love of God, you should give up petty minded selfishness and expand your love.
 Let us take an example of how the love of a newly married man to his spouse decreases as days go by. In the beginning he shows considerable concern when they are walking on the road and comes across a thorn. The man shows a lot of concern and pulls the wife aside. In the same situation a few months later, he retorts, "Are you blind? Can you not see the thorn?" Thus the worldly love will become diluted, while Divine Love will be constant and steady.
 People cannot understand the greatness of Divine Love. They misconstrue this love and even blame God when they do not get their low desires fulfilled. Some want liberation. What is liberation? It is liberation from desires. They want to see God. Should you not have the requisite faith and feeling in your heart for this? .
 Aspire to experience Divine Love
 Even when you live close to God you cannot see God unless you have the faith and devotion, just like a frog in the pond which is ignorant of the honey in the lotus, though nearer to it. While honey bees from far-off places know the existence of honey in the flower and come and taste it, people from distant lands come and experience the sweetness of God's Love, while those nearer are not able to do so.
 The proximity to the Divine can elevate human to the level of the Divine. But many fail to realise this and waste their lives. Love is in everyone, but, because it is turned to selfish ends, it becomes attachment. You should aspire to experience Dhaivi Prema (Divine Love).
 In the modern world, youth should know the nature of true love. Many from abroad, mix with persons of the opposite sex, calling them boy friend and girl friend. If you really love each other you must get married and not continue living as friends.

 A few years back a foreign youth was sitting under a tree with a crest fallen face. He was just in his late teens, and when questioned by Svaami, he said that his second wife had deserted him and he was anxiously thinking of his child she bore. If at this age he had worries, imagine what would happen when he became older? Some young people even before they are twenty years of age get married, divorced and remarry again and get separated from wife and child too and later feel sorry for themselves. They do not realise the value of human life which is both rare and sacred.
 According to the Upanishaths, human life is sacred and rare. The human being is noble and powerful. He is called Maanava, that is, 'not new at all but eternal. It is the body that changes often, not the Aathma (the Inner Being or Self).
 God is the changeless Truth
 Young men and women! You may be getting a lot of thoughts because of your food and other habits. You should discriminate whether they are good or bad. You should not be carried away by bookish and superficial knowledge. You should, have practical knowledge to make your life useful. Achieve co-ordination between your education and behaviour. Perfect harmony in thought, word and deed is the hallmark of a human being. You should have full faith in God with no doubt at all. Divinity is beyond your human comprehension with the physical equipment you have. Your thoughts are only reflections, resound and reaction of the outer world. God has no such reactions. He has only one Sound, that is Truth Absolute. You should follow the twin ideals "Speak the Truth and do righteous deeds." God is the changeless Truth but no one understands this. You can do so only when you follow the righteous path of morality and integrity.
 Man has become a slave to money. He may forget God but will never forget money. You provide yourself with an air conditioner, a good bed, fans and other accessories with a view to having a comfortable sleep. But you do not get sleep. Why? You should have mental peace to sleep well. Your body, mind, chittha (will power) and Ahamkaara (egotism) being the Inner Instruments must all be oriented towards peace as well as the external limbs and sense organs.

This can be achieved only by developing Divine love, which is selfless love and which always gives and never takes, while worldly love is keen on getting and then forgetting.

Harming a fellow being is harming the Divine

Divine love has no equal. It stands supreme. You pray to God for trivial worldly things. You should ask for something that you do not have. You are not having selfless love; hence you should only ask for love which the Divine has in plenty God is the embodiment of bliss. Pray for love, peace and bliss. You should be able to distinguish between earthly happiness and Divine

Bliss. Today, people pray for many trifles. God knows what is good for the devotee and gives it.

He is a witness to all the thoughts, words and actions. Therefore, surrender whole-heartedly without any reservation whatsoever to God, and lead an ideal life. You are all embodiments of the Divine. So you should love all and never hurt anyone. If you harm anyone, you are harming the Divine.

St. John used to consider all as his brothers. But, on one occasion he punished one brother. Jesus appeared in his dream and questioned him, "Do you think you are hurting that man? No, you are hurting Me." You should understand this truth that any harm done to a fellow being is harming the Divine. You should cultivate the spirit of oneness.

Bhajan, meditation, etc., are only exercises for purifying the mind.

"Chitthasya Shuddhaye

Karmane." Develop love which is your life breath. When a tree is full of green leaves, branches and fruits, you are attracted by it. When it becomes dry, you destroy it because there is no life in

it. A person without love is akin to a dead tree only.

Love is as vital for a human as fire is vital for a lump of coal to sparkle. You should get rid of weakness by concentrating on Divine Love, as Divine grace confers the greatest strength. All other things may come and go but Divine Grace is ever flowing. Whatever you may or may not be able to do, develop Divine Love. God is the director and all humans are mere actors. be good performers in God's play. Only to train you for this role, this Youth Conference has been convened. In the midst of the world replete with fear, distrust and mutual recrimination, you have to prove yourself to be the messengers of the Divine and embodiments of love, peace and truth.

Declare your reality as Divine to the world at large and make them realise the Divinity in everyone.

Embodiments of love! You young men and women should know what is truth, what is love and what is God and what relationship is there between mind and world.

Youth go abroad in quest of money. You are not satisfied with what you can earn here and out of greed you go for earning more. You should have hands in society and head in the forest. This is real rest. Men spend their entire life with attachment to money to such an extent that even while on death bed they cannot think of God. In this conference, you have been told about fear of sin and morality in society.

You have to carry these ideals with you and practise them.

God is the hero, rest are Zeros

You must radiate human values and ensure unity in thought, word and deed. At present there is chaos and mutual animosity amongst various people. You. Have to spread the message of unity, purity and divinity:

Vivekaanandha said: "Give me ten men who are pure and perfect. I can change the whole world." But I say, "I can bring about transformation even with one truly perfect human being."

You should have divine as the base number one. Any number of zeros placed alongside the figure of one will carry value; value increases many fold with its additional zeros. But, without the number one, if you put zeros, they carry no value at all. the Divine is ONE. Sun, moon, earth, etc. are all mere zeros. They get value only because of the primary number ONE, which represents the Divine. So God is the hero and the rest are all zeros!

Have full faith in. God and surrender to God. Do serve with a spirit of dedication as an offering to God. Spread the message of the glory of God in every village by chanting the name of God. Then the atmosphere and climate of the world will change for the better and become sacred.

Discourse during the World Youth Coherence

on 17- 7-1997 in Sai Kulvanth Mandap.

Bhakthi is not a uniform to be worn on Thursday evenings to sing bhajans. It must mean the promotion of an attitude of humility, of revering parents, teachers, elders and others; it is a mental outlook, an attitude that is ever-present.

--Baba

16. Adhere to Truth: Realise Divinity within

EMBODIMENTS of the Divine! young men and women! Truth is God.

It is only through Truth

you can get peace, plenty and prosperity Truth only bears the wealth of the whole world. There is no greater Dharma than Truth. The mansion of Dharma is raised on the foundation of Truth.

Though people may follow several spiritual paths, Truth is the most important of all. Anywhere and at any time, for any individual, Truth is absolutely essential.

Because Truth is forgotten, the whole world is in turmoil. It is only from Truth that all creation has originated, including human beings. The whole creation merges back into Truth. One who follows Truth and Righteousness will always be successful. Mere strength of armoury, valour, skill and ability will not do. These are only worldly and external powers. The power of Truth is supreme. To foster Truth and.

Righteousness is the bounden duty of man. He should recognise the importance of harmony on thought, word and deed.

The inner meaning of Truth: Life sustaining energy

You may think that relating exactly what you saw is Truth. It is not so. Suppose you see a person taking the role of king in a drama. You see him on the stage with the royal robe and crown, etc.

But when you see him off the stage after the drama is all over, he may be in his usual dress.

Which is true? Is it his role on the stage or is it his role outside? If you analyse this, it becomes obvious that what is subject to change may be termed as fact but not Truth. Truth remains true at all points of time.

In Sath-e-yam, sath means life; 'e' stands for food; yam stands for Sun. Food is essential for every individual. Sunhelps production of crops which constitute our food to sustain our life. Smt.

and light never change. Sathyam stands for life-sustaining energy. If you read the word Sathya,

Sa-tha-ya, on the reverse it is ya-tha-sa. "ya" denotes outer and inner discipline as part of Thapas or "tha." When you do much Thapas, you acquire divinity or "Sa" Thapas is triple purity, that is purity in thought, word and deed. we are not able to know our own potentialities. Divinity is in the Microcosm and in the Macrocosm. Everything is a combination of atoms. You are not able to realise the divinity within, in spite of all your education and scholarship. Whatever you study is only about the physical world and the gross matter.

If you want real lasting happiness you can get it only by union with God. God is all-pervasive.

Why should you search for God while he is within you? Body is like a water bubble and mind is a mad monkey. Don't follow them. You should follow only your conscience----which is Sathya-- the principle of Truth. If you have an unpolluted heart and engage in unblemished action, you will experience the manifestation of God.

We say often we have no Shaanthi (peace). Why? because you are multiplying your desires. One who is bereft of desires is peaceful. You must breed only good thoughts and progress forward transcending all thoughts and reaching a state of ending the mind which is but a conglomeration of thoughts. Desire is like the luggage during a journey. If you have less luggage, travel will be more comfortable. So also in life's journey you should restrict your desires which burden you.

You should lead a life of morality and character. The Upanishath says: "Sathyam Bruyaath"

(speak Truth). This is the physical aspect of the directive. "Priyam Bruyaath." This is the Dharmik or virtuous aspect which means you should speak Truth in a nice and palatable way.

Next is "Na Bruyaath Sathyam apriyam." This is the spiritual aspect. You should avoid speaking even truth when it is not pleasing the person. At the same time, simply because it satisfies the other person, don't speak untruth. It is written on the board "Truth is God." This is not enough.

You should have this imprinted in your heart.

Truth is changeless and eternal. This conviction is not traceable among persons in the modern world. You should join good company which will help you to entertain sacred thoughts to be translated into action.

Time is God; so is food; do not waste them

Young men and women! You are all wasting time which is divine. God is described as Kaalakaalaaya namah. He is the master of Time. The four days that you have spent here are just a minute fraction of time. The same individual passes through stages when he is termed as boy, adult, old man, etc. due to the passage of time. Time is God. Therefore you should not waste time. Excessive talk is waste of time. When you switch on the Radio and listen to all unnecessary programmes the current is wasted. The body is like a Radio Receiver. Chanting the name and singing the glory of God are useful. But while you indulge in unnecessary gossip, the energy is wasted. In doing wicked deeds also, you waste energy, thereby facing dangerous consequences too. By adhering to the twin ideals of Sathya and Dharma (Truth and Righteousness) you can sanctify your life and avoid wastage of the precious energy that you are endowed with.

Instead of preaching the ideals---which is unnecessary as they are already there--you should put them into practice. Propagation is 'quantity' while practising is 'quality'. Quality is always important. A spoon of cow's milk is much better than a barrel of donkey's milk. Youth should turn their minds away from distractions and concentrate on practising human values.

I always advise people to avoid waste of time, energy, food and money. Young people should take up a job or profession and start earning money. They should know how to use it properly.

Food is God. Time is God. So you should take care-not to waste them. Transform work into worship be good, see good, hear good, talk good and do good. The basis for such discipline is to think good which entails the control of mind. You must perform all actions as offering to God.

Meditation on God is one of the steps for achieving steadiness of mind. Concentration is needed for every action such as walking on road, talking, reading, etc. You must concentrate with single minded devotion on God. Performing work as worship is also tantamount to meditation. When you have the feeling of divinity in you, you will not think, see, hear, talk bad or do any evil.

Having full faith in the Divinity within is self-confidence. This is the foundation on which the walls of self-satisfaction have to be raised with self-sacrifice as roof, so that the mansion of Self-Realisation is complete.

Enquiring into the Self

In Vedhaantha, man is urged to inquire "Who am I?" You will realise that the body, mind and intellect are only your instruments. The single letter "I" is the Inner self or Aathma while the three letter 'eye' refers to the body. You are the master and should make use of these instruments.

You should be careful to use your mind in the right direction. Just as a piece of cloth is a bundle of threads, mind is a bundle of thoughts. If threads are removed there is no cloth. When you remove the thoughts there is no mind and no worry.

I often point out that you are not one but three persons in one. The one that you think you are--at the physical (body) plane; the one others think you are--mind; the one you really are--Aathma.

When you have pure thoughts your heart is pure and full of love, radiating human values. In the term MAN 'm' represents mind, 'a' represents Aathma and 'n' stands for merger of two. It also indicates Nirvaana (Liberation). Buddha undertook spiritual pursuits and finally felt sorry that he had wasted his life in such external pursuits while he had everything within himself.

Man forgets Divinity within and indulges in wasteful exercises. The five vital airs in man are termed as Pancha-praanaas. In reality Sathya, Dharma, Shaanthi, Prema and Ahimsa--the five human values should be deemed as the five-fold life breaths or Pancha Praanas--- Praana, Apaana, Udhaana, Samaana, and Vyaana (the incoming, outgoing, upward flow, even and circulating breaths). Since the values constitute the life-breath, one who does not radiate the value in his actions is deemed to be lifeless! There is an example for this in the case of five great elements: Earth, water, fire, air and ether. Earth has the five attributes of sense such as sound, touch, form, taste and smell. Hence it is very heavy and cannot stretch out. Water has all the other attributes except smell and it spreads to a limited extent. Fire has three attributes only, namely, sound, touch and form. It spreads more than water. Next comes air which has two attributes only---sound and touch. It spreads around. But, Aakaasha (ether) has only one attribute-sound. Hence it is all-pervasive. God who is attributeless is present everywhere in every object.

When form and formless unite you get liberation

Modern boys ask, "Where is God? I want to see and catch Him." You are aware of air because without air you cannot survive. Can you see or catch it? Similarly God is everywhere. Though you cannot see Him, you cannot live without God. God is consciousness.

We know by experiment that two parts of hydrogen and one part of oxygen combine to produce water. Both these are inflammable when they are independent of one another. But, when they combine they produce water which can put out the fire. Separately they cause fire, when they join together they put out fire!

There are two entities namely, Niraakaara and Sakaara (formless and with form). In ice which is with form, there is formless water. Only when Form and Formless unite, you get liberation.

This is similar to hydrogen and oxygen combining in a particular proportion giving water.

Consciousness which is all-pervasive and in all beings can be comprehended only by human beings. Animals and birds do not have this faculty. It is Divinity.. from this you get 'Conscience' which is limited to body. The word 'Conscious' is related to senses. Consciousness is everywhere. All these three are in man. from the Dhehaathma Bhaava (body identification) you have to rise to pure Aathma (consciousness). Conscience warns you when you move on the wrong path. You should not entertain any thoughts which do not conform to the dictates of your conscience. "Yath bhaavam Thath bhavathi" (As you feel so you become).

Science has developed but senses have degenerated
Youth! You should mould your life by pursuing a good path, practising the ideals of Sathya and Dharma and grow spiritually. Today spirituality is being reviled. You give importance to Technology which is nothing but "Trickology"! It may yield temporary gains but is ultimately dangerous in the long run. In ancient times they observed Sathya and Dharma (Truth and Righteousness) and had no fear. But in modern times Science has developed but senses have degenerated.

Science is a semi-circle while spirituality is the full circle. The Vedhik dictum says, "That is full. This is full. This full has come from that. What remains is also full." You should keep everything within limit. Scientists discovered the Atom Bomb and also the Hydrogen Bomb, wasting huge stuns of money to produce instruments of mass destruction. All that money could be utilised for the welfare of humanity. If you have the feeling of brotherhood of man, then there is no need for fear and consequent building up of nuclear arms.

In Mahaabhaaratha, you have the Paandava brothers of whom Dharmaja is the eldest. Bheema, Arjuna, Nakula and Sahaadheva are the other brothers in order of their age. Now you have America and Russia leading in the world in technological skill and destructive power. But Bhaarath is like Dharmaja. Even though Bheema and Arjuna were endowed with more strength and valour than Dharmaja, they always bowed to him. Now Bhaarath is the nation upholding Dharma. When once you develop Dharma there is no need to attack or harm anyone. Hence no need to have destructive weaponry.

Dharma is the Asthra (weapon). Sathya is the Bhaavam (attitude). Truth is common to all countries in the world. If you practise Sathya and Dharma, you have no need to have bombs.

Peace and love go together
We always chant at the end of all prayers and bhajans: "Om

Shaanthi! Shaanthi! Shaanthi! Why

are we mentioning Shaanthi three times? It is to invoke peace for body, mind and Aathma (Inner Self). Aathma Shaanthi can, not be there without Shaanthi of body and mind. Hence we invoke peace of all the three entities.

You should restrict your talk to the barest minimum. When you talk too much, you may stray away from Truth. That is why the ancients practised "less talk, more work." Love is the most essential undercurrent of your talk and work. Speaking with love is Sathya and doing work with love is Dharma. It will give you Shaanthi.

Prema thathva (Love principle) should be followed. God is Love--- Live in Love. we have only polluted love. We should practise pure love. With the same set of eyes, you see your mother, wife, daughter, etc. Though the eyes are the same, the vision is different. You see the mother with respect, wife with anuraaga (attachment) and daughter or son with vaathsalya (affection).

The feelings are different. As you feel sorry when someone teases our sister, the others will feel likewise when you tease other girls. This principle of oneness should be imbibed by you.

Students are generally good but change their behaviour due to environments. The famous scientist Einstein invented great scientific truths. But, in the last stage of his life he began realising the Truth and took to the study of Bhagavath Geetha! He used to say "Tell me your company. I shall tell what you are." What is good company---Sath Sanga? Sath is Truth, that is, God. So this means you should always be with God. Sathsanga does not mean Bhajan participants. If you realise your. Reality which is Divinity there will be no trouble. When Mahaathma Gandhi wanted to go abroad to England for higher studies, his mother did not like it.

Gandhi understood his mother's fears about his maintaining sobriety and purity of conduct. So he made promises that he would nor drink, would nor smoke, and would have no contacts with women. He kept up all the three promises and returned with his principles of morality preserved intact.

Today the mothers themselves encourage their sons to go abroad and do not bother about their behaviour and conduct. You should have the feelings of oneness of humanity. Wherever you are, you should not hate anyone.

Realising oneness, the essence of Spirituality

Goldstein mentioned that 2,000 delegates attended this conference from abroad. He did not mention about the large number of delegates from India at all. You should consider the whole world as a mansion m which countries are different rooms. You should develop this feeling of oneness. The main lesson of spirituality is to share and live together in unity. Svaami does not like the word 'Religion' which is often misused. Religion should help one to realise one's Reality.

But people have narrow compartmentalised feelings as Muslim, Christian, Sikh, etc. Love makes no difference. It is the basis of all human values and you should practise it with full vigour to justify your real humanity. Having come here, you should return after leaving all your bad thoughts and feelings.

Prashanthi Nilayam is just like an automobile where all parts of a car are repaired, reconditioned and returned to the owner with new tyres, new parts and new painting. You, who come here, should shed your evil habits and thoughts like untruth, etc., and go back with fresh outlook so that your friends and others should find you to be a transformed person. They should feel happy from your better behaviour. Thus you will contribute to the progress of your nation also.

Serve your parents and your country
 Speak softly and obligingly. By using harsh words even to your mother, you will ruin yourselves.

Consider Mother, Father, Teacher and Guest as God. You have to respect your parents even after your marriage, since they gave birth to you and brought you up. Wife is your selection. But mother is not so. Mother should be given first place. You have to talk to her sweetly, softly and respectfully. You should also try to influence your friends and relatives, inspiring them to transform and make their life meaningful by doing service to humanity. What is service? It is to do good and share your knowledge with others without selfishness.

Many people invite me often to visit other countries. I do not like to go abroad before setting this country right and transforming its citizens. Many people go abroad begging for money. Many also resort to begging in the name of Svaami. Svaami has absolutely no selfish motive. You must serve your mother country first. Svaami wants nothing from you. You must become true embodiments of love and serve to remove fear. Be good and get happiness. Do good and you will be good. Through sacred action, make life sacred with the principles of Sathya and Dharma as your guide posts.

Discourse on 18- 7-1997 in Sai Kulvanth Mandap.

17. Cultivate Character: Lead an ideal life
 JUST as there is oil in the sesame seed, butter in milk, fragrance in the flower, tasty juice in the fruit, fire in wood, there is Divinity in this vast Universe. The Divine is all pervasive and is present in every being. It is the Divine Power inside that makes it possible for the eyes to see and ears to hear. The entire creation is the expression of the Will Power of God. Prakrithi (Nature) is a manifestation of the Paramaathma (Supreme Divine). Man is born to manifest and reflect Divinity. All constituents of Nature reflect their inherent qualities. Man also has to do so but is not reflecting his innate human quality.

Every one should consider devotion and discipline as of the utmost importance---duty comes only next to these two. You, the youth (both male and female) are intrinsically very good. But you lack in discipline. You should observe good discipline. You should not waste time which is precious and sacred.

How should you utilise the time usefully? You have to follow the ideal path reflecting sacred human values. Nor only that, but you should also inspire and encourage others to follow a disciplined life. Today, people do not understand discipline. They sit in a meeting and go on cheering and clapping when a speaker tells something to please them. This is sheer waste of time and energy. Every second is valuable and should be used well.

Character is the most important life principle to be imbibed. This is the golden period in your life span and if you spoil this fine opportunity in careless living, your future will be ruined.

The sapling has to be tended very carefully, so that it could grow into a mighty tree in the right manner and serve the people well. To whatever country you may belong, cultivation of character is essential at any point of time. There is no such thing as American character, Russian character and so on. Character is common to the entire humanity. There is only one caste, the caste of Humanity; one language, the language of Heart; one Religion, the Religion of Love. Whatever country you may hail from, whatever language you speak and whichever faith you follow, you should maintain sterling human character.

Control of senses is the hallmark of character

In ancient times the youth maintained good character. If you maintain good character, the future generation will prosper. Individual sacredness and purity ensure sacredness of society and country. When all countries are filled with such noble people the world will be blooming with peace and prosperity.

If you say that the world is not a bed of roses but is a place of misery, the fault lies in you, the inhabitants. It is Character that marks the life of a good individual. If you go through history you will find that in the ancient days people were noted for their control of senses. Take the example of Janaka, the great ruler and father of Seetha, offering his daughter in marriage to Raama immediately after the latter broke the Shiva Dhanush (the formidable bow of Shiva), in terms of the proclamation made by him. When Janaka repeatedly asked Raama to look at Seetha and take her hand, Raama lookcd in a different direction because he should not look at a woman till he tied the wedding knot around her neck. This is the ideal propagated by the great Avathaar

Raama.

Exemplary behaviour of Lakshmana

Later on, when Lakshmana followed Raama and Seetha to the forest and stayed with them for fourteen long years he never once looked at the face of Seetha who was just an eighteen year old damsel. Abundant testimony to this exemplary behaviour of Lakshmana is borne by the episode when Raama and Lakshmana acquited the friendship of the monkey-king Sugreeva. Sugreeva bade the monkeys to bring the bundle of jewels dropped by Seetha when she was being abducted by Raavana. When Raama saw this he was overwhelmed and asked Lakshmana to identify whether they belonged to Seetha. But Lakshmana respectfully said, "I can only identify the anklets worn by mother Seetha as I used to worship her feet every day. I cannot identify the bangles or necklace worn by her as I have never looked up at her face." Because of such worthy and laudable behaviour, they are remembered even today, though thousands of years have passed. Youth should protect Character in that way. Both men and women should consider character as their very life breath.

You may go to villages for doing Seva (service). Doing selfless service is the best way to cross the ocean of Samsaara (transmigratory life). The Vedhas declare, "Not by penance, not by undertaking pilgrimages to holy places, but by rendering service to humanity you can achieve the goal of liberation." Ego is eliminated by the spirit of Service and thus it is linked to progress in spirituality

When the great Sage Vaalmeeki completed composing the epic Raamaayana, he was contemplating as to who could propagate this great Epic to the world at large. The two boys Lava and Kusha came before him. When questioned by them as to what he was contemplating on,

Vaalmeeki said that he wanted the story of Raamaayana which he had composed in poem be taught to the people and the Divine Glory of Raama should be spread far and wide. The boys with folded hands submitted to the sage who was also their preceptor, "We are ready to even sacrifice our life for your Seva. Command us and we shall follow."

Vaalmeeki was moved to tears at the spirit of service exhibited by the young boys. He said, "Go out and spread this epic story without delay" Vaalmeeki had taught them the scriptures and moulded their character too. The nectar like contents of an earthen pot are far better than poison kept in a golden jar. The human body is only a mud pot. God exists in this mud pot as Amrith (nectar). We do not want a golden vessel with poison. The world is tempting like a golden vessel but is full of poison of worldly pleasures and pains.

Spread the message of Divinity

God resides in the heart of persons and not in shrines like

Thirupathi, Badhrinath or Prashanthi

Nilayam. He is essentially Hridhayanivaasi (Indweller of the heart).

Vaalmeeki told the boys-"Go and spread the message of Raamaayana with the spirit of selfless sacrifice for the welfare of the world." The boys wore garlands of beads and holding musical instruments in their hands, started on their sacred journey. It is Vaalmeeki's inspiration that made them pursue this noble task with utmost zeal.

Nowadays youth are reluctant to wear Vibhuuthi on their foreheads and participate in Nagarasankeerthan. They go forward quite willingly and openly for indulging in wicked deeds but feel shy to participate in singing the glory of God. They revel in singing cinema songs of low taste while they fight shy to sing the Divine Names. To spend life in such unholy pursuits is a wasteful exercise and will not bring credit. Morality is the backbone of the community and a society of people bereft of moral values is worse than the jungle infested by wild animals. Even beasts have season and reason while man has lost both.

 Service to people in rural areas
 You are all embodiments of God. It is proclaimed in the Geetha that all beings are sparks of Divinity. You should not feel shy to speak the truth when you are going to pilgrim shrines such as Thirupathi or Parthi. You should nor also fight shy of engaging yourselves in service especially in rural areas, as the villages lack amenities and hygienic conditions. They need your attention more. You may not be able to visit the villages frequently when you are employed in any job due to difficulties of getting leave. When you go to a village, collect a few young persons of the village and teach them health and hygiene and impress on them the necessity to maintain environmental cleanliness. You need nor spend much money for travelling to distant places.
 Select the villages close' by and reach the villagers principles of health, hygiene and living in clean surroundings. You can take doctors to give them treatment and health check-up. You should inspire the villagers by your attitude of service and humility.
 Serve with humility as Hanumaan
 You know the greatness of Hanumaan who was the symbol of selfless service. He was endowed with mighty power, valour, strength and he was hailed as a great scholar of impeccable character.
 Yet when the demons in Sri Lanka, questioned him who he was, he never hesitated to reply that he was the servant of Shri Raamachandhra,
 You will have to feel honoured to call yourself as a servant of God and humanity. If you start serving with the attitude that service to man is service to God you will find God there. The same thing you cannot experience in japa or dhyaana. You have to "shut your mind and open your heart," which happens while doing Seva.
 Some may ask, "While you are God why worship God?" Even as you realise you are Divine, you have to do certain things as part of your duty. According to the tradition of Bhaarith, you have to do things to please God or in other words transform work into worship. When you practise this, it becomes easier to realise God. Everything you learn by practice only. Walking, talking, eating, singing and serving need practice. Practise service dedicating all activities to God.
 A boy prayed to God to give him strength. What for? It is not for watching T.V. or movies but for serving God through service to mankind. You say diamond and gold are highly valuable. If you enquire deeply, man is more valuable than all the wealth of the world. Men alone decide the value of gold and diamond, and other materials. Man should have faith in himself. Every one should chant the name of God and engage in service in accordance with the advice given by Hanumaan to Vibheeshana. He said, "Mere chanting Raama's name won't do. You should also engage yourself in Raama's work." Vibheeshana went on chanting the name but failed to make any effort to alleviate the suffering of Seetha and Raama on their separation while Hanumaan engaged himself in the service of Raama.

 Light the lamp of the world with Divine Love
 You should use your will power to engage in such sacred tasks. A common example can be seen in an electric light. Dharma (virtue) is the wire which carries the current, Shaanthi (peace) is the bulb and Prema (love) is the light. Light the lamp of the world with Divine Love.
 Divine Love lights the lamp of life, which you are not able to perceive.
 None can regulate Divine Love. Worldly love is fraught with conditions and expectations in return. Divine Love does not expect anything in return.
 Some say they are searching for Truth. This is meaningless because you are yourself the embodiment of Truth which is nothing but God. Because you are not aware of this, you indulge in wrong pursuits. In a co-educational institution, what happens is that a boy and girl in the impressionable age when there is no self-control, first look at each other exchanging glances;
 then it goes on developing into friendship by smiling, talking, exchanging letters and finally leads to coming together. You should control your vision initially.
 Many saints have prayed to God to give them the correct vision only to see good, cars to hear songs of Divine glory and hands to engage in worship. Jayadeva in a song appeals to the tongue not to indulge in untruth, not to speak ill of others and avoid excessive talk.
Nagara Sankeerthan (community singing of spiritual songs) has been arranged as part of the programme of the Sathya Sai Organisation to still the mind in the cool hours of early morning
 and. purify the atmosphere and make the singer and the listeners peaceful and happy with thought of the Divine.
 You must make it a practice to observe silence for at least one hour daily. It saves your cosmic energy and ensures peace of mind. You should develop also the discipline of simple living and high thinking. You should avoid gaudy dress. Your white dress reflects the inner purity of your heart. Dress should be simple but clean.

You have to enquire "who am I" instead of asking everyone else "who are you?" You must uncover your reality which is hidden by the outer coats of ego and attachment. You have to remove them to see your bare chest. These represent, the three qualities of Sathva, Rajas and Thamas (goodness, passion and inertia) covering your innate Reality. You have to transcend them to realise your inner Self.

Good character is of primary importance Embodiments Of Love! Young men and women! Character is the basis for all. your behaviour, quality and actions. None can be perfect but you can make an effort to develop excellent character.

When you go to villages, you should create a good impression in them by your behaviour. You should reflect peaceful and happy demeanour. You should be careful not to disturb their work.

They should, not mistake you for a gang of rowdies. You must behave with humility and starr working sincerely. Avoid talking too much.

Learn to turn over a new leaf even if you have not lived an ideal life in the past. Do not brood over the past and worry about the future. Concentrate on the present. Take everything as the gift of God; discard worry. You cannot demand sweet medicine for your illness from the doctor. You must take whatever is prescribed. Do not give room in the heart for anything else but God. The world outside is reflection of the Inner Being. Be happy within and joyful outside and have enthusiasm for service. Do not bother about others heckling you as you 'are engaged in Service to God.

Shed only tears of devotion for God

If some are questioning your faith in God, tell them that He is in your heart and the others have no business to question your belief. Have strong and-unshakable faith. Be fearless and avoid "crying". You have to shed only tears of devotion to God. Such tears have spiritual meaning, because Naara means water and Nayana means 'eyes'. Both together make Naaraayana.

Difficulties are like passing clouds. There are no permanent clouds at all.

Even though there are millions of youth in the world, only those of you who have come here are lucky to experience this unique chance. Wherever you go for service, Svaami will always be with you. Whatever happens I shall protect you. Do not be carried away by profit or loss. Think of God ceaselessly. Even the great saint composer Thyaagaraaja doubted for a moment-the Shakthi (power) of Raama but immediately repented and said the fault was his to have doubted, but, God was all powerful. Never give room for doubt.

The inner current of all the nine types of devotion is Prema--Love for God.

The teachings you have heard here during the four days should follow you like a shadow wherever you go. The cow constructs plenty of grass wherever it sees a green patch but goes to its shed and slowly chews the cud. Similarly, you should go to your places and recapitulate all that you learnt here and follow them scrupulously. You should stick to the principles of faith in God, and Unity in Diversity Svaami is prepared to do anything for you if you follow the path explained to you and become good and useful to the society This is my only desire. You must spread the message to others, each one instructing hundreds of persons in your places.

While you render service in the village, the villagers should be inspired and encouraged to do the work themselves. When you go out for service, do not fail to take permission of your parents. If they object, tell them softly that this body is given only for doing service and not for wasting in eating, drinking, sleeping and idling. They will not object once they are convinced that you are going for genuine service. You must behave in an exemplary manner. Worthy son makes father proud

Usually, a father distributes sweets when a son is born. But a father will be really happy only when the society respects his son. True happiness is derived only when you earn a good name.

Be good. See good. Do good deeds. This is the ideal Svaami wants you to imbibe. All of you have been behaving well during these four days of your stay here. Continue this even when you go to your places. Because of emotion you may sometimes lose self-control. You should avoid getting emotionally charged and upset. You must control emotion, reduce your talk and practise Truth. Make your life blissful. Worldly pleasure is only temporary. Permanent bliss can be had only in association with the Divine. It is "heart to heart and love to love connection." You have

Svaami's Blessings in abundance.

Discourse to delegates of the World Youth Conference held on 19-7-1997.

18. Manifest the Divine within you

Truth is the mother; Wisdom is the father;

Righteousness is the brother; Compassion the friend;

Peace is the wife; forbearance the son;

These six are men's true relations.

IN THIS phenomenal world, the physical body has parents who are physical and impermanent.

When this is viewed from the spiritual standpoint, the true relations for the real and permanent human spirit are indicated in the opening verse.

"Sathyam maatha" (Truth is the mother). Truth is changing. It is the same over all the three categories of time past, present and the future. Such truth is one's real and lasting mother.

"Inaanam pithaa" (Wisdom is the father). What is this wisdom? Does it pertain to the physical world, the mundane existence, the scriptures or science? No. true wisdom is: Adhvaitha dharshanam Inaanam (perception of oneness is true spiritual wisdom). The wisdom that makes one aware of unity alone is wisdom. Such wisdom is one's true father.

"Dharma bhraatha" (Righteousness is the brother). we have brothers. Between them there are differences of opinion. But righteousness which is unvarying and ever the same is one's true everlasting brother. Righteousness is Divine. The sages hailed Raama as the very embodiment of righteousness.

"Dhaya sakhaa" (Compassion is friend). There is no greater quality than compassion. It is compassion, which redeems human life. Whether one is a deity or a demon, compassion alone

can ennoble him. Hence, one's true friend is compassion.

"Shaanthih pathni" (Peace is wife). One cannot have a greater wife than peace. Peace is the greatest blessing. Today because there is no peace in the minds of people, the world is plunged in conflict. Peace verily is divine.

"Kshama Puthraah" (Forbearance is the son). People believe that the son will help them in this world. But it is not a son who redeems a person. God is the only redeemer. Forbearance is a divine quality Whoever possesses it has a worthy son.

Everything is Brahman

God is adored as mother, father, kith and kin, friend, wealth and everything else in the world.

God is immanent in every atom of the universe. All that you see, the mountains, trees, insects, birds and beasts, the food you eat, the air you breathe are all manifestations of the divine.

There is a Thelugu song which proclaims, "All is Brahman-- the stars, the sun, the moon, the heaven, the Lord's abode "Vaikuntha", the mother and father, the words in a speech, the discussions in a debate, the life itself, the birth, growth and death, the wife, the time that passes, the body, the whole of nature, the love you bear to others--all is Brahman. This assemblage is Brahman and this Sai who proclaims this is verily Brahman. What more can I tell you, oh, good people gathered here?"

God is omnipotent. Nature is reflection of that omnipotence. All the powers present in the Nature are present in every human being. Hence it should be recognised that God, Nature and the individual are all equally divine.

God and the individual are not different from each other. The cosmos and the Lord of the cosmos are not separate from each other. "Sarvam Vishnumayam Jagath."

This cosmos is permeated by the Divine. Vishnu is the cause. Nature is the effect. The Divine is the embodiment of Cause and Effect.

Hence there is no need to go in quest of God. Man is the repository of all divine potencies. They are all latent in him, remaining incognito like the Paandavas during the last years of their twelveyear

term of exile. Not realising this truth, man considers himself ignorant and weak.

Energy is Brahman

Scientists, after long investigations, have discovered that the whole universe is made up of atoms. The Vedhaanthins (spiritualists) on their part, declared that everything is permeated by the Divine. The terms used are different but the meaning is the same.

Energy is Brahman and Brahman is energy. The cosmos is filled with energy. All that you, see and all that you do are energy. You observe an object. You see an individual. Both the object and the individual are manifestations of energy.

What the scientists call 'matter' is nothing but energy. An object appears as matter. But it turns into energy later on. Likewise, one may appear to you as a leevi (Individual), but even he becomes energy in due course. Hence, all the forms and names you see are manifestations of energy.

What is this energy? It is something, which you cannot see or conceive in the mind. Energy is energy alone. It is Divine. Every physical object has a base. There is electrical energy in man.

Likewise, there is radiation energy in man. There must be a basis for all these energies. You see that in the world every object is based on some other object. God is the base for all the energies in the cosmos. The Vedhaanthins called this energy as Atheetha Shakthi (Transcendental Energy).

Scientists have termed it "Super power." The names used may vary, but the substance is one and the same.

In every man there is numerous latent potencies of which. He is not aware. The scientists have given different names to the different energies such as "psychotronic energy" and "bio-plasmic energy." Vedhaanthins have described it by the compendious term "Transcendental Energy."

How is the presence of this energy to be recognized? The Vedhaanthins described the process of recognition as involving maanasika shakthi (will power), dhaarana shakthi (concentration), inaana shakthi (meditation) and samaadhi (deep awareness). By these four processes, one can experience Aathma shakthi (power of the Spirit). This means that in the final analysis, every individual, every object and every form of energy becomes one with the Divine.

Eight potencies of divinity

In this context one has to understand the implications of oneness with the Divine. One desires to merge in God and achieve Moksha (liberation). How is this to be secured? God is formless. He is the source of all energy. He is effulgent. Eight kinds of potencies have been attributed to God.

He is the source of all sound, all motion, all light, all speech, all bliss, all excellence, all illusion and all prosperity. How is one to realise such an omnipotent Divinity? Water can integrate with water. Air can combine with air. Fire can merge with fire. As God is formless, to become one with God, we have to become formless. What does this imply? It means that we have to get rid of the attachment to the body. This is achieved through dhyana (meditation). While retaining attachment to the body one cannot hope to achieve oneness with God merely by praying for it.

You have to become formless to realise the formless Divine.

As God is the embodiment of effulgence, you have to make your life effulgent to experience

God. You have to realise that the light of your life has come from that Param-Iyothi (supreme source of all light). This individual flame should merge in the Supreme Divine effulgence from which all other lights have emanated. Meditating on the Param-Iyothi, the individual has to merge his individual effulgence in the Supreme Effulgence.

Move from dualism to oneness with God

There is one other matter, which you should consider in this context.

You are performing

bhajans, japa, dhyana, yaaga, yajna, or other spiritual exercises.

All these are external forms of worship which do not serve to promote Nivritthi-maarga (the exploration of internal spirit). They are good acts in themselves. But they are unrelated to spirituality.

Spirituality implies relationship of Aathma to Aathma. (Spirit to Spirit). All actions have appropriate consequences.

Every act results in its own reward. Good acts yield good results. But they do not contribute to spiritual progress. Hence the good acts should be stepping stones for the spiritual journey

You should not remain content with performing rituals and acts of worship--sath-karmas. When will you embark on the real spiritual adventure? You should go forward from Dhvaita to Adhvaita (dualism to non-dualism). You become a inaani only when you have the adhvaitik consciousness (the experience of oneness with the Divine).

Magnetism of Divine Love

Man possesses within himself the constituents' needed for generating electrical energy, radiation and telecommunication. The whole world is filled with electromagnetic energy. The world is governed by the principle of mutual attraction. Green grass attracts the cow. The child attracts the mother. The law of universal attraction is related to this magnetic power. Raama is the supreme symbol of riffs power of attraction. "Ramayathe ithi Raama" (Because of his powers to please everyone he is called Raama). This Raama is not the son of Dhasharatha but the spiritual Raama who is Aathma-Raama (Indweller in every heart). The Aathma is universal magnet which attracts everything.

Today if so many people from all over the world is drawn to this place, it is due to the power of attraction. When you keep a flower here, bees are attracted from afar. They are drawn to the flower because of the sweet honey in it.

Not a single bee will be attracted by a plastic flower. The sweetness that attracts people is Prema

(love). This love may be manifested in many forms---maternal love, filial love, fraternal affection, marital love, friendly love and so on. Divine Love is the basis of all these forms of attraction. It is a powerful magnet. It is present everywhere including every human being.

Every child bears the imprint of its parents. As all human beings have come from God, they should carry the marks of the Creator. Man has taken birth to manifest the Divine in him.

Every being and every, object in the world is divine energy. It cannot be destroyed. But it can be changed from one form of energy to another. For instance, magnetic energy can be converted into electricity From electricity you can get light or atomic energy In this manner energy can be converted to different forms, but it cannot be destroyed. This indestructible character is divine.

Hence there is no place or object in the cosmos which is not permeated by the Divine. There is divinity in every particle and every cell. The sages therefore declared: That which is subtler than the subtlest and vaster than the vastest and which is present everywhere as the eternal witness is the Aathma." The Aathma is atom and the atom is Aathma. All the three terms---

Brahman, Aathma and atom--represent one and the same thing.

Prahlaadha proclaimed omnipresence of divinity

It took the scientists one thousand years to discover that what was present in the whole universe was made up of atoms. But many aeons earlier, in the Kritha Yuga itself, this truth was recognized by Prahlaadha. He told his father that there was no place in the cosmos where the Divine could not be found if searched for. Long ago Prahlaadha confidently proclaimed that the Divine principle was omnipresent. Because he was aware of this transcendental unity of the Divine in the universe, he could overcome every ordeal, discard the body-consciousness and realise the Divine. Immersed in God-consciousness, he fearlessly faced every, ordeal and survived all the tortures to which he was subjected. With the name of Naaraayana on his lips he came out unscathed when he was pushed from a cliff. Likewise he faced ordeals like trampling by elephants or attacks by snakes. He was utterly free from body consciousness. Ever contemplating on God he had no fear at all. (Svaami recited a Thelugu poem describing how Prahlaadha faced cheerfully all the ordeals to which he was subjected by the demonic agents of his father).

The one who is immersed in the body consciousness is a prey to all kinds of troubles and worries. It should be realised that the body is only an instrument and is bound to perish some time or other. When death is bound to follow birth why worry about it?

The state of no-mind

The Gopikas realised that Krishna was beyond the reach of the mind because of His cosmic subtlety and immensity, but they experienced His divinity in their hearts because of their devotion.

There is in every human being this divine energy which grows when it is properly used. The water in the well rises as more and more of it is drawn. Likewise, the more you share your wealth and joy, they will multiply. Hence, share your endowments with others. Strive to manifest the latent potencies in you. To realise God., practices like repetition of the name of God are of little avail. What is essential is Amanaska (stilling the mind).

The waking state and the dreaming state are the two kinds of dream states. The only reality is the consciousness that is present in both the states. This unifying awareness is the real-it), To experience God you have to proceed from meditation to concentration and then to the amanaska

state where the mind is virtually non-existent and one is free from attachment to the body: In that state one experiences samaadhi.

Samaadhi has two meanings. One is equal mindedness in all situations--whether of pain or pleasure, loss or gain. You should not feel distressed by a calamity or elated by a happy event.

This state of mind is conducive to the development of extraordinary powers.

Certain activities have to be carried on in the day-to-day world. But the teachings of some Gurus in regard to these activities lead to dehumanisation. The term Guru means one who dispels the darkness of ignorance. Gu means one who is beyond gunas (attributes). Ru implies one who is beyond rupas (forms). This refers only to God. That is why the Guru is hailed as Brahma, Vishnu or Shiva. Only God is the true Guru. All others are merely teachers, like the teachers of different subjects in a college. Guru is the one who reveals the guri (target) to the disciple. Guri here refers to Aathmik Principle.

Qualities of a true Guru

The true Guru is one who has understood his own Self. Emperor Bali promised to give Vaamana---Vishnu who had come in the form of a short Brahmin lad--whatever he wanted.

Bali's Guru Shukraachaarya, warned Bali against honouring his promise on the ground that it would prove disastrous, for him. But Bali stood by his promise despite his preceptor's warning and intervention. Bali esteemed God as greater than his preceptor. He declared that there could be no greater sin than breaking one's promise. A Guru who advises his disciple to go back on his plighted word is no Guru at all.

In the Mahaabhaaratha, Dhronaachaarya, the teacher in archery for Arjuna, turned away Ekalavya from being his disciple because he had agreed to teach no one else all the arts he had taught' to Arjuna. Ekalavya, however, learnt more than what Arjuna had been taught, by merely worshipping an image of Dhronaachaarya. When Dhronaachaarya came to know about this from Arjuna, he demanded from Ekalavya his right thumb as Guru Dhakshina (offerings to one's preceptor) so as to incapacitate Ekalavya from making use of his proficiency in archery.

Ekalavya readily offered his thumb out of his devotion to Dhronaachaarya, whom he regarded as his preceptor. This conduct on the part of Dhronaachaarya in response to a demand from Arjuna, who was envious of Ekalavya's superiority in archery was unworthy of a true Guru. Gurus who are governed by selfish considerations or narrow loyal-tics cause great harm to the cause of spiritual enlightenment. They are worldly teachers, not spiritual preceptors.

Place trust in God who is true Guru
You may learn from anyone, but dedicate all your knowledge to God. That is true spirituality.
That is true devotion.

Today is celebrated as Vyaasa Puurnima--the full moon day dedicated to the sage Vyaasa, who codified the Vedhas, and presented them to the world on a full moon day This is the day when people should seek to make their minds as pure and bright as the full moon. The day should be celebrated by purifying the mind and understanding the mystery of the universe. (Svaami recited a song of Raamadhas in which he describes human life as consisting of seven forts---vices--in the heart of which dwells the Lord, who is very difficult to reach). Place your entire trust in God and not in self-seeking Gurus. Before performing any act utter a prayer offering it to God. Try to understand the sacred teaching in all the Vedhic and other scriptures.

Embodiments of love! Realise that God is not separate from you.

Strive to strengthen this sense of oneness with the Divine. This was the way Meera experienced the presence of Krishna in her heart, when her husband, the Mahaaraana, expelled her from the Krishna temple built by Him.

The light of the Divine is within you.
Why go seeking for it elsewhere ?
This is the light of love and of bliss.
Never forget God, whatever may happen to you.
(Thelugu poem).

There is no greater form of meditation than constant remembrance of God at all places and on all occasions. God is the indweller in the heart. When you experience this you will lack nothing and will be ever blissful. You will commit no wrong and will fear none. Your conscience will be your guide. Love all.

You can see God only through the Inaana-chakshu (the eye of wisdom). Realising that God dwells within you, you must treat God as the universal Guru, as the preceptor for mankind, irrespective of differences in names.

Discourse in Sai Kulvanth Hall on 20-7-1997.

Youth is the stage in life when the slightest turn towards wrong will spell disaster. Thoughts shape the career. You plan to earn much wealth, because you imagine that rich people are very happy. The rich have plenty to eat, but hey have no appetite. The rich wield power over others but they are held down by disease. The rich can have many servants but they cannot live in peace. So, plan to be rich in virtue, in devotion and dedication to good causes. Be rich in sovereign character.

--Baba

19. The spark and the source
Like oil in the til-seed, like ghee present in subtle form in milk, like fragrance in a flower, like the sweet juice in a fruit, like fire latent in fire-wood, the divine is immanent as a witness in the entire cosmos of living and inanimate objects. This Divinity is beyond description in any way. (Sanskrit verse)

THE Lord of the Universe remains unseen like the thread at holds the gems in a necklace. He is the Cosmic Consciousness, the Supreme Spirit Aathman, that pervades the entire universe.

Embodiments of Love! What is the meaning of human life? What is its goal? What is its purpose?
Wherein lies its uniqueness? Very few human beings strive earnestly to seek answers to these questions. Imagining that food and sleep and sensual pleasures are the only important things in life, man is forgetting his inherent divinity This is totally wrong. To recognise his divinity and to convey this experience to others in society constitute man's duty in life.

For everything in life, the inner feeling is most important. The inner feeling is at the root of all action. Even when one wishes to write a simple letter, one thinks in advance about the person to whom it is to be written, the message one wants to convey and only then one embarks on writing. The idea comes first and action follows. "Knower of Brahman becomes Brahman himself" Hence, at the very outset one should try to understand what is humanness. One has to ponder over the idea of divinity. The Vedhaantha proclaims that the knower of Brahman becomes Brahman himself. This is illustrated by the example of Rathnakara, who was a highwayman who became the sage Vaalmeeki by reciting the name of Raama on the advice of the sages. While chanting the name of Raama he was also meditating on the form of Raama. Rathnaakara experienced and acquited the effulgence of Raama. Likewise, the child Prahlaadha, because he was constantly chanting the name of Naaraayana, reflected in his rice the effulgence of Naaraayana. The great scientist, Darwin, similarly acquited as a student the traits of his teacher, Henslow, because he was constantly admiring his teacher and wished to be great like him. These examples show that whatever the object on which we set our hearts and go on thinking about it, it becomes part of us. Hence, it is only when you concentrate your thoughts on what is good, engage yourself in good deeds and be good always, you will manifest your true humanness. This truth is expressed in profound terms by Vedhaantha when it declares that every being is a fragment of God on earth. "Mamaivaamso Jeevaloke Jeevabhuthas- Sanaathanab" (Every living being is a fragment of my eternal Self). The Divine has clearly declared: Oh man! You are not a mere creature of the five elements. You are a spark of Myself. You are divinity itself." The Divine therefore calls upon every human being to conduct himself in a godly way because he is a spark of the Divine. Many good persons who recognise this truth nevertheless stiffer from various troubles and ailments and lament over their experiences. To entertain such feelings is a repudiation of their divine essence. The divine knows no trouble or sorrow. He is free from all worries. When a man grieves over troubles and difficulties he is denying his godly qualit3: What is the nature of such people? They are victims of either animal or demonic tendencies or are subject to vacillations and hence are immersed in difficulties. Every one is a spark of the Divine. How many recognise their inherent divinity? Very few indeed. It is the bounden duty of every human being to recognise his divine origin and act accordingly. Only those who recognise their divine essence are true human beings. The question may be asked- "What about the others who are also leading their lives?" It is true they are living, but what kind of life are they leading? Those who do not think of God are living like animals. They think like animals and lead an animal existence. The one who leads a godly life experiences divine bliss. He is ever blissful. He enjoys real happiness. Hence every man should realise the truth that he is a spark of the Divine. This means that everyone should seek to experience God as the indweller in the heart. Once Arjuna was troubled in mind over the state of things around him and asked Krishna why this should happen to him when he had such faith in Krishna. Krishna then explained to him that it was not enough to remember God occasionally when one felt the need to remember him. This kind of remembrance is a matter of convenience and expediency. What is required is Anusmarana, constant remembrance. Only that will relieve the devotee of his troubles and worries. Anusmarana calls for remembrance at all times, in all situations. Krishna told Arjuna that he is thinking of God only on some occasions and for some specific purposes. This is not the proper way. "If you remember Me at all times, I am always with you," said Krishna. Krishna's injunction to Arjuna was- "Remember Me at all times and carry on the fight. That alone will help you. It will confer success on you. All possessions are gifts of God. In human life, there are two attitudes to the objects with which one has to deal. There are things for which one is only a temporary guardian by virtue of one's position in relation to them. There are things which belong to one and which one can take along with him and use as he pleases. The latter type of relationship is called maarakam. The former type is called tharakam. Men should cultivate the attitude of Tharakam, namely, that nothing belongs to them and that everything comes from God. All are gifts of God. You must treat all possessions in that spirit. You must take good care of them as long as you have the responsibility for their proper use and maintenance. That is your duty.

As long as you live in the world, you have the responsibility to take care of your wife, children and possessions. But you must regard this as an obligation imposed by God. You must not get attached to them as your possessions. Most people in the world, however, are deeply attached to kinsfolk and properties. How lasting are these possessions? You can never know when you may have to leave all of them behind. Hence, the proper attitude for men is to recognise one's duty towards others and consider everything as a gift from God.

Krishna's Miracles

Arjuna was made to realise the divinity of Krishna by recalling the boyhood miracles performed by Krishna in lifting the Govardhana giri to protect the people of Gokulam from a terrible downpour, and how he revealed to His mother Yashodha the entire Cosmos in His little mouth to assure her that he had not eaten dust as complained by His older brother, Balarama. What Balarama did was only to make his mother realise the divinity of Krishna. When Yashodha saw all the worlds in the mouth of Krishna she wondered whether it was all a dream or the maaya of the Lord or some inexplicable phenomenon. It was because of her maternal attachment to Krishna that she could not readily recognise His divinity: Men stiffer from doubts about divinity as long as they have attachment to the physical body. The body should be recognised as a temple of God. Based on this feeling, men should worship the Divine.

Not all can experience this kind of feeling. Only the Gopikas of Brindhaavan could experience the Divine in every being and in every object. When Krishna sent Uddhava to the Gopikas with a message, they bluntly told him that their hearts were already filled with love for Krishna and that there was no room in them for any message. Their minds, their eyes and everything else were concentrated on Krishna. Krishna had totally captured the hearts of the Gopikas. When they missed Krishna for a time, they appealed to every plant and flower to disclose the whereabouts of Krishna. (Svaami sang a poem in which the Gopikas described Krishna's beauty and asked the jasmine flowers to reveal his hiding place to them). The hearts of the Gopikas were soft, sweet and blissful like butter. Hence, Krishna relished their pure love even more than the delicacies his mother offered out of maternal affection. (Svaami recited poems to describe the purity and intensity of the Gopikas devotion to Krishna).

It is because men lack this kind of total love for the Divine that they are a prey to all kinds of troubles. When they recognise their inherent divinity as fragments of the Divine, there will be no room for bodily attachments and the troubles arising from them. God is the embodiment of wholeness and perfection. Whatever is offered to him should be total and perfect. This was demonstrated by the Italian Violinmaker Anthony (Stradivarius) who took one year to make one violin, but made it to perfection as an offering to God.

Whatever is said, done or given, it should be perfect. To please God, who is perfect, whatever is offered should be perfect. Anthony declared that he was making perfect violins only to please God.

Pray for Peace and Bliss

When people pray to God they should not seek any favours. You should not even pray for the curing of any illness, because the world is full of disease. You must feel that what is ailing numerous others is also ailing you. The world is full of wealth, houses and many other things. You must seek from God what is not readily available in the world. You do not have peace. You must pray for peace. Only the divine has peace. The Divine has been described as the very embodiment of peace in the prayer addressed to the Lord beginning with the word "Shaanthaakaaram." Nobody else except God can give you real peace.

The second thing for which you must pray is Sukham (happiness). Real happiness cannot be had from others. They may give momentary worldly pleasure. But only God has enduring happiness and permanent bliss. You must pray for that bliss. God alone can give it. He is the Lord of Bliss.

You must pray to God for enduring peace and bliss and not for any earthly gifts.

Thyagaraja once passed through a period of doubt in Rama's capacity to relieve him of his distress. But on further reflection he realised that if there was any deficiency, it should be in himself rather than in Rama's powers. He sang a song praising the great prowess of Rama, which could attract the adoration of Lakshmi, the goddess of wealth, Lakshmana the mighty warrior, Bharatha who was endowed with supreme intelligence, and which endowed Hanumaan with the capacity to leap over the ocean. (Bhagavaan sang the song with all sweetness).

Have firm faith in God

Devotees are subject occasionally to doubts. Many declare their resolve to act according to the Divine will. But sometime or other they go back on their resolves. Those who are steadfast in their devotion to God at all times are very few indeed. You should, strive to develop steadfast faith in God. Only then, can the nature of the Divine be properly understood.

Krishna demonstrated in His life not only many miraculous powers but also many profound truths. Krishna's divinity is omnipresent, but it is experienced by devotees according to their spiritual condition. Persons who go to the Ganges for bringing the holy water can take with them only as much as their containers can hold.

Hence, it is essential to broaden the spiritual container in you, namely, your heart. Divinity cannot be realised by various forms of worship. They are good acts in themselves and give their appropriate rewards. But they do not promote spirituality, which consists in establishing association with it only by concentrating on the realisation of that oneness. The Divine has no birth or death and pervades every being as the witness.

What is required is a transformation of the heart. All bad thoughts and feelings should be expelled from the heart. Even in the performance of bhajans there should be whole-hearted participation in them. It should not be a mechanical ritual. Once your heart is filled with sacred thoughts and feelings, they will be reflected in your bhajan-singing. Through your singing you should give joy to all the participants.

Power of Love alone can bind God

Devotees should, realise that what matters most is the intensity of feelings. Kabeerdas declared that he could not attain God by spiritual exercises of any kind. But he said that there was one most powerful weapon with him to realise God. That was his love for God. With that love he said he could bind God. God submits only to the power of the devotee's love. Without love all forms of worship are of no use. That was why the Gopikas appealed to Krishna to fill their parched hearts with the love flowing from His flute so that saplings of love could sprout in their hearts.

Devotees entertain sacred thoughts on festival days like Krishnaashtami (birthday of Krishna).

But these are forgotten soon after. They should make every, moment holy. Only by this means can the Divine be realised.

God is omnipresent, but you are tunable to see Him. You see a person. God is the indweller in him. You see his external form and not the Divine in him. But without the power of the Divine how can he exist? You cannot deny the existence of the air all around you, though you cannot see it or grasp it. Likewise God is everywhere but is subtle and invisible. You will experience Him in your heart, when you make it absolutely pure.

You must see the Divine in everyone. This is the true trait of a saadha (ascetic). The wearing of the ochre robe does not make a man a Saadhu. He must possess the qualities of a saadhu. He must be pure-hearted. Transformation of the heart is what is called for. All that you do should lead you nearer to God. When you act in this way nothing bad will touch you.

Triple attributes of Krishna

Krishna is omnipresent. The word has three meanings. "Karshayathi-ithi Krishna" (The man who ploughs is Krishna). The heart is the symbol of a field. The heart should be filled with love.

The seeds of the Lord's name should be sown in it. Krishna encourages the devotee to do all this.

"Aakarshathi-ithi Krishna" (because he attracts, he is Krishna). Krishna has the supreme power of all attraction. By his words, his sport, his music and all his actions he attracts all people. This power of attraction is present in everyone. Hence everyone is potentially Krishna.

"Khushyathi-ithi Krishna" (because he imparts bliss, he is called Krishna). Everyone seeks happiness. The Divine, who is the embodiment of happiness, is in you. God wants you to be happy, but you do not realise it. Try to recognise the source of bliss within you. It is not the true nature of man to be unhappy. When anyone is otherwise, persons around him are concerned about him. You should always be happy because you are the embodiment of the Aathma. Never give way to worry.

As a spark of the divine, you have to behave like the Divine. Do not give room for grief. What use is there in turning over the beads of the rosary while your mind is thinking of mundane matters? First of all, purify your mind. Dedicate all actions to God. Free yourself from all attachments. Treat all things as gifts from God for which you are the custodian and not-the owner.

Avathaars appear to redeem humanity

Embodiments of Love! God's love is pure and simple. His greatest gift is His love. The Gopikas realised this truth and declared: "Oh Lord! we are offering to you the love, which you gave us.

What else can we offer at your feet?"

Do not calculate what you have offered to God in terms of money or otherwise. Whatever you offer, consider only the feeling with which you offered it. Even a small thulasi leaf offered with love becomes a great offering to the Lord. Offer anything with a full and loving heart. By offering with love, you become the embodiment of love. That was the case with Prahlaadha, Naaradha and others. Identify yourself with the name and form of the Divine of your choice. You may carry on all your normal daily duties, but keep in mind always the name of the Lord. That is the injunction of Krishna'

Do not allow any evil thoughts to enter your mind. Then the good thoughts in you will find expression in good deeds.

Develop firm faith in God. In daily life you base all your actions on faith in your dhoby, your barber and many others. Why then don't you place your faith in God.? God is the indweller. Lack of faith in God really means you have no faith in your own self. Faith in yourself leads to faith in God. This is the secret of greatness. Faith in God alone will help you. All others are time-servers.

The lives of all great believers in God show how they were protected by their faith in God through all their difficulties.

Raamadhaas, who was imprisoned by Thaneesha for diverting government revenues to build a temple for Raama and to make jewels for the idols, felt at one time bitter about his sufferings and even blamed Raama for his plight. Later he repented and sought Raama's forgiveness.

devotees should not grieve over their troubles, which are only "passing clouds." Some devotees, like Jaya and Vijaya, were born as opponents of God as a result of a curse, but they were so anxious to return to God that they preferred the role of enemies of God so that they could meet with their death at the hands of God. Avathaars appear for various, reasons to save devotees

Avathaars teach mankind lessons about how to realise God.

Humanity needs divine teachers to redeem it from its troubles. This is the purpose of Avathaars, who come down to show mankind the ways of realising the Divine. You must recognise this truth. The Divine does not make the descent as an Avathaar without a purpose. The purpose is to enable Nature to fulfil its role. To be born as human beings is a rare blessing. The Avathaar instructs humanity how to redeem human existence.

Festivals like Raama Navami and Krishna Janmaashtami are designed to remind people about the purpose of human life devotees who participate in such festivals should learn a lesson from the cows. Absorb as much of the teachings as you can during your stay. Ruminant over them when you go back, like the cows chewing the cud they have catch. Do not forget what has been taught here. After ruminating over what you have heard, try to put into practice what has been taught. Always contemplating on God, make your lives meaningful.

Discourse in Sai Kulvanth Mandap on 25-8-1997.

20. Significance of Ganesha Principle

EMBODIMENTS of Love! One who recognises his identity with the Divine is a real Inaani (the knower of the Absolute).

All Bhaaratheeya festivals are sacred and invested with deep spiritual significance. They are not to be celebrated as mechanical rituals.

Bhaaratheeyas hail Vighneshvara as; "Oh son of Paarvathi! Master of the Ganas (Ganaadhipathi)."

Who is this Paarvathi? What is the relationship between Paarvathi and Ganapathi? People do not normally enquire into these matters.

Usually Paarvathi is considered as the mother of Ganapathi and no one recognises the underlying unity between the two.

Where are Paarvathi and Ganapathi to be located? Are they in the external world or are they immanent in every human being? The truth is both of them are all-pervading and convey the message of Ekaathmabhaavam (spiritual oneness).

Meaning of the name 'Ganapathi'

What is the meaning of the name Ganapathi? Where are the 'Ganas? What is their form? When you investigate this, you find that the Inaanedhriyas and Karmendhriyas (five organs of perception and the five organs of action) are the Ganas. The mind is the master over these ten organs. Buddhi (intellect) is the discriminating faculty above the mind. The ten senses, the mind and the intellect together constitute the Ganas.

In the word Gana, Ga stands for Buddhi (intellect). Na means

Vijnaana (the higher knowledge or wisdom). Ganapathi is the Lord of the intellect and the higher knowledge. The question may be asked: "Are the intellect and the higher knowledge present in the external world or are they to be found within man?" The answer is that He is present within each human being. There is no need to seek for Him in the outside world. Ganapathi dwells in every human being in the form of intellect and wisdom.

When Ganapathi is described as "Paarvathi thanaya," who is this Paarvathi? Paarvathi signifies Prithvi (Mother Earth). Everyone is a child of Mother Earth. The meaning of Paarvathi thanaya (son of Paarvathi) is that Ganapathi, who is the Lord of the Ganas, is the son of Paarvathi, who symbolizes Shakthi (the Divine Energy).

The adoration of Paarvathi and Ganapathi is not of recent origin. Ganapathi is lauded at several places in the Rig Vedha. This clearly shows that Ganapathi is as ancient as the Vedhas.

In several places Ganapathi is mentioned both in the Vedhas and the Upanishaths. There are many prayers addressed to Ganapathi in the Mahaa Naarayanopanishath. There are prayers to him in the Thaithiriya Upanishath also. The Ganapathi Gaayathri Manthra also figures in the former Upanishath.

Ganapathi has the appellation Vinaayaka because there is no master above him. He is all powerful and independent. Without recognising the esoteric significance of the Vinaayaka Principle, people look only at the external form and offer worship in mundane terms.

Vidhya is total awareness of Life

In what form does Vinaayaka--the one who has no master--exist within a human being? It is in the form of the Aathma. The Aathma has no master. The mind is the master of the Indhriyas (senses) Indhra is the master of the Indhriyas. People conceive of Indhra as presiding over his own celestial realm. But as the Lord of the Manas (mind), he resides in everyone. The Buddhi (intellect) which is the master of the mind, is the very embodiment of Jnaana (Wisdom or Awareness). What kind of awareness is this Jnaana? It is Constant Integrated Awareness. It remains unchanged, neither growing nor diminishing. It is called Vijnaana. Unfortunately, nowadays Vijnaana is equated with science. Science is not Vijnaana. Science is phenomenal knowledge. It is based on demonstrability.

Students today worship Ganesha for success in academic studies and. for developing into good scholars. As a matter of fact, all that is learnt by these studies may be termed education or learning but cannot be called Vidhya (true knowledge or wisdom). To apply the term Vidhya, which has a profound inner significance, to modern academic education is a misuse of language.

Vidhya is awareness of the power that animates every cell in one's being. It is through this awareness that man learns all about the meaning of events in one's life from birth to death.

Vidhya, in this sense is "a way of life". Everything you do is part of Vidhya. It is total awareness of life. It comprehends everything in its totality. It is for this kind of total knowledge that you should pray to Vinaayaka. The acquisition of degrees does not constitute Vidhya. To know upto the last moment how you should give up the ghost is Vidhya. The entire life of a man should be regarded as one continuous process of learning. A true student is one who pursues knowledge in this spirit. The student is called Vidhyarthi (vidhya + arthi--seeker of knowledge). The knowledge to be sought is not book knowledge or knowledge of the phenomenal world. It is Aathma jnaana (spiritual knowledge) that should be sought. Knowledge of the Self is the highest knowledge. The Geetha declares: "Aadhyaathma Vidhya Vidhyaanaam" (Among all forms of knowledge I am the knowledge of the Self). The true aim of life is to acquire this knowledge.

Vinaayaka is the preceptor for this knowledge. That preceptor is within you. The Vinaayaka Principle is in everyone. Offerings to Vinaayaka

There is a practice among Hindus when they go to Gaya to give up what they relish most among vegetables and fruits. In modern times this practice has been perverted in such a way that what are given up are the vegetable and fruit they do not like. In this connection there is a mythological story which reveals how the practice of offering fresh green grass to Ganapathi during the Vinaayaka Chathurthi festival originated.

Once, the story goes, Paarvathi and Parameshvara were playing the game of dice, with Nandheeshvara (Parameshvara's vehicle, the bull), as the umpire. Although Eeshvara lost the game, Nandhi declared Him as the winner. Enraged at this unfair decision Paarvathi cursed Nandhi that he would be afflicted with an incurable disease. Nandhi

seeking Paarvathi's forgiveness, explained that he gave the verdict in Parameshvara's favour because the latter was his master and his duty as a servant was to serve him. Paarvathi relented and said that Nandhi would be freed from the curse if he offered to her son Ganapathi what was most relished by Nandhi. Nandhi pondered for a moment and declared that what he loved most as a bull was fresh green grass. He would offer that to Ganapathi. That was how the practice of including fresh green grass among the offerings made to Ganapathi during festival occasions came into vogue.

Ganapathi accepts as offerings many things which men consider useless and trivial. One of the names of Vinaayaka is Arkadronapriya (one who loves thummi and jiledi flowers which are usually not valued by people). Other offerings to Vinaayaka include a special kind of grass.

There is a story relating to this.

Why Eeshvara is known as 'Bhola Shankara' once upon a time there was an Asura (demon) named Gajaasura. He performed a penance.

Eeshvara, pleased with his penance, offered him as a boon whatever he desired. Eeshvara is a deity who is easily propitiated. Hence he is known as Bhola Shankara. When he is pleased with a devotee, He gives the devotee whatever he asks. Sometimes he gets into a difficult situation, as in the case of Bhasmaasura who was granted by Shiva the boon to turn into ashes anyone on whose head he placed his palm. Immediately after getting the boon Bhasmaasura wanted to test his power by trying to place his hand on Shiva's head itself!

What was the boon Shiva gave to Gajaasura? The demon desired that fire should go forth from him continuously so that no one dare approach him. Shiva granted him the boon. Gajaasura

continued to do penance and Shiva used to appear before him off and on once Shiva asked him what he wanted. The demon said- "I want you to dwell in my stomach." Shiva granted the boon and lodged himself in the demon's stomach. Shiva's consort Paarvathi, searched for Shiva everywhere and could not find Him. As a last resort, she went to her brother, Vishnu, and appealed to Him to trace the whereabouts of her husband. The all-knowing Lord assured her:

"Don't worry dear sister. Your husband is Bhola Shankara. He grants readily whatever boon his devotee prays for, without considering the consequences. I suspect that he must have got into some trouble. I shall find out what has happened."

How Vinaayaka got Gajaasura's head

Vishnu, who is the director of the cosmic play, staged a minor drama.

He converted Nandhi

(Shiva's bull) into a dancing-bull and led it before Gajaasura, while himself assuming the role of a piper playing music on the pipe while the bull did the dancing.

Gajaasura was in ecstasy over the dancing performance of the bull. He asked the piper (Vishnu) what he wanted. The piper replied- "Can you give what I ask?" "What do you take me for? I shall readily give you whatever you ask." The piper said: "If that is so, release from your stomach Shiva who is dwelling there."

Gajaasura then realised that the piper was none other than Vishnu Himself, who alone could know the secret of Shiva's presence inside his stomach. He fell at the feet of Vishnu, released Shiva from his stomach and prayed to Him for a boon. He said- "I have been blessed by many boons from you. My last request is that all should cherish my memory by worshipping my head after I pass away" Shiva thereupon brought his son and placed Gajaasura's head on him.

Ever since, the tradition has prevailed in Bhaarith that every auspicious function of any kind commences with worship of Ganapathi. It was the result of Shiva's boon to Gajaasura.

What is the inner significance of worshipping the elephant-faced deity? The elephant is a symbol of might and magnitude. The elephant's foot is larger than that of any other ani-1hal. The elephant can make its way through the densest jungle. In this way, it signifies the quality of a leader who shows the way for others. The elephant is highly intelligent. The elephant is also known for its fidelity and gratitude. In any circumstance it will not forget its master. Even in its last moments, if it hears the voice of its master it will open its eyes and look for him. It will sacrifice its life for its master. These are the lessons man should learn from the elephant.

Intelligence without gratitude is valueless. Every man should be grateful to those who have helped him.

Significance of steam-cooked offerings to Ganesha

There are some inner secrets that should be noted in the worship of Ganesha. Bhaarithheeyas make some special offerings to Ganesha as food offerings. These preparations are made entirely by using steam instead of heat from a burning stove. Combining rice flour with jaggery and thil (sesame) seeds, balls are prepared which are cooked in steam. In Ayurvedha this edible is accorded a high place for its curative properties. The jaggery in the edible is a remedy for various ailments. The til seeds serve to purify the arteries. It also helps to improve the vision. The inner meaning of all this is that the food offerings to Ganesha have health giving properties. It should be noted that edibles cooked in steam are easy to digest. In the Super Speciality Hospital, steamcooked idlies (rice cakes) are offered to heart patients the very next day after surgery. Oily preparations are not given. Idlies are given because they are easily digested.

The Vinaayaka Principle, in short, symbolises health, bliss, peace, wisdom, prosperity, and many other things. Unfortunately this truth is not recognised by most people. People are content to offer some kind of mechanical worship to any odd figure made of clay and add to the pollution around them. What should be offered to God are things which will please Him. This is what Paarvathi enjoined on Nandheeshvara. She told him: "Offer to my son what will please him and what is most pleasing to you."

The Vinaayaka festival is designed to celebrate the offer of such pleasing things to Ganesha.

Symbolism of the Mouse

Another notable fact about Vinaayaka is his vehicle, the Muushika (mouse). What does the mouse represent? It represents darkness, which is the symbol of ignorance. The mouse moves about in the dark. Ganapathi is regarded as controlling the darkness of ignorance.

The mouse is also known for its strong sense of Vaasana (smell). Based on the smell emanating from an object, the mouse finds its way to it. The inner significance of Vaasana in relation to humanity is the heritage of Vaasanas which they bring from their previous lives. These Vaasanas (inherited tendencies) account for the actions of human beings in their present lives.

They also signify desires. Without recognising this underlying significance and desires, people merely wonder how a large being like Vinaayaka could ride on a tiny creature like a mouse.

Vinaayaka signifies the triumph of wisdom over ignorance and of egolessness over desires.

Once there was a contest between Vinaayaka and his younger brother, Subrahmanya, as to which of them would go round the world first. Vinaayaka was highly intelligent and had extraordinary discriminating power. Above all, he was totally free from self-interest of any kind. This is the supreme attribute of the Divine. There is no trace of self-interest in what the Divine does. Few people can understand the true nature of God's love. Men tend to compare their own love with that of God. They do not realise that their love is based on attachment to what they like or what they are accustomed to enjoy the attraction or otherwise is not inherent in the objects themselves but in the vaasanas (cravings based on past impressions) of the individuals concerned.

Vivekanandha's discovery

Vivekanandha discovered this truth by observing the reactions of different persons to the same situation. seeing a man who had fallen on the wayside after taking intoxicating drinks, two thieves, who were themselves drunk, remarked that the man must be a thief like themselves who had got drunk after a thieving expedition in the night. A man subject to epileptic fits thought that the man must have fallen in a fit. A saadhu seeing the unconscious state of the man, thought that he might be a yogi in a state of Nirvikalpa Samaadhi (super conscious state of meditation) and started massaging his legs reverentially. These varied reactions showed that men judge things not as they really are, but on the basis of their own feeling and experiences. Vivekanandha then realised that his doubts regarding the spiritual eminence of Svaami Raamakrishna were the result of his own misguided thinking and had no relation to Paramahansa's qualities.

he realised that there was no blemish in Raamakrishna and the fault lay with his own feelings.

He regretted having come away from Raamakrishna and confessed to his mother his grievous mistake. He appealed to his mother to permit him to go back to Raamakrishna. She allowed him to act according to his inclinations. Vivekanandha realised that man's wayward thoughts accounted for his doubts and confusion regarding the Divine. The Divine is beyond blemish and deficiencies. Hence God is described as perfect, free from any taint, formless and attributeless.

Ganapathi has been described as Aprameya (transcendent and all-encompassing). Hence he can be worshipped in any manner.

Prayers and tests

Chittibabu, in his speech earlier, appealed to Svaami to give you all good qualities, good thoughts and the strength to lead a good life. He went on speaking about receiving favours from Svaami, but said nothing about what he was offering to Svaami. God is ready to offer anything you want. But you must be eligible to receive it, like a depositor who can withdraw money upto the amount of his deposit. The same rule applies to what one can receive from God. It depends on the size of his deposit with the Divine. Then the cheque of his prayer will be duly honoured.

To enable your prayers to reach God you have to affix the stamp of 'faith' and address it with

'love' If you have faith and love, your prayers will reach God regardless of distance.

You must see that your love for God is pure and unsullied. You must be prepared to subject yourself to God's rests. The sooner you pass these rests, the nearer you will get to God.

There can be no spiritual advance without going through these rests. Students should be aware that for going to a higher class they have to pass the prescribed rests. In life, you are tested as to how much you are attached to the ephemeral things of the world and how much you yearn for the Divine. If your love for God is a tiny fraction of your love for mundane things, how do you expect God to shower His grace on you? (Svaami sang a song of

Jayadeva in which he exhorts men to devote at least a fraction of the time they spend on their possessions and family to contemplation of God who will come to their rescue at the time of death).

How much more sacred it would be if men thought about God even for a few moments out of the many hours they waste on thinking about worldly things? People should develop their faith in this truth. Whatever faith they have in themselves that faith they should have in God. That is the mark of greatness. One who has no faith in himself, how can he have faith in God? Turn your faith away from the temporal and the transient to the unchanging eternal reality.

Power of faith

The power of faith is illustrated in an incident from the life of Christ. Once a blind man approached Jesus and prayed: "Lord! Restore my sight." Jesus asked him: "Do you believe that I can restore your sight unhesitatingly: "Yes, Lord!" "If that is so, then open your eyes and see it," said Jesus. The blind man opened his eyes and got his sight. Likewise, people pray to Svaami to give something or other. Do you believe that I have the power to give what you seek? My response is dependent on your faith.

Even a person like Vivekanandha had doubts about Svaami Raamakrishna Paramahansa's saintliness. There have always been doubting Thomas. To test Raamakrishna's aversion to wealth and possessions, Vivekanandha once kept some gold coins under the pillow of Raamakrishna. The moment he reclined on his bed, Raamakrishna felt as if he was lying on a bed of thorns. Immediately, Vivekanandha realised how baseless were his doubts. He felt that to rise to the heights of the great souls he himself should elevate his soul. Men today are like a man on the ground who wishes to see the pilot of a plane moving in the sky. The only way he can see the pilot is to get into the plane himself. To experience God you have to aspire for a vision of God. That is the way to lead an ideal and blissful life.

Ganapathi should be worshipped for this purpose because he is the master of the senses and only the mastery of the senses can make man turn his mind God-ward. If you want to lead a life of happiness, free from troubles and difficulties, you have to pray to Ganapathi, the remover of all obstacles. There is no need to go to any temple. Vighneshvara dwells in each one of you as your Buddhi (intelligence) and Vijnana (wisdom). When you make proper use of your inherent intelligence and wisdom, you will be successful in life.

People must realise the inextricable union of Prakriti (Nature) and Purusha (the Supreme Divine) and base their life on this sense of oneness.

Humanness is a combination of the body and consciousness. Man has to embark on self-scrutiny as the first step in spirituality. Only then the reality can be comprehended. No one undertakes self-examination, though everyone is ready to condemn others. Only the person who is prepared to examine and punish himself for his lapses is competent to judge others.

Why Ganapathi festival lasts for ten days

Students! Realise that you have a conscience that is your guide and consciousness which represents your divinity. Ganapathi, who presides over the senses, should be your guide in acquiring mastery over the senses. There is an inner meaning in worshipping Ganapathi for ten days. The idea is that each day should be dedicated to acquiring control over one of the Indhriyas (sense organs).

Students and devotees should realise that control of the senses is quite simple. What is necessary is not to encourage negative feelings when they arise, but to adopt positive attitudes. For instance, Buddha confronted the anger of a demon with his love and transformed him.

Many students today are subject to depression and are confused in mind. The reason for this is their weakness owing to lack of self-confidence. When there is total faith in God there will be no room for depression.

Students! There is need for observing festivals like Vinaayaka Chaturthi for external satisfaction, but what is more important is to realise the inner significance of Vinaayaka worship which is likely to have lasting effect. The worship of inanimate idols should lead to contemplation on the subtle spiritual entity represented by the idol. This is the process by which realisation of the Aathma (Self) takes place.

Realise and act on the basis that the living Divinity is within you, Ganapathi represents the ideal person who is guided by intelligence and wisdom. Engage yourself in acrs which will please the Divine such as moderation in speech, giving up ill-will and hatred and eschewing all bad thoughts and restraint on desires. By combining spiritual practices with academic studies make your life fruitful.

Discourse in Sai Kulwant Hall on 7-10-1997.

God is ignored in sunshine. He is wanted only when there is no light. Devotion must persist and flourish, unaffected by time, place or circumstance.

Baba

21. Welcome God's tests

What can kalipurusha do

To one whose heart is filled with compassion,

Whose speech is adorned by truth,

Whose body is dedicated to the welfare of others?

EMBODIMENTS of Love! Only that person can be said to lead a full human existence whose heart is filled with compassion, whose speech is adorned by Truth and whose body is dedicated to the service of others. Fullness in life is marked by the harmony of thought, word and deed.

The heart should be filled with compassion. Every speech of a human being should be adorned by Truth. Everyone should note the purpose of human life. The ancient adage declares: The body is given for service to others." The body should be used not only for one's own purposes but also for the benefit of others. In every human being Divinity is present in a subtle form. But man is deluded by this unmanifested presence of the Divine into believing that God does not exist. The innumerable waves on the vast ocean contain the same water as the ocean regardless of their forms. Likewise, although human beings have myriads of names and forms, each is a wave on the ocean of Sath-Chith-Anandha (Being-Aware-ness-Bliss).

Every human being is invested with immortality. He is the embodiment of love. Unfortunately he fails to share this love with others in society. The root cause of this condition is the fact that man is consumed by selfishness and self-interest. All his words, thoughts and actions are inspired by self-interest. He has become a puppet in the hands of self-interest.

Only when this self-interest is eradicated man will be able to manifest his inner divinity. Every individual is an incarnation of the Divine. But few attempt to understand this. Developing attachment to the body and forgetting his Divine essence, man leads a meaningless existence.

To get rid of selfishness, man has to engage himself in selfless service and chanting the name of God.

Show gratitude to God

Man leads his life on earth, depending on the mutually inter-related five elements: ether, air, fire, water and earth. Every object in the world, whether it is a bird or a sheep or anything else, has a value of its own. Man alone has lost his value because of his involvement in mundane pursuits.

Man has no gratitude to the five elements which confer on him gratis innumerable precious benefits like light, heat, air and water. Man has to pay a price for so many small amenities like electricity and running water. But what price does he pay for the light of the sun who illumines the world? This light is a gift of the Divine. What price do you pay for a soft breeze or a heavy downpour of rain? God is providing freely such precious benefits to man. What gratitude does man show to God for all these? The only way to show one's gratitude to the five elements is Smarana (to chant the Lord's name incessantly). For so many trivial services in life we express thanks, but what thanks do we offer to God who is the provider of the most precious benefits in life?

Chant the Name from the depth of your heart

In expressing your gratitude to God by chanting His name, you should do the chanting from the depth of your heart and not as a musical performance. Raavana, for instance, used to repeat the five syllable Shiva Manthras "Namah Shivaaya" constantly, but did not give up any of his demonic qualities because the recitation was done mechanically.

On the other hand, Prahlaadha, though he was the son of a Raakshasa, repeated the Naaraayana Manthra-- "Om namo Naaraayana" continually with all his heart and soul. This served to save him from all the terrible ordeals to which his father, Hiranyakashipu, subjected him. His father cast him from a precipice, had him trodden over by elephants, got him bitten by venomous reptiles, pushed him into the sea, but he came out unscathed from all these ordeals by churning the Lord's name from his heart. Every instrument of torture turned into the Lord's form.

It must be noted that reciting the Lord's name with one's whole heart is true Smarana. The chanting of the name should not be done to earn the approbation of others or for show. It is enough if one is able to please the Lord. In the process one becomes united with the Divine.

Man, who should manifest his inherent loving nature, has become stony-hearted. To accomplish his desires man should cultivate forbearance, love and compassion and not resort to sinful means.

Your desires will not be fulfilled by causing harm to others. You cannot please God if you are full of envy, pride and ostentation. God will respond only to unsullied love and not to wealth or position.

Chaithanya appealed to Krishna to show him the path to realise God, as he was not acquainted with spiritual practices of any kind. He said that the only means at his command was his pure love for God.

Many people speak about getting a vision of God. This is a naive desire. They do not realise that the Divine is present in everything they see. The Vedhas declared that man fails to see the Divine though the Divine is manifest in everything that he sees. The Vedhas declared such a person as a complete fool. Everything in the universe is permeated by the Divine. Everyone should seek to realise his/her divinity and recognise the divinity in all beings.

Bali's supreme offering This profound truth is expounded in all the scriptures of Bhaarith. Men are used to making all kinds of gifts--land, wealth, property, etc. But the greatest gift of them all is to offer one's self, as Emperor Bali did. Even his preceptor Shukraacharya, warned him against making such a gift and tried to prevent it.

Emperor Bali had a heart filled with compassion, was a firm adherent of Truth and was dedicated to the welfare of his people because of these three qualities, the Lord showered His grace on Bali. Bali firmly told his preceptor that there could be no greater sin than going back on one's plighted word. "Whatever troubles may happen to me I will not go back on my promise," declared Bali. Emperor Bali was always concerned to promote the people's well-being and happiness.

Everyone should act according to the role allotted to him in life. This can be illustrated by a story from the life of King Bhoja in which an actor, first appearing as a renunciant in the King's court, declined his offer of a plate of gold coins, and on the second, appearing as a dancer, declared that the gold coins offered to him as a dancer were inadequate. Today persons don the Kaashaayam (ochre robe), but their hearts are polluted. People do not live up to the roles they assume.

When you are given the human form, you should play your part as a human being. As a student, or as a householder, or as a renunciant, you should play your specific role well.

Recognise your Divinity

The mere form of a human being is not significant. What is essential is the observance of human values. Men exhibit external enrages, but there is no mental transformation. Many people come repeatedly to Puttaparthi. Physically they have changed, but there is no change in their mental outlook. Without such transformation man ceases to be human.

Gunas (qualities) should change, not the Guddalu (raiment).

The Divinity in each human being will become manifest the day each one recognises the Divinity in every being. You must all realise the supreme sacredness of human birth. The qualities of forbearance, love and broad-mindedness should germinate in every human being.

In ancient days everyone developed self-reliance and did not depend on the services of others.

During the reign of King Bhoja, the Queen used to take care of all the needs of the king, including cooking and other domestic chores. Today people are lazy and depend on others for many things which they can do themselves. The ancient rulers used to teach these lessons in selfreliance to their subjects.

When the Queen was attending on King Bhoja, she discovered signs of the greying of his hair owing to old age. She felt sad about the onset of old age, but the King told her that these were the first signs which showed that he should prepare for his final end. There were four signs from providence about what was in store for man. The first warning comes from grey hair. If this is ignored, then cataract appears dimming the sight. The third message from providence is the appearance of wrinkles. The fourth warning comes when the hands and feet begin to tremble. If all these are ignored the final end comes at the appointed time. "As is the king so are the subjects" Taking heed of the first warning the king summoned his Chief Minister and told him that he was repairing to the forest for penance, leaving the affairs of the kingdom in the minister's charge. The moment the subjects heard about the king's decision, they declared that they would leave for the forest to do penance for securing long life for the king as there was no use their staying in the kingdom without their loving and lovable king. The people offered penance and the Lord appeared before them and asked what they wanted. They said the Lord should bless their king with long life. "So be it," said the Lord. The people announced with joy the Lord's boon to the king that he would live for a hundred years. The moment she heard this, the Queen sought the king's permission to go to the forest for doing penance. While the people wondered what had prompted the Queen to go to the forest the Lord appeared before the Queen and asked what she wanted. The Queen said that long life for the king with no such longevity for the people distressed her. She prayed that the people also should be blessed with equal longevity. Pleased with her high-minded prayer, the Lord said that not only the people but the Queen also would be blessed with long life. In those sacred days, the people and the rulers were equally broad minded and noble. The rulers and the people matched each other in their goodness. The adage declares: 'As is the king, so are the subjects.' Today it is rare to find such rulers or such citizens. Each one is wallowing in one's own selfishness. It is essential that everyone should cultivate a broad outlook. Everyone should recognise that God is the indweller in every heart. Then alone humanness will become meaningful and redemptive. Goodness is an index of quality This day is the sacred day when the Lord as Vaamana Avathaar conferred liberation on Emperor

Bali. Bali was a great person. But he had one weakness. He suffered from a slight sense of ego.

Who is a great man? One who sees the human even in Naaraayana (God). But a good man is one who sees God even in man. Hence it is more important for people to be good rather than being great. Most parents these days desire that their children should become great in various ways---in scholarship, wealth and position. This is totally misconceived. They should really desire that their children should be good. Greatness signifies quantity. Goodness is an index of quality.

Because of the undesirable quality of ego in Emperor Bali, Vaamana incarnated to eradicate it.

Bali was known for his love of his subjects. Poverty was unknown in his realm. He looked after the welfare of his people with equal eye. He felt proud about his kingdom and his people.

Vaamana wanted to remove even this pride and redeem Bali.

Before leaving for the nether-world Bali gave a promise to his people whom he loved. He said he would come back to them every, year on Onam Day and bless them.

Onam is celebrated as the day of advent of Vaamana and Bali. It marks the beginning of a new life. That is why it is celebrated by wearing new clothes and resolving to lead a new life.

Even now, despite the vicissitudes of history and the occasional manifestation of atheistic tendencies, the Kerala people have remained pious and God-loving. You see devotees everywhere. When you watch the people going in and coming out of Padhmanaabha Svaami

Temple, you see the depth of their devotion. The existence of opposing qualities is part of the nature of life.

For instance, pleasure and pain go together. Pain is often the means by which God tests human beings. They should welcome such tests, because they serve to promote one's spiritual development. Students should welcome examinations because they are preliminary to promotions to a higher standard devotees at the present day do not relish "tests". They forget that without overcoming tests they will remain where they are. Even students unfortunately are averse to examinations. This is foolish. Only through tests they can progress in life. You should welcome tests and difficulties. By overcoming them your divinity is revealed. The Paandavas realised their Divinity only when they faced many ordeals during their exile.

Recognise the power of love Embodiments of love! Your foremost aim today should be to recognise the power of love. God dwells in every one's heart as love incarnate. The goal of life is to recognise this truth and share your love with those around you.
Every human being should deem self-realisation as the main purpose of life and dedicate all his activities to the service of his fellow-beings, with constant remembrance of God as the indweller in all. This is the way to redeem one's life.
Renunciation is a very much misunderstood term. It is not mere giving up of family and possessions. It is the total giving up of possessive feelings of any kind, whether they relate to family or other parochial attachments. (Svaami illustrated this truth
by references to incidents from the life of Svaami Raamatheertha, a renunciant who could not forget his regional Vaasanas even after settling down in Rishikhesh). Real renunciation means giving up all ideas of attachment to anything. Love can emerge only when there is such total detachment. Consider everything as a manifestation of God.
Discourse in Sai Kulvanth Hall on 14- 9-1997.
Man can realise his mission on the earth only when he reveres all others as Divine. And man has to worship God in the form of Man.
God appears before him as a blind beggar, an idiot, a leper, a child, a decrepit old man, a criminal or a mad man. You must see even behind those veils the Divine Embodiment of Love, Power and Wisdom--the Sai--and worship Him through Seva.
Baba
22. Recover the spirit of sacrifice
Bhakthi alone confers the supreme good;
Bhakthi alone destroys the disease of worldly existence;
Bhakthi alone fosters yearning the Supreme;
Bhakthi alone leads to final liberation.
EMBODIMENTS of Love! For the realisation of the Supreme, Bhakthi (devotion) is the royal road. The Lord's name has been offered to man to escape from the cycle of birth and death and the diseases incidental to human life.
From ancient times Bhaarith has been propagating divine teachings to all mankind. The true aim of spirituality is to foster among the people devotion as the essence of Bhaarithheeya Culture.
It is not arms or political institutions that protect a nation. It is love of the country, the spirit of sacrifice and faith in the Divine which serve to protect the nation.
Every man and woman should be filled with the spirit of sacrifice, devotion and the spiritual urge to protect the nation. From age to age Bhaarith has been the spiritual leader for all nations. It has welcomed people, of different cultures with open arms despite the vicissitudes of history.

This is the unique stamp of Bhaarithheeya culture.
Culture determines the daily conduct of the people. It is their way of life. Bhaarithheeya culture helped to promote mutual good-will and harmony among the people.
But unfortunately people have gone astray and are subject to unrest and disorder today.
The nation can recover true freedom and peace only when it turns to spirituality Love of the Divine should take root in the heart. The world has lost peace because people have no fear of sin and no love of God and are no longer human in their behaviour. The spirit of sacrifice has vanished.
Heroism of Karna
Mankind needs rulers inspired by the spirit of sacrifice and people filled with love of God. The history of Bhaarith is full of stories of sacred lives. One such is the story of Karna, a hero of the Mahaabhaaritha When Karna lay wounded on the battlefield, Krishna was grief-stricken, although the Paandavas had reason to rejoice over his fall. Krishna told Arjuna that the passing of Karna would be a great loss for Bhaarith. No one could excel him in giving gifts. Bhaarith has always given the first place to the quality of sacrifice. Krishna assumed the role of a Brahmana to prove to Arjuna the readiness of Karna to make the highest sacrifice even while he was bleeding on the battlefield. Karna knocked out one of his gold-filled teeth to offer to the Brahmana the gold he wanted for making the mangala suthra (marriage pendant) at his son's wedding. When the Brahmana refused to accept it as it was taken from his mouth, Karna cleansed it by producing pure water from the earth by aiming an arrow at the ground. Arjuna felt humbled by this demonstration of Karna's unrivalled magnanimity and prowess. Krishna extolled Karna's devotion and large-hearted generosity and revealed His Divine form to Karna.
He told Krishna that having seen the Divine form he had no other boon to ask before he passed away.
Every Bhaarithheeya should develop the spirit of sacrifice which has been the hall-mark of Bhaarithheeya civilization. God can only be realised through sacrifice.
All the scriptures and

epics have extolled the supremacy of sacrifice. All religious practices without sacrifice are artificial rituals alone. God examines your feelings and not your external observances. Divinity can be experienced only when worship of God is done with pure heart and all one's activities are wholeheartedly. There must be complete harmony between thought, word and deed. True humanness consists in the combination of three H's---Heart, head and Hand. Misuse of discrimination Embodiments of Love! Think for a moment how people in Bhaarith are misusing their power of discrimination. When people build big mansions they allot a small corner for the worship of God. God says: "Oh fool! What sort of room is it for me? Your heart is my abode." Meeraabai also declared: "Krishna! My heart is your temple." Treat the heart as the temple and consider the entire mansion as His. You may use it as you like, but realise that God is everywhere. Have the faith that God is omnipresent. This morning we had the Rathothsavam (festival of Golden Chariot) organised by the Sai Paadhuka Trust, Madurai, under the dedicated guidance of Shri Subramania Chettiar, who has been a steadfast devotee of Bhagavaan for over fifty years. Over many years Subramania Chettiar has been engaged in promoting Paadhuka Seva (service of the Holy Sandals of the Lord). It is not easy for one at his advanced age to carry a burden of this magnitude. I am aware of the good service he has done so far. Hereafter he should take rest and devote himself to his personal saadhana. It is true that service is a form of service to God. But he is no longer in a position to do this. Moreover you have to be told about today's car festival. Whether you believe or not I have no liking for such functions. What should be offered to Bhagavaan is unsullied love. That love is God. Live in love. Offer that love to the Divine. Why should I be bothered with this immense burden of a Golden Chariot? I do not at any time desire such things. Instead of this, you may spend any amount of money on social service activities. Offer only pure love to Bhagavaan Here or anywhere else, what you have to offer to Bhagavaan is pure love. Do not make such offerings as Golden Chariot anywhere. Anyone who desires such offerings cannot be Divine.

When the Divine is immanent in everything, what is it that you can offer to the Divine? How are you eligible to make any offering at all? Everything belongs to God. Henceforth devotees should not bring here any gold ornaments or ornamental chariots or golden chariots. It is better to sell such objects and use the money for providing drinking water to the people. From the outset I had resolved on three things in the Bhaarithheeya tradition. from the ancient times Bhaarith has been providing three things to the people. One is Vidhya (education). Next comes Vaidhya (free medical aid). Vidhya relates to the head. Vaidhya is related to the heart. For this reason I have been providing free education. Nowhere in the world is such free education offered. Today, heavy donations have to be given for admission even to the first standard. As I feel that every child belongs to me, I see nothing special in offering free education to my children. All are mine and hence I offer these things to them. What I give and what I accept is love. It is a relationship of love to love, heart to heart. Promote purity of heart Therefore, whatever Subramania Chettiar may feel, if somebody is ready to bid for this Chariot, I shall be glad to give it away and use the money for providing drinking water to more villages. He brought the chariot here out of his immense love. He had one overwhelming desire in his life. He was keen to celebrate this Rathothsavam (festival of Golden Chariot) in his life time. He did not worry about what happens to him thereafter. It was to please him that I mounted this Chariot. Otherwise I would not have gone near it at all. I have no desires of this nature. Nor should you entertain such intentions. The relationship between God and devotee is heart to heart and. Has nothing to do with external paraphernalia. You must cultivate this internal quality. Promote purity of the heart. Engage yourselves in selfless service. You have to cherish three cardinal principles---Fear of sin, Love of God and Moral life in society That you will foster your devotion in this manner, I bless you all. Discourse in Sai Kulvanth Hall on 22-9-1997. 23. Foster firm faith in God Who destroys conceit becomes endearing By subduing hatred one is freed from grief By overcoming desires one becomes selfless By destroying greed, one achieves happiness EMBODIMENTS of Love! As long as a man remains arrogant - full of Ahamkaara (self-conceit)-

-no one will love him. However wealthy one may be, whatever position he may hold, however intelligent he may be, if he is arrogant, even his wife and children will not love him. The day he sheds his egoistic pride, all will begin to love him. If one desires to earn the love of the world, he has to get rid of his egoistic pride, Ahamkaara---"I-am-the-doer."

Only the egoless person deserves the world's love. "Krodham haithvaa na sochathi"

(Destroying anger, one is free from grief). As long as one is filled with Krodha (anger or hatred), one cannot be happy. In this world people undertake all kinds of saadhanas to get rid of grief or unhappiness. But whatever penances, japas or sacrifices they do, they are unable to get rid of unhappiness. The reason is they have not been able to get rid of their hatred. Raavana was a valorous person, with many talents and accomplishments. But because he was filled with hatred, he could have no happiness.

By harbouring hatred, man renders his life miserable. "The angry man fails in everyone of his enterprises." (Thelugu saying). Anger brings in its train all kinds of ill-fame. Haunted by infamy, he can have no happiness.

Conquer desires and greed

"Kaamam haithvaa nissvaarthavaan bhavathi" (By conquering desire, one becomes unselfish).

As long as one is overwhelmed by desires, one cannot be contented. He loses control over his senses. He is intoxicated with insatiable desires. No doubt man cannot avoid desires. But there should be a limit to them. Limitless desires can result only in ruin. Prosperity will elude him. The moment man is able to control his desires, all things will come to him of their own accord.

"Lobham hithvaa sukhee bhavathi" (Conquering greed, man realises happiness). Greed is another cause of human misery. Greed makes a man distant from every kind of happiness... material, intellectual or spiritual. Greed accounts for the failure of Dhuryodhana and Dhushshaasana to feel happy despite all their wealth and power. Hence people must banish greed from their hearts.

How is this to be done? When they foster the spirit of thyaaga (sacrifice), greed will vanish.

With greed-filled hearts there is no room for joy. You cannot fill a tumbler full of water with milk. First empty the tumbler and then fill it with milk. Likewise, get rid of greed and fill your heart with thyaaga. "A mind full of evil thoughts has no room for good thoughts." (Thelugu saying).

Embodiments of Love! Take note of the fact that the rapid passage of time is consuming man's life-span at a rapid pace like the melting of an iceberg. The end comes even before man realises his role in life. It would be a shame if human life is wasted in this manner.

The One chose to become the many Man suffers from numerous ills because he has not understood the purpose of life. The first thing he has to realise is that God is one, by whatever name and in whatever form the Divine is worshipped. The one chose to become the many. "God is one. The wise hail Him by many names" is the Vedhic pronouncement. It is the imagination of the observers which accounts for the apparent multiplicity of the Divine. The sun is only one, but his reflections appear in a myriad vessels. Likewise God is present in the hearts of different beings in varied forms and natures.

For the individual self, the body is like a chariot (or a temple). The different parts of the body have different functions as the different parts of a car. The four aims of life Dharma, Artha, Kaama and Moksha. (Righteousness, wealth, desire-fulfilment and Liberation)--are like the four wheels. The wheels have to be filled with the air of Vishvaasam (faith) without which they cannot run. The wheels can move only when they are properly steered. The steering is done by the mind in the human body. To get the mind working, the switch of Buddhi has to be turned on.

The stomach is the engine for the human chariot. The food you consume is the petrol. The Divine is the charioteer in the body It is the. Aathma (Self in all). When this is understood, one can reach the destination of human existence.

All the potencies present in the external world are present in man. The material substances constituting the human body have together very small value. But realise how valuable the human body itself is. To animate the physical body a vibrant power is needed. That vibration power is derived from the Praana (Life-Force). All the activities of the body are rendered possible by this Life-Force. The life-force itself derives its vibrancy (or virtuality) from a higher source---the spiritual power of radiation. It is these three potencies that are symbolised by the terms Bhur, Bhuvah and Suvah in the Gaayathri Manthra. Ignoring these profound truths men are wasting their energies and live in meaningless pursuits.

 People should establish the right relationship with God. This means that spiritual exercises like chanting the names of the Lord or meditation on God should not be verbal or mechanical but should come from the heart. Raavana was a worshipper of Shiva. But it was all formal. His heart was not in it. So, he remained a Raakshasa. Those today who do the chanting of the Lord's name without their heart in it must be said to belong to the Raavana breed.
 How to pray
 People must pray to God with Love for God and not for petty favours or material benefits.
 People must seek the Divine internally, not in external objects.
 Devotees should strive for transformation in their hearts and minds
 so that they totally give up their attachment to worldly objects and get immersed in God. God values your feelings and not your physical performances. Make the Lord's name the goad for controlling the mind which tends to behave like an elephant in rut.
 Men should seek to lead ideal lives in the service of society Above all,
 they should act according to the dictates of their conscience. There should be harmony in thought, word and deed at all times.
 When the Paadhukas are worshipped, the thoughts should be concentrated on the Feet of the Lord. Bharatha is the supreme example of one who worshipped Raama's Paadhukas with such devotion. Settling himself in a hermitage outside Ayodhya, he worshipped Raama's Paadhukas with such concentration for 14 years that his mind merged in the Lotus Feet of Raama. He identified himself totally with Raama and dedicated every moment to Raama.
 Develop one-pointed concentration
 Devotees should develop that kind of one-pointed concentration.
 There is no need to go in search of God who is omnipresent. If devotees develop Prema nethra (a loving vision) they can have the vision of the Divine within themselves.
 Just as no seed can sprout without rain and without seeds no rain can produce a crop, the devotee must sow the seeds of Naama-smarana (chanting the Lord's name) and develop devotion with the help of the shower of grace from the Divine. This was the prayer of the Gopikas to Krishna that he should water their parched hearts by the flow of love from his flute. The Gopikas prayed to Krishna to play on his flute in such a way that the essence of the Vedhas flowed out of it as melodious music. (Bhagavaan sang the Gopika-song melodiously).

 Everyone should try to convert the body into a flute for the Divine to make His music flow through it. The body should be made a fit instrument for such music. Then it becomes a means of service to others. The best way to love God is to love all, serve all. You must learn even to love your enemy A kind word even to an enemy may eliminate his hatred. It is through love that man should refine his nature.
 Every prayer, every name used in japa or worship should come from the depths of the heart. All names and manthras should be recited with a full understanding of the meaning of each word.
 Some famous musicians mispronounce the Thelugu words in a Thyaagaraaja Keerthana (musical composition) which completely distorts its meaning. At the Paadhuka festival banners have been put up misspelling the Sanskrit word Paadhuka as Baadhuga. This sort of mispronunciation
 and misspelling of Sanskrit words should be avoided.
 Look upon God as a friend Thyaagaraaja used to address Raama in all his Keerthanas in the singular. In the famous Keerthana "Raara maa intidhaaka" he invites. Raama in familiar terms to come to his house (after he had recovered the image of Raama from the Cauvery river).
 The familiarity is an expression of his devotion to Raama.
 You must look upon God as an "Old friend." There is no greater friend in the world than God.
 God only looks at the purity of your loving devotion. Treat the universe as your text-book and your heart as your teacher. There will be no need to seek God elsewhere. All that devotees need to do is to use all their limbs and organs of perception to experience the Divine. Tulsidas used to lament that as long as he did not use his limbs to experience God he was a useless cripple.
 No devotee should allow his faith in God to weaken under any circumstances. You will achieve victory by facing any adverse circumstance with faith in God.
 Embodiments of Love! Foster intense faith in God. All other beliefs are of no avail.
 Discourse in Sai Kulvanth Hall on 23-9-1997.
 24. From the corporeal to the Divine EMBODIMENTS of Love! The body, the Sense organs, the mind and the intellect are the instruments for a human being. Only the person who understands the secret of these instruments will be able to comprehend the Aathmik Principle. If a man cannot understand the vesture he is wearing, how can he understand the mystery of the Infinite Indwelling Spirit?

First comes the body it is called Dheha because its ultimate destiny is cremation. The body is burnt after life goes out of it. The body may be judged by its form. But it is in fact a receptacle for all kinds of garbage and is subject to numerous ills of the flesh.

Recognising its

impermanence, man should turn his mind towards the feet of the Divine.

The body has also another name, Shareera, which means that which is subject to decay.

The body at the beginning is a lump of flesh (as foetus). Then it acquires an attractive form.

Youth confers on it special charm. In old age it develops deformities.

The body is consumed by the fire of worry when a man is alive or is burnt on the funeral pyre when he is dead.

The Scriptures declare that man is endowed with a body primarily to lead a righteous life. The Bhagavath Geetha describes the body as Kshethra. One meaning of this term is that it is the abode of the Divine. Places of pilgrimage are called Kshethras.

Another meaning of the term

Kshethra is "a field." If you want to grow a crop on a field, you have to prepare it suitably for the purpose. Ploughing, sowing and watering have to be done for the crop to grow. As is the seed so is the crop. Likewise, the actions of the body determine the nature of one's life. Everyone should resolve to perform good- deeds to enjoy good results.

"Both the body and the Aathma are divine"

The body as Kshethra is a temple in which the Divine dwells as Kshethrajna, the knower of the Kshethra. The Kshethrajna is the Aathma (the Self). The Geetha declares that both the body and the Aathma are divine.

However great a scholar may be, however profound his knowledge of the scriptures, he has to learn all about the body because it brings with it the consequences of the previous lives of the individual. The body is the basic instrument for all actions in this life and for the acquisition of all knowledge and skills. Everyone at the time of birth brings with him a necklace from the Creator made up of the results of his good and bad actions in past lives.

Everyone reaps only the fruits of what he sows. Only good actions can produce good results.

Your happiness or sorrow is related to the nature of your actions. In a sense, all actions of man can be regarded as Yajnas. To cross the ocean of Samsaara (the cycle of birth and death) all that is necessary is service to good people and no other religious observance. By such service, one receives the grace of the Divine. All actions have to be done as an offering to God to secure this grace. They then become Yajnas (holy sacrificial rituals).

One should think of God and offer prayers, at least four times a day--- at dawn, at noon, at sunset and before going to bed as food for the soul.

Body is sacred and precious as the abode of Aathma

The body should be regarded primarily as an instrument for the realisation of the Divine through the nine forms of devotion. Attachment to the body for physical pleasures should be given up. It is essentially sacred and precious as the abode of the Aathma and should be used only for sacred purposes. God is one, whatever the name or form in which He is worshipped. God blesses a devotee according to the depth of his devotion, without regard to the name or form used for worship.

Today, before the commencement of the Yajna, the rithviks rubbed two sticks against each other to produce fire for the homam. What is the significance of this procedure? It indicates that for a Yajna the fire should be started in a natural way and not by any artificial means. Two sticks are used for the purpose. Similarly the body and the mind should be rubbed against each other to generate Inaana-agni (the fire of wisdom). It should also be realised that there is a-divine energy latent in man---like fire in the wood---which enables the eyes to see, the ears to hear, the mind to think and the body to move about. All organs are able to function because of this divine energy.

Man feels proud that he is the doer of all things. There is no basis for this pride Such egoism is a fatal disease. Egoism is accompanied by another dire disease called Asuuya (envy). There are cures for all kinds of diseases in the world. But there are no remedies for egoism and envy Total rain is the only cure for these two diseases.

Man should realise that there should be no excessive indulgence in any desire, whether it be food or other necessities. This is the lesson we have to learn from our ancients, who practised selfrestraint in every aspect of life. In the ancient days you did not have the kind of education that is imparted today They did not secure high degrees. But they led a life of purity and integrity with the name of Naaraayana on their lips.

The triune peace can be conferred only by God
 Today people should develop pure hearts and unwavering minds to secure peace. Not all the wealth of the world or the great advances in space technology confer peace on people who have not found it within them. When at the end of a bhajan, we say Shaanthi three times, the prayer is for peace of the body, the mind and the Spirit. Without this triune peace man cannot have real peace. And this threefold peace can be conferred only by God. This means that spirituality is essential for the health of the body, the peace of the mind and the bliss of the Spirit.

The Cosmic Spirit is one only, though it may be called by many names and worshipped in varied forms. You should see the Divine in everyone, including those whom you may regard as aliens or enemies. True spirituality consists in this sense of spiritual oneness. It can arise only when the attachment to the body is given up. People imagine that it is difficult to give up this attachment.

It is not so. When you develop the conviction that you are the Aathma (the Self), then it will be easy to give up attachment to the body. When people in general develop this feeling, there will be a great transformation in the life of mankind. Peace should spread from the individual to the family, to society, the nation and the world and not vice-versa.

Spiritualising effect of vibrations from the Vedhas
 Embodiments of Love! Today the Vedha Purusha Inaana Sapthaaha Yajna has been inaugurated for promoting the welfare of the universe. Every individual has to play a part in this endeavour for world peace and prosperity. Whether you understand the meaning of the manthras or not, the vibrations emanating from the chanting of the Vedhas will have a spiritualising effect on the listeners. There is bliss in the vibrations of the Vedhic hymns. Brahman (The Cosmic Self) is described as the embodiment of cosmic vibrations which permeate the universe, fill it with effulgence, wisdom and bliss. Make use of the opportunity provided by the Yajna to purify your life and raise yourself from the human to the Divine.

Discourse in Sai Kulvanth hall Mandap on 5-10-1997.

25. Sacred use of Indhriyas
 IN THE pursuit of sensory pleasures man forgets his Divine origin. Man can redeem his life only when he understands wherefrom he has come, what is his role in life and what is his destination.

The first thing man has to learn is the role of Indhriyas (sense organs). The sense organs are termed Maathras, meaning measuring instruments. For instance, the tongue measures the taste of what it eats. The eyes evaluates the form of what it sees. It will notice that a man with a fair face has a snub nose. The senses recognise the differences among various objects in terms of size, quality, etc. The senses have also another function to discharge. They indicate to man the limits to which sensory objects should be used or enjoyed. As the senses are God-given gifts, abuse of the senses by excesses will not only mean transgressing the divinely ordained limits, but will also lead to many harmful consequences. Hence everyone has to adhere to the appropriate limits prescribed for the use of the senses.

For instance, take the case of nostrils. They are to be used for breathing purposes and for smelling objects and discarding foul-smelling objects. The respiratory process conveys a significant spiritual message when air is inhaled and exhaled. The message is contained in the manthra So-ham, which is also known as Hamsa gaayathri. (Svaami demonstrated how during inhalation the sound "So..." is produced and how "ham" is produced when air is exhaled.) So Ham conveys the message of identity between God--"SO" and the individual Aham. This manthra contains the essence of Adhvaitha (non-dualism). What happens when the nose that is to be used for such sacred purposes is used for raking snuff? it is not merely abuse of the nose, but is the cause of various respiratory diseases. Most ailments are the result of misuse of the sense organs for improper purposes.

Recognise the proper role of the sense organs
Jayadheva rebuked men for not using the God-given tongue for chanting the sweet and sacred name of the Lord. The tongue should be engaged only in speaking the truth, in speaking sweetly and in consuming what is pleasant and wholesome for the body. Man degrades himself by consuming intoxicating drinks and non-vegetarian food and by indulging in smoking. These noxious habits affect the brain also.

Saint Suurdhaas lamented on the behaviour of people who would not listen to the hymns of praise of God with their God-given ears or gaze on the beautiful form of the Lord in their Godgiven sight. Persons going on the road should concentrate on the road and not allow their eyes to stray on the wall posters and shop windows.

It is necessary that everyone should recognise the proper role of the sense organs and use them properly.

In this context it may be noted that different animals are victims to different kinds of sensory experiences. Deer are a prey to sound---the roar of a lion or other wild animal. The elephant is afraid of the touch of the mahout's goad. Insects are attracted by light or a flame and lose their lives. Fish are lured by the taste of the worm attached to the angler's hook.

It is a pity that man who possesses all the five senses of perception (sound, touch, sight, taste and smell) is a bond-slave to all of them. Thereby he forgets his freedom. The senses should be used for sacred purposes. How, then, can man experiences real happiness? Only by turning his senses towards God. Man has five senses of perception and five senses of action. The master for all these ten senses is the mind. The ten senses are like ten wives pulling the mind in different directions. It is difficult for the mind to control the senses. Man should realise that all pleasures derived from submission to the senses are momentary and leave a trail of suffering behind. He should realise that the senses are to be utilised for sacred purposes and the practice of human values. Only then he will understand the true purpose of human existence. The senses are gifted by God for humans to Lead ideal lives. See good, think good thoughts, speak sweet words and listen to what is good. Be good and do good.

A young student who spoke earlier referred to Svaami's advice to all of them to "Speak less and work more." The ancient Indian Sages practised silence as a spiritual discipline because they realised the myriad benefits derived from Mounam (silence). Svaami Vivekanandha learnt a valuable lesson when he found that after ten days of endless talk he had forgotten all the shlokas he had learnt by heart. By practising complete silence for a fortnight he got back his memory powers. People should realise that God's grace is secured by the sacred use of the senses endowed on man by the Divine. Man is enveloped by five Koshas (sheaths)---Annamaya, Praanamaya, Manomaya, Vijnanamaya and Aanandhamaya (food, life-breath, mentation, awareness and bliss). Modern man has been able to progress only up to the Manomaya stage. He must strive to go beyond the mind up to the stage of bliss.

Discourse in Sai Kulvanth Mandap on 6-10-1997.

You wear coloured glasses. Correct your vision; the world will be corrected. Reform yourselves; the world will be reformed. You create the world of your choice. You see many, because you seek the many, not the One. Try to subsume the many in the One: the physical bodies of yourself and others, the family, the village, the community, the state, the nation, the world. Thus, you will progressively march on towards more and more inclusive of loyalties and reach the stage of unity in thought, word and deed.

26. Transcending the mind to realise God

ONLY the one who is aware that the Cosmic self is Shiva and that Shiva is also the Jeeva (individual self), is a complete Inaani (knower of Absolute Truth). The reason is that the cosmos is the Vibhuuthi (grandest manifestation of the Absolute Truth). To understand this monistic principle (Non-dualism) is the supreme wisdom. However, the Divine principle is associated with the qualities of the individual self through the mind. The characteristic of the mind is to entertain thoughts and counter-thoughts endlessly.

Sometimes man is unable to keep pace with the speed of the thoughts and is swept off his feet.

Man some-rimes gets intoxicated by his thoughts, which are influenced by the aberrations of the Kali Age.

The mind, the Gathi (goal), the Sthithi (status) and the Sampathi (prosperity) are inter-related.

The one who misuses these four turns into a demon.

Today there-are many incurable diseases, but these relate not to the body but to the mind. In a sense, all diseases get into the body through the mind. Even ordinary ailments like a head ache or a stomach ache have their origin in the mind.

Whatever influences the mind affects the body also. But unaware of this profound truth, man attributes all ills to the body and not the mind. Most ailments are really mental and not physical.

Because of this we witness a wide prevalence of psychic disorders. we find that mental illness are on the increase all over the world. The reason is that there is too much of mental tension and worry.

Attachment and aversion are the diseases of the mind

The mind is subject to varying moods--sorrow or joy anger or fear, love or hate. For all the diseases arising from the mind the basic causes are two-Raaga and Dhvesha (attachment and aversion). The mind is filled with these twofold feelings. Consequently, it tends to forget its basic human nature. The mind in this state considers the six basic enemies of man---lust, hatred, delusion, greed, envy and pride---as virtues. These six vices can poison a person's entire being.

He then forgets his inherent divinity and ceases to be human. He is a victim of infamy. But a person filled with good feelings enjoys peace and happiness.

The ancient Indian sages practised self-control, entertained good thoughts and led a blissful life.

When a man's inner self is filled with love, his life becomes full of bliss and he is always hale and hearty.

Today man suffers from numerous ailments the root cause of which is a diseased mind. There is no death for the mind, though when the body is facing death the mind thinks it is dying. The mind, it has been said, is the cause of one's bondage or liberation. Bad thoughts beget bondage. Good thoughts lead to liberation. Hence, everyone should develop good thoughts and perform good deeds. Such good feelings can arise only out of love.

Today all man's actions are governed by mundane desires. To achieve liberation man has to go beyond the vagaries of the mind. He should follow the Anthahkaarana (Inner Voice).

Buddha's teaching on self-realisation

Buddha, before he attained Nirvaana (Self-realisation), summoned his step-brother Aanandha to his side to impart his last message. Aanandha was in tears. Buddha told him: Aanandha! It was for realising this blissful state that I had striven all these years. Why do you shed tears at this moment? How many are able to secure such bliss? Few at all. You are looking only at my earthly body. You cannot know the internal bliss I am experiencing at this moment. I suffered a great deal over the past thirty years because of the aberrations of my mind. It was the mind that stood between me and Self-realisation. Today I am free from the hold of my mind. That is the cause of my bliss. When the mind is absent there is bliss."

This was the lesson Buddha taught to Aanandha. Aanandha prayed to Buddha to confer on him a similar mind-less state.

Any happiness experienced through the mind is not spiritual bliss. It is transient physical pleasure. Not recognising this truth many pursue so called spiritual exercises with the mind. The mind should be ignored. It is concerned only with thoughts of one kind or another. The Aathmik Principle can't be understood by such thought processes. Divert your attention towards the Aathma and dismiss all thoughts. If you cannot get rid of thoughts, then cultivate good thoughts.

Turn your thoughts towards the Supreme Lord. I have often compared the heart to a lock. If you turn the key left ward, it gets closed. Turn the key to the right and the lock opens. Turn your heart God-ward.

The spiritual disciplines of the ancients

To control the mind the ancients resorted to various disciplines including food control. They fasted on full moon day and gradually increased their intake up to new moon day. From the next day they gradually reduced their intake till full moon day. Students need not resort to this discipline now, but they should avoid caring excessive food.

By their spiritual discipline and regulated eating and other habits, the ancients led long and healthy lives. Bheeshma, who was Commander-in-Chief of the Kaurava forces in the Mahaabhaaratha war, was 126 years old at the time. He lived a pure celibate life, making a great sacrifice for the sake of his father.

Bheeshma took a vow of life-long celibacy to enable his father to marry the woman whom he desired, whose father insisted that the son born to her should be the heir to the throne. Bheeshma not only renounced his title to the throne but also took the vow of celibacy to ensure that he would leave no progeny to claim the right. After he fell in the battle he lay on a bed of arrows for 56 days for the auspicious moment of the northward motion of the sun to give up his life. He had such will power that he could bear any amount of personal suffering. He spent his last days imparting the highest wisdom to the Paandavas. The history of Bhaarath is full of stories of such heroic and noble souls. Unfortunately young people today, ignoring the examples of such great figures, lead purposeless lives.

They get prematurely old because of their ways of living. Students must lead righteous lives, acquire courage and manliness and realise the Divine. They have to recognise the supreme importance of keeping the mind under control. To get close to God you have to go beyond the mind. To have control over the mind is the mark of jnaana (wisdom). To seek to achieve proximity to God you have to develop devotion. Millions of people all over the world are seeking God-Realisation. But all their efforts are at the mental level. They have to go beyond the mind to realise the Divine, who is the embodiment of Truth-Wisdom-Omnipotence.

Discourse on 7-10-97 in Sai Kulvanth Mandap.

When we have more money, it breeds pride, sloth and contempt for others. In pursuit of money, man descends to the level of the beast. Money is of the nature of manure. Piled up in one place, it pollutes the air. Spread it wide; scatter it over fields; it rewards you with a bumper harvest. So too, when money is spent in all the four quarters for promoting good works, it yields contentment and happiness in plenty.

27. Vital role of the Buddhi

EMBODIMENTS of Love! Does one need a lamp to see the light from another lamp? And yet, man who has the light of wisdom in his heart goes in search of wisdom elsewhere. This search, born of ignorance, leads him to seek gurus. To acquire Aathma-Inaana (knowledge of the divine Self) man needs no guru (preceptor). No preceptor can give this knowledge because Prakrithi (Mother Nature) has herself conferred on her children the keys to this knowledge for their protection.

Every man is a son of Bhuudhevi (Mother Earth). As a mother, Bhuudhevi is teaching many lessons to her children. She calls on her children to learn everything from herself instead of going after other preceptors. "Scholars and intellectuals are cutting me to pieces to acquire knowledge and conduct their experiments," laments Mother Earth.

"They are subjecting me to great suffering by their diggings and blasting. But I am not worried about all this. Learn this spirit of forbearance from me. Whatever abuse or attack others may level at you, bear them with fortitude. Treat praise or blame, good or bad with equanimity. This is the highest knowledge."

Another vital element in Nature is water, which is also one of the manifestations of the Divine.

The lesson that water teaches is: "Son! By nature I am pure, sweet and cool. Purity, patience and perseverance are three good qualities you have to cultivate."

Agni (Fire) is another of Nature's preceptors. It tells man: My son! I make no difference between good and bad. I do not gain by burning one thing or lose by not burning something. I treat all alike whatever comes into my orbit. Learn to see the Divine in all things. This is the way to gain knowledge of the Self."

Nature is the best text book

I have often said that Nature is the best text-book for one and all.

Many valuable things can be learnt from the behaviour of wind, which sustains life by respiratory process and is all pervading.

To exercise the power of discrimination, man is endowed with Buddhi (the intellect). The intellect has to be unwavering and steady. Man fails to use this discriminating power properly and fully because of his qualities of Raaga and Dhvesha (attachment and aversion), his obliviousness to his inherent divinity and his preoccupation with mundane desires. If these tendencies are removed, the intellect will come into its own as an instrument of discrimination.

The intellect is the highest among man's endowments starting with the body. Above the body are the senses. Subtler than the senses is the mind. The intellect is subtler than the mind. Above the intellect and much more subtle is the Aathma (Self). Because of its proximity to the Aathma, the Buddhi is very subtle.

In the Taithireeya Upanishath the Buddhi is compared to a bird. The seat of the intellect is said to be the head. The right wing is described as Ritham and the left wing as Truth. The tail is called Mahat-thathva (great directing principle). The body is described as Yoga. The Buddhi is said to be composed of these five constituents each of which represents a power like discrimination, truth, etc. Most people tend to accord a higher place to Medhaa Shakthi (intelligence) than to intellect. Intelligence that lacks interest and steadiness which characterise the intellect is inferior to the intellect. This was declared by King Vikramaadithya at an assembly of scholars who could not decide the issue. It is the combination of interest and firm faith which serves to divinise man.

Ritham signifies the harmony in thought, word and deed. Truth is the expression in speech of Ritham. Homage is paid to Ritham and Sathya before one takes food as a prescribed ritual.

Once Ubhayabharathi, the wife of Mandhana Mishra, after taking to sanyaasa following her husband's defeat in philosophical debate with Aadhi

Shankaraacharya, taught a lesson in detachment and giving up of anger to an ascetic who described himself as a Brahma-Inaani. No one can call himself a knower of the Absolute as long as he has attachment and aversion. This episode shows how in ancient days men and women equally pursued the quest for Aathma-

Inaana (the knowledge of the Self).

Role of the Intellect: Divinisation and Determination

To acquire this Self-knowledge, purity of the intellect is essential. The intellect should be unwavering and totally free from attachment.

The mind is subject to unsteadiness because of desires. Desires are roused by the impressions received by the senses from outside. The only way to avoid these external impressions is to turn the senses inwards. To effect this change in the use of the senses, the power of discrimination derived from the intellect should be employed. The intellect should be used to determine what impressions should be kept out and which should be let in. The intellect should determine what kind of company we should keep, what kind of food we should eat, what are desirable practices and what are undesirable. It is by the right use of their intellectual judgement that the ancient sages achieved spiritual eminence. Same Cosmic Self dwells in every one. People should understand that the Aathma (Self) is one only. There are so many in this hall, Each one of you may consider that everyone has a separate and distinct Aathma. This is totally wrong. Like the reflection of the Sun in a myriad different vessels filled with water, the same Cosmic self is dwelling in everyone. The reflection is one and the same, though the vessels might be different. Names and forms may be different but the indwelling Aathma is one. How is this oneness to be recognised? For this purpose, the difference between the body and the heart should be examined. The Vedhaantha taught as follows: "Son! birth and death are common to all. Hunger and thirst are equally common. Joy and sorrow are equally common to all." If you go deep into these three statements, you will realise that whether one is a millionaire or a pauper both are born from their mothers' wombs. Though a rich man and a poor man may eat different kinds of food, the object of eating is to appease hunger, which is common to both. The same applies to thirst. If in this manner people examine what is common to all mankind, they will realise the unity that underlies the diversity in mankind. This will reveal the divinity that makes humanity one spiritually. There is no need to pursue difficult spiritual exercises to experience the Divine. Many of the physical postures recommended by some Gurus for spiritual exercise are anything but comfortable. The real need is to have a heart filled with compassion and meditate on God. Physical postures are not so important. It is in making one aware of the difference between the physical body and a compassionate love-filled heart that the Buddhi plays its vital role.

The source of Bliss is within man

The source of bliss is within man, not in the external world. God is omnipresent and is not separate from you. This is the main teaching of Sai. The description of the cosmic form of God as Vishva-Viraat Svaruupa means that he is present in every minute particle in the universe

Students! The world today is moving in a direction opposed to spirituality. This is utterly wrong.

To forget God is to forget your own Divine essence. Ramana Maharishi always told the devotees who came to him "Know who you are." "Know thyself" does not mean knowing facts about your body; mind or senses. It is to know the one who claims ownership of the body, the mind, etc.

You have to find the answer to the question- "Who am I?" The body, the senses, the mind and the intellect are all your instruments. You are their master. Master the mind and be a Master. For a human being the Aathma (Self) is the Master. It is the power of the Aathma (Self) which enables the senses to perform their different functions like seeing, hearing, etc. You have, therefore, to realise that you are the Aathma and not the body

You may all know what happened today Kaarunyaanandha had been with Svaami for forty years.

He was a centenarian. Today his body merged in the five elements. For the passing of any person the time, the place and the circumstances have to come together. Here in this hall, the recitation of the Vedhas is going on. The Inaana Yajna is being performed. He was listening to all these sacred things. He went to sleep at night and passed away in his sleep.

He came to me a week ago. Svaami asked him, "Kaarunyaanandha! What is it you want?" he replied: "I need nothing. I only want to merge in your Lotus Feet.

There is no purpose in my continuing." I asked him why he was speaking in this manner. "What more is there for me to enjoy in life? I have stayed and moved with Svaami for forty years." he came with me to Kashmir and Shimla, Gaya and Prayaaga. He came with me to all places, wherever I went Staying with me, he passed away with a sense of fulfilment.

This kind of contentment should come to everyone in life. One should not end up with a feeling of frustration.

The mark of greatness

Ask yourself the question- "Who is the richest man in the world?" It is not men like Tata or Birla

 who are truly the richest men. He who has greatest satisfaction in life is the richest man. He who has much desires is the poorest man. To be free from all desires is the mark of greatness.
 All kinds of things are all the time happening in the world. Births and deaths are like jokes for me, though you may not know it. When someone comes to me and wails "My husband has passed away." I remark: "Santhoshara" (well). She may remark- "How can you be happy if my husband has passed away?" All events are the same to me, I am always happy one lady comes to me and says that she is suffering from an unbearable stomach ache. I observe: "Chaala santhosham" (Very happy).
Padmanaabha Shaasthri (the Mandhir priest) came to me forty years ago. He is known to all of you when he performs the puuja in the Mandir every morning. He performs abhishekham for the idols. He is engaged in this puuja morning and evening. He also passed away today Both Kaarunyaanandha and Padmanaabha Shaasthri had been with me for forty years. They passed away when their end came.
 Be ready for the end
 Bodies come and go in this mariner. They are transient like passing clouds. No physical body is permanent. In human existence you must be prepared for the end at any time. It is like remaining "steady" when a photographer wants to take a picture of a person or group. If you are not steady, the picture will be blurred. The photographer may give you a warning signal, but so far as death is concerned, you cannot know when the end may come according to divine will. Be always ready You cannot know when the call will come.
 Unfortunately, in the world today few care to listen to the voice of God. They are guided by the promptings of their ego. This is the mark of the Kali Age. All are victims of egoism. So much so, they have doubts about every word of the Divine. They don't listen even to good counsel and therefore suffer evil consequences.
 During the past three months I had been advising Padmanaabha Shaasthri to realise that he is a diabetic patient. "The wound in your leg is getting worse. Ultimately amputation may be unavoidable. You are neglecting your leg. Heed my words." I was repeatedly warning him. But ignoring Svaami's warning, he was consuming sweet things like paayasam and laddus. Today his blood pressure rose to 400 and he had a severe heart attack. You can see what happens when Svaami's warning is ignored. If they acted up to my advice, it would be good for them and their families and I would be happy from time to time I have been singing a song about the consequences of not listening to my words but behaving foolishly The result is they come to grief.

 "Whatever I do is for your good"
 This is not proper. You have to heed the words of advice and follow them. My advice is not for My sake but for your good. I shall soon be reaching My 72nd year. In all these years I have never entertained a single selfish thought. Whatever I tell you is only for your good and not for My benefit. Whatever I do is always for your good. Not recognising this, many are deluding themselves. What is the use in regretting at the end? You must be on your guard from the beginning.
 Chant the Lord's name at all times. Understand the role of the intellect. Tomorrow I shall speak about the Aathmik Principle. I expect that some at least will derive benefit from this series of discourses.
 Discourse in Sai Kulvanth Hall on 8-10-1997.
 28. Discovering the Aathma
 There is no penance equal to peace;
 There is no happiness greater than contentment;
 There is no worse disease than desire;
 There is no righteousness equal to compassion.
 EMBODIMENTS of Love! No penance can be equal to peace. Real penance consists in not leading the life of an ascetic in a forest but in worshipping God in thought, word and deed.
 Where is the need for any penance to acquire peace if that peace is already present in the heart?
 Peace can be got when one's vision is turned inward.
 "Na santhoshaathparam sukham" (There is no happiness greater than contentment). How many miserable people are there in the world who have all the comforts they need! Dhritharaashtra had all regal comforts and had a hundred sons bur could find no peace. Creature comforts cannot be equated with peace. Contentment, it is said, confers the greatest happiness. It follows that true happiness resides in the heart and everyone should, seek it there.
 Excessive desires are the source of all ills. There is momentary satisfaction from the fulfilment of some desires. But when desires are not realised, man becomes sick in many ways. There is no more dreadful disease in the world than insatiable desire.

"Na cha Dharmo Dhayaa samah" There is no right conduct equal to compassion--for the simple reason that a compassionate heart is the abode of the Divine. Where there is compassion there is no need for other acts of charity.

Awareness is pure and unsullied consciousness

The Indian sages from ancient times have given the highest place of honour and esteem to the word Aathma. This is also known as Eruka (Awareness or Consciousness). This awareness finds expression in the term Aham ("I"). When this Aham identifies itself with a bodily form, it becomes Ahamkaara. (the ego). This ego is not the natural state of Aham. It is by relating itself to a particular form that it becomes Ahamkaara. It is pure and unsullied consciousness.

It is the mind that comes in the way of the proper understanding of Aham. Just as the clouds that arise out of the vapours produced by the sun may hide the sun for a time, the mind veils the Aham by its thoughts and desires, though the mind arises from the Aathma. The role of the mind in relation to the Aathmik principle has to be properly understood. It operates as an obstacle to the awareness of the Aathma.

The term "I" (nenu in Thelugu) originated in the Aathma. The "I" is the form of Aham. Terms like Aham, God, Awareness and Aathma are all synonymous. When the Aham ("I") is rightly understood one becomes anAathma-inaani (knower of the Self).

There is a fundamental principle to which the 'I' is related. The "I" has no basis in the body It has to recognise its 'link with its primary source.

The Aathmik principle is one and one only

Every object in the world has its origin in a primary source. This cannot be created by anyone.

There is a primordial source, which is responsible for all creation. Very few care to enquire into the nature of this source.

From the worldly point of view, we have a Kartha (doer), the Karma (duty) and the Kriya

(deed). But from the spiritual point of view all three are one and the same--the doer, the duty and the deed. This Aathmik principle is one and one only

It is said that Sath-Chith-Aanandha (Being-Awareness-Bliss) are the attributes of the Aathma

(Self). In my view these three are not three distinct entities. They are not three different states.

Chith (Awareness) and Aanandha (Bliss) are present in Sath like sugar which is dissolved in water and becomes one with it as syrup.

There is an illustration, which explains why it is difficult to recognise the Aathmik Principle.

There is a cup containing fruit juice. The cup is not aware of the nature of the juice. A man uses a straw to suck the juice. The straw does not know anything about the juice. The Buddhi recognises the taste of the juice. It does not enjoy it. The juice is sent down to the stomach, where it gets converted to three parts--the gross, which is excreted, the subtle which becomes blood and helps to sustain life and the subtler goes to the Prajna-Shakthi (Constant Integrated awareness), which is synonymous with the Self. In this analogy, the cup is the body; the straw represents the senses. Prajnaana is the Aathma.

Prajnaana, Awareness, the "I", Aathma, Aanandha, - Brahman are all synonymous terms.

Worldly persons may see differences in these words, but in spiritual parlance they mean the same thing.

Two kinds of "I" : attached and detached

The Aham ('I') is of two kinds. One that is associated with attachment to the body and the other that dissociates it from the body Both are "I" (nenu in Thelugu). But the 'I' that is identified with the body becomes Ahamkaara (the ego). The ego carries a form wherever it goes. But the formless "I" not identified with the body is the Aathma. The formless Aathma has no attributes.

But when it is associated with a form it has all attributes. Today people experience only the Aham. ("I") that is identified with the body. They cannot conceive of an "I" without a body. But, by treating the body as the basis, if the vision is turned inward, the Aathma can be experienced in due course. This is called Aathma-saakshaatkaara (Direct Perception of the Self). This means tracking the 'I' to its source. A man walking with his back to the sun will be treading his own shadow. Only when he reverses his direction will he be able to leave his shadow behind. The same process applies to the realisation of the Self. The journey must be directed towards the Self within and away from the external world.

What is needed today in the world is the diverting of the mind from preoccupation with the external world of Nature to the Divinity within. This is the saadhana you have to do. In this way you see the Divine in everything instead of seeing Nature as a physical phenomenon. When you see the external world as a manifestation of God, you will not notice the phenomenal aspect of Prakrithi (Nature). View Nature as a manifestation of God.

 How is this to be experienced in real life with its joys and sorrows?
 This can be understood from an example. When you sleep, you have dreams in which you experience joys and sorrows. They seem mal as long as you are asleep. On awaking, you realise that they were all unreal and mere dreams. In the waking state you have other experiences. What is the relationship between these two categories of experiences? What you experience in the waiting state is also a dream. The reality is that in both the states--the sleeping and the waking---you are present as the dreamer.
 The concept of Aathmik principle
 The difference between a dream in sleep and what happens in the waking state relates mainly to the time factor. In a dream in a sleep, a person may go through the entire experiences of his life from childhood to old age in a few minutes. The dream compresses the experiences of many years within so many minutes. Likewise what happens over many years in the waiting state may appear as a few moments in spiritual experience.
 Our conception of reality is related to the time factor. Time causes great difference between what is Prathyaksham (directly perceived) and what is paroksham (indirectly experienced). The Aathma is the unchanging entity that is able to recognise the changes brought about by time.
 The awareness of the unchanging reality underlying the phenomenal world of change is the Aathmik principle called Eruka. It is present in every one as the Aham. But each one views the world from one's particular circumstance, background and experience. The Aathmik Principle is explained or described in different ways. There is no connection between its reality and the way it is experienced. The analogies used for explaining the Aathmik Principle have their inherent limitations. God is declared to be omnipresent. How do you decide this omnipresence? There is a practical means of deciding this. We are aware of the basic elements-- earth, water, fire, air and space--with five qualities--smell, fluidity, illumination, touch and sound. The earth has all the five qualities, including primarily gandha (smell). Water has rasa (fluidity). It is lighter than earth and is mobile. It has four qualities. Fire has three qualities of which ruupa (form) is most prominent. It is lighter than water. Then you have air, which is lighter than fire and has two qualities: sparsa (touch) and shabdha (vibrant movement). Last comes aakaasha (ether or space) which is the subtlest of the five elements and is all-pervading.

 Transcending space is God,
 who is omnipresent.
Spiritual progress is related to reduction of desires
 When you pursue your enquiry in this manner you find that the different qualities account for feelings and reactions. These qualities have to be brought under control. Simultaneously one has to reduce the burdens of mundane existence and the desires that fill the mind. Man today is weighed down by the overwhelming burden of desires. Spiritual progress is directly related to the reduction of desires. God's grace goes with human effort.
 Earlier two teachers spoke about their experiences and extolled Dhaiva-shakthi (power of the Divine). But this Divine power does not operate independent of human effort. In fact, every individual has this Divine power. They are invoking Divine power as an auxiliary to their own power, which comes from the Divine. Failing to recognise their inherent divine power, they attribute it to someone other than themselves.
 Some devotees tend to blame Baba if their desires are not fulfilled.
 When devotees pray with pure hearts, their purity itself helps to bring them relief. But they are thankful to Baba for saving them. Baba is not involved in either of these results. They are the fruits of the devotees efforts and attitudes. In our college, there is a placard that carries the saying;
 "Dharma protects its protector. It destroys its destroyer." Likewise, when your faith in the Divine is total, that faith will help you. Develop that confidence in the Self. The Self is not visible even as the foundations of a big mansion are not visible. But without the foundations the edifice cannot stand. Likewise self-confidence is the base for self-satisfaction. The roof of mansion is self-sacrifice. Then you have self-realisation.
 The Self alone is eternal and changeless Men must develop strong faith. That will confer all spiritual experiences. The Upanishaths declare: Arise from the slumber of ignorance and go forward towards awareness of the Self."
 Embodiments of Love! Whatever other beliefs you may cherish or not, have firm faith in God.
 All things in the world are liable to perish. The Self alone is eternal and changeless.
 It is unfortunate that the vast majority of mankind lead mundane lives forgetting God. Make God the foundation of your life. Carry on your normal duties. Duty is God.

Work is worship.

Spiritualise all your actions and treat whatever happens as actions for your good. Learn to experience perennial bliss by seeking union with God. Never forget God. Do not go after the things of the world. Have no fear of death. When your life is tooted in these three maxims, you will realise the Aathman.

Discourse in Sai Kulvanth Hall on 9-10-1997.

29. Develop Self-reliance and faith in God

FROM ancient times Bhaarith has been conveying themes-sage of peace and prosperity to the world by its adherence to spirituality The people have always prayed for the welfare of all nations. The greatness of Bhaaratheeya culture can be appreciated only by those who have experienced magnificence. It is a culture that has survived the vicissitudes of history and stood the test of time. The greatness of that culture is reflected in Sanaathana Dharma (the perennial phi-1osophy of life). Righteousness is the external manifestation of this philosophy. it is this righteousness that sustains human life. it is only when this righteousness governs human life that ideals like equality, fraternity and liberty will be realised in practice. Conflict and discord in the world will cease when men learn to practise sense-control.

Bhaaratheeyas today are ignoring the profound truths of Indian Culture. This is because they are forgetting their inherent divinity in the pursuit of self-interest and the sway of selfishness. The natural tendencies of man to be kind and considerate to others should be properly fostered.

Today men are not doing this.

Understand the secrets of creation

There is no basic conflict between Man and Nature. Man is entitled to enjoy the fruits of Nature even as a child is entitled to the mother's milk or a bee to suck the honey in a flower. The creation is greater than mankind. It is humanity's privilege to understand the secrets of creation.

Man should also seek to know the relationship between creation and the Creator.

The human body consists of different organs like eyes, nose, hands, legs, etc. Human beings are limbs of society human societies are limbs of humanity. Humanity is a limb of Prakrithi.

(Nature). Prakrithi is a limb of Paramaathma (Cosmic Self). If you consider this chain of relationship, you can see that man is related to the Supreme embodiments of Bliss.

But, why .is this Bliss eluding man? Because he has not recognised the Divinity within him. Man is considering nature as entirely a creation of Providence for his enjoyment. This is a mistake.

Nature exists for enjoyment by man according to certain limits.

Scientists today are exploring the powers of nature with a view to enjoying them without limit.

They want to bring all those powers under human control for their unrestricted enjoyment. This is responsible for so many of the natural disasters that we witness today

What is the cause of droughts and floods which occur in the world? Man seeks to enjoy the benefits of Nature which has grave consequences. Here you have a globe. If you hit it one way, its balance is disturbed. We should always see to it that in the utilisation of natural resources a proper balance is kept. Excessive use in any one direction will result in harm in another direction.

In the exploitation of natural resources, people are observing no limits in the name of their hakku

(right) to act as they please. I do not understand wherefrom this "right" is derived. In reality, there is no such thing as a "right." In fact, what they have is responsibility. If one's responsibilities are properly discharged, some rights may emerge from them. If responsibilities are ignored, what can be the outcome? Only disorder and lack of peace. When rain falls, there will be water in the channels. How can you hope for water when there is no rain? Hence, you have to pray at the outset for rain. Only then you can enjoy the flow of water in the rivers.

Similarly, you have at the outset to discharge your duties and then you will secure your rights.

Duties are most sacred

Today everyone talks only about rights. This appears utterly meaningless. Consider for a moment how everyone is spending his day. From the moment he wakes up to the time of going to bed everyone is filled with worries of one kind or another. Time is sacred. Actions are even more sacred. Duties are most sacred. Accomplishment of something by an activity is not enough.

Till the very end of one's life success has to be achieved in every undertaking. As the Chief Minister Shri Chandrababu Naidu observed in his speech, people must do all their actions in an ideal manner. Mere mechanical existence does no credit to one's humanness. Human birth is immensely precious. Three things have to be observed as a mark of real humanness: Fear of sin, love of God and morality in society People should refrain from sinful acts. The Sanskrit saying declares- "Men desire the fruits of meritorious acts, but indulge in sinful acts." When people develop purity in thought, word and deed, they will reap the fruits of good actions.

Human life is filled with worries of all kinds from birth to death. The only way to get rid of all these worries is to turn your mind towards God and think of Him at all times.

Moreover, people should develop self-reliance. They should not look to others or to the Government to do what they can do for themselves. You must do as much as possible to help yourself and enjoy the fruits of your labours.

Use your abilities before seeking Divine help

Most people today have neither confidence in themselves nor the determination to accomplish what they desire. They want to get quick results, without the necessary effort on their part. How can this happen? It is not proper to cast the responsibility, on God or Government. God no doubt can help but He expects you to use the strength and talents given to you before seeking Divine help. To rely on God without using to the utmost your God given abilities is misconceived.

People must try to purify the environment in which they are living.

There is no peace or harmony anywhere. Devotees should try to purify and sanctify this atmosphere by developing love and practising human values. They may meet with opposition or discouragement from some quarters.

They should overcome these obstacles. These critics are like the pests which can destroy extremely valuable things.

Those engaged in welfare activities should not bother about these critics but carry on their good work according to the dictates of their conscience. This point has also been made by the Chief Minister. When you are convinced that you are doing what is good for the people, why bother about the criticism of small-minded men? Develop self-confidence.

Today in Bhaarith millions of people suffer from shortage of drinking water. This problem to some extent is due to the conduct of the people themselves. How far are the people acting in the right way?

There are three types of behaviour among human beings the Divine, the human and the animal.

What we are witnessing is the growth of animality and decline of humanness. The reason for this trend is the limitless growth of desires and the steady disappearance of aashayaalu (ideals).

Selfishness is growing, selflessness is declining. Trickery is spreading, integrity is vanishing, attachment to the body is waxing, and love for the country is waning.

The result is that the character of the people is getting degraded.

Sacrifice is the real secret of happiness

How different was the state of things in the good old times of our ancients. They rejoiced in the company of good devotees, they welcomed the arrival of the poor and needy to their homes, they loved to hear the hymns in praise of God. They considered only such days as sacred days. Life can be redeemed only by such virtuous living.

The ancient Bharatheeyas placed the quality, of sacrifice on a high pedestal, adored justice, esteemed righteousness as the supreme virtue and welcomed truth as a valuable friend. Today the state of things is at variance with all these.

Sacrifice is the real secret of happiness. Everyone should share with others to the extent of his capacity his income and possessions and contribute to the well-being of others. There are so many people who are destitute and suffering in various ways. It is the duty of those who are better off to go to the help of these unfortunates.

Live up to your words

Embodiments of Love! Today you have listened to the speeches of many leaders. They have spoken from their hearts and given expression to their concern for the welfare of the people. If these words are translated into purposeful action, the country is bound to make good progress. It is a welcome sign that such leaders have come forward to give assurances of this kind on occasions like this. They are bound to generate enthusiasm and confidence among the people.

The Chief Minister, the Speaker of the Karnataka Assembly and the Union Minister have all spoken with conviction and enthusiasm. This should get implanted in the hearts of the people.

The assurances should be translated into action.

Bhaarith as well as the rest of the world, is racked by myriad problems. What is the remedy?

There has to be a radical transformation in the minds of men. People should recognise the inherent divinity of man.

When this mental transformation and recognition of divinity come together, there will be the divinisation of mankind.

Embodiment of Love! Today the Yajna, which began on the 5th, has come to a close. It is

Vijayadhashami day. It is an auspicious sign that the drinking water project is being transferred on this day to the Andhra government and the Chief Minister has accepted the responsibility for the proper maintenance of the project. There are many more similar welfare schemes which have to be carried out for the good of the people. My entire being, from head to toe, is dedicated to the service of the people. I wish to do many things for the good of the people. I do not wish to talk about them. Action must speak for itself. The Speaker mentioned that the drinking water problem was acute in his district also. Unlike some other districts, the Kolar district has no rivers. Everyone should resolve to see that he contributes his mite to the solution of such problems. Everyone should realise his obligations to society because of what all that he owes to society. Wherever necessary people should come together to solve their problems by their own cooperative action. There are many young people who are idling away their time at homes. Their energies should be mobilised for constructive welfare work. The Chief Minister referred to the scheme of Shramdhaan (gift of labour). Everyone in the village should be involved in such Shramdhaan to construct village toads without waiting for help from others. This kind of voluntary co-operative activity should be undertaken to meet as many of the villagers needs as possible. The help of others can be sought when necessary. Bhagavaan's assurance of all out help I am prepared to help anyone from any village, any state or any community. I do not cherish differences of any kind. Whether you believe it or not, I may assure you that I respect only one caste, the caste of humanity, only one religion, the religion of Love and only one language, the language of the heart. I shall never say "No" to anybody who seeks My help, whatever his caste, region or creed may be. A good many devotees are gathered here. I am prepared even to part with Prashaanthi Nilayam to meet your requests. I am prepared to do anything for the good of the people. That is My only concern. I am working only to make the people worthy of the Lord's grace. Few persons recognise this fact. Even those who have been coming to Me for years do not recognise this truth. It is difficult to comprehend the truth about the ways of the Divine. All of you should attend to your duties with faith in the Divine. All will be well with you. You can accomplish everything with ease. This is the path pursued by our ancients. In those days there were no parties and warring factions. All acted with one mind. That was the message of the Vedhas. "Let us work together, enjoy together and love one another and share our joy with all"-- this was the glorious message of the Rig Vedha. Men based their lives on the injunctions of the Vedhas. Today when these injunctions are not respected, how can human life be sacred? If your heart is good, no harm can come to you. No one need be afraid of what others say or think as long as one is doing the right thing according to his conscience. Courage should go along with good action. If your heart is good, no harm can come to you. Apart from the Ananthapur district, I am hoping to meet the needs of some other districts. In this context I wish to assure you of one thing. Whether in Bhaarith or in any other country there will be no lack of resources for carrying out welfare schemes. Resources are available in plenty. Only the impulse to undertake such schemes is not present. When that impulse is there, anything can be achieved. If people can go to the moon, cannot they make the journey to their hearts? When I took up the drinking water project, our Trust members told me- "Svaami! There are not enough funds in the Trust. How are we to embark on this gigantic project?" I assured them- "That is My concern. I shall see that this good project is completed." That has been accomplished without any impediments. Much remains to be done in Bhaarith. As the Speaker of the Karnaataka Assembly said, water is a primary need all over the country. Pure drinking water should be made available to the entire people. That is My resolve. From My earliest years I have been concerned about providing three primary requisites for our people: Free education, free medical aid and free basic amenities like drinking water Education is for the head. Medical care is for the heart and pure water for the body. These three cover the main requirements of life. To provide these three gives the greatest gratification. Task before leaders Try to provide free education wherever you can. Provide free medicines and treatment for the poor. Co-operate among yourselves, as far as possible to provide drinking water. In Raayalaseema people suffer from the iii effects of fluorosis. Please see that at least the future generation is saved from these ailments. I bless you all and assure you of My grace in all your beneficent activities. I desire that all the authorities concerned should act in concert to carry out welfare programmes.

The Chief Minister, who had been yearning to come here for a long time, is fortunate in being present here on this auspicious and memorable occasion. I am confident that he will carly out his programme well. I am happy that he has accepted the responsibility for the future maintenance of the scheme. He is no outsider. In fact, all are spiritually one, though in names and forms they may be different. By his acceptance, we have been relieved of an onerous responsibility. I may have to take on new burdens in the future. I am well prepared for that. This is not the end of the story.

I assure the people of Kolar that I shall see to the fulfillment of their needs in the near future. By the 72nd birthday, the drinking water needs of the Kolar people will be met and people in every village will be well served. Even in Ananthapur district, some areas remain to be served. I assure them that all that remains to be done will be completed. If any area is not covered I shall get the work done if I am informed about it. I am yours, and you are mine. Our relationship is a spiritual one. You are entitled to approach Me and I am bound to respond to your wishes. Do not entertain any doubts on this score. I bless you all. Discourse in Sai Kulvanth Hall on 11-1 Q- 1997.

The human body is the most wondrous machine in the world. It has a bewildering multiplicity of limbs, organs, veins, nerves and cells which co-operate to maintain it: under varied conditions. If anyone of these rebels and refuses to rescue another, the body is bound to suffer. So too, a society, a community or nation can be safe, secure and happy only when the individuals comprising it are mutually helpful and bound together in skilful and sincere service. Baba

30. Women's role as Mothers

GAAYATHRI is the mother of Vedhas and also of all cremations, Gaayathri principle can be sub-divided into the following four components.

Sathyavathi: The all-pervasive Truth which pervades the entire creation just as butter is present in every drop of milk.

Angavathi: Every person is made up of the five elements. Differences are only in the outer forms. Divinity behind the five elements is the same in all.

Anyavathi: Different forms of the Divine are indicated by corresponding symbols---Raama by the bow, Krishna by the flute or the peacock feather, Sarasvathi by the Veena, Shiva by the damaru (hand-held drum) and Vishnu-by Shankha (Conch), Chakra (Wheel), Gadha (mace) and Padhma (the Lotus Flower). Divine forms have various characteristic symbols but Divinity is the same in all.

Nidhaanavathi: Nidhaanavathi is represented by the nine paths of devotion, namely--listening, singing, chanting the name of the Lord, service, seva to the Lord's feet, adoration, prayer, friendship with God and surrender to God.

The mother is the first teacher and as compared to male teachers, the teachings of women teachers are better assimilated by students because the latter teach from the heart with love.

A woman should not neglect her home

A married lady has many great titles like Dharma Pathni (Righteous wife), Griha-Lakshmi (Goddess of the house), Illalu (lady of the house) and Ardhaangi (equal partner of the husband).

These titles have more value than socially recognised titles like Padhma Bhuushan and Padhma

Vibhuushan given by the Government. A lady must look after the home first and then work outside, if necessary A house without a mother is like an empty choultry. A lady should be an ideal mother to her children, look after her husband and then do outside work. She can study, get degrees, enter politics or do any other work but she should not neglect the home, which is the very foundation of her life. Husband and wife are both equally responsible for establishing harmony at home. But times have changed. Womanly-ideals are not being practised and there are no ideal men and women today. That is why the world is in such a sorry state.

Parents must aspire to make their children good persons (those who see God in man) and not great persons (those who see man in God). Though Shri Raama and Raavana were very learned persons, Shri Raama set an example of a good person by his deeds, while on account of his excessive ego and desire, Raavana became an evil person though he was great in his own way.

Goodness is the natural quality of a woman

The acronym MAN stands for Maaya, Aathma and Nirvaana. The teaching contained in this term MAN is firstly 'Get over Maaya', secondly 'see the Aathma', and thirdly 'At-rain Nirvaana.'

It is well known that a great person has no peace and is always worried while a good person is peaceful wherever he goes. So, not even in a dream should a person aspire to be a great man. A person becomes good when he is respected as such in society. Goodness is a natural quality of a woman while greatness is that of a man. God is one's greatest and closest friend. He is interested in one's real welfare while worldly friends are influenced by one's position and wealth, only as long as these last. Nature is the best teacher, heart is the real Guru and God is the only Friend. As the Greek lady Ms. Hellen Sotiriou had smog at the end of her talk, the relationship with God should be based on love. Love for God alone leads to Bliss. Spiritual vibration comes out of a heart full of Love for God. Such Love makes one rejoice always and under all circumstances. Discourse at Sai Kulvanth Hall on 19-11-97, Ladies Day 31. The educational crisis and the way out

Wealth has been apotheosised;
 Arrogance has become a creed;
 Peace has become remote from man;
 Egoistic boast is fashionable
 Property has become an adornment;
 Selfishness is installed in the heart;
 Sense of self respect has declined;
 Hypocrisy has become the hall-mark;
 Love and affection have become sickly;
 The heart is divorced from righteousness;
 Life has become a burden;
 People have lost their moorings.
 What does the future hold?
 Make education value-based
 And ensure a future for Bhaarith!

STUDENTS! Embodiments of Love! Educationists! Bhaarith, which has been the treasure-house of spirituality, is steadily going down in Dharma (righteousness). Injustice, dishonesty, immorality and other demonic qualities are having free play in the country. In this situation, students alone---both men and womens---will be able to deal with these evil forces and establish peace.

Students! If your parents will feel unhappy if you are backward in your studies, how much more unhappy will Mother Bhaarith be feeling over the decline of moral values! Students must take a resolve at the outset to serve their mothers and the Motherland. They must strive for restoration of peace and order in the country.

A country does not mean a piece of earth. It is the people who make the country.

What is the meaning of transformation of people? Transformation is not one specific object. it is the entire process of refinement by which people get rid of their bad thoughts and actions and cultivate good thoughts and do good acts in daily life

What is the meaning of Vidhya (education)? What is the kind of education suitable for young people today? What are the norms of right education? What kind of education will promote the elevation of man? What is the use of the present system of education? The one who examines and finds the right answers to these five questions will be a wise adviser for the nation. The value of a person is not derived from education alone. The cultural refinement of his life-style is also essential.

What is meant by culture? It is the realisation of the inherent divinity in man and making it manifest in one's way of life. A life without culture is like a house without light. A dark house is a home for foul-smelling bars and not for fragrant objects. A person without culture is like a stringless kite, which is tossed hither and thither. An education bereft of culture is worthless like a counterfeit coin. Hence culture is most important, especially in relation to one's character.

Education for life, not merely for living

In the sphere of education many revolutionary changes are needed. Since the attainment of freedom 50 years ago, many committees have been set up by the government to go into the problem of educational reform. These committees have recommended many reforms. There has been no implementation of these reforms.

Even now, no one is trying to restore the ancient ideals of education. As a result, the country is riddled with violence and disorder. Educational institutions have become centres of disorder.

Vidhya means acquisition of knowledge. In the English language this is called "Education". The term education is derived from the Latin term e-ducare, which means "drawing out". The idea is to draw out what is latent. Acquisition of knowledge is a worldly aspect. But what has to be discerned is the divine feeling present in the human heart. One refers to living and the other to life itself. In addition to earning a living one has to understand the purpose of life.

Both these aspects are as essential as the two eyes for a person. Today there is too much concentration on one aspect---how to earn a living? Even here, there is a steady decline in moral standards.

No one makes a serious attempt to realise the divinity in man. No attempt is made to understand one's true nature. That is the real purpose of life. True education means trying to manifest the inner divinity in man. How is this manifestation to be brought about? Education is that which illumines the physical, the mental and the social environment of man. It is not confined to one specific sphere. Education should illumine every aspect of life the economic, the political, the moral, the spiritual and other spheres of life.

Students consider book knowledge as education. This gives them only superficial knowledge.

They need practical knowledge. This knowledge should enable them to lead righteous lives.

Today people are worshipping wealth as divine. This is totally wrong. Wealth can never give peace of mind. It may provide physical comforts but not mental peace. Without understanding this, people and the government imagine that there is great progress in education.

What is this progress?

Justice and morality are confined to books.

The hearts have become the abode of all that is foul.

Hands have become instruments of selfishness.

This is the progress achieved by education today.

(Telugu Poem)

Education must be for the well-being of the society

Is this the mark of true education? No. Efforts must be made to eliminate such feelings.

Moreover, all that is learnt must be utilised for promoting the well-being of society. All should work for the welfare of society.

"Sarva loka hithe rathaah" (Let all rejoice in the well-being of all people in the world).

"Sarve jnaana Sampannaah" (Let all possess wealth of all knowledge).

"Sarve Samhitha gunaihi" (Let all be endowed with good qualities). These are three main pronouncements regarding the educated persons. This implies that every student, after completing his studies, should dedicate himself (or herself) to serving society. For this service, one should acquire all the necessary knowledge. Students should have all good qualities. A good student should promote a calm atmosphere wherever he stays. He should be ever prepared to help others. These are the marks of a good student. Unfortunately students today are not having any of these qualities. Who is to blame? Not the students. Not the teachers. All in society are responsible. Students do not possess the requisite abilities to pursue the right path. Teachers also lack these abilities. They do not take up the task of moulding the character of students from an early age. To do so they have to train themselves to be ideal teachers.

When the teachers lead an exemplary life, the students will follow their example. There is no scrutiny of how teachers teach or how students study. The Government is spending over

Rs.2,000 crores a year on education. No one knows what the outcome of all this expenditure is.

What transformation is taking place in the students? What is their future? No one seems to enquire into all this. Only money is spent endlessly.

It is not greatness but goodness that matters

Nor is that all. Politicians are invading the educational field and ruining the students. Students have, of course, to study political science. But the educational field should not be politicalised.

Today students are entering the political field and not only spoiling their studies but ruining their entire future. Hence students should resolve to pursue their studies with devotion.

Parents also should encourage their children to pursue education in the right spirit. They should not desire so much that their children secure high ranks. It is not greatness that matters but goodness. They should wish that their children should earn a good name rather than achieve purely academic excellence.

Make proper use of your education for the good of society. Be men of good character. That will make you shine before the public. True education will make you divine. Education is not mere knowledge of words. It should broaden the mind. The mere acquisition of degrees is valueless.

Character is more important and it can be developed only by taking to the spiritual path. Of what use is an education that does not promote good qualities?

Humility is the hall-mark of true education

Students! Boys and Girls! Together with academic education you have to acquire wisdom and a sense of right and wrong. Knowledge without wisdom, scholarship without determination, music without melody, learning without humility, a society without discipline, friendship without gratitude, speech without truth--all these are utterly useless. Hence everyone should seek to follow the correct path.

There is no sense of respect for people in society. Gratitude is absent. Scholars are without discretion. The educated lack humility.

 Humility is the hall-mark of true education. Humility does not mean moving about with a bowed head. It calls for respect to humanness. It is beastly to go about causing fear in others. Humans should be free from fear. Both fear and frightening are animal qualities. Men must be fearless.
 Today fear haunts every place. How does fear arise? When one is full of bad thoughts and bad feelings.
 Educational institutions today are full of disorder and indiscipline. How different were the ancient abodes of learning! In ancient times education used to be offered free. In those days, the preceptors used to send the students to the forests. The students used to be examined periodically about their studies. For instance, the students would be asked: "What tree did you find useless in the forest you visited?" The replies of the students varied, each one saying that one particular tree was useless. The preceptor did not accept their answers. He told them that all trees were useful, each in its own way. Every tree had something or the other which had medicinal properties. If a tree did nothing else, it served to take in the carbon dioxide from the atmosphere and release the life-giving oxygen for the benefit of man. Every tree serves a useful purpose. Equally every human being is valuable.
 Today education has become very expensive. Education should be made free. Then there would be no room for corrupt practices over seats.
 The uniqueness of Sai Education
 In the Sai Educational System, there are no problems of student unrest because education is free.
 Our students are happy. All of us are also happy.
 Because of free education the students behaviour is exemplary All the students feel spontaneously: "Here we are getting free education. We must conduct ourselves well to show our gratitude to all concerned." Opportunities must be provided for students to develop such an attitude towards their alma mater. In our Institute no fees is charged for anything.
 We must strive to revive the ancient system of free education. Today such a sacred approach to education is lacking among students, parents, teachers and the authorities. The change must come at the Governmental level. Then the public at large will also change. There must be a change in the moral climate of the educational system. Only then the educational institutions can turn out young men and women of character.

 Tribute to Sai Students
 The first thing students have to learn today is moderation in speech. Talk less and study more.
 Although I do not speak about it often, I am immensely happy over the character of our students.
 They are inspired by high ideals. Some of the students even go to the extent of reforming their parents. With due humility and reverence they tell their parents to change their ways of living.
 Whenever I hear reports of such conduct by our students I rejoice in the fact that we have such students. I do not expect anything from the students. All that I desire is that they should earn a good name when they go out. Their behaviour should be beyond cavil. Ill-educated students are worse than illiterates.
 Skepticism seems to grow with more and more education. The more intelligent the students are, the more doubts develop in them. Lacking self-confidence, ultimately they fail to reach Selfrealisation.
 Our Institute students are always happy. This happiness lends beauty to their lives. It is not physical beauty, but the spiritual beauty derived from good character.
 Our Vice-President (in his Convocation address) dwelt at length on Dharma. Today Sathya and Dharma are not very much in evidence. Dharma seems to be fleeing from the people. Sathya and Dharma are declining among the people. The ancient sacred Vedhik teachings are disappearing.
 It is essential to revive them.
 Students should not be obsessed with earning dhanam (money). They must be keen on acquiring gunas (good qualities). Education without ethics is no education at all. Education must teach men to be sincere in thought, word and deed as the mark of humanness.
 The state of Indian education is such that it breeds all sorts of bad tendencies in the students. It encourages deception and dishonesty.
 Education should result in the purification of the heart. Students need not be over-anxious to score high marks. It is more important to cultivate a good heart.
 Revere your parents. Promote social improvement. Co-operate with your fellow-men. These are the things you should learn.
 Make Nature your teacher
 Make Nature your teacher, instead of relying too much on books. The vast universe has many lessons to teach. Make your heart your preceptor. Esteem God as your best friend. He will never fail you, unlike most fait-weather friends in the world.

I prefer to hear that you have earned a good name for your behaviour than praise for your scholarship. Do not calculate what money you can cam from your degrees.

You must ask yourselves: "What good can I do to my family? What help can I render to my fellow men?" Education is not for securing a job. It is for acquiring knowledge and wisdom. It is unfortunate that education has been linked to jobs and earning money

You must move among the people in a friendly and comradely spirit.

Do not hate anyone. Follow the principle- "Help ever; hurt never.

Today many occupy high positions and earn fabulous salaries. How many of them do work that can justify the salaries they are paid? Men who receive Rs.20,000 a month do not do even Rs.20 worth of honest work. This is treachery to the nation. An educated person must give proper return for the salary he receives. Students must bear this in mind when they enter service. They must give adequate return for the salary they receive. That will give you job satisfaction and soothe your conscience. Our students are behaving in an exemplary manner. Whatever their background before joining the Institute, within a month the new students are transformed into ideal students. They develop commendable qualities.

Boys and girls! Wherever you may go and whatever institutions in which you may work, bring a good name to the Institute and earn a good name for yourselves. Girl students who may get married should serve their in-laws in such a way that the good name of the institute is vindicated.

The mother-in-law should be proud of a well-educated daughter-in-law coming from the Sai Institute.

The good name you earn will rejoice Me. Do your duty wherever you may go.

Earn the esteem of your employers. That will please Me. This is My message to you.

Students devotion to Svaami

Students! Many of you have secured high ranks in the examinations. This year 150 students of the Sathya Sai Higher Secondary School appeared for the public examinations held by the Central Board. All of them passed in I class. In many States when one or two candidates get I class, they give publicity to it. I asked our students why they do not get their photos published in the papers when they have secured a Ist class. "We studied for the sake of Svaami and not to get our photos published in the papers," they replied. Those words delighted Me immensely. That such high sentiments are present among young children is known to very few. The children are full of fine qualities. They have the ability to develop the whole world. But they do not try to utilise it. Students should realise the integral relationship between them and the world. Hence they should, not hesitate to serve the world with determination. They can achieve anything they want to.

Students possess immense power, more than anybody else. My students are My property Earn a good name wherever you go--from the home to the nation. That will please Me more than anything else. When you earn a good name, your human birth is redeemed. Shankaraachaarya has warned youth against being proud of wealth, progeny or youthhood. All these are transient.

What are enduring are Sathyam and Keerthi (truth and fame). Never bother about success or defeat, loss or gain, happiness or sorrow. They are incidental to life in the world.

With the conviction that very soon our students will go out into the world, set an example to everyone in whatever institutions they may work and usher in a new era, I bless one and all.

One more thing. I do not mind whether you achieve high ranks or not. But do not get any "remarks" against you. I am aware that nearly all of you are behaving well. But one or two may go astray. I desire that everyone should be exemplary. This is My benediction.

Address at the XVI Convocation of the Sai Sathya Sai

Institute of Higher Learning on 22-11-1997, in the Puurnachandhra Auditorium.

Trust in My wisdom. I do not make mistakes. Love My uncertainty, for it is not a mistake. It is My intent and will.

Baba

32. Recognise your Divine Identity

Neither merit nor sin, neither joy nor sorrow;

Neither manthras nor pilgrimages;

Neither charity nor yajna;

Neither eating, nor food, nor consumer of food.

I am none of these.

I am the Eternal Bliss Divine,

The One Absolute. I am Shiva.

EMBODIMENTS of Love! You are neither endowed with merit not with sin. You are nor creatures of happiness or sorrow. You are not creatures of manthras (sacred chants). Nor the products of manual or mechanical skills. You are not renunciants or hedonists. Who, then, are you? Your real form is Sadhaanandha Roopam (the eternal Bliss Divine), the Divine form of Auspiciousness (Shiva). But, because of the differences in external physical forms, you are victims of the ignorance of your true selves. from a pauper to a millionaire, from an ignoramus to a great scholar, irrespective of whether one is a male or a female, young or old, anyone, when describing one's Self, uses the term "I" (nenu). The scriptures have described it as Aathma or Hridhaya. Hridhaya means that which enshrines kindness. Hence all of you are embodiments of kindness. It is only when everyone recognises this quality of kindness that-world peace will be realised. People pronounce the prayer- "Lokaas Samasthaas Sukhino Bhavanthu" (May all the people in all the worlds be happy). But few practise that kindness which will make the people happy. The "I" Principle No Individual can introduce himself (or herself) to the outside world without using the term "I" (nenu). Even birds and beasts are not using the term "I" because they do not know human speech. Otherwise, each of them would declare: "I am a cow," "I am an eagle," "I am a dog" and so on. All beings in the world proclaim their existence by using the term "I." The "I" is present in all beings. The all-pervading Brahmic Principle is also the "I." Without properly understanding the nature of the "I" man identifies himself with the body and is immersed in the delusion caused by this mistaken identification. The whole cosmos is associated with dhvaitham (duality or plurality) based on the distinction between "I" and "this" (the other). This refers to dhriishyam (what is perceived). "I" refers to the drashtha (seer). Without the seer, the seen cannot exist. Let Me hold up this handkerchief. This is a cloth. The reference to the cloth cannot be made without using the term "this". The term "this" has to be used to refer to a specific object. When I say "this is a hall," the statement points to a specific object that is perceived. All names and forms are associated with objects of perception. It is the drashtha (seer) who testifies to the existence of what is perceived. The seer and the seen You see the bulbs shedding light in the hall. What is shedding light is not the bulb but the current in the bulb. The bulb is a Upaadhi (vesture).

If you ask a young boy when he came to Prashaanthi Nilayam, he will answer- "I came on the 20th, Svaami." If he is asked, "Why did you come?" he will answer: "I came for the Convocation." Who is it that came? The body (of the boy). Identifying himself with the body, he replies that "he" came on the 20th. Yesterday, he slipped and sustained a fracture in the leg. Today, he comes to Me and says- "Svaami! My leg has sustained a fracture." Does not this mean that his leg is different from him? At one moment you identify yourself with your body. At another moment you distinguish yourself as separate from your body. That means that all that you perceive belongs to the realm of dhriishyam (the seen). The perceiver who enters into the perception of all things is the Reality. He is unchanging and remains changeless through all the categories of time--past, present and future. The Shruthis called that unchanging entity as "I" (Nenu). That "I" represents the Aathma. The Aathma becomes Hridhaya, the scat of karuna (compassion). 'All terms like "I", Karuna, Aathma, Hridhaya or God are all synonymous. They are all different names given to the same entity in common parlance. The name Raama or Krishna by which one may be called is a name conferred on a person and is not born with him. The first name given to anyone at birth is "I." Even for God the first original name is "I". The Upanishaths declare- "Aham Bhahma-asmī" (I am Brahmam). In this declaration Aham ("I") comes first and Brahmam comes thereafter. Hence, the "I" is the primal basis for everything. Very few make any attempt to recognise the nature of this "I." Many persons are engaged in 'different kinds of spiritual exercises. For whose sake are these exercises done? The usual answer is "I am doing the saadhanas to seek God." Where is the need to search for God, when he is omnipresent? It is a ludicrous exercise. When you are yourself Divine, where is the need for a quest? A man who goes enquiring about where he is will be deemed crazy. Role of the Mind Man today has failed to recognise his Divine identity. This situation has to be changed. How is it to be done? A bent branch may be straightened, A rock may be softened, But can a perverted Mind be reformed? (TheLugu poem) It is the incorrigible perverted mind that accounts for man going astray.

The mind is the root cause of man's happiness or sorrow, health or disease, his goodness or wickedness. What, then, is the meaning of man's search? It is the desire to experience a vision of the Aathma (Self).

The different forms of devotional exercises in which people engage themselves are not really for experiencing God but for some kind of mental satisfaction.

If you want to go on with these spiritual exercises, you must do so with only one aim in view, namely, to get rid of the anaathma-bhaava (forgetting the Aathma and identifying one's self with the body). You will then realise that the Aathma is the only reality. The anaathma-bhaava is like the darkness in a room. It has no existence of its own. The moment a light is brought, the darkness disappears.

God has no form or name

You may ask: "How am I to declare "Aham Brahmaasmi" (I am the Brahmam)? Yes, you can do so. But, first of all you must understand the Aham, the "I". The "I" principle is the Divine.

Vedhaantha declares- "Ekam Eva adhvaithheeyam Brahma." The Absolute is One only without a second. In the work-a-day world, men are used to worshipping the Absolute with different names and forms. But the Supreme Reality is only one. Different names are used in the context of different functions. It is like calling the same person by different epithets according to the particular function he is discharging at any moment. God has no form or name. All names and forms are creations of the human mind. The Shruthi has declared that the Lord is the attributeless eternal Reality.

In this context, there is no point in people going after gurus and preceptors. You are your own preceptor. You must subdue your mind. Only then you can develop good qualities. Man is losing peace because of giving a free rein to the mind.

The Divine nature of the Aham ('I') must be properly understood. That "I" is the master of the body, the senses and the intellect. It is the power that permeates the entire cosmos. To worship such an omnipresent power in a small shrine is hardly appropriate. To confine the infinite Divine to the limits of a small photograph for worship is hardly befitting.

What is the need to have a number of photographs? It is demeaning the Divine to adore Him in a multiplicity of pictures. (Svaami sang a song in Thelugu which dilated on the futility of trying to erect temples, light lamps or confer names on the infinite cosmic Lord who is boundless, infinitely effulgent, is the indweller in every being and contains within Himself the entire universe. How can such a God be offered food or adored in anyway?)

All the forms in which God is worshipped are products of the human imagination. The proper way-to experience God is to feel with all your inner being that you are the Divine itself. That experience will make you feel the presence of the Divine in all beings and in all things. With that experience there will be no room for hatred towards anyone. Such a one will nor do evil deeds.

What is the reason for the ubiquitous existence all over the world of violence, discord and disorder? It is the absence of the feeling of the spiritual oneness of all beings. The same Divine Indweller is present in all beings, like the current that illumines all bulbs. All are manifestations of the Divine, as declared in the Geetha. (Svaami sang a song to describe how the Gopikas found it impossible to realise the true nature of Krishna, whose divinity was manifested in the subtlest particle and in the infinite vastness of the cosmos).

Recognise the omnipresence of God

When men begin to recognise the omnipresence of God they will be transformed. All their thoughts and actions will get diminished. It may be asked: "Who is responsible for the evil in the world?" The persons indulging in the evil deeds are responsible. God is only a witness. The rewards or punishments people receive in life are fruits of their own actions and not conferred by God.

When all actions are done in a spirit of dedication to the Divine and with recognition of one's own divinity, all actions become sanctified. Identification of the "I" with the body is the cause of all troubles. It turns the "I" into the Ahamkaara (ego). The ego is at the root of all troubles. There is nothing wrong in looking after the body, but life should not be based on attachment to the body.

As I was coming to the Hall, many devotees greeted Me with the words, "Happy birthday!" They should wish "happy birthdays" for those who are not happy I do not need your birthday greetings. The divine is Nithyaanandham (perennially in bliss).

The Divine is ever blissful, confers supreme happiness on others,

is the very embodiment of the highest wisdom,

has transcended the opposites, is vast as space,

cloud-like in complexion, with perfect features.

(Sanskrit verse)

Like the lightning in the heart of a cloud, wisdom should illumine your hearts. That wisdom will reveal the Divine in you. Understand the spiritual basis of "I" principle Embodiments of Love! You have all come here at great expense and trouble. Make the utmost effort to understand the spiritual basis of the "I" principle. When you regard the "I" as the Aathma (Self), you will be free from all suffering. In case troubles come, they will vanish like the snow on a mountain. Why should you bother about these passing clouds? When you have realised Aathma-jnaana (Self-awareness) there will be no need for you to worry about anything.

All troubles arise because, obsessed with the mind, man forgets the Aathma. When your life is illumined by the effulgence of the Aathma, the mind will be put in the shade. When you ignore the body and the mind, you will understand your true nature--the Aathmik Principle in you.

When you have realised this basic truth, you can carry on all your daily activities and do your duties in a spirit of dedication.

Today there is no peace anywhere in the world. What is the reason? People have forgotten

Aathma-thathva (the reality of the Spirit). They have lost faith in the Spirit and have developed attachment to worldly things. People look at the phenomenal world. But they do not see it as a manifestation of the Divine. Herein lies their foolishness.

All that is perceived by the eyes is divine. The perceiver is also divine. Spirituality points out the Divinity that is present in both the seer and the seen. When this basic spiritual oneness is realised, the division between man and nature disappears.

God is closer to you than any mother

Have the conviction that God is with you always. A mother may forget her child, but God will never forget you. He is closer to you than any mother. Never forget God.

Are all those who are coming to Prashanthi Nilayam experiencing "Prashanthi"? No. They are engaged in too much talking, moving about from one place to another. What for have you come?

For whose abode have you come? Why should you wander about restlessly? Make use of this golden opportunity to acquire peace of mind. Gather as much spiritual experience as you can while you are here and. ruminate over it when you go back like a cow chewing the cud.

You have come here to strengthen your relationship with the Divine.

Hold on to it firmly Put into practice at least one of the things you learn here. Of what avail is a mountain of book knowledge without a modicum of practice?

It is not enough to chant the names of God. God must be installed in the heart. Make your conscience your guide and preceptor. That will promote true devotion. All external paraphernalia have no use.

There are four mottos, which all devotees should follow:

(1) Avoid bad company

(2) Welcome association with good persons.

(3) Remember always the transient and the permanent.

(4) Ceaselessly engage yourself in meritorious acts.

It is by these means that you become good. Remember the message of Vyaasa epitomised in the dictum: "Help ever; hurt never." If these basic rules are followed, all countries will be happy and peaceful. Each country is a part of the mansion of planet earth.

Bhaarith is a part of this mansion. When we have this broad vision, humanity will be one in spirit.

Svaami does not rejoice in the celebration of birthdays. Since all of you have come for this celebration I am obliged to give you satisfaction. I have no wants.

Whatever I do is for your sake. Recognise this truth. I have no dislike for anyone and no one dislikes me. All are mine and I belong to all. My benediction is "May all be happy". Everyone should adhere to the path of righteousness. All should manifest their spiritual bliss. Till you realise that spiritual oneness, you have to perform devotional acts like bhajans, japas and prayers.

Advice to Devotees

You must install in your hearts the essence of today's message to all of you. I want you to exercise control over five vital things in life.

First: "Do not waste money." Realise that "Misuse of money is evil." If you wish to keep a photo

(of Bhagavaan), have only one. Why do you waste money on buying too many photos? Do not go on buying photos.

Second: "Do not waste food." Realise that "food is God." Your body is the product of the food taken by your parents. Waste of food is waste of God.

Third: "Do not waste Time." Time is God. The scriptures have extolled many ways God as the Master of Time. Time wasted is life wasted.

Fourth: "Do not waste energy." Energy enters into every one of our actions. When you see, speak, hear, act or think energy is expended. In every one of these activities you should see that you do not waste your energies unnecessarily.

Fifth: "Do not forget God," at any moment whatever you may be doing. God is present wherever you may go. He is with you, beside you and around you always. Hence there is no need for you to go to some temple to pray to God. Your heart is your temple. Turn your vision inward.
Thereby understand the Aathmik Principle.
In your journey to Prashanthi Nilayam you must have undergone many inconveniences. In future avoid unnecessary journeys. You may do so when you need it for your contentment.
Hence, do not waste time. Do not give room for useless thoughts. Do not waste your love. Love is life itself. With our love one is as good as dead. Install love in your hearts.
Avoid bad company
Avoid unnecessary and excessive association with all and sundry.
Many of you have come here away from your kith and kin. People have come from America or Japan, Germany or Russia, leaving their parents or other relatives. Why, then, should they cultivate new relationships with others here? Keep yourself to yourself as far as possible. Keep your mind pure. There is no need to indulge in talk with people in all sorts of places. Talk less, think more. Cultivate this habit.
Unnecessary association with strangers may have unexpected consequences of a serious nature.
You might have noticed in the play staged by the students how one person got into trouble because of his association with some undesirable persons. Ultimately he recognised his mistake and felt that his mind had been poisoned by association with bad persons. Others should not be blamed. The mistake was his in not keeping his association confined to good persons. He cried over his folly in joining bad company
To join bad company and come to grief is a self-wrought calamity. Keep your association with anyone to the barest minimum. Genuine spiritual aspirants should be particularly careful in eschewing bad company. They should create an environment conducive to their spiritual progress and mental peace. That is the only thing Svaami wants. Having come to Prashanthi Nilayam, all of you must become exemplary devotees. Outsiders must feel spontaneously how exemplary is the behaviour of Sai students and Sai devotees. That reaction will do you more good than satisfying Me.
Sathya Sai is the devotee of devotees

I have no devotees. You may describe yourselves as Sathya Sai devotees. I am myself a devotee.
Whose devotee? A devotee of those who claim to be My devotees. My duty is to fulfil their desires. I belong to you and you belong to Me. Understand and strengthen this relationship This is My sole desire.
I do not relish the celebration of my birthday or pompous decorations for the purpose. Such ostentation is not good for anyone. Adopt a practical attitude towards the spiritual life.
With the holy thoughts, in you on this auspicious day, you must go out into the world and spread our sacred feelings among others. Do not confine your feelings to yourselves or retain them only during your stay here. Spread them wherever you go.
Svaami is above all distinctions of caste, religion or language. The caste of humanity, the religion of love and the language of the heart---these are what I stand for. Experience this truth and share your joy with others.
Discourse in Sai Kulvanth Hall on the morning 23-11-1997.
When you do not love man, your heart will not love God. Despising brother men, you cannot at the same time, worship God; if you do, God will not accept that hypocrisy. God is resident in every heart; so, if you serve anyone, that service reaches the God within him. It brings to you the grace of God.
Baba
33. Dedicate your lives to the Divine
Faith, Daring, Courage and Intelligence, Energy and Valour---wherever
These six qualities exist
Divine protection is assured.
EMBODIMENTS of Love ! Vishvaasam (faith or confidence), Saahasam (daring or determination), Dhairyam (courage), Buddhi (intelligence), shakthi (energy) and Paraakramam (valour)---when a man has these six qualities, the Divine will stand by him in all his endeavours.
In any age or at any place or in any circumstance, these six good qualities are essential. No worry will haunt any man who has these six virtues.
These six qualities cannot be acquired by education nor can they be imparted by any preceptor.
Nor can they be inherited from one's parents.
These qualities are secured only by Aathma-vishvaasam (Self-confidence).
Faith is essential for every activity in life
The first among the six qualities is Vishvaasam (faith). In our daily experience faith is evident from the simple act of posting a letter. No one will send a letter by post if he did not have faith in the postal department. The address and the postage stamp on the letter are unaffected by distance. Likewise, God makes no distinction-between those near to Him or remote from Him.

One's faith should be properly addressed. The faith should be unwavering, total and free from doubts of any kind. The letter of Faith has also to carry the stamp of Prema (Love). It should be selfless love. Selfish love will be useless. When firm faith is associated with unselfish love, the prayers addressed to Bhagavaan are bound to reach Him.

This kind of faith has become rare nowadays. Self-confidence is totally absent. How can one without confidence in himself have faith in God? And how can such a person hope for God's grace? Hence, every man must cultivate firm faith.

Today in every field, firm faith is essential. Any one who leave home for his office sets out with the confidence that he will return home in the evening. No one will embark on any undertaking unless at the outset he has the confidence that he can do the job. Faith is thus essential for every activity in life.

The ancient sages accomplished many great things by their faith. Their achievements are cherished by people today, even after thousands of years.

Unfortunately, because of the influence of kali in the present age, faith is declining from moment to moment. People change their beliefs constantly. Such changes are mental aberrations. They do not pertain to the Spirit (which dwells in the heart).

What are human values?

Mankind has a history of lakhs of years. But Humanity is yet to realise the greatness of humanness. After all these years, man is still unable to answer the question: "What are human values?"

Men study books, listen to discourses, experience gains and losses, joys and sorrows, but all these do not give them a firm hold on what is permanent in life. If they had acquired this hold they would have realised that the world is one family.

The Vedhas taught the concept of one human family. The Vedhas declared that the Brihath (Supreme Cosmic Principle) has no limits. It is infinite.

Mankind has also no bounds or barriers. In fact, there are no barriers between humanity and every other species of living beings like birds, beasts and insects and even trees. All of them belong to a single family of living beings. In the Tree of Life, man appears in many forms--as animals, birds and insects. In all these forms he experiences his divine essence.

You are all aware of the fact that Ganapathi has two mothers, Gauri and Ganga. For every man there are four mothers. The first mother is Sathyam (Truth). The second mother is Dharmam (Righteousness). The third is Prema (Love). The fourth is Shaanthi (peace). Man must live in such a manner that he pleases all the four mothers. Man, however, has given up these four sacred mothers and adores four others who are adopted mothers. Who are they? Injustice, immorality, unrighteousness and falsehood--these are the adopted mothers. As a result, man is a prey to many difficulties. Man, who ought to adhere to Truth, Right Conduct and Love, has become a creature of injustice, wickedness and untruth. As a result of abandoning one's natural mothers and clinging to unnatural relationships man is leading a polluted life and forfeiting peace.

In an earlier aeon Raama declared that the mother and the Motherland are greater than Heaven itself. But man today has given up his natural mother and is adoring meretricious mothers. Man should love Truth, Righteousness, Love and Peace as his mothers. In no circumstance should he cause any pain to these four because that will result in great suffering for him.

The six inner enemies of man

The Creator has endowed man with numerous marvellous qualities. Besides the six virtues mentioned earlier man also got vices. The opposites of the six virtues are Kaama (Desire), Krodha (Anger), Lobha (Greed), Moha (fascination), Madha (Pride) and Maathsarya (Envy).

These are known as the six enemies of man. They are part of creation. The mind is the master of these vices. Man tries to train the mind to overcome these vices. But this is not easy for all. The reason is that, being unaware of how to control the mind, man becomes an easy prey to its vagaries. Everyone should strive to find out how to use the mind in any situation, at any time and in any circumstance.

Men today are dominated by three evil qualities: anger, hatred, and envy. These three qualities poison the mind of man. Consequently, every action of man gets poisoned. Every word he utters is venomous. All actions done by the promptings of the mind are tainted. All sensory actions are equally polluted. To transform these evil thoughts and actions into good ones, it is necessary to infuse love into all thoughts and actions. When the mind is filled with Love, all actions get suffused with Love.

Today man is totally unaware of what is meant by Love. Man equates desire with Love. He imagines that whatever he yearns for are prompted by Love. This is not true Prema (love).

Prema is totally free from desire. It is utterly selfless. It seeks no return. It is all encompassing. It makes no distinction between friend and foe.

Forgetting this concept of universal selfless love, filling himself with selfish desires, man fancies that he is filled with Love. This is mundane attachment. It is quite apart from the Love that flows from the Spirit inside. Spiritual love is boundless. It is free from the feeling of hatred. It is capable of expressing itself in universal terms.

It is vital to fill the mind with Love and expel the six enemies residing in it. Every part of the body should be filled with Divine Love. That is the way to divinise man.

Fill the heart with Love and render service

Many people imagine that to divinise man and make him a godly being is a superhuman exercise. This is not so. Divine Love is within the competence of man.

It is natural to man. He is entitled to possess it. Divine Love should not be considered as something transcendental or alien to man. But men tend to degrade this love by giving it different forms and names and degrade themselves.

The defect lies in the perversion of Love and is not inherent in it.
Convert anger into Love. Turn hatred into Love. To effect this change what is needed is a change of heart---filling it with Love.

When the heart is filled with Love, the whole world becomes loveable.

The mind is restless and fickle. All troubles that afflict man stem from the mind. The thoughts arising from the mind are the cause of human birth.

The Vedhas describe man as Manuja. This implies that man takes birth to experience fulfilment of his desires. Hence, it is necessary for man to make his desires sublime. He should seek to know what could make his life ideal and exemplary.

What can contribute to the well-being of society? What is ideal for the whole world? Thinking over these questions, one should develop sublime ideas. People should not act in haste on every impulse of the mind. It is said that the body is a prerequisite for the achievement of righteousness

but it is important to note that man is endowed with a body to render service to others. The implication of the two dicta is that while discharging his duties, man should also render service to others.

There is any number of helpful sea-vices to be rendered by men in this world today. We have here three types of devotees. There are those who are not conscious of their abilities. There are a second type of devotees, who seek God alone and do not desire anything else from God. The third type are those who adore God as the embodiment of Truth and get their wishes fulfilled by their prayers to Him as the omnipotent Lord. God is one. But devotees can worship him under different names and forms.

Divine exists in the microcosm and the macrocosm

Man has no need to seek anything outside him. He has the universe within him in his heart. He is potentially the Cosmic Being. He has in him the magnetic power of attraction. It is derived from the Divine. Every atom has his Divine power. Men think that only what is perceived by the senses is real and what is beyond human perception is unreal. This is wrong. It is the unseen that contains everything. When you see a man, you consider his physical features as the only reality about him. But you can have more conception of his powers and talents, which are not visible externally. He has Compassion, Love, the spirit of Sacrifice, sublime thoughts, none of which are apparent to you. For that reason, can you say that they do not exist? Likewise, the secret of man's actions may not be apparent. A flower, for instance, has fragrance, which has no visible form. The form of fragrance is to be found in the form of the flower.

Without the flower there is no fragrance. It is said that Prema (love) has no form. But love has a form. The mother, who loves her child, expresses the form of love.

Likewise, everything has a form. But the ignorant not aware of the truth, declare that what is formless is non-existent. There is nothing in the universe, which is without form. For one to understand this truth, he has to realise that the Divine exists in the microcosm and the macrocosm.

All are one! Be alike to everyone

There were controversies regarding Jesus. These differences were the cause of the ordeals he had to go through. But Jesus was prepared to face any trouble or any penalty he considered

Compassion as the supreme quality At first, he declared he was a "Messenger of God." Then, he announced: "I am the Son of God." Ultimately he declared: "I and my Father are One." You must take note of this oneness. You must proclaim yore: oneness and not your diversity.

Today people talk about unity but do not practise it. In every discourse Syaami speaks about love. How many practise it? How many have tried to understand the Love Principle? Who has this Love? Love is not to be seen anywhere.

Where there is love, there is no room for hatred. Do not be envious of anyone. When this evil quality appears. Love takes to flight. A pure heart is abode of Love. Where there is Purity, there is Unity. Unity leads to Divinity.

Today Purity is absent. How, then, do you realise Divinity? You must offer everything to God without any desire. Dedicate all yours to God. This was the teaching of Jesus. He considered everything as an offering to God. When he was being nailed on the cross, people around were weeping. At that moment an ethereal voice declared: All are one, my dear son! be alike to everyone." Jesus declared: "Death is the dress of life." Just as we change our clothes, we also change our bodies. The bodies are vestures (for the indwelling Spirit). Hence bodies should be regarded as mere vestures. We should not worry about the body. Love is God. Live in Love Buddha also, before he attained Nirvaana expounded his reachings clearly. His step-mother's son, Ananda, was in tears at that time. Buddha told him: "Ananda! You should not shed tears like this. Why are you weeping?" Ananda said: I am grieving over your imminent passing."

Buddha declared- "I am not dying. Nor are you living. All have to give up this body. Therefore, you must not shed tears."

How many heed such sayings? You must learn to lead ideal lives. That is the right way to observe the birthday' of Christ. Few care to observe the ideals of the great teachers.

You must realise that there is nothing more divine than Love. Love is God. Live in Love. This is your duty Fill your hearts with Love. You will then be free from all afflictions.

You must feel that you are suffering because of Love. But that suffering is due to constricted love. When your love is all-embracing there will be no room for suffering.

Towards the end of his life Raamakrishna Paramahansa was suffering from cancer of the throat.

All his disciples appealed to him to pray to the Mother; Durga Devi, whom Raamakrishna worshipped, to relieve him of his malady. Raamakrishna said: "I have prayed to the Mother."

They asked him what the Mother's response was. Raamakrishna said- "The Mother told me:

'When I am caring so many things with so many months, does it matter very much if you are unable to cat with your one mouth?' her words opened my eyes."

Sing the glories of God and serve others

All mouths are the mouths of God. The Vedhas proclaim that the Divine has a myriad heads and myriad eyes and myriad feet. This means that all heads are His, all eyes are His and all feet are His. God is infinite. Man is finite. The infinite Divine must be loved with boundless Love. God's love is limitless and undiminishing. It is ever pure and unsullied. You must serve everyone with a loving heart.

Christ was the victim of envious persons who were opposed to His teachings and who levelled accusations against Him. Devotees of God should not mind the criticisms of envious persons. All good people have to face such troubles. They should treat everything as meant for their good.

This was how the Paandavas looked upon all the troubles they experienced.

Yesterday and today the overseas devotees filled everyone with joy by their music programmes.

God is a lover of music and enjoys music. Sainly devotees like Naaradha and Thumburu, who are always in the proximity of God, are always singing the glory of God. Nothing else can give so much joy as music. You can please God with your music. God revels in music. Music is therefore holy. It reflects the state of one's inner being. Singing the glories of God, render service to the people. You will derive the greatest joy when you sing and serve.

Transform yourselves and transform the world

The Cosmos is controlled by God;

God is subject to Truth

That Truth is subject to the authority of Sacred and noble beings.

Men today must become embodiments of Truth. They must have mastery over Truth.

The entire creation emerged from Truth (Sathya).

Everything merges in Truth. What is there in the cosmos without its basis in Truth? This is the pure Truth of Being (Suddha Satwa) oh man.

[Telugu Poem].

Every man has his origin in Truth. He is sustained by Truth. And he merges in Truth. He is the embodiment of Truth. When every individual recognizes this truth, the whole world will be permeated by Truth. What man should seek today is not pleasure. Nor is his goal sorrow. Man should bring under his control the source of pleasure and pain. More than pleasure, it is pain that awakens the wisdom in man. If you study the lives of great men, you find that it is out of trouble and pain that Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 2 they derived wisdom. Without sorrow there can be no wisdom.

It is pain that teaches many wise lessons to man.

Not realizing this profound truth, man pursues pleasure endlessly. No doubt man needs to be happy. But how is happiness to be achieved? It is only when sorrow is overcome that man realizes happiness. Hence everyone should welcome sorrow in the same spirit in which he greets happiness.

Pain and pleasure are intermingled.

No one can separate them.

Pleasure is never alone by itself.

When pain is relieved, pleasure is experienced.

[Telugu Poem].

Wherefrom does pleasure come? When pain is got rid of, pleasure is secured.

Treat pleasure and pain alike as divine gifts

In our country today the young boys and girls are the inheritors of the prosperity or poverty of the nation. The future progress of the nation depends on them. Hence, these boys and girls are the true wealth of the nation.

It has to be realized that man is the architect of his own pleasure and pain. Hence he should face with equanimity whatever happens to him good or evil.

God is described as Siddhiswaroop (the embodiment of wish fulfillment). He is also described as Amogha (One without a limit or measure). This means that the power of the Divine is infinite. He is also known as Aprameya (the immeasurable). Hence, everyone should treat whatever happens to him as a gift from God. Pleasure and pain should be treated alike as Divine gifts. There is a unique joy in this process.

In daily life we tend to treat defeat, loss or grief as calamities.

But, nothing occurs in the world without a cause. Hunger is the cause for eating. Thirst is the cause for drinking. DiffiSathya

Sai Speaks, Volume 31 3

culties are the cause of sorrow. If man is to enjoy enduring happiness, he must discover the source of such happiness. That source is love (prema). There is nothing greater than love in this world. Everything has a price. The price to be paid for enduring happiness is Divine Love. Without Love, no object can give you real happiness.

Hence, the primary wealth for man is Love. Everyone should seek to acquire this wealth. With this wealth anyone can enjoy enduring bliss.

Pain divinizes the pleasure that follows it

We witness in the world all kinds of pains and sorrows. But none of these is permanent. Every term of pain is followed by pleasure. The experience of pleasure is refined and enhanced by the earlier experience of pain. Like the refinement of gold by melting in a crucible, pain divinises the pleasure that follows it.

The New Year or a new month does not bring with it any new joy or sorrow. As Sandipan Chatterjee (who had spoken earlier) said every moment is new. Every second is new, because it heralds the march of time. A year is in fact a succession of seconds turning into minutes, days and months.

It is only when every moment is cherished as new, will the new year become new. The sacred way in which every moment is spent will determine the fruitfulness of the year.

If you wish to lead a sacred life and have sacred experiences, you must engage yourself in sacred actions. The good and evil in the world can be changed only by the change in men's actions. Transformation of society must start with transformation

of individuals.

This morning the students recited a Vedic prayer about students living together in amity and acting in unison. But they did not mention the crucial passage in the prayer which deSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 4 clares: Let us live in harmony free from conflict The Vedic hymn stresses that unity can come only when people live together without discord. Hence everyone should give no room for conflict or unrest but lead a life of harmony and love with others.

Love is the dispeller of the darkness of ignorance

God is ever love incarnate. His love permeates the world.

The universe is termed Visvam because of the Lord's presence in the entire cosmos. One of the names of the Lord is Vishnu.

Etymologically the word refers to one who is present throughout the universe. God is the cause and the cosmos is the effect.

The Lord is also known as Atma, which means light or effulgence.

The Lord is the dispeller of the darkness of ignorance.

Every word used in the ancient scriptures has profound inner meaning. This profundity is characteristic of the Bharathiya spiritual heritage. Very few are interested in exploring these profundities. Most people confine themselves to ritualistic worship for a brief time every day. They do not even attempt to know what for they are performing these rituals.

There is no meaning in performing these rituals without understanding the purpose and goal of life. The ultimate purpose of all spiritual exercises is to realize the Love Principle (Love of the Divine). To foster love is the purpose of all spiritual endeavor. In no circumstance should love be given up or ignored.

Where there is love, there can be no hatred, grief or want.

Time is passing. You are all growing in years. But there is little change in your attitudes. Purity in thought results in purity in knowledge and wisdom. Self-Realization can come only through spiritual wisdom (Jnana).

Many in the world acquire wealth, fame and position. But what have they achieved in terms of the goal of life? Their failure is due to lack of understanding of the unity that underSathya lies the apparent diversity. It is a mark of spiritual goodness to recognize the divine in everyone. Prahlada declared that you can find God wherever you seek Him. His father, Hiranyakasipu, was a great person because of his attainments. But he failed to achieve goodness because of his denial of the Divine. A similar difference can be seen between Rama's goodness and Ravana's greatness.

The lesson for students today is that they should follow the sacred path of righteousness. They should work for the welfare of society. Students should cultivate three qualities. They should cherish love for all living beings; they should cultivate all good qualities; they should acquire all useful knowledge.

Love is the basis for these three qualities.

Fill your hearts with Love

Embodiments of Love! See that your love for God does not fluctuate according to whether your wishes are fulfilled or not. Remember that you reap the fruits of your actions, according to whether they are good or bad. Love of God alone can confer enduring bliss. Eschew bad qualities like hatred and envy. Today marks the beginning of the year 1998. At least from today fill your hearts with Love. Look upon all as God's children.

Sri Krishna has declared that all human beings are sparks of Himself. This means that everyone should lead a godly life. Everyone should express his love to some persons everyday. Thereby the whole world will be filled with love.

Ponder for a moment on the phenomenon you are witnessing here today, with thousands gathered from all parts of the world. What is the reason? You are seeking to find something here that is lacking in your native land. What is that? It is Divine Love. You are missing it in your place. You have not found it in yourself. Hence you have come here, like a sick man going to a hospital. Now that you have come here, take back with you Divine Love. Fill your hearts with that Love.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 6

Carry it with you wherever you go like a sick man who carries his medicines with him. Let Divine Love guide you like the mariner's compass points ever toward the Divine. Dedicate all your thoughts and actions to the Divine. Thereby you will be divinising your entire life. It is by leading such a godly life that our ancients left a glorious heritage. Boys and girls today should fill their minds and hearts with such sacred ideals and transform the entire society into a loving community.

Role of sports in influencing young people

You are aware that on December 30 players from many countries came to Prasanthi Nilayam to take part in a cricket match. All of them had taken a resolve to play the game in a sporting spirit, with a pure mind and with due regard to the rules of the game. They played the game in this sublime spirit. Not only did they enjoy the game, but they filled the large mass of spectators with joy. Our young students showed great interest in the match.

Among the spectators were large numbers of people from neighboring villages and towns. Sports and games have a role in influencing young people. Life is a Game, Play it! Life is a Dream, Realize it! Life is Love, Enjoy it! Life is a Challenge, Meet it! People must be ready to face all the ordeals in life. The capacity to face the challenges of life is given to man alone.

Every act in daily life can be sanctified by dedicating it to God. By dedicating all thoughts to God man can achieve peace. There is no need to wait for a suitable time for embarking on this exercise. The time is at your beck and call. Great people do not wait on Time. They make time their servant. Endowed with a sacred body man is misusing it. Human life is like a bamboo that has many knots in the form of desires for wealth, wife and children. These knots have to be removed.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 7

From the new year, you have to understand the true meaning of humanness and transform your life. You will then be true servants of the nation. Play your part in every field of public life, keeping your heart pure and unsullied. Sanctify all actions by dedicating them to God. Students! Remember that you are in a golden age in your lives. Do not waste it. Do your duty. Love and revere your parents. Serve society. Adhere to the good qualities associated with right education. Be happy and make others happy. From this new year onwards, when students cultivate humility, reverence for elders and love toward all, I shall feel very happy.

At a meeting of the Central Trust yesterday, I told the members including Sri Indulal Shah, that I had no interest in property. Do not involve me in any connection with these properties. I do not wish to have any connection with money or property. My only concern is with my devotees. Telling them all this, I signed the papers.

You are my property. When I have this boundless property, why should I have any interest in material assets? Students are my property. Nothing can give me greater pleasure than what I get from seeing the students lead ideal lives. That is the return I expect from you. No fee of any kind is received from you for your education. But I want you to pay one special fee - that is love. When you offer that fee, you will be offering everything, as it were.

Lakshmana surrendered to Rama totally, declaring that he was offering his family and everything he possessed to Rama. Everyone should follow Lakshmana's example. He revered his elder brother's wife as his mother.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 8

The eyes should see only what is good

The eyes should see only what is good. The hands should be engaged in good actions. The ears should hear no evil and listen only to what is good. Talk no evil. Talk only what is good. Think no evil. Think what is good. Do no evil. Do what is good. This is the way to God.

The eyes should see only sacred objects. The whole world will be transformed when your vision becomes holy.

This is New Year Day according to the Gregorian calendar.

We have other New Year days according to the practice in different parts of the country. There is no need to bother about the year as such. Devote every moment to actions that will please God. Develop love for God, which will confer every blessing on you. This is exemplified by the life of Harishchandra. He sacrificed everything in the cause of truth. And ultimately he got back everything by the grace of God.

On this New Year Day I wish you all every happiness and prosperity. The ancients used to bless those who come to them with long life of 100 years and good health. They wished the people long life so that they may lead worthy lives. Lead a long life, happy life, peaceful life, loving life and divine life.

Redeem your lives by practicing Divine Love.

Promotion of unity:

Students duty

Before desiring anything, a person must make themselves worthy.

Charity (or generosity) qualifies someone for a good name.

Adherence to Truth qualifies them to attain Heaven.

Character makes them fit to enjoy happiness.

To do anything in the world, one must have competence (yogyatha). For the practice of righteousness (dharma), one must have competence. According to his fitness, man embarks on righteous action. To achieve fame man must qualify himself to deserve it. It is by generosity (danam) that one achieves a good name. Heaven is realised by Truth alone. Character is the root cause of all happiness for man. Hence, to get happiness, or go to Heaven or earn a good name, one must acquire the requisite worthiness.

The significance of Sankranthi

This festive day has been celebrated from ancient times as a day of fulfillment and joy. Every festival is a social occasion, arising in society, flourishing in society, and promoting the well being of society. Every festival has been designed to promote the welfare of society. With social changes, festivals also have undergone changes.

Today's festival is an extremely important one for Bharatiyas (Indians). It is a festival to celebrate the glory of the Sun God. The Sun moves every month from one sign of Zodiac to the next.

Sankranthi, meaning sacred change, occurs every month as the Sun moves from one house of the Zodiac to another. But special sacredness attaches to the movement of the Sun to Capricorn (Makara-Sankranthi).

The Sun appears cool

The day is shortened

And is made pleasant by chill wind

On fields lit by moonlight

The crows caw over the grain heaps

While farmers sing in joy

Over the golden harvest

The flowers express their joy

By putting forth their petals

While in every home, filled with grain,

The people welcome the advent of Sankranthi

(Telugu Poem)

On Sankranthi day, the farmers rejoice over the fullness with the newly harvested crop of the granaries in their homes.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 11

When the Sun enters the sign of Capricorn, it begins its northward motion. The sun shines in every human body, illuminating the six chakras (spiritual centres in the body). Of these chakras, two are most important: the hridaya (heart) chakra and the sahasrara chakra.

The hridaya chakra has eight petals. God is the Lord of the eight-petaled hridaya chakra. These eight petals are regarded as eight consorts of the Lord. In this context, the Lord is adored in the form of the Sun. The world cannot survive without the Sun. The solar system is derived from the Sun. Hence, the Sun is worshipped as divine.

Sahasrara Chakra represents sixteen thousand gopikas

The ancient sages adored the eight-petaled divine centre in the heart and thereby reached the sahasrara chakra and enjoyed supreme bliss.

The sahasrara chakra has a thousand petals. Each petal carries sixteen phases (kalas). Thus the sahasrara chakra is said to represent 16,000 cowherd maidens (gopikas), while the eight petals of the hridaya chakra are adored as the eight consorts of Krishna.

The syllable go in the word gopikas (cowherd maidens) has four meanings: The Veda, the cow, the earth, and the faculty of speech (vak). The gopikas derive their different attributes from these different meanings. They chant the Vedas, protect the cows, nourish the earth, and proclaim the glories of the Divine by their speech.

In making an offering to Krishna, the mantra that is used is Kleem Krishnaya Govindaya Gopijanavallabhaya Swaha. It is interesting to explore the full significance of this mantra.

Kleem means the earth. It is the first element. Krishnaya signifies water. Govindaya signifies fire (agni). Gopijanavallabhaya signifies air (vayu). Swaha signifies space (akasa). Thus, Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 12

the mantra represents all five elements in the cosmos as manifestations of the Divine.

The cosmos cannot exist without these five elements. They are all-pervading. It follows that there is no place in the cosmos where God is not immanent. The cowherd maidens, through this mantra, taught the world that God should be adored as the omnipresent Divine everywhere in the cosmos. Hence, in every atom, all the time, in every particle, the Divine is present.

The spiritual goal of the ancient sages

The ancient sages reached the thousand petaled Sahasrara through the adoration of the Lord in the eight-petaled lotus of the heart. They used all their God-given intelligence for this spiritual goal. But modern man uses his intelligence only for worldly ends. The sages considered cultivation of virtues, good qualities, and righteous conduct as true education.

What do the eight petals of the heart represent? They are: love (prema), truth (sathyam), forbearance (sahanam), sacrifice (thyaga), compassion (daya), beauty (sundaram), bliss (ananda) and peace (santhi). To realize the bliss of the Divine, all the other qualities have to be fostered. God is the embodiment of all these eight attributes. Sacrifice is the most important of them.

The chakora bird is an example for man in the pursuit of purity. It will not drink any water except what rains from a cloud in the sky. It sees in a dark rain-bearing cloud the divine form of the Lord. Man should seek to see and experience the Divine in every object and every being. Students should experience the Divine in all their studies and sports. It has been said: Life is a game, Play it!

Life must be permeated with love. Through love, truth can be realized and a righteous life can be lived.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 13

The ancients attached the highest value to good character. They considered that if character was lost, all was lost. Today, people consider that if wealth is lost all is lost. They attach no value to character.

Men should strive to lead virtuous lives. The cowherd maids (gopikas) provide the supreme example of how to lead a life dedicated to the Divine. The episode of Uddhava's mission to the cowherd maids and their reaction to it as described in the Bhagavatam shows what true and one-pointed devotion to Krishna meant for the cowherd maids. They had totally surrendered their minds and hearts to Krishna.

The sacredness of Uttarayana

This day marks the entry of the Sun into the sign of Capricorn in his northward journey (Uttarayana). Bhishmacharya, lying on a bed of arrows after he fell wounded, waited for the commencement of Uttarayana to give up his spirit to the Lord. He lay on the bed of arrows for 56 days. This signifies the sacredness of this day. This is the moment to fill one's heart with divine feelings.

There is no need to seek God in a temple, mosque, or church. He is enshrined in every human heart. Unfortunately people go on expensive pilgrimages to all sorts of places, forgetting that God is the dweller in their hearts.

Why should Indian students go abroad for studies or jobs?

It is better to earn ten rupees within India than ten thousand rupees abroad. This craze for going abroad is utterly meaningless. It is better to lead a good life within India than to pursue the mirage of careers abroad.

In this context, it is good to remember the teachings of the sage Narada on devotion. Narada is misrepresented as one who reveled in promoting discord. This is totally wrong. He expounded the highest truths about devotion (bhakti) and taught how man should realize oneness with God through intense devotion. Integral relationship between society and nature

What people need today is yearning for unity in diversity. Human beings are like limbs of the body of society. They are integral parts of society. Society is a part of nature, and nature is a limb of God. Hence, the integral and organic relationship between the individual and God through society and nature should be properly understood.

The body is important in the spiritual process. The Gita has declared that the body (kshetra) and the indwelling knower (kshetrajna) are one. Hence, men should engage themselves in sacred actions that will promote the welfare of society and uphold its reputation.

To transform society, the first requisite is individual transformation. Purify your heart. Then society will also become pure. You should adhere to truth, like Harishchandra did, prepared to face any ordeal. Never go back on your plighted word.

Students! You have participated in many games. Prizes are awarded to winners in sports. But do not aspire for prizes given by others. Seek the reward of self-satisfaction. You must have the feeling, "I did my duty". Duty is God; work is worship.

Today, the wardens approached me and said that Swami should distribute prizes to the winners in the sports events. At the outset, I did not agree to distribute. A prize is called bahumathi. The meaning of bahumathi is multi-minded. When a single mind can play so many monkey tricks, what is the result of bestowing many minds? There is a saying that a bachelor is equal to a hundred monkeys. I do not like to confer prizes that unsettle the minds of the students.

What is the prize that should be awarded to the students?

You are good! You are good! That is the award that you should Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 15 earn from Swami. Many prize-winning students look forward to getting prostration at Swami's feet (padanamaskar) when they receive prizes from Swami. Yesterday, I allowed all students to offer padanamaskar because they were willing to forgo receiving the prizes. It is their spirit of sacrifice that has enabled them to get this benediction from Bhagavan.

From self-confidence to self-realization

A spiritual edifice is built on the foundation of self-confidence.

The walls are made up of self-satisfaction. Self-sacrifice is the roof. Self-Realization is fulfillment in life.

Students! Fill your minds and hearts with these sacred spiritual truths and go out into the world to spread the spiritual message in every street and every alley.

The world today is in utter confusion. Unrest and fear stalk the world. To eliminate this disorder and fear, you have to instill devotion among the people.

Today, the world lacks righteousness and spirituality. People are immersed in materialism and worldliness. They are after power and pelf. This is utterly wrong. Money comes and goes. Morality comes and grows. You may carry on your vocational duties. But along with it, render social service. See the divine in the people whom you serve.

Even an agnostic occasionally invokes the name of God. For instance, on one occasion, Jawaharlal Nehru was visiting the Meenakshi Temple in Madurai. During the worship of the Goddess, Nehru noticed a large emerald adorning the idol. He asked about the value of the emerald. He was interested in the value of the gem. But the devotees in the sanctum were meditating on the divine form of the Goddess. They were concerned about Divinity. Nehru looked at the idol from a worldly point of view. When he was informed that the ornament was worth several lakhs, spontaneously he exclaimed: "My God!" What Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 16 made him think of God? Because God is in everyone. When expressing surprise at something one exclaims: "Oh! My God!" In this manner, people give expression to the Divinity within them unconsciously.

A lesson to the Pandavas

Doubts about God may sometimes arise even among staunch believers. This may be illustrated from an incident in the Mahabharata. Once, while the Pandavas were in exile in the forest, Krishna visited them. Krishna was told that the five brothers took turns during the night to keep a vigil over the activities of evil spirits and demons. One night, an evil spirit appeared before the Pandava brothers, and they had great difficulty in fighting it. In view of this, Dharmaja, the eldest of the Pandavas, tried to dissuade Krishna from participating in sentry duty. Krishna, however, insisted on taking his share. During that period no evil spirit appeared. Then came Arjuna's turn, and Krishna watched the scene from a distance. To Arjuna's surprise, no evil spirit appeared while Krishna was there. Krishna then explained to Arjuna that evil spirits were only a reflection of one's hatred and fear, and when one is free from these, no evil spirit would appear or do any harm. Krishna revealed that the Divine existed even in so-called evil spirits and that if a person gets rid of the evil qualities within him, the evil spirits can do no harm. One's anger assumes the form of a demon. If you develop love, everything you confront will have the form of love. This was the lesson Krishna taught the Pandavas.

Students should eschew bad qualities like anger, hatred, and envy. By manifesting love, they will enjoy bliss.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 17

"Follow your dharma"

The essential message of the Gita is: Follow your dharma. Do your duty without expectation of its fruits. If you are a householder, perform your duties as a householder. Whatever your stage in life, act according to the duties appropriate to that stage. If everyone does his duty, there is nothing greater in life. But there is one duty that is common to all stages: the duty dictated by the heart (hridaya-dharma). Fill your hearts with love. Through this you can accomplish anything. Start the day with Love, Fill the day with Love, End the day with Love this is the way to God.

I am presenting a silver cup to each campus of the Institute. Accept it as my love offering to every student individually. Everyone should develop a sense of oneness with all. The world today suffers from divisiveness. Students should go out into the world and promote the sense of human unity. That will be the offering you can make to Me.

You are all my property. And I am yours. Let us share each other's love. That is the true path of devotion. Ritualistic worship is not the true mark of devotion. The essence of devotion is the feeling of identification with God.

During the recent Unity Cup Cricket Match, a cricketer of repute observed, I don't do any work on my own. Whatever I do, I regard as Swami's work. Because I did Swami's work, my work was taken care of by Swami. I did not attend to my work. After coming here, I received a telegram to the effect: Your task has been accomplished successfully. He then announced that, while I attended to Swami's work, Swami carried out my work.

Likewise, if you do Swami's work, your work will be taken care of by Me. Dedicate every action to the Divine. The response will be equally divine. This has been described as diSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 18

vine vibration. That vibration will sustain and support your life. Take up social service in the villages after you go back to your homes. That is the way to make use of your studies and put Swami's teachings into practice. Instill in the villages devotion to God. Practise what you preach. This is true service.

A mirror, though clean, may not reflect your image if there is no mercury coating behind it. So also the heart may be pure, but there should be a coating of love behind it to facilitate reflection of God.

Buddha's gospel of good life

Embodiments of Divine Love!

Man today is acquiring various types of knowledge.

Among these he is learning how to live and act like lions and other animals.

What is the meaning of knowledge (jnana)? It is not mere acquaintance with numerous books. Even the acquisition of information about all the objects in the animate and inanimate is not knowledge. True knowledge is awareness of the relationship between the individual and collective (samashiti) and their oneness.

Men today do not recognize the nature their humanness.

How can they recognize their inherent divinity?

It is only when man is aware of his humanness that he will be competent to recognize his divinity. How then, is man to reach humanness? What is the means? Buddha undertook various inquiries to discover the Divine and came to the conclusion that it is only through mastery over his senses he can achieve this. Man has to make the right use of his senses for sacred purposes to realize his divinity.

Samyag darsanam

Hence, Buddha declared that the first requisite is samyagdarsanam (Having the right vision). The implication of this statement is that, having been bestowed with the great gift of eyes, man should use them for seeing sacred objects and holy beings. But, on the contrary, by using his eyes to look at unsacred objects and evil persons, man fills himself with bad thoughts and becomes a prey to evil tendencies. What one sees influences the feelings in the heart. The state of the heart determines the nature of one's thoughts. The thoughts influence one's life.

Hence to lead a good life the first requisite is a pure vision. Man has to cultivate sacred outlook. As a result of looking at cruel, ugly, and wicked scenes man leads an animal existence. The very first inquiry one should make is to ascertain what is pure, edifying, and godly that he should see. Whatever he sees leaves its imprint on man. Few realize the effects of this. Human life today is racked by anxiety, misery, unrest and troubles of various kinds. The root cause of all this is that man is witnessing what is repulsive, wicked and demeaning. For transforming one's life, the first requisite is a proper vision. The eye (netra) is comparable to a spiritual text (sastra) and one's vision (drishti) determines one's views of the cosmos (srishti). Hence to acquire the highest knowledge one has to purify the vision. This means one should avoid seeing what is obnoxious. One should strive to see only that which is sacred and pure. What man sees is like seeds sown in the heart. Evil scenes give rise to evil thoughts. Good scenes evoke good thoughts. When sacred scenes are implanted in the heart there will be no room for bad feelings or thoughts to grow in the heart.

This was the first lesson Buddha taught. Buddha wandered all over the country in search of spiritual peace and liberation. After many years of inquiry he came to the conclusion that the secret of spiritual wisdom was not to be got from scholars or by study. He realized that spiritual understanding could only come from mastery of the senses.

Samyag vachanam

From developing sacred vision, man should proceed to samyag vachanam (sacred speech). Buddha declared that only sacred thoughts could lead to sacred speech. Buddha declared that the tongue should not be used recklessly to utter whatever one thinks. The tongue has been given to speak the truth, to expatiate on what is sacred and pure. The tongue has not been given to man to pamper the palate with delicious sweets. It is not given for talking as one likes. It is not to be used for causing displeasure to others. Nor is it to be used for indulging in falsehood. The tongue has been given to man to speak the truth, to be sweet to others, to praise the Divine and enjoy the bliss derived from such sacred speech.

There are people who devote their entire time to reading all kinds of books, without trying to put into practice what they learn from such reading. What is the use of such reading? Buddha spoke out against scholarship unrelated to the good life. He carried out a great deal of study and met many great men. He listened to many discourses. He realized that true knowledge could not be got by these means. He realized that a pure, unsullied consciousness confers the highest knowledge. True knowledge is derived from a pure inner consciousness (antahkarana).

This year (1998) is dedicated to Peace. How is this Peace to be achieved? The first requisite is purification of one's vision. The second requisite is the cultivation of sacred feelings within, which will be conducive to purity in speech. Harmony will promote a climate of peace. The well being of society is bound up with the transformation of the individuals composing it. Righteous individuals alone can build a righteous community. A pure mind is essential for pure thoughts, pure vision and pure speech.

The country today has plenty of persons who talk a great deal and display book knowledge, but do not practice even a fraction of what they have read or speak about. It is such people who are responsible for the lamentable plight of the nation.

Samyag karma and samyag sadhana

Buddha emphasized goodness in action (samyag-karma). The mark of good action is harmony in thought, word, and deed. When there is no such harmony, the action belies what is said or thought.

Buddha went on to declare that good action is conducive to good spiritual progress (samyag-sadhana). Good deeds constitute genuine spirituality. Mere formal worship or ritualistic practices do not constitute spiritual striving. These religious practices are good in a way. But they do not constitute spiritual sadhana. True spirituality consists in the unity of thought, word and deed in all their purity and sacredness.

Buddha declared that when spiritual striving of this nature has been completed, there is samyag-jivanam (leading a pure life).

This is how the five organs of perception (panchendriyas) should be used to achieve the supreme goal of life. Good vision, good thoughts, good speech, good deeds and good spiriSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 23

tual endeavor are the prerequisites for a good life (samyagjivanam). In this context, the meaning of spiritual striving should be properly understood. Essentially spiritual striving calls for the shedding of all bad qualities and the cultivation of good thoughts. Spiritual sadhana means cultivating good thoughts and undertaking good deeds.

The true meaning of dharma

To achieve happiness, man embarks on acquiring various kinds of knowledge and pursues various occupations. He seeks happiness through marriage and having children and building a mansion for his residence. But is he happy thereby? No.

In his last moments, Buddha summoned his stepbrother

Ananda to impart to him his final message. Ananda was the son of Gautami (Buddha's stepmother). Placing his palm on the head of his younger brother, Buddha said: My dear child! I came to the world to teach (the Truth). If anyone asks, Where is God? the answer is: He is everywhere. Truth is God.

Speak the Truth. Do not harm anyone. Recognize that the highest dharma is nonviolence ahimsa).

What is dharma? Is it celibacy or the duties of a householder or a renunciant (sanyasi)? These are transient obligations, which have to be observed as incidental duties in the journey of life. The Supreme duty is refraining from causing harm to anyone. This truth is proclaimed in the scriptures in the exhortation: Speak the truth. Speak what is pleasing (Sathyam bruyaath; priyam bruyaath.) Thus, pleasing speech is declared as a supreme duty.

Buddha told Ananda that this truth was learnt by him from his own experience. He said, When I left the palace, my father (the King) was told that I was doing a great wrong in renouncing the family. My parents, kinsmen and others tried to put pressure on me to return to the ties of family life. These wrong efforts on their side made me more determined to pursue the spiritual path. In the quest for spiritual peace several ordeals have to be overcome. Today I have found the Truth about life. What is it? The sanctification of the five senses is the way to Truth. If the senses are polluted, of what avail are spiritual exercises? When the water in a tank is polluted, all taps will only give polluted water. Your heart is the tank. Your vision and thoughts are impure. Your speech is foul. When the heart is polluted in this manner, the senses are bound to be sullied.

Speak sweetly and never use harsh words

When the heart is filled with good thoughts and feelings, all that comes out of the senses - your speech, your vision, your actions - will all be pure. That was why Jayadeva exhorted the God-given tongue to use its sweetness to proclaim the glory of God by chanting the Lord's sweet names: Govinda, Damodara and Madhava. One should always speak sweetly and never use harsh words.

People today are immersed in worldly pursuits to secure transient pleasures but few are interested in spiritual pursuits, which will give them everlasting bliss. When people experience spiritual bliss (Atma-ananda) all other forms of happiness will automatically come. People immersed in mundane pursuits have no time for spiritual matters. The Gita exhorts mankind to turn away from the ephemeral attractions of the miseryladen world and to seek the Divine.

You must realize the greatness and preciousness of human life. You witnessed the lion-dance earlier. The external trappings were those of lions but the persons who performed the dance were young men. It is not the external form that matters but the human element behind it. Flaunting the human form without displaying human qualities is meaningless. You must cultivate human values such as good vision, sweet speech, good thoughts and good actions, which constitute the good life. Only then you will be a total human being.

Good life leads to nirvana

After getting enlightenment under the Bodhi tree in Gaya, Buddha embarked upon his mission of preaching. Once two of his disciples were accompanying him. Buddha noticed that they were looking at some women who were bringing water from a river. Buddha chided them for their misconduct and expelled them from the Sangha. He said that while walking on the road the eyes should be concentrated on the road in front and should not go astray. I condemned the habit of young men to look at cinema posters on roadside walls while going on bicycles. Such actions are often the cause of serious accidents.

Buddha declared that the good life leads to liberation (nirvana).

This is the sacred consummation for a good life. In this state, a man is free from desires and actions prompted by them. Having taken human birth, all human beings should foster human values. In the Sathya Sai Organization, we have given the highest place to human values. It is only when human values are fostered that divine values cam emerge.

Before his passing, Buddha taught his stepbrother, Ananda, the transience of worldly pleasures and the meaninglessness of a purely mundane existence.

When Ananda started weeping, noticing the imminent passing of Buddha, the Enlightened One asked him: Why are you weeping? Ananda said, I am weeping because your passing is imminent. Buddha told him that he should not worry about what happens to the body that is perishable and full of infirmities. He exhorted Ananda not to bother about the Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 26 body or the mind, but lead a life based on the dictates of the conscience. Giving this advice, Buddha breathed his last.

Bharat has been the birthplace of sacred beings

Many high-souled spiritual leaders like Buddha have shown mankind the path they should follow for reaching the highest goal of life. Bharat has been the unique birthplace of many such saints and sages. Bharat has been the land of men and women known for their purity and holiness. It is the birthplace of sacred beings like Harishchandra and others who adhered to the path of truth at any cost. These truths are valid even now.

Today, you celebrate the New Lunar Year. The year is described as Samvatsara in Sanskrit. This term is also one of the names of God. Hence the advent of the New Year should be hailed as the advent of the Divine.

Without recognizing this divine significance of the New Year, there is no purpose in celebrating it with lavish decorations and sumptuous feasts. It is not the feast that is important. It is the ideal that is to be pursued which is important. Today what is important is the quest for peace within, which can be got only by internal purity.

Human actions have been divided into five categories of which those prompted by the heart are the highest and others done with egoistic motives are inferior. Whatever is done should be done wholeheartedly so that it gets sanctified. Maintain silence and speak as little as possible. Since January 1, I have been restricting My speech to a minimum, confining My words to what was necessary. Swami went on to say: I am restricting my talking with others even in the interview room. What is the reason? I want to set an example to others by practicing what I preach. My life is my message. I must show the way. Many do not understand my actions. But, Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 27

when they do not understand, they should remain silent. But, instead they misinterpret my actions. That is a great sin. From today, you must resolve to use your eyes properly, to see only the good. Why use binoculars to see distant objects? If your vision is impaired, do not lament over it. Consider even blindness as a blessing. If your hearing gets worse, do not moan over it. How much of the noise of the world is worth hearing at all? What use is there in listening to the cacophony of mutual abuse? Welcome the fact that you are saved from listening to such gossip.

Whatever your disabilities, look upon them as gifts from God. All things will turn out to be for your own good. Peace is to be found only in Prasanthi Nilayam. Devotees have gathered here from Malaysia, Singapore, Hong Kong, Indonesia, Taiwan and Japan. You may have come with many problems and worries. Leave them here and return to your places with your hearts filled with bliss. Leave all your bad thoughts and feelings and fill yourselves with the peace and joy of Prasanthi Nilayam. Coming here with restless minds, do not go back in the same state. Prasanthi (Supreme Peace) is very valuable for man. Today peace is not to be found anywhere in the world. You find only pieces (divisions) everywhere. Peace is to be found only here. Carry it with you. This is a place hallowed by the vibrations of numerous good devotees. Many noble souls have spent their lives here. Fill your hearts with their noble thoughts. Do not bother about what others may say. Develop self-confidence and proceed toward self-realization through self-sacrifice. Ignore incidental troubles, which are passing clouds. Think only about God. There is nothing more vital than that. Try to acquire Divine Love. Love is God. Live in Love. The best way to love God is to love all, serve all. All are embodiments of God.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 28

Foster love. Adhere to Truth. Follow Righteousness.

Achieve Peace. This is the special benediction of Swami on this day on all. Wherever you may go, speak softly and sweetly. Thereby you will earn the esteem of society. This is the most valuable reward you have to secure this New Year.

The Gift Swami Wants

You have presented many things as gifts to Bhagavan.

This Tiger Map is one of them. That is not the gift I want.

Hand over to me your tigerly qualities. That is the gift I would like. The tiger is a cruel animal. Rid yourself of all cruel feelings and offer them to me. Lead the life of a useful, harmless, sacred cow. It gives nourishing milk in return for cheap grass.

Embodiments of Love! You have come here from long distances, undergoing many discomforts. Return with joy in your hearts and share your joy with the people in your places in an unselfish spirit. A life of selfless love will lead you to liberation. Listening to your bhajans today gave immense joy to one and all. Community singing sets up vibrations that will cleanse the atmosphere.

From negative to positive

Students, Teachers and Doctors!

The whole world is a stage and every individual is an actor. How should the actors conduct themselves? The primary goal of every actor should be to carry out their duty in the part assigned to them. He should set aside his individuality. How? During the recent festival, the students enacted a play. One student played the role of a municipal chairman. In that role he had to behave as a municipal chairman and not exhibit his individual talents. These should be given a back seat. He should act his part well. However, who is the director of the cosmic drama? It is the Divine. Every human being is a manifestation of the Divine Will. He has taken birth as a human being to fulfill his duty. He has to manifest his humanness. Every individual has to play his role well and acquit himself worthily.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 30

Maarakam and Thaarakam

In the drama of life, there is a mixture of good and bad.

Humanness is present in this mixture. Of the two the good and bad one is known as maarakam and the other is known as thaarakam. Maarakam implies that one acts on the basis that nothing belongs to him and that, whatever words he utters or whatever action he does, all belong to God and nothing is his own. He plays his role in this spirit, ascribing nothing to himself.

Thaarakam represents the attitude of the actor, who is conscious of the role he is playing and does not forget his individuality

in his actions. He does not consider himself as merely acting a part but regards himself as the doer. The difference between the two is that while the former realizes the temporary nature of the part he is playing and is not attached to the things connected with the role, the other (thaarakam) develops attachment to the role he plays and does not wish to part with things connected with the role. In the concept of maarakam there is no sense of possessiveness. But in thaarakam, one is attached to what he considers as his.

Modern man suffers from the sense of possession. This is a negative attitude. He is obsessed with the idea of "my" and "mine". He attaches excessive importance to the body, forgetting the most precious Atmic principle that is within it which will give him enduring bliss. The reason for this attachment is the failure to use the senses properly and to become a slave of the desires prompted by the senses.

The eyes, the ears and other sense organs should be used only to perceive sacred things. They should not be used indiscriminately to enjoy whatever pleases them. This is the reason why Swami advises people not to see evil, speak evil, or hear what is evil, but to see what is good, hear what is sacred, and speak what is good. These may seem simple maxims, but they are full of profound significance.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 31

In this context, people should constantly discriminate between "negative" and "positive" actions. All bad and unwholesome actions are "negative" in character. They should be eschewed altogether.

Human birth is a God-given gift

Students should realize that what matters when they sing bhajans is not the tune or the conduct of the songs but the genuineness of the feeling with which they sing the bhajans. When their hearts are pure and full of deep devotion, the bhajans will be full of feeling and will appeal to the hearts of the listeners. What ensures from the heart is "positive", while what comes from the mind is often negative".

Human birth is a God-given gift which should be used with due care. It should be filled with righteous acts. Unfortunately, today men misuse all their God-given talents for unholy purposes. The mind should be filled with good thoughts, the heart should be filled with compassion, and the hands should be engaged in selfless service.

Man will be caught up in "negative" behavior as long as he identifies himself with the body. The moment he considers himself the master of the senses, his actions will be "positive". Mastery of the senses leads to "liberation". Liberation is not something to be achieved in after-life. The striving for liberation must start early in life and proceed continuously. Another term for liberation is "emancipation". That is true freedom freedom from bondage to the senses. This means that you must carry on all duties without attachment to the fruits thereof. Today, all actions are performed with attachment to the results. For instance, students pursue study of the bioscience with a view to become doctors. There is per se nothing wrong in this. But when they become doctors they should be Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 32 primarily concerned about the welfare of their patients and not in their earnings.

Even in rendering social service, there is often an element of self-interest that vitiates the quality of your service. Instead of being a "positive" act of selfless love, the service becomes a "negative" act carrying the taint of self-interest. No permanent joy can be derived from such "negative" activities.

Students must begin sanctifying their actions from their days at school. They must cultivate good company as part of their education. This is the way to get near to God. The final stage is Sayujyam (becoming one with God).

Life is filled with bondages of various kinds from hunger and poverty to ignorance and disease. To strive for freedom from these bondages is spiritual sadhana. It means giving up those actions that bind you.

The story of the king and the shepherd

It is not always easy to get the answers to spiritual questions. There is a story to illustrate this. Once there was a king in Kapila, who was putting questions to various scholars in his kingdom. He was not satisfied with their answers and so turned them away from his court. A shepherd who heard about this came to the king and said he was prepared to answer any questions put by the king. The king was surprised at his claim and said that if he failed to give a satisfactory answer he would be beheaded. The shepherd agreed to the condition. Then, he told the king that they should exchange places in keeping with the new situation, in which the king would be the learner and the shepherd would be the teacher. The king transferred his robe to the shepherd and sat at his feet, while the shepherd put on the king's robe and sat on the throne. He then asked the king to put his questions.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 33

The king's first question was, "What does God do in this world?" The shepherd answered, "He makes a millionaire a pauper and a pauper a millionaire. Till now I was a poor man. Now I have been made a king with a seat on the throne. From being a king, you are now wearing a shepherd's clothing. This is what God has done."

The king was fairly satisfied with the answer. His second question was: "Whom does God favor? Who is the recipient of His grace?" The shepherd pointed to a light and said, "The light from the lamp sends its rays in all directions. Likewise, God, who is embodiment of all effulgence, sees in all direction, and showers His grace on all. He does not see in one direction alone." The king was pleased with the answer.

While the shepherd was wondering what the king's third question would be, the king addressed him as "Swami!" and said: "Where is God?" The shepherd brought a cup of milk and asked the king, "Can you say in what part of the milk there is butter? In every molecule of the milk there is butter. Likewise, God is all-pervading. What is it that you have to do to see the butter in the milk? You have to make curd out of it, churn it and then the butter will rise to the top. Likewise, God, who is everywhere, has to be enshrined in the heart, turned into curd by good deeds and churned by sadhana. Then there will be direct experience of the Divine."

The king was totally satisfied with the answers of the shepherd. He gave away half of his kingdom to the shepherd and declared that wisdom was to be found more among the common folk than among scholars. There is nothing great in mere scholarship as such. To give intelligent answers to questions out of wisdom gained from daily life is what matters. Today, very few people understand the difference between the "positive" and "negative" aspects of life. Whatever attracts the mind is "negative". Desireless actions are "positive".

The discharge of duties in a spirit of detachment is the basic obligation of everyone from a student to a scholar. Thereby you can manifest the divinity within you. But, if you cannot recognize your humanness, how can you recognize your divinity? The first requisite is purity of heart and a mind free from all desires.

You may or may not believe it. Here is My body. It has a mind, intellect etc. exactly like that of any of you. But I am aware of the workings of the monkey mind. I have no desires in My mind. I do not let myself be caught by the wiles of the mind. It is natural for the mind to behave in that way. I do not get trapped by it. I am not attached to the body or the mind. I follow the conscience.

Here is the body of Mine. You may touch any part of it. You will receive positive vibrations from it. There is no trace of the negative vibrations anywhere in my body. No negative thoughts enter in my mind. Sometimes I may appear to speak harshly. But it is not for my sake, but for correcting others. Although seventy-two years have gone by, yet I entertain no desires. I have had no desires at any time.

The way my life is spent from moment to moment is remarkable. Every one of my actions is "positive" and not "negative". My whole body is "negative". But all my thoughts and actions are "positive". There is no disharmony between my thoughts and actions. In fact, this has been the case from the age of nine.

How Swami taught a lesson to the village officer

In this village (of Puttaparthi) there was a karnam (village officer) named Subbarao. He was the richest man in the village. He owned most of the lands here. All the villagers used to be afraid of him. Swami was a short lad at that time. The karnam was given to bad ways.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 35

Swami called all his young friends together, taught them various songs, and asked them to go round the village singing the songs. The boys told Baba, "Swami! The karnam may beat us up". Swami assured them, "He has no authority to touch any of you. No one can object to your singing the songs". Swami taught them how to sing the songs tunelessly. The boys did not know the meaning of the song.

On the first day, when the boys sang the songs in front of the karnam's house, the karnam went inside. On the second day, when the boys repeated their performance, the karnam went inside, brought some mangoes, distributed the fruits among the boys, and asked them not to sing the songs. He asked them: "Who taught you these songs?" They all shouted: "Raju. Raju taught us all the songs."

One day the karnam invited Raju (the young Baba) to come to his house for tiffin (snack). Raju told him: "I don't want your tiffin". The karnam was furious that a young fellow should speak like that to him.

In those songs I was teaching what was appropriate to those times. The song condemned those who went after women of ill fame and warned that such persons would be shunned by society and forfeit the respect of everyone. The boys were afraid to sing the song. The strong words used in the song were necessary to teach a lesson to those who misbehaved. To correct people who were leading bad lives, I used to compose poems and write plays even from those early years. I am always in the habit of living up to what I preach. I do not preach what I do not practice. Whatever I do is of a "positive" character. I have no desires of any kind.

Students are My property

I have often declared that "students are my property". A student also said earlier: "Swami! we are your property." This Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 36

is true. But there are properties of different kinds those that are valuable and those that are not. As long as students consider themselves as my property, they should lead ideal lives. You should not become useless garbage. You should stand up as high mountains. It is for this purpose that I am training all of you. Many students are not coming up to my expectations. They are not understanding my message. Some day they will understand it. There is no trace of the negative in me. Everything is positive.

Pay heed to my advice. Talk as little as possible. Some students tell me that their parents want them to get married (after finishing their studies). I won't advise you not to get married. If you wish to marry, do so. But, I will not force anyone to marry against his will. Each one should consult his conscience and decide.

Do your duties to your family. Do not let your children do what you consider is wrong. In the Mahabharatha, Dhritarashtra failed to correct his eldest son, Duryodhana, and the result was disastrous for the entire Kaurava clan. Vidura reminded him that if only he had taken firm action to restrain Duryodhana, the family could have been saved.

Without the Divine in it.

Embodiments of Love!

Every human being seeks to enjoy bliss. He aspires for a blissful life. Whether he is a scholar or an artist, a wielder of power or a man of status, he yearns for bliss. Every man strives from dawn to dusk for acquiring bliss.

Bharatiya culture and tradition have proclaimed the greatness of this bliss (ananda). But man is enveloped in two screens: the phenomenal and the spiritual. His vision is affected by the material outlook and the spiritual outlook. Unable to harmonize the two, man regards them as distinct from each other. The unity of these two represents the true Atmic principle. Considering the material world of physical objects as the only, reality, man loses himself in the pursuit of material objects. But, if the truth about these material objects is fully explored, it will be found that they have no reality at all. They have only momentary and temporal reality. They do not have the stamp of permanent reality. They do not confer enduring bliss. To realize lasting bliss, man has to make the requisite effort.

The Quest for Bliss

Sath-Chith-Ananda (Being-Awareness-Bliss) pervades the entire universe. Every living being, from the ant onwards, is seeking this bliss, not man alone. For all living creatures, this bliss is the life-breath.

The scriptures have dealt with this problem of bliss in various ways. They have proclaimed Sath-Chith-Ananda as the primary principle.

The existence of the Universe as a fact is affirmed by numerous persons. But a blind man is not aware of its existence.

However, hearing what others say about the world, he also believes in its existence. He is not aware of its existence from his own personal experience.

People today speak about Sath-Chith-Ananda as a reality after hearing about the statements in the Vedas, Puranas, and Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 39 other scriptural texts. Such persons have no personal experience of Sath-Chith-Ananda. Even the scholars who expound this concept are merely relating what they have learnt from books, but have no direct experience of this bliss.

Every man should seek to know what Sath-Chith-Ananda means. Only then he will realize his own true self. Because of the delusion caused by the phenomenal world, man regards Sath-Chith-Ananda as distinct from himself. This feeling arises from his attachment to the body. Everyone should find out "Who am I?" When he has found the answer to this question, there will be no need for him to understand what is Sath-Chith-Ananda.

As long as man identifies himself with the body and his physical attributes, he will be in quest of Sath-Chith-Ananda. When a man has discovered the true nature of the "I", he will not go after any other thing. He will realize that he is the embodiment of Sath-Chith-Ananda.

Every individual is an embodiment of Sath-Chith-Ananda. Sath - God; Chith - the Jiva (individual self). The unity of Sath and Chith is Ananda (Bliss).

Mind is the root of bodily afflictions

The human body is a prey to many ailments. Man regards all of them as bodily ailments. But not all of them are entirely related to the body. Purely bodily ailments can be treated by medicines. But most ailments in the world today have their origin in the mind. The aberrations of the mind set up reactions in the body and cause various diseases. The main cause of many human ailments is rooted in the mind.

The mind and the body are interrelated. The influence of the mind on the body is of a negative character. This negativity is antagonistic to the experience of bliss.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 40

Bad thoughts and bad feelings arise in the mind. At the same time, there are also good thoughts and good feelings. It is only when bad thoughts and feelings are weeded out that man can have good health. Many diseases have their origin in the thoughts that fill the mind. Bad thoughts cause indigestion, affect the heart, bring about variations in the blood pressure; worries are the cause of many mental diseases. Diabetes and pulmonary diseases are traceable to mental causes.

Different aspects of liberation

Every man is in search of liberation (mukti). For whom is this liberation sought? Is it for the body? Is it for the mind or the intellect or the senses? When these questions are examined, the answer is that at the outset, liberation has to be secured for the mind, the intellect and the senses. Man has to liberate himself first from the vagaries of the mind. Freedom from illness is one kind of liberation. Man loses peace of mind on account of various troubles. To get rid of this condition and secure peace of mind is another kind of liberation (mukti). Consuming food to get rid of the pangs of hunger is another kind of liberation. To be rid of the trials and tribulations of daily life is another aspect of liberation. All these types of liberation have to be secured while one is still alive. It is wrong to imagine that liberation is a state that is to be attained after death.

The various kinds of liberation to be secured today relate to the physical. These troubles are bound to exist as long as one is attached to the body. All of them arise from the negative thoughts in man.

The liberation men should seek is peace of mind. If peace is got, all else can be got easily. How is peace to be got? By leading a godly life.

All forms of worship are of no avail if one's heart is full of negative feelings and one's mind is filled with negative thoughts. All actions performed by the different sense organs - the eyes, the ears, the tongue etc. get polluted when the mind is filled with negative thoughts. The six evil qualities in man - lust, anger, greed, delusion, pride and envy are his well-trenched enemies. To get rid of these wicked elements and to install good qualities in their place, the only means is the fostering of the love principle (prema-thatwa). When man's heart is filled with love, all that he does will be positive. All good deeds come out of love. Sath-Chith-Ananda arises from love. Compassion and kindness are born out of love. All the sublime human values have their origin in love. When one is filled with love, he needs no other spiritual or ritualistic practices. All good deeds come out of love

The Atmic principle is the basis for the body. All activities in life should be linked to the Atmic principle. Man should discard attachment to transient worldly pleasures and pursue what is eternal and everlasting. When man constantly remembers that he is the embodiment of Sath-Chith-Ananda, in due course he will experience that bliss (Ananda). Man is covered by five sheaths: the Annamaya, Pranamaya, Manomaya, Vijnanamaya, and Anandamaya Kosas. The first is a gross sheath, and each following sheath is subtler than the preceding one. Man has to proceed from the gross to the subtlest sheath of bliss. The Annamaya sheath is the body. It is perishable, but as long as one lives, the body should be kept in good health. The duties relating to the physical have to be carried out. What keeps the body going are the vibrations from the vital sheath (Pranamaya kosa). These vibrations are controlled by radiation from the mind (Manomaya kosa). Beyond the mind is the Vijnanamaya kosa, which accounts for "constant integrated awareness" in man. When this state is reached, man can proceed next to Ananda without much effort. Experience of bliss will be automatic.

It should be evident from this that humanness has been conferred on man so that he may ascend towards his divine destiny instead of wallowing in mundane pleasures and miseries. Thereby he will demonstrate his superiority over beasts and birds.

Holiness of Bharathiya festivals

All Bharathiya (Indian) festivals are designed to lead man toward God. They are intended to make people meditate on God. Unfortunately, today, instead of thinking about God, people indulge in feasts on holy days. Festivals should be devoted to contemplating on God and experiencing the Divine.

Today we are celebrating Sivarathri. Sivarathri means "Auspicious darkness". At least on this day one should chant Siva's name all through the night. At least on one day in a year chant the name of the Lord.

Devotees are expected to keep awake this night by chanting the sacred name of Siva. Keeping awake in any other way is purposeless. Spending the night reciting the Lord's name sanctifies one's life. In the Gita, the Sthithaprajna is described as one who keeps awake when others sleep and for whom the daytime when others are awake serves as night. The inner meaning of this is that the Sthithaprajna (the realized person who is in a state of constant integrated awareness) contemplates on God when others are oblivious to God.

The main thing about which all should be concerned today is how to get rid of the negative thoughts in their minds. The six cardinal enemies of man the six basic vices have found their abode in the hearts of human beings. There is no room in their hearts for love or kindness. The foremost task is to fill the hearts with love. Then their entire life will be transformed and every act will be suffused with love. This love is "positive" and man should strive to foster the positive qualities. Being human, men should develop positive qualities like compassion and forbearance.

Today human life is wasted in the pursuit of sensuous desires. All of them are negative in nature. Instead, men should entertain positive desires, which are natural to human beings. Divinise every desire and every action.

Mundane pursuits, which have been with men over many lives, have to give way to divine pursuits at least in this life. Many do not realize the divine potencies that are in them. They have the capacity to do good or bad actions. By doing good acts they will experience bliss. Help ever, hurt never.

Bhagavan's Example for being always in Bliss
Everyone should strive to manifest the bliss that is natural to him by fostering his loving nature. Peace lies in that bliss. All of you should know one thing. Although I am now seventy-two years in the present body, I have never had any negative thoughts. Consequently I have had no ailments of any kind. I am always in a state of bliss. But, sometimes, to correct others I use harsh words. They are not "negative" words. They are filled with love. If you examine my heart, you will find it resemble a ball of iron. But from the worldly point of view, it will be soft as butter. No illness can affect my heart.

I am engaged continuously in work from the moment of waking, to the time of rest at night. I meet devotees, collect letters from them, give them interviews and confer joy in one way or other on one and all. Every official anywhere has a weekly holiday. But I have no holidays at all. I am always active, whether I am here or elsewhere. Can you point out anyone who has been continuously active for seventy-two years? I have not desired a day of rest at any time. I am always restful.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 44

How is this possible? Because I have no negative thoughts. I have no attachment to the body. This body exists for your sake. When you are attached to the body you need rest. Whatever I do or say, it is all for your sake, not for my sake.

The Lord seeks devotees love

People have to lead their lives based on recognition of this truth. There is only one thing I seek from all of you. Fill your hearts with love. Offer that love to me. I don't ask anything from anyone. It is enough if you develop love and share it with others. It is only when you are happy that you can make others happy. What is happiness? It is union with God. By chanting the name of God you will experience happiness.

Good and sacred acts like worship, japa, and meditation are useful for sanctifying time. But they are not ends in themselves. They are tinged with worldliness. But what is needed is "positive" action, dedicated to the Divine. Then you will be free from disease. Only by having pure thoughts you can be hale and hearty.

Have no ill will toward anybody. I have no hatred for anyone. Hence no one hates me. All are love-filled beings for me. I desire that all should be blissful. It is because of this universal feeling in me that all are coming to me. If, on the contrary, I had been self-centered, would people from all parts of the world come here? I am utterly selfless from head to foot. There is no trace of selfishness in me. Any such feeling you may notice in me is only on your account and not for my sake. I have no desires except that everyone in all the worlds should be happy. All should become good. All should be loving and blissful. What more do I need?

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 45

Love and faith begets peace and bliss

Man deserves to enjoy peace and bliss, but does not make the necessary effort to get them. If he cultivates love and faith, he will acquire peace and bliss. Without these two, his effort is as fruitless as a letter that has neither a stamp nor the proper address.

With love and faith in Swami, you can accomplish any task you undertake. Observe three maxims: Love of God; Fear of Sin; Morality in Society. To develop love of God you have to see whether every act of yours pleases God or not. When you please God, you will have no fear of sin. When these two are present, morality in society will follow naturally.

All the ills of the world today are due to absence of fear of sin and decline in love for God. Decline in respect for human values has undermined world peace.

When the Lord's name is chanted from the depths of the heart, it turns into the nectarine music of Krishna's flute, which charmed even the cows of Brindavan. The melody that flows from the devotee's heart confers ineffable bliss.

Love and faith are the cardinal principles for redeeming human life. My life is my message. I have love for all. I have affection even for those who commit wrongs and for those who dislike me. I have no ill will towards anyone because of my love for all. And therefore the whole world loves me. The root cause of my love is my esteem for all (Visvasam). The basis for the esteem is adherence to the path of Truth. Divinity is the basis for adherence to Truth. Thus this Divinity is the primal source of universal love. All should practice universal brotherhood. Out of fraternity will be born Divinity. Then, humanity will manifest its glory. Men will behave like ideal human beings.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 46

The message of Sivarathri
Embodiments of Love!

Try to understand my doctrine of Love. I often address you as "embodiments of the Divine Self". You will be true embodiments of the Divine only when you develop divine love.

The only being worthy of love in this world is God. All others are only objects of transient attachment. On this sacred Sivarathri day, develop love for the Divine and redeem your lives. Manifest the Divine within you. Continuously chant the Divine name. Do every act with love. That is the highest spiritual sadhana. The way of love will transform the world. Love is God. Truth is God, Peace is God. This is the message of Sivarathri. Understanding this, dedicate all actions to God and render selfless service to the people to redeem your lives.

The message of Sakkubai's devotion

God created the Cosmos out of Truth;

The Cosmos is sustained by Truth;

Without the glory of Truth what can flourish?

This is the cardinal truth, behold all ye!

Truth is valid for all times past, present and future. This truth protects life and sustains it.

The inner significance of Truth (Sathyam) has to be properly understood. Sath+e+yam = Sathyam. Sath means life. E means food (annam). Yam means Surya (the Sun). Food is derived from the Sun. Food sustains life. For the preservation of life, food is essential. "Bhikshaannam deharakshanaartham (The Lord offers the gift of food to protect the body). When this basic truth is forgotten, food becomes scarce for the people. When food is scarce, life begins to decay. Hence, the entire survival of the world depends on the Sun.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 48

The significance of the term Sathya can be sought from another angle. sa, tha, ya are three syllables in it. When the word is read in the reverse order we have ya, tha, sa. This would mean that through the disciplines of yama, niyama and others, when thapas is performed, one can experience the manifestation of sathya (the embodiment of truth). This means that by the control of the senses (yama, niyama etc.) thapas (penance) has to be performed to realize Truth.

Thapas means the unity of the three gunas (qualities) satwa, rajas, and tamas. The absence of harmony among the three qualities results in tamas (the dullness of ignorance). The integral unity of feelings in the heart, the words spoken by the mouth and the actions done by the hands represents the unity of the three active principles in man.

Pure feelings are the outcome of pure thoughts. Feelings are related to thoughts. Only when the thoughts are good can the feelings be pure and sacred. Pure results are the outcome of pure thoughts. Here is a story to illustrate this: Once Sakkubai complained to the Saint Namadeva that somebody was stealing the cow-dung cakes she was making everyday. Namadeva asked Sakkubai, "How do you identify the cow-dung cakes made by you?" She replied: "I always recite the name of the Lord whatever action I may be doing. The cow-dung cakes I prepare bear the trait of the name I chant". She ran up to her home and brought a dung-cake made by her. She placed it close to the ear of Namadeva. The dung-cake was chanting the name of God: "Ranga! Ranga! Panduranga!" Namadeva heard these words coming out continuously from the cake.

Namadeva wondered whether this was real. Even the great men of those days could develop doubts of this kind. Sakkubai was asked to prepare another dung-cake. She brought some Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 49 and made it into a cake, while chanting the words, "Ranga! Ranga! Panduranga! Namadeva tested that cake by keeping it close to his ear. Once again he heard the words, "Ranga! Ranga! Panduranga!" issuing from the dung-cake. He realized that the power of the Lord's name was beyond all reckoning. Man's thoughts remain forever, outlasting his human existence.

Prior to this episode, Namadeva used to be known as Vamadeva. From that day, he started chanting the name of the Lord. Namadeva was the younger brother of Inanadeva. Namadeva was ever blissful chanting the Lord's name. By reciting the Lord's name any difficult task can be accomplished. One becomes what one thinks (Yad bhavam thad bhavathi). Hence people should see that their thoughts are pure and good. Human life is the expression of one's thoughts.

When an inquiry is made into what is most important for man, the general answer is: life is most important. Some others may declare wealth is most important. But Sakkubai was not of this view. She declared that the most important thing for anyone is the name of the Lord. It is God's name that promotes the fame of a person.

The importance of thought waves

In this context, the importance of thoughts should be properly understood. Thoughts arising in the mind fill the atmosphere with waves of energy. Like radio waves, they are present everywhere. We are able to listen in Puttaparthi to a broadcast from Delhi. How did the radio waves reach here from Delhi?

By entering the ether in space.

Likewise, thought waves are equally powerful and sacred. Hence our thoughts should be sublime and sacred. No evil ideas should affect our thoughts. Evil thoughts inevitably lead to evil actions. When cruel thoughts enter the mind, men beSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 50

have like cruel animals. When, instead, there are good and loving thoughts in a man, they divinise the man and make him do good and sacred acts. Hence, every man's heart should be filled with love, compassion and kindness. When bad thoughts fill the mind, even ostensibly good acts result in bad consequences. Hence, the primary requisite is to make one's thoughts good and holy. Unfortunately, today, because of the influence of the Kali Age, men's thoughts go astray and men lead bad lives. People should realize that there is no greater blessing than leading a pure life. By chanting the Lord's name men can cross an ocean of troubles. God's name is the boat for crossing the ocean of mundane existence. In the term, sathyam, the yam refers to Surya. Surya, the sun, is the sustainer of life on earth. The sun is also the deity presiding over the vision. If your vision is sacred, your life will be sacred.

Among other meanings of Sathyam, one is Brahmam. Truth is God. There is nothing in the world where Truth is not present. Today people are oblivious to the greatness of Truth. People lead a life based on falsehood. The result is that there is widespread starvation.

Chant the Lord's name

In ancient times, people led their lives based on the constant repetition of the Lord's name. The power of the Lord's name could be seen in the fact that even the cow-dung cakes made by Sakkubai, while reciting the Lord's name, chanted the name of Ranga.

Every person should remember and recite the Lord's name whatever action they may be engaged in. The Divine pervades the cosmos. Hence, whatever you may see or say or do, the Divine is present in it. But the Divine is subtle not perceivable or graspable. You should not conclude from this that there Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 51 is no God. Air is not visible or cannot be held. But can its existence be denied? Without air one cannot live for a moment. Air is only one of the five elements. All five elements are essential for life. They constitute the basic stuff of the universe. Their very existence proclaims the power of the Divine. How can the existence of God be denied by anyone? God does not mean any particular form. All forms are His.

Sath-Chith-Ananda is manifest in man as supreme bliss the bliss Divine. This bliss is present in man as his spiritual essence. Man has no need to go after trivial pleasures when he has this eternal bliss within himself. He will experience this bliss when he gets rid of the attachment to the body born out of delusion and ignorance.

Krishna's response to Sakkuba's devotion

Sakkubai was one who had realized this truth and was in continuous contemplation of the Lord's name. Recognising the intensity of her devotion, Krishna assumed her form and sent her to Pandaripur. You can see the greatness of Bhagavan's love for the devotee. Assuming the devotee's form, the Lord performed all her domestic chores and enabled her to go to Pandaripur. God sees to it that the devotee is not exposed to calumny. He saw to it that no one pointed the finger of criticism at Sakkubai for her absence from the house. He himself assumed the form of Sakkubai and did all the household work. Sakkubai went to Pandaripuram and merged in the Lord there. The power of faith is incalculable. With faith any difficult task can be carried out. This truth cannot be understood in worldly affairs.

It must be recognized that chanting the name of the Lord is highly sacred and efficacious. It serves to remove the impurities in a person. It promotes good and sacred thoughts. When Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 52

the heart is filled with truth and love, only "positive" thoughts will arise.

There is no meaning in reciting the name of Rama or Krishna once in a year. How often do you take your meals for the sake of the body? Does not the mind require to be fed equally? Contemplation of God is the food for the mind. To feed the belly and starve the mind is like decorating the chariot but starving the horse. To keep the chariot of the body moving, it is necessary to feed the horse of the mind.

The body is taken care of openly in innumerable ways. The mind needs to be fed in private. No one can notice the chanting of the Lord's name. No one can rob one of the benefits it confers. Possessing this valuable capacity, man should not fail to make full use of it. You strive so much to earn wealth. Do you take the same trouble to experience God? Should you not spare sometime for thoughts of God?

Jnana and namasmarana

Walking on the road, a man may see a temple and make formal signs of worship. What are they worth? Worship should stem from the heart. Think of God in your mind and offer your worship in silence. Sakkubai had set an example to the world by her intense devotion to God. Even Namadeva became her disciple after seeing her exemplary devotion. He began chanting the Lord's name continually. He taught the people that reciting the Lord's name is the means to experience God.

Once, Namadeva and Jnanadeva were going through a forest. For Jnanadeva everything was a manifestation of Divine Wisdom (Jnanamayam). He believed that through knowledge anything could be achieved. As they were going along they felt thirsty. They saw a derelict well. There was some water deep at the bottom of the well. Jnanadeva took the form of a bird, flew down to the bottom and drank the water to quench his Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 53 thirst. Jnanadeva could assume any form because of his spiritual powers. Namadeva said, I don't need to assume any form.

My God is within me. I can secure His nearness without my going to Him. So saying, he sat under a tree and started reciting the Lord's name. The water in the well rose and overflowed so that Namadeva could quench his thirst easily.

The true devotee should be able to bring God near him, without his having to go in search of God. If he is filled with love for God, that love will attract God toward him.

Divine love is the most powerful magnet

The world is full of magnetic power. A flower that attracts you has that magnetic power. The attachment between husband and wife is a sign of magnetic power. Magnetic attraction is the basis of all human relationships. The honey in a flower is the magnet that attracts a bee to the flower.

Everything has some magnetic power that endows it with the power of attraction. Divine love is the most powerful magnet in the universe. The gopikas (cowherd maids) were intensely attracted to Krishna by the power of this love. They declared that they would be attracted to Krishna in whatever form He might choose to manifest Himself as a flower or a tree or a mountain or the ocean. To merge in the Divine, you may assume any form or resort to any means. God assumes many forms according to the needs of the situation. He cannot be confined to any particular place. All forms and names are His. Hence, by whatever name or form the Lord may be worshipped, His reality is one and the same. Some refer to God as Easwara, who smears Himself with vibhuti (the sacred ash). But vibhuti does not mean ash alone. It applies to every glorious attribute of the Divine. It refers to every potency of God.

Easwara means one who is the treasure house of all that is preSathya

Sai Speaks, Volume 31 54

cious. Therefore, it is impossible to measure or define His attributes. This infinite Divine can be realized only through love, which is all-powerful. The devotee's love for the Lord is like the love of a child for its mother. This love-bond is inextricable. The lesson of Sivarathri is that devotees should foster good and sacred thoughts. They should be filled with godly thoughts. They should seek to become one with the Divine by reflecting on their inherent divinity. If you constantly chant the name of God, God realization will come in due course. Whatever other things they may possess, men suffer from lack of peace and bliss. These two can be got only from God. It is for these two that men should pray to God and not for anything else, because God alone can give them. When these are secured, all other things will come of their own accord by the grace of God. People should yearn for God. All other desires are worthless.

The wise and the envious

Students! You are the inheritors of Truth and Righteousness (Sathya and Dharma). Different persons are propagating these two principles in different ways. Truth and Righteousness are eternal. They remain unchanged through all the three categories of time past, present, and future. It may be asked: What is the need to propagate ideals, which are ever-present and permanent? But the Lord declared in the Bhagavad Gita, "Whenever there is decline of dharma (righteousness) and a resurgence of adharma (unrighteousness) I incarnate Myself. Righteousness is imperishable. It is the practice of righteousness that declines not righteousness itself. It is like the sun being covered for a time by a cloud. The sun is not apparently visible. But it is always there and shines again when the cloud moves away. Truth is the sun. Its effulgence is righteousness. Truth and righteousness are inseparable. They go together. They are inseparable like matter and energy.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 56

The Sun of Truth illumines the world with the effulgence of Righteousness. It is the foremost duty of young people today to uphold Truth and Righteousness. Students ask today, What is our duty? Most of them feel that it is the job that makes the man (Udyogam Purushalakshanam). What then about the unemployed? Are they not men at all? Righteousness is not related to gender. It is the manifestation of unity in thought, word, and deed. The same unity is the characteristic of Truth. Truth concerns utterance. Righteousness pertains to practice. Nowadays, precept prevails over practice. Practice is all-important. When righteousness is not practiced, it appears as if it has decayed. But Righteousness cannot decay or disappear.

The story of Akbar and Birbal

Today, students should consider it their primary duty to foster Truth and Righteousness. It is easy to talk about them, but putting them into practice is difficult. In this connection, I would relate a story about an episode during the reign of Emperor Akbar in Delhi.

Akbar had a very wise minister named Birbal. Birbal could always give satisfactory replies to the questions of the Emperor. Seeing how much the Emperor relied on Birbal, other ministers and dignitaries in the court were envious of Birbal. The Commander-in-Chief of the army, who was one of this group, seized the opportunity of Birbal's absence from the durbar hall one day to tell the Emperor: Your Majesty! Here we are so many of us with considerable experience. Please consult us also. Why do you ask Birbal for everything? On another day, Akbar came to the audience hall and inquired about Birbal. The Commander-in-Chief said Birbal was away and informed the Emperor that he was ready to answer Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 57 the Emperor's questions. All others also got up and said they were prepared to do so.

Akbar got up and put the first question to the assembled dignitaries. He warned them that their answer should satisfy him. The first question he put was: In this world, which is the best flower? The Commander-in-Chief replied that the rose was the best flower. Other ministers mentioned the names of jasmine, champak, and other flowers. The Emperor was not satisfied.

He then put a second question: Which milk is the best milk? Once again, there were a variety of answers, none of which satisfied the Emperor.

He then put the third question: What is the sweetest thing in the world? Many replied: jaggery (brown sugar). One said honey. Like that, there were varied replies.

The Emperor then passed on to the fourth question: Which leaf ranks highest among leaves? The assembled men gave different answers. Akbar was not satisfied.

By this time, Birbal had entered the hall. Akbar then put him the four questions.

Which is the best flower in the world?

Birbal: The flower of the cotton plant is the best. From the cotton flower, we have cotton, out of which yarn is made and clothes are woven. The cotton flower is therefore of lasting use to mankind. Other flowers are only of temporary value and are useless when their fragrance is gone.

Which is the best milk in the world?

Birbal said, the mother's breast milk is the best, because it nourishes the child.

What is the sweetest thing in the world?

Birbal replied, Sweet speech. Through sweet words you can transform any person and give great joy. Men throw stones Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 58

when a crow caws. But they listen raptly to the sweet call of the cuckoo. Sweetness in speech is sweeter than anything else. Which is the best leaf in the world?

Birbal said: The betel leaf is the best, Your Majesty. Betel leaves are offered on all auspicious occasions like weddings. The betel leaf is considered sacred and auspicious. Other leaves like plantain leaves have no special value at all. Everyone in the audience was amazed at Birbal's intelligent answers, which pleased the Emperor. Akbar told the gathering that none of their answers had satisfied him. Akbar expressed his appreciation of Birbal's replies. The courtiers realized why the Emperor valued so much the words of Birbal.

God is Omnipresent. So do not act differently when you are away from My Presence. Be always and everywhere conscious of the Presence. Be vigilant even while engaged in small tasks. Maintain silence in the recesses of the heart as well as outside.

A new way of life

Embodiments of Love!

You cannot find in the entire cosmos any place or object in which God is not present. The Divine is present on the mountains. The Divine permeates the oceans. The Divine dwells in villages and cities. The Divine is omnipresent.

Only those who recognize this truth can redeem their lives; they alone can achieve the goal of human existence. The powers of the Divine are limitless. Every living being in the world is governed by some limitations. Birds, beasts, and insects are all taken care of by the Divine in respect of their essential needs like food and drink. Among all living beings, however, the life of human being is supreme, since it is governed by morality and good conduct. The Divine has placed some limitations on the physical powers of man but has set no limits on his mental powers. Man can achieve whatever he resolves to achieve. He can even realise God. This divine power is given only to human beings.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 60

Ignorant of his limitless divine potentialities, man suffers from various disabilities by considering himself as a human being. Man today is soaring in the sky like a bird and moving in the ocean like a fish. He has been able to land on the moon. But unfortunately he is not able to live like a true human being on earth. This is indeed a matter for shame.

The power of surrender

Man can accomplish anything if he surrenders to God.

When he submits himself to the will of the Divine, there is no task he cannot accomplish.

Kuchela, a boyhood friend of Krishna, approached Krishna for help on the basis of his old friendship. How did Krishna help him? The Bhagavatha bears testimony to what Krishna did for Kuchela. The Ramayana tells the story of what Rama did for Sugriva after the latter became a friend of Rama and sought His help. Sugriva was able to regain his kingdom. What did Vibhishana get after his constant remembrance of Rama and the ordeals he experienced in Lanka? Relieving him of his troubles, Rama crowned Vibhishana the ruler of Lanka. Once a devotee totally surrenders to the Lord, the Divine goes to any extent to help the devotee. An insignificant little stick, by association with fire, burns brilliantly. A drop of water held in your palm evaporates in a trice. But when it is cast into the ocean, it becomes one with it. If man wants to achieve highest human potentialities, he has to achieve proximity to God. He has to merge in the Divine. Then he can manifest his true nature.

Not realizing the true nature of the Divine Principle, man wastes his time on rituals and religious practices of various kinds. God cannot be realized through such practices. It is only by loving God and getting close to Him that one can realize one's aspirations. Swami does not disapprove of sadhana Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 61

(spiritual practices). They are good activities for using time sacredly. But without service to Godly persons, they are of no use for realizing freedom from the cycle of mundane existence. The significance of devotees offerings to the Lord
In the field of devotion, there is room for making certain offerings to God. God utilizes the acceptance of such offerings to reward the devotee a hundred-fold. Devotees should recognize the significance of such acceptance by the Divine.
For instance, the Lord asked Kuchela what he had brought for Him. The Lord as Vamana asked for three feet of land from Emperor Bali. In the Rama Avatar, He went to Sabari and asked her to appease His hunger. All that Sabari could offer to Rama were a few sweet berries collected from the jungle. In the Krishna Avatar, the Divine child went to the gopis (cowherd maids) saying He was hungry. All that they could offer Him was some watery buttermilk. During the difficult days of their exile in the forest, Krishna went to the Pandavas and asked Draupadi for food. That day, all the food had been consumed and barely a leaf remained in one of the vessels.

Krishna was more than satisfied with that one leaf and saved the Pandavas from the wrath of Durvasa, who had been sent by Duryodhana to subject the Pandavas to the ordeal of feeding Durvasa and his numerous disciples. When Krishna's appetite was satisfied, Durvasa and his disciples felt fully appeased and did not turn up at Pandavas' hermitage.

It is to shower His grace on the devotees that the Lord seeks small offerings from them. What does He need from any one when the whole cosmos is contained in Him?

It is the Lord who protects one and all in innumerable ways. There is a simple way to secure the grace of God. You must get near to God. Surrender yourself to Him. Become one with Him. Instead of following this easy path, man today immerses himself in petty desires and keeps away from God.

Sanjay Sahani and Ruchir Desai (faculty members who addressed the gathering earlier) spoke about God's love for the devotees. There is no trace of selfishness in it. But, because of their own selfish natures, they attribute selfishness even to God's love. This is merely a reflection of their own nature. God's love is not a reflected love. It is love pure and simple. A reflected love carries the taint of the original. That is not the case with the Divine love, which is pure and unsullied.

The story of pure and unselfish love

The nature of pure and unselfish love may be illustrated by the story of Laila and Majnu. Laila was the daughter of a very wealthy person. She fell in love with Majnu, but her parents did not approve of her marrying a poor young man like Majnu. Laila did not wish to displease her parents. She was a girl of noble character. She prayed to God to find out whether Majnu loved her. She sent two of her maids to Majnu to ask him whether he could offer his blood to save Laila from a grievous ailment. Majnu immediately cut an artery and sent a glassful of blood to Laila. Moreover, he sent word through the maids that he was prepared to give his entire life to save Laila. His only wish was that she should survive. When the maids conveyed this message to Laila she realized how much Majnu loved her. She observed, I was thinking only about my love for him. I did not realise how much he loved me.

Devotees should realise that God also likes to test the depth and sincerity of the devotee's love. He seeks to find out whether the devotee is filled with love of God, how intense is that love and so on. He tests the devotee's love in various ways.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 63

One should not be content with making offerings to God.

One should love God intensely. One should pine for Him. One should lose one's self in the love of God.

The ultimate sense of liberation

People aspire for liberation (mukti). They have no idea what constitutes liberation. Man seeks liberation from the ills of the body, the senses, the mind, the intellect, and the Antahkarana (internal motivator). All these are no doubt necessary.

But liberation in the ultimate sense consists in liberation from the cycle of birth and death. This means that one should redeem one's present life so that one is free from rebirth.

Most of the people's diseases today have their origin in the mind. Desires and worries are the cause of many ailments of the heart, the kidney etc. You can test the truth of this statement in a simple way. I have no diseases of any kind. I am hale and hearty. Lead a life of courage and you will be all right. The moment you start feeling your pulse out of suspicion that it is weak, you will find it weak. It is your mind that is the cause of the weakness of the pulse. Many diseases are allowed to grow entirely due to mental factors. Men should pray to God for freedom from rebirth so that they will not have bodies that are bound to be afflicted with diseases.

There is no need for rigorous spiritual exercises to secure freedom from rebirth. Pure love of God is enough. This is exemplified by the gopis (cowherd maids). Immersed always in the love of Krishna, they were always happy and contented. We are today celebrating Yugadi, the beginning of yet another New Year. Many new-year days have come and gone.

Do you expect the New Year to bring you new happiness? Are you imagining what New Year portends for you? New years do not offer you prosperity and pleasure. This New Year day will Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 64 be like any other day. Many people eagerly expect something to turn up on this day. This is utterly futile. The calendar merely tells you that a New Year has begun.

What we should be concerned about is not a New Year but a new way of life. We must seek to secure a new source of joy. But unfortunately we do not think about this. We speculate on what the new year signifies. We have to look to ourselves and not to the succession of years for changes in our lives. Think within yourself about your condition. Turn your thoughts to God. Then you will realize what you desire.

The way to surrender to God

No one tries to find out how to surrender to God. The whole world belongs to you. You must declare to God, "I am yours". This is the truth you have to understand. You must be ready to offer to God whatever He asks of you. What does God ask from you? First of all, He says, Give up your desires.

You must give them up immediately. He calls upon you not to immerse yourself in worldly pleasures. Cultivate love for all.

That will redeem your life. That is the sacred path you have to follow. That is the essence of the four goals of life. People have no clear idea of what dharma, artha, kama, and moksha (the four goals) mean? They think that moksha (liberation) is something that you attain after death. But, in fact, liberation can be attained here and now. Moksha means moha-kshayam, the elimination of moha (attachment). People are not ready to give up attachment to wife, children, property, etc. You have a duty to protect your family. But you must not be immersed in concerns about them.

What is dharma? Not the obligations relating to the various stages in life or the various vocations. Dharma means harmony in thought, word, and deed. People equate charity with dharma. That is not correct. Dharma calls for sacrificing your bad thoughts, feelings, and actions.

Understand Swami's life and message

Embodiments of love! Realize that love is the most important quality in human life. It is not love for kith and kin that is precious. It is love for God that is most valuable.

Swami's life and message are not properly understood.

Swami has no worldly desires. Whether you believe it or not, I am always positive from head to foot. There is nothing negative in me.

Devotees suggested to me that they should be allowed to organize poor feeding on Yugadi. Should this be done only on one day in a year? You must feed the poor on all days. You must have the broad outlook. With a broad heart you can do many superhuman things. Strive to get close to God and surrender your all to Him.

The name of the New Year is Bahudhanya. This name suggests that the year will witness an abundance of food grains. There may be an abundance of food grains. But are you consuming them properly? No. Are the food-grains distributed to the poor and the needy? No.

Our ancients gave the different years good names such as Prabhava, Vibhava, Sukla, and so on. [Swami went on reciting almost all the 60 names in quick succession]. Sometimes, the priests predict bad developments in a year. This is intended only to make the people undertake propitiatory ceremonies that will bring in income to the priests. Can the mere expenditure of money ward off evils? No. Your troubles will go when the heart is purified. Your sincere prayers will help to relieve your troubles.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 66

There must be a transformation in the hearts of the devotees. They should not continue to remain in the same rut for years. They must benefit from the grace of God's love.

Happiness is union with God

People talk about the new year but do not care to develop new feelings and new attitudes. They must develop new ideas and new enthusiasm. If they are all the time depressed, when will they learn to express the joy of good living? They must exude happiness. That is the mark of the Divine within. Happiness is union with God. God is eternal bliss. Get rid of your evil tendencies and fill your hearts with love of God. You will become one with God.

I am ready to give you all happiness. Are you prepared to receive what I wish to offer? Banish all worries. They are temporary like passing clouds. Do not allow any one whether it is the father, the mother or the preceptor to come between you and your duty to God. This is the lesson taught by Prahlada, Bharata, and Emperor Bali. Their allegiance to the Lord transcended all other obligations. God takes care of such devotees.

Surrender yourselves to God and dedicate yourselves to the service of mankind. You have my blessings. Foster love and serve society.

Potency of Rama's name

Sweeter than sugar,

Tastier than the cream from curds,

Growing in sweetness like honey,

As the name is chanted,

Verily it is nectar itself.

Meditate, all ye, on the sacred name of Rama!

Embodiments of Love!

Rama is the friend of the universe. He is its protector. He is its patron saint. To comprehend the nature of such a unique ideal personality is not quite easy. It is easier to count the waves of the ocean than to describe the qualities of Rama.

Ramachandra is the Indweller in all beings. The cosmos is one vast mansion. Humanity is one family (or community). Only the person who recognizes this relationship between the cosmos and mankind can understand the Rama Principle.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 68

The earth lies at the feet of every human being. It is the same firmament that is above every person. All breathe the same air. The water that people drink is the same for all. Only those who recognize this unifying principle will seek to understand the Rama Principle.

Two kinds of dharma: pravritti and nivritti

The Vedas taught two kinds of dharma (codes of right conduct). One is termed pravritti and the other is termed nivritti. Pravritti (the outward path) is related to worldly activities. It prescribes the qualities needed for leading the life in the mundane world. Nivritti (the inward path) teaches knowledge of the Self (Atma-jnana). One who knows the difference between the two is dauntless.

Pravritti indicates how any particular task should be performed.

Nivritti (the inward path) indicates in what state of mind the work should be done.

For example, when a person is hungry, pravritti tells him to eat food and appease his hunger. Nivritti teaches what kind of food he should eat, what is good for his health and what is injurious, and how it should be consumed. Pravritti and nivritti are thus related to what is external and what is internal. All that you see, all that you hear, all that you think is related to the pravritti path. The pravritti path creates confusion in the mind, disturbs the intelligence, and prevents one from pursuing the right path. Pravritti tends to turn man away from God.

Life is a kind of struggle. You have to face conflict of opinions. But Ayodhya is a place free from strife and controversy. No enemy could enter it. The human heart is the symbol of Ayodhya. All conflicts and divisions arise in the mind. It is the mark of pravritti (the outward path) that it generates conflict and brings about alternatively union and separation. BeSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 69 cause of this fact, man today is a prey of unrest and is bereft of peace. Ravana is an example of such a person who ruined his life in this way. He was perpetually following the pravritti path. Unable to conquer his desires he sacrificed his sons. Unable to subdue his desires (vanchalu), he ultimately ruined his entire clan (vamsa). With no control over his passions, he forfeited his kingdom itself.

Ravana's lesson to the world

In the final reckoning, this was the lesson Ravana gave to the world: "Oh people of the world! Failing to control your attachments like me, unable to limit your desires like me, do not ruin yourselves as I have done. Ultimately, I am also leaving the world. What remains in the world? Only infamy. All the renown goes to Rama. Therefore, strive to earn good reputation. Do not give room to ill-fame." That was the lesson Ravana taught. The Rama Principle destroys all sins and redeems life. Everyone should seek to realize the Rama Principle. Rama moved about in the world as an ordinary human being. He exemplified the ideal life. Yet all considered him as an ordinary human being. But, do ordinary people live like Rama? Rama was one who, while appearing to lead the life of an ordinary man, led the life Divine. He demonstrated the ideal life of a spiritually realised person.

Today, the world needs the message of the Ramayana. Why? Because children do not heed the words of their parents. Parents do not set worthy examples to the children. Preceptors do not teach the right course of conduct to the disciples. The disciples do not offer the due respect to the teachers.

Today, businessmen, administrators, rulers, and citizens are all tarred by the same brush. The world is replete with discord. People have forgotten the great message of Rama. They have Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 70 poisoned life at its source. They have forgotten the Divine, with the result that they are immersed in misery.

How do people address their prayers to God today? They pray for bodily comforts and mental peace. These desires are natural. But there is something unnatural about the way it is done. Prayers are offered to the image of the Lord of Serpents in stone! They pray, Oh Lord of Serpents! Remove my troubles. But when the serpent appears before them as a live cobra, they use the stone idol to kill it.

Today this is the plight of the Divine. Who can determine what is the nature of Divinity? None can do it. The nature of the Divine can be determined only by the Divine and not by anybody else.

Thyagaraja recognized this truth in his song, "Oh Lord! How can anyone decide what you are?" Thyagaraja went on to derive the name "Rama" from the two letters Ra and Ma in the two mantras associated with Vishnu and Siva (The two mantras are: Namo Narayanaya and Namah Sivaya). The two mantras, without the syllables Ra and Ma, become meaningless. Ra and Ma are thus the life-giving letters in the two mantras. Power of Rama s name

Rama s name is thus the life-giving essence of the two great mantras. The term Rama has another esoteric significance. It consists of three syllables: Ra + Aa + Ma. Ra signifies Agni (the Fire-god). Aa represents Surya (the Sun-god). Ma represents Chandra (the Moon-god). The combination of the three letters constitutes the Rama name. Ra, representing the Fire-god, burns away all sins, Aa, representing the Sungod, dispels the darkness of ignorance. Ma, representing the Moon-god, cools one s temper and produces tranquility. The name Rama has the triple power of washing away one's sins, Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 71 removing one's ignorance, and tranquilizing one's mind. How is the profound meaning of this sacred name to be imparted to mankind? This can be done only by the Divine coming in human form and demonstrating to mankind the power of the Divine.

Rama s name signifies the harmony in thought, word and deed. Rama demonstrated this harmony by his thoughts, words, and deeds.

The Rama Principle embodies numerous powers and potencies. The Ramayana is not a sacred text to be used only for ritualistic reading (parayanam). The Rama Principle is all-pervading like the Cosmic Spirit. In olden times people used to say that their inner secrets are known only to the Indwelling Rama Spirit (Atma-Rama). The Self is called "Rama". Rama means "one who pleases". How can you give a specific form to one who pleases or delights?

The human destiny

In the Divine epic of the Ramayana, there is a special profound message. That message is: man must lead the life of a human being; men must seek oneness with the Divine. Man should harmonize the three qualities in him (satwa, rajas, tamas). In every human being, all the three natures human, divine, and demonic are present. But most men today ignore their humanness and divinity and foster only their demonic nature.

Man, in fact, should strive to manifest his divinity, and not display his weakness or his demonic qualities.

Rama chose to go to the forest to fulfill the pledge of his father, and thereby subjected himself to many difficulties. It may be asked: Did he go to the forest under any compulsion or out of his own resolve, or with a sense of dissatisfaction, or merely to comply with his father's pledge? No. Rama set out for the forest with the same sense of serenity and joy with Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 72

which he looked forward to his coronation. Rama demonstrated the spirit of equanimity. He showed that pain or pleasure, profit or loss, victory or defeat, were the same to him. In human life, pleasure and pain, happiness and sorrow alternate all the time. It is not a good quality to welcome pleasure and turn away pain. You must welcome sorrow in the same joyous spirit in which you greet happiness. Happiness has no value unless there is also sorrow. That is why it is said, "Pleasure is not secured by pleasant measure." Pain is needed to secure pleasure. Rama demonstrated to the world the truth of this concept.

In every act, Rama set the example. In individual conduct, in the discharge of duties to the family, and in fulfilling the obligations to society Rama demonstrated the ideals to be followed. All should begin with fulfilling the obligations of the individual. The duty of the individual is to manifest the divinity within him. As an individual, Rama revealed the divinity in him by his ideal conduct.

Brahma s benediction

When Valmiki completed his Ramayana, Brahma declared that his epic would last as long as the mountains stand and the rivers flow. The inner meaning of Brahma's benediction is that the Ramayana will be cherished as long as men (mountains) and women (rivers) exist on earth. The Ramayana will last as long as human society exists. People should acquire the capacity to comprehend the eternal truths embedded in the Ramayana. Ignoring the eternal truths of the Ramayana, Bharathiyas (Indians) are wasting their lives in the pursuit of worldly concerns. We celebrate this day as the birthday of Rama. How are people celebrating the day? They perform some special puja Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 73

(worship). They adorn themselves with sacred marks. But, for doing these things should you wait for the birthday of Rama? No. Whatever your age, at all times and in all places, you must be engaged in thoughts of Rama.

Valmiki, after completing the composing of the Ramayana, summoned the sages in his ashram and asked them who was capable of propagating the immortal and sacred epic to every nook and corner of the world. The sages were nonplused. They declared, "Gurujii, we are old men. We are at the end of our span of life. We are incapable of conveying the Ramayana to the length and breadth of the world." Valmiki was downcast. At that stage, the twins Lava and Kusa arrived on the scene. They told Valmiki, Gurujii, we have been listening to what all has been spoken here. We are prepared to convey the Ramayana to every place. The sage was immensely happy.

Be prepared for any sacrifice for the sake of the Divine. Lava and Kusa were princes of royal blood. They carried in their hands tambourines. They set out on the great task of propagating the Ramayana, chanting the slokas (verses) all the way. Are there any today who will undertake such a task? Many will fear being mocked by the public. Even persons who may wish to do bhajans in public are afraid of being jeered at. Devotees should be able to transcend such considerations. Why should anyone who is doing something holy be afraid of public ridicule?

People should be prepared for any sacrifice for the sake of the Divine. The joy to be derived from chanting the Lord's name is ineffable. Without the constant remembrance of God, there can be no experience of the Divine.

Whatever the name that may be chanted, when it is done wholeheartedly the fruits of it will be certain. Everything should be done with a pure heart.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 74

Three mothers and Rama

The Ramayana story is replete with ideals. During my recent visit to Madras, I spoke about the story of three mothers Kausalya, Rama's mother; Anjanadevi, the mother of Anjaneya (Hanuman); and the mother of the sage Agasthya.

When the three met, Kausalya asked Anjaneya's mother, Mother! Who are you?

She replied: What! Don't you know? My son Hanuman is well known to the whole world. Hanuman is present wherever Rama's name is uttered. Rama and Hanuman have inseparable attachment to each other. They are one soul in two bodies. I am the mother of that Hanuman. He leapt over the mighty ocean to Lanka.

On hearing these words, Agasthya's mother observed,

Whatever your son did is not anything so great. Your son leapt over the ocean. My son drank the ocean in a gulp. I am the mother of Agasthya.

Both then told Kausalya, You are the mother of Rama, whose name enabled Hanuman to leap over the ocean and Agasthya to drink the waters of the ocean.

As they were engaged in this conversation, Rama came there and remarked innocently, How is it you mothers are waxing eloquent about me? Though he was the incarnation of the Lord Narayana Himself, he moved about as if he was simple son. He told them: Hanuman could cross the ocean because of his intense devotion. Agasthya could drink the ocean because of his intense penance. I was in no way responsible for their accomplishments. I am not so great as all that. I am an ordinary human being. The name given to me is the source of all power. I am only an instrument. It is my name that helps to accomplish everything. This name is filled with all potencies. This body of mine moves because of the power of the name. Therefore, regard me as only an instrument.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 75

After Rama left, Kausalya observed: Mothers! My son speaks as if he is an ordinary being. But he is the reservoir of all knowledge and there is nothing he cannot accomplish. Kausalya, who had this opinion of Rama, felt differently when Rama came to tell her that he was about to leave for the forest to fulfill the pledge given by his father to Kaikeyi. The mother was full of joy at the prospect of the coronation of Rama. Rama told her, Mother! I have come to give you some happy news. I am not only the Lord of Ayodhya; I am now the Lord of the whole jungle in the country. I am getting ready to reign over the forest.

Kausalya could not understand the implications of Rama's statement. While she was wondering what it was all about, Lakshmana came there. Lakshmana always followed Rama like a shadow. Likewise Satrughna always accompanied Bharata. Lakshmana and Satrughna were the children of mother Sumitra. But they were full of humility and attached themselves respectively to Rama and Bharata.

Rama's advice to Lakshmana

Lakshmana was greatly agitated as he entered. Addressing Rama, he said, Brother! Your calmness is no doubt a great virtue. But not in affairs like this. The whole world is looking up to you. For the sake of one individual you are embarking on this undertaking. I cannot accept this. I shall destroy Dasaratha and Kaikeyi and crown you king this very moment.

On hearing this, Rama said, Lakshmana! Don't get agitated.

Calm yourself. This calmness (santham) will protect you. It is your glory and greatness. Forbearance is the supreme virtue. It is the crowning quality of the sages. Therefore, calm yourself.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 76

Kausalya and Sita

Lakshmana then related to Kausalya what had happened. Hearing the whole story, Kausalya collapsed on the spot. When she recovered consciousness, she declared, Rama! I cannot live for a single moment without you. You are prepared to carry out your father's words. I cannot stand in your way. But I appeal to you to take me with you.

Rama then told her, To a wife, her husband is verily God himself. You cannot leave your husband in any circumstance. Your husband is everything for you. As long as he is alive, you cannot leave him. He is now plunged in sorrow over my impending departure. You cannot leave him. You must serve him and offer him solace.

Sita came there soon after. She was no ordinary woman. Daughter of Emperor Janaka, she was known as Vaidehi, a person with no attachment to the body. Listening to Rama's advice to his mother, Sita burst into laughter and remarked: You teach one thing to your mother and the opposite to me. When I said I wanted to follow you, you tried to dissuade me. You advised me to devote myself to the service of your aged parents. But, when you met your mother, you asked her to treat the husband as God. Are you not then a God for me? Is there one rule for one woman and another for another woman? Moreover, you are called Ramachandra. Chandra means moon. I am the moonlight for you. How can the moon be in the forest and the moonlight be in Ayodhya? The moonlight must be with the moon. Therefore, you must take me with you.

Rama's dilemma in destroying Rakshasas

Rama had to pacify the demand of the mother and the wife in the softest manner. After pacifying them, Rama set out for the forest. In his wanderings in the forest, seeing the demonic atrocities of the Rakshasas (Demons). Rama felt that he had been ostensibly sent in exile really to deal with these evil forces. The Rakshasas are hindering the sacred activities of the ascetics. I must destroy the Rakshasas so that these sages will be left in peace to practice their austerities, thought Rama.

One problem arose in his mind in this context. In destroying the Rakshasas, is it proper to kill women? Rama had received the answer to this question from Viswamitra when, as a young lad, he had been taken by the sage to guard his yajna and he wanted to know whether it was right on his part to kill Thataka, a demoness. Viswamitra assured him that there was nothing wrong in killing a wicked person even if she happened to be a woman. To protect the pious, the righteous and the holy persons engaged in sacred activities there was nothing wrong in destroying even women.

When Rama asked the sage whether there had been any precedent in this respect, Viswamitra related the case of Prahlada's son Virochana, who killed the demoness Mantra who was committing many wicked deeds against the rishis (sages) and their families.

There is nothing wrong in repudiating one's mother, father, husband, or preceptor if they come between the devotee and God. When Kaikeyi came between him and his devotion to Rama, Bharata utterly denounced her. One must be prepared to sacrifice everything for God.

The Rama Principle is infinitely potent. The powers of the Divine are immeasurable. God comes down in human form to redeem mankind. Birds and beasts act according to their natural instincts. Man alone tends to violate the laws of nature and act against the laws of dharma (right conduct). It is to teach and punish man who goes astray that the Divine comes in human form. He teaches the highest ideals and leads an ideal life to set an example.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 78

Role of the Avatar

Embodiments of love!

God incarnates for the sake of redemption mankind and not for His own sake. He needs nothing. He has everything. He comes down to tell humanity its divine origin and to exhort men to return to God by following the Love Principle. Through love you can achieve anything. It is this message that has to be understood today: the role of the Avatar in leading mankind through love to a Godly life.

There is no use in observing Sri Rama's birthday once a year and being satisfied with a good feast. Every moment marks the Lord's advent, because human beings are being born continually. Every human being is an incarnation of the Divine. The Divine dwells in every being. Therefore, dedicate every moment to the thoughts of God. When you do this, in due course you experience the Divine. You will be free from delusions and you will be divinised. Man is born to merge in the grace of the Divine and not to immerse himself in mundane pleasures.

Let each one carry on his or her duties. Dharma protects its protector and destroys its destroyer. Strive to proceed from the human to the Divine.

Embodiment of love!

It is not possible to describe the boundless attributes of the Rama Principle. The name of Rama has been adored for aeons. Humanity has been in existence for many lakhs of years.

Unfortunately,

humanity is yet to realize its true nature. What is this nature? It is the Principle of Love. Human life should be suffused with love and rounded off with love. Life should be given up with tears of joy and not tears of sorrow.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 79

This is a sacred day. Remembering its sacredness, you must all make your lives sublime.

5 April 1998

Sai Ramesh Hall, Brindavan

No one can shake truth; no one can install untruth. No one can understand My mystery. The best you can do is get immersed in it. The mysterious, indescribable power has come within the reach of all. No one is born and allowed to live for the sake of others. Each has their own burden to carry and lay down.

The path of Nirvana

There is no place without 'God, and there is no form without the Divine.

Whether one is in a forest or in a town, on a mountain top or in a valley, wherever one may be, one is not helpless.

[Telugu Poem]

Embodiments of Love!

Men today strive in various ways to acquire knowledge of the Self (Atma Jnana). But this is not true knowledge. It may well be called ignorance. Whatever one's scholarship or one's spiritual practices or one's quest for gurus, one cannot acquire spiritual wisdom without understanding one's true nature.

Men today cannot understand their humanness; how can they recognize their divinity? Only after comprehending his humanness can a man recognize his divinity. Recognizing this truth, Buddha embarked on his spiritual quest. He studied all Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 81

the extant scriptures of different faiths. He met many holy men. He visited numerous holy shrines. All these exercises gave him no satisfaction. What was the reason? All external, physical and ephemeral activities are valueless.

Your vision must be pure and sacred

The first requisite is purity in the use of the five senses of perception given to man. Buddha declared that men should cultivate at the outset samyag-drishti (the right vision). This means that the eyes should not be misused for looking at all sorts of things. Your vision must be pure and sacred. See no evil; see what is good. A sacred vision is that which looks only at divine and sacred objects. Your vision must originate from the heart. Bad thoughts and bad feelings pollute the vision. Man today has lost the fear of sin, the love of God and observance of social morality. This accounts for all the ills of society today.

Pure vision leads to pure thoughts. Pure thoughts result in pure actions. Purity in action is essential for human existence. Purity in thoughts and purity in speech must lead to purity in deeds. This is the triple purity hailed by the sages. When this purity is manifest, human life gets redeemed. The principle of Help ever, hurt never becomes the governing principle of daily life.

Pure vision naturally begets Purity in speech by the refinement of the heart. Pure words must come out of the depth of the heart, which is a fountain of compassion. Constant examination of the purity of one's vision, speech and action is a spiritual exercise. It is this that helps to refine the heart.

Once, Buddha had an encounter with Ananda, the son of his stepmother. Buddha had attained the state of Nirvana (Self-Realization). Watching Buddha in this state, Ananda burst into tears. Buddha was about to give up body. Ananda was in grief Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 82 over the thought. What will happen to us? What is our future? Buddha summoned Ananda to come near him and said:

"Ananda! This is not a time for grief. I am about to achieve Nirvana. You should also seek Nirvana. Looking at the dead, the living lament over death. But who are the dead? Death awaits the living in due course. Where there is birth, there is also death.

Only the Divine is free from birth and death.

He is eternal, with no beginning, middle or end.

He is the Eternal Witness.

[Telugu poem].

Except for the Divine, birth and death are natural to all human beings. Why then do you weep? You also must strive to achieve liberation."

Sanctify the senses

Man today is ignoring the state of his heart. He abuses the five senses without regard to the consequences.

The result is he is a prey to all kinds of sufferings. If the five senses are used properly man will experience only what is good. All rituals and spiritual exercises are of no avail if the five senses are not used properly.

Moreover, men must seek what is permanent in life and not cling to what is transient and perishable. The body is impermanent.

The Atma is eternal. People should realize the infinite divine potencies in man. The Divine is present in man as conscience, which is a spark of the Cosmic Conscience. The conscience transcends the five senses. When the senses are sanctified, the conscience manifests its divinity. It can then experience its oneness with the Universal Consciousness.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 83

This was the path pursued by Buddha. He began with control of the senses. He was filled with pure and sacred feelings; with a pure heart, he achieved Nirvana. Purity of the heart is more important than all rituals and penances. Develop a vision that will broaden your heart and enable you to help others and not hurt them. Dedicate all actions to God. Thyaga (sacrifice) is real yoga (oneness with the Divine). To enjoy things (bhoga) without sharing with others is a disease (roga). The Vedas have declared that immortality can be attained only through sacrifice and not by any other means.

Good speech is as essential as good vision. Avoid all kinds of gossip. Keep your speech confined to what is godly and sacred. Engage yourself in service to others. Pay no attention to other people's defects and faults.

Listen to pure and sacred words. People misuse their ears listening to scandal and gossip. This evil tendency should be eliminated by listening to the glories of God. Such listening (sravanam) has been accorded a primary place among the nine paths of devotion.

Purify your heart

What is it that you should observe on this New Year day? Many such days have come and gone. But how far has there been a transformation in the heart? Many years have come and gone. But your hearts remain unchanged. The first task is to purify the heart. You should not be content with celebrating the New Year as a festive occasion. To enjoy a feast you do not need a New Year. The New Year should be marked not by a feast but by the awakening of new and pure thoughts in the heart. Of what use is it to be concerned only about eating from dawn to dusk?

What is the purpose of life? It is not eating, sleeping and dying. You must control the senses and use them for sacred Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 84 purposes. The power of the senses is derived from the Divine. The small human eye enables to look at stars billions of miles away. Where from is this power got? It is from the Divine within you. Hence, everyone should always think of God, whatever one may do. Then, one will be free from bad thoughts. Man must manifest his humanness by transcending the animal nature.

Realize your inherent divinity. Regard the whole world as your field of action. You have come as a pilgrim to this world of action- Ensure that your pilgrimage proceeds on right lines. 14 April 1998

Sai Sruthi, Kodai Kanai

The most beneficial thing that can happen to a person is that he should draw God's love to himself. His love for God is of less importance, because it is an imperfect mixture of divine and worldly love. The most important action whereby to gain God's love is Rightousness.

Man, truth, love, and God

It is only from Truth that the entire creation has come out. There is nothing in the world without the basis of Truth.

This is pure goodness (suddha sathwa)

Behold, ye people!

God is Sathya Swaroopa (Embodiment of Truth). You find that human nature is a combination of sathya (truth) and dharma (right conduct). When man is not able to comprehend his own human nature, how can he know the Divine? Everyone should, therefore, make efforts to know the human nature. It is nirmala, nischala, nisswartha (blemishless, unwavering, and unselfish).

God is in every human being residing in his spiritual heart which is on the right side of the body while the physical heart is on the left. It is only a single seat sofa, and not a double Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 86 seated sofa or musical chair. So, God is close to everyone, being seated in the spiritual heart. When you realize this, you will have the feeling of blissful happiness. The heart is the seat of compassion, and God is embodiment of compassion. While so, man cannot have hatred toward any being at all. Man has to make efforts to progress on the path of Truth and Righteousness. God has no consideration of caste, age, sex or nationality. Take the elements earth, water, fire, air and ether. Have these elements any distinction of caste or nationality? They are embodiments of the Divine. You should never misuse the elements or waste them.

Never separate God from you

Names and forms are many, but the Atmic Principle is one. You should understand this. This is the fundamental law of Nature. Though names and forms vary, there are some common features in all. Hunger is common to all, though the types of food are many. In a hospital, there are many different types of patients. All are not given the same food. For instance, diabetics will not be given sugar or sweet preparations. The world is a hospital. Humanity is suffering from different diseases physical, mental and psychological. Three-fourths of the diseases are only psychological. What is the treatment needed? It is only daiva chintana: filling the mind with the thought of God.

Never separate God from you. A man with dual mind is half-blind. You should practice the principle of oneness. There is only one God spoken of as many. Unity in diversity should be comprehended. Human quality should reflect Divinity. You should curb animal thoughts and breed Divine thoughts. There are two types of persons. Those with animal and human qualities always show hatred, jealousy, greed, and anSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 87

ger. The other type with human and divine qualities will always be happy, peaceful and full of love. They will always adhere to Truth. Without such quality, spiritual pursuits will be of no avail. You should always say to yourself, I am human, I am not animal.

Jealousy is contrary to human nature

Jealousy is rampant to a considerable extent amongst people today. This is the root cause of anger, hatred, and other evil qualities. If a person owns a car and travels in it, don't be jealous. Satisfy yourself that you have your legs to help you walk. If one is in a big house, don't get jealous. Be contented and happy with the dwelling place you have, though small. You should thus kill jealousy.

Jealousy is contrary to human nature. It is artificial and not pertaining to heart which is natural. Virtues and vices are reflections of your good and bad thoughts. Physical heart is on the left side while the spiritual heart is on the right. This will help you in the right direction. It is compassionate. But man breeds desires, which contaminate the heart. These should be checked and restrained to a limit. The body and all the sense organs have limitations, like the temperature, BP, capacity to see, hear etc. Veda says Na sreya niyamam vina (we should observe discipline in life.)

Limitations should be observed in everything. If you have enough minimum resources like food, shelter, and raiment, you should be satisfied. To maintain bodily health and get enough energy for your day-to-day activities you should take food. You should not indulge in overeating causing indigestion. If you exceed limit in anything, it may lead to dangerous consequences. If you realize that God is residing in your heart, you will not dare to indulge in bad activities at all. The evil qualities are Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 88

only acquired and are not in you. You are the embodiment of only love and compassion. The bad influences are just like passing clouds that obstruct the vision of the sun. Though the vision is blocked the sun is always shining. When clouds clear you can see the sun in its full effulgence. Similarly, the veils of ignorance covering the heart must also be cleared. One should cultivate patience, which is not commonly done in the present day life. Haste makes waste; waste begets worry. So one should develop patience to avoid worry.

Our mind is compared to the moon; when thoughts arise, it is eclipsing the real nature just as the moon is eclipsed by the shadow of the earth. If you keep the heart pure of the malaise of evil qualities, you will have no worry at all. You should not allow wicked thoughts to stick to you. In a pond, along with lotus flowers that bloom, you have leeches also thriving, which suck your blood. Lotus cannot sustain without water. So also, human life cannot sustain without love. But you should not let the leeches of worry breed in your heart of love. You can travel in a boat on the surface of water but should not allow water to enter into the boat. You should not allow attachment to worldly objects enter into your boat of life.

All are embodiments of God

You are all embodiments of God. God is all-pervasive.

You cannot classify some as divine and some others as not divine.

All are reflections of the same Atma, which is common to all. This Atmic Principle is also Sun-principle and Truth Principle (Surya Thathwa and Sathya Thathwa). When one follows sathya, prema (love) will be the reflection.

When you walk on the road, your shadow may fall on bad patches like drains, garbage, etc., but you are not affected by it. You should proceed unmindful of the path of the shadow. So also, you must follow your heart with good feelings unmindful of obstacles that may appear to come in the way. You should practice truth. You should be grateful to a person that came to your rescue in times of crisis. You should not forget the help done by others. There are two things that you should forget. Forget the harm done by others to you; otherwise you will be harboring vengeance to retaliate. Secondly, forget the help you did to others as that will make you expect reward from them and result in disappointment when it is not forthcoming. By observing these two norms, the purity of your heart will be maintained.

I am Atma. You are Atma

Adi Sankara said, There is no mother, father, no relatives or friends. The only reality is you. Therefore, be careful and awake to the Reality. You should not worry about the family, since these are passing clouds. Vyasa was a great sage who gave the eighteen Puranas, Itihasa, and Brahma-Sutra. But when his son Suka left the house in pursuit of Brahmajnana, Vyasa ran after him shouting, Oh son! Stop. Do not go away.

Suka stopped and told his father, I am not your son. You are not my father. I am Atma, you are Atma. Why are you under illusion? So, you must gradually give up all attachments and turn only to God. Having love in your heart, when you put on the divine glasses everything will be divine!

You are filled with worries throughout your life. Birth is a worry, life itself is a worry, family, child, failure, sickness, old age, death, mystery are all worries. These are all imaginary and psychological.

You say, My body, my mind, my hand, and my worry.

Does this not mean that you are separate from worry? It is your own creation. You are only one. You are Atma, the Truth.

Truth is God. There is only one God who is described in many ways. Everyone should realize this Truth by spiritual sadhana Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 90

(spiritual exercise). This involves sacrifice. The Vedas declare that you can attain immortality, not by any means other than sacrifice. You have to develop the spirit of sacrifice. Thyaga (sacrifice) is yoga. Doing your duty efficiently is yoga.

Throughout life you should go on doing your duty without aspiring for results. When you give to others, you should have the attitude you are not the giver and the other is not the receiver. It should be considered as an opportunity that is offered by the Divine.

Develop love. Follow truth and right conduct (sathya and dharma). You will shine as the Trinity of Brahma, Vishnu, and Maheswara. You should not feel that you have no powers. You should have self-confidence, which will lead to self-satisfaction, which in turn encourages self-sacrifice, resulting in Selfrealization. You must ensure that your self-confidence is unshakable.

What is self-confidence? Self is Atma. This is conscience.

Because of the senses, it is not realized. It should be associated with higher consciousness and not the consciousness that pertains to the senses. Man should try to realize the supreme heights of consciousness. Consciousness is uniformly present in all. It is chaithanya. When people turn toward worldly objects, which are transient, they pursue the negative path. When they turn toward the Self, it is positive path.

Realise the human values

The human body is composed of the five elements, five sheaths, and five vital airs (pancha bhootas, pancha koshas, and pancha pranas). Man has also got five faculties: sathya (truth), dharma (righteousness), santhi (peace), prema (love), and ahimsa (nonviolence), which are termed human values. Having been born as a human, it is a pity that one does not realize these values. Anger, hatred, and lust are not human valSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 91

ues at all. These are animal qualities unbecoming of a human being. With truthful thoughts one can become a good person. But one without thoughts becomes a sadhu (wise person). He will always be in peace. Thoughts are the root cause of asanthi (lack of peace).

First of the human values is sathya or truth. If this is absent, you lose one part of human nature. If you don't follow dharma, you lose two parts. If you lose santhi, you lose three parts. And when you have no prema, you have lost the entire human nature and the body will be one with all limbs amputated. Sathya, the first value, is like the head, and one who fails to follow truth will be a headless torso. Dharma is like the shoulder, and one without this will not be able to do anything, having become handicapped. He loses bhujia-balam. One without santhi is akin to a man without stomach. How can one take food, which is essential to provide energy for living, when there is no stomach? If you lose these three, the life is without love and becomes valueless. Love is essential for life. One without love is only a living corpse!

Spiritual heart is the seat of love

Nowadays, you find hatred rampant everywhere. There is no love. The seat of love is the spiritual heart, on the right of the body. Nobody bothers to recognize this. The absence of love leads to absence of unity. When there is no unity, there is no purity and without purity, divinity cannot be realised. Now what people generally do is to breed enmity and narrow feelings of community. If there is love, the divisive feelings of community and enmity will not be there. Even when one greets another with Hello, it is of low caliber and is only artificial and superficial, not coming from the heart. If you want to develop love, you must go on adding to your circle of Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 92 friends, loving and serving all. It should be expansion and not contraction. It may extend to cover the entire humanity.

Ekatma Sarvabhoothantharatma (the one Atma is there in all beings). This is the basis of the Brahma thathwa, (Principle of Divinity). When love is lost everything is lost in life.

Love in speech is Sathya.

Love in action is Dharma.

Love in thought is Santhi.

Love helps in the consummation of these three values.

Embodiments of Love! You are struggling only to acquire ephemeral worldly attainments such as wealth, fame, status, and position.

To foster human values, you have to control your senses. Merely studying scriptures, undertaking pilgrimages, and meeting saints will not help you to achieve realization. Buddha did all these spiritual exercises could not achieve the goal. Finally, he learnt that one has to turn his vision within with the help of the eye of wisdom to attain nirvana.

Buddha proclaimed that the word man should be interpreted thus:

M stands for Maya, which has to be controlled and got over.

A stands for Atma (understand the Atmic Principle).

N stands for Nirv na (attain liberation).

When you get over the illusion of maya and understand Atma you get nirvana (liberation). Therefore, Buddha preached sense control and eradication of desires as of primary importance. He advocated good vision, good speech, good hearing, good action, and good thoughts as essential for human beings.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 93

Whatever sadhana (spiritual exercises) one may do, it will be wasteful if there is no sense-control. You should know the divinity that is immanent in everyone. Though many are aware of this truth, they do not follow this in practice. For example, though everyone knows that one should speak the truth, they tell lies to escape from a problem or to have success in business. If you tell a lie to escape from a temporary problem, later on you will have to face a bigger permanent problem. You should control this temptation of telling a lie to get over a temporary situation.

Take the example of Harischandra. He sacrificed his kingdom, wife, son, and everything and he himself served as a slave in a crematorium. When Viswamitra gave an offer to Harischandra that he would give all his possessions if he told just one lie, Harischandra flatly refused to deviate from sathya even if it cost his life. That is why Lord Siva appeared before him and blessed him, giving him back his throne, reviving his dead son back to life, and restoring his wife, and making him rule the kingdom with renewed fame. Because of his extraordinary adherence to Truth, he is even now remembered as Sathya Harischandra.

Do not be afraid to speak the truth

Nowadays, people resort to telling lies, fearing that they may get into trouble otherwise. Why should you fear to speak the truth? You have to fear only when you commit mistakes. Today, there is fear rampant everywhere. Life is fear-stricken! Practice sathya (truth) and dharma (right conduct). If you practice these, you need not fear. When you aren't able to utter the truth, you may desist from speaking and keep silent.

Once, a sage was doing penance in quest of Truth. One day, Lord Siva wanted to test this sage. He came in the guise of a hunter who was chasing a deer. The deer passed through the place where the sage was seated. A while later, the hunter Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 94 approached the sage and asked him whether he had seen the deer that passed in that direction. The sage was in a dilemma. If he spoke the truth, the deer would be slain by the hunter. If he did not speak the truth, he will be infringing the code of conduct. So he prayed to the Lord to show him the correct path to save him in such a situation. Suddenly, vibration occurred in his mind and he told the hunter, The eyes see something. But they can't speak. The tongue speaks but cannot see. Under these circumstances, what can I say? Lord Siva appeared before him in his true form and blessed him with liberation.

So you should not utter untruth simply to escape a situation. If there is difficulty, be silent.

Conscience and consciousness

Conscience is limited as an adjunct of the body. How does this merge with Consciousness? You have a balloon with air inside. If you go on blowing more and more air into it, the walls become thinner, and finally it bursts. Then the air inside merges with the air outside. This is merger of the limited air, finite with the infinite.

You go on expanding your love. Don't confine it to your own circle of kith and kin. Then finally the merger with the infinite will occur. This is liberation.

Start the day with love,

Fill the day with love,

End the day with love,

This is the way to God.

Just as sugar, which is sweet, when mixed with water, tea, coffee, or anything, imparts sweetness to the dish, prema (love) also is sweet (madhuram) and will impart its sweetness to your words, actions, and thoughts. Love is the foundation, truth is the wall, santhi (peace) is the roof of your life's mansion. Truth based on love is the best dharma (righteousness).

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 95

Love is there in everyone naturally. Instead of directing it toward your wife, children and relatives, direct it toward God. By this diversion, you will get whatever you want. The heart is given by God. Offer it to Him. You need not have any fear. Surrender your body to Him, since this is also a gift of God. Every action should be underlined by prema (love). Do seva (selfless service) with love. You must cultivate the feeling that you belong to God.

God is your old friend

You need not glorify God because that may keep you at a distance from God. God is not new. He was there before your birth and He will be there eternally. Where is the need to glorify Him? You must take Him as your old friend. When you acquire friendship newly with a person, you speak to him with respectful words. When he becomes an old friend you treat him with liberty and privilege. Consider God also as an old friend, so that you can enjoy the liberty and be free with Him. Devotees think that they can please God by describing His glory. This is not true. You can melt His heart only with love. Plant the seeds of love and let the water of good qualities flow on the dry land so that the seeds will sprout and be fed by rain of love and grow into a tree sheltering all.

Embodiments of Love! You are all basically embodiments of love only. There is no one in the world without love. One will love at least his own kith and kin and another may love money. Anyway, the basis is love, which is divine. You are a combination of love, peace, truth, and God. You are mutually related to one another through the bondage of love in spiritual path. You must uphold dharma by truth and Love.

A seed to sprout should be sown in earth or field.

Sow the seed of love in the field of your heart.

It will grow as a tree and yield fruit of bliss.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 96

Prema thathwa is Jnana thathwa and Dharma thathwa. Understand and practice it.

4 April 1998

Kodaikanal

One of the principles of straight living is the practice of silence. For the voice of God can be heard in the region of your heart only when the tongue is stilled and the storm is stilled and the water is calm. There will no temptation for others to shout when you talk to them in whispers. Set the level of your tone yourself; as low as possible, as high as necessary to reach the outermost boundary of the circle you are addressing. Conserve sound, since it is the treasure of the element akasa (ether), an emanation from God Himself.

Render service with divine awareness

God shines with effulgence in the universe,

And the universe shines in God.

This is the friendship between

The Creator and the creation.

[Telugu Poem]

The universe is the effect and God is the cause. No one can fully understand the relationship between the Creator and the creation. The whole world is a combination of cause and effect. The universe is a manifestation of Divinity. Viswam Vishnu Swaroopam (All animate and inanimate objects of the world are divine). Though the forms are multifarious, all are essentially divine. We are not able to understand divinity, because we are carried away by the external physical appearances.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 98

Because of unlimited desires, man is suffering from unnecessary anxiety and gets frustrated with disappointment due to unfulfilled desires.

Divinity is the mixing of positive and negative. The world is positive and man is negative. What the modern man wants is good results having done bad deeds. How can you get mangoes when you have sown the seed of lime? As the seed, so is the tree; as the tree, so is the fruit.

When a child is born there is no chain of gold or diamond or gems around the neck. But Brahma provides the invisible chain (kantha mala) of results of past actions good and bad though no one may be aware of this. Human quality has become rare amongst people now; and animal quality is predominant.

Man is wasting the precious gift of human life in unworthy pursuits.

The basic alphabet is to know the human quality. Many people undertake spiritual sadhana (spiritual exercise) in order to realize divinity. If they don't understand human qualities, all these efforts become exercises in futility. Without learning the alphabet, how can one pick up the meaning and usage of words, phrases and sentences? Develop human values and unflinching faith in the Divine.

The basic alphabet is to know the human quality. Only after mastering this can you do other sadhanas. Even great saints, poets, and seers don't understand divinity and tread on the wrong path. They subject themselves to selfish pursuits and blame God when their aspirations are not fulfilled.

Even the great saint composer Thyagaraja, when he was once subjected to misery and suffering, doubted whether the sakthi (power of the Lord) had diminished. On reflection, he realized that the defect was only in his devotion and not in the power of the Lord, who had helped even a monkey to cross the Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 99 ocean, the army of monkeys to build a bridge across the sea and Lakshmana to serve Rama for 14 years and Bharata to worship Rama's divine sandals (padukas).

People should understand that there is no pleasure without pain and pain is only an interval between two pleasures. Whenever you get a painful experience you should have the firm faith that it is the foreboding for something good that you will be enjoying in the near future.

Manickavasagar, a minister with the Pandyan King, was sent on a mission to buy horses but was so influenced by a saint that he turned his attention Godward, resulting in spending his time and money in renovating a Siva temple. When the king summoned him and put him in prison, Manickavasagar was not at all sorry but started composing poems on Lord Siva, which were appreciated by the Lord Himself. These are still shining as Thiruvachakam, the most famous prayer to God sung even today in all Siva temples of Tamil Nadu.

When you spend your time thinking of God and chanting His name, you will never come to grief. Follow the dictum, "Sathyam vada, dharmam chara (speak the truth, practice righteousness). You are bound to have success always. Truth is common to all countries and all times. If you follow truth, which is God, you will invariably do only righteous work. Divine love will flow to such persons. This will ensure your doing sacred work. There cannot be love without dharma and dharma without love.

Follow the conscience

God is in your heart. Wherever you go and whatever you do, it is known to God even if you think none has noticed it. People start worrying about petty temporary things that are passing clouds and sometimes falter in faith and devotion. This is not correct. You should never give up devotion. Your good Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 100 work will beget God's grace without fail. Sin or merit comes only from your own deeds, not from outside.

God is in you only in the form of conscience. Follow the conscience. Some do not do so because of bodily attachment.

Gayathri mantra starts with Om Bhur Bhuvah Suvaha. Bhu represents materialization body. Bhuvah represents vibration or prana (life force). Suvaha represents radiation Prajnana or Atma. All these three radiation, vibration, and materialization are in the human body itself. Prajnanam is constant integrated awareness. You are all Brahman.

From ancient times, this sacred Bharat (India) has been proclaiming to the world the universal prayer Loka samasta sukhino bhavanthu (let the people all over the world be happy.) Just as the same electric current passes through all electric gadgets of various types and sizes, so also Atma is common in all beings. Stars are many, sky is one; cows are of many colors, milk is one; jewels are many, gold is one; beings are many, breath is one; countries are many, earth is one. Therefore, comprehend the One in many, the unity in diversity. You have only to do good deeds

Stop worrying. Discriminate between good and bad. Do not harm anyone. Then you can have peace.

Follow the conscience. That is the Divine in you. You are endowed with the precious gift of body with the sense organs and limbs. It is given to you to discharge your duties in the world. You have only to do sathkarma (good deeds). You should do things that are acceptable to God and not to please humans. Sath means God. You should have the company of God or proximity to God. Chith is awareness. The combination of Sath and Chith gives Ananda divine bliss.

Sath is sugar and Chith is water. If you mix them, the names of sugar and water go away and you get syrup. Sath is Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 101

Atma and Chith is body (deha); both combine to make up the person. Sath is Sivam and Chith is Parvathi. So, the combination is Ardhanareeshwara (half male and half female). Every one of us is Ardhanareeshwara. Fill up the tank of heart with love. This will flow through the taps of all sense organs and also the five pranas (vital airs). We refer to humanity as mankind. Does this not imply that as a human you should radiate kindness?

The essence of the Puranas

Sage Vyasa gave the essence of all eighteen Puranas as, "Paropakaraya punyaya, papaya Parapeedanam". In this, we generally take it that paropakara means helping others. Para means God, upa means near, kara means do, make efforts. The import is that you should make efforts to be near God. It is meritorious.

Papaya Parapeedanam means to see the many in One is sin. How can you avoid this? You have to see the One in many, or unity in diversity. This is the correct thing to do. That is to say: help ever, hurt never, perceiving Atma in all. If you are not able to do any help, sit down quietly and do no harm. See Divinity in all and do sacred activities. Don't waste the elements or misuse them. Being bound to the world with attachment to worldly objects is the negative approach. Make the positive approach: turning toward Divinity. The difference lies only in turning your mind. Turn to world, you get bound; turn to God, you get liberated.

God is without birth and death and is an eternal witness; you must strive hard to earn the love of God. One who receives the love of God will be earning the love of all. If you realise Love is God, you will not get attached to worldly things. No one can take the wealth of the world with him when he dies. This is a truth we have seen throughout the history of Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 102 mankind. Many great kings, emperors, saints and seers have left without taking anything. When you are born you don't bring anything with you.

Render service in divine awareness. In order to lead a fruitful and meaningful life, render service to mankind, which will take you nearer to God. In a football game, the six players on either side go on kicking the ball till it is sent to the goal. The goal of life consists of two posts: secular and spiritual. You must see that the ball does not go beyond the posts. It should be hit within the two posts. You are born as human with the goal that you should not be born again. You must live within the frames of secular and spiritual pursuits. Then only you will be attaining liberation.

The six bad qualities lust, anger, greed, desire, pride, and jealousy are on one side and good qualities truth, right conduct, peace, love, nonviolence, and sacrifice are on the other side. The game is between these two teams. Another lesson we learn from this game is that the football is kicked as long as it is inflated with air. If it is deflated, you take it in your hands.

You should say to yourself, I am not man, I am divine; I am not body, I am Atma. The body is like a dustbin of all foul matter and flesh and bones. You are Chaitanya or awareness. The instruments are negative and work through positive divinity. Tread along the divine path so that you can get peace. Let us experience peace and share it with others. Then we will be liberated, and the world will be happy.

Glory of womanhood

In this country of Bharat was born Savitri, the woman of chastity,

Who could fight with Yama, the God of Death, and bring back to life her dead husband.

In this country of Bharat was born Chandramathi, the paragon of virtue,

Who suffered the terrible ordeals of her husband, Harischandra.

Sita, the devoted consort of Rama

and the divine daughter of Mother Earth, Who demonstrated her chastity by coming out of blazing fire unscathed, was born in this Bharat.

Damayanthi, also a woman of pristine purity and chastity, who stood by her husband Nala

Through thick and thin, was born in the sacred land of Bharat.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 104

Embodiments of Love! This Bharat is the land of sanctity and chastity, which has given birth to such great women of exceptional character, who lent glory to Bharat as a nation of heroic women.

From ancient times, the presiding deity of Gayathri mantra, Gayathri Devi, has been worshipped as the Mother of the Vedas, which are held as the most ancient and authoritative scriptures of wisdom. Gayathri mantra originated in this holy land. The glory of this mantra has spread all over the world. The people of Bharat have worshipped Gayathri in several ways and have redeemed their lives. Gayathri has been worshipped in four forms: (1) Sathyavathi, (2) Angavathi, (3) Anyavathi, and (4) Nidhanavathi. All the four are equally sacred, and elicit limitless grace of the Divine.

The first one, Sathyavathi, signifies the existence of Atma in every being, just as butter is present in every drop of milk. It proclaims, Ekatma sarvabhutantaratma (One Atma is present in all beings). There is one Sath (truth), which is spoken of in many ways by the wise.

The second one is Angavathi, which signifies the five elements present in all beings and also the five senses of hearing, touch, vision, taste, and smell. There is nothing in this world that is not composed of the five elements. This Angavathi is pancha bhuta swarupa (the embodiment of the five basic elements).

The third one, Anyavathi, refers to the attributes of the different forms of the Divine. For example, Lord Siva is associated with trident, three eyes, etc. Vishnu is always described as having conch, discus, mace, and so on. We call him

Sankhachakragadapani.

Ganapathi is identified by his elephant face and big belly. He is first to be worshipped in all rituals. Saraswathi is described as one with veena in hand, through which she is Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 105 teaching the Divine sound principle as Nadabrahma. Thus signifies the different constituents of the forms of the Divine.

Nidhanavathi, the fourth, teaches the nine types of worship, namely, sravanam (hearing), keertanam (singing the glory of God), smaranam (thinking of the names of God), pada sevanam (service), vandanam (prostration), archanam (worship), dasyam (servitude), sakhyam (friendship), and atmanivedanam (surrender).

The world is symbolised by these four forms of Gayathri. That is why it is described as Nature (Prakriti), a female form (Sthri). We refer to our native country as motherland.

The importance attached to women in Bharat Bharat (India) has always accorded a high place to women as the upholders of all social virtues. The very fact that in mentioning the names of the divine couples like Vishnu and Lakshmi, Siva and Parvathi, the name of the consort is given the first place, as in Lakshmi Narayana, Uma Maheswara, shows what importance Bharatiyas (people of Bharat) attached to women.

People generally speak of women as the weaker sex. At last, now Bharatiyas recognize that women cannot be considered as weak. The woman in charge of the home plays the main role in bringing good name and fame to the home. Not only in respect of individual homes but also in the good name of the country and the world the woman plays the main role. From ancient times, woman has been accorded a high place in the society.

The scriptures have ascribed seven virtues to women as a class: sathya (truth), prema (love), dharma (righteousness), santhi (peace), sahana (tolerance), ananda (bliss), svanubhuti (spirituality).

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 106

The woman at home has been held in high esteem as Grihalakshmi, the goddess of prosperity of the home. When her husband faces difficulties, the wife readily shares the burden and is prepared to do anything, to undergo any suffering or even sacrifice her life for the welfare of her husband and the family. It is the woman of the home who is behind the good reputation of the home. The woman is the embodiment of sacrifice. Though the male counterpart may also do sacrifice, it will be with a selfish tinge, while the woman's sacrifice is absolutely selfless. Therefore, we should be proud of our women.

High status of women in ancient India

If Bharatiya culture and morality have survived despite long periods of foreign rule, it is to no small measure due to the courage and fortitude of the nation's women. As the earlier speaker, Dr. Geetha Reddy, has pointed out, women shine as soldiers with the weapons of sathya and dharma. They will not normally tell lies. There may be occasions when a few of them may do so unknowingly. But, by and large, they as a class uphold truth and righteous conduct. They follow the Vedic injunction, Sathyam vada, dharmam chara (speak the truth and practice righteousness).

Once, King Ianaka conducted a discussion regarding the most suitable person who should confer honour on him as a scholar. Even though there were great sages and highly learned scholars like Yajnavalkya in the assembly, he decided that Gargi was the fittest person from whom he should receive it. This is an example to prove how women have been held in high esteem from ancient times by ordinary citizens and kings too. While women were held in high esteem in ancient times, in later years there was a decline in their status, and even ascetics denied proper recognition to them.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 107

For instance, when sage Mathanga wanted to admit the great woman devotee Sabari into his ashram, many of his disciples who were renunciants raised objection. But the noble Mathanga recognized the extraordinary merit of Sabari's chastity, sincere devotion, and dedication toward pursuit of liberation and admitted her to his ashram. She finally proved to the world how devoted she was to Rama and how she got liberated after worshipping Him true to the teachings of sage Mathanga.

Women's role in home and society

Because of the evil influence of modern education, people consider women as toys and tend to treat them as puppets. The women have very auspicious and noble qualities. But men consider them as cooks to be confined to the kitchen and the four walls of the house. What they forget is that women not only manage the affairs of the family but also look after the health and well-being of all the members of the household.

The Government has now started conferring the honorific titles of Padmashri, Padmabhushan, etc. on its chosen citizens.

But women have had more respectable and valuable titles of Grihalakshmi (the goddess of prosperity of the home),

Dharmapathni

(devoted wife), Ardhangi (the better half), etc. They had these titles because of their good qualities and spirit of sacrifice. Questions are raised like who will look after the home if women go to offices and who will teach her children if the mother goes to school to teach other children, and so on. Some say that though the woman goes to work to solve the financial problem, bigger problems may have to be confronted by her going to work. But, in the modern world, it is necessary for the women to share the burden of maintaining the family with their husbands, so the women should also pursue studies as much as possible and take up suitable jobs to share the burden of the Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 108 family. It would smack of selfishness if the males prevent them from going to work for which they have acquired the requisite qualifications.

Women can control the whole world by themselves by virtue of their inherent qualities of love and spirit of sacrifice (prema bhava and thyaga bhava). Anger is alien to women, and it is more rampant in men. Though there may be instances when a woman may give vent to anger, such occasions are few and far between while in men the reverse is the case.

Savitri fought with the God of Death (Yama) and succeeded in getting her husband back to life. Can you find any instance in the scriptures or history where a husband was prepared to do sacrifice for his wife? If the wife is dead, he is ready to have a second marriage. Such unfair things are happening in the world in respect of women. That is why it was decided to celebrate not only 19 November but the 19th of every month as Mahila Day.

Women are heirs of our ancient culture

Women devotees in the Sai Movement are participating in large numbers enthusiastically in service activities such as helping the women of weaker sections to learn some useful trades like tailoring, etc., so that they can earn some money for the family and also spend their time usefully. If such activities are taken up all over the country, the country will prosper. This sacred work is typical of the culture of our ancient country. Women are the heirs of our ancient culture. Culture means refinement. Women are the torch-bearers of refinement and they are toiling for the emancipation of the nation.

Geetha Reddy spoke about the exploits of great women in the battlefield like Rani of Jhansi, who fought a terrific battle and gave up her life rather than surrendering to the foe when she was overpowered. She lived up to the teachings of the VeSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 109

das that only through sacrifice can one attain liberation. Even in this Kali Age, there may be some exceptional cases where women may not be following sathya and dharma. But mostly they live up to these ideals.

However, they are not encouraged to show their ability. Even in the family, they have to face obstacles and confrontations. If women are given due recognition and encouragement, they will shine with brilliance in all fields and will serve the house, country, and the entire world gloriously, contributing to the welfare of the entire humanity.

Women show dedication and sincerity in work

No doubt, there may be a few who may not be having good qualities characteristic of a woman. But in any class of society, this is inescapable. Take, for example, the orange fruit. In order to enjoy the juice you have to peel out the bitter portions of the outer skin and seeds. Even so, the fruit of human life has much bitter portions as outer skin. You have to remove this and weed out the seeds of bad qualities, so that you can taste the sweet juice inside.

If man follows the example of the woman to imbibe sacred and sacrificial qualities, the world will definitely improve. They say Udhvogam purusha lakshanam (a man is known by his job), as though only males can do jobs. It is a misnomer. Women are also doing all types of jobs equal to men. In fact, women work more sincerely and with dedication.

Recently, Swami questioned a director of the Indian Telephone Industries when he came to see Swami about the percentage of women employed in the industry. He said 99% of the employees were women and added that women did ten times better work than men. They don't stop or step out until the allotted work is completed. They have the work culture better than men.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 110

Nowhere in any sacred text is it stated that women should only cook and not do work like men.

As a matter of fact, even man has to learn cooking and house-keeping to help his wife in times of need. Awareness is life. Awareness means total knowledge and not partial knowledge. This enthusiasm is full in women. Even men should make effort to learn everything.

Women have hidden power immanent in them. You have to encourage them to exhibit their talents. An army commander, who makes all sepoys in the army shiver before him, shivers before his wife when she confronts him after he reaches home. Similarly, the principal of an institution, before whom the students may shiver with fear, may himself feel shiver going down his spine when confronted by his wife for an explanation why he came late.

God makes no distinctions

Generally, the term Purusha is taken to mean only males, basing on physical form. It is not true. Purusha represents the Atma or Chaitanya in all, which is in the body from top to toe. Purusharthas (prime goals of life) are four, namely, dharma, artha, kama, and moksha (right conduct, wealth, desire, and liberation). This does not apply only to males. It is common to both males and females.

Actually, women follow the fundamental Dharma truly, while men act selfishly. One who realizes divinity is Purusha. Swadharma means Atmadharma, not the dharma pertaining to the body. This is explained in the Bhagavad Gita. This was the ideal followed by the ancients.

Artha does not merely mean wealth or money. It means wealth of wisdom. Both men and women have the right to experience non-duality, which is real wisdom.

Kama is the desire not for worldly objects but for God.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 111

Moksha (liberation) is the fourth objective of life. Desire for moksha is common to all, whether men or women. Moksha is moha kshaya or shedding of bodily attachment. Without following the senses or mind, if you follow conscience, you can progress toward moksha.

Women should be encouraged to play their roles

In order to teach the subtleties of the scriptural texts, and encourage women to play their role in society, 19th is fixed as Mahila Day. Dharma can be made to occupy its position in society and restored to its pristine glory only by women. But men also have equal right and they should participate in this mighty and sacred effort so that the country will prosper. Even if men don't actively participate, they should at least let the women do the work without interference.

Krishna said in the Gita, Ananyaschinthayantho maam ye janah paryupasathe (whoever worships me: to the exclusion of all others), thesham: nithyabhiyukthanam yogakshemam

vahamyaham

(I look after the welfare of such unwavering devotees).

This is an assurance to one and all with no distinctions of any kind. Everyone should cultivate a similar sense of universality. The Divine is omnipresent. Differences based on caste, creed, sex, or nationality have to be given up. God has no distinctions. You should also practice this principle of equality.

God is everywhere. You cannot restrict Him to your narrow limits as though He is confined only to the form contained in your small picture frame. It is a folly to think so. He has thousands of forms and names. When you are doing Sahasranama archana (worshipping the thousand names of the Lord) you mention each of the thousand names and offer a flower. All are offered to only that one picture and not to thousands of pictures. All may refer to one God only. You may say Allah, Jesus, Rama or Krishna and so on. But all refer to only one God. If you say the form you worship is the only God, you are limiting the Infinite to a narrow finite entity.

Give up all religious differences. There is only one religion, that of love, There is only one caste, that of humanity.

There is only one language, that of the heart. I spoke earlier of the four parts of Gayathri and five elements. All are divine.

They have no caste or creed or any such difference.

If you realize the unity, you get purity and divinity. You are forgetting this and breed feelings of enmity and community.

God has no such distinction of community, nationality or sex. In ancient times, they did not have such differences. Do not give room for any such feelings. God is one and everyone in this world has equal right to enjoy His Grace.

Going beyond the mind

Discard bad company

Associate with good people,

Do always meritorious deeds,

Discriminate between what is eternal and

What is transient.

[Sanskrit sloka]

Embodiments of Love!

Today people are making efforts to know what happiness is and are inquiring only about the external objects of the world, but no one attempts to know himself. It is of no use knowing about everything in the world without knowing about oneself. The whole world is based only on I. When you ask someone, whether a millionaire or a pauper, Who are you? , the answer will invariably commence with I, I am so and so will be the usual answer. On further questioning one may say, I am a doctor or I am a businessman. The doctor refers to the work he does and the businessman refers to his profession. If you ask the name, the reply may come as Ramayya or Krishnayya.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 114

These are names assigned to the body. These are all transient. These do not represent the real you. You are a permanent entity.

Without understanding this truth, man is carried away by ephemeral things. He indulges only in selfish pursuits. He is of no use to the world. Everyone is born in society and brought up by society and is a limb of society. Only when one works for society can one be prosperous. Today everyone tries to live for himself without caring for the society.

Seek the source of bliss

You should not forget that self-confidence is the foundation of life. Just as you cannot build walls without foundation, you should lead a useful life based on self-confidence only. When this is firm, the superstructure of self-satisfaction and self-awareness may be raised, leading to self-realization or bliss, which is the goal of life. When man has forgotten the foundation, how can he expect happiness or peace?

Self is Atma. One must know this reality and discard attachment to the body, mind, and intellect. Atma is the master, recognize this and be the mastermind. Don't identify yourself with your instruments. All the organs or the instruments of the body are propelled by vibration, which originates from Atma. But for this, man can't survive.

It is a pity that man forgets this principle of Atma and is bereft of happiness. Men only pretend to be happy and smiling. But they are not really happy. God is the master of happiness, and unless you identify with the Divine, you cannot be happy. When you think of God and pray to Him, you should not ask for trivial things. You should ask for a thing that is not in you and is in God. It is bliss that isn't in you, and God is the embodiment of bliss. So, you should pray only for this.

People call themselves devotees and pray for fulfillment of their petty desires. They are not true devotees.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 115

God is described as, Nithyanandam Paramasukhadam,

Kevalam Jnanamurthim. So, you have to pray only for this bliss. If you inquire deeply, God is not away from you. Good and bad experiences emanate from you only. As you sow, so you reap. All resultant effects arise only from the cause of your actions. One who understands this truth alone can understand the Divine Principle.

In spite of many efforts and sadhana (spiritual exercise), one is not able to attain realisation of divinity because the vision is not good. Buddha investigated into this very deeply and found out in the end that mind is the stumbling block for progress toward realisation and became Amanaska, that is, he eliminated the obstacles of the mind and attained Nirvana (liberation).

He realized the Atma.

How to get rid of this mind? You can do this only by directing your attention to the intellect and start discriminating as to what is eternal and what is ephemeral.

You should be beyond feelings and desires

Discarding the pursuit of bookish knowledge, which is superficial, you must pursue discriminatory knowledge. In this pursuit, you should not discriminate for your own self interest. You should have fundamental discrimination for the welfare of all. This is broadmindedness and expansion of love. You should not have a narrow outlook, which is contraction of love. You say, hello, while greeting a friend. It is not reflecting your love. You should be hollow inside, that is beyond feelings and desires. You should proceed beyond mind.

Buddha contemplated for six years before he could achieve this: Buddhigrahyam Atheenathriyam. He went beyond the body, mind, and intellect to realise the Atma.

Today man is only acting as actors do in a cinema. Everything is only pretension, tantamount to hypocrisy. The term manava, referring to man, when analyzed gives the Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 116 meaning that man is one who overcomes illusion (ma is maya; na is no; va is conduct). What is maya? it is to consider a nonexistent thing as existing.

When you walk, your shadow is following you. Every action has reaction, resound, and reflection. Even your feelings and thoughts are reflected in your behavior. As long as you are filled with thoughts, you cannot make any progress on the spiritual path.

As I have explained in an earlier talk, the term man itself has to be interpreted as M (Maya), A (Atma), N (Nirvana), that is, only when you overcome maya you can realize the Atma and attain nirvana (liberation). This can be attained only by self-confidence, meaning confidence in the Atma and not in the instruments thereof.

Man is creestfallen because of his attachment to body. Today, man is beset with worries and appears crestfallen because of his attachment to body and worldly objects. He is devoting all his attention to his family, acquisition of wealth, and fame. If he just devotes a small fraction of this attention to God, he can get everything. Why don't you have this faith in the All-powerful Divine?

You are prepared to sacrifice for the sake of petty worldly things. If you do this for the sake of the Divine, you can get unlimited grace, by which you and your family and those for whom you care will have peace and happiness.

Bharatiyas (Indians) have always said their prayer for the happiness and welfare of the entire world. This is the correct prayer thaat you should make to God. You are also part of the world and you will also enjoy peace and happiness along with others.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 117

Cultivate divine thoughts

The term Bharata has a very sacred significance. Bha represents self-effulgent light. One who strives for seeking the self-effulgent Atma is a Bharatiya. In music also, the term Bharata has a unique significance: Bha indicates bhavam (feeling), ra indicates ragam (tune), and ta indicates talam (beat). The combination of bhava, raga, and tala in harmony makes music pleasant to hear. Similarly, in all aspects such as moral, ethical, and spiritual, divine thoughts should be pervading. This is the characteristic of the Bharatiyas.

God is Sath-Chith-Ananda. With the Sath (eternal feeling), you should seek Chith (spiritual wisdom). Then you get Ananda (bliss). You can get Ananda only from Ananda and not from a state of depression.

You should worship the Lord with love, since love is God and God is love. This gives you real happiness. Today people pretend as if they love while their inner feeling is not filled with love. Yad bhavam thath bhavathi. As your feelings, so will be the result. Now we find that feelings are different from expression.

You do not know when this body will cease to function in childhood, boyhood, youth or old age. Death is certain. Though the body is like a garbage dump full of fecal matter, we have to maintain it in good condition because it is also the temple of God, who resides therein.

The body by itself cannot help you to cross the ocean of life. You have to surrender to the Lord. From dawn to dusk, one is engaged only in pursuit of ways and means to fill the belly. People waste their life in this way without making effort to have a vision of the Divine. They stand in queue for a long time to buy a ticket for a movie or for travel in bus, but they don't like to stand in the queue for darshan of the Divine, who can confer such great bliss on them as nothing else can.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 118

Take the example of trees, which bear sweet fruits for others but do not themselves take; cows, which give milk to others but do not taste even a drop; rivers, which provide copious supply of water for the people and animals and birds too but do not take even a bit of it themselves. Man is only enjoying everything himself and is not doing anything for the society at large. Dharma protects those who protect it but will destroy those who attempt to destroy it!

Knock at the correct door

Embodiments of Love!

You have got this precious human life as Divine gift. Do not waste it by seeking worldly pleasures. Pray to God and serve God by serving humanity.

Adi Sankara was propagating advaita jnana (wisdom of nonduality) all through famous Bhaja Govindam verses. He said mere scholarship will not come to one's rescue at the time of death. One has to pray and worship God in order to get released from the bondage of birth and death. Devotion based on Prema Thathwa (Principal of Love) is essential for the emancipation of every human being. Advaita (Nonduality) is to see unity in diversity. [Swami held a silver tumbler in His hand.] This is a silver tumbler. The silver in this will be retained even after it is melted and made into a plate. The forms vary but silver is constant.

The Primordial Principle of Supreme Power is one. You may go on giving examples like jewels are many, gold is one; flowers are many, pooja is one; and so on. Though you offer different types of flowers to God, He likes only one flower that can never fade, that is the flower of your heart (hridaya pushpam).

Since hridaya is the altar of the Lord, this is what he relishes most. You need food, clothing, and shelter for living. But you should not forget that the basis for all these is the DiSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 119 vine. Think constantly of the Divine even when immersed in worldly work.

Pray to God with pure heart with a mind bereft of desires. Do not pray for the fulfillment of petty desires. Love God with a desireless heart. How did Sabari get the grace of Rama, who gave her liberation? How did Jatayu enjoy the privilege of dying on the lap of the Lord? They did not pray for petty things. Instead of asking for a particular type of jewel like aring or a chain, ask for gold. You can make any jewel out of it.

Pray for love of God and you will get love

Forgetting the declaration and assurance given by the Lord you behave contrary to His direction. God proclaimed,

Ask and it shall be given,

Search and you will find,

Knock and the door will be opened.

You are not asking the right source. You are asking the world and not God, the Creator of the world. How can you get a response? You are also not searching for the right thing. You are searching only for wealth and position, which are unworthy and transient. At what door are you knocking? The door of grief. How can you get ananda (bliss)? If you comply with the directions of the Divine correctly, you will get appropriate results. If you open the door of your heart and love God, you get what you need. Do not ask for any petty boon. Ask for God Himself. He can give you anything and everything you need.

Pray for love of God. You will get love. Through Divine love you will have prosperity here and hereafter.

We are all One

The company of good people will be very hard to get

While you have a lot of wicked ones all around the world

There are pebbles available in plenty

But precious gems and diamonds are extremely rare to get.

Embodiments of Love! In this universe, there are lakhs of species of living beings, but the human is the noblest and the highest species. If man loses money, he can get it back; if he loses a friend he can get another; if he loses his wife, even then he can re-marry and have another wife; if he loses his share of land, he can get another, but he cannot get back the body once it is lost. Man does not realize the high value of precious human life and is misusing it in many ways.

You must realize that once a night is passed, it won't come back. Once the river merges in the ocean, it cannot come back. When you eat a fruit, you cannot get it back in its original form. Man does not know his own value. He has several capacities and faculties.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 121

The first gift that a man possesses is mathi (intellect). The second is sthithi (position). The third one is paristhithi (circumstance), and the fourth is gathi (destiny). These constitute his sampathi (possessions).

Maintain mental balance to act properly

All things that are happening to man depend on his destiny alone. The mind is based on our own conduct, and it shapes our destiny. Mathi should be sound. Everything else depends on sthithi and sampathi. When one understands this, one can know one's destiny. Everyone has to maintain mental balance to act properly.

Suppose a person has a knife in hand. They can cut vegetables, cook food, and consume it to appease hunger. On the other hand, if the person cuts the throat of another person it will lead to disastrous consequences. You must know the proper method to use any material. You must be aware of the different types of sakthi (power) with which you are gifted. Human life can be compared to a big clock containing three needles (since the clock has hour, minute, and second hands) representing years, months, and days. They are moving in perfect union, and they decide your life span.

In spite of having these three regulatory factors, man is not leading a good life. Thirty days make a month, and 12 months make one year. You must know how to pass every day in the best possible way without wasting precious time. You must also know that everything happens according to the Divine Will.

The Divine cannot be expected to act according to your thoughts or desires. God is fully aware of the needs of the family, country, and world at large and confers the requisite benefits at the appropriate time.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 122

Let us take an example of how one gift of nature proves beneficial to some people, while it is not so for some others. Suppose a marriage function is being celebrated in one house, the family prays for the rain to stop to facilitate them. At the same time, a neighbor who has cultivable land, which is dry, prays for the rain to continue to pour in torrents to facilitate his cultivation of the land. God is impartial and will not submit to a particular individual's needs. He weighs the needs of all and maintains a balance.

,The common malaise of all humanity

Generally all people are suffering from an incurable disease.

It may be to a lesser degree in some while more severe in others. The difference is only in the severity, but all are suffering from this. It cannot be cured even by expert medical treatment by experienced doctors. This disease is ego .

Where is the need to be egotistic for an ordinary mortal?

When you consider your position in comparison to the entire world you are just an infinitesimal speck. In the world map, India is a small country, and Tamil Nadu is a part of this. In Tamil Nadu, Kodaikanal can be spotted only as a tiny dot. In this, what is your position as an individual?

When you analyze in this manner, you will find you are one of no consequence at all. If you think you are so big, inflated with ego, it is only sheer ignorance. If one identifies themselves with divinity, there will be no room for ego. All are divine in this world, and you are also one of the several billions of people. When you realize this truth, where is the scope for ego? It is due to ignorance that one feels egoistic and faces lots of problems because of this.

Thoughts lead to karma (action) and create feelings, which contribute to sheelam (character). Character makes a man deserving to be termed really human. So, one must develop character by having sacred thoughts and good deeds. For this, the Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 123 primary requisite is control of the mind, which is the source of thoughts.

World is the effect for which God is the cause

The term for thought in Sanskrit is sankalpa, which means it is arising from heart, the seat of God (Sam). Salokhya saroopya, sameepya and savyuja are all related to this Sam, which is synonymous with Sath. Sath is changeless Truth (Saswatham).

When thoughts are good and based on the Divine, the stithi or state of man will be good. Sampathi does not mean worldly or physical comforts. It comprises sath vichar and sath sankalpa (good inquiry and good thoughts). Such good thoughts based on the changeless Truth will come only from merits acquired in previous lives (poorva punya).

This human birth itself is attained after innumerable lives of lower species. Since this is so, why should you venture to commit sinful deeds? It is your bad vision of the external world that makes you commit sins. So, you should develop samyak drishti (good vision). You should look upon the world as the manifestation of the Divine (viswam Vishnu swaroopam). The world is the effect for which cause is God.

The whole universe is a phenomenon of cause and effect. It is foolish to look only at the external world considering it as mere jada (matter). You must see the reality behind the entire creation. If you see with divine vision, everything will be divine. (Sarvam Vishnumayam Jagath)

You see Anil Kumar wearing glasses (spectacles). They appear to be an obstacle to his eyes but they help him to see more clearly. Similarly, if you wear glasses of love, you will be able to see the Divine in everything, though they may appear to be obstructing like the spectacles.

The main life principle is prema (love), without which there will be no love between mother and child, between husSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 124 band and wife, or between friends. Love elevates the individual from human level to divinity. Now, man limits his love to his own kith and kin and other possessions, thus making it narrow. It should be expanded to cover all fellow beings. If love occupies the single seated chair of heart, there will be no room for jealousy, hatred, and other such evil feelings.

The great queen Madalasa used to sing a lullaby to her children inspiring them to realize the Atma, which was their reality, and cast off attachment to body. Even while the children were in the cradle, she taught them Atmajnana. She sent her three children to the forest to learn scriptures when they came of age. By the time she was about to send her fourth son also, her husband intervened and prevented her from doing so, pleading that if he also was sent away there would be no heir to the throne.

She pleaded with her husband that she was only teaching them the Principle of Atma based on Omkara, the Primordial Sound, to make them aware of its greatness, which is hailed by people of all the seven worlds. She said she was singing not a lullaby of world, which was negative, but the Truth related to God, which is positive.

How to realise Divinity

You have to stick to Daiwathwa (Divine Consciousness) even while you are engaged in worldly activities. In spite of a lapse of millions of years, man is not yet able to understand his reality. How can he realise Divinity? If you develop human qualities, you can easily realise Divinity.

The Veda teaches "Sathyam vada, dharmam chara (speak the truth, adhere to righteousness). Now, people kill truth and ignore righteousness. Santhi (peace) and prema (love) are reduced to narrowest limits. All four sathya, dharma, santhi, and prema must be put in unison for the world and humanity to thrive.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 125

If you study how these lights here are functioning, you will find that the current passes through the wire and illuminates the bulb. Sathya (truth) is the current, dharma is the wire, and santhi is the bulb; when the current flows to the bulb it burns brightly. This light is love (prema). You will see that sathya, dharma, and santhi together form the constituents for prema. Food, water, and energy are the three aspects of God. In ancient days they used to say, before taking food, annam Brahma (food is God), raso Vishnu (water is God), and sakthi Eswara (energy is God). They used to offer such prayers on conceiving food, water, and energy as the three aspects of God Brahma, Vishnu and Eswara.

The gross portion of the food nourishes the body (kaayam); the subtle portion nourishes the mind (manas); and the more subtle portion nourishes the power of speech (vaak). Thus, all three constituents mano, vaak, kaayam mind, speech, body are sustained by food. All these three combine to make the full personality of man. Harmony in these three thought, word, and deed makes one a mahatma. Disparity in these three makes a man duratma (wicked person).

Manasyekam vachasyekam

Karmanyekam mahatmanam

Manasyanyam vachasyanyam

Karmanyam duratmanam

In the latter, the current of sathya is absent, so it will not shine. When there is harmony, current will not fail. You have a main switch in a house, which controls all other switches. If it is put off, the lights will go off. In the body, the main switch is the heart; when one has love in the heart, all one's thoughts, words, and actions will shine brightly with love.

Therefore, you should fill the heart with love and share with others. When you fill the tank of heart with truth and righteousness, all limbs of the body and sense organs, functioning as taps, will radiate the same truth and righteousness.

Love is selfless and self is lovelessness. Love gives and forgives; self gets and forgets. When love underlies your activity, everything will be perfect.

Love is the essential basis for the spiritual path

Embodiments of Love! Develop love in the main switch the heart. That is real sadhana (spiritual discipline). This Prema Sakthi will achieve anything. Love is the essential basis for the spiritual path. The other sadhanas, like meditation, japa etc., are all good, but without love they are of no use.

What is meditation? It is required for every action walking, talking, writing, reading, and even sleeping. You have to concentrate for everything.

Life is a race. The saying is, slow and steady wins the race. This is quite apt for the race of life. Haste makes waste and waste makes worry. So you should go slow and steady without faltering or wavering. Whatever you do, and even when you talk to someone, consider it as doing God's work. If you practice this way, you can have peace.

Shreyohi jnanam abhyasath

Jnanath dhyanam vishishyate

Dhyanath karmaphala thyagath

Thyagath santhir anatharam.

Lord Krishna says in the Gita that the sacrifice of the fruits of action is superior even to jnana and meditation. From sacrifice comes peace immediately.

People talk of yoga. Patanjali defined yoga as control of mind and senses. Water has the nature to flow down, while fire in a pit goes upward. Worldly desires are like water and pull you down. They are negative.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 127

Brotherhood of man and Fatherhood of God

Positive wisdom is that of Atma, which is like fire. If you understand this truth, you will not be after worldly desires. The body is given to you to do karma (action) and realise God. By subjecting body to pain by fasting, etc., you cannot gain anything. You have to keep the body trim to realise the Divine.

You must practice the sadhana of unification of thought, word, and deed. If you achieve this with love in your heart, it itself is a good penance. Do everything as an offering to God and to please God. There is no greater worship than doing your duty with love, as an offering to God. God is infinite and vast. Do not limit Him into a small frame. Widen your vision. Make your love expand to cover the whole humanity. Realise all beings as divine. Then you realize all are one.

Go on adding I plus you, I plus you, and it will become

We. Then go on adding We plus W we are all one. All are children of God. This is brotherhood of man and fatherhood of God.

The Gita says: All beings of the world are part of My Eternal Self. All beings are therefore eternal. All are manifestations of the Divine. Though forms are different, Atma is one. The Prema Thathwa (Principle of Love) should be developed. God is Trigunarahitha (Nithyanandam Paramasukhadam).

Why attribute qualities to God? Love is the most essential nature of the Lord. It is not an attribute. Practice love in speech, feeling, and action. If everyone practiced love, there will be no agitation in the world. Hatred will be eliminated.

Love of God with service to society

Without charitable disposition

Not following the principles of righteous conduct,

Devoid of compassion and love,

Man is ruining himself.

[Telugu Poem]

Embodiments of Love! In this wide world amongst the vast humanity, we find three types of people: pushti jivas, samashti jivas, and pravaha jivas.

The first type, pushti jivas, are those who, because of meritorious deeds in past lives enjoy the grace of the Divine, though they do not engage themselves now in auspicious rites, study of scriptures, contact with saints, undertaking pilgrimages, etc. The merit of past lives makes them always happy in the company of the Divine. They dance in delight, experiencing divine bendiction. Just as you don't need firewood after the Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 129

cookng is finished, these people don't need any spiritual sadhanas (spiritual exercises), since they have already attained the goal of all sadhanas. You may not find this type of person doing any spiritual exercises. Be they are leading a true life and experience Brahmananda, Nityananda, Advaitananda, and Paramananda. There is no need for such a person to undertake any spiritual pursuit.

The second type, samashti jivas, read a lot of scriptural texts and are keen on earning name and fame a scholars. Since they become proud of their scholarship, they do not make themselves fit to be recipients of divine grace. When they go on reading till the end of their lives, where is the time for practising the ideals? They may participate in seminars and meet noble souls, but they are far away from God's grace because they have no time to think of God and enshrine him in their hearts. This is the plight of this second type of person, the samashti jivas.

Pravaha person has no chance of realising the Divine. The third type, classified as pravaha jivas, are always engaged in mundane activities in pursuit of physical comforts and worldly pleasures. They do not think of God and think that they are capable of achieving whatever they want. At least, wicked people think of God in difficult situations. The pravaha persons have no chance of realising the Divine at all. They are born again and again. They have no chance of liberation. Some may have good feelings latent in them. But they don't join satsang and don't adhere to good conduct and righteous action, though some may be conscious of the Divine residing in their heart. There is a small story to exemplify some exceptional cases of this type of person.

There was a family of wife and husband, of whom the wife ws very devoted to God and was always in thought of the Divine. She worried that her husband never uttered the name of Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 130

God, even once. She believed in the truth that uttering the name of God was the best way to get liberation and it was a boat to cross the ocean of life. She was praying to God, entreating Him to show mercy on her and make her husband utter God's name. She even questioned the Lord as to whether it was her misfortune to have such a husband, and as Compassionate One, could He not transform her husband into a devotee like her?

The same night when she was contemplating on such entreaties to God, she heard her husband suddenly utter, Rama, Rama, in his sleep. Her joy knew no bounds when she heard her husband utter Rama's name, which he had never done before. She thought her prayer to God was answered.

She got up earlier than usual in the morning and decorated the entrance to her house with rangoli and arranged for Mangala Vadya to be played. When the husband got up, he was surprised to see the decorations and hear the auspicious music, and he was wondering whether it was a festival day. When he asked his wife the cause for these extraordinary arrangements made by her, she said that all along he had never uttered God's name, but the previous night he said Rama, Rama, in his sleep. So, she was profoundly happy and decided to celebrate this event in a befitting manner.

On hearing this, the husband got perplexed and exclaimed, Have I let out the Lord enshrined in my heart so carefully all along? What a pity! So saying, he breathed his last.

Start sadhana at an early age

In this way, pravaha persons may not be uttering God's name or doing external worship, but they may have the thought of God enshrined in their heart. Some among the modern youth are singing bhajans and participating in nagarsankirthan. Looking at this, some elders are questioning, Why should these youth take up this sort of activity in this age? They Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 131 should do this only after they retire from service, in their old age. This is totally wrong. Remembering God and chanting His name should be done without break always, at all places and in all situations Sarvada Sarvakaleshu Sarvatra Harichinthanam.

There is no restriction of time or place for chanting the divine name.

You cannot say when, where, and how the end will come and the mortal coil will have to be cast off. You will not be able to chant the name at that moment.

(Swami sang a song to convey that it was impossible to think of God when the messengers of death were tightening their noose around your neck, the body was taken out, and the wives and relatives were crying. Only the good deeds that you have done previously would come to your rescue. So, you should start doing meritorious deeds from the early part of your life.)

There was a priest in a temple who, by virtue of his long experience, used to hold the Arathi in one hand and ring the bell with the other hand. When he passed away, a new priest succeeded him. But this priest could not do both things simultaneously.

If one hand was handing the bell to ring, the other hand could not wave the Arthi. If Arthi was done properly, the bell could not be made to ring. This was due to lack of practice.

So, the practice of chanting of God's name should be started from an early age.

Undertake love of God and service to society

You may be aware of the way a soldier in the army has to take training in all aspects before he can be fit to take part in active service at the front. Anyone joining the armed forces, whether a dhobi, cook, or sepoy, has to qualify compulsorily in two things. One is handling a rifle and the other is marching drill. Whatever may be one's avocation in the army, one should have to undergo these two parts of the training.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 132

Similarly, in the spiritual field, one should compulsorily undertake two things, namely, love of God and service to society. These are the two prime components of divine life. They help in the realisation of the Divine.

You have to take up the practice at an early age so that you can have the realisation before you leave the world. You do not know when the end will come. You should be prepared for it at all times. The photographer asks you to be ready when he snaps your picture, and he gives you time to ready yourself. But the divine cameraman will not give you any notice. You should always be ready to meet the situation.

If you engage yourself in bhajan and daivachintanam keerthanam and smaranam you will not be caught unawares.

Suppose you have a master who has an Alsatian dog at the gate and he himself is at the first floor. There are two ways of reaching him. One way is to befriend the dog and enter the house; the other way is to call out to the master from the ground in a loud voice so that he will come out and allow you to come in by controlling the dog. Maya (illusion) is the dog. God is the master. You either control the maya or chant His name and sing His glory so that He will come down. You have to treasure Him in our heart, since the heart is His altar.

God is Hridayanivasa

Draupadi prayed to Krishna when she was humiliated in Duryodhana's court. She said, Oh, Dwaraka Vasa, Brindavan Sanchara, help me! She could not get a response, and she became tired. Finally, she pleaded in a faint voice, Oh Hridayanivasa (Resident of my heart)! Will you not come to my rescue? Immediately, Krishna saved her from her trouble.

On a later occasion, she asked Krishna why He took such a long time to respond when she was in distress and prayed to Him sincerely. Krishna responded, You said, Dwaraka Vasa, Brindavan Sanchara, etc. I had to respect your words, so I had Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 133 to go from your heart all the way to Dwaraka and Brindavan, which are so far away, and I don't have a plane to go fast.

When you said, Hridayanivasa, where I am actually residing, I came to your help instantaneously.

So, everyone should install the Divine in the heart in full faith. It is not correct to think that He is only in a mosque, church, or temple. The seat of God is the devotee's heart. That is why the Gita says, Pasyanapicha na pasyathi (though he sees, yet he is not conscious of God in the heart).

Everything you see outside is a reflection of the inner being.

Sarvathah Panipadam thath Sarvathokshi Siromukham.

All feet, hands, eyes, heads are all His. What does this mean?

It means that He is in every being.

God manifests according to your feeling

One devotee was asking God, You say You are in me, above me, below me. How is that You are not protecting me?

God answers, I am always in you, around you. Don't look for Me externally.

The devotee asked, Are You behind me really?

Replied the Lord, My shadow is your body.

When the devotee turned around to see whether God behind, he could not see Him. He asked, Are You speaking the truth? I don't find You.

God replied, When you turn back, I too have to turn back, So, you could not see Me. You have not understood the Truth.

Suppose you stand before a chair; the chair is in front of you. If you turn around, the chair is at your back. God manifests according to your bhava (feeling). When you pray, Can't you hear my prayers? , you visualise Him hearing with His ears. When you pray, Can't You see my suffering? , you see only His eyes. When you pray, Why don't you stay with me? , you hear His footsteps. You have to maintain perfect silence.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 134

Listen to the sound of Om from within

The ancient seers spent their time in listening to the voice of God, which is Pranava. Even now, you can experience this. Close your ears gently. You will hear the sound Om from within.

God proclaims, Oh devotee, you are seeing with physical eyes and listening with physical ears. Be in utter silence. You can listen to the footsteps of God. Such holy paths have been shown by great devotees. One who doesn't understand this is in ignorance.

Surdas, a great devotee of Krsihna, once went after a womand and follwed her to her home. Her husband chastised him, saying, Why have you been given eyes? Is it for this unholy pursuit of another man's wife? Why don't you concentrate on God?

Immediately, Surdas got enlightened and pierced his eyes with thorns of a lime tree close by. He proceeded to Dwaraka to Krishna's temple. On his way, he was about to fall into a well. Krsihna came in the form of a cowherd boy and caught hold of his hand and asked him, Where are you going? .

Surdas said, I am going to Dwarka.

Krishna said, I will show you the way and lead you.

Next day, they rested in a wayside hut. Krishna wanted to go, but Surdas wouldn't leave him. Surdas put his hand over the boy while sleeping and asked the boy to put his hand on him. Sparshanam papanasam. Because of this divine touch, he was released from all his sins.

Then Krishna told Surdas, I am Krishna, to whom you always pray. I played this drama to show you My form. He touched Surdas's eyes, and Surdas got back his sight, beheld the divine form, and got into blissful ecstasy. When Krishna asked him to retain his vision, Surdas said, I have seen You; I don't want to see anything else with these eyes. I don't want Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 135

my sight. Many people have eyes. Have they seen you? Many have ears; they are not fortunate to hear your melodious music. I want only jnanachaksus (eyes of knowledge).

Krishna kept His hand on the head of Surdas, and Surdas merged with the Divine.

No one can know when God will bless! You must consider everything as God's gift and take with pleasure. There was a king who cut his finger, and the minister said, It is for good. The king got annoyed and ordered the minister to be sent to prison. The minister accepted it with a smile, saying, It is also for my good. Later on, it was proved true because, when the king went alone to a forest for hunting, he was caught by tribals to be given for sacrifice. Because the king's body was not perfect, with a portion of a finger absent, he was saved. Later, the minister said that if he was not in prison, he would have accompanied

the king and could have been sacrificed.

Whatever God does is for the good of the devotees. He is selfless. When you have the wish-fulfilling tree in your backyard, why do you go in search of fruits? Pure thoughts of love should flow from you to God. Then, love of God will flow to you. When you post a registered letter to another person, the proof of this letter having reached the addressee is the acknowledgement

slip you get. The proof of sincerity of your love will be the flow of God's grace to you.

With intense longing for God's grace, you must wait patiently, chanting His name ceaselessly. You will surely perceive God's form manifesting before you.

Love and surrender

The Vedas, sacred texts, and other scriptures Cannot help man to cut off the curtain of illusion.

While man is in front of the curtain, God is behind it.

The cause is behind and the Effect is in front of the curtain.

[Telugu Poem]

Embodiments of Love!

From ancient times, Bharat (India) has treasured the spiritual wealth and spread the message of Loka samastha sukhino bhavanthu all over the world, praying that all people in the world should be happy. Today, man has attained considerable progress in science and technology, but moral values and righteous conduct are on the decline. He has become the slave of selfishness. Whatever one thinks, speaks, or does is based only on self-interest. Human quality has become rare among men, and animal quality is predominant.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 137

Value of discipline

Human life is extremely sacred, and it is a matter of shame that man is not living up to his ideals. Man today lives as he likes without following any discipline. Discipline is needed in every aspect to maintain the right course of life: Na sreya niyamam vina. A river has two banks. Without the banks, the river may flow in all directions, flooding the fields and villages and causing untold hardship and disaster. If it has banks to regulate the course of flow, it will be useful for irrigation. In the similar manner, the river of life has to be contained between the two banks of eight-lettered axioms. One is Straddhavan labhate jnanam and the other is Samsayatma vinasayathi. Both declarations are made by Lord Krishna in the Bhagavad Gita. The first one means, it is only by faith that one attains wisdom, and the second one means, one who doubts will perish. As long as one has doubt, one cannot achieve anything. He who has no doubt and has full faith can achieve anything. The river of human life flowing between these two banks reaches the goal successfully.

A tree that needs water is provided water only at the root.

Though the root cannot be visible to your eyes because it is buried under the earth, it is the basis for the tree to thrive. If the root is dry, the tree becomes dead. So, you have to safeguard the root.

Similarly, you have to safeguard the root of life, i.e. you need firm faith in the Self. Therefore, these two eight-lettered axioms are the essential needs of life. Samsayatma vinasayathi is comparable to the root, and Straddhavan labhate jnanam is comparable to the tree of life. You have branches, leaves, and components of a tree. The purpose of planting a sapling is to get fruit from the tree. The goal of human life is purna jnana (perfect knowledge). Total faith is needed to achieve this goal.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 138

Three aspects of Divinity

One should expand the broad feelings of the heart to foster the tree of life to grow and retain its vitality. That is why ancient teachers used to pray, Annam Brahma, Raso Vishnu, Vak Maheswara. This was the prayer chanted by the ancient seers before taking food. Food maintains the energy of the body by its essence getting distributed to all parts of the body. To safeguard the functions of all the limbs and sense organs, the mind has to be in fine fettle. For this vak (speech) should be truthful and purposeful. Therefore, these three important requisites for human life, i.e. body, mind and speech (mano-vak-kyam) are treated as the three aspects of divinity Brahma, Vishnu and Maheswara.

Vishnu is all pervasive; so also mind is all-pervasive. It is said "Manomoolam idam jagath". Maheswara represents sabda or vak (sound). That is why God is described first as Sabda Brahmayi, then Characharamayi, Iyothirmayi, Vangmayi, Nithyanandamayi, Parathparamayi, Mayamayi, and Srimayi. By expansion of love, we acquire all eight types of divinity. Everyone should realize the divinity within. Only then may they be considered to lead a true life.

The body is not just the physical one consisting of all the limbs and organs. God has gifted this body to man to discharge his dharmic duties. The mind creates the bhavam (feeling or thought), which is expressed through the tongue in words and done by the limbs in action. Human life is a combination of the functions of thought, speech, and action. The Divine is manifest in man, though many do not realize this.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 139

Can you limit the One, who created the universe, within a frame of picture?

When even demi-gods cannot understand Him, how can a mere mortal understand?

What name can you give the One, who manifests in all names and forms?

What can you offer to the supreme power who has the universe as His stomach?

One whose effulgence is equal to crores of suns, what light can you use for illuminating Him?

The entire world is a combination of seer and seen

We cannot worship such a supreme power in narrow ways.

Even though He is so vast, you can still comprehend Him in the human heart just as you see the outside world in a small mirror. He is Hridayavasi. Who are you? Who is He? If you enquire, 'I', the inner self, is the seer and all this is the seen.

The entire world is a combination of seer and seen. Many people are sitting in this Hall. 'I' am the seer. All the people are seen and My body itself is seen by Me. So, 'I' the seer is different from the body that is seen. 'I' is the eternal witness. Let us not be carried away by the 'seen'.

We must make efforts to perceive the 'seer'. We cannot do this with physical eyes. We have to develop the 'wisdom eye' (Jnana Chakshu) in order to see the 'seer'. It is only through inner vision that you can attain liberation and not by your physical vision. The Chaithanya (Awareness Principle) is prevalent all over the world. But we ignore the Chaithanya and visualize jada (inert).

To understand the truth of spirituality, you may take the example of the animals, which get sanctity and become objects of worship when they are associated with the Divine. The snake, when it is around the neck of Lord Siva, is worshipped by all. When it is encountered elsewhere, people do not hesiSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 140

tate to kill it. Similarly, the mouse, which is the vehicle of Vinayaka, is an object of worship when it is with Vinayaka, but when it is seen in your house, you trap it and try to do away with it. When we see the bull made of stone in a Siva temple, we worship it. But when we see a bull in daily life, we do not hesitate even to beat it. This teaches the lesson that when we are in the company of God, we are held in high esteem.

Develop strong faith that all forms are His Sahasraseersha Purushaha sahasraksha sahasrapad (just as the limbs are a part of our body, we are all the limbs of the body of cosmic form). The cosmic form is of thousands of heads, feet, hands, and eyes. All forms are His. If we develop strong faith in this, we can understand divinity in its true spirit.

Is it possible to describe You with the limited human intellect?

You are minuter than atom and mightier than the macrocosm.

You are present in a subtle form

in all the 84-lakh species.

You are pervading everywhere.

Who can describe You?

There is no question of your searching for truth. It is everywhere and in everyone. When you have light in your own house, where is the need for going to your neighbor to borrow a lamp? Develop the infinite light of love within yourself.

The light of life is shining with effulgence within you. In order to see a light, you do not need another light. In order to see the moon, you do not need a torch. Similarly, there is no need for any other light to realize the self-effulgent Atma within. The light of life is divinity. God says you are a fragment of His Eternal Self. Every individual is the spark of the Divine.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 141

The three aspects of Saranagathi

Sachithanandam, who spoke earlier, mentioned about saranagathi (surrender). Surrender involves three entities: one is the person who surrenders the other the one to whom he surrenders, and the third is the act of surrender. If we analyze carefully in the spiritual sense, you have a person, mirror, and reflection. When you remove the mirror, the reflection is automatically gone. So, you find three minus one becomes one only. It is the person only that remains.

Similarly, prakriti (world) is the mirror, and jeeva (individual) is the reflection of the Divine. When prakriti, the mirror, is removed, what remains is only one, that is, the Divine.

The individual is only a reflection. When your vision is towards prakriti (world), you have duality. When your vision is turned inward; you are One, that is, God and nothing else.

Even Prakriti is the creation of God. When everything is divine, there is no second.

This divine is nothing but love, which is in all beings. Love is God, live in love. It has no beginning and no end. It is infinite;

you cannot fragment it. All spiritual paths are paths of love. The goal is also love. It is that which always exists in this world. Never give up love at any time.

In earthly parlance, jealousy, pride, etc. are evil attributes.

But if you see them all with love, you will never have hatred.

There is no question of hatred when there is only one and not two. The current of Atma is flowing in all beings as love; you have to develop the spirit of love and expand it.

You should not care about names and forms. See only the unity in the diverse forms and names. You will realize the Divine.

Just as the bhramara (humming butterfly) injects the humming sound in the insect and turns it into its own form, you should concentrate on the Divine and become divine.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 142

Significance of offering bilva leaf to Lord Siva

You are Brahma, Vishnu, Maheswara, as already said. Parents have given you the physical body and name. But the heart (spiritual) is given by God. No one else can give this. To have a compassionate heart is the attribute of human nature. It is giving and forgiving. It is not at all keen on getting anything. Develop oneness with love. People do several types of sadhana (spiritual exercise) like turning the japamala (rosary beads) and meditation. While the body may be still, the mind goes about wandering all over! Even a little mosquito disturbs you and you strive to kill it while engaged in dhyana (meditation). You should cast off the attachment to the body. Body is the temple of God. But God is the indweller. This truth you should never lose sight of. Nature is also a manifestation of God. The ancients saw the truth that food is Brahma, mind is Vishnu, and vak (sound) is Maheswara. Man is a combination of these three. That is why when we pray to Siva we say we offer the three-fold body to Him just as we offer the bilva leaf with three parts. This is the principle of surrender (saranagathi).

Lakshmana is a superb example of the attitude of surrender.

When Rama, Sita, and Lakshmana went to the forest and reached Chitrakoot, Rama told Lakshmana, I am feeling tired and Sita is also tired. It is better we stay here for some time. So, I would like you to put up a cottage in which we can stay for a longer duration, if necessary for the whole period of 10 years. You can put up the cottage in any place of your choice. Hearing these words, Lakshmana felt hurt and bent down his head with grief. Noting this, Sita asked Lakshmana, Why are you perturbed, Lakshmana? Your brother did not speak anything harsh. Why do you feel so?

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 143

Lakshmana said, Have I ever had any choice of my own?

I left my mother; wife, and all comforts of life and accompanied you both to serve. I have surrendered myself to Rama.

Where is the question of my choice? The command of Rama is what I want to carry out. While so, how can I withstand the impact of Rama asking me to put up the cottage at a place of my choice?

Rama realized the sacred feelings of Lakshmana and the true attitude of his surrender and pointed out the site himself. Shun bad places haunted by bad people

Such an ardent devotee of Rama, with the attitude of complete surrender, once suddenly turned hostile and said, Rama, I am leaving You and returning to Ayodhya. Why should I come with You? Only you were asked to go to forest. I shall go back to Ayodhya to join my wife and mother.

Rama was surprised at this unexpected turn in the mind of Lakshmana and asked him to wait for a while. Walking away some distance, he halted under a tree for shelter. Then Lakshmana repented for his lapse and said, I am sorry, I don't want to leave You and go. I do not know why I got such an unnatural attitude all of a sudden!

Rama said, You were then in the region of Surpanakha, the demoness. So, your mind wavered. Now we have come out of her territory and you are normal.

This is a lesson to show that even a great devotee like Lakshmana could be upset by traversing the region of a demonic person. Rama saw that Chitrakoot was the seat of rishis (sages) and so decided to stay there.

That is why you should shun bad company and bad places haunted by bad people. Discriminate between what is good and what is bad, that which gives permanent joy and which is transient.

Do good deeds. If you surrender to the Atma and be conSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 144 stantly in touch with it, God will be with you, around you, above you and below you.

Kodaikanal

My mission is to raise the consciousness of man to a level at which he neither rejoices nor mourns over anything. In that supreme state, one is going through rebirth and death each moment, for these acts are on and the same, emerging from the formless into form and merging from the form into the formless. Then, there is no success of adversity, no joy or pain. When the devotee attains this Oneness, his journey toward Me ceases. For he will be with Me endlessly.

Faith, love, and grace

One may acquire scholarship in all forms of knowledge, and may win over others in any symposium,

One can fight with great valour in a battle and emerge victorious over his rivals,

One may enjoy all the comforts and convenience that the modern world provides,

One may count the stars in the sky or spell out the names of all species of living beings in the world,

One may master the eight-fold systems of knowledge,

One can land on the moon.

But to control the senses, steady the mind and turn the vision inward, is well nigh impossible.

[Telugu Poem]

In the modern world, every person tries hard to attain peace. Peace cannot be attained spiritual percepts nor can it be got from market as a commodity. It cannot be acquired even by knowledge of the texts, or a high position in life. Peace can be attained only by God's grace.

Though man is eager to attain peace, he confronts many obstacles in the path. Those who travel by train may be well acquainted with the slogan, Less luggage, more comfort, make travel a pleasure. Now, man is burdening himself with limitless desires. Because of this extra heavy luggage of desires, he finds it extremely difficult to carry on the journey of life. By such proliferation of desires, he loses his balance, moves far away from his goal, and even tends to go mad.

It is for this reason that I have been stressing the need for ceiling on desires. By limiting your desires, you can attain peace to a certain extent. You have to exercise a check on your desires and make comforts to get the Grace of the Divine.

Observe equanimity at all times

In the modern world, praise and blame, exultation and humiliation, have become common. Man is elated by praise or gets frustrated by blame or criticism. To be elated by praise and distressed by blame reflects one's weakness. To maintain equanimity in pleasure and pain or praise and blame is a difficult proposition. It cannot be achieved by scholarship. To quote an example, sage Vyasa, who was the author of the eighteen great epics and the Itihasas of Mahabharatha and who codified the Vedas, was restless and asked Narada for advice as to how to overcome this sort of restlessness. Narada told Vyasa, You should not get depressed by blame nor get elated by praise. In all situations, equanimity has to be maintained.

One may wonder how this is possible for mankind to maintain such equanimity.

You should ask who is the one that criticises and who is the one that is criticised. If you consider that it is the body that is criticized, then there is no need to worry because you know body is ephemeral and is bound to perish one day or the other. It is the container of foul material like urine, fecal matter, etc. Why should you get affected by this? You are not the body. If it is Atma that is criticized, the same Atma is present in both the person who is criticising and the one that is criticised. So this means he is criticising himself!

Both praise and blame pertain only to the body. If you respond to it, that means you are accepting the contents thereof.

If he does not receive it, it goes back to the sender. So also, you do not react to the abuse or criticism leveled by some one else against you. Then it goes back to him.

What you see is only your own reflection

The accusation or abuse one makes against you is only a reflection of his mind, which is filled with hatred. Krishna asked Duryodhana for help. Duryodhana exclaimed, How is it, Krishna, that you are asking for my help? It is only we who seek your help. But Krishna told him, I want you to go round the whole kingdom and find out if there is any good person.

Duryodhana set out on his journey and, after going round the kingdom, returned to Krishna's place and informed him, Krishna! I did not find even a single good person anywhere. If at all there is any one with some good quality, it must be only myself.

Krishna summoned Dharmaraja, the eldest son of Pandavas, and asked him to go round the kingdom and find out if there was any bad man. Dharmaraja returned after his survey of the kingdom and said, Swami, I could not find even a single bad person. If at all there is any bad quality, it is in me only. This proves that what you see is only your own reflection. Since, Duryodhana was essentially filled with wicked qualities, he could see the reflection of his own qualities in all. The condition of the world you see is dependent only on your vision. That is why Buddha said, you should have samyak dhrishti (good vision).

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 148

Total faith is needed in obtaining Divine Grace

There are so many Vedantins and self-styled scholars who preach many precepts but do not practise them. There is a story of a pandit who mastered all scriptures and was preaching to people. He used to get milk from a milkmaid who came from a distant village. Because she was not punctual in delivering milk, one day the pandit asked her why she was coming at 8 a.m. one day and at 9 a.m. another day, and not regular, which resulted in his puja (worship) being delayed. She said she had to cross a small river enroute, for which she had to use a boat, and the boatman was giving priority to the more affluent customers, making her to wait for the second trip. She said this was the reason for her delay.

The pandit mocked her apparent ignorance, and said, if only you chant the name of God, Om Namo Narayana, you do not need the boat at all, and the river will part and give way to you. Why do you not adopt this easy method?

Because this upadesh (advice) was given by the learned pandit, she had full faith in his words and rehearsed God's name as she returned home. Next day, she uttered the name of Narayana and got into the river and crossed without any difficulty, because it gave way. She repeated in the same manner every day, and was able to deliver milk in time to the pandit. After a few days, the pandit questioned as to how she was able to come in time daily. She told him the fact that she was following the pandit's advice, and was able to cross the river uttering God's name.

The pandit himself had no belief, though he gave the advice to the milkmaid. He wanted to test the veracity of her statement and proceeded to the river bank next day. He chanted the name, but without full faith and got into the river folding up his dhoti (lower garment) lest it might get wet, and was drowned in the river. This is the fate of a person who preaches but lacks faith in his own preaching. The illiterate woman had no doubt at all and had total faith.

That is why the saying, You can say a crore of things, but to practise is difficult.

Ravikumar was telling about his father being cured, though he could not get rid of the illness even after 21 operations. The cure is due to the total faith of this family. In the drama in which Ravi acted, the blind man was approaching Jesus, praying Him to give him back his eyesight. Jesus asked, do you have faith that I can give you back the eye sight? He said, Yes, I have full faith.

Immediately, people have lost faith and belief, which are like the two eyes. Some have faith in God but no belief in His teachings. Total faith is needed for getting Divine Grace. Dharma is one that cannot decline Ashok Singhal spoke about the incarnation of an Avatar, when there is a decline of dharma. Dharma is one that cannot decline.

Krishna promised that He would protect the sadhus. Who are the sadhus? Those that are wearing ochre robes or those that hold Gita in their hands and preach are not sadhus. A sadhu is one who perceives unity in diversity. He will have unity of thought, word, and action. This is called education in human values, which is E-H-V. In my opinion, it is 3 H-V. It is the unity of head, heart, and hand. It is the combination of thought, word, and deed, which is the trinity of humanity. If you practise humanness, all obstacles will vanish from your path. You should make the positive and the negative combine to give an effective result. Divine current is positive; body is negative. Atma is positive and body is negative.

Body is the temple, and the indweller is God. If the temple is dilapidated, even if God is inside, people may not visit the Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 150 temple. If the temple is very well kept and no idol inside, it is of no use. You must know well the relationship between positive and negative.

Peace is within; outside there are only pieces

Santhi (peace) is not in external objects. It is within. No one can give you this on a platter. It cannot be got by the teaching of a preceptor. It has to come from hridaya, that is, a compassionate heart. Peace is within; outside there are only pieces. Any amount of searching outside cannot give you peace.

Though Divinity pervades everywhere, only in some places is its effulgence explicit. Electric current flows through the wires. Though it flows through the wires, it is seen only through the bulbs or tubes that give light.

None can deny the existence of Divinity everywhere. For example, you stand in front of Me. My form is reflected in your eyes and your form is reflected in My eyes. If you know the unity of these two, there is no difference.

When you concentrate on Him you get His look in your eyes. If you want God to look at you, you must look at Him.

People of Bharat (India) have lot of experiences of this type. We cannot have a direct perception of the Lord within us; we can only experience it. For this, you have to make efforts with full faith. If you have good thoughts, which are directed toward the Divine, you flourish well. If you entertain wicked thoughts, you become wicked. This is the truth that God teaches man. If you have good feelings within, the reflection will be good outside. You cannot get Peace from the external world. It has to come from within.

When desires become excessive, Atmic consciousness cannot be realised. You cultivate desire for tea, coffee, playing cards, visiting clubs, watching television, etc. You have to curb such desires. Try to reduce taking coffee, tea, and other useless and wasteful pursuits like playing cards, etc. You will find within two days that you have become more intelligent and happy. Because of such unnecessary desires, you become mad and slaves of habits; thereby forgetting your human nature.

The way to God is devotion and detachment

Mathi (good sense), gathi (goal), stithi (position), and sampathi (wealth) are the valuable possessions of maya (illusory energy), but they are all lost because of excessive desires harboured.

The animal quality is predominant, and human values are absent. How can one attain peace with these drawbacks?

When sage Vyasa requested Narada to advise him as to how to get over his restlessness, Narada told him, You have composed so many epics, but you have not progressed in the path of realisation. Compile Bhagavatham, describing the glory of God and the greatness of devotion.

Bhagavatham (Telugu pronunciation) has five letters:

bha, ga, va, tha, mu. In this five-letter word, bha stands for bhakti (devotion), ga stands for gnanam (wisdom), va stands for vairagya (detachment), tha stands for Thatwam (sacred principle), and mu stands for mukthi (liberation).

The primary need for liberation is bhakti. It gives shakti (power, energy), and shakti leads to rakthi, which in turn leads to virakthi. Virakthi is the gateway for mukthi (liberation).

When you sow the seed of devotion, wisdom develops, which leads us to liberation. Vairagya is to shed raga (attachment).

Bhagavatham shows the way to liberation through devotion and detachment.

The story of Prahlada occupies an important place in Bhagavatham. His father put him to all types of suffering, like rolling him from a hill, throwing him in the deep ocean, trampling by an elephant, throwing him in a snake pit, and so on. He chanted Hari s name constantly, and no harm could be done to him. His father, Hiranyakasipu, hated Hari and was annihilated by Hari.

In the Ramayana, Ravana abducted Sita in Rama's absence. He hated Rama. By hating God you cannot achieve anything. By loving God, you can get everything.

Prahlada's heart was filled with Hari's name. When Hiranyakasipu, his father, sent Chanda and Amarka to teach him what is opposed to Divine love, they could not make any impression on the boy, who maintained his chanting of the name of Hari without a break. Since he loved God and was filled with devotion, he had no trace of fear; nor did he shed a tear.

Faith is the basis for curing ailments

If you constantly chant God's name, you will get everything, namely, wealth, wisdom, health, bliss, etc. If you have total faith, God will bless you with everything you need. Ravi said he was given medicine. That was created by Bhagavan.

You may question as why Bhagavan builds hospitals when He can create medicines and cure the patients. It is because of the faith of the people in the treatment. Even if a nurse or doctor gives an injection of distilled water, patients are happy and get cured, because of their faith. So, the Hospital is intended for people who have faith in hospitals. Cure is based mostly on the faith of the patient.

God coming in human form is to facilitate people to have the proximity of the Divine, so that He can transform them and give happiness. Only a human can confer solace to the humans.

Samepyam (coming closer to God) helps in the final merger with the Sayujyam (Divine). Conversation with Bhagavan solves problems. His darshan helps in the annihilation of sins Papanasanam.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 153

Love is God; live in love

Man should have the three ideals: Daiva preethi (love of God), papa bheeti (fear of sin) and sangha neethi (morality in society). These ideals will help to uplift the individual, the family and the society. In this sacred land, sacred ideals are followed by several saints and seers. That is why, in spite of several challenges and obstacles, the cultural heritage of Bharat (India) is still maintained. It is mysterious, wonderful and immortal.

We have become slaves to the Western culture and have neglected our own highly-valued culture. The Westerners are now showing respect for our culture and are adopting the culture in large measure. It is their faith in Bharat's culture that has stimulated them to adopt this culture. Bharathiyas (Indians) should realise the merits of their own culture and stop neglecting it.

Our culture teaches that there is one religion, the religion of love, and one caste, the caste of humanity. Our culture is based on love, which is latent in everyone, whether theist or atheist or nationalist. There can be no one without love.

We commonly see how the cow licks the new born calf with so much tenderness that the calf gets up only after this maternal touch. It cleans the calf. Cleanliness is Godliness. Purity should be developed, which encourages unity and leads to Divinity. But you have only enmity and community; these are animal and demonic qualities.

Man must try to elevate himself to the Divine state and not descend to the animal and demonic states. Sathyam vada; dharmam chara (Speak the truth; do righteous duty) is the Vedic injunction. It is easy to speak the truth. It is very difficult to tell a lie and sustain it. By speaking the truth, you are laying the foundation for the wall of dharma. You can have swanthi

(peace) through this. Develop the principle of love. Love is God. Live in Love.

Install Divinity in the heart

In this world that you behold,

there is the infinite awareness pervading everywhere.

It is the Atmic principle.

It is passing through the entire universe

just like a thread passes through the precious gems

to keep them together in the chain

[Telugu Poem]

MAMAIVAMSO Jeevaloke Jeevabhoothas-sanathanah

declares Lord Krishna in the Bhagavad Gita. Thus the ideal is set for the entire world that all beings are sparks of the Eternal Divinity. Without understanding the import of this great truth, many aspirants are suffering from anxieties and worries, bereft of self-confidence. Those who are sparks of Divinity have no reason to get into grief at all. The Divine has no worry or grief. He is Eternal Bliss Himself! How then can His sparks be subject to worries? It is only due to the non-realisation of their real nature that people get worried. They are carried away by the momentary and transient worldly comforts and ultimately plunge themselves into grief.

This is nothing but sheer animal quality. A compassionate heart is the natural feature of human being. Therefore, what is the use of reading the scriptural texts? What is the use of studying the Bhagavad Gita without making any effort to put the teachings into practise?

Smarana and Anusmarana

Arjuna asked Krishna, Why are you putting us to this harrowing experience of fighting the battle, and why have you burdened us with family problems and other difficulties, while we have been always following the righteous path and are devoted to You?

Krishna smilingly replied, Oh Arjuna, you made me sit on your chariot as a charioteer. This chariot is after all susceptible to destruction. You have not made Me sit in your heart, which is the eternal chariot. That is mantra, whereas this physical chariot is yantra (machine). Yantra has no life, while mantra has the life force. You say that you think of Me. This is only smarana, and not anusmarana smarana is time-bound, while anusmarana is constant contemplation, beyond time and space. If you do anusmarana, you will experience Divinity within. Krishna said, Maam anusmara! Youdhyacha Think of me even in the battle-field and fight. You will have no trouble at all.

Arjuna asked Krishna, How can I constantly think of you? I have to perform my duties to my family and rule the kingdom. Krishna said, No doubt, these are your rightful duties. You have to take of your wife and children and discharge your responsibilities given by God. But when you do your duties thinking of Me, you will have no difficulties.

Desire is deadly, detachment is divine

There are two ways in which you do your duties. One is apeksha, that is being desirous of results, which is worldly.

Nirapeksha is doing duty without any desire for the result.

Apeksha is marakam (deadly bondage), Nirapeksha is tharakam (liberation).

Man is traveling in these two paths. Let us take an example. The principal of a college is transferred to another place.

As long as he was the principal of the present college, he was in charge of all the furniture, equipment in laboratories and other appurtenances. He cannot take any of these things with him, since they belong to the Government.

But, when he vacates his dwelling place, which might be a rented house, he loads all the things in the lorry and takes them away to the new place. Even old chappals, broomsticks, and similar items he will not leave behind. While he delightfully leaves behind the equipment and things in the college, he takes away all his belongings from the house. The sense of mine makes him collect all these.

What is associated with attachment is marakam ajind what the principal leaves behind without attachment is tharakam. He is only a temporary trustee and custodian for the safe upkeep of the college property.

Similarly one should do their duty in the world with detachment. If you go on doing with attachment to the object, you are acting under illusion. You must understand the principle of tharakam. Use the gifts of nature to the maximum, but all the while do not forget that it is only temporary and you cannot claim permanent ownership of any. Living in the mundane world, you should not become a slave of attachment, which will cause restlessness. All materials of creation belong to God. All beings are His belongings, as all are sparks of the Divine. With this attitude you have to discharge your duties.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 158

God's gift is affluence; world's gift is poverty

Man is experiencing trouble because he is not contented with his lot. Thinking of the past and worrying about the future, man becomes restless.

God is the embodiment of love. Love can be attained only by love. Love knows no doubt at all. Divine love is selfless.

Where there is selfishness, there is fear. Love has no fear. It does not expect any reward. Love is in all. Tread the divine path of love. You cannot experience this as long as your heart is filled with selfishness. Love of God always gives and never receives. Worldly love always receives and never gives. Spiritual love gives, and goes on giving. Worldly love never gives, but is only ready to receive with full of greed.

In my opinion, in the ephemeral world, it should not be a one-way traffic. You have to receive from God and give to the world. It is a pity that man never follows this. And always keen only to receive with no trace of giving. Hence man suffers. To receive from God is a true affluence. To get from the world is a symbol of poverty.

Buddha stated that the richest man in the world was not the one like his father, who was an emperor, but one who is contented with what he has. You have to check your desires and put a ceiling on them. One who has multiple desires is poor.

Only by controlling desire you can reach the goal.

In the spiritual path, one may follow many ways. The state President, Krishnamurthy, mentioned about sravanam and keerthanam (listening and singing about God). Though these are different types of devotions, there are some stories pertaining to them that create doubts. We have so many names in the world. Brahma, Vishnu, Siva, Rama, and Krishna, and so on. No one has seen them in human form. This created some doubts in people from abroad. They are the qualities in every one. Vishnu represents the sathvic or pious quality; Brahma represents the rajasic or passionate quality; and Siva represents the thamasic or negative quality.

Silence is Easwara

Siva is present in everyone as ardhanareeswara (half-male and half-female). He has his eyes opened partly. If the eyes open fully, it will cause the destruction of the world. If the eyes are closed, one gets sleep. So his eyes are half-open, concentrating on the tip of the nose. You find that most of the pictures show Easwara (another name for Siva) in a meditative pose, seated in padmasana (lotus posture), with his partly-opened eyes concentrating on the tip of the nose. This is the right type of posture in meditation.

Siva is described as the one with moon on His head, the river Ganga flowing through His ears, snakes being wound around His wrists as bangles, and so on. He is one who takes a form without human quality. He is in the form of a linga (eggshaped form of Siva). Leeyathe gamyathe ithi lingam (Linga is one that takes you to the goal and liberates you).

Vishnu is the sustainer. Man meets with a lot of obstacles in the devotional path. He helps you to overcome these obstacles and takes you to the goal safely.

Brahma, Vishnu, and Siva are all-pervasive. They are everywhere. They transcend time and the gunas (qualities).

Vishnu has the shankha (conch), symbolizing sound, and the chakra (discus), symbolizing the wheel of time. Both sound and time come under the control of God. Sound comes from the navel. So, Brahma the primordial sound is depicted as born out of the navel of Vishnu.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 160

Silence is Easwara. That is why you generally see Siva seated in the posture of meditation. You must discern the unity of the three different aspects of God. Sound, time, and energy are all under the control of God. Siva is described as Trinethra, Trishula, and Trigunatheetha (beyond the three gunas, three eyed, and with a trident). These have inner significance. Man has two eyes. But Siva is said to have three eyes. The significance is that man knows only past, present, whereas Easwara can see the past, present, and the future too. It does not mean that Siva has a third eye on his forehead. This is the artificial imagination of the people. God is one and but described in different ways. Jeewa, the individual being, and God are one. Daiva is Jeewa and Jeewa is Daiva.

As you think, so you become

When Swami says, You are God, many people may feel perplexed. When you tell yourself I am God, you will breed only good thoughts. You become what you think. Darwin thought of the form, which he propounded as evolution of man. Ratnakara (later hailed as Valmiki) thought of Rama and had Rama always in his heart. Prahlada constantly thought of Hari and had Hari's vision. When you think you are good and have good thoughts, you will not do bad deeds. You will think good, see good, and do good deeds. If you think you are separate from God, you can never merge. God is Atma within you. He is the conscience.

I often tell the students about four F's: Follow the master (Conscience), Face the Devil (that is, desire for money), Fight to the End, and Finish the Game. Finishing the game is mukthi (liberation). You have taken human birth and you have entered the sacred human life. You have to attain divinity in your life time. There is nothing more valuable than this.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 161

By making appropriate efforts, you can accomplish anything, and by contemplating on God you get divine strength.

Because of the monkey mind, you entertain doubts.

When Krishna was a child, once there was a heavy downpour. Krishna asked all the people to come under the Govardhan Hill, which he would lift and make a canopy of. Some people doubted how the small boy could lift a hill and did not want to come under His shelter. All those who doubted and did not come under the shelter died, while all those under Krishna's shelter survived duly protected by Him.

Avatar's pranks have an inner purpose

Balarama once complained to his mother, Yasodha, about Krishna, that he was eating mud. The intention of Balarama was to make known to the world the Divinity of Krishna. It should not be construed as an action taken by him to get Krishna punished.

Yasodha asked Krishna why he persisted in taking butter from other houses and went to the extent of eating mud, when she had so many delicious things at home for him. So saying, she gave a slap on Krishna's cheek. Krishna questioned his mother, why are you punishing me, mother? Am I a fool, or a child to eat mud? He asked her to look into his mouth, which he opened wide.

To her astonishment, she saw the whole universe in his mouth. She exclaimed, Is it Vishnu Maya? Is it a dream? Am I Yasodha? What I saw was amazing. Was it true? she realised Krishna was not an ordinary child.

On another occasion, when Krishna asked Balarama whether their mother was at home, Balarama retorted, Is Yasodha your mother? No. She is fair. Nanda is fair, but you are dark in complexion.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 162

Krishna complained to Yasodha and enquired about this. She said, What Balarama says is true. You are the son of Devaki. I have no male child at all.

When God assumes human form, some people have to suffer.

Without this, Divinity cannot be recognized. Sugarcane has to be crushed to get juice, and it has to be boiled and processed to get jaggery or sugar out of it. Sugar can be used in coffee or tea or cool drinks or to make sweets of different types. When you consume it, you get joy.

Parents of Avatars also have undergone suffering. Devaki was lamenting that though she was the mother who gave birth to Krishna, Yasoda was enjoying His childhood pranks. Similarly, Kausalya, the mother of Rama, was also lamenting over the separation of Rama, who had to go to the forest for 14 years.

Why did Rama go to the forest? He wanted to demonstrate to the world that one has to follow the words of his father, however difficult it may be. The Avatar (incarnation) has to do so many things, which may not be liked by some.

Last night, showers came, and there were hailstones also in the rain. Though the hailstones may hurt people, they too contain only rain drops. They are not different. When you experience some troubles, you should take them as hailstones which contain the water of love of God. Whatever tests that God gives you, it is out of love only. It is wrong to worry about them, as they are gifts of God. You should remember always that you are a spark of the Divine. You should resist the apparent obstacles and accomplish your tasks.

Install Divinity in your heart

Each person likes some types of sweets. One may like laddu, another may like burfi, yet another jilebi. Whatever may be the name and form of the sweet, the common thing in all these is sugar. Similarly, each one may do sadhana (spiritual Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 163 exercise) in his own way. You have no business to comment or criticize them. It is his or her choice. But all lead to the same goal.

You should approach everything with divine thoughts. We have a large number of devotees assembled here, many from different countries abroad. Their names and forms are different. Their languages and dialects may be different, but Divinity is common in all. You may choose the name and form of Jesus, Easwara, Rama, Krishna, and so on. Whatever the name, God is one. Om Ithyeaksharam Brahma (Brahman is the one letter word Om).

You hear the harmonium being played in the bhajan. The sruthi is one. When you press the different reeds, you get the different sounds, sa, ri, ga, ma, pa, da, ni the seven swaras. But the air that passes through the box and causes the sound is one. Install the Divinity in your heart. As Krishna told Arjuna, make God sit in your heart, the inner chariot. There He is Mantra Swarupa, the form of sacred sound, and not yantra, which has no life force. Mantra is life. God is Mantra Swarupa and Hrudayavasi (indweller in the heart). If you want to see God outside, your effort is an exercise in futility. Outward look is that of the animal. You should develop an inward vision. Then you can realise God.

If you cannot oblige, speak obligingly

When you converse with others, you should do so with respect. You should not use harsh words. If you cannot oblige, speak obligingly, is the golden rule you should follow. When you salute others, it goes to God. When you criticise or abuse another person, that also goes to God. You must discourage and control the emergence of bad qualities. When you are in a bad or an angry mood, keep silent. Do not exchange words, which cause the anger to multiply. That is why we say, Om Santhi, Santhi, Santhi at the end of the bhajan. Why three Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 164 times and not four times? It is to cover the three entities: body, mind, and Atma. You should have santhi (peace) in all the three levels.

Love is Selfless

If you do not keep your body healthy, you cannot have peace mentally. The ancient sages and maharishis have experienced the bliss of the Divine and gave us their wisdom, which they could achieve after penance without any break. They have said Vedham Etham Purusham Mahantham, Aditya Varnam Thamasah Parasthath. They have described what they actually experienced, and addressed the humanity thus: We have seen God with the effulgence of one thousand suns, beyond the darkness of ignorance.

Thamas (laziness, inertia) represents body and mind. Only if you go beyond the body and the mind can you experience the Divine. He is the conscience. That is why I always advise you to follow the conscience. Body and mind are negative, while Atma is positive.

Prema is positive. This is the most essential thing. Without this, life is useless. Live in pure and selfless love. Love is selfless. Self is loveless. You get light as soon as you put on the switch. You realise the Divine, once you put on the switch of love positively.

When you recognise Divinity in everyone, that itself is the best sadhana (spiritual exercise). Modern spiritual preachers are not considering the welfare of the world. They seek their own welfare selfishly. Your prayer should be for the welfare of society.

What is the form of society? It has no special form. The form of its members constitutes the society. When you pray for the happiness of all, you are also part of it. If you pray for yourself, that is selfishness, and you cannot survive without society.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 165

If you purify your heart you can see the reflection of God therein, as you see your own reflection in a mirror.

26 April 1998

Sai Sruthi, Kodaikanal

There are three types of karma: past, present and future. Present karma must continue. It is like the carriage behind which is a trail of dust. If the carriage stops, the dust will settle on it. A doubt might be that the carriage cannot forever continue so as to be ahead of its dust. But the carriage need not always travel on a dusty road. It can get on the surfaced highway where there is no dust. The highway is equivalent to the grace of God.

Love is the essence of divine life

The entire humanity wants to enjoy a trouble free life

With a high standard of living and prosperous life.

But they do not have the desire of wisdom,

Good behaviour, and devotion to God.

What more can I tell this august audience

Of good seekers of Divinity!

[Telugu Poem]

Today, you see all over the world a variety of forms, material objects of various types and multifarious functions, and people in different conditions.

There is a proliferation of scientists and scholars engaged in research and experiment in several fields. There is nothing that is not subjected to investigation. The person, who investigates and comprehends all external objects and happenings, does not know anything about himself.

Winston Churchill once stated that man has conquered all but has not conquered himself. Man knows everything around Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 167 him, but he does not know his own reality. What is the use of knowing all, if one does not know about himself? Having attained the sacred human life, if he does not sustain himself or maintain purity of the heart, his life becomes a waste. If tigers and jackals enter the stable where cows are sheltered, what will happen? The human heart is a place where truth, love, and peace are reigning. If the jackal of hatred and the tiger of anger and jealousy enter this peaceful heart, what will happen to the pious cows of Love, Peace, and Truth? Man is deprived of his natural pious disposition of peace by the intrusion of wicked thoughts. The wicked qualities of jealousy, anger, and hatred are increasing amongst men. While so, how can you expect good qualities and human values to be reflected in them?

If a person builds a house, he provides door to facilitate the entrance of his friends and relatives. He will not like the street dogs and monkeys to enter through these doors. The body is the temple of God. It has several doors. It is described as the city of nine gates Navadwara Puri. Merely because there are so many entrances, you cannot allow all and sundry to enter inside. But man is allowing the evil qualities to enter, with the result, his natural good qualities are in peril. Love is the basic human quality.

Three categories of love

The love that a human being possesses can be classified into three categories. The first one is swartha or selfish love, the second one is anyonya, and the third is pavatha or supreme love.

The first category pertains to those who think only of their happiness, comfort, and pleasure, not in the least caring about others. The second category pertains to those who think of their own family and seek the welfare of those whom they conSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 168

sider as their own. The third category pertains to those who wish that everyone in the society should be happy. Lokassamastha-sukhino-bhavanthu is the prayer of this category of people. This is the supreme love.

The first category may be compared to the light in a single room, which will illumine only that room. The second one is comparable to moonlight, which helps you see things, but not very clearly. It gives scope for doubt. For example, you may see a rope and mistake it for a snake or a stump for a person in the not-so-bright-moon-light. The third category is like sunlight, which helps you to see everything clearly without any scope for doubt.

If you have a spiritual outlook, you will not have love restricted to yourself and your family alone. Anyonya love is love shown only to members of your family or relatives. In fact, all are your relatives, in the broader sense. If you follow the principle of Atma, you will consider all as yours since the same Atma is effulgent in all beings. All are children of God, and everything happens as per the divine command or will. God is the father of all; all are His children

For example, suppose an elderly person travels in a train with his children, he has the tickets for all of them, and he tells them not to get down anywhere in the middle of the journey but want for him to get down, when they too can do so.

The children get attached by the several eatables that are sold on the platform in some stations enroute, and have a strong desire to get down and buy them. But they restrain themselves from getting down, because they may be in trouble if the train starts and they are left behind since the tickets are not with them. The eldest of the children tells them, As per father's command, we cannot get down as we like. The tickets Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 169 are with the father, so we will be in trouble if we get down and are unable to re-enter before the train starts.

God is the father of all. All are His children proceeding on the journey of life. God has told us, Follow My command, and do not get down anywhere you like.

The pity is, no one follows His commands in the world. God has the tickets. So we are facing problems. Those who travel by train would have seen goods wagons bearing a painted mark like, Return 5-98. This indicates that the wagon should be returned to the workshop on the due date for attention. It is only the station master who knows this and takes action.

In the case of humanity, God is the Master who knows when each one has to return (it is not painted here as in the case of goods wagon). Only the master has to worry about it. We start worrying about our return because of our weakness. God is the supreme authority, and everything happens according to His will. But man proudly says, I have done it, and hence he is in trouble. You must realise that nothing happens without His Will.

Cultivate good thoughts; do not slacken your efforts. Those who believe in the Divine Will and carry on everything with the feeling that they are only instruments in His hands will find life happy, while those who do not believe will find life miserable. The former are punyathmas (people who earn merit) while the non-believers are to be deemed as apathmas (sinners). The merit or sin arises only out of our actions. When wicked thoughts enter humans they become worse than wild animals. They will harm the soft heart, which is comparable to cows. You have to drive the wild animals of evil qualities out and safeguard the cow-like good nature that you Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 170 are endowed with. There should be no delay in this. There is a saying that if there is long delay in consuming, even nectar becomes poison. The moment wicked thoughts enter you should chase them out and cultivate good thoughts, good sentiments and good feelings.

Sath is that which is changeless and is constant in all the periods of time past, present, and future. You have to develop this sath. This is true sadhana (spiritual pactice). I n spiritual practise you should never allow evil thoughts to gain entry into your mind.

Suppose you are winding several meters of thread in a stick. As you continue to wind, the ball of thread becomes bigger and bigger. If you slacken in your action and let the thread slip from your hands, the whole thing will unwind and spread all over, making all the efforts a waste and compelling you to start the process all over again. Similarly, a little lapse in concentration in sadhana will thwart your effort. You should maintain equanimity at all times, whether you get pleasure or pain or profit or loss.

Thyaga is yoga

Man should practise devotion and sacrifice by which alone the country can prosper. Politics without sacrifice and devotion without love are practically useless. In order to be happy, one must pray for the happiness of all and should be prepared to sacrifice for the sake of society and the welfare of the world. The spirit of sacrifice is absolutely essential for liberation.

Thyaga is yoga, and yoga is also doing one's duty effectively.

Pathanjali says that yoga is control of the mind. One should know oneself first, before knowing about other things in the world.

Annie Beasant said, People say every seeker is searching for God. It is wrong. God is all-pervasive. Where is the quesSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 171

tion of searching for that which is pervading everywhere? In fact, God is in search of a truly good devotee.

Who is a good devotee? One with sadachar (good character), Sath-bhavana (good feelings) and sath-pravarthana (good action) can be termed as a good devotee. It does not mean that one who sings bhajan is good. Even a tape recorder, when the bhajan tape is played, repeats the bhajans. But it is lifeless and is only a mechanical reproduction. One who sings bhajan should do so with full heart. Every word should reflect love, since the heart is the seat of love. Atma is prema (love). It is Brahman. It is within you. The whole Cosmos is Brahman.

Where is the question of searching for God?

Aspire to be good and not merely great

Last evening, I was telling the boys that they should aspire to be good people and not great men. If you are good, all will respect you. If you are great, only those who are selfish will seek your favours. If you are great, goodness may not be there. Who is great and who is good? One who finds divine quality in every one is good. One who finds only human quality in the Divine is great. Ravana considered Rama, the Divine Incarnation, as human. He saw only the human form and not the Divinity embodied in the form. But Rama saw Narayana in all creatures. The mirror of prithivi (world) reflects the Divine in every being.

God has given the mirror of prithivi to humanity to correct themselves and perceive the reflection of Divine in all. But man keeps the mirror in front of another, and sees his reflection alone.

An innocent cowherd was sitting between two hillocks and played his flute and heard his own echo. He could not understand this and complained to his mother that another man was imitating his musical notes. His mother accompanied the boy Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 172 next day nd found the truth that it was only the echo of his own music that he heard.

Vision of the true Self

Sea is water, earth is mud, and the body is flesh. Everything is only reflection, resound, and reaction. This is the effect of nature. Body is prakriti (nature). You have to control it. If you control the body, senses, and the mind you will see the Atma (the true Self).

If you only see the body, you become bestial and demonic. If you see body, mind, and Atma, you become human. When you see only Atma, you become Divine. You have all these three entities in human life. Gradually, you should give up attachment to the body and mind, so that you can realise Atma, which is the goal of human life. You must have full faith that everything is Daiva Sankalpa (Divine Will).

You must resist all challenges and play the game of life and come victorious. :ife is a challenge, meet it; life is a game, play it; life is love, enjoy it; life is a dream, realise it. Do not be discouraged by obstacles. Never give up your efforts, nor even slacken. If you get confused, the fuse of heart will go. You have doubt only when you do not know the truth. Once you know the truth that you are Atma, there is no room for doubt at all.

All truth is contained in the essence of Prema thathwa (Divine Love). It is the essence of all essences: It is Premasara. There is no room for doubt in this.

Through love, you can resist any challenge. Seeing good, hearing good, talking good, thinking good, and being good is the best way of realising Divinity. Strengthen your faith. One with doubt can never progress. No one with faith in God has ever come to ruin. You should consider that whatever happens Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 173 to you is for your own good and is a divine gift. If you have this full faith, there is no room for fear in your life.

28 April 1998

Sai Sruthi, Kodaikanal

There is a difference between the benefit of grace and the benefit of bhakti, of devotion. A patient with a pain is given a sedative which dulls the pain. But grace is an operation that does entirely away with pain. Make no mistake; grace does entirely away with karma. It is like a medicine that is labeled, good until 1968. If used in 1973, the medicine is entirely ineffective. The body is the medicine. God puts a date on the medicine; so it is not effective.

Love is God's fragrance

From the time one gets up in the morning till one goes to bed in the night, one is struggling for one's livelihood and is spending time studying various types of books, forgetting the Divine. What happiness can one derive from such a life? Oh man, have you ever thought of this? Man also strives in different pursuits in order to get blissful happiness. Can one get bliss from objects of the outer world, or is it available in a particular place or region, or is it possible to get it from some persons?

Nobody seems to have pondered over this. Bliss is present everywhere.

What is the point in searching for it in a particular place or object or person.

God is immanent in all living creatures, all objects, and all places, without exception. This is very well-explained in the Bhagavad Gita. Einstein, the famous scientist, has given a new name psychotronic for this. He said, How can I call God, who is omnipresent?

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 175

God is hidden from the physical eye in all beings, in all places as Cosmic energy. We are in constant search of God, within the limitation of a compact form. There is bliss, but it has no form. Love is there but it has no form. How do we experience that which has no form?

Love may not have form, but you can see this love expressed through a form, which exudes real love. Here we see a flower. Even without seeing the form, you are able to enjoy the fragrance of the flower. When we experience the fragrance, we can only surmise that the form of the fragrance is the flower.

Experience love, the fragrance of God

Ancient sages who experienced the fragrance of the Divine were searching for the form. Sages who had renounced everything made lot of sacrifices to search for the form of the divine fragrance, but they were unable to experience it. They enquired about this in forests and bushes. They could not find the source. Some have left it in the half-way stage, being satisfied with the fragrance that they had experienced.

One must not give up in any pursuit, once one is determined to take up the same. When you have asked for a certain thing, do not give up till it is achieved. When you have thought about a particular scheme of action, do not rest till it is completely carried out. This was the type of determination that the sages adhered to in achieving the objective to the extent that the Lord should at last get disgusted and grant their request. To go back from the pursuit undertaken is not the quality of a true devotee.

With such relentless determination, they were able to find out the flower from which the fragrance emanated. Thus, they experienced the fragrance of bliss. Some of the seekers could not experience the fragrance due to severe cold. Those who could not experience the fragrance were termed atheists. Even though they had the nose they could not experience the fragrance of divine Bliss. They are unfortunate people.

But those who were able to experience this bliss exclaimed in ecstasy Vedahametham Purusham Mahantham (We have realised the supreme personality of the Godhead). How to realise this? In every human being, the bliss of Ananda is emanating from the hearts, just as fragrance comes out of a flower.

The heart is complete and full. That is Full, this is Full, and when you take out the Full from the Full, what remains is also Full, says Veda. What is the totality of Nature?

Perfection is total and divine

For example, you buy one kilogram of jaggery. From this you take a bit and put it in your mouth. This tastes sweet. Take some pieces and mix it in coffee or water, they become sweet. All the pieces are equally sweet. The balance left is also sweet. So the quality of sweetness is not reduced when you take bits out of the full piece of jaggery. Every bit is equally sweet.

Totality relates only to one quality. There was one expert artist by the name Anthony who used to make violins. He used to take one year to make one violin. One of his friends asked him how he could earn enough to take care of his wife and children if he took one year to make one violin. He said, God is the embodiment of totality. Therefore whatever we do should be totally perfect. On the selfish ground of carrying on a living, I cannot compromise on the quality of perfection. The only way to please God, who is the personification of perfection, is to stick to the principle of perfection in its totality, so that God will confer Bliss on us.

This is how the artist taught his friend. Whatever little job we may undertake, we should do it with perfection. God is perfection.

We are part of the Divine. We should also stick to this principle of perfection in its totality. Because of his scrupulous adherence to his principles, Anthony earned great fame and his Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 177 violins are famous even today bearing the reputation as Anthony's Violin.

In order to experience Divinity, we should have totality, which is unity and not multiplicity. We are considering the one as many instead of unity in diversity. We only divide and do not make efforts towards unity.

All are one; be alike to everyone

The tailor has got the instruments of scissors and needle. What does he do with them? You give him a single piece of a two metre cloth and ask him to stitch a shirt. The tailor takes the scissors and cuts the cloth into several pieces like those for collar, arms, etc. The single piece of cloth is cut into bits. The tailor joins them all and stitches them into a shirt. It is the pair of scissors that he uses to cut the cloth into pieces. Then he uses the needle to stitch them together.

We divide the one God into many, like Rama, Krishna, Jesus, Allah, Zoraster. But with love, we should bring them together. We should say, All are one, my dear son; Be alike to everyone. This is the saying of Jesus. When he was put to suffering, the disciples were feeling very sad. But they went on accusing the head priest and the priest community. The governor who placed that order was also criticised. To teach this principle of unity, Jesus said, All are one. We should not criticise anybody or blame anybody. It is love that will not deride or hate anybody.

There is a gulf of difference between worldly love and divine love. Divine love does not ask for anything. It is selfless. It is not mindful of praise or blame. Love is desireless and continuous; you will not find even a trace of selfishness.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 178

Worldly love and divine love

Divine love always gives and never receives. Worldly love only receives and does not give. It is full of selfishness and expects a reward in return. Divine Love does not desire any return. Love is equal only to love. Nothing else can be equated to love. This unparalleled and incomparable Premathathwa (principle of love) is only divine love.

How is worldly love? You all know about it. Suppose, a boy gets married and few days after the event, they go for a walk in the park. He sees a thorn in the path. Immediately, out of his love for his newly wed wife he shouts, thorn! thorn! and pulls his wife away, lest she hurt her feet by stepping on the thorn. At that moment, out of the consideration for his wife as his life, he pulls her out of the risk of stepping over the thorn.

The same couple walks in another path six months later. The husband notices a thorn in the path. What does he do now? He warns her to watch her step and be careful. Some more months later, when a similar situation arises, the same person in an indignant tone asks his wife, have you no eyes, can you not see the thorn?

Thus worldly love goes on diminishing in its magnitude as time passes. Divine love never diminishes but is constant and changeless under all circumstances, and after any number of years, even after several aeons and births.

The Lord's love is sweet love. His words are sweet. Everything about the Lord is madhuram (sweet). That is why the gopikas (cowherd maids) of those days, sang Madhurathipathe! Akhilam dadhuram. They could not bear the pangs of separation from Krishna. They went round Brindavan asking even the flowers, Oh flowers! Did you see our beloved Krishna? They were not mindful of the thought, whether a flower was capable of seeing Krishna.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 179

What does this mean? Even the flowers, leaves, branches, and plants will see the Lord, who is all pervasive. But, Krishna was described as unique by the gopikas, who exclaimed, He is dark in complexion, with eyes comparable to a lotus flower; by any chance, have you seen Him? He has a peacock feather on his head, Oh creepers! Is He hiding in the bushes?

God is full. You cannot say, He is only in this and not in that. You have to love all. You should not love with the motive of getting any fruit or reward. You should love for love's sake.

Gopika's love for Krishna

A newly wed bride came to her father-in-law's house in Gokulam (the village of cowherds). The tradition of that place in those days was that all the villagers should go to mother Yasoda's house and light their lamps every evening from the lamp in that house. This was because that was the house of the richest family of that village and because Lord Krishna was born in that house. He was God, in whom all Ashtaisvarya (the eight types of wealth) were enshrined. The villagers believed that, because the Lord of all wealth was there, by lighting their lamp from that hallowed house, they would also have the benefit of all wealth.

This view was not shared by the father-in-law and mother-in-law of the newly married girl. They complained that all the women were going after Krishna, who was in Yasoda's house. But this daughter-in-law was very eager to see the charming form of Krishna, which attracted all other young women of the village. In fact, she used to ponder over the infinite capacity of the God-incarnate and sing His glory as Shabdhabrahmamayi, Charaacharamayi, Jyothirmayi, Vangmayi, Nithyanandamayi, Paraathparamayi, Maayaamayi, Shreemayi (Supreme master Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 180 of sound, master of movable and immovable things, one full of effulgence, one of good speech, full of eternal bliss, supreme power, creator of illusion and master of prosperity). She used to sing the glory of Lord Krishna in this way within herself, for fear lest her parents-in-law may reprimand her.

As God's Will would have it, one day, the mother-in-law had developed high temperature, so the daughter-in-law had necessarily to go to mother Yasoda's house to light the lamp. She was allowed by her mother-in-law only for that day, as an exception.

Yasoda used to keep a lamp outside. So, she had to light the lamp and go away. She was feeling sad that though she came to that house where the Lord had incarnated, she could not have even a glance of Him because the door was closed. She was lost in contemplation as she was lighting the lamp and the flame even started burning her hand. When her dress also started catching fire, on sensing the smell of burning cloth, Yasoda rushed out of the house and asked the girl, Are you mad? Are you not aware of your cloth getting burnt?

This daughter-in-law was smiling as though in bliss. She said that she was seeing the form of Krishna in the iyothi (flame). On hearing this, the other gopis (cowherd maids) who came to light the lamp started dancing in joy and ran through the streets. The lady's name was Suguna, and they sang that Suguna burnt her hand but was smiling in joy as she saw the form of Krishna in the iyothi.

The mother-in-law of Suguna heard this too. She got terribly annoyed and even beat her daughter-in-law. She was exclaiming, Because I took ill, you had to be sent to Yasoda's house. You say that you saw Krishna there in the flame. How can we bear this haughtiness of yours? So saying, she went on beating her daughter-in-law. But the latter never appeared to heed all this, and was in rapture.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 181

The gopikas started singing, In spite of her mother-in-law beating her and her husband becoming angry, Suguna never bothered. Nor was she afraid of anything. She was enjoying as though the picture is printed on a paper. Nobody can separate them. In this way, the gopikas enjoyed the company of Krishna. Different people enjoy in different ways. But God is totally present in every heart.

God is in every creature as love

If you take a small vessel to fill water from the ocean, you can get only that much of water that that vessel can hold. If the vessel is bigger, it can hold a larger quantity of water. If you taste even a drop of water that is saline, whether the quantity of water is more or less, the quality is the same and total. Similarly, God is in the form of love in every one. The quality is the same, though the quantity may vary. That is why the Upanishad declares, That is Whole and this is Whole.

The Pandavas and Kauravas started the battle of Mahabharatha. Vyasa came in a chariot to bring about a compromise and avoid a conflict, which would result in loss of lives. Vyasa composed several epics and codified the Vedas into four, though they were countless in number. With the view that the people cannot go through all the Vedas, he classified them into four namely, Rik, Yajur, Sama and Atharva Vedas.

Vyasa had knowledge of the language of the insects, birds, and animals. When he was going in the fast-moving chariot, he saw an insect moving fast across. He asked the insect why it was hurrying so fast. The insect replied that the chariot of Arjuna was approaching very fast and, before it approached, it had to reach safely its home where its family members were waiting. Vyasa realised that the attachment to wife and children was common not only for human beings but was for other beings as well, like the insect.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 182

Of all creatures, the human being is considered the best.

Because we do not know the language of lower beings, we are not able to realise that insects, birds, and animals also have such feelings of attachment. Only then did Vyasa declare that God is in the form of hands, feet, eyes, ears, everywhere. Divinity is everywhere. But love of Divinity is selfless; this is spiritual, while worldly love is selfish and transient. We must change worldly love into spiritual love.

All are acts of God

Ruchir narrated a story. An emperor arranged a very big exhibition. He said anyone could pick any article one liked. What was this exhibition? In the world of exhibition, the exhibits range from insects to human beings. It is full of different objects and creatures. The vast humanity visits this exhibition and takes whatever it wants. They show preference and take costly things.

A woman entered this exhibition and saw sacred things, sacred wares, forests sacred to sages and saints, and all pertaining to the Will of God. All are acts of God. God is the master of this world. I did not bring anything with me when I was born. Nor do I take anything when I depart from the world. We do not even leave behind the address. So saying, she walked empty-handed.

The king asked her why she was not taking anything. She said, It is natural. I came empty-handed and I am returning empty-handed.

The king asked her to take at least one article. She asked whether he was prepared to give anything. She said, I want only you. When you become mine, the entire property in the exhibition belongs to me.

Then God gave himself to her. She said, This is the consummation of my birth. Out of all the time we spend on famSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 183

ily, wealth, food, etc., if only we spent a fraction of that time in contemplating on God, our last journey would be very safe.

The gate of the God of Death is made very heavy material.

In order to open the door we have to contemplate on the Lotusfeet of God.

Every human is Ardhanari

Who is the lady here? It is Prakriti. All are women! Simply because you wear pants and a shirt you do not become a Purusha (male). The one who wears a body is a sthri (woman).

The awareness that pervades the body is called Purusha it is chaithanya (consciousness). The body is jada (Inert). Man is a combination of both.

This combination of the awareness within, the Purusha or masculine aspect, and the inert body or feminine aspect is termed Ardhanaareeswara (half-male and half-female). Not only Easwara but every human is an Ardhanari. So, human life is not a single entity but the combination of Prakriti and Paramatma, or the feminine and the masculine aspects. In this drama of life, all are actors. Even Bhagavan is acting a role. The world is like a stage. God is the Director, and as per God's directions, all are acting. Simply because a person wears the dress of a male, he cannot be termed masculine. Suppose the anniversary of a girl's college is being celebrated. They may enact a drama in which the girls may act the role of a king; minister, sepoy, watchman, etc. All the actors are girls. They have only taken the role of these males. The males should not pride themselves by saying Udhvogam

purushalakshanam

(to hold a job is the prerogative of males).

The Atmashakthi (Atmic energy) is common in all.

Now you find many women going for work, and there are many males who do not work. Dharma is the characteristic of human male or female. Truth is the characteristic. Truth is his characteristic. Truth is God. Love is God. Live in Love.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 184

Surrender to the Divine within

Divinity is total in everyone and everywhere. You cannot see Him with the physical eye, but you can visualise with the wisdom eye or inner vision. You have air, you cannot deny this, even though you cannot either see or catch hold of it. Similarly, god is in many forms.

When it is hot, you can experience coolness either by a hand fan or an electric fan. Air has not come from the fan.

Whoever uses the fan gets the air. The intellect is the fan. If you turn it toward Atma, you get Atmananda (Atmic bliss). On the other hand, you turn it toward the body, you get temporary bodily pleasure, which is momentary.

The body cannot be depended upon to cross the ocean of life. It is perishable and transient. It is full of dirt and filth, flesh and bones. You have to surrender to the Divine within. Once you have Divinity to help you, there is nothing that you cannot achieve.

Greatness of mother's love

No one brings any wealth with him from his mother's womb.

He carries nothing with him
when he leaves the world.

Even a millionaire can eat only ordinary food and cannot subsist on a diet of gold.

One may wax arrogant over one's accumulated wealth,
but nothing of it will accompany him,

And in the end the wealth may fall into the hands of thieves or go to the State.

Realise that the only thing that is permanent is the spirit.

What else can I convey to you?

From ancient times, it has been the practice in Bharat (India) to revere the mother as God. From the outset, the Vedas have declared, Revere the mother as God, father as God, and Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 186 preceptor as God. If they are gods, for what purpose are they gods? In the ordinary course of daily existence, they are gods for worldly purposes. For the human body, the mother, father, and preceptor are to be deemed as divine. But, for the pursuit of life, the Divine is the only God, There is another Sanskrit saying that hails God as mother, father, kinsman, friend, wealth, knowledge, and in fact the Supreme Lord of everything. This means that for the spiritual life, God is everything. The mother and father are residents of the home. The preceptor dwells in his ashram. But God is the indweller of the heart.

Only God can reside in the heart. It is true that mother, father, and preceptor are divine, but they are not entitled to dwell in the heart. They have to be revered, adored, and made happy. God alone deserves to be worshipped.

God is nearer to man than his mother,

Closer than even the father.

To give up such God is a heinous sin.

This is the truth proclaimed by Sai.

Importance of mother's blessings

It was part of the ancient tradition that when the son wished to set out for the battlefield to secure victory or go to the forest to perform penance, he would first go to his mother and seek her blessings. Dhruva, a six-year-old child, took his mother's blessings, set out to the forest to perform penance, and realized the vision of the Divine.

Arjuna prostrated before his mother to get her blessings prior to leaving for the battlefield. The mother told him, May victory be yours.

Duryodhana also went to his mother, prostrated before his mother, and sought her blessings for victory in the war. The mother told him, Where there is dharma, there will be vicSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 187 tory. This was Duryodhana's mother's blessing for her son.

Duryodhana then went to his preceptor and sought his blessings. The preceptor said, Where there is Krishna, there is dharma. Where there is dharma, there will be victory.

Therefore, victory can be ensured only where dharma and the Divine are present, according to the mother and the preceptor.

Mother's blessing and divine grace are both necesssary

In those days, what the mother declared proved prophetic.

Whenever a mother conferred her blessings on her son, the Divine was present there to declare, May it happen so. Besides the mother's blessing, divine grace is also necessary.

Hence, every son should make every effort to please his mother. Without keeping his mother pleased, the son cannot achieve anything in the world. The son should have those qualities that enable him to please his mother. At the same time, the son should also strive to win the Lord's grace. Without earning God's grace, the mother's blessings alone will be of no avail.

After the end of the Kurukshetra war, Krishna went to see Gandhari, the mother of the Kauravas. Dhritharashtra, the father of the Kauravas, was also in deep sorrow. Gandhari spoke to Krishna in great anger and anguish, Krishna, the Pandavas and Kauravas are sons of brothers. What is the reason for your animus against the Kauravas and your partiality for the Pandavas? You continually protected the Pandavas but you did not save even one of my hundred sons from death. Why this discrimination by you?

Krishna smiled at her and replied, In your indignation and anger, you are using words recklessly. The fault is only yours. Although you had one hundred sons, have you seen any of them? How can children not at all seen by the mother hope to get the grace of God?

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 188

The more one strives to give joy to the mother, the more the motherland will rejoice. The mother and the motherland go together.

When Pandavas were about to leave for battle, Kunti pronounced a special blessing on them proclaiming that victory would always be on the side of those who stood for dharma. She said that great warriors who went to fight with valour were blessed by their mothers with a protective amulet (raksha kavach). In the case of the Pandavas, Kunti declared that the benediction Sri Rama Raksha may serve as the amulet for them on the battlefield. This shows how important a mother's blessing is for the success and welfare of the children.

It is to demonstrate to the world the importance of reverence for the parents and the need to receive their blessings that Swami also makes it a point to visit the Samadhi of the parents of this body twice a year. In reality, Swami has no filial love for parents as such, but Swami adheres to this practice to serve as an example to the world.

Mother Easwaramma's presence

Now it is 30 years since the mother of this body passed away. But she is continuing to move about in her physical body around Swami. Three boys sleep in Swami's room. They have also witnessed her presence. I am telling this today because the life of ideal mothers has permanent significance.

In Prasanthi Nilayam, Swami takes breakfast after bhajan and proceeds to His place in Poornachandra Auditorium. Early in the morning one day, mother Easwaramma was standing at the door in her usual form. I asked her, Why did you come?

She said, Swami, I have come here with a prayer to You.

You are omnipresent and omniscient, but You have to control one thing!

What is that? Swami asked.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 189

She said, Devotees and students offer handkerchiefs to You. But, heeding my prayer, please do not receive handkerchiefs from everybody. The times are not good. The handkerchief may be tainted with poisonous stuff. In the usual course, You use the handkerchief to wipe Your nose and mouth. So, You may receive handkerchief only from those on whom You have confidence and trust as good devotees. Do not accept from all and sundry.

Easwaramma's advice to Swami

Mother's love lives on for all times, long after her passing away. Twice she appeared in the night. The boys sleeping in my room noticed her presence. Those boys had not seen her at any time. They wondered who the old lady could be. The key of the lift was in their hands and there was no staircase leading to the apartment. How did she manage to come here? When the boys asked this question, Swami woke up. I went near her and asked her why she had come again. She replied, I cannot live without seeing You often. The moment I see You, I feel happy. After saying so, she gave me some piece of advice, Swami, all persons describe themselves as devotees. But no one can tell who are real devotees and who are fake. Totally dedicated devotees will be ready to carry out anything You ask them to do, but there are others who come for their own selfinterest. By coming to You they get their desires fulfilled and forget You thereafter. In this matter, You should be very careful. Swami replied, I shall take due care. There is no need for you to tell me.

After hearing this, she laughed and left the room.

I am conveying to you this episode as direct testimony to the greatness of mother's love. She might have given up her body but she is always with Swami. She said, I have performed many sacrifices for Your sake and have done many kinds of pujas. I realized the proof thereof. For 40 years I was with You. My life has its fulfillment.

Kondama Raju's devotion

Kondama Raju was the grandfather of this body. He was also like my mother. He had two sons. The father of this body was Pedda Venkapa Raju. His younger brother was Chinna Venkapa Raju. Two sons of his deceased brother, Subba Raju and Venkatarama Raju, also lived with him.

When all four were together, the family was large and there was a desire to have division of property. At that time, this body was eight years old. Kondama Raju summoned the sons. They told him, At this stage, you cannot live alone. So, you can stay with each of us by turn.

He replied, I don't want to stay with any one of you. You can take your share of the property. Leave Sathya with me. It is enough. If Sathya is with me, everything is with me.

From then onward, Swami was staying with Kondama Raju. He was a great devotee and lived up to 116 years. Due to his deep devotion, he recognized the truth about Me. Swami was entering His ninth year. At that time there was no one near us. He closed the door. I was then preparing food. Swami knew the art of cooking well. People from the neighborhood used to come to our house to take food prepared by Swami.

While I was in the kitchen, Kondama Raju came uttering Sathya, Sathya and held both My hands. He said, These are not hands. I consider them as Your feet. I have one wish to make to You. Before I pass away, You must pour water into my mouth at the last moment of my life.

Swami gave him this promise.

After that, he lived for 19 years. He used to visit the new mandir (temple) after it was opened both morning and evening. Kondama Raju was in the habit of coming early in the morning. Swami used to sleep outside the mandir on the sand. ExSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 191

pecting His grandfather, Swami would cover Himself completely, including His face. I did not want him to know that I was awake. Assuming that Swami was asleep, the grandfather would touch Swami's feet and leave. He had an embarrassing feeling that others might have a mistaken impression on seeing a 116 year old man touching the feet of a young boy. As soon as Kondama Raju left, Swami would get up.

Gopis (cowherd mainds) used to sing a song, O Krishna, can anybody wake up a person who is pretending to sleep? How can anyone open the eyes of a person who has deliberately closed his eyes? Like that, I used to keep My eyes shut and pretend to be fast asleep. This was one of the leelas I used to perform.

Swami keeps up the promise given to Kondama Raju. The time for fulfilling the promise I had made to Kondama Raju was fast approaching. In those days, I used to drive the car myself. I was going to the city in Morris 200. Kondama Raju called Swami's mother Easwaramma and said, Come here. Swami is coming. He is coming for my sake. My last moment has come. Therefore, please bring a tumbler of drinking water.

He then asked her to put a few tulsi leaves in the tumbler. He asked Swami to sit on the cot. He said, Swami, the sky may come down but You will keep Your promise. The ocean may dry up but You will not go back on Your word. To fulfil the pledge You gave 30 years ago, You have now come. Swami broke into laughter.

Kondama Raju said, Don't try to deceive me through Your laughter. Take this tumbler and drink a little of the water and pour the balance into my mouth.

Then he related a story. Dasaratha performed Puthrakameshti Yajna to get four sons. Lord Narayana Himself took birth as his son. Adishesha was born as Lakshmana. The conch Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 192 and mace manifested as Bharata and Satrughna. Although he had four sons, no one was present to administer water to him at the time of his passing away. Swami, You have taken birth in my Ratnakara lineage in Apasthamba Sutra and Bhardwaja Gothra. All these are the signs of Divinity. This means that the Divine is born in my family. Now fulfil at least this prayer of mine. Do not refuse.

Swami replied, I have come for this very purpose.

When I started to pour water into his mouth, he protested, saying, You must first drink a little and then pour the remainder in my mouth.

Swami drank a little and poured the rest in his mouth.

Kondama Raju then turned to his daughter-in-law and said, Easwaramma, the fame and power of your son will spread all over the world. The whole world is changing. Lot of people from foreign countries will come. Be on the alert. Do not give room for the delusion that this is my son and my child. He belongs to all. Swami belongs to everyone. He is not related to one family only. He placed his hands on Swami's feet and breathed his last.

Even he keeps coming to me from time to time. He told me, I have no further rebirth. By my association with You, my life has been redeemed. With Your Grace, I have become immortal.

He used to come from time to time and warn me against what was happening in the mandir (temple). No one can touch You, and there can be no danger to You from any quarter. Because of my past physical association with You, I am saying this. It is more a prayer to You. Even now, Kondama Raju and Easwaramma keep coming and talking to Me.

A divine comedy

In Prasanthi Nilayam, there was a devotee who had serious heart attack. Swami left the body to protect him and went out Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 193 of His body at 2 a.m. and did not return to the body till 3 p.m. next day. The boys who were sleeping downstairs and those sleeping in Swami's room started crying. Along with them, Chiranjeevi Rao went and brought Dr. Alreja.

The doctor has great devotion to Swami. He has been in Prasanthi Nilayam for the past 40 years. He came and examined Swami's pulse. There was no pulse at all, no movement in the body. He started weeping. He remarked that there was no sign of life in the body.

Then Chiranjeevi Rao observed that it was not unusual for Swami to go out of His body now and then and that he had seen it. He told the six boys not to speak about it to anybody. The six boys were a good lot. These boys took M.B.A. degree in Swami's institute and had training in Delhi. They did not want to leave Swami. Despite Chiranjeevi Rao's appeal, the boys could not contain their grief.

At that moment, I got up with a smile and asked what the matter was. I asked them, What is this drama you are enacting?

They replied, Swami, who is playing this drama? Is it You or we?

There is a boy named Srinivas. He has passed Engineering and M.B.A. and is staying with Swami. He remarked, It is not our drama, Swami, but it is Your drama.

Then Swami said, Many people are waiting outside. I must go out for darshan.

From early morning till 3 p.m. in the afternoon I had not taken even a sip of water. They requested me to drink at least a cup of buttermilk or porridge. Swami said, I am not used to it. Swami took His bath and went out. This kind of thing used to happen now and then. All the boys staying with Me know about it.

There are mothers who are worried when their children take to the spiritual path. They hardly realise that it is the fruit Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 194 of many past lives that accounts for children taking to the spiritual path. Mothers should rejoice over such a development rather than worry about it.

Many parents desire that after the education of their children is over, they should get married, get a good job, and achieve a high position in life. Out of their love, they want their children to achieve greatness. Swami's love is not like that; Swami wants them to achieve goodness.

What is the difference between greatness and goodness? A good man sees divinity even in a human being. A great man sees the human even in God.

Ravana was a great man who had performed great penance. He was very powerful. But seeing Rama in human form, he considered him as a mere human being. On the other hand, Rama was different. He saw the Divine in all beings. That is the mark of goodness.

It is better to earn a reputation for goodness than be known as a great man. All that you find in a great man is only selfishness. But in a good man, you find total selflessness. Therefore, all of you should strive to become good men. Revere your parents. Give them joy. Show your gratitude to them.

Students concern for Swami

Some students prefer to stay with Swami. The students know that at Kodaikanal Satyajit made a declaration in public even when his parents were present there, I am coming out with my doubt in the open. You must all forgive me. All sorts of officers are coming to Swami. They seek fulfillment of desires and go back. Many business people also come to Swami. They also refer to Swami about their difficulties and go back after securing relief. People with ailments come to Swami and they leave after getting cured. We students have come to Swami. Many of them benefit from the free education given by Swami and leave the Institute.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 195

Who is taking care of Swami? Nobody seems to be concerned about Swami's well being. Many times Swami falls down. Once, when Swami slipped and fell down, a pillar fell on Him. Swami did not care for it. The boys were very much worried in the night. It is necessary that someone should always be with Swami. Only when one or two people sit with Him does Swami take some little food. When He goes alone for lunch, He eats very little.

My attitude is to eat whatever the students eat. I don't want to eat separately. Swami came to Brindavan from Puttaparthi and took the students to Kodaikanal. Swami used to eat only ragi and groundnut chutney. At Kodaikanal all were eating together. Swami also took His meals in their midst.

If I were to take ragi, boys may not like it. If I want them to eat ragi, they are not used to it. So Swami started eating rice food which students take. Swami likes only ragi, because He stopped taking ragi. He lost 6 kg in weight during 20 days stay at Kodaikanal.

In Puttaparthi, Satyajit was in the habit of taking My weight now and then. He used to plead to Swami to get on to the weighing machine. When Swami was in Puttaparthi He weighed 108 lbs. At Kodaikanal, when weight was taken, it showed reduction by 6 kilos. Swami weighed less than 100 lbs. Satyajit said that he was greatly worried.

I told him that he should not speak about this in public.

Satyajit said, I offer my entire life to Swami.

Swami said that he should not say such things in public.

But Satyajit spoke with courage and boldness.

At that time, Indulal Shah, Chairman of World Council and others were present. All of them congratulated Satyajit on his speech. This is a point about which no one has cared for. Indulal Shah said, Even though I am a member of Central Trust I have not thought over this point. This is a grievous lapse on Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 196

our part. Hereafter, we will bear this in mind and act accordingly. God as Mother

It is clear that each devotee has his own ideals and aspirations. But those who are imbued with a feeling of rever-ence for their mother will always have good feelings. One day Satyajit was concerned about surgery done for his mother's fractured leg. As far as I am concerned, all persons are good. But there is something special about this lad Satyajit. He used to take Swami's permission and massage her leg every day. He wanted to do this to relieve his mother of her pain.

At Brindavan, I was lying in bed. He came and started massaging My leg. I said, I have no pain in My leg. He remarked, Swami, if You have pain You won't speak about it. You keep moving about irrespective of the pain. Swami then observed, I am used to this.

He said, In massaging Swami's feet I am rendering service to my mother.

He left for Puttaparthi and was staying in the hostel. He closed his eyes. He experienced that he was massaging Swami's feet. He observed, With this experience, how can I be attached to the world?

Swami remarked to him, Don't speak in that way. Be silent and carry on your duty.

He passed his M.Sc. After that he joined the M.B.A. course. I told him, You have already got a P.G. degree. Why do you want to join M.B.A.?

He replied, I can stay with You, Swami, for two more years. That is the reason.

In this manner, each student has his own desires. There are any number of students imbued with such feelings. Those who develop taste of maternal love adore God as mother. Many boys go out into the world and get caught up in worldly affairs Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 197

because of their actions in previous lives. Students should feel, Having discovered God, we do not need anything else. God will take care of mother, father, and everyone else. They should develop that firm conviction. Without that faith they can have no happiness.

At Puttaparthi, a Reddy from Nellore brought the film Prahlada and showed it to the students. The actors were small boys. The film showed that, while drinking poison, Prahlada was chanting the name of Narayana. His father had Prahlada thrown from a mountain top by two rakshasas (demons), Chanda and Amarkha. As he fell, he chanted the name of Narayana, and Narayana held Prahlada in His hands. The father wanted him to be bitten by serpents. As he chanted the name of Narayana, the serpent did not bite him. The father tried to get him crushed under the feet of an elephant. As Prahlada uttered the name of Narayana, even the elephant became Narayana and did him no harm.

All this was shown in the film; but Satyajit said, I have experienced all this directly. I don't need to see a film. I only want Sai Narayana. It is only because of merit done in previous life that such experiences came to a person from childhood.

The other day, I asked him to participate in bhajans. He said he would sit under an Asoka Tree and participate in the bhajans. Swami does not impose His Will on anybody. He told Satyajit, You may do what pleases you.

How Satyajit strictly adheres to Swami's ideals

In this manner, many students are imbued with noble feelings. Some students appear as supreme devotees as long as they are in the college, but the moment they leave the college, they go astray. Their speech and their actions are bad. Hence, I often tell them, as I did at Kodaikanal, Cultivate good speech. Develop a good vision (samyag drishti). This leads to good Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 198 thoughts. Good thoughts make a person listen to what is good. By listening to good thoughts one is impelled to perform good actions. Good actions lead to liberation.

Satyajit strictly adheres to Swami's ideals. He will not look at anybody. I asked him, What is wrong if you see persons with good feelings or to see others.

He replied, I have no use for such good feelings or to see others. I want only feelings about Swami within me.

Swami then said, Please yourself.

Some students are like this. All the boys who came to Kodaikanal this year were exceptionally good boys. How lucky they are cannot be described. I took care of everyone, of all their needs. If there are more such boys, the world will improve vastly. It is only when individuals improve that society can improve. When society improves, the country improves. Improvements must start with individuals. The individual, the collective, and the world together constitute the Divine. Offer your love to mother and enjoy life

Noble mothers give birth to noble sons. Mothers should also feel lucky to have noble sons. Kondama Raju used to tell his daughter-in-law, Easwaramma, you have no idea of your great good fortune. You are not an ordinary woman. The Lord Himself is with you. What a lucky woman you are! Easwaramma was the daughter-in-law of Kondama Raju. Has there been any instance of a father-in-law adoring his daughter-in-law? He used to say, Easwaramma, your name has been vindicated. Easwara's mother is Easwaramma. This was the way they praised Easwaramma. Kondama Raju was one of those rare persons who could perceive the Truth. Those who cannot recognize the Truth will never be able to understand it. They are like a blind man who cannot see the sun even during the day.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 199

Those who are on the spiritual path and who have love for their mother can accomplish anything in the world. Many grown up men belittle the role of their mothers, saying that they might have done them some good in childhood. They feel proud about their job and position. But they forget to whom they owe their position.

Adi Sankara got the blessings of Mother Parvathi as a young boy of seven years while doing worship to the goddess in the absence of his father. After getting the blessings of the goddess, he achieved great distinction in mastering all the Vedas and scriptures within a short period.

You have to offer your heart to God because He is the Indweller of heart, while father and mother are only dwellers in home. Respect your parents with the Divine in your heart. Tasting the sweetness of your mother's love, offer your love to her and enjoy life.

The essence of Buddha's teachings

Firmament is the garment of the Divine,

Stars are His eye,

The melody of His laughter

Fills the Universe.

There are many non-believers in God who were ruined in life, but there are none who believed and failed in life. Embodiments of Love! In ancient times, many spiritual aspirants went out in search of knowledge of the Self and studied scriptures and visited holy places to acquire experience of the Divine. But they could not get the wisdom they sought. Even though they recognized the distinction between the animate and the inanimate, they could not get spiritual illumination. True enlightenment is attained by the awareness of the identity of the One and many (Vyakthi and Samashthi). In spite Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 201 of the passage of time, man has not been able to recognize his reality. Knowledge of the Self cannot be got by the study of scriptures or from preceptors or by the grace of great men. Brahman cannot be seen in the external world. It should be experienced only in one's heart. It is a mark of ignorance to seek the Self in the outside world.

Seek the Self within

For 26 years Buddha sought the realization of the Self by studying scriptures, meeting sages and saints and listening to their teachings. He found that by these means he could not experience reality. He realized that the knowledge of the Self has to be gained through an inward search. He stopped the outward quest and gradually experienced knowledge of the Self from within. He then declared:

Buddham Saranam Gachchami.

Sangham Saranam Gachchami.

Dharmam Saranam Gachchami.

Through his enlightenment, he discovered the importance of Dharma and wanted to make it the basis of society. Buddha realized that self-realization cannot be attained through penance or prayers or austerities. At the outset, Buddha emphasized the importance of developing good vision (samyag drishti). Good vision leads to good thoughts, good speech and good action.

Next he laid stress on association with good people. The company of the good leads to good deeds. The four rules to be observed are: cultivate good company, avoid association with evil persons, do meritorious deeds always, and remember what is transient and what is eternal.

Good company does not mean merely association with good people. Sath refers to the Divine. What is required is to seek the company of God, who is the source of all bliss. When Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 202 one's thoughts are centered on God, one's feelings, speech, and actions get sanctified samyag bhavam, samyag sravanam and samyag kriya. This leads to the purity of the inner sense organs. Purity in thought, word, and deed is the requisite for experiencing the Divine. This triple purity is considered the essence of humanness.

Buddha recognised this Truth and experienced bliss. His mother Mayadevi had passed away nine days after his birth. After the death of his mother, Buddha was looked after by his stepmother Gautami. She fostered Buddha with boundless love. To perpetuate the name of his foster mother for the love she bestowed on him, he was called Gautama. Buddha relied entirely on his own inner quest to experience his reality because he found that scriptural texts and preceptors were of no use.

Make your conscience your preceptor

There are many in the world who preach spirituality but none of them has any experience. What is the use of studying books without personal experience or practice. Each one should make his conscience his preceptor.

When the time of Nirvana was approaching, Buddha noticed that his step-brother Ananda was shedding tears. He beckoned Ananda and told him Even till today, the world is not recognising the reality. There are thousands who experience sorrow at the sight of dying persons. But they make no effort to find out what experience is in store for the dead. I know the Truth about it. I am merging in that Truth. To shed tears at this prospect is not justified.

It seems to me that you are grieving over the exalted state that is impending for me. No human being should shed tears over the moment of death of any person. Tears are associated with the Divine and should be shed only for the sake of the Divine and not for trivial matters. You should shed tears of joy.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 203

Grief is not a proper state for man. Hence no tears of sorrow should be shed.

Here is an illustration from our daily experience. While going in a bazaar, if a person sees someone crying he asks him, "Why are you crying?" Other passersby also question him. If in the same bazaar another person is going about in a jolly mood, no one goes to him to inquire the cause of his happiness. Happiness is considered to be natural condition of man. He seeks it all the time. Sorrow is repugnant to man. It is a weakness of man to give room to grief. By falling prey to grief in many lives, man is perpetually plunged in sorrow. For a person who has firm faith in God there will be no cause for sorrow. Those who give way to sorrow are persons who have not understood the Divine Principle. God is one. He appears to people in different names and forms. Failing to recognise that God is one, people suffer from many difficulties. They worship God as Allah, Buddha, Rama, Krishna, Jesus, etc. These names have been given after their advent in the world and these are not inherent in them. The names are of passing significance.

Happiness is union with God

All that is connected with body is temporary and transient.

What men should seek is enduring bliss. Happiness is union with God.

Buddha prescribed five duties: good vision, good thoughts, listening to good things, good speech, and good actions. These five-fold duties constitute true sadhana (spiritual practice). Man is misusing the talents given to him by the Divine. He is giving free vent to the six cardinal vices like lust, anger, and greed. They are not the gifts of the Divine. They have been fostered by the food people eat. They are animal qualities which have to be got rid of.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 204

People should speak the truth and avoid speaking what is unpleasant even if it is truth. The entire gamut of human life should be based on truth.

Bharatiya (Indian) culture has placed the foremost emphasis on Speak the truth; act righteously. Speaking truth is a supreme virtue for all people, anywhere. In any circumstance one should adhere to truth. Truth is God incarnate. Righteousness should accompany one like a shadow. When you have truth and righteousness as your guiding stars you can achieve anything in life. All powers are inherent in these two virtues. Man can realize bliss only when he turns his vision inward. Only proximity to God can confer happiness. It cannot be had elsewhere, from anyone else.

It is a mark of ignorance to expect that some other person will give you happiness. Buddha felt sad that people should be subject to such ignorance. He practiced many spiritual exercises and came to a certain decision. He decided to go to Gaya and experience bliss by his own way. He found the source of bliss within himself. He realised it could not be got from outside. Every man's heart is the dwelling place of God. Hence everyone should take good care of it and cultivate it as the source of divine bliss.

Cultivate sacred feelings

Because Buddha's teachings were not properly propagated, Buddhism steadily declined in this country. All religions suffer a decline because those who profess them do not practice them in their daily lives. People should practice what they profess. People should live up to the truths in which they believe. People do not act upon the truths they have learnt.

Unfortunately, people today have only outward vision. The external vision is characteristic of animals. You must sanctify your vision by turning it inward. Then you can get rid of aniSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 205

mal qualities and divinise your life. Hence, develop godly feelings within you.

The divine dwells in the heart of everyone. You must enthrall those who entertain godly feelings. Such people should not be discouraged. Divine feelings arise in one only as a consequence of good deeds done in many lives. Only a sacred heart can experience the Divine. The pursuit of any object other than the Divine is a futile exercise worldly possessions come and go, but divinity comes and grows.

The way to God

Embodiments of Love! You have all come from many distant parts of the world. You have come to experience the joy of participating in the Buddha Purnima celebrations. You need not have come all the way from your distant places. Buddhi represents the intellect. That intellect must be used properly. Then you will realize what is implied in Buddhism.

People talk about spiritual exercises and waste their lives. All these pursuits are waste of time. It is enough if you develop sacred feelings. The chief sadhana (spiritual exercise) consists of getting rid of bad thoughts and cultivating good qualities. Whatever pilgrim center you may visit, try to shed your bad tendencies. Develop good qualities instead.

People speak about nirvana. It is equated with moksha or liberation. You must aim at achieving this liberation. Nirvana means experiencing bliss in the last moments of your life. Man does not realize what it is that he should seek and what he should reject.

There are three things required to be done in life. You should try to do good to those that have done harm to you. You must forget the harm done by others and also the good you have done to others. So you should forget what needs to be forgotten and remember those things that require to be remembered. What are the things you have to remember? The good that others have done to you. You must remember the good that has been done to you as something sacred. You must express your gratitude to them.

Make all your actions conform to righteousness (dharma).

Whatever actions you do remembering God will get sanctified thereby.

See no evil; See what is good.

Hear no evil; Hear what is good.

Speak no evil; Speak what is good.

Think no evil; Think what is good.

Do no evil; Do what is good.

This is the way to God.

This is the essence of Buddha's teachings. When you are indulging in evil pursuits through your senses, how can you get peace? Peace should come from hridaya (the spiritual heart) filled with compassion.

Embodiments of Love! The Divine dwells in each of us in the form of Love.

Quest for Truth

Neither by penance nor by bathing in sacred rivers

Nor by study of scriptures nor by japa

Can the ocean of Samsara be crossed

Without serving godly men.

[Sanskrit sloka]

Embodiments of Love! Man adopts various means to achieve liberation (from the bondage of mundane existence).

Penance is performed for whose sake? It is for one's own benefit and not for the good of others, nor even for the Supreme Self. In the performance of japa (recitation of the Lord's name), it must be noted that it is done for one's own satisfaction and not for the welfare of others. What should one do to secure redemption from the cycle of worldly existence? Chanting the Lord's name or performing sacrifices or doing other rituals will be of no avail. You have to render service to your fellow human beings.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 208

Service is true worship

Seva (service) is the highest form of worship and the best penance. Seva is the most important form of reciting the Lord's name. Money that is lost can be earned again. Lost friends may be got back again. Even the loss of a wife can be made up by remarriage. But, if the present body is lost, it cannot be got back again. Hence, the body is highly sacred.

For what purpose should this sacred body be protected?

The body has to be protected because verily it is the primary means of achieving dharma.

Human birth is a rare privilege. It is highly sacred and sublime.

Having been born as human beings, if men do not realize the preciousness of human life, what is the use of being born as human? Man is endowed with the gift of memory. Reflection is natural to him. The search for the meaning of life is an admirable quality. It is as a result of this search that man's creative faculties have resulted in great achievements in the fields of science and in other fields of knowledge.

But, owing to their failure to use the intellect properly and on account of misdirected search, people are lost in different kinds of inquiry. One person sees a tree. He sees only the branches and not the roots. Another sees the roots and not the branches. This is not the right way to find out the real truth about anything.

Real inquiry into the truth calls for an inquiry both into the nature of the branches and the nature of the roots and of the tree as a whole. The scientist looks only at the branches. But the student of the roots is a Vedantin. Whether one is a scientist or a Vedantin, the pursuit of truth calls for a study of the branches, the roots, and the tree integrally.

There is an illustration for this from the scriptures. The rakshasas (demons) and the devas (gods) churned the Ocean of Milk (to get nectar from it.) The first product to come of the Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 209

churning was the dreadful poison, halahala. Not deterred by this outcome, they continued with the churning of the ocean. In the process, Lakshmi (the goddess of prosperity), marvelous beings like Airavatha, the divine elephant, and finally amritam (nectar) came out of the ocean. How could they secure all these? Because of their persistence in their efforts.

People today should turn their hearts toward the search for truth. The human heart is a symbol of the Ocean of Milk. If, in this ocean, the rope of wisdom is used for churning the heart, some disappointments and failures may occur. Without succumbing to these failures, if man continues his efforts, he will secure precious things like truth, righteousness, and justice. Qualities like forbearance and compassion will also emerge.

All arts originated from the search for truth

People should endeavor to cultivate qualities like tolerance, love, sympathy, righteousness, justice, and truth. People do not give any importance to this quest for truth. The search for truth is being directed toward worldly objects, which are ephemeral and worthless. Men should really dedicate themselves to the quest for the truth that is eternal. All arts have originated from the search for truth.

In this search for truth, though God may not be realised, there will be indications pointing to the Divine. How does this happen? For instance; one may point to the Pole Star (Dhruva Nakshatra) as the star that is seen above the branch of a tree. As a matter of fact, there is no connection between the branch of the tree and the Pole Star. The branch, however, indicates the direction in which the Pole Star is to be seen.

Likewise, all our directions, all the words we utter, all our behavior, all that we see are all related to the search for the truth. All of them testify to the existence of God.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 210

For instance, we look at the vast ocean. We feel happy on seeing its vastness. We see a high mountain. It arouses a feeling of joy. Looking at a densely wooded forest, your heart is gladdened. These are all signs of the discovery of truth. Though you do not see God in them, they indicate the presence of the Divine in them.

A big tree grows from a small seed. A chick comes out of an egg. One being is born from another. A flower gives fragrance. You get butter from milk. All these are facts discovered in the search for truth.

God is immanent in all objects

The whole cosmos functions on the basis of three types of activity. These are what we experience in our daily life. One is the act of creation. The second is sustenance of creation. The third is the dissolution of what is created. Creation, sustenance and dissolution are all happenings of everyday experience. We witness them everyday. All of them testify to the existence of the Divine who is the embodiment of Truth.

Without realising basic truth, people are engaged in controversies about the whereabouts of God. It is easy to raise questions about God. But it is difficult to make the search for God. Why? God is the truth of all truths. He is present as truth even in untruth. He is bad in badness and good in goodness. He is the merit in the meritorious and the sin in the sinful.

It is in this context that the Gita declares that the Lord is present as the essence (rasa) in all things. God is the sweet essence in the syrup. There can be no syrup without sugar. Likewise God is immanent in all objects. He is like butter in milk, fragrance in a flower, the good element in every object. This is the significance of the scriptural dictum: "Rasovai Sah" (He is the essence of everything).

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 211

God is immanent in everything in the cosmos like sugar in syrup. This is not visible to the eye. It has to be experienced. Creation, sustenance, and dissolution go on according to the predetermined laws. The Vedas have described the master of these three activities as God. It is reaffirmed by the Upanishads. The Quran, the Bible, the Granth Saheb (of the Sikhs) all these have described how the presence of God can be inferred from various indications.

There is nothing in the cosmos that is not subject to these three processes. None can deny this truth. A philosopher or a scientist, an engineer or a doctor, or anyone else has to accept this fact. The master of this process is called God.

What does GOD signify? G stands for generation (or creation).

O stands for organization:(sustaining the creation). D stands for destruction (or dissolution). All these three aspects can be noticed when we examine any object. All three processes take place according to the will of the Divine. The entire cosmos is encompassed by these three processes.

Happiness is consummation of suffering

How is one to realise this truth? All impulses of man arise from the heart. When the heart is kept pure, all our thoughts, words, and actions become sweet. When the heart is dedicated to right purposes, all our actions become righteous and our life gets redeemed. All that is good or bad in us emanates from the heart. Good and bad are seldom separate from each other. They are inseparable. Happiness is not a separate state. It is the consummation

of suffering.

The oneness of the Divine subsumes everything. Humanness is the means to realise this oneness. The scriptures have declared that the same Divine Spirit dwells in all beings.

The human body is encased in five sheaths: annamaya kosa (the sheath of food or physical sheath), pranamaya kosa

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 212

(the vital sheath), manomaya kosa (the mental sheath), vijnanamaya

kosa (the sheath of wisdom), and anandamaya kosa (the sheath of bliss).

Among the five sheaths, vijnanamaya kosa (the sheath of wisdom) is present only in man and not in other beings. Man should realize the preciousness of this gift of wisdom sheath. It should not be misused. Man is endowed with so many noble and estimable qualities that he should not be treated as a being of no account.

Forgetting all his immense potentialities and treating the physical as most important, man is leading a meaningless life.

It is not the physical (annamaya kosa) that is really important.

As long as life is based on the physical alone, man can have no peace.

Science and spirituality

The sage Narada, who was proficient in 64 branches of knowledge, suffered from lack of peace, so he went to Sanat Kumara. He appealed to him, Swami! Dispel my ignorance and teach me the way to attain peace.

Sanat Kumara said, Narada! There is no field of knowledge in which you are not proficient. You know all the methods prescribed by the Vedas, the Upanishads, and other Sastras (spiritual texts). But all this knowledge has not conferred any happiness on you. All this knowledge is concerned with the phenomenal world, which is transient in its character. You cannot secure peace till you gain knowledge of the Eternal. The same truth is declared by scientists when they say that where science ends spirituality begins.

Science is concerned with all the phenomena in nature. It furnishes what is required for the physical body. It is doubtless essential to take care of the body. But the body should not be deemed as the sole truth.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 213

However, one should devote all efforts to its maintenance and comfort. All achievements are dependent on the body. Even the Divine can be realised through the body. But the body is not yourself. It is only an instrument for realising God. Moreover, the Supreme Atmic Principle (Paramatma) is immanent in it.

Love is man's most divine quality

There are many vital things to be achieved in the world.

For all of them, the primary basis is love. What could be accomplished by love and goodwill was demonstrated by one of the Prime Ministers of the U.K., William Gladstone, during the reign of Queen Victoria. He was described by his biographer as a noble man, who discharged his duties with love and with a spirit of sacrifice.

Man has many sacred qualities, like love and sacrifice, but he does not put them into practice wholeheartedly. There is divinity in every man. Without recognising this divinity, man is wasting his life on mundane pleasures. Man is the most valuable creation in the world. All things, however precious, derive their value from man.

In man, the most divine quality is love. Love is God. Live in love. Cultivate love for all. This vast world calls for largehearted love. Then humanness will become manifest. Troubles and difficulties are incidental to human existence. But they will pass in due course. What are permanent are the values we cherish.

In the world, every country has its own ideals and aspirations. Every country should adhere to its dharma, its traditional values. When a country disregards its ideals, it goes down as a nation.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 214

Bharatiya culture is rooted in divinity

The culture of Bharat (India) is a glorious one. It has survived the vicissitudes of five thousand years in its history. A huge banyan tree is sustained by the fact that its roots go deep down into the earth to preserve it. In many countries, their ancient culture has vanished long ago. But only Bharatiya (Indian) culture has survived from the distant past to the present day. What is the reason? The divine roots of that culture have gone down to the core of the earth and established themselves firmly. It is that divinity which is sustaining this culture.

The culture of Bharat should not be considered merely as a catalogue of ideals. It is a perennial source of inspiration and example. In spite of other changes, it has remained the same. The perennial message of this culture is not properly recognised. Despite the remarkable progress in science, peace is eluding the advanced countries. What happiness can there be when there is no peace? Churchill once observed that man had achieved many victories but had not conquered his senses.

Prahlada conveyed the same lesson to his father. If a man has no control over his mind, what is the use of all other conquests? Control of the mind is the first requisite. It can be achieved only by pursuing the spiritual path and not by any other means. What is the significance of the Guru Purnima, which we are celebrating today? People consider a person who imparts knowledge as a preceptor. But most of them are mere teachers, not preceptors (gurus). There is only one guru, and He is God. Many who describe themselves as gurus collect contributions from their disciples on this day. The letter Gu signifies one who transcends all attributes. Ru signifies one who has no form. Only God can be regarded as one who is beyond attributes and forms.

In another sense, the term guru means one who dispels ignorance. Most so-called gurus are engaged in worldly activities. In the Kali Age, even spirituality has become a kind of business!

People should understand the distinction between worldly love and spiritual love. Worldly love is based on the desire to receive. Divine love yearns to give. God's love goes on giving. This is the true mark of divinity. It is a sign of purity. Spirituality is opposed to the ways of the world. Worldly activities cannot always be avoided. But if whatever is done is made an offering to please God, it gets sanctified. Whatever you achieve, treat it as a gift from God. You will then realize your true humanness.

True humanness consists in the unity of good conduct, good thoughts and good speech. Never depart from truth. Let love flow freely from your heart.

Mind's role in health and disease

At a recent meeting in Bangalore, a devotee said, I am constantly bathing in the river of life flowing in Bangalore. But where is this river of life to be found in Bangalore? He indicated that he considered the drainage water in the city as lifegiving river. It flows on forever and is never dry. It is no wonder that people bathing in such life-giving rivers are full of diseases.

What are the causes of the maladies afflicting people today? Impure air, polluted water, adulterated foodstuffs, etc. Nor is that all. Even the minds are polluted. These mental ailments are the cause of man's degradation. Most of the diseases are caused by aberrations of the mind. Ninety per cent of the diseases are psychological. Constant thinking about one's health is also the cause of many diseases. A heart specialist, who was constantly examining heart patients, was worried Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 216 about this own heart. Ultimately he died of heart attack. Another doctor, who specialized in treating digestion disorders, ultimately died of gastric troubles by worrying about his own digestion!

The mind has thus a vital role in one's health or illness.

That was why the sages declared, The mind is the cause of man's bondage or liberation. When the mind is directed toward sacred things, everything in a one's life becomes sacred.

In such a state, all that you think, see or hear becomes pure and sacred.

The heart is like a lock with the mind as the key. Turn the key toward God, you develop detachment. Turn the mind toward the world, you get attachment. Our minds should not be immersed in mundane concerns. Deem everything in the world as divine.

True yearning for God is essential to experience Him

Once Vivekananda went to Swami Ramakrishna Paramahansa and asked him, Have you seen God?

Yes, said Ramakrishna.

In what form? asked Vivekananda.

Ramakrishna replied, I am seeing him just as I am seeing you.

Why, then, am I unable to see Him?

Ramakrishna explained that if he yearned for God with the same intensity with which he was yearning for many other things, he would be able to experience God. Ramakrishna said that people shed tears for relations, wealth, and many other things, but how many shed tears for God? Ramakrishna advised Vivekananda to yearn for God with all his heart and soul. God is then bound to manifest Himself to him.

If we are keen to experience the Divine, we must devote ourselves to the Divine. People go through various troubles for the sake of wealth, relations, position, and power. If they were Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 217 to devote a small fraction of that time to thoughts of God, they would experience freedom from the fear of death. If you think only of world, how can you get peace and bliss?

Love the Lord who resides in your heart

Concentrate on the love of God. Although one's mother, father, and preceptor are to be adored as divine beings, they are not God. God should be worshipped as mother, father, preceptor, kinsman, and friend. Father, mother, and preceptor dwell in their respective abodes. But God dwells in your heart. Love the Lord who resides in your heart. All other objects of love are impermanent. What is the use of education if you have not learnt to worship God?

What does the worship of God mean? Practices like meditation, japa and penance are all tainted by selfishness. True worship of God consists in seeking union with God by realising one's own divinity. With every breath, man proclaims that he and the Divine are one in the mantra So-Ham, expressed through inhalation and exhalation.

Men must recognize that the body becomes a sacred shrine (kshetra) because the indweller is God (Kshetrajna). To know that God is the indweller will free a person from all bad qualities. Egoism is the worst enemy of man. Possessiveness (mamakara) is another evil trait. Both these should be banished, since they are at the root of all vices. When the two evil traits go, man becomes divinised.

By developing love, one sees the Divine in all beings. It is like wearing coloured glasses. If you see the world through the glasses of love, you will see love everywhere. The glasses and the vision must be in harmony. Only with the eye of love can you use the glasses of love to see the loveliness of the world. There is no greater spiritual path than the path of love. It is through love that such noble qualities as kindness, compassion and sympathy are fostered.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 218

Embodiments of Love! You are carrying on a variety of spiritual exercises (sadhanas). God does not seek your sadhanas. Nor does He seek your devotion. He seeks only your love.

Difference between a devotee and a servant of God

A short while ago, K.R. Prasad, a Member of the Sathya Sai Central Trust, came to Me. In the course of our talk he asked Me, What is the difference between a bhakta (devotee) and a dasa (servant of the Lord)?

I told him, Dasa is one who seeks to serve the Lord using his body for the purpose. Bhakta is one who is always thinking about God wherever he may be. The devotee is one who always and at all times contemplates on God Sarvada Sarvakaaleshu Sarvatra Hari Chintanam (Dasa is always thinking of service to God).

Sankaracharya had five disciples. One of them was purehearted. The other disciples were keenly studying the Sastras, the Upanishads, and other texts. They were also learning logic and grammar. One day, Sankaracharya was teaching these disciples the principles of logic.

One of them was primarily concerned with service to the guru; he regarded himself as a dasa of the guru. He was engaged in gathering clothes of the guru after the morning ablutions, taking them to the Ganga, washing them, drying them, and bringing them back to the ashram. Thus he was totally involved in attending to the personal needs of the guru. He kept the guru's clothes clean, chanting all the while the name of the guru.

Once, on his way back from the other bank of the river, he did not realize that the Ganga was in spate. As he was crossing the river, it rose up to the level of his neck. He looked around, but had no fear whether he would be washed away by the swelling waters. His only worry was how to take the clothes to the guru even at the cost of his life. Placing the clothes on his Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 219 head and chanting the word, guruji! guruji, he continued wading through the river. Because of his intense devotion to his guru, at every step he took there was a lotus-shaped stone on which he could place his foot.

He thereby earned the appellation Padmapada. Sankaracharya called him and imparted his teachings to him. He told Padmapada: Service to the guru is a great virtue. You have adored the guru as God. Guru represents the Divine Trinity and is the Supreme Self.

God alone is the real Guru

Today, the scriptural saying that the Guru is Brahma, Vishnu, and Maheswara should be understood not in the literal sense but in the sense that God alone is the real guru. Sankara taught Padmapada that individual preceptors should not be worshipped as gods. Then, he imparted to Padmapada the sacred truth.

The other four disciples used to treat Padmapada previously as an ignoramus. After receiving the teachings from Sankaracharya, Padmapada could repeat the entire Vedic texts at one stroke. He became a good exponent of Vedanta, better than many scholars.

One day Sankaracharya summoned Padmapada and asked him to whom he was preaching and what message he was giving to them. Padmapada burst into a hymn in praise of Siva and said that Sankara was the inspiration for all his teachings and all his discourses were an offering to Sankara. Who is Sankara? Sankara is one who is free from sanka (doubts). No one should have any doubts about God. The doubting man can achieve nothing. With total faith and total love, you can accomplish anything.

It should be realized that proficiency in fields like music, literature, and the arts is secured by the grace of the Divine. All fine arts are gifts from God. Nothing can be claimed as one's own achievement. The recipient of God's grace will lack nothing. He will have no troubles, and he will commit no wrongs because he has surrendered to God. The person who considers God as his all becomes one with God (himself). Hence, direct your minds toward God.

True education fosters human values

Daivaadheenam Jagathsarvam

Sathyaadheenamtu Daivatham

That Sathyam Uthamaadheenam

Uthamo Paradevatha

The whole world is under the control of God;

God is subject to truth.

Truth is subject to noble souls.

Such noble people are the embodiments of Divinity.

Students! Embodiments of Love! Teachers and promoters of education! Today, people have not understood Divinity, have not understood the meaning of God, and are wasting their bodies, their time, and all precious things in life. Human values do not depend on education alone. They depend more on culture.

What do you mean by culture? Culture means giving up one's bad conduct, bad behaviour, bad deeds and cultivating good thinking, fostering good sentiments that lead to good actions.

The state of the whole world depends on human activity.

When the actions of the people are noble, the country is equally noble. The people's behaviour and conduct depend on their thoughts. Thoughts depend on the mind. Good thoughts are the basis of human values.

Good thoughts yield goodness

Because human values are not practised, the world is in a mess. The head and the heart are two important organs in every human being. Thoughts that arise in the head are worldly and fickle. They are influenced by external activities. Reading, writing, eating, and earning are all outward activities. They are the products of the head.

All sacred feelings arise from the heart. Sacred qualities like compassion, love, sympathy, forbearance, and truth emanate from the heart. They are all called inward qualities. The world is nothing but a combination of external and internal tendencies. Just as a sapling grows into a huge tree giving you flowers and fruits, likewise, thoughts that are sacred lead to actions that yield fruits of all goodness.

Man is combination of three entities: the body, the mind, and the Atma (spirit). First comes the body. It is the instrument of action. The mind thinks. The conscience is the Atma, or spirit that exists as consciousness. So, human life is a combination of these three aspects: action, thinking, and consciousness. If the body functions independently without consulting the mind and the spirit, the activity will be animal activity. If the mind acts independently without coordinating with the body and the spirit, the activity is likely to be demonic. If the spirit acts independently, the actions will transcend the body and the mind.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 223

The true mark of a human being is goodness. Goodness is not a product of academic education. Can bookish knowledge be called true education? Without spiritual knowledge and wisdom, can a person be called educated?

Every student must cultivate human values

Education must inculcate respect for human values like truth, righteousness, love, and peace. Education is for life. Life is for man. Man is there for society. Society is meant for spirituality.

The spirituality is there for the nation. The nation is part of the world, and the world is for peace.

Today everyone wants peace. In fact you can attain and acquire peace only out of human values. For peace and happiness, human values are most important. Bereft of human values, man can never be in peace.

Without understanding this principle, man tries to acquire education. Man today considers that receiving information is education. It is not information that confers human values.

Modern education makes a man machine, a computer. Greatness lies in becoming not a computer but a composer. You have to acquire education to make your life ideal.

Modern education tends to make men selfish. There should be a limit even for selfishness. Every student must necessarily cultivate human values. The Government, by establishing educational institutions in every village and street, thinks that the education in the country has progressed.

What are the qualities of education? Virtues, good intellect, adherence to truth, devotion, discipline, and duty are essential qualities. Education must teach these values. Students have to learn these things.

What is the progress in modern education? In fact, students try to ruin those who are responsible for their food. They harm those who help them. They make fun of those who teach them.

This is the progress in modern education. Students have to foster obedience, humility, and human values and attain Divinity.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 224

This is true education. Modern students do not understand what true education is. As a result, society is polluted.

Truth and other human qualities have been distorted and perverted altogether. Sanctity and sacred quality of human nature is fast disappearing. The practise of righteousness, compassion are viewed as bad practices. Do you call this progress in education?

No. you should express human values by practicing righteousness and cultivating compassion.

The true meaning of education

With good education, you will have culture,

When you have culture, that is true life.

If you have good education, you will be happy.

When you are happy, you will be peaceful.

When you have good education,

You will be in good company.

When you are in good company,

You will have good qualities.

When you have good education,

Your life will find fulfillment.

Thereby, you can attain liberation.

[Poem]

Students should adhere to the twin ideals of sathya and dharma (truth and righteousness). In this world, there is nothing greater than truth. You should become embodiments of truth. In your daily life you should follow the path of truth and realise the Divine.

You have to water a sapling to get fruit and seeds. Love, which is natural to human beings, should be watered with faith to sustain it. We should make an effort to attain peace in the true sense of the word. The peace that we get today is momentary. We cannot call it peace anyway.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 225

The history of Bharat is one long saga of sacrifice. In the modern world, Bharat stands for all that is sacred. Since, ancient times, it has been a model and an ideal for the rest of the world. There is Truth in the air of Bharat. There is dharma in the dust of Bharat. There is love in the sands of Bharat. And there is compassion in the water of Bharat. Forbearance is the core of Bharatiya (Indian) culture. In order to enjoy and experience these values, even foreigners have decided to come and settle down in Bharat. In ancient times, Bharatiyas were determined to follow the principle of sacrifice. They were dedicated to righteousness and truth. Having been born in the sacred land of Bharat, you should not forget this important aspect. If you go through the history of this sacred land, you will certainly understand that Bharat never tried to invade or conquer any country. They had to resist foreign invaders. Bharatiyas stand for selflessness. They were never selfish at any point of time. Bharatiyas never coveted the lands of others. The history of Bharat is one long saga of sacrifice.

Emperor Harischandra was prepared to give up everything for the sake of Truth. Emperor Sibi sacrificed his own flesh and blood to save a dove. Bharat has given birth to men and women who stood for sacrifice. Modern students are trying to change this land of sacrifice, from a land of spiritual practices into a land of pleasure seekers. But all pleasure is transient. You should seek the bliss that is enduring by realizing your inherent Divinity.

Yesterday, an American boy came to Swami. Bhagavan asked him, How old are you?

The boy said, Seven years.

Swami asked him: How do you know?

He said, My mother and father told me.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 226

Swami said, It is only one that has become seven. One plus one plus one comes to seven. Without one there cannot be seven. All numbers come out of one. Truth is one; scholars call it by many names. Names and forms differ, but Divinity is one and the same in all. First, have faith in yourself. Without self-confidence, you cannot have faith in yourself.

Then how can you have faith in others? Let this visvasa (faith) become your svasa (life-breath). Let our education become true education. Education that is not practised is bookish knowledge.

You should have love for your country also. Rama Said, Motherland is greater than heaven itself. That spirit of patriotism is very important.

Truth and love shape dharma

God is the embodiment of love.

If you don't understand even a fraction of that love in this world,

how do you expect to realize truth and fulfill your ambitions?

Embodiments of Divine Love! Peace, friendship, servitude, sweetness, affection these are all synonyms of the basic principle of love. The more a man develops love, the more blissful he will be. Man aspires to be blissful. Man always wants to be happy. What is the reason? Man is born out of this bliss. He lives in bliss. He ends in bliss. This bliss is divine. Though this divine quality is latent in him, man searches for it outside. Bliss does not have a separate existence.

Man strains himself thinking that he would be happy by learning. He makes every effort to take up a job, to be happy.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 228

Thinking that he would find happiness in it, he struggles hard to occupy exalted positions. He thinks that he would be happy by becoming a householder. In spite of all these efforts, he is far from this happiness.

Of all the attributes and names of God, Sat-Chit-Ananda is the most precious. To attain such a bliss, one has to follow this path of Sat-Chit-Ananda. Sat is the truth that remains the same in all the three worlds and in all the three periods of time. In order to know this truth, one has to tread along this path only. Chit means total awareness. Out of this total awareness, you can attain Divinity. Where these three principles, Sat-Chit-Ananda, exist, there is supreme bliss, Brahmananda. Why does God incarnate?

Man undertakes many spiritual pursuits to attain this bliss (Divinity). But they all give him temporary satisfaction, not lasting bliss. They are all worldly pursuits. Once you give up these external paths and take to the inward path, you attain bliss. Those who want this eternal, supreme, non-dual bliss should follow this path of Sat and Chit.

In order to reach this blissful state, one has to follow the path of truth. Truth is God. Truth is all pervasive. Truth is beyond time and space and all reckoning. Once you follow this truth, naturally you can attain God, who is the embodiment of truth. This is what Veda means, when it says, Uddhareth Atmanaatmaanam.

(You should work for your own emancipation).

You should know your truth. Investigate your own heart. There lies real bliss.

All physical paths confer temporary satisfaction.

Man has four primary objectives in life. They are dharma (righteousness), artha (wealth), kama (desire), and moksha (liberation). These four objectives give us worldly comforts and bring peace and enjoyment in our life. However, there is a fifth objective of life called Supreme Love. It is the principle of love that makes you love God intensely. The one who understands and follows this sacred text of love will attain liberation.

What is liberation? Mukti (liberation) is that which would put an end to external pursuits.

What is to be offered to God? This body, which is the temple of God, should be offered to God. This is called Pindarpanam.

This body is Pindamu; offering this to God is liberation.

It means only that all actions that we do with this body should be offered to God. This is the fifth objective of human life, i.e. the sacred ideal of love. To teach this sacred rule of love, to pass on the sacred love, to propagate this love, to make people drink the nectar of love, the formless God descends from Goloka to Bhuloka in a human form.

We have to offer our total love to God

The day of descent of God on earth is celebrated as the birthday of God. Why does He incarnate? God descends on earth to make humanity drink the nectar of love and enjoy the sweetness of Divinity. One who drinks this sweet nectar forgets himself and identifies himself with God and enjoys the blissful state thereafter. Shariramaadyam khalu dharma saadhanam, the body is gifted to perform sacred actions.

We have to discharge our duties and sacrifice the fruits of our actions. We have to cultivate the principle of thyaga (sacrifice) and be far off from bhoga (worldly pleasures). God is the embodiment of thyaga. The bliss that you get out of sacrifice is truly divine. Those who want to enjoy the blissful state of God must give up body attachment and turn inward.

We should not spend all our time for our bodily pleasures.

We do need to safeguard our body. What for is the body given? It is given to serve God.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 230

What we need is good character

The body is bound to perish at some point of time. Just for the sake of this fleeting body, we should not waste our time and energy. What we need is good character. The modern student tries to acquire only physical strength, friendship, and wealth. But all these things are not important. Character is important.

Without character, physical strength, friendship, and wealth are of no use. It does not matter even if wealth or friendship is lost, but you should keep up your character.

In the ancient days, Bharathiyas (Indians) believed, If wealth is lost, nothing is lost, if health is lost, something is lost, if character is lost, everything is lost." But due to the effect of Kali Age, people now say, if character is lost, nothing is lost, if health is lost, something is lost, if wealth is lost, everything is lost. This is the modern trend. This is not the path that we have to adopt.

The previous speaker, Prof. Chatterjee, narrated the incident of Krishna lifting the Govardhanagiri, in order to protect the gopalas and gopikas (cowherd lads and maids) from the torrential rain. When Krishna told them to come and take shelter under the mountain, which He had lifted with His small finger, the people were afraid to do so. They doubted His Divinity, thinking Him to be only a small boy. Human beings form their opinion based on the physical frame and physical strength. It is only the Divine that goes by the character and not by the physical strength.

We have to make an effort to know the difference between God's love and human love. God always gives and gives and never receives anything in return, but man always receives and is never prepared to give.

In every activity, we have to inquire the principle of truth.

One who recognizes the truth will always live in bliss. Love is truth, love is life, and love is the goal. Love is second to none;

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 231

love equals love alone. Only through the path of love can you reach the embodiment of love, which is God. It is not physical or worldly love. It is not pravritti [rema], which is external, but it is the nivritti prema, which is eternal and Divine.

It is not a mistake to criticise God out of love

You can win God's love either by criticism or praise. When Dharmaja was offering first respects to Krishna in the open court, Sisupala started criticizing Krishna in many ways.

Dharmaja could not bear this. As he was listening to this uncharitable criticism, he could see the life principle of Sisupala merging in Krishna. This made Dharmaja much more unhappy and dissatisfied. He started wondering how the life principle of a person like Sisupala could merge in the Lord.

Dharmaja requested Narada, who was by his side, to explain how such a thing could happen. Narada said, O king! criticism or praise relate only to the body, not to the spirit.

Moreover, Sisupala criticized Krishna only out of love and not hatred; since he knew that the more he criticized, the sooner he could merge in Him. There is no mistake if you criticize God out of love. Even such a criticism is a kind of praise.

Kamsa, having come to know that he would die at the hands of Krishna, decided to kill Krishna and Balarama. Immediately, he called Akrura and commanded him to go and fetch Balarama and Krishna saying, O Akrura, you are a good friend and devotee of Krishna, if you go, they will surely condescend to your request.

Since he could not disobey the command of the king, Akrura went and met Yashoda and Nanda and told them that Kamsa was performing a yagna and wanted Krishna and Balarama to attend it. But Yashoda and Nanda were not in favor of their children going to Kamsa's palace.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 232

The gopikas love for Krishna

The gopikas (cowherd maids), having heard of this, surrounded Nanda's house and said that Krishna should not go to Mathura, because He was their life and they could not live without Him. They raised objections in several ways. Krishna is the very form of mystery and wonder. He did not utter a word, since he knew that gopikas would not be convinced so easily. So he sat in the chariot and made it disappear with his divine power. Until He reached the banks of Yamuna, no one could see the chariot. Since the gopikas found themselves helpless, they returned to Brindavan. The gopikas had this intense love for Krishna, so they could see this love pervading all over.

Whenever the hearts of human beings become barren, because of unrighteousness and lovelessness, in order to sow the seeds of love and in order to propagate the principle of love, God incarnates. The main mission of God is to develop the principle of love in mankind. Only when we get intoxicated and forget ourselves drinking the nectar of divine love can we find the path to liberation.

In order to experience Sat-Chit-Ananda, we should tread along the path of truth. We should have total understanding of the Self; then we will enjoy the manifestation of God Himself. God is not present in a foreign land, He is present in your body.

Krishna once questioned the gopalas around Him, Who is the true victor?

One of them said, One who emerges victorious in the battlefield is the true victor. A few said, One who can face all the difficulties and troubles with steadfastness and courage is the true victor. In this manner, each gave different answers.

Krishna smilingly said, Gopalas, whatever you mentioned are temporary in nature. None of them can be termed as a true victor. True success lies in controlling one's senses. Then one will be a victor. One has to control the senses. The senses belong to the body. Make this body a temple of God.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 233

It is impossible to understand God

No one can describe God. The gopikas sang, O Krishna, can we understand You? You are smaller than an atom, mightier than the biggest. You are present in all 84 lakhs of species always. Right from the atom to the entire cosmos, You are present everywhere.

It is impossible to understand God. We have to understand Him as the embodiment of love and recognise Him as the embodiment of truth. We should see that we follow the twin principles of truth and love. Then we will be able to control our senses. We cannot control our senses by any spiritual pursuits or physical exercises. All these are temporary. Only through the principles of love and truth is it possible to gain control over the senses. The combination of truth and love would shape into dharma. Therefore, speak the truth and follow dharma. Once we awaken truth within us, we can see God. Ego and attachment are the cause for all misery. In order to give up these two, develop love. Under any circumstances, we should not give up love. Only through love can you develop faith. Love is God, live in love.

The gopikas prayed to Krishna thus,

In order to sow the seeds of love in our barren hearts

In order to see that there will be downpour of rain of love,

So that the rivers of love would flow continuously,

O Krishna! Please play on Your Divine Flute.

Earth, seeds, rain, river, trees, fruits, all are filled with love.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 234

Offer your body to God

Having taken this human form, which is full of love, how is that we have lost it? Because we make use of our love in the worldly sense. When does it become true love? Only when we offer our body to God. This is true offering. Many people offer different things to God, but a true devotee offers himself to God.

Emperor Bali offered himself to God, and he did not have rebirth. We should consider this body as the flower, which has to be offered at the lotus feet of God. Therefore, human life gifted to you has to be spent in doing good actions and ultimately offered to God.

Brahmins think that the word, Pindarpanam is connected with the obituary rites. But that is not so; offering our body to God is the true Pindarpanam. This is true offering that gives us liberation. Once the body is offered to God, there is no attachment (moha). Once attachment is gone, that is liberation

Moha kshayam is moksham. Those, who know this truth and conduct themselves accordingly, can enjoy bliss. Until we reach that sacred exalted state, we have to protect our body.

We have to discharge our responsibilities.

Bharatiyas (Indians), since ancient times, have given top priority to sacrifice. They give utmost importance to dharma. They held the quality of renunciation in the highest regard, and they welcomed truth. Since ancient times, the hearts of Bharathiyas are full of compassion.

I have told students many a times about Max Muller. He was also called Moksha Muller, because of his noble qualities. Though he was a foreigner, his love for Bharat was beyond all limits. He wanted to leave his mortal coil in this sacred land. Many of his friends questioned him as to what was so special about Bharat. He told them, The air of Bharat has truth in it. There is dharma in the dust of Bharat. There is love Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 235 in the mud of Bharat. In the Ganga, there is sacrifice. There is no other country as sacred as Bharat. That which is not present in Bharat is not present anywhere else in the world. Even though born in Bharat and called Bharatiyas, we are not able to recognize the greatness of Bharat. We have to put in great effort in order to know the sanctity and greatness of Bharat.

Significance of Krishna's pranks

One day, Balarama brought a few cowherd boys with him and started complaining to mother Yashoda. O mother, Krishna is always so hungry! He eats at home as well as outside like a glutton. Why should he eat mud? Today, he started eating mud.

Yashoda felt sad and was furious. She caught hold of Krishna's hand and asked, Krishna, am I not serving you enough food? Are you not eating enough butter in the neighborhood? Why have you started eating mud?

Krishna started explaining. O mother, to eat mud am I a child or a madcap? Though Krishna was only 5 years old at that time, by telling His mother that He was not a child or a madcap, He meant to indicate indirectly that He was the mighty Great One. Thus Krishna conveyed many inner secrets. No one can understand Krishna's leelas in depth. They have some external implications and inner significance. But, today, very few people know the inner reality. People are full of doubts. Mother Yashoda saw all the worlds in Krishna's mouth, but she herself doubted. What was the main reason? It was the feeling that Krishna was her son. It is physical attachment that causes doubts.

One should attach oneself to Atma. When Atma merges in Atma, everything becomes unified. This Atmic relationship is spirituality. The body relationship is physical. Therefore, it Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 236 was Krishna who clarified all the doubts, demonstrated, manifested Divinity in everybody. Though all incarnations are Divine, Krishna Avatara was special in this sense that He spent all his time smiling and smiling, full of love. At no point in time was He angry. He was always smiling. This is the main quality of God. God has no trace of ego or pride or jealousy whatsoever.

Such sacred qualities are present only in Sai Avatar again. In no other incarnation was this noticed. Though Divinity is uniform in all the incarnations, each Avatar expressed Himself on the basis of the prevalent circumstances. So, you should develop full faith in God. Just as you have faith in yourself, have faith in God. Faith in yourself, faith in God this is the secret of greatness. You are God, and God is you only. Why do you give scope to doubts? In fact, these doubts will ruin you. So, give up all these doubts. Develop love, follow the path of truth, and experience the Divinity. This is true sadhana (spiritual practice), this is true spirituality.

Glory of Vinayaka

Conquering conceit, one becomes endearing;

Conquering anger, one is free from regrets;

Conquering desire, one becomes prosperous;

Conquering greed, one becomes happy.

Embodiments of divine Love! As long as a man is conceited and egotistic, no one will like him. Even his wedded wife and his own children, though they may appear to respect him externally, will not be happy with an arrogant man. As long as a man is filled with ego, he is unlikely to be really happy.

Therefore, at the very outset, a man should get rid of his ahamkara (ego).

Krodham hithva na sochathi (As long as a man is filled with anger, he cannot experience joy). He is bound to be miserable.

Only when man subdues anger will he be able to experience happiness. As long as one is filled with insatiable desires, one cannot feel really wealthy. The moment man gives up desires, all riches will come to him. As long as man is greedy, he will be a stranger to happiness. When man gives up greed, he will feel endowed with all riches.

The atom and the Atma

The whole cosmos is based on the atom. Whether an object is microcosmic or as vast as the cosmos, it is based on Atmic power. Few can realise fully the power of the atom.

The atom is constituted of energy in all its forms. The words you speak, the objects you see, the sounds you hear, the activities you undertake all are based on the power of the atom. Every moment of every being is based on atomic power. All experience is derived from the energy of the atom.

It has taken scientists thousands of years to discover this truth. But it was recognised by the child Prahlada a long time ago. He declared emphatically, Do not doubt that He (the Lord) is at one place and not at another. You can find him wherever you look for Him.

Prahlada did not conduct any experiments or explorations in space. To those pure of heart, the truth reveals itself spontaneously.

Subtler than the subtlest and vaster than the cosmos, the Atma (spirit) is the atom and the atom is the Atma. This truth was recognised by the child Prahlada as a student. When this truth is recognised, the whole cosmos will be seen as permeated by the Divine, as a manifestation of the Divine.

In every object there is the power of the atom. You cannot find any object or any place in which the atom is not present. All objects are compesd of atoms. All forms of energy are manifestations of the atom. The whole earth is made up of atoms. In this world, every human being is a kind of small generator of electricity. The magnetic power in him becomes electrical energy. It is because of this energy that man is able Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 239

to walk, see, hear, and do many other things. The heart in every man is like a radio station. The energy in every being is based on atomic power. There are light waves. These generate magnetic energy. Recognising the connection between matter and energy, Einstein affirmed their convertibility. These findings of the scientists confirm the Vedantic view that the Brahman (the Divine) permeates the whole cosmos. Only the terms used are different. The scientists declare that the cosmos is constituted of atoms. The Vedantins declare that the cosmos is Brahmamayam (permeated by the Divine). What the scientists and the sages declare is the one truth, called by different names.

Ganapathi is the lord of intellect and wisdom. Take the word Ganapathi. Ga represents buddhi (the intellect). Na signifies jnana (wisdom). Ganapathi is the pathi (lord) of the intellect and wisdom. To worship the intellect and wisdom is one form of worship of Ganapathi.

Ganapathi represents the combination of much energy. Because of this, the name Ganapathi is appropriate for him. Nor is that all. He is the lord of all the Ganas (celestial hosts). Hence, he is hailed as Ganapathi.

He is called by another name, Vinayaka. There is no master above him; he is the master of all.

Another name for him is Vigneswara. This name means that he is the lord of every form of aiswarya (wealth). He is the embodiment of all forms of wealth.

When we explore the inner meanings of all the attributes associated with his name, we find that he possesses all powers. They include the all-pervading cosmic vibrations, the power that is latent in all animate and inanimate objects, and the effulgence of the all-pervading Light. He is the energy that animates every being.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 240

There is electro-magnetic energy in every body. Nature is the embodiment of the same energy. This energy may assume different forms, but its essential character is one and the same. A lighted bulb, a fan that is revolving, and many other things working through electrical power depend on the same kind of current. The energy may manifest itself in the form of light, heat, or magnetic energy, but it proclaims the power of the Divine, which is the source of all energy.

In all human beings, humanness is present equally. The electro-magnetic energy in man expresses itself in the form of radiation. It is also called reflection of the Inner being.

The power of sight, hearing, speech, digestion, and movement of the limbs is derived from this energy. Water also contains this energy. In fact, the entitire cosmos is permeated by this divine energy.

On the basis of this, Vedanta declares, Sarvam khalu idam Brahma (verily, all this is Brahman). Recognising this, the Vedas declared, Sarvam Vishnumayam jagath (The cosmos is permeated by the Divine). Hence, there is no room for making any distinction between Ganapathi, Vishnu, Siva, Sakthi, or man.

In all human beings, humanness is present equally. It manifests itself externally in various forms. This is only the external manifestation of nature, not its internal essence. The inner aspect is present in all begins in a subtle formless substance. That is atomic energy. Several means were employed for harnessing this energy for various purposes.

On this auspicious day of Vinayaka Chaturthi, what is it that we offer to Vinayaka? All offerings to Vinayaka are free from the use of oil in their preparation. Boiled rice is made into balls, which are filled with thil seeds and jaggery (a form of sugar). They are then mixed with rice flour and cooked. In the Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 241 offering, there is no trace of any cooking oil. Hence, the offerings are called oilless edibles.

What is the significance of such preparations? It is found that oilless edibles are easily digestible. The thil seeds serve to keep down the bad effect of phlegm, bile, and wind in the body. The jaggery in the preparation is conducive to improvement of vision. All these preparations are intended to promote health and are not designed to propitiate the Divine. The energy derived from these edibles is conducive to the promotion of longevity.

Vinayaka is known for his high intelligence. The very sight of his figure gives joy to many. The form itself is extraordinary. He has a big belly, beautiful tusk, penetrating eyes, handsome ears all these are harmoniously balances to produce an attractive form.

The reason for endowing the deity with an elephant's head. What, it may be asked, is the reason for endowing the deity with an elephant's head? The elephant is well known for its high intelligence. Among animals, it has a prodigious size. No other animal is cast in such a big mould. The elephant's foot encompasses the footprint of the lion, esteemed as the lord of the animal kingdom. In the jungle, hunters follow the footprints of the lion to trace it to its lair. But if an elephant has walked over those footprints, they are totally erased. Moreover, the elephant is the pathfinder for human beings. In a forest covered with dense bushes, humans cannot easily find their way. But once an elephant has goine through the jungle, its trail becomes a path for others to follow. All these traits of the elephant show that in the journey of life, one can find one's way if one has the intelligence of the elephant. Because he is endowed with the form of an elephant, Ganapathi is associated with the quality of intelligence.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 242

Primacy of Vinayaka

Once, Parvathi and Parameswara, parents of Ganapathi and Subramanya, wanted to test their intelligence. They summoned the two sons and told them to go around the world to find out which of the two would do it quicker. The elder of the two, Ganapathi, did not stir from his place. The younger son, Subramanya, mounted his peacock and set out on a round-theworld trip. With a great deal of effort, he completed the trip and was approaching his parents. Seeing him from a distance, Ganapathi circumambulated his parents and claimed himself to be the winner.

The mother, Parvathi, told Ganapathi, Ganapathi! Here is your brother, who has gone around the world. And you have not stirred from this place. You made no effort at all. How can you claim that you have gone around the world? How can I regard you as the winner?

Ganesha replied, Mother! The cosmos is the combination of matter and energy the unity of father and mother. When I go around You, I have gone around the world itself, since You are the parents of the cosmos. There is no place where You two are not present. I see Your omnipresence. By circumambulating both of You, I can claim to have gone around the cosmos.

The moment He heard these words, Easwara was astonished at the high intelligence of His son. Ganesha had recognised the truth about His divine parents. Easwar said, Vinayaka! You are an exemplary son for one and all. Let the world worship you first before they offer worship to me. I am not as intelligent as you are. We are your parents, but not more intelligent than you.

Easwara declared, I have many attributes, but not your intelligence. Hence, before offering worship to Me, let all people worship you. This is the boon I confer on you.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 243

Easwara is a parent who conferred such an honour of a higher status than His own on His son. Hence, Ganapathi represents no commonplace principle. He is the embodiment of all potencies. He is the abode of every kind of intelligence. The Saraswathi (goddess of wisdom) dwells in His belly. Nothing untoward can happen wherever He is present.

Ganapathi occupies the position of one who is the source of all prosperity. Morevoer, when He is invoked before any undertaking, there will be no impediments to its completion.

Today, every kind of people the welathy, the wise, the scholars, and the common people worship Ganapathi. Students, with a view to secruing the grace of the goddess of wisdom and ensuring that there is no hindrance to their studies, place their books before the idol Ganapathi and worship Him.

Bharat and Bharati

The name of our nation, Bharat, is derived from that of Saraswathi, the goddess of all knowledge and wisdom. Some people wrongly attribute the name Bharat as one derived from the name of Bharatha, the brother of Rama. This is not so. Among the names mentioned in the hymns in praise of Saraswathi is Bharati. With reference to music, the word bharati is significant. Good music has to combine bhava (feeling, represented by the letter bha), raga (tune, ra), and thala (rhythm, thi). The feeling, tune, and rhythm have to be combined to produce good music.

Every music concert begins with a song in adoration of Ganapathi, like Vaathaapi Ganapathim Bhaje! This shows that by worshipping Ganapathi, proficiency in any sphere is achieved.

Ganapathi is not only the lord of various activities but is the presiding deity for all auspicious functions. He can make even inauspicious occasions auspicious. He is always engaged in conferring boons on all. He is the river of prosperity and inSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 244 telligence. With the grace of Ganapathi, any desire can be realised. How to pray?

In praying to Ganapathi, you should not ask for trivial things like passing examinations or getting jobs. You should pray only, Oh Vighneswara! Please see that there are no obstacles in what I want to accomplish. I am worshipping you for this purpose.

Today, few people understand the true spirit of the Ganapathi Thathwa (Principle). They are concerned with the outer forms and ignore the inner esoteric meaning.

This applies to the way many festivals are celebrated. The birthday of Rama is celebrated without understanding the qualities represented by Rama. To be real devotees of Rama, people should cultivate His qualities. To be a true devotee of Krishna, you must be ever in bliss, like Krishna. If you want to be a devotee of Sai, you must be full of love. Love all, serve all.

Sometimes, Swami may appear as if He is not showing His love. This is only an external appearance for the moment. Pots, however different they may appear, are essentially made of clay, and all golden ornaments are essentially gold in substance. Similarly, all actions of Swami are essentially filled with love. You must cultivate this kind of feeling. You must love God with full faith.

The Ganapathi Principle is pregnant with meaning. His story itself is unique. In the Bhagavatha, Pothana declares that the stories of the lord are extraordinary; they are sacred for all the three worlds; they confer all blessings on the listeners and are constantly contemplated upon by saints and sages. This applies to all deities.

Every aspect of the Divine is a mystery. Whatever the Lord says is full of significance. It is pregnant with sacred meaning.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 245

Obey the Lord

Sainath, a member of the university faculty, who had spoken earlier, said that when someone wanted to leave, Swami told him, Wait! But he was in a hurry, bought his ticket, and left Prasanthi Nilayam.

However, he had to wait for a long time there, and even then he could not get what he wanted. If instead he had waited here, it would have been better for him.

After waiting a long time, he came back. Swami told him, Ayya! When I told you not to go, why did you go? There is latent meaning in whatever I say. Some persons tend to treat my words lightly.

Here, people are seated in rows. I move between them. As I move along, various people address various appeals to Me for this or that. Swmai tels them, Wait. Wait. Please sit down. They assume that this means that they should go on sitting and waiting until everyone else has left.

I merely ask them to sit down when they get up from their places. Wait, wait, don't be hasty, is all that I mean. Instead of understanding this properly, they take it to mean that they are asked to wait after all have left. They contniue to sit even after the volunteers ask them to leave.

This is utter foolishness. They should understand words in their proper context and behave appropriately. They must understand the context of time, place, and circumstance and behave in the correct manner.

Devotees worship Vinayaka in different ways. They address the deity, describing his white robe, his moon-like complexion, his four arms, and his ever-smiling face and pray for the removal of all obstacles. Some misguided non-believers interpret the same hymn in a perverse manner.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 246

The true devotee sees the Divine in everything. Ramada sang about the Lord of Bhadrachala, Oh Rama! You are everywhere in the universe.

The power of the Divine permeates every atom in the cosmos. How is this to be recognised? The Divine is effulgent. Devotees envisage the Divine in different ways and express their adoration in various forms.

Abhimanyu (son of Arjuna) knew how to make his way through the Padhma Vyuh (a military formation). But he did not know how to get out of it. The path to God lies through love. With love, you can go anywhere. Love is God. Live in love. Start the day with love, fill the day with love, spend the day with love, and end the day with love. This is the way to God.

Love begets love

How is love to be fostered? Only through love can you foster love. There is no other way. For a plant to grow, you have to use manure and water. Students should realise that to foster love of God, they have to apply the manure of faith and water of love. Only thus can the plant of devotion grow. Never forget God. God alone is everlasting. That is the only Truth. Your parents will pass away some time or other, but God will remain forever. God is eternal.

Always adore God. In addion, love your parents and all others. Your love for God should be steady and unwavering. That love is God. It is the very form of Ganapathi. That love is present in all beings.

You are all manifestations of the Divine. Consider yourselves as divine. There is nothing wrong in that. In terms of the body, you are a human being, but spiritually, you are divine. Lead your life with the awareness Aham Brahmaasmi (I am divine).

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 247

We must think of God every moment of our lives

Rama once invited Hanuman to come near him and asked, In what manner do you worship me?

Hanuman replied, Swami, from the viewpoint of the body, I am Your servant and You are my Lord. Mentally, I consider that I am a spark of Your Divinity. But in terms of the Atma, you are I are one. We are not two at all. Both of us are one. People worship the Divine in three ways. But ultimately they have to realise the third stage. Bodies are different but the Atma (the Self) is one only. This is why the sages declared, Ekam Sath, viprah bahudha vadanthi (the Absolute is One, but the wise call it by different names).

People look upon the Vighneswara festival as some routine affair. But Vighneswara embodies all the forms and all the powers of all the deities. It is not enough to worship Ganesha once a year. We must worship Him always.

We must think of God every moment of our lives. It is in that spirit that everyone is enjoined to offer all actions as designed to please the Divine. Do what you please. Go anywhere you like. But do everything with the feeling that it is to please the Divine. Whatever you do, do it with the feeling that you are doing it for the pleasure of the Divine. Thereby, you will accomplish all your desires. You will experience bliss. See the Divine in everything

Embodiments of Love! In this world, you will not find peace and happiness anywhere. Though man is himself the embodiment of peace and love, man is not able to experience them. Even though he has these sacred qualities in him, he is not able to understand this truth and is carried away by delusions. As a result, he is subjected to endless troubles. In order to experience Divinity and to find peace and happiness, you do not need to search elsewhere. In order to have a vision of your True Self, you need to understand your true identity.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 249

What is that which conceals the Truth from man? It is only the Mind. The clouds that originate from the rays of the Sun cover the Sun Himself. When a strong wind blows, the clouds get scattered, and then you can see the Sun. Just as the clouds cover the Sun, likewise the mind covers the Atma from which it has originated.

Embodiments of Love! No other creature has the divine power present in man. But he is not able to comprehend such divine power latent in him. What is the way to know this? Once you develop friendship with God, you will realise all your powers. The Gita describes God as Suhruth, which means one who is totally selfless, one who does not expect anything in return, one who does not harm anybody, and one who is the embodiment of Love. Man usually expects rewards for the help he renders. But God is the only One who considers the welfare of humanity as His happiness and does not have any expectations whatsoever.

Desires are limitless

Bad qualities like hatred, anger, and desire are responsible for restlessness. The worst enemy of mankind is desire. According to the Gita, desire always remains an enemy to mankind.

So, one should keep desire under control. Desires are capable of ruining not only mankind, but also gods like Indra and Chandra. One can never satisfy one's desires.

Vedanta has compared desire to fire and to the ocean. Fire will never be satisfied, whatever may be the quantity of firewood you put into it. The Gita has given the epithet analam to the fire, which means that it can never be satisfied and keeps asking for more and more. Similar is the case with the ocean. It keeps accepting any number of rivers that merge in it, and yet it remains the same. Ocean and fire have no trace of satisfaction. Therefore, limitless desires are compared to these two.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 250

The whole world is like a book; read it well. Nature is the best teacher. There are lots of things in this world to be known. You cannot find God by going through a book or by undertaking spiritual sadhana. By constantly reading books, one becomes a book himself! All that is contained in pusthaka (book) is stored in the masthaka (head).

Reading books will only increase your doubts. The more intelligent you are, the more you get doubts. Developing compassion is the real sadhana. Only when you lead lives full of compassion, you will be able to see God, the embodiment of compassion.

Only through eye of love can we visualise world peace
Embodiments of Love! Since ancient times, Bharat (India) has been standing for the peace and security of the entire world, spreading the message of spirituality. You should work for the peace and prosperity of the country. Whatever work you undertake, do it for the welfare of the society. Universal peace depends on the peace of society, which in turn depends on the peace of the individual. So the individual, society, and the universe are interrelated and interdependent. But, today man is bothered about himself and not society. Today, people who talk of peace but actually cause restlessness in society are on the increase. Though they are endowed with intelligence, they act in a perverted manner. In what way can we help such people? The only way is to open their eye of love (prema netram), Only through the eye of love we can visualise world peace. Without working for the welfare of society, how can you attain world peace? It is impossible. All wealth and prosperity cannot confer true happiness.

People say America is a land of prosperity. What is the use of all affluence? They do not have peace of mind. Bharathiyas Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 251 (Indians) are the embodiments of peace. They may not have such comforts, but they have love for God.

Of the time one spends on children,
friends, and worldly pleasures,
Acquiring wealth, power, name, and fame,
If only a fraction is spent contemplating on the Lotus Feet of the Lord,
One can even escape the mighty doors of hell,
the abode of Yama [Sanskrit Poem]

Only devotion can make you free from misery
In ancient times, the kings ruled over their kingdoms in a righteous manner. The very name of Emperor Bali instills fear in the minds of people, but Bali was the very embodiment of compassion. He was an ardent devotee of Lord Vishnu, and he upheld the principles of righteousness. God loved him, since he had these three sacred qualities. It is enough if you have Vishnu bhakti (devotion to Lord Vishnu). Only devotion can make you free from misery.

Prahlada always chanted the name of Hari.

Narayana Bhaja Narayan

Narayana Bhaja Narayan, Narayan

Thanu Mana Ranjana, Bhava Bhay

Bhanjana, Asura Nikhandana Narayan

In spite of being pushed down from mountains, drowned in the oceans, trampled by the wild elephants, bitten by poisonous snakes, he repeated Narayana's name. Only the name of Narayana helped him to overcome all these troubles. Only devotion will make you forget all your problems and experience Bliss. Even Sakkubai, the great devotee of Lord Panduranga, continuously chanted the name of Ranga in order to overcome the troubles caused by her husband and mother-in-law. Gora Kumbhar forgot all his worries singing the name of the Lord. Such is the power of the Divine name.

God is the only Saviour

What man needs today is Bliss. Duhka nivritthi, ananda prapthi (alleviation of misery and attainment of bliss) should be the sole aim of man. For this man has to make friendship with God.

In this world, you may have many friends. But all of them can only say, Hello, How are you, goodbye, nothing more! God is not like that. He is always with you, in you, around you, above you, and below you. Since man is distancing himself from God, who is the True and Eternal friend, he is subject to sorrow. Today, man is after money and power and does not think of God. How long do money and power last? They come and go. That's what Sankaracharya said, Maa kuru dhana Jana yavvana garvam, harathi nimeshaat, kaalah sarvam, which means that money, power, and position are momentary and will not last long.

Bhaja Govindam, Bhaja Govindam,

Govindarn Bhaja Moodha Mathey,

Sampraapthe Sannihithe Kaale,

Nahi, Nahi Rakshathi Dhhukrun Karane

Your studies will not come to your rescue in the end, so chant the name of Govinda, said Adi Shankara. God is the only refuge, and only He can come to your rescue in the end. So develop faith in God. He is the only Savior.

All the world that you see with your naked eyes is only apparent Truth. All that you see is pravritti, (external) but there is a basis for this. That is called nivritti (internal). The unseen roots are the basis for the tree, which is seen. For buildings, foundation is the basis. Today, you are bothered about only the Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 253 building (body), and not the foundation. The body is the Temple of God, but what is the nature of this body?

It is full of dirt and diseases.

It cannot cross the ocean of Samsara.

So, O mind, never think that this body is permanent.

Surrender yourself at the Lotus Feet of the Lord.

[Telugu Poem]

How long will this body remain? The body is like a water bubble; the mind is like a mad monkey; so do not follow the body; do not follow the mind; follow the conscience. This is the principle of Atma. But man follows the body and the mind, leaving the conscience. No doubt, for the earthly sojourn, the body and the mind are necessary, but you should not give undue importance to them.

Give up moha to get moksha

Emperor Bali did undertake all the sacred activities, but he had in him two bad qualities, ego and possessiveness (ahamkaram and abhimanam). Even Arjuna had these feelings during the Mahabharatha war. He began his address to Krishna uttering the syllable Sva, which means Svartha, Svajana (I and My people). This is called moha (attachment). As long as man does not give up this moha, he will not get moksha (liberation). All your education and jobs will not follow you at the end. All these are passing clouds. That is why the Gita said, Anithyam, Asukham Lokam, Idam Praapya, Bhajasva maam (Since the world is temporary and full of misery, think of God continuously). Keeping God, who is eternal, in your heart, you should lead your lives in this temporary world.

Once, Bali performed a yajna (sacrifice) by name Sarvajit.

Vamana also attended the yajna. Emperor Bali welcomed him and paid his respects. Till then, Vamana did not ask for anySathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 254 thing. In fact, he was planning how to subdue the ego of Emperor Bali. In this world, for any work, people plan in advance. But God's plan is not an ordinary one. God always thinks of the future and plans accordingly.

Vamana went to Emperor Bali and asked for three footsteps of land. But his preceptor, Sukracharya, warned him against giving what Vamana asked for, since he knew who Vamana was and the purpose for which He had come. Bali said, Gurujee, the hand of the giver is always on the top and the receiver's is at the bottom. When God Himself comes to me and asks for something, His hand will be below that of mine. That is enough for me.

Ego is a bad quality for a devotee

Even there, we find a trace of the ego. What is the inner meaning of the inhalation and exhalation processes, i.e. So-Ham? So means That (God); Ham means I. The sum and substance of this is that we have to take God into us (So - inhalation) and leave out ahamkaram, i.e. ego (Ham - exhalation). This is called Hamsa Gayathri. This inhalation and exhalation process goes on continuously for 21,600 times in a day in us. This means that you welcome God into you and drive out ego from you that many times. As long there is ego in you, you will never be happy.

No doubt, Emperor Bali was a great devotee, but he was also egotistic. Ego is a bad quality for a devotee. Only through love, peace, humility, and courage can you overcome ego. God came down in order to destroy the ego of Bali and distribute Love to the entire world. Bali was granted a boon that he should be allowed to come and visit his people on this day, every year. That day is celebrated as Onam. Be it an emperor or an innocent person, one can attain God only through Love.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 255

Follow your conscience

Many lights are glowing in this hall. Some people are listening, some are dozing. The light is unaffected by all these. It is a witness. Similarly, in the broad day light, some do good, and some do bad. The Sun remains unaffected by your deeds. Your bad actions can never harm God. Your good actions will never make Him happy either. Be it good or bad, you will have to reap the fruits of your actions. God is Iyothirmayudu (Embodiment of Light). So, He has nothing to do with your good or bad. He is just a witness. He is present in everybody as conscience. That is why I keep telling,

Follow the Master,
Face the devil,
Fight to the end
Finish the game.

Who is your Master? Here, Conscience is your Master. So, follow your Conscience till the end of your life. Never give up in the middle. Once you have Love in your heart, you can accomplish anything. You should not have hatred toward anybody. You should love even those who hate you. As a result, there will be transformation in their hridaya. Hri + daya = hridaya, which means the heart should be full of compassion. Humanity is also called Mankind. So man should have compassion in his heart. But, today there is no compassion, only fashion exists. As long as fashion is there, compassion does not find a place, because hridaya is a single chair; not a double sofa, nor a musical chair.

Life is a game, play it. The difficulties, the pleasures and pains, the profits and losses, come and go like passing clouds. The very name of the world is ja-gath, which means that which comes and goes. In this world, only God is permanent; everySathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 256 thing else is transitory. But we go by this changing world, forgetting God. As a result of which, we suffer.

God is closer to you than even your own mother
Embodiments of Love! God is not separate from you. He is in you. But, you are distancing Him from yourself. Out of the fire comes the ash, but it covers the fire itself. Once you blow the ash away, you can see the fire. Similarly, there is the fire of Divinity in you, but it is covered by the ash of worldly desires. In order to see God, you do not need to undertake any spiritual practices. All that you have to do is to get rid of ignorance. God is closer to you than even your own mother. You are distancing yourself from such Divinity. That is ignorance. In order to get rid of this ignorance, you should develop Love. You are God. This is the teaching of all religions. Christ initially said that, I am the Messenger of God. There is always a distance between Messenger and his Master. After some time, Christ said that, I am the Son of God. Here the relationship with God has increased. After a few more years, Christ said, I and My Father are One. Then comes the Holy Ghost. This is what Bharathiyas (Indians) described as dvaita (dualism), vishistadvaita (qualified non-dualism), advaita (non-dualism) and the state of Turiya.
Even in Zoroastrianism, it is said, I am in the Light, the Light is in Me, and finally I am the light.

You should know the Truth that you are God. You are a human being in form, but truly, you are God. You are not the body, the mind, the senses, the intellect; you are You only. When I say that this is My handkerchief, that means, the kerchief is separate from me. Similarly, when you say, this is my body, the body is separate from you.

Then who are you? The body, mind, and senses are your instruments. You are the Master, so master the mind and be a Mastermind. Understand this Truth and conduct yourself acSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 257

cordingly. Then you will not suffer at all. In times of difficulties, you should think of God more and more, like Prahlada. You should love God more and more. Love has no limits. No one can describe Love. Love is God, live in Love. You are the embodiment of Love. Yet, you suffer because of your attachment to the body.

Mind is like a horse and the body is like a chariot
What is this body? This body is temporary and is bound to perish at any time. Death can come at any point of time, be it in childhood, or in youth, or in old age. Why do you attach so much importance to such a body? As long you are alive, you have to maintain your body in good shape. The body is like a chariot meant for traveling. The mind is like a horse. Man today keeps the horse behind the chariot. As a result, he is traveling in the reverse direction. The horse should always be in front of the chariot, which means we have to give primary importance to the mind and next to the body. But, today, people all the time feed only their body and not the mind. With the result the horse is becoming weaker and the chariot heavier. How can a weak horse pull a heavy chariot? Just as you feed your body thrice a day, your mind also should be fed likewise. Prayer, meditation, or chanting of the names of God is the breakfast for your mind.

The Gayathri Mantra says, Om Bhur Bhuvah Suvah. Bhur means materialisation (body), Bhuvah means vibration (life force), Suvah means radiation (prajnanam). All these three are present in us. The same teaching is given to small children at the time of Upayanam (Thread ceremony). Such sacred teachings are being forgotten today.

In ancient times, all these were put into practice; now practice is replaced by fashion. Only through practice can one get happiness. What we need is practical science and not platform speeches. All the platform speeches are out of bookish knowledge, which is of no use to us. We need to have practical knowledge. Devotion bereft of practice is useless.

Embodiments of Love! In a family of three persons, if there is no unity among them, there will be unrest. Similarly, if there is no unity in our thought, word, and deed, we will be totally restless. So, we should harmonise these three. Let it be any name, constantly chant that name. Always have the feeling that I am God, I am God. Then you become God. As you think, so you become. This is what is called Brahmavid Brahmaiva Bhavathi (the knower of God becomes God himself).

Practice of sacrifice and forgiveness

All have devotion, all are sincere, but there is no sacrifice.

Bali means sacrifice. Emperor Bali could attain Divinity through his devotion and sacrifice. Bharat (India) is the birth place of people of great sacrifice, like Emperor Bali and Emperor Sibi.

A pigeon sought the refuge of Emperor Sibi on being chased by an eagle. Sibi granted refuge to the pigeon. The eagle argued that the pigeon was its prey. Then Sibi said, O eagle!

I will give you the flesh of my body equal to the weight of this pigeon, and he started chopping his own flesh. He made such a great sacrifice for the sake of a small pigeon.

Such emperors are many in number in Bharat. We should follow the ideals of such noble souls. Since ancient times, Bharat has been the center for all spiritual wealth spreading the gospel of peace, happiness, and security to the rest of the world.

The mind is nothing but a bundle of desires. If you separate threads, cloth disappears. Similarly, if you remove desires one by one, the mind ceases to exist. In ancient times, this was referred to as thyaga (sacrifice). Today, many people talk of thyaga but in fact are immersed in bhoga (pleasures), which Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 259 results in roga (disease). In order to get rid of this roga, one has to cultivate thyaga and love for God.

Start the day with Love

Fill the day with Love

Spend the day with Love

End the day with Love

This is the way to God.

Have full faith in your religion

Embodiments of Love! Emperor Bali served the people of Kerala and sacrificed everything, including his body. That is why he has attained such an exalted position, not possible for others. The devotion of the people of Kerala is unparalleled.

At one time, Kerala was considered to be a Communist state, but people have been going to the Padmanabha Swamy

Temple then and now in large numbers. They get up early in the morning, have their bath, apply sandal paste on their foreheads, and offer their prayers. There is no change in their devotion.

Parties may come and go, but the 'Hridaya party' (Party of the Spiritual Heart) is permanent.

A Muslim should become a true Muslim; a Christian should become a true Christian, and a Hindu should become a true Hindu. You should have full faith in your religion and lead an ideal life. That is true bhakthi (devotion), true mukthi (liberation).

To attain mukthi, practice the following principles. Forget all the harm done to you by others and the help you have done to others. Then you will have peace in your heart. If someone has done harm to you, do not be revengeful. If someone has hurt your feelings, in order to alleviate your suffering, the best way is to forget and forgive.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 260

Forgiveness is very important. It is Truth, it is dharma, it is Veda, it is nonviolence, it is happiness, it is heaven itself. This forgiveness is everything in all the worlds. So cultivate this sacred quality of forgiveness. This is possible only by developing Love for God.

Thus, the same key performs both locking and unlocking functions. In man, the heart is the lock, and the mind is the key. When the mind is turned Godward, the heart develops detachment. When the mind is turned toward the world, the heart developed attachment.

Knowledge without practice is meaningless

Speech is the cause of prosperity

Speech secures friends and kinsmen

Speech brings about bondage.

Speech can also lead to certain death.

Embodiments of Love!

The power of speech gifted to mankind is very important and majestic. It gives him all the wealth. So, we should talk sweetly and softly in an acceptable manner. Only such sweet talk will give us all the affluence and prosperity. Words can win many friends and relations and even kingdoms. We may have a few relations, but with our sweet talk, we can develop good relationship with the entire world. Sacred talk will give us all the education and elevate us to exalted positions. But we should also know that words spoken with bad thoughts and bad feelings will not only lead you to bondage but also put you to Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 262 death. Both good and bad are present in the words we utter.

For the one with sweet words, the universe itself becomes the mansion. He will feel the caste of humanity prevailing everywhere. So, words form the basis to make you feel humanity as one caste and the universe as the mansion. To attain Divinity, one has to take to the spiritual path. Good words coupled with humility will take you to higher levels

Divinity within and without

The whole world is one, though you may find multiplicity.

In this world of plurality, there is the underlying principle of unity. Of all the numbers 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, the most important number is 1. All the other numbers are mere modifications of number 1. 1+1 becomes 2. 9 1 becomes 8. Thus 1 forms the basis for all the numbers. This is the unity in multiplicity, This unity is the Truth.

Vedas say: Om ithyekaaksharam Brahma, the syllable OM is Brahman. Divinity is not separate from OM. Out of this unity, the world has emerged. But you do not understand this Truth and take to different paths, with aspirations and ambitions. In fact, there is no difference between the world and Divinity. Just as different limbs form a complete human body, in the same way, human beings are like the limbs of society. Society forms the limb of the entire humanity, humanity forms a limb of Nature and Nature is a limb of Divine. Therefore, humanity, society and Nature are all the limbs of the Divine.

Sarvatah Paani Paadam, Tath Sarvathokshi Shirornukham Sarvatah Sruthimalloke Sarvama Iruthya Thistathi. All forms belong to the one and the same Divinity. Veda has also declared that there is Divinity within and outside (Anthar Bahischa Tath Sarvavyapya Narayana Sthithaha).

The grain is Divine, the husk is Nature. This is the relationship between the Divine and the world, The Gita says, MarSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 263 naivaamsho Jeevaloke Jeevabhoothah Sanathanaha, which means all are the sparks of the Divine.

In the modern world, every individual wants something or other. Do you think a person loves an object for the sake of the object? No, he loves it for his own sake. Similarly, a person loves another for his own happiness. So, in this world whatever man does is for his own sake.

There are very few individuals who see unity in diversity. But there are plenty who see diversity in unity. Only the lives of those who see unity in diversity are sanctified. In order to understand this underlying principle of unity, you need a guru (preceptor). In modern times, we call them teachers.

Teaching is the noblest profession

Today, some people say that one takes to the teaching profession when one has no other alternative. It is a mistaken view. The teaching profession is the noblest of all. The teacher has got all the capacity to mould the careers of the students committed to his care.

Bala Gangadhar Tilak struggled hard for the freedom of this country. One day, a friend of Tilak questioned him, Tilak, you have been working hard for our independence. After independence what post would you like to take up? Will you be the Prime Minister or hold some other portfolio?

Tilak smilingly replied that he would never give up the sacred teaching profession for a ministerial post. He said that, being a teacher, he could train a number of students as ideal leaders of this country. He considered the teaching profession as the noblest.

What qualities are required for a person who has taken up such a noble profession? A teacher should have sacred feelings and undertake sacred actions. He should never entertain bad habits. What is the reason? It is quite natural for the students to follow their teacher.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 264

A teacher is one who shapes the future of students. So, a teacher should never indulge in bad habits like smoking, drinking, and eating non-vegetarian food. Students observe the habits of their teachers. If the teacher himself indulges in these bad habits, he will not have the right to advise his students to leave these vices. Not merely this, a teacher should never utter a lie and should never resort to stealing. A teacher should speak words born out of sacred feelings. Virtues, good intellect, truth, devotion, discipline, duty these are the attributes expected of a teacher. Only then will the students be able to emulate him. We cannot estimate the contribution of a teacher to society, it is he who can build the society or ruin it. A teacher carries with him many responsibilities. He should have a good mind to discharge these responsibilities. Depend only on God

You all know that fifty years ago, the young and the old of this country struggled hard for independence, giving up all their properties and belongings. What do you mean by independence

It means that you do not depend on others. Do you find such a situation today? It is fifty years since this country attained independence. Though fifty years have passed after independence, we continue to depend on others. We have taken loans from many countries. When you are indebted to many countries, how can you say you are independent? If you are truly independent, you should never depend on others. If you are in need of money, does it mean that you should take loans from others? No. You have to reduce your expenditure, pomp, and show. Only then you can save money. But Bharathiyas (Indians) have not understood their present position and continue to take loans. Gradually this will lead to a position wherein you have to struggle for independence for the second time.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 265

During British rule, we suffered a lot and ultimately attained independence. But if we continue to take loans, we will be again under the control of others. So, we should not resort to taking loans.

Never be a slave

Students today should be totally independent. They should inquire into the true meaning of the word swechcha (independence).

Swa + ichcha = swechcha. Swa means Atma. So, the Will of the Self is called swechcha. Therefore, following the conscience is true swechcha.

But students today do not understand the true meaning of this term and roam about in the streets and behave, as they like, in the name of swechcha. Students should exercise control over their movement, speech, and life. Only then can they work for the progress of this world. Right from the tender age, students should strive to attain swechcha in the true sense of the term. That why I always say Start early, Drive slowly, Reach safely. You do not need to follow anyone else; follow your conscience. That is swechcha. You should never be a slave. There is a small story to illustrate this: When the King of Darapur expired, his young son was coronated. Being so young, the prince was immersed in many doubts. He went on, thinking how to run the administration. He was not able to know who was good and who was bad. He did not know whom to approach for guidance. He thought that he should keep up the reputation of his father and grandfather.

One day, sitting in the palace, he noticed groups of people moving across the royal street. He inquired as to where they were all heading. He was told that they were going to listen to the discourse of a noble soul. He too joined them, incognito. He thought he could get his doubts cleared by the saint. He sat in the congregation and heard all the sacred teachings. He was extremely happy.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 266

People returned to their homes at the end of the discourse, but, the king remained there. As the saint also got up to go, his shawl got entangled to a nail of his chair. As a result, the shawl got torn. Immediately, the saint brought a needle and thread and was trying to get the thread into the eye of the needle.

The king, in disguise, was watching all this. He said, Swamiji, you are trying to stitch an old shawl, please leave it aside and accept the new shawl that I have brought with me. The saint said, I don't want a new shawl. If you really want to help me, help me put this thread through the eye of this needle. The king did accordingly. Then the saint stitched his own shawl, turned to the king and said, Listen to me. I don't like to depend on others. I want to lead an independent life. Man should never be dependent on others. We should depend only on God.

With these words, all the doubts of the king were cleared.

He realised that God is the basis of all, and only through selfconfidence

could he achieve what he wanted. He went to his palace and began following the dictates of his conscience. He did not consult anybody or seek advice from others. He became more independent. He developed an attitude to distinguish between the ephemeral and the permanent.

Practice what you learn

The saint had also told the king, You may be a man of wisdom, but if you don't practice, you will be like a donkey carrying dirty clothes. You should not become like that. Try to practice at least one or two good principles in life. Not merely that, we should help others to put into practice what little they know.

Education that is not put into practice, becomes unsacred.

What is the use of receiving degrees if they are not helpful to society. Serve society, and share your knowledge with others.

The best way to love God is to Love All and Serve All.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 267

What is the use of receiving degrees if you sit idle at home and keep applying for jobs without serving society? Many graduates only apply without any reply! What is the use of leading such a life? At least, till you get a job, serve society. Go to the villages and serve the needy. In fact, one who serves (kinkara) is greater than the leader (Sankara).

Having known the Truth, What is the use if you do not follow it? Ravana had 10 heads, which symbolize 6 Sastras (spiritual texts), and 4 Vedas. He was a master of 64 types of knowledge. He built the city of Lanka in gold. In terms of learning, he was on par with Rama. But what is the use of all his learning? He became a slave to his senses. Because he could not control his desires he not only ruined himself but also his entire clan. The Lanka was completely reduced to ashes.

Ultimately Ravana repented in the end, he said, Though I was the master of all knowledge, I did not put them into practice.

O people, do not get spoilt like me. Though I had all the wealth, I could not enjoy anything because of excessive desires.

Every person has the three gunas in them

Of the three brothers Ravana, Vibhishana, and Kumbhakarna, Ravana symbolized rajo guna (passionate quality),

Vibhishana symbolized satwa guna (serene, pure quality), and Kumbhakarna was the embodiment of tamo guna (lethargic, dull quality). Every man has these three attributes in him. They originate out of the human mind.

Kumbhakarna, who stood for tamasic quality, spent his entire life eating and sleeping. Ravana, who symbolized rajo guna was responsible for the destruction of the Rakshasa clan.

It was only the satwic Vibhishana who could get the grace of Rama.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 268

So, man should not give room for rajasic and tamasic

qualities in him. Ravana constantly worshipped Easwara

(God). It is not enough if you worship God, you should put His words into practice. You should give up all wicked qualities.

When Ravana was about to breath his last, Rama summoned

Lakshmana and told him, The one of great penance and wisdom is going to die. Go and listen to his last words.

Obeying the command of his brother, Lakshmana went close to Ravana and listened to his words carefully. Ravana

said, I achieved whatever I wanted, but only three of my wishes remain unfulfilled. I wanted to convert the salt water of the sea surrounding Lanka into sweet water. I wanted to make those who suffer in hell enjoy the comforts of heaven. I wanted to connect hell and heaven with a ladder. But, I went on postponing them and ultimately could not accomplish them.

Lakshmana returned to Rama and told the last words of Ravana. Rama smiled and said, Lakshmana, what is the use of repenting in the end? The moment he wanted to do good, he should have done so immediately.

Purvathapam and paschathapam

Some people think twice before they undertake any action.

That is called purvathapam. There is another category of people who act in haste and repent for their mistakes at the end.

That is pashchathapam. It was Arjuna who had this purvathaapam.

Before the commencement of war, he said,

Krishna, how can I bear the sight of my kith and kin being slain in the war. My head is reeling, I don't want to be here. Let us go home.

Valmiki described Ravana as wicked and Rama as noble.

What is the difference between these two? Rama sacrificed everything and became an ideal to everybody. The blissful state he had at the time of getting ready for coronation was very much the same when he was asked to go on an exile. That is the spirit of equanimity at times of pleasure and pain.

Rama put into practice the education he received, whereas Ravana merely accumulated knowledge without practicing it.

Ravana could not digest all that he learnt. As a result suffered from indigestion. Greatness lies in putting into practice, not in learning.

Students! Whatever you believe to be good, do put into practice. Both teachers and students play an important role in laying the royal road for the future, if you spend your time in acquiring knowledge, without having faith in God, your life will be useless. Neither penance nor japa (soft repetition of the Name) can take you across the ocean of samsara. You should serve the good people.

Talk less, work more

You should not waste your time. Asthiram yavvanarn

dhanam, dharmam keerthi, dvayam sthiram (Youth and money are temporary; truth and good name are permanent and eternal).

So, we should uphold Truth and Goodness.

There is no God other than Truth. Truth is the same in all the three periods of time. What is the difference between Truth and Fact? You may put on a coat today and wear a different dress tomorrow. This is not Truth, it is only a fact, because it is subject to change. But Truth always remains the same.

The Gita refers to Truth as Ritham. So, Truth is not reporting what you see, hear, and experience. What you see and hear is worldly truth. It is not Truth in the strict sense of the word. It is only external truth (pravritthi sathyam). But the inward Truth (nivritthi sathyam) remains the same in the past, present, and the future.

Students!

See that the words that you speak are sacred. You cannot always oblige, but you can always speak obligingly. That is Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 270 enough. Try to speak sweetly and softly. I have told you many times, Talk less, work more. The one who talks excessively cannot work. The one who works will not talk. What is the reason for you not remembering all that you read? It is excessive talk. By talking less, your memory power will increase. Not merely this, your Atmic power will also improve.

Whatever you hear, try to recapitulate, then put into practice.

Sravanam, mananam, nidhidhyasanam (listening, recapitulating and practicing). These three are very essential. Sravanam

can be compared to cooking in the kitchen. Mananam

can be compared to bringing the food to the dining hall and serving it. Nidhidhyasanam can be compared to the eating process. When all these three are unified, you will have health and happiness.

So, if you want to lead a life of contentment, recapitulate and practice whatever you have studied. Today, we find bookish knowledge everywhere, which is nothing but superficial knowledge. This superficial knowledge is of no use, You should be thorough in practical knowledge.

See that you do not have a questionable character

Teachers, Embodiments of Love!

In order to shape your students into ideal citizens, you should lead ideal lives. Students are the future leaders of this country.

How will you bring about transformation in students? First, let there be transformation in you, then try for transformation among students. If you tell your students not to smoke without yourself giving up smoking, will they listen to you? No. See that you do not have a questionable character. Only then you will be a good teacher in the strict sense of the term.

You should have very good habits. You should speak softly and use sweet words. You should talk to students with love and encourage them, You should groom the students into ideal citizens.

Students should not crave city life. They should live in their own villages and try to develop them. Today, the culture of Bharat (Ancient India) is found only in villages. We should sustain it.

But students run after urban life, leaving behind their villages.

What do they do in cities? They lead a life full of vices.

In cities, you do not find fear of sin and love for God. Once you have love for God, then there will be fear of sin. Naturally, there will be morality in society. So, first develop Love for God. With this Love for God, you can achieve anything in life.

Know that the safety of the country is important

Great leaders like Winston Churchill and Kennedy first served in the Army and worked for the welfare of their countries before they occupied exalted positions. When it comes to serving your country, you should be ready to take up any task.

You should know that the safety of the country is important.

Ianani janma bhoomishcha swargadapi gareeyasi (Mother and motherland are greater than the Heaven itself.)

After the death of Ravana, Vibhishana fell at the feet of Rama and said, Swami, I never aspired to be the King of Lanka. I only wanted my brother to give up his bad qualities. I pray to you to take over the Kingdom of Lanka. All the rakshasas also came and prayed to Rama that he should become King of Lanka.

Lakshmana also supported them saying, O brother, Bharatha is already ruling over Ayodhya. Even if you return to Ayodhya, you may not be crowned as the King. So, I request you to take over this kingdom and transform all the rakshasas. Lanka is full of golden mansions. Where else can you find such a beautiful place? I will be very happy if you rule over this Kingdom.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 272

Rama lovingly took Lakshmana close to him and said, Lakshmana, how could you get such a silly desire? Just because your mother is ugly, can you call any other beautiful woman as your mother? Even though my country is poor compared to Lanka, I still consider it as my mother. Lanka may be full of gold, but I don't want it.

Students should develop this kind of love and faith toward their country. The teachers should inculcate such spirit of patriotism in students. You should declare wholeheartedly with a sense of pride that this is my country, this is My mother tongue.

But modern students do not have such a type of national feeling. The moment they receive their Engineering and MBBS degrees, they start applying for passport and visa. This is not the right attitude.

Unity is the greatest wealth

Students! The sacred feelings that emerge out of your heart should be exported, and you should import all the good that is outside. You do not need any passport or visa to do this! You should know the truth that everything is within you. You do not need to crave anyone, not even for God, because you are all the sparks of the Divine. You have got divine qualities and divine powers. Without the divine power in you, you would not be able to study and secure good marks in your subjects. So, everything is within you. You are the Embodiment of Peace, Love, and Ananda. You are the Embodiment of God. Have full faith in this Truth.

When you lead your life with full faith in God, you will never be put to difficulties. Life is a Challenge, Meet it; Life is Love, Enjoy it; Life is Energy, Skill it and do not kill it.

When you skill this energy, there will be perfect balance in whatever you do. Once you have this balance, you will have Insight. Due to the absence of insight, you develop Outlook.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 273

Whatever you see outside, is from within. So develop inner view.

Students! Having learnt all these sacred qualities here, you should join hands and work together for the welfare of society. There is no higher wealth than unity. Unity should be the aim of your life. Only through practice can you achieve this. If all 95 crore people of this land of Bharath (India) developed this sacred quality, I and You are One, you can very well imagine the sacred heights you could achieve.

Treat everyone with brotherly love. The mother beats the child when it commits a mistake. Later, she fondles the child with love and affection. She beats the child for its own good in such a way that the sound is more but the pain is less. Similarly, if anyone commits a mistake, punish him. Only the sound should be heard, but he should not feel the pinch of it. God does the same, the punishment given by God is only for protection. The doctor removes the ulcer from the stomach by cutting it open with a knife. Just because he uses a knife, can you call him a wicked person? No. He does it for your own good. Similarly, God punishes you only out of Love. Love lives by giving and forgiving; self lives by getting and forgetting. So, there should not be even a trace of selfishness in you. Do anything with Love, the result will certainly be good. Love is God, Live in Love. Talk to your friends with love. Help them in times of need.

Have unflinching faith in Me; I shall take care

I will give you an example from my life. When this body was in Uravakonda, studying 6th class, there used to be the E.S.L.C. exams. We three students, Suresh and Ramesh on either side and Myself in the middle, used to sit on the same bench. They were dullards. At the time of examinations, they approached Me for help. They said, Sathya, we cannot study Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 274 without you. Some way or the other, you should help us in the examinations. I will never say No to anyone. I said, I will certainly help. I told them the questions that would appear in the next day's examination and taught them the answers. too. E.S.L.C. was a public examination. My examination Register No. was 6, whereas the numbers of Suresh and Rarhesh were 60 and 600. You can imagine it yourself, how far our chairs were placed from each other. It was not possible for them to copy. They said that they would not take the exam. Then I told them, Having studied the entire year, it is not proper on your part to skip the exam. You must appear for the examination, whatever may be the outcome. Have unflinching faith in me; I shall take care. Though it is not supposed to be done, there is nothing wrong, when you are doing it for a good cause.

The duration of the examination was 2 hours. The stationeries were supplied by the teachers. I completed My answer paper in just 5 minutes. Then I took some more papers from the invigilator and wrote the answers in Ramesh's handwriting. After completing it, I took another set of papers and wrote the answers in Suresh's handwriting. I also wrote their names on the answer sheets and kept them with Me. I had already told them not to get up before I got up from My chair.

At the end of two hours, when the final bell was given, the examiners started asking the students to surrender the answer sheets. All the students got up, and I silently went and placed all the three answer papers on the table. All of us came out of the examination hall. Nobody raised any objection. After 10 days, when the results were announced, only we three got first class. The teachers were surprised at how Ramesh and Suresh also got first class. They questioned them in the class, How could you write well?

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 275

The boys said, we wrote then, but now we don't remember.

There are none who got ruined with faith in God

There was no scope for any doubt. They could not have copied from Me, since we were seated far from each other. All three answer papers were in our own handwritings. Then where was the scope for doubt? I told them, I never let down those who have reposed their full faith in Me. There are a number of people who ruined themselves for want of faith. But there are none who got ruined with faith in God. There may be ups and downs in between, but finally they emerge victorious. Due to many changes that took place at Uravakonda, I stopped attending school. All the teachers and the students started coming to the residence to see Me. I gave them whatever they liked. The owners of the house could not bear all this and sent a telegram to the parents, asking them to come and take Me. I boarded the bus to Puttaparthi. All the boys also wanted to come to Puttaparthi. I told them that it was not possible to reach Puttaparthi by bus, because there were no proper roads. The buses could reach only up to Dharmavaram or Penukonda.

There were no roads to Puttaparthi 60 years back. So I told them not to come.

When I was in the school I used to lead the prayer. Everyday from the dais, I would sing a song emphasising the unity of all religions. Everyone, including the teachers, would join in chorus blissfully. When I left the School, there was none to lead the prayer. There was a Muslim student by name Abdul Gaffur. He had a good voice and could sing well. That day he was asked to lead the prayer. The moment he was on the stage, he remembered Me and started crying loudly. Then all cried and the prayer was canceled.

When I came to Puttaparthi, Ramesh and Suresh could not bear the separation from Me. One should not do like this, but Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 276

Ramesh went on crying, Raju, you have left us, you have left us, I cannot live without you, and fell into a well and died.

The second boy went on repeating, Raju, Raju, Raju and ultimately turned mad. He was taken to a hospital in Bangalore. His father came to Me and prayed, Swami, he is your classmate and my only son. Please come and give him darshan at least once.

I went to Bangalore and saw him in a mental hospital. The boy was continuously repeating Raju, Raju, and was not looking at anyone. I went up to him and said, Suresh, I am Raju. I have come for you, look at Me. Hearing this, he lifted his head, saw Me, and closed his eyes permanently.

The same Ramesh and Suresh were born as Jack and Jill.

When I was in Paatha Mandir (Old Mandir), these two puppies were with Me. It was I who christened them. One used to sleep near My feet and the other near My head. They used to bark at any person at sight. They were always with Me.

One day, the Rani of Mysore came to Me. Since there were no proper roads to Puttaparthi, she alighted from the ear at Karnatakapalli and walked the rest of the distance. The driver had his dinner in Puttaparthi and was returning to Karnatakapalli. I called Jack and asked him to accompany the driver and show him the way. Jack walked in the front, and the driver followed. The driver was surprised as to how a dog could show him the way. Then I said, it was not DOG, that was showing him the way, but the inner being GOD.

Next morning, the driver started the car, not knowing that Jack was sleeping under it. The wheel of the car ran over the back of Jack and its backbone broke. Jack dragged his body, across the river, all the while wailing. A washerman by name Subbanna, a respected person in the village, noticed Jack and came running to Me. He said, Swami, Jack is coming, wailing in pain.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 277

I came out; Jack came close to me crying loudly, fell at My feet and breathed his last. After three days, Jill also died. The Brindavan (tulasi plant) that you find behind the Paatha Mandir is the Samadhi of these two dogs.

We should give and take only Love

Ramesh and Suresh had very noble feelings. One day, in school, the drill master said that all the boys should join the Scouts. I am telling you the Truth. I did not have even a single paisa with me. That was the position then. I could not ask for money at home, since their condition was also poor. If one has 10 rupees, one was considered very rich in those days. If one had 100 rupees, he was equal to a millionaire!

The drill teacher said that we should get a khaki shirt, khaki knickers (shorts), a belt, a whistle, and a pair of boots. How could I get this? I was in Kamalapuram, at that time.

Knowing that I did not have money with Me, Ramesh asked his father to get him two pairs of khaki dress stitched.

We were all of the same height then. He packed a pair of knickers, a shirt, and a pair of socks and wrote on it, Raju, if you don't accept it, I will commit suicide. You are My life.

You must accept this. Our friendship must develop this way. I removed that paper and put another, and wrote on it, If our friendship is to develop, there should be no giving and taking. We should give and take only Love. There should be no material transaction. So I will not accept this. The boy felt very sad.

I used to compose excellent poetry in those days. I speak in simple language to make the translator's job easy. Otherwise, I can speak in a lofty style. There was a businessman by name, Kotte Subbanna. He had brought a new medicine, by name, Balabhaskara for sale. He requested Me to compose a song on the efficacy of that medicine, which, he said, would serve as a good advertisement, so that it would be sold well.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 278

I composed a beautiful song. Hearing that song, he lost himself in ecstasy and got some sweets prepared at home and brought them for Me. The medicine was sold in large quantities because of the advertisement. He was overjoyed and bought two shirts and two knickers for Me. I said to him, Are you paying the price for the song I composed? I will not accept this. He cried, and said that he would not take them home. Then I told him that he could as well give them to some beggars on the street.

Right from that tender age, I never received anything from others. I only give and give and give, I never receive. But only for one thing, I stretch My hand and that is pure Love. Love is also not your property. Love is God's property. So, I am asking you for My own property. You are misusing the Love given to you, therefore you are suffering. You have to surrender your Love to God in order to be happy, Thus, as a student, I always helped others and made everybody happy. Being Sai students, you should also make others happy. Never make anybody suffer. Help Ever, Hurt Never. Develop this quality.

There are other things that students should take care of. Some students get the homework done by their brothers or sisters. This amounts to cheating their teacher. This is not correct. Students should do homework themselves. They should develop good qualities. Good qualities will become God qualities. During the British rule, children were addressed as God boys. Later on, due to the effect of Macaulay's system of education, God boy became Good boy'. After some time, Good boy became Good-bye. Later on, even Good was removed, and only Bye-bye remained. God boy has come down to the level of Bye-bye due to the effect of modern education. You should remain as God boys and Good boys and never come down to the level of Bye-bye. You should set an ideal through your education and conduct.

I might have caused you lot of inconvenience by speaking for such a long time. Now, you may go back to Muddenahalli and Alike, discharge your duties, and attain success in your endeavors. I visit Muddenahalli now and then, but it is almost 12 years, since I last visited Alike. Now I will certainly go to Alike. I will also take some of the College boys with Me. From Puttaparthi, I will go straight to Mangalore. I will make you all happy there. Be always happy, happy, happy.

Worship of God as energy principle

Truth is your true mother and Wisdom the true father, Dharma is the true brother and Compassion the true friend;
The true wife is Peace and the true son Forgiveness
These six are in fact the true relations of man.

[Sanskrit sloka]

Embodiments of Love! In this world, every individual has a mother. The entire humanity has also one mother, and we should try to know her. This mother is Truth. Those who follow this mother will never face any problems in life.

This mother, Truth, remains the same in all periods of time and in all three worlds, and this mother transcends all the three attributes satwa (purity, serenity), rajas (passion), and tamas (dullness, inertia). The physical mother may die or go to some other place, but this divine mother, Truth, remains one and the same beyond time and space and to every individual. It is therefore necessary that every person follow this noble, divine mother (Truth).

True relatives of man

Who is father? Wisdom is the true father. Wisdom is not ephemeral, mundane, physical, secular knowledge. Advaita darshanam jnanam (Wisdom confers the experience of nonduality).

So, Truth and Wisdom are the true mother and father of man.

Dharma is the brother. Dharma may vary depending upon time, country, religion, and tradition. However, dharma is loved by the entire humanity irrespective of caste, creed, nationality, and religion. This brother is the very embodiment of love. On this basis, the Vedas gave utmost importance to Truth and Righteousness. In the great epic Ramayana, Lakshmana personified the Principle of dharma. When he fainted in the battlefield, Rama lamented, saying that he could get a consort like Sita and a mother like Kausalya, but not a brother like Lakshmana. Rama said that His divinity blossomed because He had a brother like Lakshmana.

Compassion is the true friend. In this world, a firmed today may become an enemy tomorrow. But there is no greater friend than Compassion.

Peace is the wife. Peace is the previous jewel of saints, and it is the royal path in the spiritual field.

Forgiveness is the son. There is no greater quality than Forgiveness. It encompasses all the good qualities, like Truth, Righteousness, and Nonviolence, and it is the essence of all the Vedas.

Therefore, for every individual, the true relations are Truth, Wisdom, Righteousness, Compassion, Peace, and Forgiveness. The whole world is full of agitation and disturbance because of lack of these sacred qualities.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 282

Embodiments of Love! You should always remember your true mother and father. You cannot exist without them. The whole creation has emerged from Truth and merges back into it. There is no place where Truth does not exist. It is the good fortune of human beings to have this eternal Truth as their mother. But, today, humanity does not follow such a sacred mother.

Worship of Devi as divine mother

You worship Devi (goddess) in these nine days of Devi Navaratri. You consider Devi as your divine Mother. This Devi is called Sathya Swaroopini, which means she is the embodiment of Truth. So, worshiping Truth amounts to worshiping Devi. If you understand and follow this truth, you will be successful in every field.

The Vedas also proclaim this Principle of Truth. There are many in this world who chant the Vedas. Many have gone through the sacred texts. But they do not seem to follow the right path. In fact, only when we tread the right path will we know the true meaning of the Vedas and the sacred texts. Since ancient times, the sages and saints undertook many spiritual practices in their quest for Truth. They were determined not to give up till they had the vision of Truth. Ultimately, they declared to the world that they had seen God, who is all brilliance, is full of effulgence, and is beyond the darkness of ignorance. They also declared that God is not far off in a distance land but is present in the human body.

The saints had the vision of God, who is chin maya (full of effulgence) in the body, which is mrinmaya (made of clay). So, we should not underrate the human body and use it for mean and worldly pleasures.

The body is the temple of God. This body may be compared to an iron chest. Just as the precious jewels are kept in the iron chest, so also God is present in the human body. So, the body has to be maintained and made proper use of for the sake of the precious jewel, the Atma. You get jewels only from the earth. Similarly, you have to search for the jewel of the Atma only in the body, which is made of clay.

Let us investigate what comes in the way of experiencing the Atmic Principle. Ego and attachment stand as obstacles in our path. Only when you give up your ego and attachment will you have purity of heart, which in turn will lead you to the experience of Supreme Wisdom.

The more you develop attachment, the more restless you become. Ego is much more dangerous. It has become an incurable disease in human beings. So, you have to keep ego and attachment under control and engage yourself in the quest of Atmic bliss.

Forms and manifestations of Shakti

During Navaratri (sacred nine days), people go through the sacred texts such as Devi Bagavatha, Ramayana, and Mahabharata.

People also worship the deities Durga, Lakshmi, and Saraswathi. Goddess Gayathri has three aspects. They are:

Gayathri, Savatri, and Saraswathi. Gayathri is the presiding deity of our senses. Savitri is the presiding deity of the life principle. Saraswathi is the presiding deity of speech. All these three are within the same Principle of Truth.

Gayathri Mantra beings with Om Bhur Buvah Suvah.

Bhur means materialisation (body), bhuvah means vibration (life principle), and suvah means Atma (radiation).

Dr. Venkatraman, the previoius speaker, said that matter could be converted into energy and vice versa. From a scientist's point of view, that is true. But in My view, matter and energy do not exist separately. Matter is energy, and energy is matter. These two are inseparable and interrelated. In fact, there is no matter in this world; wherever you see, you find only energy.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 284

During these nine days, Goddess Shakti (the Energy Principle) is worshiped. Truth, Righteousness, Peace, and Forgiveness are all expressions of the Principle of Shakti. Truth is the primal cause. There is nothing other than this. All faculties of energy are present in this Truth. So, consider Truth as your mother and follow it.

The Vedas proclaim, Sathyam vada; dharmam chara, which means: speak the truth and follow righteousness.

Unfortunately,

people today do not follow this. On the contrary, they follow asathya and adharma. (untruth and anti-dharma) This is the cause of all suffering.

The ancients gave utmost priority to Truth and Righteousness. Before undertaking any work, they enquired whether it was right or wrong. They followed the dictates of their conscience. But today, such an attitude is lacking.

The quest for Truth

Many people say that they are in search of Divinity. Once you follow the path of Truth, you will find Divinity everywhere. A small example.

The same eyes see the mother, daughter, wife, and sister. Here, you need to enquire as to what kind of feeling you should have toward each. This is the quest for Truth. Mother should be viewed with reverence and respect. Daughter should be considered as part of your own being. In this way, you should enquire and understand the Truth.

If you just go by the direct evidence of what you see, you will never know the Truth. All that you see is bound to perish. There are many things that cannot be perceived by the naked eye. On the spiritual path, everyone wants pratyaksha pramanam (direct evidence). But direct evidence cannot constitute the entire Truth.

For example, you see a person who is five feet five inches tall, weighing forty-five kilograms, and fair complexioned. All these can be seen by the naked eye. But you cannot go merely by these physical qualities. You should also take into consideration the unseen qualities, such as love, compassion, anger, etc. It is utter foolishness to go by the physical form, which is direct evidence.

It is not possible to see the direct manifestation of God. Truth is everywhere. Dharma is everywhere. God, who is the embodiment of Truth and Righteousness, is everywhere. So, you should practrice Truth and Righteousness and enjoy the bliss.

How to know the Atmic Principle

For everything, conscience is the witness. If you do not follow the conscience, everything becomes unsacred. The Atma is the eternal witness, and that is conscience. The Atma is everywhere. It is in every individual and every creature. It has no form. It is attributeless, eternal, ancient, unsullied, and immortal. Who can understand such an Atmic Principle? You speak of Truth and consider whatever you see and hear as Truth, but all this is limited to the senses. The Atma is beyond senses.

Then how to know the Atmic Principle? You do not need to search for this elsewhere. Turn your vision inward.

The Vedas said, Pashyannapi na pashuathi moodho (he is a fool who sees yet does not see). All that you see is divine, but you mistake it for nature. The one with Atmic vision will see the entire nature as divine. But, if you have the worldly view, you can see only the world.

Vishvam Vishnumayam (Vishnu pervades the entire universe). Names and forms may vary, but the Atma is uniform in all. To understand this unity, you have to turn your vision inward. There is no separate path to know God other than knowing one's own Self.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 286

There is no human being that has no hunger for food. Similarly, you should also have hunger for God. Some people may call it madness; that is their madness. Each has their faith, conviction, and experience. No one has the right to criticise others.

Expand your Love

It is only the body that has birth and death; the Atma has no birth and death. It has no beginning and no end. It is the allpervading

eternal Brahma.

Whos is Brahma? He is not the one with four heads as described in books. Brahma is vaastness. You find only Brahma wherever you see. This expansion of love is God. The feeling of my body is contraction of love, which is death. So, you should expand your love. Your love should not be limited to your family and relations.

In mathematics, 1+1+1+1 becomes 4. The number increases or decreases depending on whether 1 is added or subtracted. But in spiritual mathematics, Atma + Atma + Atma results again in Atma. It does not increase or decrease.

The first name of Atma is I. The Vedas declare, Aham

Brahmasmi (I am Brahman). This I is the first name of God. It is possible to know this I only by following the path of Truth.

In this world, only Truth exists; there is no falsehood. If you find falsehood, the mistake lies in your drishti (vision) and not in the srishiti (creation). If you put on blue glasses, the world appears blue in colour; if you put on red glasses, you will find only redness all around. The defect lies with the colour of the glasses, but not with the world.

The very principle of creation is Divinity. Sarvam khalvidham Brahma, so revere everyone as Brahman. Love everyone as Brahman. Then there will be no scope for hatred or enmity.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 287

What is the reason for all the agitation in the world? It is lack of equanimity. Only through equanimity can you develop love.

Embodiments of Love! In these seven days of yajna, we have seven modes of worship. We call it Sapthaham (sevenday event). What is the significance of having a Sapthaham?

This number seven is very significant in numerology. In music, we have saptha swaras (seven notes). There are seven oceans, seven rishis (sages), seven colours, and seven worlds. They are all within us. There is nothing beyond you.

It is foolishness to think that God is separate from you and to search for Him outside. You are God. But since you identify yourself with the body, you are not able to understand this Truth. Body is like a ater bubble, and the mind is like a mad monkey. Why do you rely on these two? Follow your conscience. Only then will you have self-satisfaction.

Only sacred qualities should emerge out of Hridaya

Atma symbolises hridaya (spiritual heart). God dwells in hridaya. Hridaya is the centre of Love and Peace. Only sacred qualities should emerge out of hridaya. But instead, animal qualities like anger, hatred, and jealousy emerge, and you becom a beast and not a human. Such a heart is a dwelling pplace for animals, not God. If you conduct yourself with peace, love, and compassion, you are God. The Navaratri worship was started in order to foster sacred qualities within us.

You would have heard the name of Dasaratha. Who is he?

He is not the king of Ayodhya. Dasaratha refers to one who has control over the human body, which has five senses of perception and five senses of action. The matster of these ten senses is Dasaratha. This body is a chariot, and Dasaratha is the master of this chariot.

Dasaratha had three wives. They signify satwic (serene, pure), rajasic (passionate), and tamasic (dull, lethargic) qualiSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 288 ties. He had four sons. They signify the four objectives of life: dharma, artha, kama, and moksha. What is the capital of Dasaratha's kingdom? Ayodhya, which means it is a place that no one can get into. It signifies Hridaya, which no wicked qualities can enter.

Your happiness is heaven and your misery is hell

The entire universe is within you. The mountains may appear smooth from a distance, but once you go near, you will know the truth. It is the distance that lends enchantment. As long as you think that Kailas, Vaikunta, and Swarga are at a distant place, you will be crazy about them. Actually, all of them are in your hridaya. Your happiness is heaven and your misery is hell. The concept of heaven and hell was introduced in order to see that you do only good. Heaven and hell are not separate; they are in your mind.

What is the cause of misery? Your own actions. Buddha did penance for six long years. One day, he opened his eyes and said that he had caught hold of the thief. Who is the thief? It is the mind. He realised that mind was the root cause of all suffering. If you control your mind, you will never suffer. Churchill said, Man has conquered everything, but he has not conquered himself. Man is trying to know everything without understanding his true Self. Know Thyself, then you will know everything. This is what the Upanishads said: try to know and experience that by which everything is known and experienced. That is Atmic bliss, which is eternal and supreme. True happiness lies in union with God. If you are with the world, you will never get happiness.

The human heart can be compared to Ksheera Sagara (Ocean of Milk), but today it has become Kshara Sagara (Ocean of Salinity). Lord Vishnu dwells in the Ocean of Milk, which means that He resides in our heart. But if we make our heart into a Kshara Sagara, then whales and sharks (bad Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 289 qualities) will enter. Human heart should be pure; only then can Lord Vishnu reside in it. If you understand God, you will not search for Him outside. God is within you, in you, above you, below you, around you. There is no one nearer than God. God is nearer than your physical mother. So, worship God as your mother, who is the embodiment of Truth.

Experience and enjoy the banquet of Bliss

I begin My discourse with a sloka (verse) or a poem and conclude it with a bhajan (devotional song). Do you know what they are? The first sloka or poem is like a plate, the discourse can be compared to the various delicious items that are served on the plate, and the bhajan at the end is like a plate covering the delicious items. Do not treat this as a mandu (medicine), thereby taking only a little of it. Treat this as a vinu (banquet) and partake of the delicious items that I serve to the maximum extent. Experience and enjoy this banquet. Students! Embodiments of Love! You have to learn many things in daily life. First, know the mistakes in your life and try to correct them. Love is essential to become a complete human being. If you follow the path of Love, everything becomes Love.

Know your true identity

One may master all forms of knowledge,

One may vanquish one's adversaries in debate,

One may fight with valour and courage in the battlefield,

One may be an emperor reigning over vast kingdoms,

One may offer cows and gold as an act of charity,

One may count the countless stars in the sky,

One may tell the names of different living creatures on the earth,

One may be an expert in eight forms of yoga,

One may reach even the moon,

But it is impossible to control the body, mind and senses.

Turn the vision inward and Achieve the supreme state of equanimity of the mind.

[Telugu Poem]

Embodiments of Love! In this world, for man to accomplish any task, ichcha shakthi (will power), jnana shakthi (power of Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 291 discrimination), and kriya shakthi (power of action) are essential.

Ichcha shakthi refers to the determination to undertake a task. Jnana shakthi refers to the ways and means to be adopted to fulfil the task undertaken. It is not enough if you have ichcha shakthi and jnana shakthi; you need to have kriya shakthi too.

If you want to weave cloth, you need to have cotton. The cotton has to be made into thread, which in turn has to be woven. This relates to kriya shakthi. An enquiry into the type of equipment needed to do this relates to jnana shakthi. Man has got all these three potencies in him, but that is not enough. He needs to bring them together.

Primordial cause of Creation

Here is a small example. Suppose you have flowers, thread, and a needle; can you have a garland? Should not there be someone to make a garland out of them? You have a container for oil, a wick, and a lamp. But will this alone produce light? No. There must be someone to light the wick. You have gold, gems and precious stones; can you have jewels out of them? No. A goldsmith is needed to make them.

Here, you have two types of causes: One is upadana karana (primary cause) and the other is nimitta karana

(instrumental cause). A goldsmith makes ornaments using gold, but who is the one who has created gold? He is God. So, God is upadana karana and the goldsmith is nimitta karana. Without the primordial principle, upadana karana (God), nimitta karana is useless. God, the upadana karana, is the creator of this world. Man, the nimitta karana, is trying to experience

and enjoy this creation. But man forgets the upadana karana (God) and thinks that he is the doer and prides himself on his achievements.

Without the primordial basis, man cannot achieve anything.

Students of science are aware of this. Two parts of hySathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 292 drogen and one part of oxygen are combined to make water.

Scientists pride themselves on this achievement and ignore

God, who is the creator of hydrogen and oxygen.

In this modern age, man is carried away by the sense of doership, forgetting the Principle of Mooladhara (primordial basis). The potter makes pots, but without clay and water, he cannot do so. The potter is only an instrument, and hence he is the nimitta karana. God, who has created clay and water, is the upadana karana.

Bharathiyas (Indians) believe that there are eighty-four lakh species in this world. These can be classified into four categories: (1) andaja (born out of eggs), (2) pindaaja (born out of womb), (3) swedaja (born out of sweat), and (4) utbhija (born out of earth). There are twenty-one lakh species under each of these categories. They make a total of eighty-four lakh species.

Beings are many, but the living principle is uniform in all of them. There are innumerable waves in the ocean, each looking different from the other. Waves may vary in form, but ocean is the basis for all of them. Likewise, all eighty-four lakh species have emerged from the ocean of Sath-chith-ananda (Being-awareness-bliss). All have their origin in Sath-chithananda. Man is essentially divine

What is Sath-chith-ananda? Sath is Being, that which is changeless and eternally present. Chith means total Awareness.

Sath is like sugar; Chith is like water. When water and sugar are mixed, you have neither sugar nor water, but syrup. Similarly, the combination of Sath and Chith results in Ananda (Bliss).

In all living creatures, you find this Sath-chith-ananda. But man is not able to understand his true identity, which is Sathchith-anandam and is in search of happiness outside. It is like searching for his own self outside. How can he find his own self outside? He has to look within.

In the waking state, there are four aspects: kala (time), karma (action), karana (reason), and karthavya (duty). Suppose you have decided to go to Bangalore by car to participate in a programme. You start at 5 a.m. and reach Bangalore at 8 a.m. Here kala is 3 hours, karma is traveling by car, karana is the programme, and karthavya is participating in it. All four aspects are present in the waking state.

Now consider that at 10 o'clock in the night you had a dream. In the dream, you went to Bangalore and participated in a programme. When did you start? How did you travel? When did you reach? What was the reason? You do not know. This only means that the above four aspects do not exist in the dreaming state. In the sushupthi (deep sleep state), there is no time, no reason, no duty, and nothing that you do; you only experience bliss.

Man is changeless in all three periods of time

In the waking state, you undertake different tasks with your body. In the dreaming state, you create everything, including your own self. In deep sleep, you enjoy bliss. You are one and the same in all the three states. On this basis, it can be said that man is changeless in all the three periods of time and experiences bliss directly or indirectly. He experiences oneness in all the three periods of time. When once he understands this spirit of oneness, there will be no scope for differences and conflicts. As long as you identify yourself with the body, you find only multiplicity.

Once, Adi Sankara went to Kasi and prayed to Lord Viswanath thus, O Lord! I have come here to redeem myself of the three sins I have committed. He had not harmed anyone; nor did he steal anything. Then why did he call himself a sinner?

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 294

He explained the first sin in the following words. It was I who declared, Yatho Vacho Nivartante Aprapya Manasa Sah. Though I know that you are beyond the ken of thought and word, I tried to describe you in a string of words: Isha, Gireesha, Naresha, Paresha. I have committed the sin of not practising what I preached. This is my first sin.

Though I declared that God is everywhere, I have come all the way to Kasi to have Your darshan, as if You are present only in Kasi. I have committed the sin of saying one thing and doing another. This is my second sin.

It was I who said, Na punyam, na papam, na sukham, na dukham, which means there is no sin, no merit, no joy, and no sorrow. Yet, I am praying for the atonement of my sins. This is the third sin I have committed.

The significance of Sankara's statement is that the disharmony of thought, word, and deed is in itself a sin. Manasyanyath vachasyanyath karmanyanyath duratmanam, the evil one is he who does not observe the unity of thought, word, and deed. Manasyekam vachasyekam karmanyekam mahatmanam, he is the noble one who has achieved the unity of thought, word, and deed.

Lord's name, the only Saviour

Every action of Sankara is a teaching to humanity. When he was returning from Kasi, he found a person who was trying to memorise Panini's grammatical formula by constantly repeating, Dukrun karane, dukrun karane.

Sankara decided to give him a teaching. He went and asked him what benefit he would get by repeating Panini's grammar. That man said that he could become a great pandit, join the court of the king, and earn lots of money and lead a happy life. When Sankara asked him, what would happen to him after death, he said he did not know. Sankara told him, O foolish man, understand that the body, money, and power are tempoSathya

Sai Speaks, Volume 31 295

ravy. Attain eternal bliss, which you can enjoy even after your death. Sankara sang the following verse:

Bhaja Govindam Bhaja Govindam

Govindam Bhaja Mooda Mathe.

Samprapthe Sannihite Kale

Nahi Nahi Rakshathi Dukrun Karane.

O foolish man, chant the name of the Lord. When the hour of death approaches, It is only the Lord who can save you, and not your grammar.

Though Sankara had no personal gain, he strove hard for the emancipation of humanity.

Engage yourself in sacred actions

Not only Sankara, Krishna too did the same. In the Bhagavad Gita, He declared, Na me parthasthi karthavyam trishu lokeshu kinchana nanavapthamavapthavyam varthavevacha karmani.

I don't have to do anything in these three worlds, nor do I gain anything. But yet, in order to teach humanity, I constantly engage Myself in action from dawn to dusk, so that people follow My ideal and sanctify their lives.

Only through action man can redeem himself. Karmanyeve-adhikaraste maphaleshu kadachana (you have the right to action, not to the results thereof). Karmanubandheeni

manushyaloke

(humanity is bound by action. No one can spend their time without being involved in action).

When I ask some of the foreigners, what they are doing, they say they are doing nothing. They think action is related to involving in some kind of job or business. In fact, our inhalation and exhalation process is also a kind of action. Even the movement of eyelids is action. Day in and day out, the body is Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 296 engaged in some kind of activity or the other. The noblest way is to engage the body in sacred actions such as sravanam (listening to the Lord's stories), kirtanam (singing His glories), smaranam (remembrance), Pada sevanam (service to the Lotus Feet), archanam (worship), vandanam (salutation), dasyam (servitude), sakhya (friendship), Atmanivedanam (offering oneself to the Lord, i.e. self-surrender).

You should understand that whatever sadhana (spiritual exercise) you do, be it japa, tapa, yoga, dhyana, or bhajan, it is for your own satisfaction. God does not need them. Some people think they worship for God's sake; it is a mistaken view.

Whatever man does is for his own sake and to meet his selfish ends.

Vision of the True Self

As you inhale, you make the sound so, and when you exhale, you utter the sound ham. Together Soham means, I am That, which means you are God. When you go on repeating, Soham, Soham, where is the need for any sadhana?

Where is God? How to see Him? These questions of seeing and experiencing God have been there since ancient times. In fact, you have to take to the spiritual path in order to know your true identity i.e. Divinity. He who knows his true identity is a true aspirant. Without realising this truth, all spiritual sadhana will be a waste of time.

Sariramadyam khalu dharma sadhanam (body is gifted to undertake righteous actions). What is our dharma? Love is our dharma. Truth is our dharma. Peace is our dharma. We should follow our dharma.

The quality of sugar is sweetness. If it is not sweet, then it is not sugar. Similarly, Love is your natural quality. Without Love, you cannot be called a human being. There is love in you, but you are limiting it to your family, friends, and relations.

However, remember that your relations will come with you only up to the burial ground. It is only God, who is with you always, even after your death.

Ianthunam narajanma durlabham (human life is the rarest).

Such a sacred and noble life should not be wasted. Having taken birth as a human being, you should set an ideal.

A dancer always keeps the rhythm in her mind, while dancing. Similarly, you should always remember your innate divinity in whatever you do. Maya (illusion) is like a narthaki (dancer) always trying to distract you. In order to control this nar-tha-ki, you have to reverse the order of the letters and do kir-tha-na i.e. singing the Lord's name

Harernama, Harernama Harernamaiva Kevalam,

Kalau Nasthyeva Nasthyeva Nasthyeva Gathiranyatha.

In this Age of Kali, the Lord's name is the only refuge.

Many people aspire for Sakshatkaram (vision of the true Self). Westerners say that they want liberation. But they do not know what it really means. If you want to see your Self, give up body attachment and develop attachment toward the Self.

Only then you will have Sakshatkaram.

At birth, you cry, koham, koham, which means who am I? Who am I? You should not die with the same question on your lips. When you die, you should be able to assert cheerfully, Soham, meaning I am God. Finding out the answer for the question, Who am I? is true liberation.

Today, you have endless worries such as birth, death, old age, losses, failures, family life, etc. All these are of your own making. They arise because of your attachment and delusion. God does not give them. Who is the giver and who is the receiver, when you are God yourself.

Along as you have bhrama (delusion), you cannot attain Brahma (God). Just as ash covers the fire, likewise maya conceals your true identity. Fire is seen when ash is blown away.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 298

Similarly, you can have the vision of the Self, when you give up body attachment.

Divinity through unity

Vedanta says, Ekam sath viprah babudha vadanthi (Truth is one, but scholars refer to it by many names). The same water has different names in different languages. Similarly, God is one, but He is worshipped in many forms and names.

I is the first name of God. Right from the pauper to a millionaire each one uses the letter I while introducing themselves. This I is your true identity. The single letter I refers to the Atma, while the three-lettered eye refers to the body. The body has three attributes; whereas, the Atma has none. Atma is Supreme Bliss. It is the eternal witness and beyond all descriptions. Ekatma Sarvabhoothantharatma it is the same Divinity that is present in all beings.)

Embodiments of Love!

Try to enjoy and experience the love that is in you. If someone says there is no God, tell him, Maybe your God does not exist for you, but my God exists for me. You have no right to question the existence of my God. You have to argue with conviction. Such an argument will silence the person. Each one is mad in their own way. The world itself is like a mental hospital. There are some who derive delight in selfpraise. There are some that beat and accuse others. But the madness for God is the noblest. God sees to it that you give up madness for the world and become mad for Him. Only a fortunate few will be blessed with this madness for God. If only the entire humanity developed this madness for God, the world would be rid of disturbances and peace would prevail.

Do not imbibe negative feelings

Students! Embodiments of Love!

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 299

After every bhajan session, you are praying for the peace of the world (Loka samastha sukhino bhavanthu). You find only pieces, but no peace in this world. In fact, if you develop love and tolerance toward fellow beings, there will be no need to pray for peace; the world will automatically become an abode of peace.

Develop love in you and share it with at least ten persons in a day. There are ninety-five crore people in this land of Bharath (India). If each one goes on sharing his love with others, then all will be one. Out of this unity, you will attain Divinity. Where there is mistake, there is fear; where there is love, there is no fear. Why fear when I am near and dear? You should have full faith in Divinity. Many devotees come here, but how many are firm and steady in their faith? All the worldly desires are negative in nature. The negative feelings stand in the way of attaining the positive. So, do not imbibe negative feelings. Develop positive feelings and think of God with unwavering faith.

Suffer any loss on this account.

[Telugu Poem]

Due to the effect of the Kali Age, we come across many such situations. On hearing the melodious singing of cuckoo birds, crows out of jealousy start cawing at them. But that does not deter cuckoos from singing. In the same way, seeing the swans, cranes make fun of them. But the swans are least affected. Similarly, one who has realised his true identity will be neither elated by praise nor depressed by blame.

Human life is the gift of God. If only you make proper use of this gift, your life as a human being will find fulfilment.

Human beings can be classified into three types: (1) adham (low and mean), (2) madhyam (average), and (3) uttham (noble).

The human body can be compared to a sacred vessel.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 301

Uttham is one who makes proper use of this vessel gifted by God. Adham is one who uses the body for unsacred purposes without understanding its value. Madhyam is one who makes use of the body both for sacred and unsacred purposes.

What is the use of having a cosy bed, a soft pillow, and a ceiling fan if one does not get proper sleep? Likewise, man, in spite of being endowed with a heart like a bed, a mind like a soft pillow, and an intellect like a ceiling fan, does not enjoy peace and happiness. Then what for are these the heart, the mind and the intellect?

Life devoid of peace and happiness is no life at all

We describe the heart as pure and unsullied. We also attribute the quality of all-pervasiveness to the mind (Mano moolam idam jagath). We describe the intellect as the

transcendental

principle (atheendriyam). God has gifted these instruments to man so that he can enjoy peace and happiness

In spite of these valuable instruments, man does not have peace and happiness. We say that human life is the rarest and most precious (Nara janma durlabham), but does your conduct deserve such a description? You are not making proper use of the mind and the intellect and not keeping the heart pure. As a result, you do not experience peace and happiness. Life devoid of peace and happiness is no life at all.

Great men say that in order to enjoy peace and happiness in life, you need to develop a sense of detachment. Detachment does not mean leading a life of seclusion in a forest, leaving family and property.

Students should understand the true spirit of the word. renunciation . You should realise that this gross world is inert.

Consider the subtle aspect of this world as illusion and the causal aspect as only a reflection. Only when you understand the gross, subtle, and causal aspects of the world can you have renunciation. But man believes this gross world as real, forgetting the Primal Cause, God.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 302

Make an effort to know the value of human life

These three aspects that constitute the apparent world will delude you. You should understand the Primal Cause, the Atmic Principle. Only then can you experience bliss and peace.

You should make an effort to know the value of human life.

Human being is called Nara. What is the meaning of Nara? It means the embodiment of the Self, the Atma.

The gopikas (cowherd maids) used to pray thus: Kleem krishnaya, govindaya, gopijanavallabhaya swaha. Kleem means the earth. Krishnaya means water. Govindaya means fire. Gopijanavallabhaya refers to air. Swaha refers to ether (akasa). There is no life or place in this world without these five elements. They are present everywhere. This is how the gopikas described Krishna as all-pervasive.

God, who is in the form of five elements, is omnipotent, omnipresent, and omniscient. So, the main duty of mankind is to make proper use of these five elements. Misuse of these five elements amounts to misuse of Divinity.

Man considers his body as everything and spends his entire life in the pursuit of bodily comforts and conveniences. Body is bound to perish. Though a 100-year life span is stipulated, you cannot take it for granted. Death can occur either in boyhood or in youth or in old age. Nobody can say when one would die.

Then why should you take such great pains for the sake of your body, which is like a water bubble? Having taken a human birth, you should lead an ideal life and make everyone happy. You should not give undue importance to the body; treat it only as an instrument.

Mind is like a fan. Only when you turn the fan in your direction can you enjoy the breeze. Similarly, only when you turn your mind toward God can you experience the breeze of bliss. But if you turn your mind toward the world and say that you are not able to experience bliss, only you are to be blamed. You have to turn your mind toward God, not the body. All the actions that you do for bodily comforts are useless.

The heart is always filled with peace, love, and bliss. You cannot find peace outside; it is within your heart. So, search within. The heart is always filled with peace, love, and bliss. It is the basis for all sacred qualities such as compassion, love, tolerance, etc. All that emanates out of your heart is sacred. Body is the root cause of all six evil qualities (desire, anger, greed, pride, attachment and jealousy). So, do not be attached to the body.

Human life is very sacred and highly valuable. The mind, the intellect, and the senses are mere instruments. But you are not making an effort to know this. You are only trying to understand the nature of the instruments, but not the Atmic Principle, which is the primordial basis of life. Your life will be sanctified only when you understand the Atmic Principle.

People undertake many spiritual practices in order to sanctify their lives, but without purity of heart all these will be of no use. First, purify your heart. Do not give scope for wicked feelings such as desire, anger, and greed. In the spiritual path, these three are the worst enemies.

In the Ramayana, Ravana is a symbol of lust and desire.

Ravana was one who did great penance and received boons from the Lord. He had mastered all sixty-four types of knowledge. Such a mighty and great person like Ravana succumbed to desire and ultimately ruined his life.

In the Bhagavatha, Hiranyakasipu symbolises anger. He was a great scientist. He had control over the five elements. Modern scientists are able to reach the moon, but Hiranyakasipu attempted to reach the sun. He even tried to stop the rotation of the earth. Such a great scientist was ruined due to his anger.

The one with anger will never be successful.

He ruins his property and loses his respect.

He will commit sinful deeds and

Will be rejected by one and all.

[Telugu Poem]

In the Mahabharata, Duryodhana stands for greed.

In order to kill a miser,

There is no need to harm him physically.

Just ask him for money, and

He will die immediately!

[Telugu Poem]

Duryodhana as such a miser. What could he achieve ultimately?

Therefore, for a spiritual aspirant, desire, anger, and greed are his worst enemies. The merit acquired through several years of spiritual practice will be ruined in a moment of fury. One should therefore control all these three.

Only he who obeys God's commands is redeemed

In this world, there may be at least one good person out of every ten persons. Out of every ten good persons, there may be at least one who has love for God. Out of every ten persons who have love for God, there may be at least one who wants to attain Divinity. Out of every ten persons who want to attain Divinity, there may be at least one who is ever ready to obey God's commands. Only he who obeys God's commands is redeemed.

There is no point in undertaking spiritual practices without obeying God's commands.

Today, everyone wants happiness without understanding what it means. True happiness lies in being desireless. Desire is the cause of misery. A rich man may have no dearth of money, food, and other material comforts, but still he may lack peace and happiness. Material objects may provide physical comforts, but not mental peace. Money may give reputation, but not respect. There may be a number of servants, but they are not friends. All of them serve only out of compulsion, not out of love.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 305

There is only one true friend, who is always with you, in you and around you. He is God. As long as there is water in the tank, thousands of frogs gather. But once the tank is dry, not a single frog will be seen around. Likewise, as long as you are rich and in a position of authority, everyone acts like a friend. But once you lose your position and money, your so-called friends will desert you, without even caring to say good-bye.

Hearts bereft of love are like barren lands

In this world, nothing is permanent. Only the principle of love in your heart is permanent. Only love can win people's hearts. If you have love within, the whole world will be with you. Why do so many people from so many countries gather here? There is something here that is not there in your country, in your village, and in your family. That is the all-encompassing love. Only through love can you establish intimate relationship with each other. Hearts bereft of love are like barren lands. There should be love in the field of the human heart.

Gopikas prayed to Krishna thus:

O Krishna, play on your flute

So that the seeds of Love germinate

In the barren fields of our hearts and Make the rain of love and

The rivers of love flow incessantly. [Telugu Song]

Love always gives and never receives. Such selfless Love is only with God. You have gathered here to experience that Love. No one has sent you any invitation. It is only Love that has brought you here. What is that I am giving you? When I just ask you, When did you come? you become ecstatic.

There is so much sweetness even in the words that I utter. You too should learn to speak softly and sweetly. You cannot always oblige, but you can always speak obligingly. Harsh words are like atom bombs. When someone visits your house, even if you do not give anything to eat, at least talk to him sweetly and softly. It can even appease their hunger. Instead, if you speak harshly, that will not only increase their hunger but also dishearten them.

Charity is the true ornament for the hand.

Truth is the true ornament for the throat.

Listening to sacred texts is the true ornament for the ears.

Why need any other ornaments?

[Sanskrit sloka]

You should not have the feeling that only your country should be happy. You should pray for the welfare of the entire world Loka samastha sukhino bhavanthu. Let everybody and every country be happy. Only when you have such broad feelings will you be respected. No one will respect you if your behaviour and words are not proper.

Do not waste a precious human life

Students! Try to understand what human life is. The Upanishads declare that human life is most valuable. It is not easy to understand the divine quality immanent in man. All forms and all powers are in man. Man thinks that gold and diamond are most valuable, but actually it is man who endows value to them. Men are more valuable than all the wealth of the world. So, do not waste such a precious human life.

Ancient sages like Vasishta worked very hard in order to sanctify their lives. Why did Vasishta join the court of

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 307

Dasaratha? One day Vasishta himself explained this to Dasaratha in the following words: O king, I have come to you not because you are wealthy and powerful but because Lord Narayana Himself will be born as your son. I want to sanctify my life in His company. Vasishta always used to think of divinity. So, he had the appellation Brahmarishi.

Viswamitra was called only a rajarishi because he was full of rajasic qualities. In spite of repeated efforts, Viswamitra could not get the appellation that Vasishta could get. So, he developed hatred toward Vasishta. Due to this hatred, Viswamitra lost all his powers.

You all know that Durvasa, one of the great rishis (sages), also had the bad quality of anger in him. Even if you were to search with a torchlight, you would not find even an iota of love in him. What is the use of being a maharishi (great sage) when there is no trace of love or peace? Only one with sweet words and with sacred actions can be called a true maharishi.

If you protect the values, they will in turn protect you

Bharat (India) could progress in ancient times because of saints and noble souls. In spite of repeated foreign invasions, this country could not be destabilised because of the greatness of its spiritual power. In order to preserve and sustain the strong spiritual foundation laid by the saints and noble souls, we have to foster human values such as Truth, Righteousness, Peace, Love, and Nonviolence. If you protect these values, they will in turn protect you. Dharmayeve hato hanthi, dharmo rakshati rakshitah (If you protect dharma, dharma will protect you). Similarly, if you destroy dharma, dharma will destroy you.

Love is your true form. Only through love you can achieve anything. There is no need to search for God and no need to undertake any spiritual practice. Love is God, Live in Love.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 308

Without spending a penny and without even crossing your doorstep, you can attain liberation. How? It is only through love. So, develop love.

Embodiments of Love! Do not have hatred toward anybody. Start loving even those that abuse you. It is only through love that you can bring transformation in them. By loving them more and more, you can get relieved of the pain inflicted by their harsh words.

Harsh words are like sharp arrows that pierce deep into the heart. There is no medicine in this world that can cure you of the pain inflicted by harsh words. When you are shot with the arrows of harsh words, in reply speak sweetly, softly with love. It is the best medicine. It gives quick relief. Any incurable disease can be cured with love.

Love is beyond description

What is the cause of disease? It is mental tension, which is man's own making. Tension gives rise to temper, and the two together ruin man. If you want to fill a cup with milk, which is already filled with water, what do you have to do? You have to pour out the water and then fill it with milk. In the same way, remove all wicked thoughts and wicked feelings from your heart and then fill it with love.

Start the day with Love.

Fill the day with Love.

Spend the day with Love.

End the day with Love.

This is the way to God.

You can develop Love in you by sharing it with others.

Love never diminishes. It is nectarine and eternal. Once Narada asked Narayana if there was anything sweeter than nectar.

Narayana replied, Love is sweeter than nectar. You may even get fed up with drinking nectar, but that is not the case with Love. The more you taste it, the more you ask for it.

First remove all dirt (bad qualities) in you. As soon as the calf is born, the cow removes all dirt from its body by licking it repeatedly and then feeds it. When a pashu (animal) has got so much Love for its young one, then you can very well imagine the Love of Pashupathi (God) for His creation. Love cannot be expressed in words. Narada said Anir vachaneeyam prema, which means: Love cannot be described in words.

Love is the principle of God

People think that Narada is fond of creating differences (kalahapriya), but it is a mistaken view. Yes, he was a kalahapriya in his early days, but later on he realised his mistake, did severe penance, and rectified himself. He ultimately became a great teacher. It was Narada who brought nara (man) and Narayana (God) together. He worked for attainment of bliss and total removal of grief. He said, The Atma, the Spirit, is God. It is Narayana who makes you forget your body attachments and gets you intoxicated with the love of God.

Love is the principle of God. Having got this Love in you, why should you suffer? Why do you have problems? In fact, you have no difficulties and no anxieties. There is only bliss. But how can you experience bliss? You have to follow the path of Love.

Just by repeating the names of the dishes, your hunger will not be appeased. You have to use your hands and mouth to fill your stomach. In the same way, you have to speak sweet words and do sacred actions. Through these, you will enjoy the sweetness of life and you will be blissful.

All are the children of immortality. You are all the embodiments of ananda (bliss). The Upanishads say that man is ananda pipasi (seeker of bliss). Since he has emerged from bliss, he wants to return to his source. Just as fish, born out of Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 310 water, always wants to get into water, so also man, born out of bliss, always craves for bliss wherever he is and whatever he does. Until he returns to his source, man has no rest at all.

Man is always restless because he cannot find bliss in this world. That is why the Gita said, Anithyam Asukham Lokam. Imam Prapya Bhajasva Maam (having got this joyless and transient human life, constantly worship Me).

You may engage yourself in your daily activities; there is no need to give up your jobs and business, but keep your mind on God always. Only then you will have peace and happiness. After tasting honey, can you say it is bitter? You have actually not experienced bliss. Once you experience divine bliss, your mind will never crave for worldly pleasures.

So, try to experience this bliss, which is within you. Bliss is your source, bliss is your breath and bliss is your life. And it is there with God. Be successful, attain Divinity and enjoy divine bliss.

Prasanthi Nilayam

Entire universe is within you

Even a millionaire has to be content with ordinary food.

He cannot live on a diet of gold.

When time is not favourable,

a stick may turn into a snake,

While, when it is favourable, dust may turn into gold.

The wheel of time can turn a scholar into a fool

And a fool into a saint.

A wealthy man may become a plaything of adversity at some time.

Whatever your efforts may be,

You cannot get what you are not destined to get.

O man, don't be over ambitious,

Lead instead a noble life

making proper use of the intellect.

Embodiments of Love! In this vast world, among all living creatures, human life is the noblest. One is born as a human being as a result of meritorious deeds done in past lives. Just as a small gramophone plate contains many songs, poems, and dialogues, likewise the human heart contains the entire universe in a subtle form. You can neither see the script of the dialogues and songs by keeping the gramophone plate close to your eyes nor hear the sound by keeping it close to your ears. Only by playing it will you be able to hear the music and the dialogues that are in it.

Human being is the Embodiment of Cosmic Principle

The human heart, which can be compared to a gramophone

plate, contains in it all the traits of past lives. The reaction, resound, and reflection of all that you have seen, heard, and experienced are contained in it. The vast oceans, the mighty mountains, and all the different places that you visited are imprinted on your heart. In short, the entire universe is imprinted on the human heart. So, it can be said that human being is Viswavidatwarupa (Embodiment of Cosmic Principle). But man, not being able to realise this truth, considers himself low, and is affected by pleasure and pain, good and bad.

Wherefrom has this universe originated? The Sruthis (the Vedas) have given a proper answer to this. The universe has originated from where the I principle has originated. That is Hridaya. The Sruthis declare that Hridaya is the origin of the I principle. This I is all-pervasive. Everyone uses this letter I while introducing thesmelf.

There is no place or person without this I principle. Even the birds and beasts have got this I principle, though they are not able to express it. Wherever I is, there is Hridaya. Hridaya is not limited to body alone, it is all-pervasive. I is the name of the Atma. So, in everybody, the Atma is present in the form of I. It is associated with buddhi (intellect).

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 313

The five aspects of buddhi

Right from an illiterate person to a scholar, everyone defines buddhi as the power to discriminate between the transient and the permanent. This is not the correct definition. People use it only in the worldly sense. In fact, buddhi has five aspects. They are: sraddha, rutham, sathyam, yogam, and mahatthatwam. Sraddha has two powers: one is interest and the other is steadfastness. Rutham refers to unity of thought, word, and deed. Rutham expressed in the form of words becomes Sathyam (Truth). Yogam refers Yoga chitta vritti nirodha (controlling the aberrations of the mind). The fifth aspect, mahatthatwam, is that which is sacred and divine. When buddhi has all these five aspects, is it not an understatement to define buddhi as that which only discriminates between the transient and the permanent.

Today, many people talk of manas (mind) and buddhi (intellect) without understanding their true meaning. They think that the mind is only a combination of thoughts, but even the actions are associated with it. When the mind and the intellect unite, humanness reaches a state of freedom, which is referred to as moksha (liberation).

It is a mistake to undertake any spiritual practice to control the mind. The nature of the mind is mysterious. It is unsteady and associated with ego. Who can control such a mind? So, never try to control the mind. Follow the intellect, then the mind naturally submits itself. The master of the mind is the intellect. The master of the intellect is the Atma. The Atma has no master. So, master the mind and be a mastermind.

Search for Truth is search for God, because Truth is God.

So, worship Truth, follow Truth, and practice Truth. People may deny God, but none can deny Truth. You cannot fragment Truth by saying, this is Pakistani Truth, this is American Truth, Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 314

this is Indian Truth, and so on. Truth is uniform for people of all nations and all religions in all periods of time.

Truth is one, so God is one. But people worship God in different forms. This is bhranthi (delusion). As long as there is bhranthi in you, you cannot attain Brahma. This bhranthi is the cause for all your sufferings. So, first and foremost, give up bhranthi.

Go closer to God and love Him wholeheartedly

It is a mistake to consider that God is separate from you.

Once you realise that you are one with God, you can never be separated. For example, when a pot full of water is emptied in the ocean, the water of the pot becomes one with the ocean.

You cannot separate them. Similarly, once you unify your love with God, you become one with God.

How to unify? When fire and coal are placed apart, they remain as they are. Only when both are brought close to each other, does fire enter coal. If fanning is also done, coal gets transformed into fire. Likewise go closer to God and love Him wholeheartedly. Going close to God can be compared to coal coming in contact with fire (nearness), and loving Him wholeheartedly

can be compared to fanning (dearness). Such nearness and dearness to God will ultimately make you one with God. This is what Vedanta declared: Brahmavid Brahmaiva Bhavathi (the knower of Brahman becomes one with Brahman).

The human body contains all the three worlds: Devaloka (head), Naraloka (throat) and Nagaloka (heart). The head is referred to as Devaloka (heaven) because it has got all five senses of perception, which recognise shabda (sound), sparsha (touch), rupa (form), rasa (taste), and gandha (smell).

The body is made of five elements and is bound to perish,

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 315

But the Indweller is immortal.

The Indweller has no birth,

no death, and no bondage.

Truly speaking, that Indweller is God Himself.

[Telugu poem]

God is present in the form of five elements

Such a sacred body, the temple of God, is being misused.

Yesterday I told you that the world is made of five elements.

Human body is also made of five elements. God is present in the form of five elements all over the world. The Vedas declare:

Antarbahishcha Tath Sarvavyapya Narayana Sthitha,

which means Divinity is present in you, with you, above you, below you, and around you.

Every human being has five sheaths: annamaya kosha

(gross sheath), pranamaya kosha (life sheath), manomaya kosha

(mental sheath), vijnanamaya kosha (wisdom sheath), and anandamaya kosha (bliss sheath). In order to acquire wisdom, you do not need to go through sacred texts or hear the teachings of elders. The sacred sheath of wisdom itself is present in you. Once you experience the sheath of wisdom, you will experience the sheath of bliss. Just as the water bubble is born out of water, sustained in it and ultimately merges in water; so also human being is born out of bliss, sustained in bliss, and ultimately merges in bliss. But, being unaware of this, you are wasting your time, money, and energy in search of bliss. Truly speaking, man is wasting a lot of time in worldly pursuits. But he does not spend even a moment to know his Self. Who am I? What for am I born? What am I doing? Man does not put these questions to himself. Instead, he questions others, Who are you? Where do you come from? What are you doing? He has got the inquisitiveness to know about others, but not about himself.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 316

What is the purpose of life? It is not khana, peena, sona, mama (eating, drinking, sleeping, dying). The body is gifted in order to follow dharma. Your dharma is to know your own Self. Consider everyone as divine and the whole world as the mansion of God. Offer all your actions to God. Let every word that you utter be a mantra and every step you take be Pradakshina (circumambulating God).

Instead of leading such a sacred life, man is wasting his time and energy in amassing wealth. Due to excessive desires, his life becomes a big zero.

Zero gains value when number one (hero) precedes it. As the number of zeroes increases, the value also increases if number one precedes them. Similarly, if you keep God (Hero) in view, all the zeroes such as your body, mind, and senses also gain value.

Hero becomes zero if he forgets God. The world is zero, human life is zero, the sky is zero, the sun is zero, and the moon is zero. All these zeroes have got value only because of the Hero i.e. God.

By serving others, you are serving only yourself

Embodiments of Love!

Take to service, but do not think that you are serving others.

You are serving only yourself. Similarly, all the spiritual practices such as japa, tapa, dhyana, and bhajan are for your own satisfaction. God does not need them.

God wants only one thing, that you know your Self. Only then you will know God. Confidence in self and confidence in God this is the secret of greatness. Prahlada had total faith in Narayana, while Hiranyakasipu had faith in the body. God will always protect the one with strong faith, like Prahlada.

Today, man visits temples and pilgrimage centres in search of peace, but peace is not found in pilgrimage centres. Peace is Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 317 not found outside, it is within you. You are the embodiment of peace, truth and love. So search within, tread along the path of love. Only then you will be peaceful.

Through love, you can achieve anything. God is Love, live in Love. Without love, you cannot be successful. Love helps you to know your Self. In order to experience love, you do not need to approach anybody; nor do you need to exert yourself. Turn your vision inward.

Less luggage, more comfort make travel a pleasure

Krishna said, Mamaivamso jeevaloke jeevabhutha sanathana (human beings are the sparks of My Divinity). Serve anybody; it amounts to serving God. The best way to love God is to love all and serve all. If you lead such a life, all your actions will be pleasing unto God.

Embodiments of Love!

You need food, clothing, shelter, and some money to purchase medicines if you were to fall sick. That is why I said in the beginning, O man! Never be over-ambitious, lead instead a noble life by making proper use of the intellect. Happiness lies in contentment. Dissatisfaction will lead to misery.

In order to experience peace, keep your desires under control. Misery is the birthplace of all desires. In this journey of life, desires can be compared to luggage. Less luggage, more comfort make travel a pleasure. So, reduce your desires. This is called Vairagya (renunciation).

As the desire for the world decreases, the desire for God increases. This is what the Vedas declare: Na karmena na prajaya dhanena thyagenaike amruthathwamanusu (Neither by actions nor by progeny nor by wealth but only by sacrifice can one attain immortality).

Offer all your actions to God, consider all as children of God, treat money as God's gift and make proper use of it. As long as there is no sacrifice in you, you will have only anrutSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 318 hathwa (falsehood). Only sacrifice will give you amruthathwa (immortality).

Experience happiness through divine love

What is the way to immortality? Removal of immorality is the only way to immortality. Without getting rid of wicked qualities such as lust, anger, greed, and jealousy, how do you expect to attain immortality? When the tumbler is already filled with water, you cannot fill it with anything else.

Similarly, when the head is filled with evil qualities, good qualities have no place in it. You have filled the vessel of your heart with all types of worries. Then how do you expect to be happy?

Vyasa gave the essence of all the eighteen Puranas in one sentence: Help Ever, Hurt Never. Only then you can be happy. If it is not possible to help, at least do not harm anybody under any circumstances. You should serve wholeheartedly, not for name and fame.

Today, man is leading a worldly life, devoid of all ideals.

Instead of trying to know his true identity, he is wasting his time on useless pursuits.

He knows the route to America, but not to Kasi.

He knows a lot about Botany,

But not the use of the Tulsi plant.

[Telugu Poem]

What is the use of leading such a life? I Develop daya (compassion) in your hridaya (heart). Today, there is only fashion, but no compassion. What is the meaning of mankind? Man should have kindness. The one without kindness is not a man, but a demon. The proper study of mankind is man. There should be harmony in thought, word, and deed. Whatever originates from the heart should be expressed in words, and the words in turn should be put into action.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 319

Once, a devotee prayed thus: O Bhagavan, people send many applications to you expressing their desires. How do you find time to go through all this? When do You reply? We get a headache even if we read two letters. But You read so many letters and send so many replies, and yet, You remain happy and cheerful in spite of your busy schedule. This itself is a sign of Divinity.

I am doing all this not for My happiness, but for your happiness. Many people greet Me Happy Birthday. I am always happy. You do not need to greet Me thus. Give happiness to those who are not happy.

Happiness cannot be experienced through spiritual practices.

It can be experienced only through Divine Love. You will never fail in your life if you have love for God. As the previous speaker said, there are people who have failed for lack of faith, but people with strong faith will never fail. Man is suffering because he lacks faith.

In order to experience bliss, you need to develop love.

Love is like a rose and lust is like a thorn. Cut the rose without touching the thorn and offer it to God. You should offer yourself to God. That is surrender. Love within you should be merged with the Divine Love. There lies the bliss.

Think of God from early age

In the Ramayana, Vali and Sugriva suffered because they lacked unity. In the same way Ravana, Kumbhakarna, and Vibhishana also suffered due to lack of unity. Though the Pandavas had difference of opinion among them, they stood united. Therefore, their the name and fame have spread far and wide. With unity you can achieve anything.

There are 95 crore people in India. If there is unity among them, this country can be transformed into a very heaven itself. But there is no unity, no purity. Only enmity exists. Heart is like a single chair, not a musical chair or double seated sofa.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 320

So, let Love be seated in that chair, then bad qualities have no place in it. Modern devotion has become artificial. People say something and do quite the opposite. There is no harmony in their words and actions. This is not proper. It amounts to cheating themselves.

You can have happiness only from difficulties

Each one has to face their own destiny. So, you should be ready to face difficulties. There can be no pleasure without pain. Do not feel dejected on seeing a dark night. Think of the moonlight that can be seen on the following night. Without dark night, there cannot be full moon night. There is happiness in sorrow too. You cannot have happiness out of happiness. You can have happiness only from difficulties.

Though you are the embodiment of love, you have to do sadhana (spiritual practices) and seva (selfless service) necessarily till you realise your true identity. Some people say,

Swami, why do we need to be devoted at a young age? We can as well think of God after retirement. When the messengers of death come to seize your life, when your relatives make arrangements to keep your body outside, and when your wife and children cry bitterly, is it possible to remember God at that moment? So, right from an early age, you should think of God. That is why I say, Start early, drive slowly and reach safely. Embodiments of Love! Fight against bad thoughts and bad deeds. Run away from bad company and join good company. Develop good thoughts, good feelings, undertake good actions and attain Divinity.

Bhagavan s assurance to devotees

Punar Vittam Punar Mithram

Punar Bhaarya Punar Yashaha,

Yavath Sarvam Punar Labhyam

Na Sareeram Punah Punah.

If man loses money, he can get it back;

If his friend leaves him, he can get another;

If he loses his wife, even then he can remarry and have another wife;

If he loses his share of land, he can procure another.

He can regain all these things,

But he cannot get back the body once it is lost.

Embodiments of Divine Love! Therefore, we should consider that for all spiritual pursuits and for all types of endeavours in life, the body is the main instrument. Of all the living beings in this world, human life is the rarest, noblest, and most sacred. It is a great fortune to have this vesture of human body. However, in this human body there is mind, which is mysterious. Everyone is aware of the presence of the mind in the huSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 322 man body. But no one knows the vagaries of the mind. Though it does not have feet to move, it can travel faster than air and light. It has no death, has no fixed life span, and always remains youthful. You may be born again and again, but the same mind follows. Once you understand the nature of the mind, you will be able to understand your true Self.

The whole world is a mansion, and the entire humanity is one family. There is no multiplicity. We live under the same sky, tread the same earth, breathe the same air, and drink the same water. So, it is foolishness to develop diversity in this underlying principle of unity.

Whatever work you do, do it with sacred feeling

What is the sadhana (spiritual practice) to be undertaken?

You should purify your body, mind, and speech. How to purify the body? It is not enough if it is cleaned with soap and water, which amounts to only external cleanliness. It has to be cleaned with good thoughts, good words, good deeds, which is very essential on the inward path. Whatever work you do, do it with sacred feelings. Divert the body from all unsacred activities, and use it only for good purposes.

In what way can you purify the mind? You can purify the mind through sense control. Use the ten senses for sacred purposes.

See no evil, see what is good.

Hear no evil, hear what is good.

Talk no evil, talk what is good.

Think no evil, think what is good.

Do no evil, do what is good.

This is the way to God.

In order to purify the senses, you should make use of them in a sacred way. Purity of the senses is purity of the mind. The mind is the master of the senses. If the mind is to be pure, the senses have also to be pure.

How can you purify your speech? You can purify your speech by speaking truth, following dharma and cultivating love and peace.

Atma, aham, mind, and speech belong to the same family. The moment the human body is born, Aham (I) also follows it. The Atma is the origin of Aham; so, Aham is the son of the Atma. From Aham the mind is born; so, the mind is the grandson of the Atma. And from mind speech originates, so speech is the great-grandson of the Atma. In short, the Atma, Aham, mind, and speech belong to the same family. So, you should have the conviction that the I principle in you is the dear son of God, the mind is the grandson of and the speech is the great grandson. Once you understand that your Aham, mind, and speech belong to the divine family and act accordingly, your life will be sanctified.

Man finds it very difficult to have control over the senses.

Due to the effect of modern education and high intelligence, man has become a slave of his senses. Unable to control his mind, man is leading a life of fear and delusion. From where does this fear arise? Where there is mistake, there is fear.

What is the mistake made by man? He has forgotten that the 'I' principle in him is the son of God. He has forgotten that his mind is the grandson of God. And he has forgotten that his speech is the great-grandson of God. Since he has forgotten his relationship with God, man is fear-stricken and gripped in anxiety.

Due to the advancement in the field of science and technology, human values are lost and the mind has become polluted.

On the one hand, science has progressed, but on the other hand, the sanctity of the senses has regressed. Man is Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 324 happy seeing advancement in science and technology but has not realised how far he has moved away from Divinity.

You should understand My ideal

Man's life has become highly artificial. There is no trace of love in his thoughts and in his relationship with others. Even the relationship between mother and son has become artificial. Nowadays, when one finds a son talking to his mother, one finds only artificial exchange of words, but not true love. Students are leading an artificial life, without sense control. Even animals have sense control to some extent, but not the modern students. This is due to the progress in modern education. I do not say that education should not make progress. I myself have established a University. I say only that along with education, students should imbibe human values and develop good character.

Can you call mere bookish knowledge education? Can you call all those who can read and write educated? Can you call all those who have degrees to their names educated? If education were to be only for a living, do you not find birds and beasts living?

Education is for life and not for earning a living. The objective of human life can be realised when you try to know the purpose of life. You should not be content with bookish knowledge and superficial knowledge; you should have practical knowledge. To have practical knowledge, enquire within. You should understand My ideal. Once I say that you are Mine, I will never forsake you. You may forget Me, but I will never forget you. You may develop hatred toward Me, but I do not have any hatred toward you. In this world, I have no enemies, and I have no dislike toward anybody. I always uphold My promise. I always go forward to protect; never do I retract. But, some may question that even after Swami accepts them as His, why do they have problems? Why should they Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 325 suffer? This is not My mistake. I always keep My promise. They suffer because they forget their promise and lose their sacredness. I never go back on My word. I never make anyone suffer. Till the last moment, I will be with you, in you, below you, above you, and around you.

Many are not making an effort to understand this truth. They do not enquire into the reason for their suffering. Their wavering mind and their ingratitude are responsible for this. The previous speaker, Ravi, said, God is nearer to you than your mother. Though I shower much more love than their own mothers, some people do not show their gratitude. I do not look forward to your gratitude. But, when I do My duty, you also have to discharge your duty at your level.

God will never make anyone suffer

Some people blame God for their suffering, ignoring their own defects. They argue that God does not keep His word. But God will never go back on His promise. Man does not understand this truth. Being fully immersed in physical and worldly feelings, he blames God for his suffering. God will never make anyone suffer at any point of time. But each has to face the consequences of their own actions.

Every action has a reaction. It may take place immediately or in a few hours or in a few days or in a few months or in a few years or in a few births. For example, when your finger is cut with a blade, it starts bleeding immediately. If you fall from a staircase, you may suffer a fracture immediately. In both the cases, the reactions are instant. The food that you eat takes a minimum of two hours to get digested. For a seed to grow into a tree and yield fruit, it may take a few years.

Good or bad, you cannot escape the consequences of your actions. Then you may question, why should one pray to God? One should pray to God not for the alleviation of suffering, but for peace of mind. Once you have peace of mind, all your problems will vanish.

You can even escape the consequences of your actions if you have God's grace. After the expiration date, the medicine loses its potency; similarly, once you acquire God's grace, the consequences of your actions will have no effect on you. In order to make the consequences of your actions expire, prayer is essential. You have to pray wholeheartedly. Your heart is the seat of God. So, think of God, who is installed in your heart. You cannot expect happiness in the outside world. Bliss is not in the material world; it is within you.

So, when you search within, you will find bliss.

Take God into you and drive out ego

Embodiments of Love!

Never blame God for your difficulties. Come what may, pray to Him. That is your duty. As long as you have the feeling that you are separate from God, you have to pray. Once you realise that you are one with Him, you need not pray.

Your breathing process teaches you a lesson. When you inhale you make the sound So, and when you exhale you make the sound Ham. This process goes on 21,600 times a day. So refers to Divinity and Ham to ego, which means you have to take God in and drive ego out. This is an important principle of life.

We have to understand what we should receive and what we should reject. We breathe in oxygen and breathe out carbon dioxide. Divinity is like oxygen, which supports our life, and ego is like carbon dioxide, which is a very bad quality. It has to be driven out.

In your daily life, knowingly or unknowingly, you commit some mistakes. You are only keeping the physical body clean, but you are not making any effort to know how to purify your mind and speech. You are treating bad as good and good as bad. We should make efforts to know what is good and what is bad.

All service rendered to others for the welfare of society is good. You are a member of society. So, your welfare depends on the welfare of society. The country will prosper if society is good. Individual prayer, family prayer, and community prayer all the three are very essential.

Your love should be as big as an ocean

The Vedas have declared, Loka samastha sukhino bhavantu (May the whole world be happy)! Since ancient times, Bharat has propagated spiritual discipline to other countries, ensuring peace and security for the entire humanity. You should have such broad feelings. Your love should be as vast as an ocean.

When Jesus was being crucified, people around were weeping. At that moment, an ethereal voice declared, All are one, My dear son! Be alike to everyone. The same thing is taught by the culture of Bharat wishing the welfare of entire humanity. Unfortunately, with the passage of time, selfishness and self-interest have become rampant.

According to Bharatiya (Indian) culture, Uttarayana is considered to be very sacred. The great warrior Bhishma, lying on a bed of arrows, waited for 56 days for the advent of Uttarayana to give up his mortal coil. During Uttarayana, the sun travels toward the north. What does this signify? In the north, we have Himachala (Himalaya mountains), which are said to be the dwelling place of Eswara. When Eswara is all-pervasive, how can we limit him to Himachala? What is the significance of this statement?

The word Himachala is made up of two words: Hima + Achala. Hima means snow, which is white and pure. Achala is that which is firm and unshakeable. What is the place to which this description applies? It is the pure heart, where Eswara is installed.

It is said, Eswara sarva bhoothanam (Eswara is the indweller of all beings). So, in order to see God, you do not need to go anywhere; just turn your vision inward. We cannot call an unsteady and impure heart as Himachala. Only the heart that is pure, peaceful, sacred, unpolluted, and unwavering can be called Himachala. So, when you turn inward, you are in Himachala.

Parents must teach their wards to pray to God every day. There is no trace of spiritual thinking among modern students. When the parents and teachers themselves have not realised the importance of spirituality, how can we blame the students? First the parents must teach their wards to pray to God everyday. But modern parents themselves do not pray to God. As soon as they return from the office, they go to the club and spend their time in drinking and playing cards. Naturally, children follow in their footsteps.

In some houses, parents quarrel in front of their children, which is an unhealthy practice. If there is any difference of opinion between parents, they should resolve it in the absence of their children. Children cannot concentrate on their studies if they are disturbed by family problems. So, parents should never discuss them in front of their children. They should instead teach them all good things and show them good ways of life. There are a few parents who set a bad example to their children by speaking untruth. For example, if some unwanted person makes a phone call, they instruct their children to tell him that they are not available. Thus, they teach their children how to tell lies.

Some children are like pure gold as long as they are here. But, when they go home for vacation, their minds get polluted. But some students remain the same. Some return much before Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 329 their vacation ends in order to spend time with Swami. Their innate tendencies acquired as a result of deeds done in past lives shape their behaviour.

Only God is permanent

Students! Embodiments of Love! You should try to know what Divinity is. In this age of science, some say that there is no God. But there is God in all periods of time. There is no other matter. Yath drishyam tannashyam (Whatever is seen is bound to perish.) Only God is permanent.

Time is most precious in human life. Misuse of time is evil. Time is God, so don't waste time. I feel very sad when I find you wasting time. I always say, My life is My message. I never waste even a moment. You think that after supper Swami goes and sleeps. But, actually I do not know what sleep is. I never sleep. As you know, I collect letters from you. I see some of them immediately. I spend time in a most sacred way. But I do not require anything. I do not need anything in all the three worlds. I do not need anything for Myself. Still, I am engaged in activity from dawn to dusk in order to set an ideal. From top to toe, there is no trace of selfishness in Me. Believe it or not, I always give but never receive. I ask for only one thing, and that is pure love. I am ready to give My life for those who offer their pure love.

You cannot understand My work. Only men of sacrifice can understand this. I am always engaged in activity. I do something or the other. Even while resting I am working. I have to take rest for others sake. Otherwise, they too would not take rest. To give them rest, I take rest. What is My rest? Doing devotees work is My rest.

The previous speaker, Narasimhamurthy, spoke about this incident. On day, all of a sudden, I left this body. Gangadhar Shetty and Narasimhamurthy were surprised at this. Only these two were there inside since it was not possible for others to Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 330 come in. I told them that there was a widow who always thought of Swami. She had two children. After the death of her husband, she took up a small job to maintain her family. The loss of her husband and her inability to run the family made her depressed. Since the money was not sufficient, she took a part-time job. But every moment she used to chant Sairam, Sairam, Sairam ... wholeheartedly. In such a situation, she suffered a heart attack. In fact, she was to die.

So, I took the heart attack on Myself. For seven days, I did not come down. I took upon Myself all her suffering and pain and made her healthy. After three days, she sent a telegram, Swami, You came and protected me and my children. She did not know that I had taken her disease on Myself. After a week, she came here with her children.

Do not limit spirituality to Bharat

I am ready to do anything for the sake of those who have total faith and pure love. But it is very difficult to find such devotees. However, there are a few of them. If there are no noble people, how is that you find goodness in this world? There are many sacred people in this country as well as in this world.

Do not limit spirituality to Bharat; it is present all over the world. Truly speaking, it is more in foreign countries than in Bharat. Indians do not know much about the Brahma Sutras, the Upanishads, and the Bhagavad Gita. But, many foreigners have learnt the Bhagavad Gita by heart.

In Italy, there is a devotee who has learnt the Brahma Sutras by heart. She can chant Rudram. In Italy, she constructed a building named 'Mother Sai,' spread over 25 acres of land. Having full faith that one day Swami would certainly visit that place, she also built a spacious hall like the Poornachandra Auditorium, so that public meetings could be held there. She Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 331 has also constructed some rooms to accommodate the students that follow Swami.

Do you know how clearly and with perfect accent our primary school children from foreign countries chant the Vedas?

This is the result of being in good company. If the company is good, the children's future will also be good. Tell me your company, I shall tell you what you are. As your company, so you become. So, wherever you go, join good company.

Let your heart and mind be purified. Speak always the truth in a palatable and acceptable way. This is the spiritual path thaat you have to adopt. People may wonder why one should do meditation and bhajans. They are all good actions meant to spend the time in a sacred way, but God is not interested in them.

What should you do to make God happy? You should involve your body in good deeds, fill the mind with good thoughts, and speak sweetly and softly. Only these actions please God. Bharatiyas (Indians) refer to this as Trikaranashuddhi (purity of thought, word, and deeds). With sacred feelings, students should undertake sacred actions and lead an ideal life. This is what I teach the students in particular.

Fill your hearts with Divinity

The students who study here should transform thousands of students outside. It is not enough if you merely preach; first, practice what you preach. Only then will your study in this Institute find fulfillment.

We do not receive even a naya paisa from you. Education is offered free. How can you express your gratitude to this Institute? Share with others all that you have learnt here. This is true gratitude. Do your jobs, and take care of your parents. Fill your hearts with Divinity.

When there is pure water in the tank, you get the same water out of the taps. Your heart is like a tank. All the senses are like taps. So, fill your heart with love and experience love. I expect and bless the students to take to this path of love and to lead an ideal life. Thus, I bring My discourse to a close.

29 September 1998

Sai Kulwant Hall, Prasanthi Nilayam

No water will come in the tap if the pipe is not connected with the regular supply system. Have you connected your act of service with the reservoir of love in your heart? Are you doing it with good consciousness, or is it merely a superficial ceremonial routine act for pride and publicity? Diagnose and rectify. No worship can succeed unless the heart is pure and the senses are mastered.

Power of divine love

Nirguno nishkriyo nithya nirvikalpo niranjana

Nirvikaro nirakaro sarva mukthaihi labhyaha

[Sanskrit verse]

Attributeless, unattached to actions, eternal, beyond all thoughts, ever pure, unsullied and formless (Brahman) is accessible to all liberated souls.

There is one principle that is attributeless, formless, eternal, and beyond thought, word, and deed. That is the principle of Love. The Upanishads call this Love the Atma. How can man understand this Love, which is attributeless and formless? This Love is not an intellectual exercise; nor is it a psychological phenomenon, or a reflection in the dreaming state. It is the life principle of all living creatures. Noble souls propagated this principle of Love in various ways. Many elders, youngsters, scholars lecture on this principle of Love and sing its glory. But, no poetry, no composition, no language can describe Love. Yatho vacho nivarthanthe aprapya manasa saha

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 334

(It cannot be described by speech and It is beyond the reach of the mind). So, it is beyond human comprehension and narration.

Love has no form; it can be seen only in practice.

All are sparks of the Divine

If one were to ask what the form of Love is, it can be said

Love is God. Who is God? Where is God? What is His form?

How to search Him? This has been the continuous enquiry since ancient times. But, none can describe Divinity. The Vedas said: Vedahametham Purusham Mahantham Adityavarnam Thamasa Parasthath (Divinity shines with the brilliance of a thousand suns and is beyond the darkness of ignorance).

Divinity is beyond human understanding and expression.

How can one recognise Divinity, which is the embodiment of Love? In this world, love assumes various forms as expressed by mother, father, brother, wife, friends, and relations.

In this worldly love, you find selfishness and self-interest. But Divine Love is absolutely selfless.

Just as God loves all, you should also make efforts to love all, because in the Bhagavad Gita, the Lord says, Mamaivamsorjeevaloke Jeevabhutha Sanathana (the eternal Atma in all beings is a part of My Being). So, as He loves you, you should also love all and make all happy. But, today, one does not find such love between human beings.

Divine Love does not expect anything in return. In order to cultivate such divine Love, man should have the faith that he is the spark of the Divine and He should understand that the same God is present in all. Once he understands and develops faith in this truth, he can love everybody. Today, one does not find such love; it means only that man has no faith in the statement of God that all are sparks of the Divine.

Just as a Mariner's compass always points toward the north, likewise under all circumstances Love is directed toward God. Time, space, and individuals do not affect Love. Love is Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 335

the true sign of Divinity. Understanding Love amounts to understanding Divinity.

None can decide the form of God.

When you enter a cinema theatre, you find a white screen. Merely watching the screen does not satisfy you. Once the show commences, you find different scenes projected on the screen. Without the screen, can you see the picture? No. But, when the picture is projected, though the screen exists, it is not seen; it merges itself with the picture. The screen exists all the time before, during, and after the show.

The Vedas declare: Another bahischa Thath sarva vyapya Narayana sthithah (That all-pervasive God is present within and without). As the screen is to the picture, so is the Atma to the creation. The screen of Atma present within and around all beings and is the primordial basis for the entire creation.

Therefore, it is said, Sarvam Vishnumayam Jagat (Divinity pervades everywhere). Divinity is present in the picture, around the picture.

The Atma has no definite name and form

So, who can know the form of such a Divinity? On the screen of Love, you find the picture of the universe. This Love is present in the name of Atma in all beings. What form can you attribute to the Love present in you? It is not possible.

How can a person who does not understand his true nature understand

God? So, first and foremost, one should make efforts to understand one's own Self.

The Atma has no definite name and form. Ek Prabhu Ke Anek Nam (the one Lord has many names). The Atma is the fundamental principle, which is pure, immutable, and unsullied. It forms the basis of the entire universe. Without the basis of the Atma, the universe cannot exist. The Vedas declare: Pashyannapi na pashyathi moodho (He is a fool who sees yet does not recognise the truth). The same principle of Atma is Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 336 reflected in all beings. God is the basis of the entire universe. It appears rather strange when we enquire where God is. God is in the forest and also in the mansion. He is present in your heart and also in your speech. He is present everywhere. So, never make an attempt to investigate Divinity. Instead have faith in God, follow Him, worship Him, and experience bliss.

Atma is the reality

In order to experience Divinity, understand this example. The very nature of mother is love. Mother has a form, but love has no form. Mother herself is the form of love.

Due to the presence of the Atmic Principle, you are able to see its reflection in the form of the world. The whole world is nothing but reflection, reaction, and resound. The Atma is the only reality. But man has forgotten the reality and is seeing only the reflection. You cannot have reaction without action; you cannot have resound without sound.

Though the Sound is everywhere, you are not able to see it. Though the Reality is everywhere, you are not able to see it. How will you be able to see it? With unflinching faith and selfless love, think of God continuously. God will certainly manifest before you.

Today, man chants the name of God and desires to see Him. But since he lacks steady faith, he is not able to experience Divinity. Man has become blind having lost the two eyes of faith. Faith is most important.

Self-confidence is the foundation on which one can build the walls of self-satisfaction. On the walls of self-satisfaction, one can lay the roof of self-sacrifice. Under the roof of self-sacrifice, one can lead a life of self-realisation. You cannot have walls without foundation and roof without walls. So, self-confidence, the foundation, is very important.

Today, man pretends to have love, but he does not know what it is. Our Vice Chancellor described Swami's love as that Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 337 of a thousand mothers. But how can one who cannot understand the love of one mother understand the love of a thousand mothers? So, first and foremost try to understand and experience the love of your physical mother. This is the significance of Mother worship in Navaratri.

Cultural principle of the Heart is one and the same

The culture of the heart is the main standard of life. What is this culture? It is the divine feeling that originates in the heart. All the materials and powers of the world are present in your heart. Men vary in name and form, but the cultural principle of the heart is one and the same.

God resides in this divine heart. What is His form? The Vedas describe Him as formless, attributeless, ancient, and eternal. No one can attribute a name to God. Had anyone existed before God, he would have named Him. But none existed before God. Creation itself did not exist.

For crores of years, there existed only darkness. At that time, the sun and the moon did not exist and there was no living creature. Then it rained heavily for lakhs and lakhs of years, which led to the formation of oceans. From the oceans, rivers originated. Then there was light in the world with the creation of the sun and the moon. Human habitation came into existence only after this entire process, which took many crores of years. Then how do you expect man to understand Divinity?

First and foremost, man has to kill the tamasic (slothful) quality in him. Though water has no colour, it appears red when poured into a red bottle. Similarly, the Atmic Principle, which is pure and unsullied, appears red in a person with rajasic (passionate) quality, dark in a person with tamasic quality and bright in the heart of a person with satwic (pure, serene) quality.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 338

In the Bhagavad Gita, Krishna said He created four varnas Chaturvarnamaya Sruti. But people make the mistake of equating them with these four castes: Brahmin, kshatriya (warrior), vaisya (businessman), and sudra (labourer). Here varna refers to the colour and not the caste. The Russians are redcomplexioned, the British are white-complexioned, the Japanese are yellow-complexioned and the Africans are darkcomplexioned. The remaining colours are only combinations of these four colours.

In His creation, God has given humans a special place. Students chant a prayer and offer food to God before they partake of it. How do they pray?

Brahmarpanam Brahmahavir
Brahmagnou Brahmanahutham Brahmaivathena Ganthavyam
Brahmakarma Samadhina

They think they are offering the food to Brahman. But, where is Brahman? He is within. He gives immediate response:

Aham Vaishvanarobhoothwa
Praninam Dehamasrithaha
Pranapana Samayukthah
Pachamyannam Chathurvidham

What does this mean? It means that Brahman, who is present in the form of vaishvanara (digestive fire) in you, digests the food that you eat. Who is responsible for your blood circulation? Who makes your heart beat for 24 hours a day? It is all God's creation. None can understand this. In His creation, God has given human beings a special place. He has endowed them with buddhi (intellect). The Vedas call it Prajananam (constant integrated awareness) and declare Prajanana Brahma (Brahman is Constant Integrated Awareness).

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 339

Buddhi is greater than medha shakti

Once, King Vikramaditya convened a meeting of scholars. He asked them which was greater, buddhi (intellect) or medha shakti (intelligence)? The scholars came to a conclusion that buddhi was greater than medha shakti. They said medha shakti was only worldly intelligence, which was temporary; whereas buddhi consisted of five aspects: sraddha, sathyam, rutham, yogam, and mahatatwam. All the worldly achievements are based on medha shakti, but not on buddhi. Buddhi is

and beyond all senses. It relates to nivritti (inward path), whereas medha shakti relates to pravritti (outward path).

The principle of Love is the most important of all. Love is Atma, Love is Wisdom, Love is Truth, Love is Righteousness, Love is Peace, and Love is Nonviolence. Where there is Love, untruth and violence and restlessness find no place.

Human heart is a single chair, not a double-seated sofa or a musical chair. So, once you fill your heart with Love, wicked feelings have no place in it. Everything is contained in Love. Love is the life principle.

But man has forgotten this principle of Love and is ruining his life in worldly love. The love between the mother and child is vatsalya (affection); the love between wife and husband is moha (attachment). It is only the divine Love that is true love in the strict sense of the term. Love applies to God only, none else.

Prachethasa (Valmiki) composed the Ramayana consisting of hundred crore slokas (verses). Devatas (gods), rakshasas (demons) and manavas (human beings) came to know that whoever read the Ramayana and followed it would be liberated. Immediately they approached Brahma and requested him for a share of the Ramayana.

Brahma divided the Ramayana into three parts consisting of 33,33,33,333 slokas each and distributed among them. One Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 340

sloka remained consisting of 32 letters. Brahma divided these letters into three parts consisting of ten letters each and distributed to them. Ultimately, two letters remained. These are the two letters of the holy names of God: Rama, Krishna, Hari, Shiva, Sai, and Baba, which were given equally to them. For all thes enames, the primordial principle Love.

Human society is bound by action

Only through Love can world peace be achieved and nonviolence can be practiced. Buddha said that nonviolence is the supreme dharma. He did penance for six years. He approached elders and listened to their teachings, but he could not get any benefit out of them. Ultimately, he enquired within and found out the Truth. He said samyak drishti (right vision) led to samyak bhavam (right feelings), which in turn led to samyak vak (right speech). Right speech led to samyak karma (right action). Spiritual sadhana does not mean doing meditation or japa. Undertaking sacred actions is true sadhana. Krishna has said, Karmanyevadikarasthe maphaleshu kadachana (You have got right to action but not to the fruits). Human society is bound by action. So, undertake good actions.

Today, man does not make any effort to know why the body is gifted. The body is gifted not just for loading and unloading. Food is required to keep the body fit to undertake sacred actions. As the food, so is the head. As the head, so is God. So, partake of sacred food, undertake sacred actions, and join good company. To the extent possible, render service to society.

Have good feelings in your heart, speak good words, and do good actions. This is called trikaranasuddhi (unity of thought, word, and deed). Understand that this is the purpose of human life. Sarvakarma Bhagavath Preeyartham (Whatever actions you undertake, do them to please God).

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 341

Divinity pervades everything, right from an ant to Brahma, but man does not realise this and misuses his body. Body is the gift of God. To misuse it is a great sin. Sin and merit are not present in a foreign land; they are attached to your actions. Good actions yield good results and bad actions yield bad results. Therefore, make proper use of the body, mind, and intellect, which are gifts of God.

If you have devotion, God Himself will confer bliss

What is sadhana (spiritual exercise)? Service is true sadhana. Serve society. Treat everyone as your brother and sister.

Only through selfless service will your life be redeemed. Consider service unto others as service to God. Unfortunately, today man takes to service expecting something in return. He has become money-minded.

Excessive wealth makes one egotistic. Ego leads to bad qualities. Excessive desires make one suffer. As the desires increase, misery also increases. Asamtruptho dwijo nashtaha (a discontented man suffers both ways). He is not happy with what he has and feels unhappy over what he has not got. Be content with what you have. Experience bliss and share it with others. If you have devotion, God Himself will confer bliss.

As our Vice Chancellor said, when Hanuman was to go to Lanka in search of Sita, Sugriva, Jambavantha and others doubted that he could cross the ocean.

Hanuman smilingly replied that because Rama Himself had commanded him to cross the ocean, He would also grant him the strength to do so. He leaped across the ocean chanting the name of Rama and reached Lanka.

Having been commanded by Rama, he never doubted whether he would accomplish the task. Once God commands you to do something, He will certainly grant the necessary skill Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 342 and strength. So, act according to the command of God; without a trace of doubt, you will certainly be successful.

Happiness lies in union with God

Today, since science is progressing, doubts are also increasing in the human mind. The more intelligent you are, the more doubts you have. So, do not aspire for more intelligence (medha shakti). Make proper use of the intellect God has given you. Then you will be happy in life.

Happiness lies in union with God. God is the embodiment of bliss, which is eternal, unsullied, pure and non-dual. It is most unfortunate for you to forget God. Never give up Sai. Make the best use of the chance given. Once you lose the opportunity to serve the Lotus Feet of Paratheesha, you will not get it back. Sai grants you devotion, strength, and liberation. Do not ruin yourself by listening to others. Do not believe anybody; believe your conscience and follow it. Once you follow your conscience, you will attain consciousness, the Atma. Develop self-confidence, worship God, attain Divinity, and be an ideal to the rest of the world. That is the essence of education.

The man who studies and studies without discrimination fails to understand himself. A mean-minded man can never give up his meanness in spite of his vast learning. Why should one waste one's life in the pursuit of useless learning? Better is to acquire such wisdom that confers immortality.

Worldly education leads to argumentation, but not to total knowledge. It is all a waste of time. It is a sign of ignorance. So, never argue with anybody. Vade, vade varjathe vairam (arguments will lead only to enmity). Today, what we need is unity, purity, and divinity.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 343

The name of God should spread everywhere
Embodiments of Love! For the last seven days, you are a witness to this holy yajna. Why is it conducted? It is for the welfare of the world. The name of God should spread everywhere. For example, Delhi is far away from here, but when you tune your radio to a particular wavelength, you can hear the songs that are being broadcast in the Delhi station. This is possible because of the presence of electric waves in the atmosphere. All over the world there are electric waves and magnetic waves. So, the effect of mantras chanted during the yajna will spread all over the world and purify the atmosphere. Once the mantras enter the air that you breathe in, you will develop sacred feelings, because there is also a mantra in you.

The body is yantra, hridaya is, and the breath is mantra (Soham). Soham means, I am God. There is no greater mantra than this. Therefore, chant this sacred mantra, lead an ideal life, and make the world an abode of peace.

In this train of society, youth are the long-journey passengers. Since the youth have a long way to go, they should work for world peace. Teach the principle of Divinity to others. Instil Divine feelings even in hardhearted people. Sow the seed of the holy name of God in every heart. Then the world will become verily the heaven.

Your happiness is heaven; your grief is hell. So, be happy and serve everybody. Do not have the narrow feeling that only Bharat (India) should be prosperous; pray for the prosperity of the entire world because all are your brothers and sisters. Have such broad feelings and sacred thoughts. Only then will the dictum Loka samastha sukhino bhavanthu be realised and will everyone be happy. Share this immortal principle with everybody.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 344

The Upanishads address you as the sons of immortality Srunvanthu viswe amruthasya putraha (listen O children of immortality). You should lead your life befitting your name, like saint Thyagaraja. Thyagaraja said, Nidhi chala sukhama, Easwar Sannidhi chala sukhama, nijamuga thelupumu manasa (O mind, tell me, is it money or proximity to the Divine that confers happiness?) He rejected the money sent by the king, saying Rama was his only wealth. Thyagaraja means one with sacrifice. So, his action befitted his name. There is no heaven beyond sacrifice.

Embodiments of Love! Do not have excessive desire for wealth. Lead a life of sacrifice. Lead a peaceful life.

Develop steadfast faith in God

Daivadeenam jagathsarvam Sathyadheenamthu Daivatham

Thath Sathyam Uttammadheenam Uttamo Paradevatha

The whole world is governed by God, and God is governed by Truth; Truth is in the hands of noble souls, and the noble souls are verily divine.

Embodiments of Love! Since ancient times our country of Bharat has been spreading the infinite spiritual knowledge to every country all over the world. Bharat believes that for the peace and security of the entire world, spirituality is most essential. Bharathiyas (Indians), with all the sincerity and devotion, have made efforts to establish stability and peace in the world. But, with the passage of time, due to the effect of Kali Age, people have lost faith in the Self and have reposed faith in this transient and ephemeral world. Today, man does not even have faith in the Self of birds and beasts.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 346

When a small bird rests on a thin branch of a tree, the branch starts tossing up and down. But the bird is not fearstricken because it depends on its wings, not on the branch on which it rests. Bird has total reliance on its wings, but not man in his Self; he suffers as a result.

In spite of the fact that man goes through sacred texts and listens to discourses, he has not developed faith in the Self. He nods his head as he listens to the discourses with the feeling of having understood and benefited by them, but does not have the faith to put them into practice.

Every man should develop faith in the Self

There is no scope for any doubt in a man with Faith in the Self. He is unperturbed by the vicissitudes of life. Since ancient times, the culture of Bharat has had Self-confidence as the basis. But with the commencement of the modern age, Self-confidence is on the decline. Every man should develop faith in the Self. One can attain the blissful state only through Self-confidence.

Today is Vijaya Dasami. This is the samapthi (conclusion) of the sacred Navaratri festival. Samapthi is that which confers prapthi (deservedness) in every possible way. This also happens to be the day on which Shirdi Baba left his mortal coil.

Having left His mortal coil on this day, Shirdi Baba reincarnated here after 8 years. This is an ample testimony to the existence of Divinity in humanity.

If man does not know his own Self, what is the use of knowing the rest? He reads the newspaper everyday in order to be aware of the happenings around the world. He makes efforts to know what is happening in every country, but he does not put in any effort to know his own Self. He keeps questioning whoever he comes across, Who are you? Where do you come from? but he does not put these questions to himself. There is Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 347

no point in undertaking any spiritual practice without Selfenquiry.

Food habits: main cause for lack of purity of heart

Food and habits play a vital role in fostering human values.

As the food, so is the head. As the head, so is God. You should understand the connection between food, head, and God. Today we find many unhealthy changes in the food and habits of man. This is the main cause for the lack of purity of Heart.

After the Pandavas emerged victorious in the battle against Kauravas, Krishna took them to Bhishmacharya, who was lying on a bed of arrows, for his counsel and blessings. Bhishma began expounding to them all aspects of dharma. This teaching of Bhishma is called Shanthi Parva in Mahabharatha.

When all the Pandavas were listening to their grandsire with all sincerity and devotion, Draupadi suddenly burst into laughter. One should be aware of the fact that Draupadi was one of noble virtues and sense of discrimination. She was one who practiced the cultural values of Bharat. But all the Pandava brothers were very much upset by her unaccountable levity and considered it an insult to the venerable Bhishma. Bhima and Arjuna became very furious, and Dharmaja bent his head in shame.

But Bhishma knew the reason for Draupadi's laughter. He called her close and said, My dear child, the people of this world are like crows and will misinterpret your laughter in varied ways. Without trying to know the truth, they will misunderstand and misinterpret. So explain the reason for such a behavior and thereby remove the misapprehension of your husbands.

She replied, Revered grandsire! You should have taught these lessons of dharma to the evil-minded Kauravas. But instead you are teaching now to my husbands, who are virtuous, righteous, and selfless. This appeared to me both ironical and futile. Hence I could not refrain from laughing.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 348

Bhishma said, Draupadi, I can understand your feelings, but as I have been living in the company of Kauravas, my blood and mind have become polluted as a result of consuming food from such wicked persons. Knowing fully well that the Kauravas have been on the wrong side, I have not corrected them. But, as good luck would have it, Arjuna's arrows have drained away all that impure blood from me in the last 56 days. As a result the good thoughts and good feelings that were lying buried deep in me are coming out.

It has been bad company that had affected Bhishma's mind. This fact is very well expressed by the statement, Tell me your company, and I shall tell you what you are. As the company, so you think and so you become.

Everyone must make an effort to dispel bad thoughts. Every teaching has to be passed on, keeping in view of the time, space, and circumstances. Though Krishna and Arjuna moved together for 64 years before the Kurukshetra war, never did Krishna mention anything about Bhagavad Gita to Arjuna. It was only before the war that Krishna gave the teaching to Arjuna. For everything there is an appropriate time.

You might have gone through many sacred texts and heard many sacred teachings. You may also have had the darshan of sacred people. What is the use? Due to the effect of unsacred food and bad company, all your good thoughts are subdued. Good thoughts can express themselves only when you get rid of bad thoughts. Everyone must make an effort to dispel bad thoughts.

Consider this example, you have built a house with a main door and many windows for proper ventilation. Just because there is an entrance, you will not allow all the street dogs and pigs into your house. You open the door only for your family, Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 349 friends, and relatives. Likewise, the mind is the main door and senses are like windows to the body, which is the temple of God Deho devalaya proktho jeevo Devah Sanathanaha (The body has been described as a temple and the indweller as the Eternal Divine). You have to enquire as to who is to be permitted into this temple and who is not to be permitted. But today, no one makes this enquiry. As a result all types of wicked feelings and wicked thoughts are permitted to enter the mind. Have limited connections and contacts

Nasreyo niyamam vina (for everything, discipline is essential).

You should not develop friendship with everyone.

You should enquire whether the person is good or not. However, do not hate anybody (Adhveshta sarvabhoothanam). At the same time, do not cross your limits in your dealings with others. Have limited connections and contacts.

What is the use of being born as a human being if you do not foster human values such as sathya, dharma, santhi, prema, and ahimsa? Vedas say Sathyam vada; dharmam chara (Speak truth and follow righteousness.)

Peace is like a precious jewel to mankind. Saint Thyagaraja said, Shanthamu leka soukhyamu ledu (Without peace, there is no happiness in this world). For all the human values, Love is the basis.

Today, human beings are human in form but not human in practice. In some places, one finds people exhibiting human values outwardly without practicing them whole-heartedly. Human values are not meant for pradarshana (exhibition) but are meant for nidarshana (example). Human values should be reflected in all your thoughts, words, and deeds. But today, there is only selfishness and self-interest in whatever man thinks, speaks, and does. Due to selfishness and self-interest, human values are totally lost.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 350

A small example, here you find many bulbs glowing. It is not enough you have only bulbs, you also need to have wires and current. When the current flows through the wires and enters the bulbs, they start glowing. Likewise, in order to experience the light of Love, the current of Truth has to pass through the wires of dharma and enter the bulb of Peace.

Atma, Aham, mind, and speech

As I have already told you, Atma is the origin of Aham, Aham is the origin of mind, and mind is the origin of speech. So, Aham is the son of Atma, mind is the grandson of Atma, and speech is the great grandson of Atma.

First and foremost you should remember that Atma, Aham, mind, and speech belong to the same family. So, Aham, mind, and speech should be filled with the feelings of Atma. Only when there is a total unification of Aham, mind, and speech with Atma will you become a total human being. When Atma is the underlying principle in Aham, mind, and speech, then there is no scope for any mistake. But today there is no Atmic feeling in man's thought, word, and deed. This is the cause of all suffering. You should develop the spirit of nationalism and practice ancient Bharat (Indian) culture. The culture of Bharat speaks of unity in diversity.

Countries are many, but earth is one;

Stars are many, but sky is one;

Jewels are many, but gold is one;

Cows are many, but milk is one.

This is the spirit of unity that the culture of Bharat has propagated since ancient times. You should give up the worldly feelings and worldly thoughts and develop full faith in the principle of unity.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 351

Partake only of sacred food

Embodiments of Love! On this sacred day of Vijaya

Dasami, take an oath to give up vices such as smoking, drinking, and partaking of non-vegetarian food. Many do not realise the evil effects of these bad habits. If a smoker blows air on a white handkerchief, he will find yellow spots on it. This is a sign of disease. Smoking leads to cancer. Drinking is a demonic quality. It makes you intoxicated and makes you forget yourself.

Consuming non-vegetarian food is also a bad quality.

When human body itself is made of flesh, where is the need to consume the flesh of birds and animals? You should partake of only sacred food. Only then you will have sacred feelings. For sacred thoughts and sacred deeds, sacred food is essential. A noble soul like Bhishma himself suffered on account of unsacred food. As a consequence, he had to lie on a bed of arrows for 56 days.

In order to have sacred feelings, apart from partaking of sacred food, you also need to have sacred vision. Do not cast bad looks on anybody. Do not speak ill of others. Do not hear anything that is bad. Do not entertain bad thoughts. Do not indulge in bad deeds. Do not hurt anybody. More than this, there is nothing else that one needs to do to improve one's own Self. Human life is highly sacred. Janthoonaam naraajanna durlabham (human birth is the rarest of all). But today, some people kill fellow human beings without compassion. That is a demonic quality, not a human quality. Having taken human birth, you should not become a demon. In your old age, when your vision is blurred, you cannot see properly; when your body becomes weak and decrepit, when everyone calls you old monkey, what is the use of repenting then? Undertake good actions from this moment.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 352

Let everybody be happy. Do not harm anybody. Sage Vyasa conveyed the essence of 18 Puranas in two sentences.

Ashtadasa Puraneshu Vyasyasya Vachanadvayam

Paropakara Punyaya Papaya Parapedanam

which means Help ever, Hurt never. Do not hurt even an insect, because there is God in every creature. Based on this Saint Thyagaraja composed a song in which he says, O Rama, you are present in an ant and in Brahma.

Do not blame God at times of difficulties

Even such a great devotee like Thyagaraja began blaming

Rama in times of difficulties. He said, O Rama, don't you have the power to protect me, or do I lack devotion? Each and every hair of my body is filled with your name. I am thinking only of you all the time. So, certainly there is devotion in me.

But you don't have the power.

Immediately he sat in meditation and enquired within. He realised his mistake. Then he composed a song in which he said, O Rama, your power is so great and mighty, otherwise how could a monkey like Hanuman cross the ocean? Would Lakshmana, who is Adishesha himself, worship You? Would Lakshmi Devi, the Goddess of Wealth, Herself serve You? Would the most intelligent Bharatha obey your command? Out of my foolishness I started blaming You, forgetting Your Divinity. Please forgive me.

When Jesus was being crucified, he cried out to God, O God, Why do You punish me like this?

Immediately he realized the Truth and said, O God, let your Will prevail. It is You who has created me, sustained me, and protected me. I will not act against Your Will. It was a mistake on my part to blame you.

When he recognized his mistake, an ethereal voice said,

All are one my dear son, be alike to everyone. Once you recognise your mistake, Divinity manifests. Man today does not recognise his mistakes; instead he looks for mistakes in others.

Do not be bothered about others faults; search for your own faults and rectify them. Only then will your life be sanctified. Whatever you do, do it with Love

Embodiments of Love! Most importantly, you should develop Love. It contains all the other human values, such as sathya, dharma, and shanthi (truth, right conduct, and peace). Whatever you do, do it with Love. Your Heart is like a big tank, and the senses are like taps. Fill the Heart with the water of Love. Only then you can experience Love through all the senses.

Today, you talk of human value, but you do not seem to practice them. That makes Me very sad. You have been listening to many of My teachings; can you not practice at least one? Instead of teaching others, teach yourself and put into practice. What is the use of reading Vedas and sacred texts without practicing them? Will you be cured of your disease by merely repeating the names of the medicines? Will merely repeating the names of delicious items appease your hunger?

Likewise, mere repetition of the name of the Lord is not enough. You should engage yourself in His work.

When Vibhishana met Hanuman, he said, O Hanuman, how lucky you are? In spite of you being a monkey by birth, Rama has kept you in His company, but I have not been blessed with such an opportunity, though I chant His name constantly.

Hanuman replied, O Vibhishana, mere repetition of the Lord's name is not enough; you should participate in His work. Only then can you be a recipient of His grace. As soon as Vibhishana heard these words, he crossed the ocean and fell at Rama's feet, seeking His refuge. In this respect we can say that Vibhishana is greater than Bhishma. Vibhishana tried to put his brothers on the right path but ultimately left them, since they did not pay heed to his good counsels; whereas, Bhishma did not even make an attempt to counsel the Kauravas and continued to live with them, being fully aware of their evil designs.

When Vibhishana sought Rama's refuge, Sugriva, Jambavantha opposed, saying, Swami, you should never believe these rakshasas (demons). There must be some ulterior motive behind this act of Vibhishana. So ask him to return to Lanka.

Rama replied, Once someone says, I am yours, whoever he may be, I will take care of him. So I will not reject Vibhishana. This is a testimony to God's Love.

Once you say I am yours, live up to it with strong faith.

Thereafter, God will take care of you at all places and under all circumstances. I expect and bless you so that you develop strong faith, give up vices, join good company, entertain sacred feelings, and attain Divinity.

Offer yourself to God

In order to deserve God's grace,

Your faith should grow.

When you do not have faith,

You cannot offer yourself.

For human progress, mental strength and purity of heart are essential. It is only mental strength and purity of heart that make the human divine. Mind is the basis for the existence of mankind. Thoughts are responsible for the existence of mind. Human behavior, whether good or bad, is based on the thoughts. The human life is the result of thought process.

When a small pebble is thrown into a lake, the ripples spread all over the lake. Likewise, the ripples that arise in the lake of mind when a pebble of thought is thrown into it spread to all the senses. When the ripple that arises out of good thought spreads to your mouth, you speak only good words. If it is a bad thought, you utter only bad words. Similarly, whatever you see, hear, or do depends on the thoughts you entertain. So, the good or bad of a human being is based on thoughts.

God is not pleased by contemplation alone

Today, man aspires for God and contemplates on Him constantly, but mere aspiration and contemplation are not enough to experience God. God is not pleased by contemplation alone; one has to totally offer oneself to experience Him. Once you offer yourself completely to God, you and He become one. What are the spiritual pursuits to be followed to become one with God? When fire and coal are placed apart, they remain as they are. Only when they are brought together and fanned can coal get transformed into fire. Likewise, go closer to God and love Him whole-heartedly. Such nearness and dearness to God will ultimately make you one with God. This is what Vedanta declared, Brahmavid Brahmaiva

Bhavathi (the knower of Brahman becomes Brahman). The food eaten gets digested and its essence is supplied to all parts of the body. This means that the food partaken becomes one with the body. Similarly, you have to offer yourself completely to God. Only then can you become one with him. All your thoughts should become divine.

Jiva is Nara and God is Narayana. Both should become one. Nara means Atmic principle. So, you are human only in form, but your nature is divine. It is only the Atma that moves about from top to toe. Whatever that is thought, said, or done is due only to the presence of Atma. That is why Krishna has said, Mamaivamso Jivaloke Jivabhutha Sanathana (You are eternal sparks of Myself). You are the reflection of God.

The purpose of the spiritual pursuits lies in the unification of man and God. Mere worshipping of padukas, chanting the name of God, or contemplating on His form are not sufficient to bring about this unification. These correspond to the outward path (pravritti marga). You should take to the inward path (nivritti marga). Only then can you understand the principle of unity.

Significance of five faces of Gayathri

This morning, Sastriji, while explaining the significance of Gayathri Mantra, described Gayathri as Pancha Mukhi (deity with five faces). What are the five faces? The first face is the primal sound Aum. Bhur Bhuvah Suvah is the second face. Tat Savitur Varenyam is the third face. Bhargo Devasya Dheemahi is the fourth face. Dhi Yo Yonah Prachodayat is the fifth face.

Who is Gayathri? Gayathri Chandasam Matha (Gayathri is the mother of the Vedas). Gayathri has three names:

Gayathri, Savitri, and Saraswathi. Gayantham Trayate Iti Gayathri (Gayathri redeems the chanter of the mantra).

Gayathri is the master of the senses. Savitri is the master of Prana (Life Force). Saraswathi is the presiding deity of speech (Vak Devata Swaroopini). You have to unify your senses, life principle, and your speech and offer yourself to God.

You should also understand the meaning of Bhur Bhuvah Suvaha. You are under the impression that they refer to the three worlds Bhuloka, Bhuvarka, and Suvarloka. These three worlds are present in you and in every living creature.

Bhur refers to the body, made up of five elements (materialisation). The same five elements constitute the entire world.

Bhuvah refers to the prana sakthi (vibration), which makes the body move. However it is the presence of Prajnanam, i.e. suva (radiation), that enables the prana sakthi to animate the body.

It is on this account that the Vedas have declared Prajnanam Brahma (Constant Integrated Awareness is Brahman).

This Constant Integrated Awareness is present in man.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 358

Man has also the five elements in him. The five elements constitute the world. What is the primordial basis for these elements? That is the primordial sound Om. On this basis, the gopikas (cowherd maids) prayed thus: Kleem Krishnaya Govindaya Gopijanavallabhaya Swaha. Kleem means the earth. Krishnaya means water. Govindaya means fire,

Gopijanavallabhaya

refers to air. Swaha refers to ether (akasa).

Krishna's name encompasses the five elements.

These five elements permeate the whole universe. In fact, these five elements form the basis of life for the entire universe.

These are essentially divine. That is why earth is referred to as Bhoodevi, water as Gangadevi, fire as Agnideva, and air as Vayudeva.

Surrender with pure heart

There is no need to search for God elsewhere. He dwells in your heart. That is why He is called Hridayavasi (indweller of the heart). If someone were to ask you, Where do you come from? you may say that you are coming from a hotel or from your house. But actually you come from none of these places.

You come from Hridaya. It is this Hridaya that is your dwelling place. Then where is the question of coming and going?

Similarly, God neither comes nor goes. He is present all over, all the time.

But, in order to confer grace on a devotee, He may manifest Himself. Just because God has appeared to a devotee in America does not mean that God has traveled all the way to America. He is present in America too. It is the devotion that makes God manifest Himself. Divinity neither comes nor goes.

It is present everywhere. Viswam Vishnuwaroopam, Sarvam

Khalvidam Brahma. There is no place where there is no

God. All names and forms are His.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 359

You should not have the feeling that God is the master and you are His servant. The individual (nara) and the Divine (Narayana)

are one. You should take to the spiritual path in order to understand this principle of unity. Right from birth to death, if you are immersed in duality, when will you experience the bliss of non-duality? A man with a dual mind is half blind. So you should make every effort to experience oneness.

In the morning, Punditji, while doing abhisheka to the padukas with milk, curds, and honey, explained the significance of these offerings. All these spiritual pursuits are meant for the purification of Heart. Chittasya Suddhaye Karmaha

(all actions are aimed at the purification of heart).

Purity alone is not enough to experience Divinity. With purity of heart, you should offer yourself to God. You would not offer a faded flower to God. Likewise, the heart, which may be compared to a flower, should be fresh and devoid of impurities before it is offered to God. There is an ocean of difference between archana (worship) and arpitham (total surrender). It is not archana, but it is arpitham that is most essential.

True meaning of sathsanga

What is the meaning of sathsanga (good company)? Sath is the name of Divinity. It is changeless in all the periods of time. It is eternal and is present in you. You have to understand this eternal principle. In order to do so, you have to be in communion with Sath.

As Punditji has said in the morning, milk is very happy in the company of water. The combination of water and milk can be termed sathsanga. That is ideal friendship.

When the milk is boiled on a stove, the water gets evaporated. The milk, unable to bear the separation from water, tries to jump into the fire. The moment you sprinkle some water on Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 360

the boiling milk, it gets pacified. The milk is happy on being united with its friend.

The same relationship exists between nara (individual) and Narayana (God). God is very happy when the individual joins His company. But God feels very sad when the individual diverts his attention from Him and gets immersed in worldly pleasures. Once the individual surrenders completely to God, He is happy again. Due to the effects of Kali age, the individual separates himself from God. The individual may not feel sad, but God feels sad because His friend, the individual, is parting ways with Him.

Whatever God says or does is for your own good

God is the only permanent friend in this world. All the worldly friends can only say, Hello, How are you? and Good-bye, nothing more. God does not say Hello, How are you? and Good-bye. As long as you are in His company, you will be happy and He is also happy. But when there is separation from His devotee, though he may not express it, He feels sad. Why is the individual going along the wrong path? Why is he forgetting the truth? Why is he distancing himself from Divinity? Why is he losing his purity? Thinking so, God feels sad. Even this is for the devotee's sake, not for His sake. Whatever God says or does is for your own good.

Lakshmana is a superb example of the attitude of surrender. When Rama, Sita, and Lakshmana went to the forest and reached Chitrakoota mountain, Rama told Lakshmana to put up a hermitage in a place of his choice.

Hearing these words, Lakshmana felt hurt and bent his head down with grief. Noting this, Sita asked Lakshmana, Why are you perturbed, Lakshmana? Your brother did not speak anything harsh. Why do you feel so sad?

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 361

Lakshmana said, O Mother, have I ever had any choice of my own? The likes of Rama are mine. I have surrendered myself to Rama. The command of Rama is what I want to carry out. While so, how can I withstand the impact of Rama asking me to put up the hermitage at a place of my choice? Does it not amount to separation from Rama?

That is the intensity of the feelings of a true devotee toward the Lord. Your thoughts should always be centered on God. The world is like a passing cloud. But the relation between you and God is permanent and eternal.

Understand your relationship with God

Gayathri Mantra consists of three parts. One is praise, the second is prayer and the third is meditation. The first nine words of Gayathri Mantra (Om, Bhur, Bhuvaha, Suvaha, Tat, Savitur, Varenyam, Bhargo, Devasya) correspond to the description (praise) of Gayathri. Dheemahi pertains to meditation.

Dhiyoyonah Prachodayat is the prayer to God to confer the steady and pure intellect.

The Divine is first praised and meditated upon. Then an appeal is made to the Divine to awaken and strengthen the intellect (buddhi). So, first and foremost, you should extol God.

But in what way? You should extol Him with a feeling of intimacy.

The son will never shower lavish praises on his father when he asks for a new dress. Instead he demands rightfully. A devotee has a similar right to demand from God.

Hridaya is the son of Atma. From hridaya, mind is born. So, mind is the grandson of Atma. And, from mind, speech originates. So, speech is the great grandson of Atma. In short, your hridaya, mind, and speech belong to the divine family and have got a share in the divine property. Therefore, your hridaya, mind, and speech should be in constant communion with God.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 362

On this basis, Jesus said, I am the messenger of God from the physical point of view. From the psychological point of view, he said, I am the son of God. And with the feeling of oneness of Atma, he said, I and my father are one. From a physical point of view you may consider yourself different from God. In the mental realm you should feel that you are the spark of the Divine. But from the Atmic point of view, you should realise that you are not different from God. You have to make every effort to realize this unity. You should not distance yourself from Divinity basing on body attachment. Without understanding your relationship with God, all your spiritual practices will be of no use. But once you understand this principle of unity, wherever you are, you are one with God.

Develop attachment with the Atma

The body relationship is only physical and worldly. It has nothing to do with spirituality. The master of the house is addressed in different ways by his family members. Son calls him father, daughter-in-law calls him uncle, and grandson calls him grandfather, on the basis of body relationships. You should never go by body attachment.

The body is full of dirt and diseases. It cannot cross the ocean of samsara. O mind, never think that body is permanent; surrender to the feet of God. Do not get yourself bound by body attachment. Develop attachment with the Atma.

In order to do so, engage yourself in sacred actions such as sravanam (listening to the Lord's stories), kirtanam (singing His glories), smaranam (remembrance), Padasevanam (service to the Lotus Feet), archanam (worship), vandanam (salutation), dasyam (servitude), sakhyam (friendship), Atmanivedanam (offering oneself to the Lord i.e. self-surrender).

Friendship is the stepping stone to self-surrender. So, you should develop friendship with God and be a recipient of His Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 363 love. You undertake many spiritual pursuits to obtain this love. In fact, you do not need to undertake any spiritual practices. It is enough if you remember the relationship between you and God.

Divinity is one but is responsible for the three-fold cosmic process. These three aspects of God can be seen in the English word GOD. G represents Generation (Srishti), O represents Organization (Sthithi) and D -represents Destruction (Layam). God has all the three aspects in Him. Seeing the same God in all the beings is the true spirit of non-dualism.

The greatest and the noblest path is that of devotion

You know that it was Adi Sankaracharya who propagated the principle of non-dualism. All the compositions of Sankara speaks of non-dualism. But, toward the end, Sankara himself entered the path of devotion. He sang the following verse.

Bhaja Govindam Bhaja Govindam

Govindam Bhaja Mooda Mathe,

Samprapthe Sannihite Kale

Nahi Nahi Rakshathi Dukrun Karane.

O foolish man, chant the name of the Lord. When the hour of death arrives, only the Lord can save you, not your grammar.

Even the one of wisdom becomes a devotee at one point of time. The greatest and noblest path is the path of devotion. The word bhakthi (devotion) is derived from the root word bhaj, which means total surrender. Offering total love is bhakthi. Worship and other rituals are only physical and worldly activities. You have to enter nivritti (inward path) from this pravritti (outward path).

When you learn the English language, you start with the alphabet. Then you join letters to make words. Then you join Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 364 words to form sentences. The atheists say, God is no where. When the letter w is moved from where to no, it becomes God is now here. The aim of learning the language is to make sentences out of it. Similarly, the aim of worship and rituals is to understand the principle of unity. You start with one name and one form and ultimately realise that everything is one. It is the goal of spiritual sadhana. It is the essence of spiritual sadhana. Surrender brings limitless Bliss

Worship of Padukas, observance of rituals, and celebrations of festivals are all different paths leading to the principle of oneness. All these rituals are essential till you realise that God is one. But you should not spend your whole lifetime in these rituals.

At birth, you cry Koham? Koham? which means Who am I?, Who am I? You should not die with the same question on your lips. Before you die you should be able to say Soham, I am God.

From dualism you should enter qualified non-dualism, and from there you should proceed to non-dualism. Just as cotton and thread are present in the cloth, likewise dualism and qualified non-dualism are present in non-dualism.

Today the devotees read many sacred books and listen to discourses, but there is no transformation in the mind. All these sacred texts and teachings are like jewels. Merely adorning these jewels does not give you bliss. The bliss is within; you should experience it.

Just as precious jewels are kept in an iron chest, likewise Atmic principle is present in this human body. God has kept many valuable jewels in your body. But you are not making any effort to realise this. God says, O madcap, why do you entertain mean and low desires? If you give up desires and offer yourself, I will give you the most valuable gifts. When God is ready to give you the limitless non-dual bliss, why do Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 365

you crave limited happiness? Do not ask for mean things. Offer yourself to God; then God will grant you jewels of limitless bliss.

But in order to deserve God's grace, your faith should grow. When you do not have faith, you cannot offer yourself. One who does not know himself in spite of all his education is foolish. With his limited knowledge, he will enter into arguments and will never be able to acquire total wisdom. If ultimately one has to die, what is the use of studying? One has to study to be immortal. The Vedas declared, Srunvanthu viswe amruthasya putrah. (Listen, O sons of immortality) . Understand and experience this.

God wants only selfless love

You pay water tax to the municipality for providing water to you. When the current is supplied to your house, you pay the electricity bill. But God has given the sunlight, the wind, and the rains what tax are you paying to God? Self-surrender is the tax you are expected to pay. All your troubles are your own making. God always gives you everything good. But you are not receiving it.

Some people do not listen to good words,

And instead pay heed to all bad words.

Such people can never understand Me.

[Telugu poem]

What is that you need to do to make God happy? You should go close to God and worship Him with a sense of surrender. This is for your own sake. God does not ask for anything. Child sits on the lap of mother for its own satisfaction. When the child goes near its mother, she showers her love. When you want to be close to God, you do not need to go through sacred texts or undertake great spiritual exercises. Rituals and reading of holy texts are only worldly actions.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 366

They are meant only to give external satisfaction, but one has to make efforts to experience inner satisfaction.

Embodiments of Love! The letters that the postman brings give joy to some and plunge some in deep sorrow. It is the contents of the letters that are responsible for the joy or sorrow, not the postman. God is like a postman. He gives you the fruits of your actions. Karmanubandheeni manushyaloke (Human society is bound by actions). When you follow Truth, you will be happy and prosperous. Jealousy will make you miserable. Strive for divine Love

Buddhi is governed by fate. Fate is governed by actions.

Actions are governed by thoughts. If you do all activities with sacred thoughts, you will be successful. Wicked thoughts and wicked feelings confer only misery.

If you do not have the grace of God, all the worldly powers will be of no use. You know what happened to the great warrior Karna, who has had all powers but not God's grace. You should strive for divine Love. To acquire divine Love, you should develop good thoughts.

Embodiments of Love! You are happy that the number of padukas is increasing year after year. It is quite natural to have such a feeling in the external world. But I do not desire increase in numbers.

It is the feeling that is important, not the number of padukas. What God wants is pure Love and steady mind, but those who have come for this paduka puja have not understood this truth. They have brought many eatables such as dry fruits, apples, bananas, and sweets and kept them in the Poornachandra hall thinking that I would eat them. Do they think that I am Kumbhakarna? I do not even take meals, so what are these fruits for? The boys will have to work for 15 days just to separate them, and in the meanwhile the fruits will become rotten.

What I want is only your Love. Some people have brought towels and bedsheets. I do not need them, if you want you can give them in the hospital. Even that need not be done.

I do not desire anything. I want only one thing: pure, steady and selfless love. There is no selfishness from top to toe in Me. When I do not have any desires, why do you bring all these?

Your heart is My chariot

Chetty Garu is an ardent devotee. Yesterday, he prayed that I should ascend the chariot. I do not have any liking for these things. Your Heart is My chariot. Then where is the need for a golden chariot? Today, they brought a Simhasana (throne) too. They do not inform Me about these things till they are brought to Prasanthinilayam.

Do not bring any such things. I do not like them. I have already told you what I like: only Love. Do not bring any material objects hereafter.

I want you to acquire wisdom. That wisdom leads you to liberation. To reach this state of Liberation, offer yourself completely. Just as the essence of food you partake gets mixed in your blood and becomes one with your body, likewise let your Love be unified with My Love. Then you will become one with Me.

In the morning during the paduka worship, Punditji spoke on the importance of unity, giving the example of bees collecting honey. The honey bee collects honey from different flowers and stores it at one place, which becomes the panacea for all diseases. Where there is Unity, there is Purity; and where there is Purity, there is Divinity. Understand the relationship between Unity, Purity and Divinity.

Pundits have been telling you these things, but you do not seem to practice at least one or two. By announcing the presence of light, would ever the darkness be dispelled? By listening to the efficacy and grandeur of medicine, will the disease Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 368 be cured? To dispel darkness you should light at least a small lamp.

Let every activity be pleasing unto God

You all know that Deepavali is approaching. With one candle you can light the other lamps. That candle is Divinity, and the lamps are individuals. It is only one Divinity that protects and sustains all. Light the lamp of Love in you.

Even worldly activities will become spiritual if you have Love. You can do your office work or business, you can also take care of your family; but whatever you do, do it as an offering to God. Let every activity be pleasing unto God. That is true devotion. Wherever you go, do not offer any material objects to God. You all know that people go to Tirupathi and offer crowns and jewelry to God in the name of devotion. All these jewelry hide the pristine beauty of the idol. Wherever you go do not take jewels for God. Do you consider God poorer than you? Offering jewels to God is a narrow-minded idea.

Charity is the true ornament for the hand. Truth is the true ornament for the throat. Listening to sacred texts is the true ornament for the ears. Why do need any other ornaments? Offering all the jewelry to God is nothing but pomp and show.

Devotees should not make such offerings.

You should offer only your pure love and sacrifice. The relation between a devotee and God is only heart to Heart and Love to Love. By offering jewelry, you are making God also a beggar. You should always keep in mind that God is bigger, never a beggar.

Today we find many swamijis going abroad whenever they are in need of money. It is a matter of shame; there is no spirituality at all. There is so much restlessness in our country. First they should spread the message of peace in Bharat. Charity begins at home. Yesterday I have told Srinivas to take back all Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 369 that they have brought. Whatever they eat they have brought for Me. I do not eat anything. I eat your love. I hear only good words. Offer only these two to Me. Do not bring anything else. Let love be the underlying principle in whatever you do. With love and devotion even a small sadhana (spiritual exercise) will yield great results.

Many people wonder that I look so young even at the age of 73. The reason is I have three Ps in Me. One is Purity, the second is Patience, and the third is Perseverance. It is because of these three that I shall remain like this for any number of years to come. So, everyone should cultivate these three. To pray for the well-being of everyone is a noble quality. Give up all your mean and low desires and cultivate love for God. Dr. Gadia has prayed for good health and long life for Chettiar. To pray for the well being of everyone is a noble quality. But well-being cannot be obtained by recommendations. The noble feelings of Chetty Garu have made him the recipient of God's grace. His Heart and My Heart should unify. Last week, Allopathy, Homeopathy and Ayurvedic doctors all sent letters to Me. Swami, we hear that there is going to be a very big function on 10th. Send Chettiar back to Madurai immediately. He may not live till 10th.

I said, As a result of his bhakti (devotion) and My shakti (power) he will certainly live. Though he is pretty aged and very weak, still he continues to come here with so much love. His devotion protects him.

Thyagaraja also has undergone many trials and tribulations. His wife died, and his elder brother has subjected him to many ordeals. His elder brother cast the idols of Sita, Rama, and Lakshmana into the Kaveri River. Thyagaraja could not bear the separation from Rama and, feeling frustrated, said, O Rama! Why am I being subjected to these ordeals? Is it because my devotion has weakened? Or has your power deSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 370 clined? He feels that his devotion has not diminished. So, Rama's power must have got weakened.

But pondering over it further, he realised how foolish he was to criticise Rama. He began to sing a song in praise of Rama's prowess. Without Rama's power, could a monkey have crossed the ocean? Or would the Goddess of wealth have chosen to be his consort? Or would Lakshmana serve him, or the supremely intelligent Bharata revel in beholding Him and worshipping Him? Thyagaraja ecstatically extolled the infinite prowess of Rama and blamed his own ignorance for having doubted Rama's prowess. Nothing is greater than divine power. Once you have the anugraha bala (strength of divine grace), what harm can the navagrahas (nine planets) do to you? So work for God's grace and surrender to Him completely. There lies the true Bliss.

Install God's Feet in your heart

Whether one is a great scholar in the Vedas and sacred texts,
Or a hero who has won great victories,
Or a destitute gruelling in poverty,
Without devotion he is worthless.

A servant with devotion in his heart is worthier of veneration than a king bereft of devotion.

[Telugu Poem]

Right from the beginning of creation, human life has been the rarest and most valuable of all living beings. Having taken such a noble birth, if one fails to know one's innate divinity, life becomes meaningless. When the diamond is cut repeatedly, it shines with added brilliance, and its value also increases. Similarly, in order to experience divinity within, one has to face many obstacles. So, devotees naturally face all types of trials and tribulations. But devotion should never diminish.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 372

Devotion alone bestows the supreme good;
Devotion alone is the destroyer of the disease
of the repeated cycles of birth and death;
Devotion alone is the means of recognising divinity;
Devotion alone is the means of liberation.

[Sanskrit sloka]

The Story of Manikavachagar

One may face problems, blames, and accusations of all types, but it is devotion that protects one from all these. Once upon a time, the Pandya kingdom in Tamil Nadu reigned supreme. The Pandya king was very fond of horses. Once, he sent his minister to buy horses. He gave him all the money and manpower required to procure the horses.

The minister reached a village named Perundurai. There he came across a holy man, Balayogeeswara. He did not want to waste that pleasant evening, so he joined the congregation and listened to the discourse of the holy man with rapt attention. He forgot himself as he listened to the discourse. He developed strong faith in that holy man. He forgot even the task assigned to him by the king, spent his time listening to the discourses, and got immersed in the contemplation of God. One day, he found a Siva temple in a dilapidated condition. He used the money given to him by the king for renovating the Siva temple. The king came to know that the minister had used all the money given to him to buy horses, to renovate the Siiva temple. The king was also a devoted man. But since the minister disobeyed his command, he sent his soldiers to bring him back. The king summoned the minister to his presence and asked him what he had done with the money given to him for procuring horses. The minister said, O king, I used the money for God. Everything is God's gift. What God had given, I gave it back to Him. Not only that I have offered myself to Him.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 373

The king asked, whether he was justified in spending the money for a different purpose other than for which it was intended.

The minister replied that he did not use the money for worldly purposes, but used it for a sacred purpose. The king became furious at the minister's audacious reply, had him arrested and put in prison.

The minister was unruffled. While in prison, he continued to recall the teachings of the holy man, Balayogeeswara, and started writing them down in the form of slokas (verses). He composed many slokas every day. He was immersed in bliss while composing hymns in praise of God and thus lost track of time.

Later, the king realised his mistake and summoned him. He was surprised to see the aura of radiance and brilliance around his face. How did he acquire such an aura? It was due to the constant contemplation of God. That minister was none other than Manikavachagar. Each sloka composed by him reflected the essence of the Vedas and the sacred texts. This work is known as Thiruvachakam, meaning sacred reading. Since ancient times, many such great saints took birth in Tamil Nadu. Divinity that blossomed in sacred Tamil Nadu is not noticed elsewhere. Right from daybreak people go to temples, make sacred offerings, and divinise their lives. That is why there are more temples in Tamil Nadu than anywhere else in the country.

Thiruvalluvar reforms a young man

There was another great saint by the name Thiruvalluvar. Initially, he was a weaver. He used to weave just one sari per day, sell it in the bazaar, and earn money for his family. Good and bad exist together; it would be impossible to separate them. In the same village, there was the son of a rich man who was wasting his time wandering aimlessly.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 374

Where there is money, there is ego. Ego gives rise to bad qualities. Once the money is lost, all bad qualities too disappear. One day, the rich man's son came to Thiruvalluvar and asked for the price of the sari. Thiruvalluvar said it cost four rupees. The boy was known for his arrogance and mischief. He picked up the sari, tore it into two pieces and asked for the price of one piece. Thiruvalluvar replied, it cost two rupees, since he had made the Sari into two halves. The boy tore it again into another piece and asked for the price. Thiruvalluvar replied that the price was one rupee.

This brought about a transformation in the mind of the boy. He wondered how the businessman was calm and composed even after he tore the sari into pieces. The boy fell at Thiruvalluvar's feet and repented for his behaviour. The boy said that due to his pride and arrogance, he made this mistake. Then he went to his father, got the required money for the sari and kept it at the feet of Thiruvalluvar.

Not the statues but the teachings of saints are important. Many such great saints lived in Tamil Nadu who set an ideal to society. Unfortunately, people do not follow the teachings of these saints. But their statues are installed and adored. It is not the statues of saints that are important, but their teachings. The best way to propagate their teachings is to practice them.

Just as hands, legs, ears, eyes, etc., form the limbs of the body, human being is a limb of society. Society is a limb of humanity. Humanity is a limb of Nature, and Nature is a limb of Divinity. Nature has been sustaining humanity. Humanity is based on the twin principles of Truth and Righteousness. Without the individual, there is no society, and without society the country does not exist. So, the individual is important in society. For an individual, the limbs are very important. So, the limbs have to be used in a sacred way.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 375

See no evil; see what is good,

Hear no evil; hear what is good,

Talk no evil; talk what is good,

Think no evil; think what is good,

Do no evil; do what is good.

This is the way to God.

Here lies the sanctity of human life. Sareeramadhya

khala dharma sadhanam (body is gifted to undertake righteous actions.) Manikavachagar prayed, O Lord, accept my heart, which You have given. The working of the heart is also Your gift. I cannot offer anything other than this. I offer whatever You have given me.

Only truth and good name are permanent

Kerala is the neighbouring state of Tamil Nadu, where Adi Sankara was born. He said:

Asthiram Ieevanam Loke,

Asthiram Yauvanam Dhanam,

Asthiram Dara Puthradi,

Sathyam Keerthi DwayamSthiram.

Life in the world is impermanent.

So are youth and wealth.

Wife and children are also not permanent.

Only truth and good name are permanent.

So, earn a good name, always speak the truth, and follow the path of truth.

Truth is God.

The entire creation has emerged from Truth and merges in it.

Is there any place where this non-dual Principle of Truth does not pervade? [Telugu Poem]

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 376

Just as the water bubble originates in water, is sustained in it, and ultimately merges in it, the entire world has originated from Truth, is sustained by Truth, and ultimately merges in Truth.

Body should not be used for fleeting pleasures

Man is born out of amrita (immortality) but is merging in anrita (falsehood). What is the use of leading such a life? Today, man is highly intelligent and acquires all types of education.

He should set an ideal to society. Man should understand that education is for sharing and serving and not for earning money. Education is meant for dharmacharana (practice of righteousness) and not for ghanarjana (acquiring wealth).

Dharmamoolam idam jagath (This world is based on dharma).

Body should not be used for fleeting pleasures. The Bhagavad Gita declares, Anithyam asukham lokam imam prapya bhajasva maam (having taken birth in this impermanent and sorrowful world, worship the Lord.) Many people think that there is happiness in this world, but it is temporary. Ma kuru dhana jana yauvana garvam, harathi nimeshath kalah sarvam (O man, do not be proud of wealth, relations or youth. All these may be taken away in a moment by the tide of time.) It is the feet that help us to move. It is said, Pada darshanam papa nashanam (Vision of the Lord's feet destroys all sins.) Feet are so sacred. Feet carry the body, which is the temple of God. The Lord's Lotus Feet have to be installed in your heart. No doubt, external worship of feet is also important. As you continue to worship the Lotus Feet, they will naturally get installed in your heart.

Once Narada went to Lord Narayana and said, Narayana, I come for Your darshan whenever I have any problem. But I do not know where exactly You reside. Where can I find You? In Kailasa, Vaikunta, or Swarga?

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 377

Narayana said, Mad bhaktha yathra gayanthi tathra thishtami Narada (wherever My devotees sing My glory, I install Myself there.) Kailasa, Vaikunta, and Swarga are My branch offices.

God is not present in foreign land, He is present in our heart. Heart does not mean physical heart. It means spiritual heart. It should be full compassion.

Man should have a strong will

Man has all comforts and conveniences. He has good intellect. Yet, he is not able to reach his destination. Man should have a strong will. For example, a small ant can travel any number of miles if it has the will to do so; whereas an eagle cannot move an inch if it does not have the will to move.

Thyagaraja said, O Rama, you are present in all right from an ant to Brahma. You are present in Siva and Kesava. You are everywhere. There is no place where you are not there; there is no name that is not yours.

But, today, man is carried away by delusions and does not realise this truth. If Brahma were to manifest in front of him, he would offer his salutations with reverence and devotion. But if the same Brahma comes in the form of an ant and bites him, he will immediately kill it.

The evil one is he who does not observe the unity of thought, word, and deed. You say God is present even in an ant; then why do you kill it? You are so weak that you are not able to bear the pain of an ant bite or a mosquito bite. In this modern age, man is becoming weaker and weaker.

All our ancient rishis (sages) did penance for years together. They were unmindful of the movement of snakes and scorpions on their body. But modern man has developed body attachment. He is not attached to the Atma.

Today, there is no steadiness of mind in man. Some people think of their footwear when they sit for bhajans inside. Once, Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 378

Ramakrishna Paramahansa was giving a discourse in a temple. Rani Rasamani, the owner of the temple, was sitting in the front row. All were listening to Ramakrishna's discourse with rapt attention.

All of a sudden, Ramakrishna got up, went to Rani Rasamani, and slapped on her cheek. Everyone was surprised. They thought Ramakrishna had become mad. Ramakrishna told the public, O people, you may think it is a great mistake on my part to have slapped her. What for have you come? You are here to listen to my teachings. Whether you practice or not, at least you should listen to what is being said. If you do not like to listen to the discourse, you had better stay back at home. This Rani Rasamani is thinking of her legal disputes. Why should she come all the way to think of the court affairs? She accepted her mistake and promised not to repeat it. In the modern age, many people attend spiritual discourses and get impressed by them. But they do not put them into practice. Education should confer humility

Rama and Ravana were equally well versed in all forms of knowledge. But Valmiki described Ravana as moorkha (fool) since he did not practice what he learnt. Rama followed Truth. He put his knowledge into practice. He is therefore an ideal to be followed by everyone. Ravana merely accumulated knowledge without practising it. He could not digest all that he learnt. As a result, he suffered from indigestion.

He is a fool who does not practice what he learns. One who practices is a truly educated one. Education should confer humility. In society, there are agitations and disturbances. Students, you should join society and see that everyone follows sathya and dharma. You should become ideal citizens. That is what I desire. I do not expect anything from you. I expect only one Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 379 thing: that you put into practice what you have studied and be an ideal to everyone in the society.

Sarveloka hithe rathah (One who delights in the welfare of all people.) You should aspire for the welfare of all. Do not hate anybody. Sarve samudhitha gunaihi (You should have all good qualities.) Today, man does bad deeds but is not prepared to face the consequences. If you want to earn merit, you should do good deeds. Do good, be happy, and share your happiness with others; this is your duty. With such sacred feelings, contemplate on the Lotus Feet of the Lord.

Gopikas love for Krishna

Uddhava has described the Gopikas (cowherd maids) devotion for Krishna in the following words. Though their mothers-in-law were not happy with them and their husbands were against Krishna, they neither uttered a single word nor got angry. They bore it all with patience. They were never afraid of anybody. Just as a picture is imprinted on a paper, Krishna's form was imprinted in their hearts. The gopikas had no other thought than that of Krishna.

Once, the gopikas came to Krishna's house; Krishna pretended to be asleep. They tried to wake him up by catching His feet, but Krishna turned the other side and continued to snore. Then they sang, It is possible to wake up someone who is in deep sleep, but it is impossible to wake up someone who pretends to be asleep. Krishna, You don't sleep at all. If You sleep, the whole world will sleep. We know that in this world there is none who can understand Your mystery. You are smaller than an atom and mightier than the mightiest. You are present in all the 84 lakh species. Right from the atom to the entire cosmos. You are present everywhere. How can we know You, Krishna? Please put an end to Your pranks and make us happy. We cannot be separate from You any longer.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 380

Every incarnation upheld the principle of Truth. Before giving up her mortal coil, Radha was sitting on the bank of river Yamuna and feeling very sad that Krishna was not with her. She intensely prayed to Him to grant her His Divine Darshan.

She sang, O Krishna, speak to me and fill my heart with bliss. Distill the essence of the Vedas and make it flow into the eternal music of your flute, O Krishna.

When she sang like this, Krishna appeared and fulfilled her desire by playing on His flute. While listening to this Divine Melody, she breathed her last. Her Jeevan Jyothi (life principle) merged in Krishna. Krishna threw the flute away and He never touched it again.

In films, you would find Krishna with a flute, but, truly speaking, after Radha's departure, Krishna never touched the flute again. This was the promise given by Krishna. Every incarnation upheld the Principle of Truth. Anyone may forget, but God never forgets to keep up His promise.

Who is Radha? People consider her to be an ordinary woman and distort the facts. She had no attachment to her body. She had attachment to Krishna alone. This dhara (nature) itself took birth as Radha. This dhara is the adhar (basis) for the creation.

In the name Radha, R stands for Radha, A stands for Adhar, D stands for dhara (continuous), and A stands for aradhana. It means that dhara aradhana (continuous worship) is the adhar (basis) for Radha. She was in constant contemplation of Krishna. Even in her sleep, she would chant Krishna's name.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 381

In order to please God, follow His footprints

Krishna always eluded the gopikas after playing His mischief. One day, they all lay in wait to catch Krishna. Krishna, out of compassion for them, wanted to provide a clue by which they could trace Him. Krishna went into a house stealthily, broke a pot of milk, and dipped His feet in it. When the gopikas came to catch Him, He ran away. He just vanished in a trice.

The gopikas followed His footprints, which revealed to them His hideout. Krishna revealed to them the spiritual truth that if they clung to the feet of the Lord, they could win His grace.

In order to please God, follow His footprints. Those who take refuge at the feet of the Lord, will neither sin nor be miserable. With sincere devotion, when you take refuge at the feet of the Lord and contemplate on them, you will not have desires. Yesterday, Dr. Gadhia in his speech said that by worshipping padukas, marriages were settled and the childless begot children. These are all worldly results. Is this to be expected from paduka worship? No. You should not worship padukas for worldly gains. You should worship them for gains in the inward path. When you can get mighty results, why are you concerned about worldly gains? Why do you go after small pebbles? Aim at the meru (gold) Mountain itself, that is, the Lotus Feet of the Lord.

Once upon a time, Jaya and Vijaya (doorkeepers of Vaikunta) approached Lord Vishnu and asked Him, Swami, why have you created the gold mountain?

Vishnu replied, One who is desireless will be unmindful of its existence. But the one full of desires will never be satisfied even if a hundred such gold mountains are given to him.

Who is the richest man in this world? One who has much satis Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 382

Who is the richest man? Who is the poorest man? He who has much desire is the poorest man. So, I have created this Meru Mountain in order to make people desireless.

God does not have any desire. His only chinthana (thought) is His devotee. Devotees should be good and develop society and should consider the welfare of the society as their own welfare. They should not get immersed in selfishness and self-interest. Their mind should be as broad as the ocean. You can never surrender completely to God if you are narrowminded. Do not give scope for worldly desires. Develop divine thoughts.

What is required is total surrender, not worship

Though there are many devotees, so why there are difficulties in this world? It is because devotion is not proper. The devotees are immersed in archana (worship), but what is required is arpitham (total surrender). Arpitham is greater than archana. When arpitham takes place, you and God become one. The fulfilment of worship of the Lotus Feet lies in the unification of the individual with the Divine.

Students, you should always have the welfare of the society and the world in view. You should not have the feeling that education is for a job. Always question yourself, What is it that I can do for the society? Enquire what is it that society expects from you. This should be your constant endeavour. Only then you can work for the progress of the nation.

Devotees, Embodiments of Love!

Many people from different countries have come here and celebrated their functions. For example, last year the Chinese came and celebrated their New Year. Devotees from Andhra Pradesh conducted Paduka Puja. Devotees from different States came here to celebrate their festivals. But one thing that made Me happy is that the devotees from Madurai have celebrated this function in the most systematic manner. Their disSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 383 cipline has been exemplary. Others should learn from their example. Subrahmaniam Chettiar is very old. Yet everyone followed his word. Each one followed the discipline on their own.

The Paduka Trust, Madurai, adheres to the principle of discipline. Not only here, wherever you go observe this discipline.

The three Ds: Devotion, Duty, Discipline

The three important principles of Sri Sathya Sai Organisations are Devotion, Duty, and Discipline. These three Ds are to be followed sincerely. Do your duty. See that your devotion is steady, and observe discipline. When you follow these three Ds you will always be happy.

Let this culture and tradition be passed on to your progeny.

This culture and tradition should not end with you, it should continue. Under any circumstances, do not give up the chanting of God's name. You should have fear of sin, love for God and morality in society. Sanctify your life by leading an ideal life and experiencing the divine Atmic Principle.

Light the lamp of wisdom

In this supremely sacred land of Bharat, forbearance is the highest wealth.

Of all forms of rituals, the most important one is adherence to truth and integrity.

The sweetest of feelings in this country is love for mother and the motherland.

In this land, character is more important than the life itself.

Such sacred principles have been totally forgotten, and in the name of freedom

People lead a perverted life imitating western culture.

Just as the mighty elephant is not aware of its own strength,

Bharatiyas are not aware of the greatness of their own culture.

[Telugu poem]

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 385

Embodiments of Love! All festivals of Bharat (India) have an inner divine significance. In Bharat, the festivals are celebrated to prove the immanent divinity in humanity. This day's festival, Deepavali, teaches a sacred inner meaning to humanity.

No other element in this world is as significant as light. It is the light that shows us the way by dispelling the darkness. It is because of the light that man is able to attend to his daily duties.

The flame of a lamp has two significant qualities. One is to banish darkness; the other is a continuous upward movement.

Even if a lamp is kept in a pit, the flame is directed upward.

The ancients have taught that the upward movement of the flame denotes the path to wisdom and the path to divinity.

However, the external light can dispel only the external darkness, but not the darkness of ignorance in man.

When Hanuman set Lanka ablaze, though there was light all around, Ravana's heart was filled with darkness. Ravana was no ordinary person; he belonged to the lineage of Brahma. He was the brother of Kubera, the god of wealth. He had a brother, Kumbhakarna, who was very powerful. He had a son by name Indrajit, who conquered the mighty Indra, the king of gods. He was a master of four Vedas and six Sastras. Such a powerful and highly educated Ravana could not get rid of the darkness of ignorance.

Dispel inner darkness

Ignorance is the cause of birth and death. One with ignorance is born again and again (punarapi jananam punarapi maranam). But one with wisdom has neither birth nor death. God has neither birth nor death.

He is eternal; he has no beginning, no end.

He is in the form of Atma.

That is jnana gyothi (light of wisdom). [Telugu poem]

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 386

If you want to light a lamp, you need a container. You have to fill it with oil and place a wick in it. You need a matchbox to light the wick. Only when you have all four accessories can you light the lamp. This lamp dispels the external darkness. Similarly, to dispel the darkness of ignorance, you need to have vairagya (renunciation), the container; love, the oil; one pointed concentration, the wick; and tatwajnana (spiritual wisdom), the matchbox. Only when you have all these four can you light the lamp of wisdom.

Even detachment has to be within certain limits

Renunciation is a must for every spiritual aspirant. Renunciation does not mean leading a life of seclusion, leaving wife and children. Giving up evil qualities is the real renunciation. That is the real thyaga (sacrifice) and yoga. So, first and foremost, develop detachment.

But even detachment has to be within certain limits. Extreme detachment will lead to danger. It is impossible to live in this world giving up everything. So lead your life with equanimity.

Once, the gopikas (cowherd maids) prayed to Krishna thus:

O Krishna! Your mother is trying to catch you to chastise you for your mischievous deeds. You don't need to run hither and thither to hide yourself. There is a place that is beyond the reach of your mother, that is our Heart. Our Heart is filled with the darkness of ignorance. So enter our Heart and banish the darkness of ignorance.

What is the inner significance of Deepavali? The capital of the kingdom ruled by Narakasura was known as Pragiyotishapuram.

The name consists of four syllables: prag, iyothi, sha, and puram. Prag means before, iyothi means light, and sha refers to forgetting. The inner meaning of this name is that the inhabitants of this city have forgotten the ancient and eternal light (Atma Iyothi). Narakasura, the king of PragiyotishapuSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 387 ram had totally forgotten the Atmic principle and was identifying himself with the body and leading a life in darkness of ignorance.

One has to develop attachment to the Self, not to the body.

Attachment to the body is the main cause for all sufferings.

One who travels toward ignorance is Naraka, and one who travels toward wisdom is Nara, the human. To travel along the path of wisdom one needs to develop sacred thoughts, sacred words, and sacred actions.

God has His own master plan for everything

God does not like to kill the wicked Himself. So Krishna devised a master plan to kill Narakasura. Since Narakasura was very strong both physically and mentally, Krishna decided to weaken him gradually by subjecting him to fits of anger. The modus operandi was to provoke Narakasura, and when he would come chasing in a fit of anger, Krishna would withdraw. Anger is the main cause for man to lose his physical and mental powers. If one gets angry, one loses the energy obtained from the food partaken over a period of three months.

When Narakasura lost all his strength due to his anger, Krishna made Sathyabhama kill him. God has His own master plan for everything because He is the master of everything. Narakasura committed many sins in his life. He imprisoned thousands of women and tortured them. They were the sixteen thousand gopikas (cowherd maids). They could neither live nor die. Such was their pitiable condition.

After Narakasura was killed, Krishna freed them from prison and asked them to return to their respective homes and lead a peaceful life. But all the gopikas fell at Krishna's feet and pleaded that it would be impossible for them to live in dignity in their homes after being prisoners of Narakasura. They said that Krishna was their only refuge and prayed that He would take care of them. Krishna agreed to take the responsiSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 388 bility of protecting them. Then the gopikas sang in praise of Krishna thus:

O Krishna!

It is impossible to describe Your glory in words.

Even Brahma, the Creator cannot understand You.

We have been longing for your divine grace.

Listen to our prayers and protect us.

You freed Devaki-Vasudeva from prison.

You saved the honor of Draupadi and Protected the Pandavas.

You removed the poverty of Kuchela.

You turned ugly Kubja into a beautiful woman.

You freed sixteen thousand gopikas from prison.

[Telugu song]

It is ignorance that makes one suffer. Only the external world is seen, but not the Atmic principle. The human being is like a bridge between the seen and the unseen. That which is seen is bound to perish. It is the unchangeable and eternal wisdom that is important, not the transient world.

When Narakasura was killed, all those who suffered under him were overjoyed. Having led a life of darkness till then, both internally and externally, they celebrated the occasion by lighting lamps.

Significance of lighting lamps

There is significance in lighting lamps. The flame of one lamp can light the whole array of lamps. That one lamp symbolizes the paramiyothi (supreme effulgence). The others symbolize the jivaniyothis (lights in individual selves). Deepavil is celebrated in order to teach this truth to the world. People celebrate this festival by bursting firecrackers, signifying the victory of good over evil.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 389

The inner meaning underlying the Bharatiya (Indian) festivals should be rightly understood. On each festival day, people have a sacred bath early in the morning, wear new clothes, and keep their houses and surroundings clean. Thus, the festivals teach us the importance of internal and external cleanliness.

The Vedas declare, Anthar Bahischa Tat Sarvam Vyapya Narayana Stithaha. God is present within and around. So one has to be pure both internally and externally. It is the water that helps to keep your body clean. But it is love that keeps your heart clean. You should celebrate the festivals in full realisation of their inner significance.

Because man has no purity of heart, he has become the cause of all the restlessness in the world. What is the reason of all suffering? It is the polluted mind. Never blame the world for your suffering; blame yourself. Yad bhavam tat bhavathi (As the feeling, so is the experience). If your heart is pure, you will find purity everywhere. So, purity of heart is essential. Only when you have purity of heart can you attain wisdom. In the absence of purity, you will be immersed in ignorance and restlessness.

Man can accomplish anything if he puts in effort

Ignorance leads to suffering. We do not know what ignorance is. We should try to know what we do not know. That is the true sadhana (spiritual exercise). It is only through effort that man can achieve anything. Even a small ant can travel miles together if it makes an effort, but a bird cannot move even an inch if it does not make an effort.

Man can accomplish anything if he puts in effort. He is able to travel lakhs of miles into space, spending crores of rupees. But he is not making an attempt to travel at least half an inch into his heart.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 390

Yantra, Mantra, and Tantra

Man is undertaking space travel with the help of yantra (machine). It is the mantra that is important, not the yantra. Hiranyakasipu could even reach the pole star with the help of yantra, but what is the use?

It was child Prahlada who could win the grace of God with the help of mantra. The power of Hiranyakasipu was related to yantra; whereas, the Prahlada's power was related to mantra. Yantra may fail, but not mantra.

Yantra, mantra, and tantra all the three are latent in human beings. We are repeating the mantra Soham 21,600 times a day. Soham means I am God. There is no better mantra than this.

The human body is the yantra. Who is responsible for making the heart beat? Who is responsible for digestion and blood circulation in the body? The eye, which is not even an inch in size, is able to see the stars, which are millions of miles away. The eardrum, which is small in size, is able to receive sounds from far off distances. Television and telephone are within the body.

Having been endowed with such a powerful yantra, the body, and the sacred mantra, Soham, it is a shame if we do not work for the redemption of our life. Hridaya is the tantra, Soham is the mantra, and body is the yantra. Though all three are within man, yet he is in search of them outside.

Man is encased in five koshas (sheaths): annamaya, pranamaya, manomaya, vijnanamaya, and anandamaya koshas.

The physical body is the annamaya kosha (the sheath based on food). Subtler than this is pranamaya kosha. Still subtler is manomaya kosha. Today, man has progressed up to the level of the mind. The moment he progresses to the level of vijnanamaya kosha (wisdom sheath) he will experience

anandamaya

kosha (sheath of bliss). That is the non-dualistic bliss.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 391

Ekam Eva Adviteeyam Brahm (God is one without a second.)

That is the Atmic principle. Just as the same current flows in different bulbs, the same Atma exists in all the beings. The culture of Bharat (India) speaks of this unity in diversity. Unfortunately, in the modern age, unity is viewed as diversity. It is this mistake that puts man to suffering.

Nations are many, but earth is one.

Being are many, but breath is one

Stars are many, but sky is one,

Jewels are many, but gold is one.

Once you understand this basic unity, you can understand the divine principle. You should not hate anybody. Hate your own anger. Do not fight with others; fight with your bad qualities. Give up your bad qualities. How is it possible? It is possible only if you surrender yourself to God.

Once you are unified with God, there is no separation

Markandeya was the son of Mrukandu. He was to live only for sixteen years, but he was not aware of this. One day he found his parents in a very dejected mood. When he asked the reason, they revealed that his end was approaching. On hearing this he immediately rushed to the temple of Lord Siva, hugged the Siva Linga, and started chanting His name. When the Lord of death came and cast the noose, even Easwara was caught up in it because Markandeya was holding fast to the Linga. Then Easwara manifested and burnt the Lord of death to ashes. This means that once you are unified with God, there is no question of separation. How can this unification take place? For this you need not do any sadhana (spiritual exercises) It is enough if you have total and pure love.

All the worldly sadhanas are only to sanctify the time.

Time is God. Do not waste time. Be happy. This is the sadhana you should do. Never be narrow minded. Expansion of love is life; contraction of love is death. Expansion of love is possible only if you have love for God. God can confer anything if you have love. There is nothing that He cannot give.

God is always ready to give Himself.

Ask and it shall be given. Knock and it shall be opened.

But man does not ask, does not knock. He asks only demons and knocks at the doors of hell. You should call out to God whole-heartedly. You should knock the doors of liberation.

The moha (attachment) has to be reduced in order to attain moksha (liberation). To reduce attachment, renunciation is very important.

In one of his songs, Bhadrachala Ramadas has compared human life to a lighted lamp and has declared that when the oil of life ebbs away none will follow the departed. Do not depend on this ephemeral world. Depend only on God. God is the basis for everything. If you totally rely on God you can achieve anything.

Since you rely on padartha (material world), you forget parartha (spiritual knowledge) and yathartha (the reality). All your material and secular knowledge are of no use in the field of spirituality. Give up materialistic thinking. Develop spiritual knowledge.

Removal of immorality is the only way to immortality

Pray to God, saying, Tamasoma jyothir gamaya (Lead us from darkness to light.) and Mrithyorma amritham gamaya (Lead us from death to immortality.) What is the way to Immortality?

Removal of immorality is the only way to Immortality.

Give up all bad qualities such as lust, anger, greed, etc.,

and install God in your heart. Do as I say.

Some people do not listen to good words,

Though they are said whole-heartedly.

They readily pay heed to bad words.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 393

Can such people ever know Me

What is the use of all their education?

[Telugu poem]

Know thyself and you will know everything

Ravana was a master of all sixty-four types of knowledge, but he could not receive God's grace. Since he did not put his knowledge into practice, he suffered from indigestion. That resulted in the sickness of sensual desires. Rama also learnt all sixty-four types of knowledge, and He put them into practice.

Ravana was interested only in aggrandizement, whereas Rama was interested in practice.

Life without the knowledge of Self is useless, just like a tree without root, a tree without fruit, and a fruit without juice.

If you do not know your true identity, what is the use of taking a human birth? Know thyself and you will know everything.

This is the most sacred teaching of all the festivals. Think of God. Constant contemplation on the Divine will free you from all worries.

Prasanthi Nilayam

Serve parents, serve God

This sacred land of Bharat is the birthplace of great women like Savitri,

Who could bring her husband back to life;

Chandramathi, who demonstrated the power of Truth by extinguishing the forest fire;

Sita, who demonstrated her chastity by coming out of blazing fire unscathed; and Damayanthi, who burnt a demon to ashes by her power of chastity and pristine purity.

In Bharat, there have been numerous such women, who have been proverbial for their chastity.

Bharat is the teacher of such virtues to the whole world.

O foolish mind, why do you go seeking

Brahman when He is right within you?

Look within, and there you shall find Him.

Don't forget these profound words of Sai.

[Telugu Poem]

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 395

Embodiments of Love! Right from the olden days, Bharat has given spiritual knowledge to the other nations, thus ensuring peace and harmony for the entire world. It is not only the kings that protect the nation, but women of great chastity are also responsible. It is because of noble men and women that the country has been able to achieve peace and prosperity. All the prosperity and the good that we find in this land of Bharat is due to the strength of women of virtue.

Rama's divinity blossomed under

Kausalya's loving care;

Because of the tender feelings and austerity of Sita,

Lava and Kusha achieved name and fame;

Fostered with the love of his mother Puthlibai,

Gandhi became a Mahatma,

The loving care of Jijibai made Sivaji a great warrior.

[Telugu Poem]

Sons become illustrious examples because of the goodness and strength of their mothers. Mother is the very foundation for the entire world. One calls one's own country the motherland, not fatherland. Even the language is called mothertongue, not father tongue.

This land is the birthplace of many noble sons, who got their goodness and strength from their mothers. In those days, mothers gave their sons good guidance by being ideal themselves. The welfare of the son depends on the mother. It is because of the love of the mother that the son becomes great and eminent. So, the foremost duty of the son is to be grateful to his mother, respect her, and serve her.

Divinity is immanent in every being. But who is responsible for this divinity within? The mother who has borne you for nine months with many difficulties and is even ready to sacrisathya

Sai Speaks, Volume 31 396

live her life for your welfare. You owe your existence to your mother.

Purity of heart is very essential for man

Since time immemorial human being has been called Nada bindu kala swarupa. It is these three aspects that are responsible for the existence of humanity. What is the meaning of nada? It is the primordial sound Aum, which emanates as a result of the combination of prana (vital force) and vayu (air).

The combination of body, mind, and intellect is called the bindu. Divinity that reflects in buddhi (intellect) is called kala.

So, man is the embodiment of nada, bindu, and kala.

The Principle of Atma transcends all these three aspects.

That is why the sages, while offering prayers to God, used to say, Nada bindu kalatheeta namo, namo (salutations to the One, who is beyond nada, bindu, and kala.) These three aspects pertain only to the nature. The potter makes pot by mixing water and clay. But that does not make him the creator. It is divinity latent in man that enables him to perform the task.

Spiritual knowledge helps us to undertake good actions and cleanses the mind. But that is not enough. The heart also should be pure. In the absence of purity of heart, there can never be purity of the mind and intellect.

We should not give scope to the creepers of bad qualities to entangle the heart. A creeper that goes around covering the tree ultimately smothers the tree itself. One should ensure that the creepers of lust, anger, greed, and infatuation do not get entangled to one's own Self.

It was lust that caused the downfall of Ravana, the one of great penance and the master of sixty-four types of knowledge. He not only ruined himself but his whole kingdom. Without purity of heart all spiritual practices are of no use. That is why Thiruthonda Alwar said, Oh! Lord, I worship You not with Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 397 flowers but with purity of heart. So, purity of heart is very essential for man.

Lack of sense control results in lack of respect

Hiranyakasipu had total control over the five elements.

Such an all-powerful one was ruined because he had the evil quality of anger. In spite of being a great warrior, Duryodhana, king of kings, was ruined because of greed. His entire clan was destroyed. It was moha (infatuation) of Dasaratha toward Kaikeyi that was responsible for Rama being sent to the forest.

Kaikeyi's love for Rama exceeded her love toward her own son, Bharata, but Manthara poisoned her mind. Consequently, she lost not only her husband but also the respect of her own son. Due to this delusion, she not only earned a bad name for herself but put the entire kingdom to shame.

Today, no woman bears the name Kaikeyi, because she distanced herself from God. Similarly, no man bears the name Duryodhana, Ravana, or Hiranyakasipu because they lacked good qualities and developed hatred and enmity toward God. Hiranyakasipu was a great scientist. Ravana was a great engineer, and it was he who invented airplane. He had mastered the language of animals, birds, and insects. He had so much to his credit. But does anyone bear the name Ravana? No.

People value purity of heart more than these achievements. It is the foremost duty of every individual to keep their senses under control. One can escape from the house on fire, but not from the senses, which are ignited by the fire of evil qualities. Intellect is of four types: (1) swartha buddhi, (2) swartha parartha buddhi, (3) parartha buddhi, and (4) niswartha buddhi. The one with swartha buddhi is always interested in his own welfare and fulfillment of his desires. The one with swartha parartha buddhi is interested equally in his own welfare and that of others.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 398

The one with parartha buddhi does not desire anything for himself. Surrendering himself to God, he craves His love alone. He believes that God is the indweller of all beings and desires for the welfare of the entire world Loka samastha sukhino bhavanthu.

The one with niswartha buddhi has no sense of I and mine.

The feeling of I (body) is ego, and the feeling of mine is attachment. The root cause of all sorrow and suffering of man is this feeling of I and mine, by giving up which man can purify his heart. Purity of heart is the greatest achievement of human endeavor.

Divine origin of Bharat

What is the difference between nara and Narayana? Nara is one who is endowed with the three aspects: nada, bindu, and kala. Narayana is the one who transcends all these three. The former corresponds to pravritti and the latter to nivritti. Nivritti is the state of desirelessness. One who treads along the path of Nivritti surrenders himself completely to God. Such a man is one who has absolutely no trace of selfishness.

This sacred land of Bharat (India) is the birthplace of many such selfless souls. Though you call yourselves the children of Bharat, you tend to be selfish and full of desires. This is responsible for leading you away from the culture of Bharat. The culture of Bharat is pure, unsullied, and selfless. Only when the young boys and girls recognise and follow this sacred culture can this country prosper.

A nation bereft of noble men and women can never progress. The country needs virtuous men and women. That is why I have established these educational institutions. I willed that out of these institutions should emerge noble boys and girls. In a short time, all of you will realise and experience this happiness. Wait for the golden moment.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 399

Discharge your duties sincerely. Do not forget your mother. In the world today, there may be a wicked son, but never a wicked mother. You owe your blood, food, and head to your mother. What is the gratitude you are offering to the mother for the sacrifice made by her? She is the one who has fostered and nourished you. So, never forget the love of the mother. First and foremost, love your mother, father, teacher, and God. The mother shows the father; the father shows the teacher; the teacher shows God.

This day is being observed as Mothers Day, Ladies Day.

From time immemorial, mother is considered synonymous with God. The Goddesses Durga, Lakshmi, and Saraswathi are worshipped as mothers. Saraswathi is the Goddess of Learning. Another name for Saraswathi is Bharati. Our country, Bharat, derived its name from Bharati.

There is a misconception that Bharat refers to the name of Bharata, the son of King Dushyantha. In that case, what was the name of this land prior to Bharat? On inquiry, you will know that this name has originated from God.

Purpose of Ladies Day

Today, women are being looked down upon as mere workers in the kitchen. Women can study and undertake jobs, but they should not neglect their household duties. If both husband and wife go to office, who will look after the household responsibilities?

If women go to schools to teach others children, who will teach their own children? Mothers are responsible for the well-being of their children. They also show the spiritual path to their children. So, never forget your mother. To set an ideal in this regard, I used to visit the samadhi of my parents on My birthday. To inculcate this good feeling in the hearts of people, even Sai Baba has undertaken this sacred activity. Every individual should adore, respect, worship and love their mother.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 400

I have initiated this Ladies day in order to foster respect and love for the mother. Not only the 19th of November, but the 19th of every month is being observed as Ladies Day in some States. Whatever may be the circumstances, good or bad, do not forget your mother.

Due to the effect of Kali Age, people consider their mothers as mere cooks in the kitchen. Not only that, they have been degraded to the level of servants. This is the misfortune that has befallen on man today.

All have to ask for alms from God

The beggar comes to the house and calls out, Bhavathi Bhiksham Dehi (please give me alms.) He cautions, Oh!

Master and the mistress of the house, in my previous birth I had not given alms to beggars as a result I am standing at your doorstep today begging for alms. Do not commit the same mistake. I am a beggar for three births. In my previous birth, I never doled out alms to beggars. In this birth, being myself dependent on others, I am unable to give anything in charity, and as a result I will again be a beggar in my next birth. Beware! Whom is he asking for alms? He says, Bhiksham Dehi.

Dehi refers to the indweller (God).

This body, made of five elements, is bound to perish one day or the other. But the indweller has neither birth nor death. He has no attachment whatsoever. Truly speaking, the indweller is God Himself. So the beggar addresses the indweller, not the master or mistress of the house.

He asks for alms from God. All have to ask for alms from God. God can give us all types of alms money, education, knowledge, intelligence, etc.

Whatever you have acquired from God has to be shared with one and all. Only when your wealth is shared with others will it remain with you forever. Sacrifice is very essential for man. It is the stepping stone to immortality.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 401

Mothers are prepared to give up their own life for the sake of their children. Mother is the very embodiment of sacrifice. That is why in this land of Bharat (India) mother is given such an exalted place.

Lord Rama said that the mother and the motherland are greater than heaven itself. Such an ideal of Rama is forgotten today. Mere chanting of Rama's name will not suffice; it is only when you follow His command that you can be called a true devotee. The Ladies Day serves as a reminder that one should revere and love one's mother and never hurt her feelings.

Love and worship your parents

Sankaracharya posted two sentinels in his ashram, who went around repeating, Thasmat jagratha jagratha (Beware.)

It so happened that one day Sankaracharya was thinking of his worldly achievements and wealth of his mutt. As he came to the doorstep, he heard the sentinels repeating, Thasmat jagratha jagratha, which made him realise his folly. He declared,

Ianma dukham jara dukham

Jaya dukham punah punah

Antya kale maha dukham

Thasmat jagratha, jagratha

Beware! Birth, old age, and death

Are filled with misery.

In this context, the Vedas declare, Arise and awake and stop not till the goal is reached.

Students! Boys and girls! Always remember your mother's love. Do not hurt your mother in any way. You say Swami's love is that of thousand mothers. When you are unable to comprehend

and experience the love of a single mother, how can you understand the love of thousand mothers? If you are unable to please your mother, how can you make Swami, happy?

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 402

Swami will be happy when you make your mother happy.

Swami does not want anything.

Many people wish Me happy birthday. You need not wish

Me happy birthday since I am always happy. Give happiness to your parents, friends, and relatives.

God is the embodiment of Supreme Bliss and Wisdom; beyond dualities;

One without second;

Eternal, pure; transcends the mind and the three attributes.

[Sanskrit sloka]

How can you wish God happiness? I often tell the students,

Happiness is union with God. God is pleased only when parents are respected. I do not desire anything. My happiness lies in you being happy and you making your parents happy. Love and worship your parents. Your welfare lies in their happiness.

God showers His grace on those who make their parents happy. The respect and love you receive from your children depends on the respect and love you show to your parents. Hurting others amounts to hurting God

Have you ever visualised Viswa-virata Swaroopa (the cosmic form)? Earth, water, sky, etc., can be seen in it. The universe is made of five elements, and the same five elements are present in you. So, you are Viswa-virata Swaroopa. God is in you and in everybody. So hurting others amounts to hurting God. Do not criticize and find fault with others. Love all, Serve all. Respect, adore, and worship your parents. They constitute the real wealth of your life. The blessings of your parents will confer health and wealth on you. God comes to you on His own whenlove and serve your parents.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 403

One can choose one's wife but not one's parents

Pundarika used to visit the temple of Lord Panduranga every day. One day, he was engrossed in serving his parents and hence could not visit the temple. So, Lord Panduranga Himself came to Pundarika. At that time Pundarika was pressing the feet of his parents. Since Pundarika was busy serving his parents, he requested Lord Panduranga to take His seat and wait. So saying, he passed a brick to the Lord, because there were no chairs and sofas in those days.

After attending to his parents, Pundarika offered his due respects to Lord Panduranga. The Lord was immensely pleased with his devotion to his parents and blessed him profusely, saying God comes to you on His own when your behavior is good. There is no service greater than service to parents. Consider service to parents as service to the Lord.

We need not go to God but should make God come to us.

One can select one's wife, but not one's parents. Only God selects His parents. I wish that you obtain the blessing of your parents and set an ideal for the rest of the world:

Today, I do not see parents being accorded the respect due to them. They are approached only in times of need and neglected later. There is a proverb in Telugu: the boat is set on fire once it serves its purpose of taking you across the river. Similarly, parents are sought after only in times of difficulties. Once you are highly placed in the society and accumulate wealth, parents are forgotten.

Here is a small example. V. Ramakrishna was an I.C.S. officer from Madras. His wife was Durgamba. They sent their son to America for higher studies. A month later when Durgamba contacted her son over phone and enquired after his welfare in Telugu, to which he replied that he had forgotten Telugu and could converse only in English. On hearing this, the mother was overjoyed and came to Swami to share the Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 404 news proudly. I replied that a person, who forgot his mother tongue in a month, was likely to forget his mother too.

There are many such students in the world today. They forget their parents once they go abroad.

Influence of western culture

There was an orthodox brahmin who was hesitant to send his son abroad, fearing that he might lose his culture. On the insistence of his son, he reluctantly consented to send him abroad and exhorted him to chant the Gayathri Mantra thrice a day. He warned his son that he would forsake him if he failed to do so and extracted a promise from him.

But the son failed to keep up his word. He did not chant the Gayathri Mantra even once. He was absorbed in the western culture.

On many occasions, the father asked him to return home, but the son did not pay heed to his word. The father as a last resort sent a telegram that his mother had expired. Immediately the son rushed home and was received at the airport by the father, who told him that mother was brought back to life by the infinite grace of the Goddess. Then he took his son to the temple of the Goddess enroute home to offer their obeisance and gratitude. As soon as they entered the sanctum sanctorum, the son greeted the Goddess, Hello! How are you, good morning! On hearing this father became furious and asked him to get out. This is how many people change their life style once they go abroad.

Our Jayamma (previous speaker) said that only Anantapur girls are great. What about our Prasanthi Nilayam boys? These boys are also good. She said that on many occasions the girls asked her to speak more and more about Swami and show them the way to please Swami. Even our boys here day in and day out are engaged in pleasing Swami and attending to His needs. Nobody is less or great; girls and boys are equally good.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 405

Satisfaction of parents is what pleases Me

It is not that you and I say, but the parents say. The parents feel within themselves that there is a transformation in their sons after joining Swami's institution. Parents should be satisfied, that is what I want. Only then do I feel satisfied. So, boys and girls should make their parents happy.

You do not need to enquire what pleases Swami. Satisfaction of parents is what pleases Me. I do not require anything.

When you make your parents happy I am also happy. I wish that you develop these qualities and set an ideal to the whole world. Do not try to satisfy Swami, make efforts to satisfy your parents.

If your parents are not convinced about your views, try to explain the rationale behind them. Speaking harshly to them will not help them understand your views. Be calm and give them a patient ear. Only then will you be able to convince them. Try to inculcate such holy feelings; only then will your study in this institute fructify.

Unity is our life breath

Punar viththam punar mithram

Punar bharya punar mahi

Ethath sarvam punar labhyam

Na sareeram punah punah

Embodiments of Love! Wealth once lost can be regained by one way or the other. If a friend is lost, one can make many more through good feelings. If a wife is lost, one can marry again. If land is lost, it can be reacquired through some means. But once the body is lost, it can never be regained.

Sareeramadyam khalu dharma sadhanam (the body is gifted to man to undertake righteous actions.) So, it has to be sanctified by performing sacred deeds. Health is very essential in order to do so. In fact, health is the very foundation on which human life rests. If health is lost, you have to suffer in many ways. There is no greater wealth than health.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 407

The body is a combination of different limbs. So, only when all limbs are utilised for sacred purposes can one have pushti and santushti (good health and happiness). For a healthy mind, one should have a healthy body. The Atma sustains human life on the basis of health of the body and the mind. A healthy human body is the very foundation for all virtuous and good actions. It is the primary requisite for the realisation of the four objectives of human life dharma (righteousness), artha (wealth), kama (desire), and moksha (liberation). Excessive activity in any field is harmful to health. We have to investigate why we lose our health. Excessive thinking, worrying, and studying is the main cause for man's illness. Some students are absorbed in studies all the time, because of which they lose their health. There is a limit to everything. The Greek philosopher Aristotle conducted extensive research on the digestive system of man, and as a result of too much of thinking, his health deteriorated, and ultimately he died of digestive problems. Constant investigations into cardiac ailments made the heart specialist Dr. Herin a heart patient and ultimately led to his death. Excessive activity in any field is harmful to health. Bear in mind the limitations of the body and act accordingly.

The main cause for your illness is psychological. This is nothing but illusion and delusion. We start imagining that a disease that is present in another person may also be present in us. 80% of the diseases are psychological. If you check your pulse rate under anxiety, you will find it abnormal. Do not bestow undue attention on your health. Discharge your duties peacefully and happily, then everything will be all right.

We are propagating principles of human values among the students. You should be aware of the capabilities of each stuSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 408

dent. Weak students should be equipped adequately both physically and mentally before they are taught higher values. The truth that health is wealth should be imprinted in their hearts.

The word vidya has its origin in the Sanskrit root vid, meaning wisdom, effulgence, and bliss. The equivalent term for vidya in English is education. Education is derived from educare, meaning to bring out or to elicit. It refers to manifesting that which is latent in man.

Sacred qualities originate from the heart

Educare comprises two aspects; one is related to the head and the other to the heart. Those faculties that enable man to carry on activities like reading, writing, undertaking a job, and earning a livelihood are related to the head. Sacred qualities like compassion, love, patience, truth, righteousness, and justice originate from the heart. These are meant for life, not for a living. The former relates to pravritti, which is external and negative in nature; the latter to nivritti, which is internal and positive in nature.

Compassion, love, truth, and patience cannot be acquired through the study of books. They are latent in our hearts. Education manifests these latent qualities in man.

All that emanates from the head is transient. Good health is ensured by the proper utilisation of head and heart. There are many unseen qualities in man. But man values only that which he sees, hears, and experiences; no importance is given to that which is unseen. That which is unseen is actually responsible for experiencing the fruits of one's action.

All human qualities spring from the heart only; they cannot be obtained from teachers or texts. Today, we are human only in form, lacking human qualities. We should bring out our latent human qualities and start practising them. This will foster good health in us.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 409

Teachers should practice before they preach. Be good, do good, see good, and tell good. Practice speaks louder than precept. Modern students are highly intelligent. They observe the actions and behaviour of their teachers. They respect and follow their teacher only when they see harmony in their thoughts, words, and deeds.

Earlier, teachers were called acharyas, meaning those who practice what they preach. Today, the term acharya has lost its significance since the teachers teach not from practical experience but from bookish knowledge. That is why the desired results are not realised.

Art should come from the heart

Everything in God's creation follows certain rules and regulations. The rising and setting of the sun is regulated by the divine command. But man today is not following the dictates of God, though he is endowed with supreme intelligence. Today man is acquiring knowledge, which is informationoriented and not transformation-oriented. This informationoriented knowledge makes man a machine, a computer, whereas transformation-oriented knowledge makes man a composer. The transformation-oriented knowledge confers human values.

Today, everyone is crazy after computers. What is the benefit accruing from it? The human brain is being underutilised. Today, people depend on calculators for simple arithmetic. One should make use of the original computer, the brain, which was gifted by God. We are giving up the original for the artificial. Art is outside; heart is inside. People follow the art, not the heart. Art should come from the heart.

A lot needs to be modified in the present educational system.

Today, I do not find men taking an active part in the bal vikas movement. The number of certificates awarded to the lady teachers today bear ample testimony to this fact. The Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 410 vikas movement has gained momentum because of the active participation of ladies. Men should take a cue from the ladies and play an active role in bal vikas.

Some men excuse themselves from bal vikas activities in the name of office work and other responsibilities. But they have time for watching television, playing cards, reading newspapers, and attending clubs. Can they not utilise this time in bal vikas as the ladies do? The country will prosper on the day when men cultivate the qualities of sincerity and devotion inherent in ladies.

Women teachers treat children with motherly love

Take Prashanthi Nilayam as an example. There is a Primary School, a Higher Secondary School, and an Institute here.

There is an ocean of difference in the quality of Primary School students on the one hand and those of the Higher Secondary School and Institute on the other. The reason is that all teachers in the Primary School are ladies, who treat the children with motherly love and affection. On the contrary, men teach like fathers with all authority and power.

Education should be imparted with all love and concern for the children, which unfortunately is lacking in men of today. A lady teacher, if she comes to know that her student is sick, will visit him at home to enquire about his well-being. This type of love and concern for the children should develop more and more among men.

Men in positions should discharge their duties commensurate with the salaries received. Women have been setting an example in this regard. There is a telephone factory in Bangalore in which only women workers are employed. In reply to the question why only women are employed in the factory, the Chairman clarified that their output was much higher than that of men.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 411

Ladies are more determined, dedicated, and devoted to their work as compared to men. Here is another example. Today you find both men and women driving cars. But more accidents occur when men are behind the wheel. This is due to the lack of concentration in men.

The determination shown by a Mahila volunteer

In countries like Malaysia, Singapore, Japan, Germany, etc., women are practising human values more than men. They are following Swami's command under all circumstances.

Here is a small example. It is not for any glorification that I am relating this. Last week, the mother of a Mahila volunteer expired suddenly. She spent that night in the hospital and reported for duty as usual the next morning. I asked her how she could attend to her duty immediately after the demise of her mother. She replied, Swami, You have said that both birth and death are, but, natural. Both are like twin birds that move together. Anyone who is born is bound to die. Whatever had to happen has happened. But I must discharge my duty. This is duty towards God. Everything else is ephemeral and transient, only God's work is permanent. So, I have come here to do that work.

She is a resident here in the mandir and has been serving for long. Since then she has not taken a single day's leave. The untimely death of her mother did not deter her from discharging her duties sincerely. She withstood all this by diverting her mind to God. Women have that sort of determination.

She is none other than Asha, seated beside Mrs. Shourie.

Her husband, Shiv Pandit, is a lecturer in the Institute.

There are crores and crores of such sincere workers in this world. They are striving not for name and fame but for Swami's grace. This shows that they have received Swami's teachings in their proper spirit.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 412

Even if a man practices one or two of these teachings, he can achieve a lot. Lord Krishna declared in the Bhagavad Gita, 'There is nothing in this world that I want. Yet, I am constantly engaged in activity for the welfare of humanity. When God Himself is engaged in selfless activity, why not man?' Success prevails where God and His ardent devotee come together. So, we should determine to follow the path shown by God.

Only sacrifice confers immortality

Wealth and property are passing clouds. Money comes and goes, but morality comes and grows. Nothing is great in earning money. What happened to all the great kings of yore, who ruled over vast kingdoms? Could they take even a pie with them when they left this world? No! So, utilise the money earned for the welfare of humanity. Do not be proud of your wealth.

Greatness lies in sacrifice alone. One who sacrifices is a true yogi. One who is immersed in worldly pleasures is a rogi (diseased one). It is only sacrifice that confers immortality.

Serve in your respective villages. Service does not mean sweeping the roads, cleaning the temple, and feeding the poor. Discharging one's duty sincerely is true service. Work in accordance with the salary you draw. That is service to the nation.

Ensure that the government is not put to loss under any circumstances. We are compelling the government to borrow, because we are not contributing our share in sufficient measure. All those who are members of the Sai Organisation should work hard and wholeheartedly.

Embodiments of Love! Develop love, take care of your health, and serve the society. Then God will confer on you the necessary strength and happiness. When God can make the dumb speak and the lame ascend the mountain, why will He forsake those who are sincere and hardworking?

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 413

Develop faith in God. Mere chanting of the divine name will not confer peace of mind. Only selfless service coupled with total faith in God can do that.

Differences should not divide us

Treat everyone as your brother and sister. There may be difference of opinion at times but that should not lead to hatred and enmity.

The Pandavas are an outstanding example of this. When the Pandavas were in exile, Krishna visited them. On finding only Dharmaraja, Krishna enquired about the whereabouts of the other brothers. Dharmaraja replied that four of them had gone to fetch food and the remaining hundred were in Hastinapur. Krishna chided Dharmaraja for considering the Kauravas also as his brothers.

To this, Dharmaraja replied, Krishna, don't you know this? When there is an internal conflict among ourselves we are five and they are a hundred in number. But when there is an external threat, we all unite and are 105 in number. Differences should not divide us. Members of the Sai Organisation should foster such unity. Let there not be any conflicts. Live like children of the same family. Get a good name, so that there is no other organisation comparable to the Sai in the world. Develop love and work unitedly.

Organisation

Only when five fingers of the hand come together can any task be accomplished. One may be the President of the Organisation.

That does not mean that one can act according to one's whims and fancies. I am aware of the fact that there are no such people in Sai Organisation. Yet, I am cautioning you.

Once there was a quarrel amongst the five fingers of the hand. Each one claimed that it was the greatest and the most important one. The little finger felt that it was the chief of all, since it always took the lead in punishing the wicked. The ring finger claimed that it was the king of all because it bore the Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 414 precious gems. The middle finger felt that it was the one of authority because it had two fingers on either side as bodyguards. The forefinger claimed that it was the ultimate authority because it evaluated who was good and who was bad. And in the end, the thumb said that it was the greatest because other fingers were ineffective in its absence. Each finger is unique in its own way, but it is only when all are united that success can be achieved.

Everyone is a member of the universal family. Similarly, all are great, be it the president, secretary, coordinator, or a member. But, to make the work successful, all should unite. All the wings of the Organisation samithi, seva dal, bal vikas, etc. should work in harmony. Consider different wings as the fingers of the same hand and work unitedly.

So, unity is very essential. You feel the stress and strain when you walk or work alone; not so when you are in a group.

Let us all grow together, enjoy together,

Let us perform heroic deeds by working together,

Let us live without any conflict.

[Telugu Poem]

The Vedas echo the same sentiments in the following verse:

Saha navavathu, saha nau bhunakthu,

Saha veeryam karavavahai,

Tejaswi navadheethamasthu,

Ma vidvisavahai.

This togetherness made India a land of sacrifice, a land of spirituality and a land of purity.

Just as each limb is as important as any other in the body, so also is each individual in the society. All limbs have to work in unison for the effective functioning of the body. Unity is most essential for man. Unity leads to purity, which in turn leads to divinity. Cultivate the feeling of brotherhood of man and fatherhood of God. People may come from varied cultures, languages and countries, but all are the children of God.

Since you make distinctions based on country, culture and language, you are unable to comprehend divinity. Everyone is a member of the universal family. Teachers must understand this truth and teach their students.

Lack of unity can lead a country, community, or society to fragmentation. So, we should first and foremost achieve unity.

Members of Sai Organisations should consider unity as their very life breath. They should not differentiate between people on the basis of caste, creed and nationality. Follow the example of Sai! When Sai Himself treats everyone equally, why not you? Never give scope for any differences. True independence lies in fostering unity. Therefore, to develop sacred divine human values, you should have unity first.

Keep in view the prestige and honour of Sathya Sai Organisations.

Whatever you do, be it good or bad, will reflect on Sathya Sai. To keep up the dignity of Sathya Sai, act in a truthful way. There should not be any differences or insights among the members of the Organisation. Resolve all conflicts through love and understanding. Love is God; live in love.

Duty is God; work is worship

Understand this point clearly. People engaged in various activities take at least a day off in a week. Why? For effective functioning of man and machine, rest is essential at regular intervals.

It is good to take rest. Does Sai take any day off? No!

Every day, every minute, every moment, I discharge my duties.

Discharging one's duty is true yoga. So, do your duty.

Duty is God; work is worship.

When elders set an ideal, children will follow their footsteps.

Elders should lead from the front. All elders should reSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 416 solve to practice and propagate the human values. Chairmen, secretaries, and coordinators should plunge into action. Only then will there be transformation; otherwise, the whole life will be spent in giving and receiving information.

Information relates to quantity; whereas, transformation relates to quality. Quality is essential, not quantity. Leaders should introspect and find out what transformation is effected in the individuals rather than keeping track of the number of certificates they have been awarded.

There is a lot of work going on abroad. Students consider human values as their very life breath. Though reluctant in the beginning, parents are sending their children to the bal vikas classes after observing a remarkable change in them. Human values will spread on the basis of interest evinced by the teachers. Everyone should work with sincerity, honesty, devotion, and discipline.

Embodiments of Love! In order to realise the goals you have set for yourself, work unitedly. Dr. Goldstein and Dr. Jum Sai spoke very lovingly. They want many more bal vikas centres to be started and new institutions founded right from primary school to college level. Very good. Peace will reign supreme only when such noble things take place in this world.

Seva is for the benefit of one's own self

If you all stand united, these things can be achieved in a moment. I am always in you, with you, around you, above you, and below you. I am not confined to Prashanthi Nilayam and India alone. I am there wherever you are. Your heart is my temple.

There will be no scarcity whatsoever. You will never fail in your endeavours. Work with total faith. Have total love. You are bound to achieve success. The whole world itself will be transformed into a Sathya Sai Organisation and Sathya Sai will be installed in the hearts of one and all. Realise that seva Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 417

(selfless service) is for the benefit of one's own self and not for others. You need not wait for My approval of your projects. I bless all your projects and plans.

Embodiments of Love! Just as all of you joined together in perfect harmony and unison in following My bhajan, have the same principle of unity in undertaking service activities. You should take part not only in community singing but also in community work. Only then you will be blissful. I wish that you have this kind of harmony, integration, and unity in singing bhajans and rendering service to society and derive the joy therefrom.

Fuse spirituality with education

Bharat has men who are capable of educating

Even the ancient sages about the essence of scriptures;

Men who sacrificed their lives for the uplift of society;

Men who have immense administrative capabilities.

Bharat has many such eminent personalities.

Alas! Of what use are such men in Bharat

If they have no awareness of the wail of the oppressed?

When will they respond to the heart-rending cries of the poor?
[Telugu Poem]

Students! Arise, awake and stop not till the goal is reached.

The need of the hour is men who set an ideal by their valor and courage in the battle of life, and not men who pursue physical, ephemeral, fleeting pleasures.

Students! Investigate the concept of ideal education propagated by the ancient sages. They enthroned righteousness and welcomed truth. They enshrined valor and courage. You should emulate such people, who strove for the glow of Indian culture. In fact you are the true inheritors of the legacy of Indian culture. You should resolve to uphold dharma and work for the welfare of the country.

Absence of human values leads to decline in spirituality

Science and technology has improved by leaps and bounds over the past 200 years, yet no sanctity has been attached to it.

This has stimulated development in human civilization, but not within man. The absence of human values will lead to a decline in spirituality. Develop the strong faith that the body has been gifted to uphold human values.

Since ancient times, Bharatiyas (Indians) stood for peace, forbearance, and forgiveness. A study of the history of Bharat will reveal the fact that many invaded Bharat and plundered its wealth, but never has Bharat invaded any foreign land on its own. Bharatiyas have considered divinity and purity as their two eyes. In such a sacred land, justice and righteousness have been consigned to flames, resulting in trials and tribulations, turmoil and unrest on a large scale.

Education does not mean mere bookish knowledge. Acquired knowledge should be put into practice and shared with the rest of the community. Does the ability to read and write make one educated? Does securing college degrees make one educated? If education is for a living, are not birds and beasts living? There are millions of educated men and women all over the world, but what is the benefit accruing to their respective nations? None. They are utilizing their education for selfishness and self-interest alone.

Embodiments of Love! Boys and girls! Eschew selfishness and self-interest and resolve to serve society.

The eternal and long lasting values have disappeared into thin air.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 420

Good nature in men and women is on the decline.

Ancient Aryan wisdom is frittered away

Western education is on the rise.

[Telugu poem]

Bharatiya education makes one ideal and self-reliant. It inculcates the sense of sacrifice in man. Having called yourselves children of Bharat, you should keep in mind the welfare of Bharat Matha. Modern education enhances the intelligence, but not broadmindedness. It makes the students stonehearted.

True education is one that instills compassion in you. Patriotism coupled with sacrifice; devotion coupled with love should become a part and parcel of your life. Education confers humility. Humility confers deservedness; deservedness secures for you wealth as well as divinity and devotion to God.

In this sacred land of Bharat,

Forbearance is our best wealth;
Of all forms of rituals, the highest is
The observance of truth and morality;
Of sweetness of disposition,
The greatest is maternal love.

Jettisoning the national ideal

That honor is greater than life itself,

What a pity people have fallen

a prey to exotic practices

What can I say about the plight of Bharat!

Like the elephant unaware of its strength,

Alas! Bharatiyas have become docile today.

[Telugu Poem]

Since ancient times, Bharat has stood as an ideal for the rest of the world. Unfortunately, we witness a different scenario today. We find educational institutions proliferating in every street, in every village. What is the gain therefrom? Absolutely nil.

Humility, the hallmark of a true student, is not noticed.

Harm is done to those that help,

A sense of gratitude is lacking.

Teachers are made a laughing stock.

This is the progress of modern education.

[Telugu Poem]

To realize the purpose of education, serve society. Cleanse the country of all evils. True education is that which makes one a complete man. Only when one gets transformed into a complete human being is the purpose of education fulfilled.

Education is meant to broaden the mind

Students! Resolve to make the best use of the education that you have received. Respect and revere elders and set an ideal to humanity. Let your conduct befit the degrees you have acquired. Nothing great in obtaining good marks, see that you do not invite bad remarks. In the modern system of education, a student is declared pass if he secures just 35% of marks.

What about the balance 65%? If a person completes only 35 out of 100 tasks assigned to him, can you call him a successful one? One should secure 100% marks. That is true education.

Attaining high marks is not the aim of education. Education is meant to broaden the mind. Education and discrimination should go hand in hand. The prosperity of the nation depends on the progress you make in the field of education.

The future of the nation rests on the students.

Moral and ethical values are confined only to books.

Heart has become a dwelling place for evil qualities.

Actions have become completely self-centred.

This is the progress of modern education. [Telugu Poem]

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 422

Education acquired should be translated into action. When you put your knowledge into practice, only then do you become an ideal person.

Students! As I have told you repeatedly, knowledge can be classified into five categories: bookish knowledge, superficial knowledge, general knowledge, discrimination knowledge, and practical knowledge. General knowledge and common sense are very much essential.

You should set an ideal by exercising practical knowledge and following the four Es. The first E is Follow the Master.

Who is your master? Conscience is your master. So, follow your conscience.

The second E is Face the devil. The third E is Fight to the end. The fourth E is Finish the game. Play the game of life in the true spirit of sportsmanship.

Students lack self-confidence. Confidence in the Self is very essential. Lack of confidence in Self will lead to depression.

Today, 90% of the people are afflicted with depression.

Depression will lead to weakness of mind. Na ayamatma balahinena labhyah (a weak-minded one cannot realise the Atma.) If you have confidence in the Self, you will never be weak-minded.

Render service to others till your last breath

Bharat has stocked plenty of wealth for you. What is this wealth? It is the spirit of sacrifice, which can be acquired through service to society. Do not waste time. Karmanubandeeni manushyaloke (human society is bound by action.)

Sareeramadyam khalu dharma sadhanam (body is gifted in order to undertake righteous actions, not to eat, drink, and make merry.) Render service to others till your last breath.

The essence of 18 Puranas can be summed up in one phrase: Paropakarah punyaya papaya arapeedanam. Help ever; hurt never. Set an ideal that is helpful and delightful to one and all.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 423

Education is for life and not for a living

Students! Ianthoonam narajanma durlabham (human birth is the rarest of all.) Human life should be one of character, good actions, and good qualities. It should be dedicated to the service of society, not for amassing wealth. Education is for life and not for a living. One need not strive for money. If education is properly utilised, money will come on its own.

Today, educational institutions have become business centers.

Money has become our God;

Pride has become our creed;

Selfishness sits supreme in the minds of men;

Egotism has become our fashion;

Greed has become our beauty;

Dharma has come to naught;

Compassion has sunk low;

Morality forever is lost;
Hypocrisy has become the light of our life;
Love and kindness lie sick and diseased;
Modern education has blinded men with lust;
Life has become a burden;
Minds have gone astray;
Delay no more, for delay is disastrous;
Fuse morality with education in sweet harmony;
Live up to the reputation as children of Bharat.

[Telugu Poem]

Moral values should be the underlying current in each and every action of man. Only when you have moral and ethical values can you deserve to be called children of Bharat. Embodiments of Love! Loka samastha sukhino bhavanthu (Let the whole world be happy) has been the motto of Bharat since ancient times. Resolve to revive and rejuvenate the pristine glory of Bharat. Propagate these noble ideals in every vilSathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 424

lage, every street, and every house. Observe unity in every activity of yours. Believe in the dictum, Brotherhood of man and Fatherhood of God.

Do not feel jealous of anyone. Jealousy is an incurable disease. Praise and censure are inevitable for man. Only the tree that bears fruit is stoned. Likewise, only the good face problems. Do not attach importance to these trials and tribulations. A Tree welcomes stoning because it is aware of the fact that people have recognised its value. Similarly, man should not feel dejected when he is censured. Treat dualities like pain and pleasure with equal-mindedness. Develop this broadmindedness.

Divinity blossoms in those with such a sacred attitude. All are the embodiments of God. Krishna declared, Mamaivamso jivaloke jivabhuta Sanathanah (All are sparks of My divinity.) Do not consider yourselves as mere mortals. Have firm faith that you are divine. Only then will you be able to work for the emancipation of this country, and it will be restored to the status of teacher to the rest of the world.

Education is the very form of God

The Vice Chancellor quoted from the Taittiriya Upanishad, Matrudevo bhava, Pitru devo bhava, Acharyadevo bhava, Atithidevo bhava (revere your mother, father, preceptor, and guest as God.) This was the teaching given to the students at the time of leaving the portals of Gurukul in ancient times. This act of benediction is termed Convocation today.

Education is the very form of God. The word education originated from the root word educare, meaning to bring out or to elicit. Educare has two aspects: that which relates to the head and that which relates to the heart. That which emerges from the head is pravritti (external); that from the heart is nivritti (internal).

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 425

Unless the head is empty (free from evil) it cannot be stuffed with good. Modern education relates to the head, but true education relates to the heart. Sacred qualities like compassion, truth, forbearance, and love originate from the heart. Here is a small example. Physical features like height, weight, and complexion can be seen by the naked eye, whereas there are innumerable qualities like compassion, truth, and love that are unseen. Merely acquainting oneself with the physical features of an individual does not make one aware of one's true personality.

Essence of Bharatiya vidya

Hiranyakasipu's scientific achievements far exceeded those of the modern scientists. He could even reach the Pole star, whereas the modern scientists have traveled only up to moon. Prahlada cautioned his father Hiranyakasipu. Oh! Father, you have conquered all the worlds but not your senses. The same sentiment was expressed by the Prime Minister of England, Churchill, Man has conquered all, but he has not conquered himself. On being questioned by a westerner as to why he was in a pensive mood, Gandhi replied that he was ruminating over the modern educational system, which was making him stoneheaded.

Education should fill one's heart with love and compassion. Two parts of hydrogen and one part of oxygen add up to make water. Greatness lies in sharing water equally, not in making it. Everyone has an equal right to water. Today, everyone is fighting for rights, but what about responsibility? Students! You do not need to fight for rights. Discharge your responsibilities, and rights will follow. Do your duty. Duty is God; work is worship.

What is your right? To make everybody happy is your right. Serve everybody and make everyone happy without expecting anything in return. Service is God. The best way to love God is to love all and serve all. Speak softly and sweetly. You cannot always oblige, but you can speak always obligingly.

That is the essence of Bharatiya vidya.

Education does not mean, Twinkle, twinkle little star, how I wonder what you are. All this is artificial education. True Bharatiya vidya is one, that fosters spirituality and human values. Our institute is based on sacrifice

Students! Propagate the ideals of true education in the four corners of the world. Sacrifice everything for the sake of truth, and tread along this sacred path. Truth is God; Love is God; Live in Love; Live in Truth. Imbibe these principles. Once you are along the path of love and truth, you will gain all wealth and wisdom. Be steady, do not waver.

Students of our institutions live up to these ideals and bring a good name to the institute. There is no institution comparable to our institution in this country. Business has taken over education right from K.G. to P.G. in other institutions. But our institute is based on sacrifice. Foster this sacred quality of sacrifice. Offer education to your fellow beings free of cost.

The Vedas declare, Na karmana, na prajaya, danena tyagenaike amrutatwa manasuh (Immortality can be attained only through sacrifice and not through wealth, progeny, or action.)
Be prepared to sacrifice, True yoga lies in sacrifice.
First and foremost, make your parents happy. Make everybody happy and be an ideal. The Vedas declare,
Sahanavavathu, sahana bhunakthu
Sahaveeryam Karavavahai
Tejaswi navadheethamasthu
Maa Vidhvisaavahai.
Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 427
May the Lord protect and nourish us!
May we grow in intelligence and valour working together!
May we live in friendship without any conflict!
I wish that you practice and propagate these sacred ideals.
Blessing you, I bring this discourse to a close.

Sai Kulwant Hall, Prasanthi Nilayam
43

Fill your heart with noble feelings
This Motherland of ours gave to the world
Noble souls renowned in all the continents.
It is the land that ousted the Foreign rulers and achieved freedom.
This Bharat is reputed for its scholarship.
It is the sacred land that stood forth
As the exemplar in the realms of music, literature and sacred lore;
Born in the land of Bharat,
noted for its fine arts and natural beauty,
Oh devotees! It is your bounden duty to foster
The glory and prosperity of the Motherland.
[Telugu poem]

Divinity is more resplendent than the sun,
Purer than the purest snow,
Subtler than the sky and space,
Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 429
And is immanent in all living beings.
Divinity pervades the microcosm and the macrocosm.
God is unattached, though He is present in all.
You are in Brahmam and Brahmam is in you.
In fact you and Brahmam are one.
What else is to be conveyed?
[Telugu Poem]

Embodiments of Love! Bharat is the birthplace of spirituality, righteousness, charity, nonviolence, and peace. Adherence to these qualities as observed in Bharat is not found elsewhere.
It is the birthplace of saptha rishis (seven sages) and the first poet, Valmiki. This is the sacred land ruled by the very embodiment of dharma, Rama. This is the land where the Song Celestial, the Gita, was sung by Krishna. It is the land where the oneness of the individual soul and the Cosmic Soul was proclaimed.

There is no other land like Bharat, the land of sacredness, righteousness and peace. Truth permeates the atmosphere of Bharat. Compassion pervades the dust of Bharat. Love fills the Ganges of Bharat. Forbearance dwells in the heart of man in this land. Such noble, divine, unique qualities are manifest in Bharat alone.

Divine magnetic power

God is all-powerful and all pervasive. Sarvam khalvidam Brahma (Verily all is Brahman.) An enquiry into science and spirituality will reveal that both affirm the same Truth. The existence of God is visualised by science in the form of electric, magnetic, laser, radio, heat, and light waves, which are allpervasive.
This is the direct evidence for the existence of God.

Divinity is present in the food you eat, the water you drink, and the air you breathe. There is no place in this world devoid of magnetism.

Sathya Sai Speaks, Volume 31 430

What is a magnet? It is not merely the one that attracts iron filings; everything in this world is suffused with magnetism.
Mother is a magnet for the child and vice-versa, similarly husband and wife are attracted to each other. Grass is the magnet for the cow. Flower is the magnet for the honeybee. When we investigate on these lines, it is evident that everything is governed by the principle of magnetism.

Vedanta declared, Ramayathi ithi Raamah (that which attracts is the Principle of Rama.) The magnetic power acts as the link between that which is apparent and that which is nonapparent.

The philosophers term it divine magnetic power,
whereas the scientists term it bio-cosmic or super power.
Therefore, scientists as well as Vedantins experience the same
