[33c94т] А. Е. Лукьянов ~ Познавший других - мудр, познавший себя - просветлен. ~ Победивший других - силен, победивший себя - могуществен. ~ Познавший достаток - богат, вынуждающий действовать - обладает волей. ~ Не потерявший своего места [в жизни] - вечен, ~ отдавший жизнь, но не забытый - увековечен.

[33c97т] В. В. Малявин ~ Знающий других умен. ~ Знающий себя просветлен. ~ Победивший других силен. ~ Победивший себя могуч. ~ Кто знает, в чем достаток, богат. ~ Кто действует решительно, имеет волю. ~ Кто не теряет того, что имеет, долговечен. ~ А кто не гибнет в смерти, живет вечно.

[33c98т] Б. Б. Виногродский ~ Осознающий людей - познает. ~ Осознающий себя - просветляется. ~ Побеждающий людей - обладает силой. ~ Побеждающий себя - становится сильным. ~ Осознающий достаток - богат. ~ Движение сильного - это наличие волеустремлений. ~ Не терять свою позицию - это способность длить. ~ Умирая, не исчезать - это долгожительство.

[34c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ The Way floats and drifts; ~ It can go left or right. ~ It accomplishes its tasks and completes its affairs, and yet for this it is not given a name. ~ The ten thousand things entrust their lives to it, and yet it does not act as their master. ~ Thus it is constantly without desires. ~ It can be named with the things that are small. ~ The ten thousand things entrust their lives to it, and yet it does not act as their master. ~ It can be named with the things that are great. ~ Therefore the Sage's ability to accomplish the great ~ Comes from his not playing the role of the great. ~ Therefore he is able to accomplish the great.

[34c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ THE Great Tao is universal like a flood. ~ How can it be turned to the right or to the left? ~ All creatures depend on it, ~ And it denies nothing to anyone. ~ It does its work, ~ But it makes no claims for itself. ~ It clothes and feeds all, ~ But it does not lord it over them: ~ Thus, it may be called "the Little." ~ All things return to it as to their home, ~ But it does not lord it over them: ~ Thus, it may be called "the Great." ~ It is just because it does not wish to be great ~ That its greatness is fully realized.

[34c03т] D. C. Lau ~ The way is broad, reaching left as well as right. ~ The myriad creatures depend on it for life yet it claims no authority. ~ It accomplishes its task yet lays claim to no merit. ~ It clothes and feeds the myriad creatures yet lays no claim to being their master. ~ For ever free of desire, it can be called small; ~ Yet, as it lays no claim to being master when the myriad creatures turn to it, it can be called great. ~ It is because it never attempts itself to be great that it succeeds in becoming great.

[34c04т] R. L. Wing ~ The Great Tao extends everywhere. ~ It is on the left and the right. ~ All Things depend on it for growth, ~ And it does not deny them. ~ It achieves its purpose, ~ And it does not have a name. ~ It clothes and cultivates All Things, ~ And it does not act as master. ~ Always without desire, It can be named Small. ~ All Things merge with it, And it does not act as master. ~ It can be named Great. ~ In the end it does not seek greatness, And in that way the Great is achieved.

[34c05т] Ren Jiyu ~ The great Tao is like a river overflowing, ~ It can go left, it can go right. ~ All things owe their existence to it, ~ But it never interferes with them. ~ When its work is accomplished, it is unable to say where its credit is. ~ It protects and nourishes all, but it does not claim to be master over them. ~ Always without its desire, it may be called small. ~ All things come to it as to their home, ~ And yet it does not pose as their master, ~ It may be called great. ~ It is precisely because it never claims to be great, that it can achieve its greatness.

[34c06т] Gia-fu Feng ~ The great Tao flows everywhere, both to the left and to the right. ~ The ten thousand things depend upon it; it holds nothing back. ~ It fulfills its purpose silently and makes no claim. ~ It nourishes the ten thousand things, ~ And yet is not their lord. ~ It has no aim; it is very small. ~ The ten thousand things return to it, ~ Yet it is not their lord. ~ It is very great. ~ It does not show greatness, ~ And is therefore truly great.

[34c07т] Lok Sang Ho ~ The Great Dao is all-encompassing. ~ Its influences pervade all directions. ~ All living things depend on it. ~ But the Dao works quietly. ~ It accomplishes yet makes no claims. ~ It provides clothing and nourishments yet does not take command over anything. ~ Ever aspiring for non-existence, ~ It can be called little. ~ Providing a home to all the living things yet claiming no ownership, ~ It can be called great. ~ Exactly because the Dao never takes itself as great, ~ It is truly great.

[34c08т] Xiaolin Yang ~ The big DAO is like a flood, going everywhere. ~ Everything depends on it to grow, but it never refuses to help. ~ When things are accomplished, it never claims credit. ~ It nurtures everything, but never tries to control them. ~ It never has desires, so it can be called the SMALL. ~ Everything depends on it, but it never tries to be their master, so it can be called the BIG. ~ Only because it never wants to be the BIG, so it becomes the BIG.

[34c09т] Walter Gorn Old, THE PERFECT CONDITION ~ Mighty Tao is all-pervading. ~ It is simultaneously on this side and on that. ~ All living things subsist from it, and all are in its care. ~ It works, it finishes, and knows not the name of merit. ~ In love it nurtures all things, and claims no excellence therein. ~ It knows neither ambition nor desire. ~ It can be classed with the humblest of things. ~ All things finally revert to it, and it is not thereby increased. ~ It can be mentioned with the greatest of things. ~ Thus does the wise man continually refrain from self-distinction.

[34c10т] James Legge ~ All-pervading is the Great Tao! ~ It may be found on the left hand and on the right. ~ All things depend on it for their production, which it gives to them, not one refusing obedience to it. ~ When its work is accomplished, it does not claim the name of having done it. ~ It clothes all things as with a garment, and makes no assumption of being their lord; ~ - it may be named in the smallest things. ~ All things return (to their root and disappear), and do not know that it is it which presides over their doing so; ~ - it may be named in the greatest things. ~ Hence the sage is able (in the same way) to accomplish his great achievements. ~ It is through his not making himself great that he can accomplish them.

[34c11т] David Hinton ~ Way is vast, a flood ~ so utterly vast it's flowing everywhere. ~ The ten thousand things depend on it: ~ giving them life and never leaving them it performs wonders but remains nameless. ~ Feeding and clothing the ten thousand things ~ without ruling over them, ~ perennially that free of desire, ~ it's small in name. ~ And being what the ten thousand things return to ~ without ruling over them, ~ it's vast in name. ~ It never makes itself vast and so becomes utterly vast.

[34c12т] Chichung Huang ~ How the Tao overflows! ~ It may be found left and right. ~ The ten thousand things relying on it for their living, ~ It does not decline; ~ Having scored successes, ~ It claims no possession; ~ Clothing and feeding the ten thousand things, ~ It does not assume masterdom; ~ Meaning it is constantly lustless, ~ And may be named among the tiny. ~ When the ten thousand things return, ~ They do not know who their master is; ~ Hence, it may be named among the vast. ~ That is why the sage man ~ Was able to achieve vastness. ~ As he never assumed vastness, ~ He was able to achieve vastness.

[34c13т] Ellen M. Chen ~ The great Tao floods over, ~ To the left, to the right. ~ Ten thousand beings live by it, ~ And it does not reject them. ~ Work is accomplished (ch'eng), yet it has no name. ~ It clothes and nourishes ten thousand beings, ~ But does not lord over them. ~ Always without desire, ~ It may be named the small; ~ Ten thousand beings return (kuei) to it, ~ Yet it does not lord over them, ~ It may be named the great. ~ Because it never considers itself great, ~ Therefore it can accomplish (ch'eng) its greatness.

[34c14т] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ When the great Tao runs its course, it moves forcefully like floods; ~ Nothing can resist its power and must flow with it, right or left, ~ Everything relies on it to survive, and it never fails to sustain their needs; ~ It does not claim merit for deeds it has accomplished; ~ It shelters and nourishes everything, yet it shuns away from domination. ~ [Tao] never has any [selfish] intentions, so we may describe it as small [as far as its ego is concerned]; ~ [On the other hand:] ~ Despite the fact that myriad things and creatures must comply [with its rule], ~ It does not [take advantage of the situation to] dominate them; ~ Furthermore, it never manifests [its magnificence], ~ We may therefore describe it as great. ~ For this reason, ~ A Sage seeks greatness not for [the vain splendor of] greatness, [but for the substantial accomplishment of good deeds], ~ He thenceforth achieves [the genuine] greatness.

[34c15т] Tien Cong Tran ~ The great Way is all-pervading, it can reach the right or the left. ~ All things depend on it, and none is excluded. ~ It does its work, but it makes no claims for itself. ~ It clothes and feeds all things, but it makes no claims to be their master. ~ Because it does not have desire, it may be called "the little." ~ All things return to it as to their home, but it does not lord over them: Thus, it may be called "the great." ~ It is just because it does not attempt to be great that its greatness is fully realized.

[34c16т] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ Tao is everywhere. ~ It can be guidance. ~ Everything lives depending on it without exception, With such accomplishment, it claims none. ~ Providing clothing and food to everything, it does not govern them: this is called lowliness. ~ Guiding everything, it does not master, this can be called greatness. ~ Because it does not proclaim to be great, it can actually be great.

[34c17т] Arthur Waley ~ Great Tao is like a boat that drifts; ~ It can go this way; it can go that. ~ The ten thousand creatures owe their existence to it and it does not disown them; ~ Yet having produced them, it does not take possession of them. ~ Tao, though it covers the ten thousand things like a garment, ~ Makes no claim to be master over them, ~ And asks for nothing from them. ~ Therefore it may be called the Lowly. ~ The ten thousand creatures obey it, ~ Though they know not that they have a master; ~ Therefore it is called the Great. ~ So too the Sage just because he never at any time makes a show of greatness in fact achieves greatness.

[34c18т] Richard John Lynn ~ The way the great Dao floods, oh, it can go left or right. ~ The myriad folk rely on it for life, but it does not tell them to do so. ~ It achieves success but enjoys no reputation for doing so. ~ It clothes and feeds the myriad folk but does not become their master. ~

It is always without desire and so can be named among the small. ~ The myriad things return to it, but it does not become their master, so it can be named among the great. ~ Therefore it is because he himself never tries to be great that he fulfills his greatness.

[34c19t] Lin Yutang ~ THE GREAT TAO FLOWS EVERYWHERE ~ The Great Tao flows everywhere, ~ (Like a flood) it may go left or right. ~ The myriad things derive their life from it, ~ And it does not deny them. ~ When its work is accomplished, ~ It does not take possession. ~ It clothes and feeds the myriad things, ~ Yet does not claim them as its own. ~ Often (regarded) without mind or passion, ~ It may be considered small. ~ Being the home of all things, yet claiming not, ~ It may be considered great. ~ Because to the end it does not claim greatness, ~ Its greatness is achieved.

[34c20t] Victor H. Mair ~ Rippling is the Way, flowing left and right! ~ Its tasks completed, its affairs finished, ~ Still it does not claim them for its own. ~ The myriad creatures return to it, ~ But it does not act as their ruler. ~ Eternally without desire, ~ It may be named among the small; ~ The myriad creatures return to it, ~ But it does not act as their ruler; ~ It may be named among the great. ~ For these reasons, ~ The sage can achieve greatness, ~ Because he does not act great. ~ Therefore, ~ He can achieve greatness.

[34c21t] Tolbert McCarroll ~ The great Tao covers everything like a flood. ~ It flows to the left and to the right. ~ The ten thousand things depend upon it and it denies none of them. ~ It accomplishes its task yet claims no reward. ~ It clothes and feeds the ten thousand things yet it does not attempt to control them. ~ Therefore, ~ it may be called "the little." ~ The ten thousand things return to it, ~ even though it does not control them. ~ Therefore, ~ it may be called "the great." ~ So it is that the True Person does not wish to be great and therefore becomes truly great.

[34c22t] David H. Li ~ The Grand Direction permeates, left and right. ~ With myriad matters depending on it for growth, it declines none. ~ Accomplishing much, it accepts no limelight. ~ Nurturing myriad matters without claiming, it may be labeled Small; ~ Receiving myriad matters without claiming, it may be labeled Grand. ~ By not self-claiming Grand, it is thus Grand.

[34c23t] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ The Great Tao overflows everywhere in the universe. ~ It suffuses with life all beings that depend on it for their existence. ~ It accomplishes everything while remaining nameless. ~ It nurtures everything while claiming no mastership. ~ It desires nothing for itself, and is therefore called the Small. ~ It is the source whereto everything returns, and is therefore called the Vast. ~ Thus, the sage never thinks of claiming greatness for himself, ~ Yet, for this very reason, achieves true greatness.

[34c24t] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ The great Tao is in everything, both on the left and on the right. ~ Through it, all things come into being, and it does not abandon them. ~ When its work is completed, it does not possess them. ~ It loves and nurtures all things, ~ But does not rule them. ~ It never exists, so it can be called small, apparently. ~ All things return home to it, ~ And it does not claim to own them, ~ So it can be called great, apparently. ~ It never aspires to greatness, ~ And therefore it accomplishes greatness.

[34c25t] Man-Ho Kwok ~ The Great Tao goes everywhere ~ past your left hand and your right - ~ filling the whole of space. ~ It is breath to every thing, and yet it asks for nothing back. ~ It feeds and creates everything, but it will never tell you so. ~ It nurtures all things without lording it over anything. ~ It names itself in the lowest of the low. ~ It holds what it makes, ~ Yet never fights to do so: ~ that is why we call it Great. ~ Why? ~ Because it never tries to be so.

[34c26t] Gu Zhengkun ~ The great Tao is felt everywhere ~ Extending in all directions. ~ All things grow on it and it never declines them. ~ It accomplishes its great task without claiming to merit. ~ It breeds all things without claiming to be their master; ~ It can be called the Small. ~ All things finally return to it ~ And it never claims to be their master; ~ And it can be called the Great. ~ It becomes the Great ~ Because it never claims to be the Great.

[34c27t] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ The Tao is floating everywhere, to the left and to the right. ~ The lives of the myriad creatures depend on it, no one can live without it. ~ It accomplishes its task, yet claims no honour. ~ It nourishes the myriad creatures, yet claims no possession. ~ It is always free from desire; ~ it can be called small. ~ The myriad creatures turn to it, yet it does not master them; it can be called great. ~ That is why the sage never boasts to be the great one, therefore he is the great one.

[34c28t] Liu Qixuan ~ The Way extends and expands. ~ One is in it wherever one is. ~ By trusting it, all beings grow and develop. ~ The Way enables successes but possesses no name. ~ It provides for all but rules over nothing. ~ It is free of personal desires ~ And can therefore be named as insignificant. ~ It is obeyed by all, though it has no political power. ~ Therefore, it can be named as the greatest. ~ One who never wants to be great can therefore grow great.

[34c29t] Shi Fu Hwang ~ The Great Tao Flows Everywhere ~ Lao Tze says, ~ The great Tao flows everywhere. ~ There is no discrimination of what is the right and what is the left. ~ All existence lives up to it, and it denies no one. ~ It doesn't claim credit, though there is achievement. ~ It loves and nourishes all existence but does not lord over them. ~ It appears ambitionless and is regarded as less important. ~ All existence returns to it, and it doesn't dominate them. ~ Certainly this is great. ~ This is the reason that the sage never regards himself as great, ~ thus he deserves to be titled as great.

[34c30t] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ The great Tao pervades everywhere, both on the left and on the right. ~ By it all things came into being, and it does not reject them. ~ Merits accomplished, it does not possess them. ~ It loves and nourishes all things but does not dominate over them. ~ It is always non-existent; therefore it can be named as small. ~ All things return home to it, and it does not claim mastery over them; therefore it can be named as great. ~ Because it never assumes greatness, therefore it can accomplish greatness.

[34c31t] Paul J. Lin ~ The great Tao overflows, ~ able to move left and right. ~ All things rely on it for life, ~ But it does not dominate them. ~ Completing its task without possession, ~ Clothing and feeding all things, ~ Without wanting to be their master. ~ Always void of desire, ~ It can be called Small. ~ All things return to it ~ Without its being their master; ~ It can be called Great. ~ Just because the Sage would never regard himself as great, ~ He is able to attain his own greatness.

[34c32t] Michael LaFargue ~ Great Tao drifts - it can go right or go left. ~ The thousands of things depend on it for life, ~ it rejects nothing. ~ It achieves successes, ~ but does not hold tight to the fame. ~ It clothes and feeds the thousands of things, ~ but does not act the ruler. ~ Always: ~ Desiring nothing, it can be called 'of no account'. ~ The thousands of things turn back to it, ~ but it does not act the ruler - it can be called 'Great'. ~ Because in the end, ~ it does not insist on its own greatness, yes, it is able to achieve its full greatness.

[34c33t] Cheng Lin ~ The great Truth is all-pervasive and may be found everywhere. ~ It gives life to all animate creation, and yet it does not claim lordship over them. ~ It accomplishes all things, and yet it does not claim anything for itself. ~ It embraces all things, and yet it has no fixed abode. ~ It abides by inaction, and may be considered minute. ~ It is the ultimate destiny of all animate creation though it is not conscious of it, and it may be considered great. ~ Because it is never conscious of its greatness, it becomes truly great.

[34c34t] Yi Wu ~ The great Way is universal, ~ It exists on the left and the right. ~ All things rely on it for life, ~ And it does not refuse them. ~ It achieves without possessing. ~ It clothes and feeds all things ~ Without being their master. ~ Constantly desireless, it may be called "the small". ~ All things return to it, ~ But it is not their master. ~ It may be called "the great". ~ Because it does not consider itself great, ~ It is able to be great.

[34c35t] Han Hiong Tan ~ The great Dao flows everywhere. ~ It goes to the right and it goes to the left. ~ Myriad beings depend on it to survive, ~ But it does not interfere with them. ~ It facilitates but does not gloat. ~ It nourishes everything, but does not exert control. ~ Dao has no goal and appears to be insignificant. ~ Nevertheless, everything relies on it for sustenance, but it exerts no control. ~ Such action seems to be magnificently great. ~ Dao has no intention to be great, yet it attains greatness.

[34c36t] Hua-Ching Ni ~ The subtle essence of the universe is omnipresent. ~ It may go to the left or the right. ~ All things derive their life from it, ~ and it holds nothing back from them, ~ yet it takes possession of nothing. ~ It accomplishes its purpose, ~ but it claims no merit. ~ It clothes and feeds all, ~ but has no ambition to be master over anyone. ~ Thus it may be regarded as "the Small." ~ All things return to it, and it contains them, ~ yet it claims no authority over them. ~ Thus it may be recognized as "the Great." ~ The wise one who never attempts to be emotionally great and who accomplishes each small task with full devotion, ~ as if it were the greatest of tasks, is naturally recognized as great.

[34c37t] Chang Chung-yuan ~ The magnificent Tao is all-pervading. ~ It may penetrate to either this side or that side. ~ All creatures abide with it and grow; none are excluded from it. ~ When its work is done, it does not demand merit. ~ It nurtures all things, but does not rule them. ~ When it is without intention, it may be called lesser. ~ When all things return to it, yet it does not possess them, it may be called greater. ~ Therefore, the wise does not endeavor to be great. ~ Hence, his attainment is great.

[34c38t] Henry Wei ~ Natural Perfection ~ Ren Ch'eng ~ The Great Tao is all pervasive; ~ It could be on your right or on your left. ~ The ten thousand things depend on it for growth, ~ And it never lets them down. ~ It achieves success but is not possessive. ~ It enfolds and nourishes the ten thousand things, ~ Yet it does not claim ownership. ~ Always desireless and covetous of nothing, ~ It could be termed small. ~ But as the ten thousand things return to it, ~ And it does not care to be their lord, ~ It could be termed great. ~ Thus the Sage never in life tries to be great, ~ And for this very reason becomes truly great.

[34c39t] Ha Poong Kim ~ The great Tao overflows left and right, ~ The ten thousand things depend on it for their lives, and it never disowns them. ~ Its work is done, but it has no name. ~ It clothes and nurtures the ten thousand things, yet it makes no claim to be lord over them. ~ It is always free of desire. ~ It may be called small. ~ The ten thousand things return to it, yet it makes no claim to be lord over them. ~ It may be called great. ~ Because it never regards itself as great, ~ It can accomplish its greatness.

[34c40t] Tao Huang ~ As the Tao is all-pervading, ~ It operates on both the left and the right. ~ Success is consequent to all affairs. ~ It does not proclaim its own existence. ~ All things return. ~ Yet there is no claim of ownership, ~ So it is forever desireless. ~ This can be called small. ~ All things return. ~ Yet there is no claim of ownership, ~ This can he called great. ~ The sage accomplishes greatness in not acting great. ~ Thus can he accomplished what is great.

[34c41t] Tang Zi-chang ~ How all-pervading the superior Dao is! ~ It could be on the left, it could be on the right. ~ Upon it the life of all things depends and it does not deny anyone. ~ It accomplishes merits but it does not possess fame. ~ It shields and nourishes All Things but it does not lord over them. ~ It may be called the Superior. ~ Hence, a Sage ruler never wishes to be superior. ~ Therefore he eventually became superior.

[34c42t] Wing-tsit Chan ~ The Great Tao flows everywhere. ~ It may go left or right. ~ All things depend on it for life, and it does not turn away from them. ~ It accomplishes its task, but does not claim credit for it. ~ It clothes and feeds all things but does not claim to be master over them. ~ Always without desires, it may be called The Small. ~ All things come to it and it does not master them, it may be called The Great. ~ Therefore (the sage) never strives himself for the great, and thereby the great is achieved.

[34c93t] Е. А. Торчинов ~ Великий Путь, безбрежное Дао, повсюду растекается оно. ~ Вот оно слева, но оно и справа. ~ Все сущее, опираясь на него, рождается, но Дао им не обладает. ~ Благие качества и свойства свои оно не выставляет напоказ для прославления, оно питает, пестует все сущее, но не становится над сущим властелином. ~ Когда мудрец в бесстрастии все время пребывает, он Дао даже в самом малом созерцает. ~ Все сущее к нему стремится возвратиться, но не становится оно над ним владыкой. ~ Его поэтому назвать Великим можно! ~ Поэтому и совершенномудрый до самого конца к величию нисколько не стремится. ~ Поэтому он может стать поистине великим!

но славы себе не желает. ~ С любовью воспитывая все существа, оно не считает себя их властелином. ~ Оно никогда не имеет собственных желаний, поэтому его можно назвать ничтожным. ~ Все сущее возвращается к нему, но оно не рассматривает себя их властелином. ~ Его можно назвать великим. ~ Оно становится великим, потому что никогда не считает себя таковым.

[35c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ Hold on to the Great Image and the whole world will come to you. ~ Come to you and suffer no harm; but rather know great safety and peace. ~ Music and food - for these passing travelers stop. ~ Therefore, of the Tao's speaking, we say: ~ Insipid, it is! It's lack of flavor. ~ When you look at it, it's not sufficient to be seen; ~ When you listen to it, it's not sufficient to be heard; ~ Yet when you use it, it can't be used up.

[35c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ He who holds the Great Symbol will attract all things to him. ~ They flock to him and receive no harm, for in him they find peace, security and happiness. ~ Music and dainty dishes can only make a passing guest pause. ~ But the words of Tao possess lasting effects, ~ Though they are mild and flavourless, ~ Though they appeal neither to the eye nor to the ear.

[35c03т] D. C. Lau ~ Have in your hold the great image ~ And the empire will come to you. ~ Coming to you and meeting with no harm ~ It will be safe and sound. ~ Music and food ~ Will induce the wayfarer to stop. ~ The way in its passage through the mouth is without flavour. ~ It cannot be seen, ~ It cannot be heard, ~ Yet it cannot be exhausted by use.

[35c04т] R. L. Wing ~ Hold fast to the Great Image, ~ And all the world will come. ~ Yet its coming brings no harm, Only peace and order. ~ When there is music together with food, ~ The audience will linger. ~ But when the Tao is expressed, ~ It seems without substance or flavor. ~ We observe and there is nothing to see. ~ We listen and there is nothing to hear. ~ We use it and it is without end.

[35c05т] Ren Jiyu ~ Whoever holds fast to the great image will become that one to whom all people under Heaven will come. ~ (Even if all people under Heaven) come to him they will not hinder each other, ~ And all enjoy comfort, peace and health. ~ Music and dainties will make passing guests stop, ~ (But) Tao, if spoken out, will be insipid and tasteless. ~ Being looked at, it is imperceptible, ~ Being listened to, it is inaudible, ~ Being utilized, it is inexhaustible.

[35c06т] Gia-fu Feng ~ All men will come to him who keeps to the one, ~ For there lie rest and happiness and peace. ~ Passersby may stop for music and good food, ~ But a description of the Tao ~ Seems without substance or flavor. ~ It cannot be seen, it cannot be heard, ~ And yet it cannot be exhausted.

[35c07т] Lok Sang Ho ~ He who holds the great sign ~ Attracts a great following. ~ He who helps the followers avoid harm ~ Enjoys great peace. ~ Music and good food can stop passers-by on their way. ~ The Dao, on the contrary, offers only a bland taste. ~ It can hardly be seen or heard. ~ Yet if one uses it, it is inexhaustible.

[35c08т] Xiaolin Yang ~ If you have the DAO, everything will come to you. ~ They come to you because they will not be hurt anymore, and they will become secure and peaceful. ~ Pleasant music and tasteful food will make even the passerby stop. ~ When being talked about, the DAO is tasteless. ~ When you look at it, you will not see it; when you listen to it, you will not hear it; ~ However, when you use it, it will never run out.

[35c09т] Walter Gorn Old, THE VIRTUE OF BOUNTY ~ Attain to the Great Idea, and all the world will flock to you. ~ It will flock to you and will not be hurt therein, for it will rest in a wonderful peace. ~ Where there is a festival the wayfarer will stay. ~ To the palate the Tao is insipid and tasteless. ~ In regarding it the eye is not impressed. ~ In listening to it the ear is not filled. ~ But in its uses it is inexhaustible.

[35c10т] James Legge ~ To him who holds in his hands the Great Image (of the invisible Tao), the whole world repairs. ~ Men resort to him, and receive no hurt, but (find) rest, peace, and the feeling of ease. ~ Music and dainties will make the passing guest stop (for a time). ~ But though the Tao as it comes from the mouth, seems insipid and has no flavour, though it seems not worth being looked at or listened to, the use of it is inexhaustible.

[35c11т] David Hinton ~ Holding to the great image all beneath heaven sets out: ~ sets out free of risk, peace tranquil and vast. ~ Music and savory food ~ entice travelers to stop, ~ but the Way uttered forth ~ isn't even the thinnest of bland flavors. ~ Look at it: not enough to see. ~ Listen to it: not enough to hear. ~ Use it: not enough to use up.

[35c12т] Chichung Huang ~ Take hold of the great image, ~ And all under heaven will flock to you. ~ Once there, unharmed, ~ They will settle down in peace and prosperity. ~ Music and pastries ~ Make the wayfarers pause. ~ Therefore, when the Tao utters words, ~ They say: "How bland and tasteless! ~ Looked at, ~ It is not worth seeing; ~ Listened to, ~ Not worth hearing." ~ When used, however, ~ It is inexhaustible.

[35c13т] Ellen M. Chen ~ Hold aloft the Great Image (hsiang), ~ The whole world will go to it. ~ Going to it, they will meet with no harm, ~ Only safety, peace, and contentment (an p'ing t'ai). ~ When music and dainty dishes are offered, ~ The passers-by stop. ~ Tao, when it is uttered by the mouth, ~ Is so bland it has no flavor. ~ When looked at, it is not enough to be seen. ~ When listened to, it is not enough to be heard, ~ When used (yung), it is inexhaustible.

[35c14т] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ If someone is successful in capturing the grandest phenomenon [of cosmos with his description]; ~ He may then be the right man for the world to follow; ~ Furthermore, if the world is processing [on this right course] unobstructed; ~ The world will enjoy peace, justice and prosperity. ~ The pleasure of listening to good music, and eating delicious food, were as transient as travelers passed by; ~ [When Tao was discussed]: ~ As far as mouth was concerned, the discussion gave off nothing more than tastelessness; ~ As far as eyes were concerned, the discussion offered nothing worthwhile to look at; ~ As far as ears were concerned, the discussion rendered nothing [musical which] deserves our making an effort to listen to it. ~ Nevertheless, when comes to the utilizations of discussions [about Tao], we shall discover that their applications are inexhaustible.

[35c15т] Tien Cong Tran ~ He who holds the great image will attract all things to him. ~ They flock to him and receive no harm, for in him they find peace, security and happiness. ~ Music and dainty dishes make a passing guest pause. ~ But being said in the words, the Way is tasteless, flavorless, not seen, not heard, but it cannot be used up.

[35c16т] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ Those who grasp Tao will be followed by the whole world. ~ Following without worries, the world becomes secure, peaceful, and prosperous. ~ Music and banquet make the travelers stop by. ~ But when Tao is said, it is plain and flavorless. ~ It is invisible when it is looked at. ~ It is inaudible when it is listened to. ~ It is inexhaustible when it is utilized.

[35c17т] Arthur Waley ~ He who holding the Great Form goes about his work in the empire ~ Can go about his work, yet do no harm. ~ All is peace, quietness and security. ~ Sound of music, smell of good dishes ~ Will make the passing stranger pause. ~ How different the words that Tao gives forth! ~ So thin, so flavourless! ~ If one looks for Tao, there is nothing solid to see; ~ If one listens for it, there is nothing loud enough to hear. ~ Yet if one uses it, it is inexhaustible.

[35c18т] Richard John Lynn ~ Grasp the great image, and all under Heaven will turn to you. ~ Turning to you means not harm but safety and peace in great measure. ~ Music and fine food make the passing visitor stay. ~ When the Dao is spoken of, how bland: it has no flavor at all! ~ We look for it, but not enough is there to see anything. ~ We listen for it, but not enough is there to hear anything. ~ We try to use it, but not enough is there to use up.

[35c19т] Lin Yutang ~ THE PEACE OF TAO ~ Hold the Great Symbol ~ And all the world follows, ~ Follows without meeting harm, ~ (And lives in) health, peace, commonwealth. ~ Offer good things to eat ~ And the wayfarer stays. ~ But Tao is mild to the taste. ~ Looked at, it cannot be seen; ~ Listened to, it cannot be heard; ~ Applied, its supply never fails.

[35c20т] Victor H. Mair ~ Hold fast to the great image and all under heaven will come; ~ They will come but not be harmed, rest in safety and peace; ~ Music and fine food will make the passerby halt. ~ Therefore, ~ When the Way is expressed verbally, ~ We say such things as ~ "how bland and tasteless it is!" ~ "We look for it, but there is not enough to be seen." ~ "We listen for it, but there is not enough to be heard." ~ Yet, when put to use, it is inexhaustible!

[35c21т] Tolbert McCarroll ~ Hold on to the Great Image ~ and all under heaven will approach you. ~ Coming to you and not being harmed, ~ they will find rest, peace, and security. ~ A passing guest will pause at the sound of music and the smell of fancy food. ~ By comparison the Tao is mild and flavorless. ~ It is not solid enough to be seen, ~ nor loud enough to be heard. ~ Yet, it lasts forever.

[35c22т] David H. Li ~ Whoever embraces the Grand Image attracts people in the world. ~ Attracting but not discriminating, they live in peace. ~ Hearing music and seeing food, visitors linger. ~ Direction, [as a subject] for discussion, is plain and flavorless. ~ Looking at it, it is invisible; ~ Listening to it, it is inaudible; ~ using it, it is inexhaustible.

[35c23т] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ From the great formless imagining the world emerges into existence, ~ Without obstruction, but with balance, harmony, and peace. ~ Music and feast provide fleeting pleasures in this ephemeral world. ~ The Tao in its utterance brings no such pleasures to the senses. ~ The Tao, when looked at, cannot be seen by the eye. ~ The Tao, when listened to, cannot be heard by the ear. ~ Yet, when used, it is forever inexhaustible.

[35c24т] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ The person who holds the great thing ~ Will go through a whole world. ~ He will go along the path straightforwardly without seeing danger, ~ But finds tranquillity, friendship, and equality. ~ The sounds of a tune and the scent of delicacies will cause the stranger passing by to stop. ~ But Tao, when it is expressed in words, is pure, devoid of all taste. ~ When someone looks at it, he won't see it. ~ When someone listens to it, he won't hear it. ~ However, when someone uses it, it is everything.

[35c25т] Man-Ho Kwok ~ Everyone will gather to the man ~ Who rules in the light of the One. ~ To trust such a being is to live ~ In true happiness and healing. ~ Good food and sweet music ~ May make you stop - ~ You listen, in passing. ~ But the Tao: how does it seem? ~ Oh, tasteless and shapeless by comparison. ~ You cannot even hear it. ~ Is it even worth trying to? ~ Yes, my friend because it is unending.

[35c26т] Gu Zhengkun ~ He who holds the great image (Tao) ~ Attracts all the people to him. ~ Coming to him and not harming each other, ~ They all live in peace and happiness. ~ Music and food ~ Can allure passersby to stop, ~ But the Tao, coming out of the mouth, ~ Is tasteless. ~ It cannot be seen, ~ It cannot be heard, ~ But when using it, you can never exhaust its use.

[35c27т] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ Embrace the appearance of Tao. ~ Everyone under the great Heaven will follow it, ~ yet no one tries to cause harm to it. ~ Peace and safety and equality will arise. ~ Banquets and delicacies are like passing guests: they cannot last. ~ The Tao passes the mouth, it cannot be tasted. ~ The Tao passes the eyes, it cannot be seen. ~ The Tao passes the ears, it cannot be heard. ~ Yet it can never be exhausted by use.

[35c28т] Liu Qixuan ~ The owner of the biggest image attracts the whole world. ~ When all who come have been safely settled, ~ The world will then be peaceful. ~ Melodious music and delicious food ~ Can only attract passers-by. ~ But the Way is, when put into one's mouth, tasteless, ~ When looked at, colorless, ~ When listened to, uninteresting, ~ And, when used, limitlessly bountiful.

[35c29т] Shi Fu Hwang ~ The Peace In The Tao ~ Lao Tze says, ~ When the king of men holds the great image, the whole world's people turn to rally round him. ~ When people turn to rally round him, and do not commit loss and harm, then the world shall become peaceful and secure. ~ He who takes delight in the Tao, and enjoys it, the true one will stay with him. ~ The Tao's teaching is as dry as a course of tasteless dish. ~ It cannot be seen, nor can't be heard. ~ However, it will never be exhausted in its application.

[35c30т] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ To him who holds to the Great Form all the world will go. ~ It will go and see no danger, but tranquillity, equality and community. ~ Music and dainties will make the passing stranger stop. ~ But Tao when uttered in words is so pure and void of flavour; ~ When one looks at it, one cannot see it; ~ When one listens to it, one cannot hear it. ~ However, when one uses it, it is inexhaustible.

[35c31т] Paul J. Lin ~ Hold on to the great image ~ And the whole world will follow. ~ Following without harm, in safety, peace, and comfort. ~ Music and viand will cause the traveler to stop. ~ But Tao spoken by mouth is flavorless and bland. ~ Looked at, it cannot be seen. ~ Listened to, it cannot be heard. ~ Used, it will never be exhausted.

[35c32т] Michael LaFargue ~ Grasp the Great Image and the world will come, ~ it will come and not be harmed - a great peace and evenness. ~ For music and cakes, passing strangers stop, ~ Tao flowing from the lips - flat. ~ No taste to it. ~ Look for it: you will not be satisfied looking; ~ listen for it: you will not be satisfied listening; ~ put it into practice: you will not be satisfied stopping.

[35c33т] Cheng Lin ~ He who abides by the great Simulacrum (Truth) finds the people of the whole world eager to follow him. ~ By following him they are rendered free from harm, and peace prevails. ~ Like music and baits, he attracts all passers-by. ~ The utterance of Truth is insipid. ~ It cannot be seen with the eyes; ~ it cannot be heard with the ears; ~ it cannot be exhausted from constant use.

[35c34т] Yi Wu ~ He who holds to the great image ~ Will be followed by the people of the world. ~ They will go unharmed, ~ In safety, calm, and peace. ~ Music and good food tempt passing guests to pause; ~ [But,] the Way that is tasted has no flavor, ~ Looked at, it cannot be seen, ~ Listened to, it cannot be heard, ~ Used, it cannot be exhausted.

[35c35т] Han Hiong Tan ~ When the ruler follows the way of Dao, ~ People will flock to him. ~ They become the beneficiaries and enjoy peace and harmony. ~ Beautiful music and sumptuous foods allure all passers-by. ~ They linger and then decide to stay. ~ How is Dao best described? ~ Dao is tasteless, invisible and inaudible, ~ But its use is inexhaustible.

[35c36т] Hua-Ching Ni ~ When the subtle Way of the universe is taught, people know where to go and what to learn, ~ because they know that they will not be harmed but will receive great peace. ~ The teacher of the universal Way is like one who gives real food to people. ~ He does not feed them colorful bait with the intention of catching them. ~ The subtle Way of the universe is flavorless, with nothing much to offer the mouth. ~ Neither does it offer much to be enjoyed by the eyes or entertain the ears, yet its usefulness is inexhaustible.

[35c37т] Chang Chung-yuan ~ When one maintains the great image in dealing with the world, ~ One deals with the world without harming it. ~ Instead, one makes the world serene, tranquil, and peaceful. ~ Music and delicacies may attract passersby to remain momentarily, ~ But the taste of Tao is plain and without flavor. ~ Look at it, nothing can be seen. ~ Listen to it, nothing can he heard. ~ Employ it, it cannot be depleted.

[35c38т] Henry Wei ~ Virtue of Benevolence ~ Ren Teh ~ Hold fast to the Great Form, ~ And wherever in the world you go, ~ You will meet with no harm, ~ But enjoy security, peace, and well-being. ~ Where there is music with good food, ~ The passers-by will pause and linger. ~ But Tao, on being set forth orally, ~ Is insipid and tasteless. ~ It is invisible when looked at, ~ And inaudible when listened to, ~ Yet its utility will never come to an end.

[35c39т] Ha Poong Kim ~ Holding fast to the great form, ~ Go anywhere under Heaven. ~ Wherever you go, nothing will harm you - ~ You will be safe and in peace. ~ Music and fine food ~ Make the passing stranger stop. ~ When Tao comes out from the mouth, ~ How flavorless it is! ~ You look at it, but it is invisible. ~ You listen to it, but it is inaudible. ~ You use it, but it is inexhaustible.

[35c40т] Tao Huang ~ Holding on to the great Symbol, ~ The whole world carries on. ~ On and on without doing harm. ~ Being happy at peace, ~ Enjoying greatly the music and food, ~ Travelers stop by. ~ When the Tao is spoken forth plainly ~ It has no flavor at all. ~ Look, but that is not sufficient for seeing. ~ Listen, but that is not sufficient for hearing. ~ Use it, but it is not exhausted.

[35c41т] Tang Zi-chang ~ He who holds fast to the superior model, the whole world may follow him without ado. ~ They follow him without harm, but with comfort, equality and prosperity. ~ Musical temptation and food's flavor can stop a traveler on the road. ~ When Dao is tasted by mouth, it is mild and without flavor. ~ When it is looked at, it cannot be entirely seen; ~ when it is listened to, it cannot be entirely heard; ~ and when it is taken, it cannot be eaten.

[35c42т] Wing-tsit Chan ~ Hold fast to the great form (Tao), ~ And all the world will come. ~ They come and will encounter no harm; ~ But enjoy comfort, peace, and health. ~ When there are music and dainties, ~ Passing strangers will stay. ~ But the words uttered by Tao, ~ How insipid and tasteless! ~ We look at it, it is imperceptible. ~ We listen to it, it is inaudible. ~ We use it, it is inexhaustible.

[36c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ If you wish to shrink it, ~ You must certainly stretch it. ~ If you wish to weaken it, ~ You must certainly strengthen it. ~ If you wish to desert it, ~ You must certainly work closely with it. ~ If you wish to snatch something from it, ~ You must certainly give something to it. ~ This is called the Subtle Light. ~ The submissive and weak conquer the strong. ~ Fish should not be taken out of the depths; ~ The state's sharp weapons should not be shown to the people.

[36c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ WHAT is in the end to be shrunken, ~ Begins by being first stretched out. ~ What is in the end to be weakened, ~ Begins by being first made strong. ~ What is in the end to be thrown down, ~ Begins by being first set on high. ~ What is in the end to be despoiled, ~ Begins by being first richly endowed. ~ Herein is the subtle wisdom of life: ~ The soft and weak overcomes the hard and strong. ~ Just as the fish must not leave the deeps, ~ So the ruler must not display his weapons.

[36c03т] D. C. Lau ~ If you would have a thing shrink, ~ You must first stretch it; ~ If you would have a thing weakened, ~ You must first strengthen it; ~ If you would have a thing laid aside, ~ You must first set it up; ~ If you would take from a thing, ~ You must first give to it. ~ This is called subtle discernment: ~ The submissive and weak will overcome the hard and strong. ~ The fish must not be allowed to leave the deep; ~ The instruments of power in a state must not be revealed to anyone.

[36c04т] R. L. Wing ~ In order to deplete it, ~ It must be thoroughly extended. ~ In order to weaken it, ~ It must be thoroughly strengthened. ~ In order to reject it, ~ It must be thoroughly promoted. ~ In order to take away from it, ~ It must be thoroughly endowed. ~ This is called a Subtle Insight. ~ The yielding can triumph over the inflexible; ~ The weak can triumph over the strong. ~ Fish should not be taken from deep waters; ~ Nor should organizations make obvious their advantages.

[36c05т] Ren Jiyu ~ In order to contract it, it is necessary to expand it for the time being. ~ In order to weaken it, it is necessary to strengthen it for the time being. ~ In order to destroy it, it is necessary to promote it for the time being. ~ In order to grasp it, it is necessary to give to it for the time being. ~ This is called profound insight (and also the reason why) the soft and weak overcome the hard and strong. ~ (Just like) fish cannot be taken away from deep water, ~ Effective weapons of the state cannot be easily displayed to others.

[36c06т] Gia-fu Feng ~ That which shrinks ~ Must first expand. ~ That which fails ~ Must first be strong. ~ That which is cast down ~ Must first be raised. ~ Before receiving ~ There must be giving. ~ This is called perception of the nature of things. ~ Soft and weak overcome hard and strong. ~ Fish cannot leave deep waters, ~ And a country's weapons should not be displayed.

[36c07т] Lok Sang Ho ~ In order to fold, one must first unfold; ~ In order to weaken, one must first strengthen; ~ In order to banish, one must first establish; ~ In order to deprive, one must first provide. ~ The following is called refined understanding: ~ That the weak will outperform the strong. ~ Just as fish should stay inside their deep pools. ~ So the best gadgets and tools of a country should not be displayed in front of others.

[36c08т] Xiaolin Yang ~ If it wants to shrink something, it always first expands it. ~ If it wants to weaken something, it always first strengthens it. ~ If it wants to get rid of something, it always first promotes it. ~ If it wants to take something, it always first gives it away. ~ These are delicate wisdoms, which is that the weak overcome the strong. ~ Big fish cannot leave deep water; ~ National security secrets cannot be shown to outsiders.

[36c09т] Walter Gorn Old, THE COVERT AGREEMENT ~ When Nature is about to withhold a thing it is first sure to increase it. ~ When about to weaken it is first sure to strengthen. ~ When about to debase it is certain first to exalt. ~ When about to deprive it is first sure to give. ~ This is what I call the covert agreement. ~ The soft and the weak overcome the hard and the strong. ~ As a fish out of water is in danger, so a nation is in peril when its armaments are revealed to the people.

[36c10т] James Legge ~ When one is about to take an inspiration, he is sure to make a (previous) expiration; ~ when he is going to weaken another, he will first strengthen him; ~ when he is going to overthrow another, he will first have raised him up; ~ when he is going to despoil another, he will first have made gifts to him: ~ - this is called 'Hiding the light (of his procedure).' ~ The soft overcomes the hard; ~ and the weak the strong. ~ Fishes should not be taken from the deep; ~ instruments for the profit of a state should not be shown to the people.

[36c11т] David Hinton ~ To gather ~ you must scatter. ~ To weaken ~ you must strengthen. ~ To abandon ~ you must foster. ~ To take ~ you must give. ~ This is called dusky enlightenment. ~ Soft and weak overcome hard and strong. ~ Fish should be kept in their watery depths: ~ a nation's honed instruments of power should be kept well-hidden from the people.

[36c12т] Chichung Huang ~ That which shall contract ~ Must have long expanded; ~ That which shall weaken ~ Must have long strengthened; ~ That which shall depart ~ Must have long partaken; ~ That which shall take ~ Must have long given. ~ This is called subtle insight. ~ Softness and weakness overcome strength: ~ Fish cannot leap out of deep water; ~ So cannot the state's sharp weapons ~ Be displayed to men.

[36c13т] Ellen M. Chen ~ What is to be reduced, ~ Must first be expanded. ~ What is to be weakened, ~

Must first be made strong (ch'iang). ~ What is to be abolished, ~ Must first be established. ~ What is to be taken away, ~ Must first be given. ~ This is called the subtle illumination (wei ming). ~ The soft and weak overcome the hard and strong. ~ Fish must not leave the stream. ~ Sharp weapons (ch'i) of a state, ~ Must not be displayed.

[36c14т] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ [Machination is often played out with following preemptive measures:] ~ In order to dwindle [an enemy], a predator would induce the targeted victim to bloat up his illusory assessment of himself; ~ In order to weaken [an enemy], a wrecker would make it utterly convincing that [he is too feeble] to confront him; ~ In order to eliminate [a rival], a schemer would make him believe that [the schemer's work would enhance] his rival's prosperity; ~ In order to take [power or possession away from someone], a conspirator would use favors and gifts to win the trust of his targeted victim [first to win his confidence]; ~ All of the above exemplifies what I called "the subtle and veiled brilliance" [which explains why the weak ones will eventually prevail over the strong ones]. ~ People who are pliable (flexible) will [ultimately] excel people who are rigid (obstinate); ~ A person who [regards himself] weaker [than he actually is] will [eventually] prevail over a person who [considers himself] stronger [than he truly is]; ~ Fish should not surface from the depth of the abyss [for the sake of safekeeping]; ~ Efficient instruments (weaponry) of a country should not be shown to [unreasonable] people.

[36c15т] Tien Cong Tran ~ In order to shrink it, it must first be stretched out. ~ In order to weaken it, it must first be made strong. ~ In order to throw down it, it must first be set on high. ~ In order to obtain it, it must first be given. ~ That is subtle and wise. ~ The soft overcomes the hard. ~ The weak overcomes the strong. ~ The fish cannot leave the deep. ~ The useful instruments of the nation must not be displayed to the people.

[36c16т] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ In order to reduce it, first expand it. ~ In order to weaken it, first strengthen it. ~ In order to abolish it, first establish it. ~ In order to take it, first give it. ~ This is called subtle wisdom. ~ Flexibility and compromise win out over stiffness and aggressiveness. ~ Fish cannot leave water. ~ Never show the country's best weapons to the enemy.

[36c17т] Arthur Waley ~ What is in the end to be shrunk ~ Must first be stretched. ~ Whatever is to be weakened ~ Must begin by being made strong. ~ What is to be overthrown ~ Must begin by being set up. ~ He who would be a taker ~ Must begin as a giver. ~ This is called 'dimming' one's light. ~ It is thus that the soft overcomes the hard ~ And the weak, the strong. ~ 'It is best to leave the fish down in his pool; ~ Best to leave the State's sharpest weapons where none can see them.'

[36c18т] Richard John Lynn ~ If you would like to gather him in, you must resolve yourself to let him aggrandize himself. ~ If you would like to weaken him, you must resolve yourself to let him grow strong. ~ If you would like to nullify him, you must resolve yourself to let him flourish. ~ If you would like to take him, you must resolve yourself to let him have his way. ~ Such an approach is called subtle and perspicacious. ~ Softness and pliancy conquer hardness and forcefulness. ~ Fish must not be allowed to escape to the depths. ~ The sharp instruments of the state may not be disclosed to the people.

[36c19т] Lin Yutang ~ THE RHYTHM OF LIFE ~ He who is to be made to dwindle (in power) ~ Must first be caused to expand. ~ He who is to be weakened ~ Must first be made strong. ~ He who is to be laid low ~ Must first be exalted to power. ~ He who is to be taken away from ~ Must first be given. ~ This is the Subtle Light. ~ Gentleness overcomes strength: ~ Fish should be left in the deep pool, ~ And sharp weapons of the state should be left ~ Where none can see them.

[36c20т] Victor H. Mair ~ When you wish to contract something, ~ you must momentarily expand it; ~ When you wish to weaken something, ~ you must momentarily strengthen it; ~ When you wish to reject something, ~ you must momentarily join with it; ~ When you wish to seize something, ~ you must momentarily give it up. ~ This is called "subtle insight." ~ The soft and weak conquer the strong. ~ Fish cannot be removed from the watery depths; ~ The profitable instruments of state cannot be shown to the people.

[36c21т] Tolbert McCarroll ~ That which is to be shrunk must first be stretched out. ~ That which is to be weakened must first be strengthened. ~ That which is to be cast down must first be raised up. ~ That which is to be taken must first be given. ~ There is wisdom in dimming your light. ~ For the soft and gentle will overcome the hard and powerful. ~ Fish are best left in deep waters. ~ And, weapons are best kept out of sight.

[36c22т] David H. Li ~ Before contracting [an object], let it expand; ~ Before weakening [an object], let it solidify; ~ Before abandoning [an object], let it flourish; ~ Before seizing [an object], let it aggregate. ~ This is discernment at its micro best. ~ Tenderness overcomes bruteness. ~ Fish cannot survive away from water. ~ A state does not boast her weaponry before the people.

[36c23т] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ What is ultimately to be compressed must first be expanded. ~ What is ultimately to be weakened must first be strengthened. ~ What is ultimately to be discarded must first be promoted. ~ What is ultimately to be taken away must first be given. ~ This is the subtle light of wisdom. ~ The soft overcomes the hard. ~ The weak overcomes the strong. ~ The fish should never leave the water. ~ The formed should never leave the formless.

[36c24т] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ In order to reduce something, it must first be expanded. ~ In order to weaken something, it must first be strengthened. ~ In order to drop something, it must first be lifted. ~ "In order to take, a man must first give." ~ This is what is called the wisdom of light. ~ The soft and weak can overcome the hard and strong. ~ Just as the fish should not leave the depths, ~ The sharp instruments of control should not leave their hiding-place.

[36c25т] Man-Ho Kwok ~ What is going to be diminished ~ Must first be allowed to inflate. ~ Whatever you want to weaken ~ Must first be convinced of its strength. ~ What you want to overcome ~ You must first of all submit to ... ~ What you want to take over ~ You must first of all give to - ~ This is called discerning. ~ You see, what is yielding and weak ~ Overcomes what is hard and strong: ~ (And just as a fish can't be seen when he stays down in the deep don't show your power to anyone).

[36c26т] Gu Zhengkun ~ If you want a thing to contract, ~ You should stretch it first; ~ If you want a thing weakened, ~ You should strengthen it first; ~ If you want a thing gotten rid of, ~ You should promote it first; ~ If you want a thing taken away, ~ You should give to it first. ~ These are called subtle wisdom. ~ The supple and weak overcomes the rigid and strong. ~ Fish should not be allowed to leave the deep water; ~ The instruments of power of a state ~ Should not be shown to the public.

[36c27т] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ To gather things, one must first disseminate them. ~ To weaken things, one must first strengthen them. ~ To abolish things, one must first prevail upon them. ~ To seize things, one must first grant them. ~ That is what 'profound understanding' means. ~ The soft will overcome the hard. ~ The weak will overcome the strong. ~ The fish shall not leave deep waters. ~ The weapons of a country should not be displayed in public.

[36c28т] Liu Qixuan ~ To compress something, one must first prop it. ~ To weaken something, one must first strengthen it. ~ To stop something, one must first advocate it. ~ To take something, one must first give it. ~ Subtle wisdom depends on the Way ~ In enabling the weak to defeat the strong killers. ~ A fish cannot go out of deep water for its existence. ~ A nation's effective system should be kept unknown.

[36c29т] Shi Fu Hwang ~ The Doctrine of Reversion ~ Lao Tze says, ~ A man who wants his opponent to become a greedy man should allow him the chance to expand his benefit first. ~ He who wants to weaken his competitor should let his ambitions grow first. ~ He who wants to demolish his adversary should let him achieve first. ~ He who wants to plunder his enemy should let him have the storage place first. ~ These are subtle but effective stratagems. ~ The feeble will overcome the strong. ~ But fishes shouldn't leave the deep; a state's strategy shouldn't be shown to any person who is not concerned with it.

[36c30т] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ In order to contract a thing, one should surely expand it first. ~ In order to weaken, one will surely strengthen first. ~ In order to overthrow, one will surely exalt first. ~ 'In order to take, one will surely give first.' ~ This is called subtle wisdom. ~ The soft and weak can overcome the hard and strong. ~ As the fish should not leave the deep ~ So should the sharp implements of a nation not be shown to anyone.

[36c31т] Paul J. * * *

[36c92т] А. А. Маслов ~ Желая что-то сжать, сначала растяни его. ~ Желая что-то ослабить, сначала усиль его. ~ Желая что-то уничтожить, позволь этому сначала расцвести. ~ Желая что-то отнять, сначала дай это. ~ Это и зовётся утончённо-искусным просветлением. ~ Мягкое и слабое одолевают твёрдое и сильное. ~ Рыба не может покинуть глубину. ~ Равно и государству нельзя показывать инструменты управления народу.

[36c96т] Д. П. [37c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ The Tao is constantly nameless. ~ Were marquises and kings able to maintain it, ~ The ten thousand things would transform on their own. ~ Having transformed, were their desires to become active, ~ I would subdue them with the nameless simplicity. ~ Having subdued them with the nameless simplicity, ~ I would not disgrace them. ~ By not being disgraced, they will be tranquil. ~ And Heaven and Earth will of themselves be correct and right.

[37c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ TAO never makes any ado, ~ And yet it does everything. ~ If a ruler can cling to it, ~ All things will grow of themselves. ~ When they have grown and tend to make a stir, ~ It is time to keep them in their place by the aid of the nameless Primal Simplicity, ~ Which alone can curb the desires of men. ~ When the desires of men are curbed, there will be peace, ~ And the world will settle down of its own accord.

[37c03т] D. C. Lau ~ The way never acts yet nothing is left undone. ~ Should lords and princes be able to hold fast to it, ~ The myriad creatures will be transformed of their own accord. ~ After they are transformed, should desire raise its head, ~ I shall press it down with the weight of the nameless uncarved block. ~ The nameless uncarved block ~ Is but freedom from desire, ~ And if I cease to desire and remain still, ~ The empire will be at peace of its own accord.

[37c04т] R. L. Wing ~ The Tao never acts, And yet is never inactive. ~ If leaders can hold on to it, ~ All Things will be naturally influenced. ~ Influenced and yet desiring to act, ~ I would calm them with Nameless Simplicity. ~ Nameless Simplicity is likewise without desire; ~ And without desire there is harmony. ~ The world will then be naturally stabilized.

[37c05т] Ren Jiyu ~ Tao invariably does nothing, ~ And yet there is nothing left undone. ~ If kings and princes can preserve it, ~ All things will submit to them spontaneously. ~ (After their) submission if any desires occur, ~ I should subdue them with the nameless simplicity. ~ The nameless simplicity is nothing but eradication of desires. ~ Eradication of desires will lead to quietude, ~ Thus the world will naturally find its equilibrium.

[37c06т] Gia-fu Feng ~ Tao abides in non-action, ~ Yet nothing is left undone. ~ If kings and lords observed this, ~ The ten thousand things would develop naturally. ~ If they still desired to act, ~ They would return to the simplicity of formless substance. ~ Without form there is no desire. ~ Without desire there is tranquillity. ~ And in this way all things would be at peace.

[37c07т] Lok Sang Ho ~ The Dao neither contrives to do something ~ nor abstains from doing anything. ~ If only the kings and barons would follow the Dao, ~ all the living things would be transformed. ~ If the transformed living things ~ should contrive to do anything, ~ I would restrain them with the natural simplicity of the Unnamed. ~ I would have them freed from desires. ~ Freedom from desires is achieved by stilling the mind. ~ Everything under heaven will then fall back into their natural places.

[37c08т] Xiaolin Yang ~ The DAO always practices WUWEI, but there is nothing that it cannot do. ~ If the kings can use the DAO, people will take care of themselves. ~ When people get freedom, they begin to have desires; ~ I will then use this nameless and simple DAO to guide them. ~ This nameless and simple DAO will make them have no desires. ~ Without desires, they will be peaceful, and the country will keep stability by itself.

[37c09т] Walter Gorn Old, THE ART OF GOVERNMENT ~ Tao remains quiescent, and yet leaves nothing undone. ~ If a ruler or a king could hold it, all things would of their own accord assume the desired shape. ~ If in the process of transformation desire should arise, I would check it by the ineffable simplicity. ~ The ineffable simplicity would bring about an absence of desire, and rest would come back again. ~ Thus the world would regenerate itself.

[37c10т] James Legge ~ The Tao in its regular course does nothing (for the sake of doing it), and so there is nothing which it does not do. ~ If princes and kings were able to maintain it, all things would of themselves be transformed by them. ~ If this transformation became to me an object of desire, I would express the desire by the nameless simplicity. ~ Simplicity without a name ~ Is free from all external aim. ~ With no desire, at rest and still, ~ All things go right as of their will.

[37c11т] David Hinton ~ Way is perennially doing nothing so there's nothing it doesn't do. ~ When lords and emperors abide by this ~ the ten thousand things follow change of themselves. ~ Desire drives change, ~ but I've stilled it with uncarved nameless simplicity. ~ Uncarved nameless simplicity ~ is the perfect absence of desire, ~ and the absence of desire means repose: ~ all beneath heaven at rest of itself.

[37c12т] Chichung Huang ~ The Tao is constant and nameless. ~ If marquises and kings can adhere to it, ~ The ten thousand things will live and grow spontaneously. ~ While they live and grow spontaneously, ~ If lusts arise, ~ I shall fill them with the nameless unhewn log. ~ Being filled with the nameless unhewn log, ~ They shall become lustless. ~ Lustlessness leads to stillness; ~ Heaven and earth shall turn aright spontaneously.

[37c13т] Ellen M. Chen ~ Tao everlasting (ch'ang) does not act (wu wei), ~ And yet nothing is not done (erh wu pu wei). ~ If kings and barons can abide by (shou) it, ~ The ten thousand things will transform by themselves (tzu hua). ~ If in transforming desire (yü) is aroused, ~ I shall suppress it by the nameless uncarved wood (p'u). ~ With the nameless uncarved wood, ~ There shall be no desire (wu yü). ~ Without desire there is thus quietude (ching). ~ The world shall be self-ordered (tzu ting).

[37c14т] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ Tao does not intervene [with the natural course of events], ~ Still its predominance is on all phases of every thing (events); ~ If kings and lords can hold on to natural courses, everything [on Earth] will go his way spontaneously; ~ However, if kings and lords, after they have gained the subordination [of the world], would entertain the idea of tampering with Tao in order to satisfy their improper demand], I must warn them about the power of the inexplicable Simplicity (Tao); ~ Simplicity (Tao), though difficult to describe, is learned through the elimination of [subjective and selfish] desires; ~ The elimination of [subjective and selfish] desires leads to Serenity; ~ A [serene] world shall embark on the course of righteousness (peace and nobility).

[37c15т] Tien Cong Tran ~ The Way does not do, but does do (does not do nothing). ~ If kings and princes can cling to it, all things will change by themselves. ~ When they change and tend to stir, it is time to keep them in their place by the aid of the nameless uncarved. ~ It is the uncarved that curbs the desires. ~ Without desires, there will be stillness; the world will be in peace by itself.

[37c16т] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ Tao normally does not interfere, yet it plays a role everywhere. ~ If the kings and nobles can follow it, everything would become submissive. ~ If rebellion is attempted, I will use Tao's extreme honesty to suppress it. ~ Using Tao's extreme honesty to suppress it, people would have no ambition. ~ With no ambition, people would be peaceful. ~ Thus, the world would go back to normal.

[37c17т] Arthur Waley ~ Tao never does; ~ Yet through it all things are done. ~ If the barons and kings would but possess themselves of it, ~ The ten thousand creatures would at once be transformed. ~ And if having been transformed they should desire to act, ~ We must restrain them by the blankness of the Unnamed. ~ The blankness of the Unnamed ~ Brings dispassion; ~ To be dispassionate is to be still. ~ And so, of itself, the whole empire will be at rest.

[37c18т] Richard John Lynn ~ The Dao in its constancy engages in no conscious action, ~ Yet nothing remains undone. ~ If any lord or prince could hold on to it, the myriad folk would undergo moral transformation spontaneously. ~ Once nurtured, should desire arise, I would press down on it with the nameless uncarved block. ~ With the nameless uncarved block, they too would stay free of desire. ~ Achieving tranquillity by keeping them free of desire, all under Heaven would govern themselves.

[37c19т] Lin Yutang ~ WORLD PEACE ~ The Tao never does, ~ Yet through it everything is done, ~ If princes and dukes can keep the Tao, ~ The world will of its own accord be reformed. ~ When reformed and rising to action, ~ Let it be restrained by the Nameless pristine simplicity. ~ The Nameless pristine simplicity ~ Is stripped of desire (for contention). ~ By stripping of desire quiescence is achieved, ~ And the world arrives at peace of its own accord.

[37c20т] Victor H. Mair ~ The Way is eternally nameless. ~ If feudal lords and kings preserve it, ~ The myriad creatures will be transformed by themselves. ~ After transformation, if they wish to rise up, ~ I shall restrain them with the nameless unhewn log. ~ By restraining them with the nameless unhewn log, ~ They will not feel disgraced; ~ Not feeling disgraced, ~ They will be still, ~ Whereupon heaven and earth will be made right by themselves.

[37c21т] Tolbert McCarroll ~ The Tao never strives, ~ yet nothing is left undone. ~ If leaders were able to adhere to it the ten thousand things would develop of their own accord. ~ If after they have developed ~ they experience desires to strive, ~ they can bury those desires under the nameless Uncarved Block. ~ The nameless Uncarved Block can protect against desire. ~ When desires are restrained there will be peace, ~ and then all under heaven will be at rest.

[37c22т] David H. Li ~ Direction is laissez-faire at all times; it is all-permeating. ~ Were a Duke or a Prince to govern with Direction, ~ Myriad matters would develop on own volition. ~ As self-development degenerates into avarice in complexity, ~ I suppress it with Direction's simplicity. ~ Suppressing with Direction's simplicity, ~ avarice disappears. ~ Without avarice, serenity visits with ease; ~ The world self-governs in peace.

[37c23т] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ The Tao does nothing, ~ Yet it leaves nothing undone. ~ If the leaders of the world abide by it, ~ All beings of their own accord will transform themselves. ~ If in the course of self-transformation discordant desires arise, ~ Calm them with the unnameable simplicity of the Tao. ~ If calmed with the nameless simplicity of the Tao, ~ Discordant desires of their own accord will disappear. ~ If discordant desires disappear and quietude is restored, ~ The world of its own accord will order itself.

[37c24т] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ Tao is never active, but there is nothing it does not do. ~ If princes and kings could hold onto it, all things would develop by themselves. ~ When they develop, the desire in them would emerge, ~ I would restrain them with simplicity, ~ So simple that it does not even have a name, ~ In order to liberate them from desire. ~ Free of desire, they would be soaked in tranquillity, ~ And thus the world would attain purity and virtue. ~ Simplicity, however unimportant it may be, ~ Cannot be subdued even by the entire world. ~ If princes and kings could hold onto it, ~ Everything in the world, of its own accord, would pay homage. ~ Heaven and earth would unite to sprinkle dew, sweeter than honey, on the ground. ~ Without anyone ordering them to do so, people would attain harmony by themselves. ~ With the mission accomplished and the objectives achieved, ~ People would see themselves as following in nature's footsteps.

[37c25т] Man-Ho Kwok ~ The Tao goes on forever wu-wei - doing nothing ~ And yet everything gets done. ~ How? ~ It does it by being, ~ And by being everything it does. ~ If people and rulers go by this then every living thing will be well. ~ And if parts still want to separate the true leader will use the centrifugal weight of this original unnameable Oneness. ~ It is simple: ~ If no one wants anything for themselves then there can be peace and all things will know peace the way music ends in peace.

[37c26t] Gu Zhengkun ~ The Tao always remains inactive, ~ Yet it acts upon everything in the world. ~ If lords and kings can keep it, ~ All creatures will grow and develop naturally. ~ When desires are kindled in the growth and development, ~ I can suppress them with the nameless Simplicity of the Tao. ~ Once I do so ~ Desires will be repressed. ~ Once desires are repressed, ~ The whole world will be naturally at peace.

[37c27t] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ The Tao always does nothing but nothing remains undone. ~ If the ruler observes this the myriad creatures will act of their own accord. ~ After their metamorphosis, desire will arise. ~ It will press them down with the power of the uncarved block, the Tao. ~ The nameless uncarved block is free from desire. ~ Absence of desire will lead to stillness and the world under Heaven will be harmonized by itself.

[37c28t] Liu Qixuan ~ The eternal Way serves everything by doing nothing. ~ If the kings can keep the model, ~ A natural order will appear in the world. ~ Should something undesirable grow after that, ~ Prevent it with the nameless simplicity. ~ By saying "the nameless simplicity," ~ I mean the reduction of vain desires. ~ Vain desires can be reduced by serenity of mind, ~ And the world can then be back in the Way.

[37c29t] Shi Fu Hwang ~ The World In Peace ~ Lao Tze says, ~ The Tao's accomplishment is constantly made through acting without the intent to control fate, yet leaving nothing undone. ~ If the king of men insists on practicing the Tao, all existence will transform themselves in their natural courses. ~ When they transform and go out of their way, the king of men should guide them back to a pristine simplicity which was unknown to the world before. ~ Namely, the pristine simplicity of being desireless. ~ To be desireless is cultivated by being still. ~ It is by this stillness that this world is settled down in peace naturally.

[37c30t] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ Tao is ever inactive, and yet there is nothing that it does not do. ~ If princes and kings could keep to it, all things would of themselves become developed. ~ When they are developed, desire would stir in them; ~ I would restrain them by the nameless Simplicity, ~ In order to make them free from desire. ~ Free from desire, they would be at rest; ~ And the world would of itself become rectified. ~ However insignificant Simplicity seems, the whole world cannot make it submissive. ~ If princes and kings could keep to it, ~ All things in the world would of themselves pay homage. ~ Heaven and earth would unite to send down sweet dew. ~ The people with no one to command them would of themselves become harmonious. ~ When merits are accomplished and affairs completed, ~ The people would speak of themselves as following nature.

[37c31t] Paul J. Lin ~ Tao is always inactive. ~ But it leaves nothing undone. ~ If dukes and kings can keep it, ~ Then all things will be naturally transformed. ~ If transformation raises desires, ~ I would suppress them with nameless simplicity. ~ Nameless simplicity means being without desires. ~ Being without desires and with tranquility, ~ The world will keep peace by itself.

[37c32t] Michael LaFargue ~ Tao invariably Does Nothing, ~ and nothing remains not done. ~ If the princes and kings can watch over it, ~ the thousands of things will change by themselves. ~ If they change, and become desirous and active, ~ I will restrain them with the Nameless One's Simplicity. ~ Restraining them with the Nameless One's Simplicity will cause them no disgrace. ~ Not being disgraced, they will be Still. ~ The world will order itself.

[37c33t] Cheng Lin ~ Truth abides by inaction, and yet nothing is left undone. ~ If the rulers abide by Truth, all animate creation will of their own accord come under their influence. ~ When they of their own accord come under their influence, and if selfish desires arise, I would tranquillize them with the nameless simplicity (Truth). ~ Once tranquillized by the nameless simplicity, they will again be free from selfish desires. ~ Thus free from selfish desires, they will be calm, and the world will of its own accord become peaceful.

[37c34t] Yi Wu ~ The Way is constantly in non-action, ~ But it leaves nothing undone. ~ If dukes and kings can keep to it, ~ All things will be transformed by themselves. ~ But, in transforming, desires arise. ~ I will subdue them by the nameless simplicity; ~ With nameless simplicity, ~ There will be no desires. ~ Being desireless is to be tranquil. ~ All the world will become calm by itself.

[37c35t] Han Hiong Tan ~ Dao always sticks to non-action, yet everything develops spontaneously. ~ If the rulers could follow the way of Dao, ~ Everything under the sun will function properly. ~ If desire begins to creep in during the developing process, ~ It should be constrained by the "nameless simplicity". ~ The "nameless simplicity" has no designs. ~ Without designs, it will not create any disturbance. ~ Hence, peace will again prevail in the world.

[37c36t] Hua-Ching Ni ~ The subtle essence of the universe is always unoccupied, ~ yet it leaves nothing undone. ~ If the people of the world were wise enough to plant the root of their lives deep within the Subtle Origin, ~ then the worldly affairs of life would coherently follow their own natural course, ~ and harmony would abound of its own accord. ~ When confusion takes place in one's surroundings, ~ it can be dissolved with the power of undisturbable Simplicity. ~ When life is ruled by undisturbable Simplicity, ~ desire and passion naturally fall away and reveal people's true, original nature. ~ Then the peaceful order of the universe prevails and unity manifests again of its own accord.

[37c37t] Chang Chung-yuan ~ Tao is real and free from action, yet nothing is not acted upon. ~ If rulers abide with it, all things transmute by themselves. ~ If, in the process of transmutation, intention emerges, it must be overcome by the original non-differentiation of the nameless. ~ To experience the original non-differentiation of the nameless, one should also be free from intending to have no-intention. ~ To be free from intending to have no-intention is to be quiescent. ~ Thereby, the world is naturally led to tranquillity.

[37c38t] Henry Wei ~ The Way of Government ~ Wei Cheng ~ Tao is eternal and devoid of action, ~ Yet there is nothing it does not do. ~ If kings and nobles can preserve it intact, ~ The ten thousand things will reform of themselves. ~ If after the reform they desire to be active, ~ I shall calm them with the Nameless Simplicity (p'u), ~ The Nameless Simplicity will induce desirelessness, ~ Desirelessness will tend to quiescence, ~ And the world will set itself on the right course.

[37c39t] Ha Poong Kim ~ Tao never does, ~ Yet leaves nothing undone. ~ If kings and princes hold fast to this, ~ The ten thousand things will transform of themselves. ~ Should desires arise after transformation, ~ I shall calm them with the nameless, uncarved block. ~ The nameless, uncarved block ~ Brings desirelessness. ~ With desirelessness comes stillness, ~ And all under Heaven will be at peace by itself.

[37c40t] Tao Huang ~ Tao is eternally nameless. ~ If lords and rulers would abide by it, ~ All things would evolve of themselves. ~ What evolves desires to act. ~ I, then, suffuse this with nameless simplicity. ~ Suffusing with nameless simplicity is eliminating humiliation. ~ Without humiliation, peace arises. ~ Heaven and earth regulate themselves.

[37c41t] Tang Zi-chang ~ The eternity of Dao contrives nothing, yet it provides everything. ~ If rulers can cling to it - Dao, ~ All Things will transform (change) themselves. ~ Any artificial desire occurring during the transformation, shall be suppressed by the nameless "Purity" (Pure Matter). ~ Nameless "Purity" (Pure Matter) will do away with artificial desires. ~ When artificial desires have been done away with, all peoples will be at peace and the world order will be established automatically.

[37c42t] Wing-tsit Chan ~ Tao invariably takes no action, and yet there is nothing left undone. ~ If kings and barons can keep it, all things will transform spontaneously. ~ If, after transformation, they should desire to be active, ~ I would restrain them with simplicity, which has no name. ~ Simplicity, which has no name, is free of desires. ~ Being free of desires, it is tranquil. ~ And the world will be at peace of its own accord.

[37c98t] Б. Б. Виноградский ~ Постоянство Пути - в отсутствии осуществления. ~ В результате отсутствует не-осуществленное. ~ Если удельные князья и правители способны придерживаться этого, тогда мириады сущностей сами стремятся к преобразованиям. ~ Если в преобразованиях желают действовать, то сущность моя удержит их посредством первозданной целостности отсутствия имен. ~ Состояние первозданной целостности отсутствия имен также ориентирует на отсутствие стремлений. ~ Когда состояние отсутствия стремлений осуществляется посредством покоя, тогда выправление Поднебесной будет происходить само собой.

[38c01t] Robert G. Henricks ~ The highest virtue is not virtuous; therefore it truly has virtue. ~ The lowest virtue never loses sight of its virtue; therefore it has no true virtue. ~ The highest virtue takes no action, yet it has no reason for acting this way; ~ The highest humanity takes action, yet it has no reason for acting this way; ~ The highest righteousness takes action, and it has its reasons for acting this way; ~ The highest propriety takes action, and when no one responds to it, then it angrily rolls up its sleeves and forces people to comply. ~ Therefore, when the Way is lost, only then do we have virtue; ~ When virtue is lost, only then do we have humanity; ~ When humanity is lost, only then do we have righteousness; ~ And when righteousness is lost, only then do we have propriety. ~ As for propriety, it's but the thin edge of loyalty and sincerity, and the beginning of disorder. ~ And foreknowledge is but the flower of the Way, and the beginning of stupidity. ~ Therefore the Great Man ~ Dwells in the thick and doesn't dwell in the thin; ~ Dwells in the fruit and doesn't dwell in the flower. ~ Therefore, he rejects that and takes this.

[38c02t] John C. H. Wu ~ HIGH Virtue is non-virtuous; ~ Therefore it has Virtue. ~ Low Virtue never frees itself from virtuousness; ~ Therefore it has no Virtue. ~ High Virtue makes no fuss and has no private ends to serve: ~ Low Virtue not only fusses but has private ends to serve. ~ High humanity fusses but has no private ends to serve: ~ High morality not only fusses but has private ends to serve. ~ High ceremony fusses but finds no response; ~ Then it tries to enforce itself with rolled-up sleeves. ~ Failing Tao, man resorts to Virtue. ~ Failing Virtue, man resorts to humanity. ~ Failing humanity, man resorts to morality. ~ Failing morality, man resorts to ceremony. ~ Now, ceremony is the merest husk of faith and loyalty; ~ It is the beginning of all confusion and disorder. ~ As to foreknowledge, it is only the flower of Tao, ~ And the beginning of folly. ~ Therefore, the full-grown man sets his heart upon the substance rather than the husk; ~ Upon the fruit rather than the flower. ~ Truly, he prefers what is within to what is without.

one responds rolls up his sleeves and resorts to persuasion by force. ~ Hence when the way was lost there was virtue; ~ When virtue was lost there was benevolence; ~ When benevolence was lost there was rectitude; ~ When rectitude was lost there were the rites. ~ The rites are the wearing thin of loyalty and good faith ~ And the beginning of disorder; ~ Foreknowledge is the flowery embellishment of the way ~ And the beginning of folly. ~ Hence the man of large mind abides in the thick not in the thin, in the fruit not in the flower. ~ Therefore he discards the one and takes the other.

[38c05t] Ren Jiyu ~ The superior virtue does not show itself in formal virtue, ~ In this way it really possesses virtue. ~ The inferior virtue rigidly sticks to formal virtue, ~ In this way it loses virtue. ~ The superior virtue takes no action to show itself, and need not do so purposely. ~ The inferior virtue takes action to show itself, and does so purposely. ~ The superior benevolence takes action to show itself, and does not do so on purpose. ~ The superior righteousness takes action to show itself, and does so on purpose. ~ The superior propriety takes action to show itself, ~ And when it gets no response, it will stretch its arms and retaliate. ~ Therefore, only when Tao is lost does De arise, ~ Only when De is lost does benevolence arise, ~ Only when benevolence is lost does righteousness arise, ~ Only when righteousness is lost does propriety arise. ~ The thing that is called propriety is really the want of loyalty and faithfulness and the beginning of disorder. ~ The thing that is called foresight is really the ornament of Tao and the beginning of ignorance. ~ For this reason the great man dwells in the thick and keeps away from the thin, ~ He dwells in plainness and keeps away from the ornament. ~ Therefore he rejects the latter and accepts the former.

[38c07t] Lok Sang Ho ~ The refined virtuous never attempts to be virtuous. ~ For this reason they are truly virtuous. ~ The unrefined virtuous always adheres to what is virtuous. ~ For this reason they are not really virtuous. ~ The refined virtuous will not contrive to do anything ~ and do not act for gain. ~ The unrefined virtuous contrives to act ~ and does so for gain. ~ The refined kindly man lives a kindly life not for benefit. ~ The refined fair man acts fairly and does so for benefit. ~ The refined gentlemanly person acts gentlemanly ~ and expects to be so treated. ~ If he is not treated the way he expects, ~ he would push away and thrust aside his counterpart. ~ The man who has lost the Dao ~ finds refuge in being virtuous. ~ The man who has lost the virtuous way of life ~ finds refuge in being kindly. ~ The man who has lost the kindly way of life ~ finds refuge in being fair. ~ The man who has lost the fair way of life ~ finds refuge in being gentlemanly. ~ Ceremony and gentlemanly behavior is the result of the thinness of faith and trust, and is the origin of many ills. ~ Learning to tell what is "virtuous" and "fair" ~ is merely the showy flower(not the fruit) of the Dao. ~ It could be the beginning of folly. ~ The fully grown person chooses a life that offers substance and satisfaction, ~ not one that is thin and superficial. ~ He knows what he opts for and what he gives up.

[38c08t] Xiaolin Yang ~ The people who have high DE do not purposely show the DE, but ultimately have the DE. ~ The people who have low DE are always afraid of not showing the DE, but ultimately lose the DE. ~ The people who have high DE practice WUWEI, but ultimately get everything done. ~ The people who have low DE do things purposely, but ultimately fail in many things. ~ The kind people do not do things purposely, but get everything done well. ~ The highly righteous people do things purposely, but ultimately fail in many things. ~ The people who follow courtesy and orders do everything purposely, but when no one follows them, they rudely force people to do so. ~ Therefore, when the DAO is lost, charity appears; ~ When charity is lost, righteousness appears; ~ When righteousness is lost, courtesy and order appear. ~ Courtesy and order have little loyalty and faith, and they are the source of chaos. ~ Therefore, they are the end of the DAO and the beginning of a dark age. ~ Noble men always stay sturdy, not shallow; solid, not flimsy. ~ So one should keep the former and get rid of the latter.

[38c09t] Walter Gorn Old, OF VIRTUE ~ The superior virtue is not recognised as such, and it is therefore the very essence of virtue. ~ The inferior virtue has the distinction of virtue, and therefore it lacks the essence. ~ The superior virtue is spontaneous, and makes no claim to merit. ~ The inferior virtue is designing, and lays claim to recognition. ~ The higher benevolence acts without pretension to merit. ~ The inferior justice acts, and also makes pretensions. ~ The inferior expediency is designing, and therefore no one honours it. ~ Therefore does it bare its arm and assert itself by force. ~ Thus it transpires that when virtue is lost, benevolence takes its place. ~ When benevolence is lost, justice ensues. ~ When justice is lost, then expediency follows. ~ But expediency is the mere shadow of what is right and true, and is portentous of confusion. ~ Superficial virtue is the mere tinsel of Tao, and the fool makes use of it. ~ But the truly great man establishes himself on that which is solid, and will not lean upon a shadow. ~ He keeps to the real, and avoids display. ~ He rejects the one, and takes the other with both hands.

[38c10t] James Legge ~ (Those who) possessed in highest degree the attributes (of the Tao) did not (seek) to show them, and therefore they possessed them (in fullest measure). ~ (Those who) possessed in a lower degree those attributes (sought how) not to lose them, and therefore they did not possess them (in fullest measure). ~ (Those who) possessed in the highest degree those attributes did nothing (with a purpose), and had no need to do anything. ~ (Those who) possessed them in a lower degree were (always) doing, and had need to be so doing. ~ (Those who) possessed the highest benevolence were (always seeking) to carry it out, and had no need to be doing so. ~ (Those who) possessed the highest righteousness were (always seeking) to carry it out, and had need to be so doing. ~ (Those who) possessed the highest (sense of) propriety were (always seeking) to show it, and when men did not respond to it, they bared the arm and marched up to them. ~ Thus it was that when the Tao was lost, its attributes appeared; ~ when its attributes were lost, benevolence appeared; ~ when benevolence was lost, righteousness appeared; ~ and when righteousness was lost, the proprieties appeared. ~ Now propriety is the attenuated form of leal-heartedness and good faith, and is also the commencement of disorder; ~ swift apprehension is (only) a flower of the Tao, and is the beginning of stupidity. ~ Thus it is that the Great man abides by what is solid, and eschews what is flimsy; ~ dwells with the fruit and not with the flower. ~ It is thus that he puts away the one and makes choice of the other.

[38c11t] David Hinton ~ High Integrity never has Integrity and so is indeed Integrity. ~ Low Integrity never loses Integrity and so is not at all Integrity. ~ High Integrity does nothing ~ and has no motives. ~ Low Integrity does something ~ and has sure motives. ~ High Humanity does something ~ and has no motives. ~ High Duty does something ~ and has sure motives. ~ High Ritual does something, ~ and when no one follows along ~ it rolls up its sleeves ~ and forces them into line. ~ Lose Way, and Integrity appears. ~ Lose Integrity, and Humanity appears. ~ Lose Humanity, and Duty appears. ~ Lose Duty, and Ritual appears. ~ Ritual is the thinning away of loyalty and sincerity, the beginning of chaos, ~ and prophecy is the flowery semblance of Way, the beginning of folly. ~ This is why a great elder ~ inhabits thick rather than thin, ~ fruitful substance rather than flowery semblance, ~ always ignores that and chooses this.

[38c13t] Ellen M. [38c17t] Arthur Waley ~ The man of highest 'power' does not reveal himself as a possessor of 'power'; ~ Therefore he keeps his 'power'. ~ The man of inferior 'power' cannot rid it of the appearance of 'power'; ~ Therefore he is in truth without 'power'. ~ The man of highest 'power' neither acts nor is there any who so regards him; ~ The man of inferior 'power' both acts and is so regarded. ~ The man of highest humanity, though he acts, is not so regarded; ~ Whereas a man of even the highest morality both acts and is so regarded. ~ While even he who is best versed in ritual not merely acts, but if people fail to respond ~ Then he will pull up his sleeves and advance upon them. ~ That is why it is said: ~ 'After Tao was lost, then came the "power"; ~ After the "power" was lost, then came human kindness. ~ After human kindness was lost, then came morality, ~ After morality was lost, then came ritual. ~ Now ritual is the mere husk of loyalty and promise-keeping, ~ And is indeed the first step towards brawling.' ~ Foreknowledge may be the 'flower of doctrine', ~ But it is the beginning of folly. ~ Therefore the full-grown man takes his stand upon the solid substance and not upon the mere husk, ~ Upon the fruit and not upon the flower. ~ Truly, 'he rejects that and takes this'.

[38c18t] Richard John Lynn ~ A person of superior virtue is not virtuous, and this is why he has virtue. ~ A person of inferior virtue never loses virtue, and this is why he lacks virtue. ~ A person of superior virtue takes no conscious action and so acts out of nothing. ~ A person of inferior virtue takes conscious action and so acts out of something. ~ When a person of superior benevolence takes action, he acts out of nothing. ~ When a person of superior righteousness takes action, he acts out of something. ~ When a person of superior propriety takes action and no one responds, he pushes up his sleeves and leads them to it. ~ Therefore one resorts to virtue only after losing the Dao, resorts to benevolence only after losing virtue, resorts to righteousness only after losing benevolence, and resorts to propriety only after losing righteousness. ~ Propriety consists of the superficial aspects of loyalty and trust and is thus the beginning of disorder. ~ Foresight consists of the flower of the Dao and is thus the origin of duplicity. ~ This is why the really great man involves himself with its substance and not with its superficial aspects. ~ He involves himself with its fruit and not with its flower. ~ Therefore he rejects the one and takes the other.

[38c22t] David H. [38c24t] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ Superior virtue is not aware of being a superior virtue, ~ So it has virtue. ~ Inferior virtue never discards the virtue, ~ Therefore it has no virtue. ~ Superior virtue seems inactive, but it does everything. ~ Inferior virtue operates, but ultimately its work is incomplete. ~ Superior love operates without motive. ~ Superior justice operates without motive. ~ The superior system operates, even though nothing responds to it at first, ~ And gradually people raise their arms and join it. ~ Thus, when the Tao is lost, virtue is lost. ~ If virtue is lost, love is lost. ~ If love is lost, justice is lost. ~ If justice is lost, the superior system comes into being. ~ The superior system, therefore, is the expression of impatience and disloyalty, the result of confusion of the senses. ~ Knowledge that contains no knowledge is only the flower of Tao and the beginning of folly. ~ Therefore, the truly great person keeps the concrete and rejects the transient, ~ He keeps the fruit and does not take the flower. ~ Therefore he rejects the flower and takes the fruit.

[38c36т] Hua-Ching Ni ~ One of subtle universal virtue is not conscious of being virtuous, ~ therefore, he is truly virtuous. ~ One of partial virtue attempts to live up to an external standard of virtue, ~ therefore, he is not truly virtuous. ~ One of whole virtue does not need to do anything in order to be virtuous, ~ because virtue is the very essence of one's true nature. ~ But, one of partial virtue believes that something must be done in order to prove that he is virtuous. ~ Thus, partial virtue becomes prevalent when people fail to follow their own true nature. ~ Benevolence becomes prevalent when people fail to be naturally kind. ~ Etiquette becomes prevalent when people fail to be righteous and considerate. ~ When people find no response with etiquette, ~ they roll up their sleeves and force others to respond to them. ~ When people stray from the subtle way of universal nature, ~ they can no longer perceive their own true nature. ~ Thus, they emphasize relative virtue. ~ When natural virtue is lost, ~ society depends on the doctrine of humanism. ~ When humanity becomes corrupted, ~ social and religious teachings appear and become powerful forces. ~ When social and religious teachings become corrupted, ~ what is left behind is the empty shell of superficial ceremonies and artificial etiquette. ~ When etiquette is emphasized, ~ it is because people lack the simple qualities of fairness and kindness. ~ This is the starting point of people of confusion. ~ All of these man-made, partial virtues are merely superficial flowers, a false nature. ~ When people begin to move away from their own true nature, ~ it is the beginning of hypocrisy. ~ Therefore, one who integrates his own individual being with the deep nature of the universe sets his heart upon the root of reality rather than the husk, and upon the nourishment of the fruit rather than the fleeting beauty of the flowers. ~ Truly, he cherishes what is deep within rather than what is shallow without. ~ Knowing this, he knows what to accept and what to reject.

[38c37т] Chang Chung-yuan ~ The highest attainment (Tê) is free from attainment. ~ Therefore, there is attainment. ~ The lowest attainment is never free from attainment. ~ Therefore, there is no attainment. ~ The highest attainment never acts and is purposeless. ~ The lowest attainment acts and is purposeful. ~ The highest benevolence (jen) acts and is purposeless. ~ The highest righteousness (yi) acts and is purposeful. ~ The highest propriety (li) acts and no one follows it. ~ One bares one's arms and throws one's opponents away. ~ Therefore, when Tao is lost, we have attainment. ~ When attainment is lost, we have benevolence. ~ When benevolence is lost, we have righteousness. ~ When righteousness is lost, we have propriety. ~ Propriety is due to a lack of trustworthiness and is the beginning of disorder. ~ Anticipated knowledge is the superficiality of Tao and is the beginning of foolishness. ~ Hence, the great man chooses reality and not superficiality. ~ He acts according to reality and not appearance. ~ Thus, he grasps the one and foregoes the other.

[38c41т] Tang Zi-chang ~ When conduct is of high virtue, one is unconscious of virtue, thus he can accomplish virtue. ~ When conduct is of low virtue, one is conscious of virtue, thus he cannot accomplish virtue. ~ High virtue does not contrive and has no desire for gain. ~ Low virtue also does not contrive but has desire for gain. ~ High benevolence does contrive yet it has no desire for gain. ~ High righteousness does contrive and also has desire for gain. ~ High ritual does not only contrive and desire, but is also violent: ~ if it finds no response at all, it resorts to fighting its way out with stretched arms. ~ Hence when Dao is losing, then its virtues are losing. ~ When virtues are losing, benevolence is encouraged. ~ When benevolence is losing, the righteousness is encouraged. ~ When righteousness is losing, then rituals are encouraged. ~ Rituals stand for the lack of loyalty and reliability and are the beginning of disorder. ~ Divination stands for the emotional performance of Dao and is the beginning of stupidity. ~ Therefore the superior man prefers to possess few things rather than an abundance, to have insight rather than to see superficially. ~ Thus he prefers insight to superficiality.

(Доверию) и начало смуты. ~ Только что представленная [вам норма Ли] - это цветок Дао и начало тупости. ~ Поэтому великий муж там, где Дао обильно, а не там, где ничтожно; ~ там, где плод, а не там, где его цветок. ~ Вот почему отбрасывает одно, избирает другое.

[39c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ Of those in the past that attained the One - ~ Heaven, by attaining the One became clear; ~ Earth, by attaining the One became stable; ~ Gods, by attaining the One became divine; ~ Valleys, by attaining the One became full; ~ Marquises and kings, by attaining the One made the whole land ordered and secure. ~ Taking this to its logical conclusion we would say - ~ If Heaven were not by means of it clear, it would, I'm afraid, shatter; ~ If the Earth were not by means of it stable, it would, I'm afraid, let go. ~ If the gods were not by means of it divine, they would, I'm afraid, be powerless. ~ If valleys were not by means of it full, they would, [I'm afraid] dry up. ~ And if marquises and kings were not by means of it noble and high, they would, I'm afraid, topple and fall. ~ Therefore, it must be the case that the noble has the base as its root; ~ And it must be the case that high has the low for its foundation. ~ Thus, for this reason, marquises and kings call themselves "The Orphan," "The Widower," and "The One Without Grain." ~ This is taking the base as one's root, is it not?! ~ Therefore, they regard their large numbers of carriages as having no carriage. ~ And because of this, they desire not to dazzle and glitter like jade, ~ But to remain firm and strong like stone.

[39c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ FROM of old there are not lacking things that have attained Oneness. ~ The sky attained Oneness and became clear; ~ The earth attained Oneness and became calm; ~ The spirits attained Oneness and became charged with mystical powers; ~ The fountains attained Oneness and became full; ~ The ten thousand creatures attained Oneness and became reproductive; ~ Barons and princes attained Oneness and became sovereign rulers of the world. ~ All of them are what they are by virtue of Oneness. ~ If the sky were not clear, it would be likely to fall to pieces; ~ If the earth were not calm, it would be likely to burst into bits; ~ If the spirits were not charged with mystical powers, they would be likely to cease from being; ~ If the fountains were not full, they would be likely to dry up; ~ If the ten thousand creatures were not reproductive, they would be likely to come to extinction; ~ If the barons and princes were not the sovereign rulers, they would be likely to stumble and fall. ~ Truly, humility is the root from which greatness springs, ~ And the high must be built upon the foundation of the low. ~ That is why barons and princes style themselves "The Helpless One," "The Little One," and "The Worthless One." ~ Perhaps they too realize their dependence upon the lowly. ~ Truly, too much honour means no honour. ~ It is not wise to shine like jade and resound like stone-chimes.

[39c03т] D. C. Lau ~ Of old, these came to be in possession of the One: ~ Heaven in virtue of the One is limpid; ~ Earth in virtue of the One is settled; ~ Gods in virtue of the One have their potencies; ~ The valley in virtue of the One is full; ~ The myriad creatures in virtue of the One are alive; ~ Lords and princes in virtue of the One become leaders in the empire. ~ It is the One that makes these what they are. ~ Without what makes it limpid heaven might split; ~ Without what makes it settled earth might sink; ~ Without what gives them their potencies gods might spend themselves; ~ Without what makes it full the valley might run dry; ~ Without what keeps them alive the myriad creatures might perish; ~ Without what makes them leaders lords and princes might fall. ~ Hence the superior must have the inferior as root; ~ The high must have the low as base. ~ Thus lords and princes refer to themselves as 'solitary', 'desolate', and 'hapless'. ~ This is taking the inferior as root, is it not? ~ Hence the highest renown is without renown, ~ Not wishing to be one among many like jade ~ Nor to be aloof like stone.

[39c04т] R. L. Wing ~ From old, these may have harmony with the One: ~ Heaven in harmony with the One becomes clear. ~ Earth in harmony with the One becomes stable. ~ Mind in harmony with the One becomes inspired. ~ Valleys in harmony with the One become full. ~ All Things in harmony with the One become creative. ~ Leaders in harmony with the One become incorruptible in the world. ~ These were attained through Oneness. ~ Heaven without clarity would probably crack. ~ Earth without stability would probably quake. ~ Mind without inspiration would probably sleep. ~ Valleys without fullness would probably dry up. ~ All Things without creativity would probably die off. ~ Leaders without incorruptible ways would probably stumble and fall. ~ Indeed, the high-placed stem from the humble; ~ The elevated are based upon the lowly. ~ This is why leaders call themselves ~ Alone, lonely, and unfavored. ~ Is this not because they stem from the humble and common? ~ Is it not? ~ Therefore, attain honor without being honored. ~ Do not desire to shine like jade; wear ornaments as if they were stone.

[39c05т] Ren Jiyu ~ From of old those that attained one principle (Tao) - ~ Heaven attained the One and became clear, ~ Earth attained the One and became tranquil, ~ Spirits attained the One and became divine, ~ Valleys attained the One and became full, ~ All things attained the One and became luxuriant, ~ Kings and princes attained the One and became heads of the Kingdom. ~ What they strove to achieve was fulfilled by the principle (the One). ~ If Heaven couldn't have become clear it would soon crack. ~ If Earth couldn't have become tranquil it would soon be shaken. ~ If spirits couldn't have become divine they would soon perish. ~ If valleys couldn't have become full they would soon be exhausted. ~ If all things couldn't have become luxuriant they would soon be extinct. ~ If kings and princes couldn't have maintained their majesty and nobility they would soon lose their kingdoms and states. ~ Therefore the noble takes the humble as its root, ~ And the high takes the low as its ground. ~ Just for this reason kings and princes call themselves the orphaned, the solitary and the unworthy. ~ Is it not regarding the humble as the root of the noble? ~ Is it not so? ~ Therefore to seek too much honour means to lose honour wholly. ~ So neither the noble jade, nor the humble rocks should one strive to be.

[39c06т] Gia-fu Feng ~ These things from ancient times arise from one: ~ The sky is whole and clear. ~ The earth is whole and firm. ~ The spirit is whole and strong. ~ The valley is whole and full. ~ The ten thousand things are whole and alive. ~ Kings and lords are whole, and the country is upright. ~ All these are in virtue of wholeness. ~ The clarity of the sky prevents its falling. ~ The firmness of the earth prevents its splitting. ~ The strength of the spirit prevents its being used up. ~ The fullness of the valley prevents its running dry. ~ The growth of the ten thousand things prevents their dying out. ~ The leadership of kings and lords prevents the downfall of the country. ~ Therefore the humble is the root of the noble. ~ The low is the foundation of the high. ~ Princes and lords consider themselves "orphaned," "widowed," and "worthless." ~ Do they not depend on being humble? ~ Too much success is not an advantage. ~ Do not tinkle like jade ~ Or clatter like stone chimes.

[39c07т] Lok Sang Ho ~ There is one universal formula that always works: ~ The sky had followed the universal formula, ~ and it became clear. ~ The earth had followed the universal formula, ~ and became calm and safe. ~ The gods follow the universal formula, ~ and they have become effective. ~ The valleys follow the universal formula, ~ and they now harbor copious vegetation and creatures. ~ The living things follow the universal formula, ~ and they live; ~ When barons and kings follow the universal formula, ~ they become the object of emulation by their peoples. ~ All these achievements are due to the universal formula. ~ If the sky were not clear it could be torn apart. ~ If the earth were not calm and safe ~ it could burst into chaos. ~ If the gods were not effective ~ they could wear out. ~ If the valleys were not copious ~ they could become empty. ~ If the living things could not live ~ they would be doomed. ~ If barons and kings could not keep their high and respected positions, ~ they could be toppled. ~ The noble must be based on the ignoble. ~ The highly positioned must be buttressed by the lowly. ~ Barons and kings call themselves the "lonely one" the "widowed one", or the "under provided one". ~ Don't these practices demonstrate loud and clear ~ that it is through the lowly ~ that kings and barons hold their positions? ~ Merely counting the number of carriages ~ will not give you any carriage. ~ It is no use showing the shiny look of jade ~ if the substance is merely an ordinary stone.

[39c08т] Xiaolin Yang ~ From the beginning, everything has needed to become natural and harmonic, which is called ONE. ~ When the sky becomes ONE, it is clear; ~ When the earth becomes ONE, it is peaceful; ~ When the spirits become ONE, they grant all wishes; ~ When the riverbeds and valleys become ONE, they fill with water; ~ When all living things become ONE, they grow; ~ When the kings become ONE, they can govern their countries. ~ This is because of the DAO. ~ If the sky is not clear, it will collapse; ~ If the earth is not peaceful, it will explode; ~ If spirits cannot grant wishes, they will disappear; ~ If all living things cannot grow, they will die; ~ If kings cannot govern their countries, they will be overthrown. ~ Therefore, the cheap is the base of the noble; the low is the foundation of the high. ~ So the kings always called themselves bad names like the single, the widower, and the unkind. ~ Is this proof that the cheap is the base of the noble? Is it not? ~ Therefore, pursuing fame will get you no fame. ~ Do not be like a beautiful jade; be instead like a plain stone.

[39c09т] Walter Gorn Old, TRACING THE SOURCE ~ Certain things have, by unity, lasted from most ancient times, namely:- ~ The transparency of Heaven; ~ The steadfastness of Earth; ~ The incorporeality of spirits; ~ The watery plenitude of valleys; ~ The life of all creations; ~ The government of kings and princes; ~ All these endure by unity. ~ But for the cause of its transparency Heaven would be in danger of obscuration. ~ But for the cause of its steadfastness the Earth would be in danger of disintegration. ~ But for the cause of their incorporeality spirits would be in danger of decease. ~ But for the cause of their plenitude the valleys would be in danger of sterility. ~ But for the cause of their vitality all creations would be in danger of destruction. ~ But for the cause of their honour and greatness princes and kings would be in danger of an overthrow. ~ Herein we see how honour is derived from that which is without distinction; and how greatness rests upon, and is sustained by, that which is insignificant. ~ Hence do princes and kings call themselves "orphans," "solitary men," and "chariots without wheels." ~ Do they not thereby acknowledge their authority to be vested in, and supported by, their superiors? ~ Who can deny it? ~ Surely "a chariot without wheels" is no chariot at all! ~ It is as hard for a man to be isolated like a single gem as to be lost in the crowd like a common pebble.

[39c10т] James Legge ~ The things which from of old have got the One (the Tao) are - ~ Heaven which by it is bright and pure; ~ Earth rendered thereby firm and sure; ~ Spirits with powers by it supplied; ~ Valleys kept full throughout their void; ~ All creatures which through it do live; ~ Princes and kings who from it get ~ The model which to all they give. ~ All these are the results of the One (Tao). ~ If heaven were not thus pure, it soon would rend; ~ If earth were not thus sure, 'twould break and bend; ~ Without these powers, the spirits soon would fail; ~ If not so filled, the drought would parch each vale; ~ Without that life, creatures would pass away; ~ Princes and kings, without that moral sway, ~ However grand and high, would all decay. ~ Thus it is that dignity finds its (firm) root in its (previous) meanness, and what is lofty finds its stability in the lowness (from which it rises). ~ Hence princes and kings call themselves 'Orphans,' 'Men of small virtue,' and as 'Carriages without a nave.' ~ Is not this an acknowledgment that in their considering themselves mean they see the foundation of their dignity? ~ So it is that in the enumeration of the different parts of a carriage we do not come on what makes it answer the ends of a carriage. ~ They do not wish to show themselves elegant-looking as jade, but (prefer) to be coarse-looking as an (ordinary) stone.

[39c11T] David Hinton ~ Ancients who realized primal unity: ~ Heaven realized primal unity ~ and so came to clarity. ~ Earth realized primal unity ~ and so came to tranquility. ~ Gods realized primal unity ~ and so came to spirit. ~ Valleys realized primal unity ~ and so came to fullness. ~ The ten thousand things realized primal unity ~ and so came to life. ~ Lords and emperors realized primal unity ~ and so came to rectify all beneath heaven. ~ It's their very existence: ~ without clarity heaven cracks open, ~ without tranquility earth bursts forth, ~ without spirit gods cease, ~ without fullness valleys run dry, ~ without life the ten thousand things perish, ~ without high nobility lords and emperors stumble and fall. ~ Nobility is rooted in humility, ~ and high founded on low. ~ This is why true lords and emperors call themselves ~ orphaned, destitute, ill-fated. ~ Isn't this rooted in humility? ~ Isn't it counting the world's praise as no praise, ~ refusing to tinkle like delicate jade bells or clatter like ponderous stone chimes?

[39c12T] Chichung Huang ~ Long, long ago, those that acquired One were: ~ Heaven, which acquired One ~ And thereby became clear; ~ Earth, which acquired One ~ And thereby became tranquil; ~ Spirits, which acquired One ~ And thereby became miraculous; ~ Valley streams, which acquired One ~ And thereby became full; ~ Marquises and kings, who acquired One ~ And thereby became chieftains over all under heaven. ~ Going to the extreme would mean: ~ If heaven were excessively clear, ~ It would crack; ~ If earth were excessively tranquil, ~ It would quake; ~ If spirits were excessively miraculous, ~ They would cease to be so; ~ If valley streams were excessively full, ~ They would go dry; ~ If marquises and kings were endlessly noble and high, ~ They would collapse. ~ Therefore, the noble must take the humble to be their roots; ~ The high must take the low to be their basis. ~ Hence, marquises and kings call themselves "The inadequate one," "the deficient one" and "the unworthy one." ~ This means taking the humble to be their roots, ~ Does it not? ~ Therefore, the highest praise is no praise. ~ Hence, do not wish to be as noble as jade, ~ Nor as high as a mountain rock.

[39c13T] Ellen M. Chen ~ Those of old that attain the One: ~ Heaven attains the One thus is clear, ~ Earth attains the One thus is peaceful, ~ Spirits attain the One thus are efficacious, ~ Valleys attain the One thus are replenished, ~ Ten thousand beings attain the One thus come to be, ~ Princes and barons attain the One thus are exalted in the world. ~ All because they attain the One. ~ Heaven, without that which renders it clear, might crack, ~ Earth, without that which renders it peaceful, might explode, ~ Spirits, without that which makes them efficacious, might cease, ~ Valleys, without that which replenishes them, might become empty, ~ Ten thousand beings, without that which sustains them in existence, might become extinct, ~ Barons and kings, without that which exalts them to high positions, might be toppled. ~ Therefore the exalted is rooted in the humble, ~ The high has the low for foundation. ~ Therefore barons and kings call themselves orphaned, widowed and unworthy. ~ Is this not taking the humble for one's root? ~ Is it not? ~ Therefore the most famous has no fame. ~ Do not tinkle like jade, ~ Or chime like stones!

[39c14T] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ In the past it did happen that Oneness was achieved: ~ When Oneness was realized in Universe, there was pure Serenity; ~ When Oneness was materialized on Earth, there was peace; ~ When Oneness was apprehended by Spirits, they became efficacious; ~ When Oneness was incorporated in valleys (life-support resources), they were fully filled [with water]; ~ When Oneness was attained by [myriad] creatures and things, their lives were perpetuated; ~ When Oneness was absorbed by kings and lords, they led the world on the right course. ~ The importance of striving for Oneness is because: ~ If Heaven cannot maintain pure and entire Serenity, it may crack; ~ If Earth cannot maintain unification, it may burst with cracks; ~ If spirits are not efficacious, their existence may be threatened; ~ If valleys are not filled, they will soon dry up; ~ If [myriad] creatures and things can not obtain proper support for existence, they will vanish; ~ If kings and lords cannot set on the right course, their institution will stumble [and collapse]. ~ Therefore, nobility must be built up from lowliness; ~ A high position must be supported by something of lower position; ~ That is why kings and lords used to refer to themselves [as documented in ancient records] as: "I, the misfit", "I, the morally light-weight" and "I, the good-for-nothing individual"; ~ Doesn't this exemplify "Nobility is built up from lowliness"? ~ You still disagree? ~ To be called a misfit, a morally light-weight or a good-for-nothing person are all undesirable, but kings and lords addressed themselves as such [to indicate that they are willing to carry the unpleasant burden of these miserable people]. ~ Therefore, people who seek reputation for the sake of fame really are in truth the people who have no sense of honor; ~ [A truly honorable person] would neither present himself as a piece of rare jade; ~ Nor would he be satisfied to be [as morally mediocre as] a one of the colossal of [undistinguished] ornamental stones.

[39c15T] Tien Cong Tran ~ In the remote past there were those who attained the One. ~ Attaining the One, heaven is clear. ~ Attaining the One, earth is calm. ~ Attaining the One, God is holy. ~ Attaining the One, the cave is full. ~ Attaining the One, ten thousand creatures come into life. ~ Attaining the One, kings and princes become sovereign rulers of the world. ~ All of them are what they are by virtue of the one. ~ If heaven were not clear, it would fall to pieces. ~ If earth were not calm, it would quake. ~ If God were not holy, he would cease from being. ~ If the fountain were not full, it would dry up. ~ If ten thousand creatures did not come to life, they would perish. ~ If kings and princes were not supreme, they would stumble and fall. ~ Hence, humility is the root of greatness. ~ The high is built upon the foundation of the low. ~ That is why kings and princes style themselves "the solitary one," "the little one," and "the worthless one". ~ Is this not enough to prove that humility serves as root? ~ Therefore extreme honor means no honor. ~ Do not wish to shine like jade and be aloof like stone.

[39c16T] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ Previously those who have integrity are as follows: ~ Heaven has integrity, so it is clear. ~ Earth has integrity, so it is peaceful. ~ Gods have integrity, so they are responsive. ~ Valleys have integrity, so they are full. ~ All living creatures have integrity, so they can live. ~ Kings and lords have integrity, so they can govern normally. ~ Why is it so? ~ If Heaven is not clear, it could split. ~ If Earth is not peaceful, it could collapse. ~ If Gods are not responsive, nobody would worship. ~ If valleys are not full, they could be depleted. ~ If living creatures cannot live, they would become extinct. ~ If Kings and lords cannot govern normally, they would fall. ~ Therefore, humbleness is the root from which nobleness grows. ~ Low is the foundation on which high is built. ~ It is because of this, kings and lord call themselves lonely persons, friendless persons, and worthless persons. ~ This is for the sake of being humble, is it not? ~ The extremely honorable is the one without being honored. ~ They do not want to be like glittering jades, but like solid rocks.

[39c17T] Arthur Waley ~ As for the things that from of old have understood the Whole - ~ The sky through such understanding remains limpid, ~ Earth remains steady, ~ The spirits keep their holiness, ~ The abyss is replenished, ~ The ten thousand creatures bear their kind, ~ Barons and princes direct their people. ~ It is the Whole that causes it. ~ Were it not so limpid, the sky would soon get torn, ~ Were it not for its steadiness, the earth would soon tip over, ~ Were it not for their holiness, the spirits would soon wither away, ~ Were it not for this replenishment, the abyss would soon go dry, ~ Were it not that the ten thousand creatures can bear their kind, ~ They would soon become extinct. ~ Were the barons and princes no longer directors of their people and for that reason honoured and exalted, they would soon be overthrown. ~ Truly, ~ 'The humble is the stem upon which the mighty grows, ~ The low is the foundation upon which the high is laid.' ~ That is why barons and princes refer to themselves as 'The Orphan', 'The Needy', 'The Ill-provided'. ~ Is this not indeed a case of might rooting itself upon humility? ~ True indeed are the sayings: ~ 'Enumerate the parts of a carriage, and you still have not explained what a carriage is', and ~ 'They did not want themselves to tinkle like jade-bells, while others resounded like stone-chimes'.

[39c18T] Richard John Lynn ~ As for those who obtained the One long, long ago, ~ Heaven is pure by having obtained the One; ~ Earth is stable by having obtained the One; ~ the gods have their spiritual power by having obtained the One; ~ valleys can be filled by having obtained the One; ~ the myriad things live by having obtained the One; ~ lords and princes provide constancy to all under Heaven by having obtained the One. ~ This is how they attain to these states. ~ If Heaven had not this means to be pure, it would, we fear, deteriorate. ~ If Earth had not this means to be stable, it would, we fear, disintegrate. ~ If the gods had not this means to have spiritual power, they would, we fear, terminate. ~ If valleys had not this means to achieve fullness, they would, we fear, dry up. ~ If the myriad things had not this means to live, they would, we fear, expire. ~ If lords and princes did not have this means to achieve loftiness and nobility, they would, we fear, collapse. ~ Thus it is that nobility uses humility as its roots and loftiness uses lowliness as its foundation. ~ This is why lords and princes refer to themselves as "the orphan," "the widower," or "the unworthy." ~ Is this not using humility as the roots? ~ Is this not so? ~ Therefore the ultimate number of praises amounts to no praise, so one wants neither "he glows with luster like the jade" nor "he is as hard as hard can be like the stone."

[39c19T] Lin Yutang ~ UNITY THROUGH COMPLEMENTS ~ There were those in ancient times possessed of the One: ~ Through possession of the One, the Heaven was clarified, ~ Through possession of the One, the Earth was stabilized, ~ Through possession of the One, the gods were spiritualized, ~ Through possession of the One, the valleys were made full, ~ Through possession of the One, all things lived and grew, ~ Through possession of the One, the princes and dukes became the ennobled of the people. ~ That was how each became so. ~ Without clarity, the Heavens would shake, ~ Without stability, the Earth would quake, ~ Without spiritual power, the gods would crumble, ~ Without being filled, the valleys would crack, ~ Without the life-giving power, all things would perish, ~ Without the ennobling power, the princes and dukes would stumble. ~ Therefore the nobility depend upon the common man for support, ~ And the exalted ones depend upon the lowly for their base. ~ That is why the princes and dukes call themselves "the orphaned," "the lonely one," "the unworthy." ~ Is it not true then that they depend upon the common man for support? ~ Truly, take down the parts of a chariot, ~ And there is no chariot (left). ~ Rather than jingle like the jade, ~ Rumble like the rocks.

[39c20T] Victor H. Mair ~ In olden times, these attained unity: ~ Heaven attained unity, and thereby became pure. ~ Earth attained unity, and thereby became tranquil. ~ The spirits attained unity, and thereby became divine. ~ The valley attained unity, and thereby became full. ~ Feudal lords and kings attained unity, and thereby all was put right. ~ Yet, pushed to the extreme, ~ It implies that, ~ If heaven were ever pure, it would be likely to rend. ~ It implies that, ~ If earth were ever tranquil, it would be likely to quake. ~ It implies that, ~ If the spirits were ever divine, they would be likely to dissipate. ~ It implies that, ~ If the valley were ever full, it would be likely to run dry. ~ It implies that, ~ If feudal lords and kings were ever noble and thereby exalted, they would be likely to fall. ~ Therefore, ~ It is necessary to be noble, and yet take humility as a basis. ~ It is necessary to be exalted, and yet take modesty as a foundation. ~ Now, for this reason, ~ Feudal lords and kings style themselves ~ "orphaned," "destitute," and "hapless." ~ Is this not because they take humility as their basis? ~ Therefore, ~ Striving for an excess of praise, one ends up without praise. ~ Consequently, ~ Desire not to be jingling as jade nor stolid as stone.

[39c21T] Tolbert McCarroll ~ From ancient times these things have arisen from the One: ~ Heaven is clear because of the One, ~ The earth is firm because of the One, ~ The Spirit is strong because of the One, ~ The valley is full because of the One, ~ The ten thousand things reproduce because of the One, ~ Leaders are able to lead because of the One. ~ All of this comes from the One. ~ If heaven were not clear it would soon split. ~ If the earth were not firm it would soon bend and break. ~ If the Spirit were not strong it would soon wear out. ~ If the valley were not full it would soon dry up. ~ If the ten thousand things did not reproduce they would soon die out. ~ If leaders could not lead they would soon fall. ~ Therefore, greatness has its source in the little. ~ The low is the foundation of the high. ~ Princes call themselves "alone," "helpless," "worthless." ~ Is this not acknowledging a humble root? ~ Enumerate the parts of a carriage and you have not defined a carriage. ~ Better to resound like stone chimes than to tinkle like jade bells.

[39c24T] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ Among things, these are the ones that received the One in ancient times: ~ Heaven, that is made clear by the One, ~ Earth, that is stabilized by the One, ~ The soul, that is made spiritual by the One, ~ The valley, that is made full by the One. ~ Through the One, all things came into being and were realized, ~ Princes and kings, through the One, became rulers of the world. ~ If heaven were not clear, it could tear, ~ If earth were not stable, it could collapse, ~ If the soul were not active, it could dissolve, ~ If the valley were not full, it could dry up. ~ If things did not exist, they would be as if they had never been, ~ If princes and kings did not rule, ~ They would be thrown from their thrones. ~ The nobleman must measure himself in terms of the humble and simple man, ~ The dignitary must use the lowly as his basis. ~ Therefore, princes and kings call themselves "ignorant," "cowardly," "worthless." ~ Does that not mean that they consider humility to be the root of their nature? ~ For what does a person hate more than "ignorant," "cowardly," or "worthless"? ~ Yet princes and kings still choose these words to describe themselves. ~ Therefore there is no exaltation in this dignitary. ~ Thus kings rise by lowering their value, ~ And disappear by raising their value. ~ It is not good to be conspicuous, like a single gemstone, ~ Or monotonous and invisible like one of the countless stones in a field.

[39c25t] Man-Ho Kwok ~ From its first days, the universe came from the One: ~ The heavens are one, and clear, and round because of it; ~ The earth is one, and is its firm infused foundation; ~ The spirit force is one, with all it brings into being; ~ The valley is a oneness, and so it flows and renews all things; ~ Everything is one - every living thing is one, and alive! ~ Kings and lords are one in a kingdom that is one and they can only rule truly because of the One. ~ If Heaven wasn't clear, then the sky would fall down; ~ If the earth cannot be peaceful, it will tear itself apart; ~ If the Spirit cannot bless, then no one will believe in it; ~ If the valley can't rebirth, then the valley will run dry; ~ If life can't be itself, then life will be nothing; ~ And if the king is nothing, then the world will be at war. ~ Everything has both yin and yang in it - ~ and from their rise-and-fall-coupling comes new life. ~ The highest authority needs the basement as its base, ~ And the depths are the foundation of the heights. ~ That is why rulers call themselves lonely, like souls in a wilderness who have no home. ~ And, in doing so, don't they see then that their roots lie with the people? ~ To see yourself as extraordinary is to stand out like jade among ordinary stones; ~ but what people ignore - the lonely, and the worthless - is the rock a true leader finds himself on. ~ You see, you win by losing - and you lose by succeeding.

[39c26t] Gu Zhengkun ~ Among the ancient holders of the One: ~ Heaven that holds the One becomes clear and bright; ~ Earth that holds the One becomes steady; ~ Gods that hold the One become efficacious; ~ Valleys that hold the One become full; ~ All creatures that hold the One become alive; ~ Lords and leaders who hold the One become leaders of the human world. ~ By inference Heaven might split without what makes it clear and bright; ~ Earth might shake without what makes it steady; ~ Gods might disappear without what makes them efficacious; ~ Valleys might go dry without what makes them full; ~ All creatures might die out without what makes them alive; ~ Lords and kings might fall without what makes them leaders. ~ That is why the humble is the root of the noble, ~ And the high is based on the low. ~ That is why lords and kings call themselves "the solitary", "the few" and "the unkind". ~ Does not this take the humble as the root (of the noble)? ~ Does this not? ~ Hence the highest honor does not need honoring. ~ It is better, therefore, to be a hard stone than a beautiful piece of jade.

[39c27t] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ Since ancient times, what comes into possession is the 'One'. ~ Heaven in possession of the 'One' is clear. ~ The Earth in possession of the 'One' is tranquil. ~ The gods in possession of the 'One' are efficacious. ~ The valley in possession of the 'One' is full. ~ The myriad creatures in possession of the 'One' are alive. ~ The rulers in possession of the 'One' are faithful to their country. ~ Although they are different, they are the same 'One'. ~ When Heaven is not clear, it risks cracking. ~ When the Earth is not tranquil, it risks exploding. ~ When the gods are not efficacious, they risk ceasing to exist. ~ When the valley is not full, it risks drying up. ~ When the myriad creatures possess no life, they risk extinction. ~ When rulers are not faithful, they risk a fall from their heights. ~ Therefore the humble is the basis of the precious. ~ The low is the basis of the high. ~ The rulers shall humiliate themselves. ~ That is why one grows the root at the base - isn't it? ~ That is why one prefers to be the wheel instead of the carriage, ~ one chooses to be a stone instead of jade.

[39c28t] Liu Qixuan ~ Achievement of oneness in the past includes: ~ The heaven that became clear, ~ The earth that became peaceful, ~ The soul that became sensitive, ~ And kings that became the world's leaders. ~ The following can be inferred: ~ The heaven will break ~ If it can by no means clear up; ~ The earth will be wasteland ~ If it can by no means be peaceful; ~ The soul will die out ~ If it can by no means be sensitive; ~ And kings will go rampant ~ If they can by no means lead the world. ~ Therefore, ~ Nobility is rooted in the ordinary people, ~ And the high is based on the low. ~ The kings take names ~ Like "the Isolated," "the Helpless," or "the Wicked," ~ Just because they appreciate their roots and bases. ~ Therefore, ~ The most glorious does not seek after glory, ~ And the wisest does not seek to be the beautiful jade ~ But the unrefined rough rock.

[39c29t] Shi Fu Hwang ~ The Power of The Tao ~ Lao Tze says, ~ Old things which have the correctness are: ~ It is by correctness that ~ the Heaven becomes bright and pure, and the Earth firm and sure; ~ the spirits divine; ~ the valleys full; ~ all existence lively; ~ and the kings just for the world's model. ~ All these are the results of correctness. ~ If the Heaven were not so pure, it would soon rend. ~ If the Earth were not so sure, it would break and bend. ~ If the spirits were not so divine, they would lose their prophesy. ~ If the valleys were not so full, they would parch. ~ If all existence were not so lively, they would be extinct. ~ If the kings had no morality, they would collapse from their throne. ~ Therefore, dignity finds root in meanness, and the lofty find their stability in lowness. ~ Therefore, the kings self-styled themselves by the solitary, the unworthy, and the virtueless. ~ Didn't these mean that dignity finds its root in its meanness? ~ Didn't these? ~ So, when we analyze a cart's construction, we can't find a part named cart. ~ As for me, I would neither appreciate being regarded as a jade rare and expensive, nor as a stone popular and cheap.

[39c33t] Cheng Lin ~ Since antiquity the following may be said to have attained Truth: ~ Heaven, which by Truth is clear. ~ Earth, which by Truth is secure. ~ The gods, which by Truth are divine. ~ The valleys, which by Truth are full. ~ All animate creation, which by Truth are alive. ~ The rulers, which by Truth are capable of rectifying the Empire. ~ Conversely, the following inferences may be stated: ~ Without that which renders it clear, heaven stands the danger of disruption. ~ Without that which renders it secure, earth stands the danger of depression. ~ Without that which renders them divine, the gods stand the danger of impotence. ~ Without that which renders them full, the valleys stand the danger of desiccation. ~ Without that which renders them life, all animate creation stand the danger of annihilation. ~ Without that which renders them capable of rectification, the rulers stand the danger of being overthrown. ~ Humility forms the basis of honour, just as the low ground forms the foundation of a high elevation. ~ Wherefore, the sovereigns are content to call themselves "The Virtueless" and "The Unworthy." ~ Does not this show that they regard humility as a matter of utmost importance? ~ Hence, the most praiseworthy are indifferent about praise. ~ It matters not to them whether they are admired as are beautiful jades, or despised as are rugged stones.

[39c34t] Yi Wu ~ Those of ancient times attained oneness. ~ Heaven attained oneness and became clear; ~ Earth attained oneness and became calm; ~ Spirits attained oneness and became divine; ~ Valleys attained oneness and became full; ~ All things attained oneness and came to life; ~ Dukes and kings attained oneness and became models for the world. ~ All was achieved by oneness. ~ Heaven, without [oneness], becoming clear, might crack; ~ Earth, without [oneness], becoming calm, might explode; ~ Spirits, without [oneness], becoming divine, might be exhausted; ~ Valleys, without [oneness], becoming full, might dry up; ~ All things, without [oneness], receiving life, might perish; ~ Dukes and kings, without [oneness], becoming honorable, might fall. ~ Therefore, the superior takes the inferior as its root. ~ The high recognizes the low as its foundation. ~ Therefore, dukes and kings call themselves ~ "the lonely one", "the little one", and "the worthless one". ~ Is this not to recognize the lowly as the root? ~ Is not this? ~ Therefore, those who wish for great reputation have no reputation. ~ We do not want to be bright as jade or hard as stone.

[39c35t] Han Hiong Tan ~ In antiquity, the person who follows Dao said: ~ If the sky is harmonised with Dao, it will be clear. ~ When the Earth harmonises with Dao, it will be settled. ~ Similarly, the spirits will retain their magic power; ~ The valley will be filled with water. ~ When the ruler follows the way of Dao, his reign will be peaceful. ~ All these are achieved by following the way of Dao. ~ If the sky is not clear, it will split. ~ If the Earth is not settled, it will erupt. ~ When the spirits lose their power, they will become extinct. ~ The valley without water will dry up. ~ All forms of life without nourishment will perish. ~ A ruler who fails to maintain peace will be toppled. ~ Dignitaries rely on the support from commoners. ~ A tall building depends entirely on its base to stay erect. ~ Hence, the rulers customarily use self-deprecating words when referring to themselves. ~ Is this not an acknowledgement that everything originates from a humble beginning? ~ Everyone dislikes words like orphaned, widowed, and unworthy. ~ Yet, the rulers customarily use these terms to describe themselves. ~ The irony is that if you crave for fame, you will end up losing it. ~ The person who follows Dao has no desire to be valued like a beautiful jade. ~ Nor would he like to be rejected as an ugly stone.

[39c36t] Hua-Ching Ni ~ Since ancient times there have been those who have attained the subtle essence of the universe and thus become what they are. ~ Heaven attained the subtle essence of the universe and became clear. ~ Earth attained the subtle essence of the universe and became stable. ~ Divine spirits attained the subtle essence of the universe and became powerful. ~ The Valley of the Universe attained the subtle essence of the universe and became productive. ~ The myriad things attained the subtle essence of the universe and became prosperous. ~ The sages attained the subtle essence of the universe and became wise. ~ All became what they are by attaining the subtle essence of the universe and hence their true nature. ~ Extinction happens to one who violates his true nature. ~ Without being pure, Heaven would cease to be. ~ Without being stable, Earth would burst into bits. ~ Without maintaining their potency, spirits would disperse. ~ Without being productive, the vast Valley of the Universe would become exhausted. ~ Without being reproductive, the myriad things would perish. ~ Without fortifying themselves with integral virtue, sages would stumble and fall. ~ Greatness is rooted in plainness, ~ just as the low forms the foundation of the high. ~ Realizing this, the ancient sovereigns were content to style themselves as desolate, unworthy, and needy. ~ Therefore, one who does not separate his being from the nature of the universe follows the Integral Way. ~ He has no wish to sound like jingling jade pendants in order to court a good name, ~ nor like the rumbling of a stone rolling from a cliff in order to create a bad name. ~ Each one should work on one's own subtle spiritual integration with the subtle essence of the universe.

[39c37t] Chang Chung-yuan ~ In the remote past there were those who attained the One. ~ Attaining the One, heaven became pure. ~ Attaining the One, earth became peaceful. ~ Attaining the One, God became spiritual. ~ Attaining the One, the ocean became full. ~ Attaining the One, ten thousand things came into life. ~ Attaining the One, rulers became the models of the world. ~ All of them became so through the One. ~ Without becoming pure, heaven would have broken. ~ Without becoming peaceful, the earth would have quaked. ~ Without becoming spiritual, God would have crumbled. ~ Without becoming full, the ocean would have drained. ~ Without coming into life, ten thousand things would have perished. ~ Without becoming the models of the world, rulers would have stumbled. ~ Therefore, the worthless serves as the foundation of the worthy. ~ The inferior serves as the basis of the superior. ~ Thus, rulers call themselves isolated men, without merit, and worthless. ~ Is this not enough to prove that the worthless serve as the foundation of the worthy? ~ Hence, the perfect fame is no fame. ~ Rulers do not want to be esteemed as tingling jade; they would rather be plain, solid rock.

[39c38t] Henry Wei ~ Foundation of the Law ~ Fa Pen ~ Since antiquity, these have possessed the One - ~ Heaven in possession of the One has become clear; ~ Earth in possession of the One has become steady; ~ Spirits in possession of the One have become divine; ~ Valleys in possession of the One have become full; ~ Creatures in possession of the One have become alive; ~ Kings and nobles in possession of the One have become exemplary. ~ All the above became what they are in the same way. ~ Heaven without the One to make it clear ~ Is apt to crack; ~ Earth without the One to make it steady ~ Is apt to quake; ~ Spirits without the One to make them divine ~ Are apt to cease operation; ~ Valleys without the One to make them full ~ Are apt to become dry; ~ Creatures without the One to make them alive ~ Are apt to become extinct; ~ Kings and nobles without the One to make them exemplary ~ Are apt to lose their prestige and eminence. ~ Forsooth, the honorable is rooted in the humble, ~ And the high is founded on the low. ~ So kings and nobles call themselves orphaned, lonely, and unworthy. ~ Does not this indicate that the honorable is rooted in the humble? ~ Indeed, if a chariot is taken apart, ~ There will no longer be any chariot. ~ Desire not to be like polished jade, ~ But rather to be like rough rocks.

[39c40t] Tao Huang ~ Those from the past have attained Oneness. ~ By attaining Oneness, heaven is clear. ~ By attaining Oneness, earth is at peace. ~ By attaining Oneness, the spirit is quickened. ~ By attaining Oneness, the valley is filled. ~ By attaining Oneness, the king puts order in the whole world. ~ All these result from Oneness. ~ Without its clarity, heaven is liable to explode. ~ Without its peace, earth is liable to erupt. ~ Without its quickening, the spirit is liable to die out. ~ Without its fullness, valleys are liable to dry out. ~ Without proper esteem, the king is liable to fall. ~ Esteem is rooted in the humble. ~ The high is founded upon the low. ~ This is why the lords and rulers call themselves widows and orphans without support. ~ Is this is not the root of being humble? ~ Much praise amounts to no praise. ~ Without preference, Being is as resonant as Jade and as gravelly as stone.

[39c41t] Tang Zi-chang ~ Since the beginning of Heaven and Earth, there were things attaining balance: ~ through attaining balance, Heavens equilibrated; ~ through attaining balance, the Earth became secure; ~ through attaining balance, minds became calm; ~ through attaining balance, valleys became capacious; ~ through attaining balance, All Things became productive; ~ through attaining balance, rulers achieved justice throughout the world. ~ Were the heavens are not equilibrated, they might collapse; ~ were the Earth not secure, it might quake to bits; ~ were minds not calm, they might be disrupted; ~ were valleys not capacious, they might dry up; ~ were All Things non-productive, they might become extinct; ~ were rulers not obtaining justice throughout the world, they might fall. ~ Hence, the rulers established the rule based on the ruled; ~ and the highness was built upon the foundation of the lowness. ~ When rulers called themselves "orphans", "widows" and "indigents" reminds that they established the rule according to the needs of the ruled. ~ Did they not? ~ Thus frequent flattery becomes no flattery. ~ Therefore, a perfect gentleman has no excessive desires: ~ He is smooth like smooth jade! ~ He is solid like solid rock!

[39c42t] Wing-tsit Chan ~ Of old those that obtained the One: ~ Heaven obtained the One and became clear. ~ Earth obtained the One and became tranquil. ~ The spiritual beings obtained the One and became divine. ~ The valley obtained the One and became full. ~ The myriad things obtained the One and lived and grew. ~ Kings and barons obtained the One and became rulers of the empire. ~ What made them so is the One. ~ If heaven had not thus become clear, ~ It would soon crack. ~ If the earth had not thus become tranquil, ~ It would soon be shaken. ~ If the spiritual beings had not thus become divine, ~ They would soon wither away. ~ If the valley had not thus become full, ~ It would soon become exhausted. ~ If the myriad things had not thus lived and grown, ~ They would soon become extinct. ~ If kings and barons had not thus become honorable and high in position, ~ They would soon fall. ~ Therefore humble station is the basis of honor. ~ The low is the foundation of the high. ~ For this reason kings and barons call themselves children without parents, lonely people without spouses, and men without food to eat. ~ Is this not regarding humble station as the basis of honor? ~ Is it not? ~ Therefore enumerate all the parts of a chariot as you may, and you still have no chariot. ~ Rather than jingle like the jade, ~ Rumble like the rocks.

Разве не так? ~ Отсюда и выходит, что все части, из которых состоит повозка, повозкой еще не являются. ~ Не стремись быть редким словно яшма или многим как простые камни.

[39c92t] А. А. [39c94t] А. Е. Лукьянов ~ Вот те, кто в древности обрели единство: ~ Небо обрело единство чистотой, ~ Земля обрела единство незыблемостью, ~ дух обрел единство духовностью (лин), ~ лоно [Поднебесной] обрело единство полнотой, ~ мириады вещей обрели единство рождением, ~ хоу и ваны обрели единство, став воплощением честности для Поднебесной. ~ Они достигли этого. ~ Небо, не став чистым, боюсь, может лопнуть. ~ Земля, не став незыблемой, боюсь, может рассыпаться. ~ Дух, не став одухотворенным, боюсь, может истощиться. ~ Мириады вещей, не рождаясь, боюсь, могут исчезнуть. ~ Хоу и ваны, не став ценимыми и высокопочитаемыми, боюсь, могут оступиться. ~ Основой дорогого (благородного) является дешевое (худородное). ~ Основой высокого является низкое. ~ Поэтому хоу и ваны называют себя сирыми, одинокими, несчастными. ~ Это не оттого ли, что дешевое (худородное) является основой? ~ А разве нет?! ~ Однако если за несколькими колесницами погонишься, ни одну не догонишь. ~ Не желай сверкать словно драгоценная яшма, будь блеклым, как простой камень.

[41c01t] Robert G. Henricks ~ When the highest type of {men hear} the Way, with diligence they're able to practice it; ~ When average men hear the Way, some things they retain and others they lose; ~ When the lowest type of men hear the Way, they laugh out loud at it. ~ If they didn't laugh at it, {it couldn't} be regarded as the Way. ~ Therefore, there is a set saying about this that goes: ~ The bright Way appears to be dark; ~ The Way that goes forward appears to retreat; ~ The smooth Way appears to be uneven; ~ The highest virtue [is empty] like a valley; ~ The purest white appears to be soiled; ~ Vast virtue appears to be insufficient; ~ Firm virtue appears {thin and weak}; ~ The simplest {reality appears to change}. ~ The Great Square has no corners; ~ The Great Vessel takes long to complete; ~ The Great Tone makes little sound; ~ The Great Image has no shape. ~ The Way is Great but has no name. ~ Only the Way is good at beginning things and also good at bringing things to completion.

[41c02t] John C. H. Wu ~ WHEN a wise scholar hears the Tao, ~ He practices it diligently. ~ When a mediocre scholar hears the Tao, ~ He wavers between belief and unbelief. ~ When a worthless scholar hears the Tao, ~ He laughs boisterously at it. ~ But if such a one does not laugh at it, ~ The Tao would not be the Tao! ~ The wise men of old have truly said: ~ The bright Way looks dim. ~ The progressive Way looks retrograde. ~ The smooth Way looks rugged. ~ High Virtue looks like an abyss. ~ Great whiteness looks spotted. ~ Abundant Virtue looks deficient. ~ Established Virtue looks shabby. ~ Solid Virtue looks as though melted. ~ Great squareness has no corners. ~ Great talents ripen late. ~ Great sound is silent. ~ Great Form is shapeless. ~ The Tao is hidden and nameless; ~ Yet it alone knows how to render help and to fulfill.

[41c03t] D. C. Lau ~ When the best student hears about the way ~ He practises it assiduously; ~ When the average student hears about the way ~ It seems to him one moment there and gone the next; ~ When the worst student hears about the way ~ He laughs out loud. ~ If he did not laugh ~ It would be unworthy of being the way. ~ Hence the {Chien yen} has it: ~ The way that is bright seems dull; ~ The way that leads forward seems to lead backward; ~ The way that is even seems rough. ~ The highest virtue is like the valley; ~ The sheerest whiteness seems sullied; ~ Ample virtue seems defective; ~ Vigorous virtue seems indolent; ~ Plain virtue seems soiled; ~ The great square has no corners. ~ The great vessel takes long to complete; ~ The great note is rarefied in sound; ~ The great image has no shape. ~ The way conceals itself in being nameless. ~ It is the way alone that excels in bestowing and in accomplishing.

[41c04t] R. L. Wing ~ When superior leaders hear of the Tao, ~ They diligently try to practice it. ~

When average leaders hear of the Tao, ~ They appear both aware and unaware of it. ~ When inferior leaders hear of the Tao, ~ They roar with laughter. ~ Without sufficient laughter, it could not be the Tao; ~ Hence the long-established sayings: ~ The Tao illuminated appears to be obscure; ~ The Tao advancing appears to be retreating; ~ The Tao leveled appears to be uneven. ~ Superior Power appears to be low; ~ Great clarity appears to be spotted; ~ Extensive Power appears to be insufficient; ~ Established Power appears to be stolen; ~ Substantial Power appears to be spurious. ~ The greatest space has no corners; ~ The greatest talents are slowly mastered; ~ The greatest music has the rarest sound; ~ The Great Image has no form. ~ The Tao is hidden and nameless, ~ Yet it is the Tao that skillfully supports and completes.

[41c05t] Ren Jiyu ~ When the highest shi hear Tao, they diligently practise it. ~ When the average shi hear Tao, they half believe it. ~ When the lowest shi hear Tao, (thinking it empty) they laugh greatly at it. ~ If they didn't laugh, it would be contrary to Tao. ~ Therefore there are some old sayings: ~ "The Tao that is bright seems to be dark; ~ The Tao that goes forward seems to retreat; ~ The Tao that is level seems to be uneven; ~ The lofty De (Virtue) looks like a humble valley; ~ The greatest glory looks like disgrace; ~ The greatest De looks insufficient; ~ The vigorous De looks inert; ~ The simple purity looks changeable; ~ The great square has no corners; ~ The valuable vessel is always completed lastly; ~ The greatest sound sounds faint; ~ The greatest form looks formless." ~ Tao is hidden and nameless, ~ It is only Tao that initiates all beings and brings them to completion.

[41c06t] Gia-fu Feng ~ The wise student hears of the Tao and practices it diligently. ~ The average student hears of the Tao and gives it thought now and again. ~ The foolish student hears of the Tao and laughs aloud. ~ If there were no laughter, the Tao would not be what it is. ~ Hence it is said: ~ The bright path seems dim; ~ Going forward seems like retreat; ~ The easy way seems hard; ~ The highest Virtue seems empty; ~ Great purity seems sullied; ~ A wealth of Virtue seems inadequate; ~ The strength of Virtue seems frail; ~ Real Virtue seems unreal; ~ The perfect square has no corners; ~ Great talents ripen late; ~ The highest notes are hard to hear; ~ The greatest form has no shape. ~ The Tao is hidden and without name. ~ The Tao alone nourishes and brings everything to fulfillment.

[41c07t] Lok Sang Ho ~ Superior men, hearing about the Dao, ~ Will work diligently under its guidance. ~ Mediocre men, hearing about the Dao, ~ Remembers and then forgets about it. ~ Inferior men, hearing about the Dao, ~ Laughs and jeers at it. ~ If people do not laugh or jeer at it, ~ It is unlikely to be the Dao. ~ Thus it is said: ~ Those whose mind shines with the Dao ~ Appear to be dull and stupid. ~ Those who make progress along the Dao ~ Appear to be falling behind. ~ Those who go astray ~ Appear to be following the Dao. ~ The truly virtuous are humble like a valley, ~ The truly stainless souls appear sullied. ~ A man with many virtues ~ appears to be inadequate. ~ Those who are establishing their virtues ~ look like thieves. ~ The truthful look like good quality turned bad, ~ An infinite space will have no corners. ~ A man who is a great instrument never aspires or strives to be such. ~ A big voice sounds like it is soft. ~ A big symbol has no shape. ~ The Dao is hidden and nameless. ~ Yet nothing is better than the Dao ~ In lending support and helping people accomplish.

[41c08t] Xiaolin Yang ~ When people who have high DE learn about the DAO, they practice it diligently; ~ When people who have medium DE learn about the DAO, they sometimes treat it seriously, sometimes do not; ~ When people who have low DE learn about the DAO, they give it a big laugh. ~ If they do not laugh, the DAO is not the DAO. ~ Therefore, the great men once said, ~ "People who understand the DAO look dull; ~ The more you learn about the DAO, the more you feel like you are retreating; ~ The DAO looks like a smooth road, but when you walk on it, it is rough." ~ The people who have high DE always look as low as the valleys and riverbeds. ~ The people who have broad DE always look incomplete. ~ The people who have strong DE always look lazy. ~ The people who have real DE always look empty. ~ The whitest looks tainted, ~ The squarest looks like it has no right angle, ~ The greatest piece takes the longest time, ~ The biggest sound has no sound, ~ The biggest shape has no shape. ~ The DAO likes to hide and be anonymous. ~ Because the DAO always gives, it accomplishes everything.

[41c09t] Walter Gorn Old, LIKE AND UNLIKE ~ When a wise man hears the Tao, he follows it. ~ When one of average mind hears it, he holds to it a while and presently loses it. ~ When a foolish man hears it, he only laughs at it. ~ If it were not held in derision by such men, it could not rightly be called Tao. ~ Therefore, as the verse-makers would say:- ~ Who shines with Tao is lost in shade; ~ His path in Tao is retrograde, ~ And all his actions are obscure. ~ The highest virtue has no name, ~ The greatest pureness seems but shame; ~ True wisdom seems the least secure. ~ Inherent goodness seems most strange; ~ What most endures is changeless Change; ~ And squareness doth no angles make. ~ The largest vessel none can gird; ~ The loudest voice was never heard; ~ The greatest thing no form doth take. ~ For Tao is hidden, and it has no name; but it is good at beginning and finishing.

[41c10t] James Legge ~ Scholars of the highest class, when they hear about the Tao, earnestly carry it into practice. ~ Scholars of the middle class, when they have heard about it, seem now to keep it and now to lose it. ~ Scholars of the lowest class, when they have heard about it, laugh greatly at it. ~ If it were not (thus) laughed at, it would not be fit to be the Tao. ~ Therefore the sentence-makers have thus expressed themselves: - ~ 'The Tao, when brightest seen, seems light to lack; ~ Who progress in it makes, seems drawing back; ~ Its even way is like a rugged track. ~ Its highest virtue from the vale doth rise; ~ Its greatest beauty seems to offend the eyes; ~ And he has most whose lot the least supplies. ~ Its firmest virtue seems but poor and low; ~ Its solid truth seems change to undergo; ~ Its largest square doth yet no corner show; ~ A vessel great, it is the slowest made; ~ Loud is its sound, but never word it said; ~ A semblance great, the shadow of a shade.' ~ The Tao is hidden, and has no name; ~ but it is the Tao which is skilful at imparting (to all things what they need) and making them complete.

[41c11t] David Hinton ~ When the lofty hear of Way ~ they devote themselves. ~ When the common hear of Way ~ they wonder if it's real or not. ~ And when the lowly hear of Way ~ they laugh out loud. ~ Without that laughter, it wouldn't be Way. ~ Hence the abiding proverbs: ~ Luminous Way seems dark. ~ Advancing Way seems retreating. ~ Formless Way seems manifold. ~ High Integrity seems low-lying. ~ Great whiteness seems tarnished. ~ Abounding Integrity seems lacking. ~ Abiding Integrity seems missing. ~ True essence seems protean. ~ The great square has no corners, ~ and the great implement completes nothing. ~ The great voice sounds faint, ~ and the great image has no shape. ~ Way remains hidden and nameless, ~ but it alone nourishes and brings to completion.

[41c12t] Chichung Huang ~ When the superior scholar hears the Tao, ~ He does his utmost to practice it; ~ When the middling scholar hears the Tao, ~ It seems existent, seems non-existent; ~ When the inferior scholar hears the Tao, ~ He bursts out laughing. ~ If he did not burst out laughing, ~ It would not deserve to be the Tao. ~ Hence, "Established Sayings" has it: ~ "The clear Tao seems obscure; ~ The advancing Tao seems receding; ~ The even Tao seems rugged; ~ Supreme virtue is like a valley; ~ Great white seems black; ~ Abundant virtue seems deficient; ~ Robust virtue seems flabby; ~ Honest truth seems capricious; ~ The great square has no corners; ~ The great vessel is imperfect; ~ The great voice has no sound; ~ The celestial image has no form." ~ The Tao is invisible and nameless; ~ The Tao alone ~ Begins well and ends well.

[41c13t] Ellen M. Chen ~ When a superior person (shan shih) hears Tao, ~ He diligently practices it. ~ When a middling person (chung shih) hears Tao, ~ He hears it, he doesn't hear it. ~ When the inferior person (hsia shih) hears Tao, he roars. ~ If Tao were not laughed at, ~ It would not be Tao. ~ Therefore, established sayings (chien yen) have it this way: ~ "The illuminating (ming) Tao appears (jo) dark, ~ The advancing Tao appears retreating, ~ The level Tao appears knotty (lei). ~ High (shan) te appears like a valley, ~ Great whiteness (po) appears spotted (ju), ~ Expansive te appears insufficient, ~ Well-established te appears weak, ~ The genuine in substance appears hollow. ~ Great (ta) square has no corners, ~ Great vessel (ch'i) is late in completion, ~ Great voice (yin) has hardly (hsi) any sound, ~ Great image is formless, ~ Tao is hidden and without name." ~ Yet it is Tao alone, ~ That is good in lending help and fulfilling all.

[42c01t] Robert G. Henricks ~ The Way gave birth to the One. ~ The One gave birth to the Two. ~ The Two gave birth to the Three. ~ And the Three gave birth to {the ten thousand things}. ~ {The ten thousand things carry Yin on their backs and wrap their arms around Yang}. ~ Through the blending of ch'i they arrive at a state of harmony. ~ The things that are hated by the whole world ~ Are to be orphaned, widowed, and have no grain. ~ Yet kings and dukes take these as their names. ~ Thus with all things - some {are increased} by taking away; ~ While some are diminished by {adding on}. ~ Therefore, {what} other men teach, ~ [I] will also consider and then teach to others. ~ Thus, "The strong and violent do not come to a natural end." ~ I will take this as the father of my studies.

[42c02t] John C. H. Wu ~ TAO gave birth to One, ~ One gave birth to Two, ~ Two gave birth to Three, ~ Three gave birth to all the myriad things. ~ All the myriad things carry the Yin on their backs and hold the Yang in their embrace, ~ Deriving their vital harmony from the proper blending of the two vital Breaths. ~ What is more loathed by men than to be "helpless," "little," and "worthless"? ~ And yet these are the very names the princes and barons call themselves. ~ Truly, one may gain by losing; ~ And one may lose by gaining. ~ What another has taught let me repeat: ~ "A man of violence will come to a violent end." ~ Whoever said this can be my teacher and my father.

[42c03t] D. C. Lau ~ The way begets one; ~ One begets two; ~ Two begets three; ~ Three begets the myriad creatures. ~ The myriad creatures carry on their backs the yin and embrace in their arms the yang and are the blending of the generative forces of the two. ~ There are no words which men detest more than 'solitary', 'desolate', and 'hapless', yet lords and princes use these to refer to themselves. ~ Thus a thing is sometimes added to by being diminished and diminished by being added to. ~ What others teach I also teach. ~ 'The violent will not come to a natural end.' ~ I shall take this as my precept.

[42c04t] R. L. Wing ~ The Tao produced the One. ~ The One produced the Two. ~ The Two produced the Three. ~ The Three produced All Things. ~ All Things carry Yin and hold to Yang; ~ Their blended Influence brings Harmony. ~ People hate to be alone, lonely, and unfavored; ~ And yet leaders take these names. ~ Thus in Natural Law ~ Some lose and in this way profit. ~ Some profit and in this way lose. ~ What others have taught, I also teach: ~ Those who are violent do not die naturally. ~ I will make this my chief teaching.

[42c05t] Ren Jiyu ~ Tao gives birth to the unified thing (One), ~ The One splits itself into two opposite aspects (Two), ~ The Two gives birth to another (Three), ~ The newborn Third produces a myriad of things. ~ The myriad of things contain the Yin and Yang within themselves as opposite forces, ~ Both of them (Yin and Yang) are unified with harmony in the invisible breath. ~ People disdain the "orphaned," "solitary" or "unworthy," ~ And yet they are the very names by which kings and dukes call themselves. ~ Therefore all things may increase when purposely diminished, ~ And they may diminish when increased. ~ What people teach each other, I also teach: ~ "The violent and strong does not die his natural death," ~ I will make that fact the beginning of my teaching.

[42c06t] Gia-fu Feng ~ The Tao begot one. ~ One begot two. ~ Two begot three. ~ And three begot the ten thousand things. ~ The ten thousand things carry yin and embrace yang. ~ They achieve harmony by combining these forces. ~ Men hate to be "orphaned," "widowed," or "worthless," ~ But this is how kings and lords describe themselves. ~ For one gains by losing ~ And loses by gaining. ~ What others teach, I also teach; that is: ~ "A violent man will die a violent death!" ~ This will be the essence of my teaching.

[42c07t] Lok Sang Ho ~ The Dao gives birth to the One. ~ The One gives birth to the Two(yin and yang). ~ The Two give birth to the Three(heaven, earth, and man). ~ The Three give birth to all things as we know them. ~ All living things bear the female nature ~ And espouse the male nature. ~ In interacting with each other ~ these two natures result in a new harmony. ~ It is well known that people generally hate ~ to be lonely, widowed, or under-provided. ~ Yet kings and people who wield power ~ call themselves lonely, widowed, or under-provided. ~ Things may benefit people through imposing losses on them, ~ And may hurt them through bestowing apparent benefits. ~ I teach the same kind of people that others teach. ~ But by a single maxim that I teach, that ~ "Those who use sheer force to make their ways ~ Will not die a good death" ~ I should become the teacher of all teachers.

[42c08t] Xiaolin Yang ~ The DAO produces ONE; ~ ONE produces the YIN and YANG (TWO), ~ the YIN and YANG produce harmonic spirit (THREE), ~ harmonic spirit produces everything. ~ Everything is based on the YIN-YANG and is filled with harmonic spirit. ~ The things people dislike the most are the singles, the widowers, and the unkind. ~ However, the kings call themselves these bad names. ~ So, things sometimes get hurt but benefit, sometimes benefit but get hurt. ~ What others taught me I will now teach you: The bullies will die unnaturally. ~ I treat this as the base of my teaching.

[42c09t] Walter Gorn Old, THE CHANGES OF TAO ~ Tao emaned the One; the one emaned the Two;

and the two emaned the Three. ~ From the Three all things have proceeded. ~ All things are backed by the Unmanifest and faced by the Manifest. ~ That which unites them is the immaterial breath. ~ Orphanage, isolation, and a chariot without wheels are shunned by the people; but kings and great men appropriate these names to themselves. ~ For things are increased by being deprived; and being added to they are diminished. ~ That which people teach by their actions I make use of to instruct them. ~ Those who are violent and headstrong, for example, do not die a natural death. ~ They teach a good lesson, and so I make use of them.

[42c10t] James Legge ~ The Tao produced One; ~ One produced Two; ~ Two produced Three; ~ Three produced All things. ~ All things leave behind them the Obscurity (out of which they have come), and go forward to embrace the Brightness (into which they have emerged), while they are harmonised by the Breath of Vacancy. ~ What men dislike is to be orphans, to have little virtue, to be as carriages without naves; ~ and yet these are the designations which kings and princes use for themselves. ~ So it is that some things are increased by being diminished, and others are diminished by being increased. ~ What other men (thus) teach, I also teach. ~ The violent and strong do not die their natural death. ~ I will make this the basis of my teaching.

[42c11t] David Hinton ~ Way gave birth to one, ~ and one gave birth to two. ~ Two gave birth to three, ~ and three gave birth to the ten thousand things. ~ Then the ten thousand things shouldered yin and embraced yang, ~ blending ch'i to establish harmony. ~ People all hate scraping by orphaned, destitute, ill-fated, but true dukes and emperors call themselves just that. ~ Some things gain by loss, and some lose by gain. ~ I only teach ~ what the people teach: ~ Tyranny and force never come to a natural end. ~ I've taken the people as my schoolmaster.

[42c12t] Chichung Huang ~ The Tao generated one; ~ One generated two; ~ Two generated three; ~ Three generated the ten thousand things. ~ The ten thousand things, ~ Carrying yin and embracing yang, ~ Used the empty vapor to achieve harmony. ~ What people loathe most are ~ Inadequacy, deficiency and unworthiness, ~ Yet, kings and dukes use them ~ To refer to themselves. ~ People sometimes gain through losing; ~ Sometimes lose through gaining. ~ Therefore, what kings teach, ~ I also choose to teach kings: ~ "A brute does not die a natural death." ~ I shall use it as the father of learning.

[42c13t] Ellen M. Chen ~ Tao gives birth to one, ~ One gives birth to two, ~ Two gives birth to three, ~ Three gives birth to ten thousand beings. ~ Ten thousand beings carry yin on their backs and embrace yang in their front, ~ Blending these two vital breaths (ch'i) to attain harmony (ho). ~ What people hate most, ~ Are to be orphaned, widowed and unworthy. ~ Yet kings and dukes call themselves by these. ~ Thus things are either decreased so as to be increased, ~ Or increased (i) so as to be decreased (sun). ~ What others teach, ~ I also teach: ~ "The strong and violent (ch'iang liang) do not die a natural death." ~ This I shall hold as the father (fu) of my teaching.

[42c14t] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ In the beginning, Tao is Oneness [per se]; ~ Out of Oneness [after the inner split] twofold [contrasts, such as odd and even or steeliness and flexibility] were originated; ~ From these twofold threefold (odd, even and odd-even) were brought into existence; ~ Thence myriad things and creatures evolved ad infinitum through [combination] of threefold (odd, even and odd-even). ~ All things and creatures hold inwardly propensities (Yin), while they carry outwardly manifestations (Yang); ~ These two forces are amalgamated and harmonized [within a person to form his personal] bearings (vitality). ~ Therefore, the weakening of [either steeliness or flexibility elements] from a thing (project) may benefit it; ~ The strengthening [of either steeliness and flexibility elements] from a thing (project) may damage it. [It all depends on circumstances]. ~ My teaching is the unified theory based on my knowledge of [various] learnings of our forefathers taught to me [by scholars in court]; ~ [My motto is] "One who imposes his way by force to sit on top of others will die of unnatural causes (by violence)." ~ I shall always adopt this as the guideline of my teaching.

[42c15t] Tien Cong Tran ~ The Way gives birth to one. ~ One gives birth to two. ~ Two gives birth to three. ~ Three gives birth to ten thousand things. ~ All things carry the yin on their backs and embrace the yang in their arms. ~ They are harmony with each other because of these two null ethers. ~ What is more loathed by men than to be "solitary," "little," and "worthless"? ~ Yet these are the very names the kings and lords call themselves. ~ Therefore, one may gain by losing; and one may lose by gaining. ~ What ancients taught I repeat: "A man of violence will die an unnatural death." ~ Whoever said this is my teacher.

[42c16t] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ Tao produce unity. ~ Unity splits into two. ~ Two gives birth to three. ~ Three produces everything. ~ Everything carries Yin and embraces Yang. ~ Yin and Yang work together makes harmony. ~ Loneliness, friendlessness, and worthlessness are generally disliked. ~ Yet, kings and lords use these terms to describe themselves. ~ Things can benefit from damages. ~ Things can also be damaged from benefits. ~ Therefore, I can teach what the other taught me: ~ Those who act against the law of the Nature will never get what they want. ~ This is a basic principle for me to teach.

[42c17t] Arthur Waley ~ Tao gave birth to the One; the One gave birth successively to two things, three things, up to ten thousand. ~ These ten thousand creatures cannot turn their backs to the shade without having the sun on their bellies, and it is on this blending of the breaths that their harmony depends. ~ To be orphaned, needy, ill-provided is what men most hate; yet princes and dukes style themselves so. ~ Truly, 'things are often increased by seeking to diminish them and diminished by seeking to increase them.' ~ The maxims that others use in their teaching I too will use in mine. ~ Show me a man of violence that came to a good end, and I will take him for my teacher.

[42c18t] Richard John Lynn ~ The Dao begets the One; ~ the One begets two; ~ two beget three; ~ and three beget the myriad things. ~ The myriad things, bearing yin and embracing yang, form a unified harmony through the fusing of these vital forces. ~ What people most hate are "the orphan," "the widower," and "the unworthy," yet lords and princes use these terms to refer to themselves. ~ Thus it is that some are augmented by being diminished, and others are diminished by being augmented. ~ What others teach, I also teach. ~ The dangerously bold do not get to die a natural death, so I am going to use them as the fathers of my teaching.

[42c19t] Lin Yutang ~ THE VIOLENT MAN ~ Out of Tao, One is born; ~ Out of One, Two; ~ Out of Two, Three; ~ Out of Three, the created universe. ~ The created universe carries the yin at its back and the yang in front; ~ Through the union of the pervading principles it reaches harmony. ~ To be "orphaned," "lonely" and "unworthy" is what men hate most. ~ Yet the princes and dukes call themselves by such names. ~ For sometimes things are benefited by being taken away from, ~ And suffer by being added to. ~ Others have taught this maxim, ~ Which I shall teach also: ~ "The violent man shall die a violent death." ~ This I shall regard as my spiritual teacher.

[42c20t] Victor H. Mair ~ The Way gave birth to unity, ~ Unity gave birth to duality, ~ Duality gave birth to trinity, ~ Trinity gave birth to the myriad creatures. ~ The myriad creatures bear yin on their backs and embrace yang in their bosoms. ~ They neutralize these vapors ~ and thereby achieve harmony. ~ That which all under heaven hate most ~ Is to be orphaned, destitute, and hapless. ~ Yet kings and dukes call themselves thus. ~ Things may be diminished by being increased, increased by being diminished. ~ Therefore, ~ That which people teach, ~ After deliberation, I also teach people. ~ Therefore, ~ "The tyrant does not die a natural death." ~ I take this as my mentor.

[42c21t] Tolbert McCarroll ~ The Tao gives birth to the One. ~ The One gives birth to two. ~ Two gives birth to three. ~ And three gives birth to the ten thousand things. ~ The ten thousand things have their backs in the shadow while they embrace the light. ~ Harmony is achieved by blending the breaths of these two forces. ~ People dislike the words "alone," "helpless," "worthless," yet this is how Princes describe themselves. ~ So it is that sometimes a thing is increased by being diminished and diminished by being increased. ~ What others teach I also teach: ~ "A violent person will not die a natural death." ~ I shall make this the basis of my teaching.

[42c22t] David H. Li ~ From Direction, One is born. ~ From One, Two is born. ~ From Two, Three is born. ~ From Three, myriad matters are born. ~ Myriad matters turn their backs on yin and embrace yang. ~ The complement of their energy produces harmony. ~ What people dislike are loneliness, isolation, and ungraciousness, ~ yet this is how Dukes and Princes self-address. ~ Thus, a matter expands through contraction; ~ contracts through expansion. ~ This is what others have taught me; ~ let me teach others the same: "A violent person does not die in place." ~ This is the theme of my teaching.

[42c23t] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ The Tao, the wholeness, gives rise to oneness. ~ Oneness gives rise to complementary unity. ~ Complementary unity gives rise to complementary trinity. ~ Complementary trinity gives rise to everything in existence. ~ Everything consists of the complementarity of yang in the center and yin surrounding it. ~ From the balanced interchange between the two arises equilibrium in disequilibrium. ~ Ordinary people hate nothing more than to be powerless, unworthy, or destitute. ~ Yet this is what people in high position call themselves. ~ This means, in accordance with the principle of complementarity, ~ That to lose is to gain and to gain is to lose. ~ Let me repeat what others have taught: ~ The strong and violent, being out of balance, do not die natural deaths. ~ This is the very foundation of my teaching.

[42c24t] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ Your reputation or your person, which is closer to you? ~ Your person or your property, which is dearer to you? ~ Profit or loss, which is worse for you? ~ Over-eagerness leads to over-spending. ~ Too much property leads to too much loss. ~ Therefore, the person who is content with his lot will not know disgrace, ~ And the person who knows where to stop will never disappear, ~ He will exist forever.

[42c25t] Man-Ho Kwok ~ The Tao gives birth to the One; ~ The One gives birth to the two; ~ The Two give birth to the three - ~ The Three give birth to every living thing. ~ All things are held in yin, and carry yang: ~ And they are held together in the ch'i of teeming energy.

[42c26t] Gu Zhengkun ~ The Tao begets the One; ~ The One consists of Two in opposition (the Yin and Yang); ~ The Two begets the Three; ~ The Three begets all things of the world. ~ All things connote the Yin and Yang. ~ The Yin and Yang keep acting upon each other ~ And thus things keep changing and unifying themselves. ~ Words like "the solitary", "the few" and "the unkind" ~ Are usually detested by people, ~ Yet lords and kings use them to call themselves. ~ That is why ~ A thing is sometimes added to when being reduced, ~ Or is reduced when being added to. ~ So I teach what I am taught: ~ "The violent will not come to a good end." ~ This I will take as the first lesson when I teach.

[42c27t] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ The Tao bears the 'One'. ~ The 'One' bears the 'Two'. ~ The 'Two' bears the 'Three'. ~ The 'Three' bears the myriad creatures. ~ The myriad creatures carry yin and embrace yang, which both melt into 'chi' - the energy of life - to achieve harmony. ~ People detest above all orphanhood and widowhood, yet the rulers use these titles to describe themselves. ~ That is why in losing much is gained, and in gaining much is lost. ~ What others teach, I teach also: ~ He who is a ferocious adversary does nothing else but cause his own death. ~ With these words I will maintain my teaching.

[42c28t] Liu Qixuan ~ The Way produces one. ~ One produces two. ~ Two produces three. ~ Three produces everything. ~ Everything has polar elements in it ~ That interact to achieve harmony. ~ People all hate being isolated, helpless and wicked, ~ But kings use these words as their titles. ~ Therefore, things can gain from losses ~ And can lose because of gainings. ~ I just teach what I have been taught. ~ Those who willfully go against the Way ~ Will die an undue death, ~ And are fit to be my textbook.

[42c29t] Shi Fu Hwang ~ Violent Man's Fate ~ Lao Tze says, ~ From Tao arises one; ~ from one arises two; ~ from two arises three, and from three arise all things. ~ All things leave behind them the obscurity (Ying), and go forward to embrace the brightness (Yang) and inherit the blending property of the two harmonized polarities. ~ What men dislike is to be called solitary, unworthy, virtueless; ~ and yet those kings and princes regard them matching to their status. ~ So those things are benefitted by being harmed, others are harmed by being benefitted. ~ While other men have taught their precept, I have my own, ~ - the violent man shall die a violent death. ~ I will make this the basis of my teaching.

[42c30t] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ Tao begets One; one begets two; two begets three; three begets all things. ~ All things are backed by the Shade (yin) and faced by the Light (yang), and harmonized by the immaterial Breath (ch'i). ~ What others teach, I also teach: ~ 'The daring and violent do not die a natural death.' ~ This (maxim) I shall regard as my instructor.

[42c31t] Paul J. Lin ~ Tao begets One. ~ One begets Two. ~ Two begets Three. ~ Three begets all things. ~ All things carry the female and embrace the male. ~ And by breathing together, they live in harmony. ~ What the people hate is being orphaned, widowed, and starved. ~ But kings and dukes call themselves these names. ~ Therefore everything can be augmented when diminished, and diminished when augmented. ~ What the people teach, I teach too. ~ The violent and fierce cannot die a natural death. ~ I will become the father of teaching.

[42c32t] Michael LaFargue ~ Tao produced The One; ~ The One produced Two; ~ Two produced Three; ~ Three produced the thousands of things. ~ The thousands of things: ~ Turn their backs on the quiet and dark, ~ and embrace the aggressive and bright. ~ An Empty ch'i brings Harmony. ~ What people look down upon: ~ to be orphaned, poor, destitute. ~ But the kings and princes ~ make these names into titles. ~ Yes, things: ~ Sometimes you reduce them, and they are enlarged; ~ sometimes you enlarge them, and they are reduced. ~ What another has taught, I also teach: ~ "A violent man will not reach his natural end." ~ I will make of this the father of my teaching.

[42c33t] Cheng Lin ~ Truth gave birth to one; ~ one gave birth to two; ~ two gave birth to three; ~ three gave birth to the multitude of things which attain the state of harmony when the opposite elements of Ying and Yang are mingled in a well-balanced manner. ~ Men dislike to be called "The Virtueless" or "The Unworthy." ~ But these are the names with which the sovereigns style themselves. ~ Hence, a thing may seem diminished when it is actually augmented, and it may seem augmented when it is actually diminished. ~ What other men teach, I also teach: ~ "The violent and overbearing men will die an unnatural death." ~ This will form the main theme of my teaching.

[42c34t] Yi Wu ~ The Way brings forth one, ~ One brings forth two, ~ Two bring forth three, ~ Three bring forth all things. ~ All things carry the dark and embrace the light ~ and make them harmonize with empty energy. ~ People dislike "the lonely one", "the little one", and "the worthless one", ~ But kings and dukes call themselves by these names. ~ Therefore, everything may gain by losing ~ and may lose by gaining. ~ What people teach, I also teach: ~ "The man of violence will not die well." ~ I will take this as the father of my teaching.

[42c35т] Han Hiong Tan ~ Dao engenders one. (Tai-chi) ~ One engenders two. (Yin and Yang) ~ Two engenders three. (combinations of Yin and Yang) ~ Three engenders everything. ~ Everything carries Yin and embraces Yang. ~ The mixing of Yin and Yang becomes an entity. ~ People dislike words like orphaned, widowed and unworthy. ~ Nevertheless, the lords use these terms as their titles. ~ An affair may finally turn out well despite a very bad start. ~ Conversely, it could turn out badly with a good start. ~ That is what I have learnt: nothing is certain in life. ~ I will use this to teach others. ~ However, I will still use ~ "Those who resort to violence will die by violence" as my principal teaching.

[42c36т] Hua-Ching Ni ~ The universal subtle essence gave birth to One. ~ One gave birth to Two. ~ Two gave birth to Three. ~ Three gave birth to the Myriad Things. ~ All lives have their backs to the yin and embrace the yang. ~ There is nothing more loathed by people than to be orphaned, desolate, and hapless. ~ Yet the wise ancient kings, princes, and barons used such titles to refer to themselves. ~ A thing is sometimes benefitted by being humbled, ~ and diminished by being expanded. ~ What the ancients have taught, I also shall teach: ~ "A man of force and violence will come to a violent end." ~ Whoever said this can be my teacher and father.

[42c37т] Chang Chung-yuan ~ From the Tao, one is created; ~ From one, two; ~ From two, three; ~ From three, ten thousand things. ~ All of them achieve harmony through the unification of affirmation and negation ~ Which is embraced by everything. ~ No one likes to be isolated (ku), without merit (kua), or worthless (pu ku), ~ Yet rulers refer to themselves with these names. ~ Thus, some things add to their value by reducing their value. ~ Some things reduce their value by adding to their value. ~ Other ancients have taught this; I teach it too. ~ "The man of violence will end his life in violence." ~ This is a basic motto.

[42c38т] Henry Wei ~ Tao and Transformation ~ Tao Hua ~ Tao gave birth to One; ~ One gave birth to Two; ~ Two gave birth to Three; ~ Three gave birth to the ten thousand things. ~ The ten thousand things carry Yin and embrace Yang. ~ The two primordial breaths blend and produce harmony. ~ To be orphaned or lonely or unworthy ~ Is what all people detest; ~ Yet kings and nobles apply those terms to themselves. ~ Indeed, things sometimes benefit by an intended injury, ~ And sometimes receive injury from an intended benefit. ~ What others teach, I shall also teach: ~ "The strong and violent will die an unnatural death." ~ This will serve as my chief lesson.

[42c39т] Ha Poong Kim ~ Tao gives birth to One; ~ One gives birth to Two; ~ Two give birth to Three, ~ Three give birth to the ten thousand things. ~ The ten thousand things carry the yin on their backs and hold the yang in their arms; ~ And attain harmony through the blending of the two energies. ~ What people detest most ~ Is to be orphaned, widowed and ill-provided. ~ But that is how kings and princes call themselves. ~ Therefore, of things, some gain by losing, ~ Some lose by gaining. ~ What others teach ~ I also teach. ~ "The violent one will not attain his death." ~ I will take this to be my teacher.

[42c40т] Tao Huang ~ Tao gives rise to one. ~ One gives rise to two. ~ Two gives rise to three. ~ Three gives rise to all things. ~ All things carry yin and embrace yang, ~ Drawing Chi together into harmony. ~ What the world hates is the widow and orphan without support. ~ But lords and rulers name themselves these. ~ Do not seek gain from losing, nor loss from gaining. ~ What people teach, after discussion becomes doctrine. ~ Those who excel in strength do not prevail over death. ~ I would use this as the father of teaching.

[42c41т] Tang Zi-chang ~ Dao gave birth to One - Existence: Heaven; ~ One gave birth to Two - Coexistence: Heaven and Earth; ~ Two gave birth to Three: Heaven, Earth and Life; ~ and Three gave birth to All Things. ~ All Things are sustained by Yin - the inactive cosmic gas, and are embraced by Yang - the active cosmic gas. ~ To produce these gases into orderly use is to harmonize them. ~ What the people hate are: "orphanhood", "widowhood" and "indigence". ~ Yet these terms are used as designations by rulers. ~ Materialistically, one may gain by losing, ~ Similarly, one may lose by gaining. ~ What people preach I also preach. ~ Then I shall be the master of preaching. ~ A violent person cannot die a natural death.

[42c42т] Wing-tsit Chan ~ Tao produced the One. ~ The One produced the two. ~ The two produced the three. ~ And the three produced the ten thousand things. ~ The ten thousand things carry the yin and embrace the yang, and through the blending of the material force they achieve harmony. ~ People hate to be children without parents, lonely people without spouses, or men without food to eat, ~ And yet kings and lords call themselves by these names. ~ Therefore it is often the case that things gain by losing and lose by gaining. ~ What others have taught, I teach also: ~ "Violent and fierce people do not die a natural death." ~ I shall make this the father of my teaching.

[42c93т] Е. А. Торчинов ~ Дао рождает Одно. ~ Одно Двоих рождает. ~ Двое рождают Трех. ~ Трое рождают все сущее. ~ Все сущее носит на себе инь - силу темную и обнимает ян - силу светлую, так достигая гармонии энергий жизни и сил равновесия. ~ Теми именами, что люди так не любят: "сирыми", "одинокими", "недостойными", - цари и правящие князья сами себя зовут. ~ Поэтому таков существования принцип: вещь, умаляясь, возрастает, а возрастая - умаляется. ~ Тому же я учу, чему все люди учат: "Насильник и тиран своей не умирает смертью". ~ Вот мудрость эту я и сделаю своим учителем.

[42c98т] Б. Б. Виногродский ~ Путь рождает один. ~ Один рождает два. ~ Два рождает три. ~ Три рождает мириады сущностей. ~ Для мириад сущностей то, что давит на спину - Инь, а что обнимают спереди - Ян. ~ Через срединность дыхания-ци осуществляют гармонию. ~ Люди в первую очередь не любят быть сирыми, вдовыми, не-прикаянными, а правители и удельные князья так и называют себя. ~ Причинность: ~ Для сущности и убыль может обернуться прибылью. ~ А может и прибыль обернуться убылью. ~ Чему люди учат, тому учу и я. ~ Коль сильный хребет, то умрешь, так и не обретя. ~ Сущность моя - это и делает родителем своего учения.

[43c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ The softest, most pliable thing in the world runs roughshod over the firmest thing in the world. ~ That which has no substance gets into that which has no spaces or cracks. ~ I therefore know {that there is} benefit in taking no action. ~ The {wordless} teaching, the benefit of taking no action - ~ Few in the world can realize these!

[43c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ THE softest of all things ~ Overrides the hardest of all things. ~ Only Nothing can enter into no-space. ~ Hence I know the advantages of Non-Ado. ~ Few things under heaven are as instructive as the lessons of Silence, ~ Or as beneficial as the fruits of Non-Ado.

[43c03т] D. C. Lau ~ The most submissive thing in the world can ride roughshod over the hardest in the world - ~ That which is without substance entering that which has no crevices. ~ That is why I know the benefit of resorting to no action. ~ The teaching that uses no words, the benefit of resorting to no action, these are beyond the understanding of all but a very few in the world.

[43c04т] R. L. Wing ~ The most yielding parts of the world ~ Overtake the most rigid parts of the world. ~ The insubstantial can penetrate continually. ~ Therefore I know that without action there is advantage. ~ This philosophy without words, ~ This advantage without action - ~ It is rare, in the world, to attain them.

[43c05т] Ren Jiyu ~ The softest thing under Heaven is able to run in and out of the hardest. ~ The invisible force is able to penetrate that in which there is no crevice. ~ Thereby I come to know the advantage of doing nothing. ~ The instructiveness of not speaking and the benefits of nonaction are incomparable under Heaven.

[43c06т] Gia-fu Feng ~ The softest thing in the universe ~ Overcomes the hardest thing in the universe. ~ That without substance can enter where there is no room. ~ Hence I know the value of non-action. ~ Teaching without words and work without doing ~ Are understood by very few.

[43c07т] Lok Sang Ho ~ The most gentle and the most flexible of the world ~ Certainly outperforms the strongest and the hardest. ~ What appears intangible and without substance ~ Can penetrate the narrowest gaps. ~ From this we can appreciate the benefits of not contriving. ~ The wordless teaching, and the benefits of not contriving, ~ Certainly find no match under heaven.

[43c08т] Xiaolin Yang ~ The DAO is the softest thing in the world, ~ But it can ride freely into the hardest places, ~ And there is nowhere it cannot go. ~ I thus know the benefits of WUWEI. ~ The DAO educates without lecturing, benefits with WUWEI; ~ There is nothing in the world that can compare with the DAO.

[43c09т] Walter Gorn Old, UNLIMITED USEFULNESS ~ The gentlest thing in the world will override the strongest. ~ The Non-Existent pervades everything, though there be no inlet. ~ By this I comprehend how effectual is non-action. ~ To teach without words and to be useful without action, few among men are capable of this.

[43c10т] James Legge ~ The softest thing in the world dashes against and overcomes the hardest; ~ that which has no (substantial) existence enters where there is no crevice. ~ I know hereby what advantage belongs to doing nothing (with a purpose). ~ There are few in the world who attain to the teaching without words, and the advantage arising from non-action.

[43c11т] David Hinton ~ The weakest in all beneath heaven gallops through the strongest, and vacant absence slips inside solid presence. ~ I know by this the value of nothing's own doing. ~ The teaching without words, the value of nothing's own doing: few indeed master such things.

[43c12т] Chichung Huang ~ The softest under heaven ~ Gallops over the hardest under heaven; ~ The formless penetrates into the spaceless. ~ I thereby know the benefit of nonaction. ~ The edification of speechlessness ~ The benefit of nonaction - ~ Nothing under heaven can match it.

[43c13т] Ellen M. Chen ~ The softest (chih jou) in the world, ~ Gallops (ch'ih ch'eng) in the hardest (chih chien) in the world. ~ That which is not penetrates that which has no crevice (wu yu ju wu chien). ~ I thereby know the benefit of no-action (wu-wei). ~ The teaching without words, ~ The benefit of no-action, ~ Hardly anything in the world can compare with them.

[43c14т] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ [Water] is the softest and most adaptive thing in the world, but it can flow around, over, and even through the hardest thing, i.e. rocks; ~ Furthermore, it can run around, over, and even through rocks like racing horses; ~ Its force came from nothing [we can describe]; ~ [All we know is that in due course] It can pierce through solid seamless rocks; ~ I therefore learn about the advantage of carrying out the principle of non-interference (abiding by natural forces). ~ [The above paragraph illustrates that:] ~ The [effectiveness of] educating people [through deeds] rather than through speeches, ~ And the advantage of helping [people] through non-interference [i.e. making use of natural propensities], ~ [All of the above are the best policies executed by Sages] ~ Hardly any other practice in this world can match [the extent of their conformity with Tao].

[43c15t] Tien Cong Tran ~ The softest in the world surpasses the hardest in the world. ~ Only Nothing can enter into no-space. ~ Hence, I know the advantages of non-doing. ~ The teaching of no-word, the beneficial of non-doing, - a very few in the world know.

[43c16t] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ The most flexible wins out over the stiffest. ~ The shapeless can be omnipresent. ~ I know it is beneficial not use brute force. ~ The best in the world teach without preaching, and act without using force.

[43c17t] Arthur Waley ~ What is of all things most yielding ~ Can overwhelm that which is of all things most hard. ~ Being substanceless it can enter even where there is no space; ~ That is how I know the value of action that is actionless. ~ But that there can be teaching without words, ~ Value in action that is actionless, ~ Few indeed can understand.

[43c18t] Richard John Lynn ~ The softest things under Heaven gallop through the hardest things. ~ That which has no physical existence can squeeze through where there is no space, so from this I know how advantageous it is to act without conscious purpose. ~ The teaching that is not expressed in words, the advantage that is had by acting without conscious purpose, rare is it that anyone under Heaven ever reaches them.

[43c19t] Lin Yutang ~ THE SOFTEST SUBSTANCE ~ The softest substance of the world ~ Goes through the hardest. ~ That-which-is-without-form penetrates that-which-has-no-crevice; ~ Through this I know the benefit of taking no action. ~ The teaching without words ~ And the benefit of taking no action ~ Are without compare in the universe.

[43c20t] Victor H. Mair ~ The softest thing under heaven gallops triumphantly over ~ The hardest thing under heaven. ~ Nonbeing penetrates nonspace. ~ Hence, ~ I know the advantages of nonaction. ~ The doctrine without words, ~ The advantage of nonaction - ~ few under heaven can realize these!

[43c21t] Tolbert McCarroll ~ The most yielding of all things ~ overcomes the hardest of all things. ~ That which has no substance ~ enters where there is no crevice. ~ Hence, I know the value of action without striving. ~ Few things under heaven bring more benefit than the lessons learned from silence and the actions taken without striving.

[43c22t] David H. Li ~ The world's tenderest is the master of the world's steeliest. ~ Null permeates Ull. ~ I thus know the benefits of laissez-faire. ~ Instructions without words and benefits of laissez-faire - few things in the world can top them.

[43c23t] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ The softest under heaven always prevails over the hardest. ~ For, having no fixed form, ~ It can penetrate even where there is no visible opening. ~ This is the power of balanced action through nonaction. ~ This is the benefit of balanced action through nonaction. ~ Nonaction teaches without words, and benefits without actions. ~ No power in the world can even come close to it.

[43c24t] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ When the learned scholar hears the Tao ~ He makes every effort to master it. ~ When the mediocre scholar hears the Tao ~ It will seem as if he grasps and loses it, alternately. ~ When the weak scholar hears the Tao ~ He laughs wildly, ~ If he had not laughed at it, it would not be worthy to be Tao. ~ Therefore it is written: ~ "The enlightened Tao seems dark, ~ The advanced Tao seems backward, ~ The direct Tao seems obscure, ~ The most exalted quality looks like a valley, ~ The most pristine white looks colorless, ~ The most superior virtue looks insufficient, ~ The most solid quality is like a fragile stalk, ~ The simplest nature looks changeable, ~ The largest square has no angles, ~ The largest vessel is never whole, ~ The loudest sound is hardly heard, ~ The largest image cannot be imagined. ~ Tao, since it is hidden, is nameless." ~ But only the Tao can improve and mend. ~ To separate is to be constructive; to be constructive is to be destructive. ~ All things, whether they are constructive or destructive, lead to the One again.

[43c25t] Man-Ho Kwok ~ The very softest thing of all can ride like a galloping horse through the hardest of things. ~ Like water, like water penetrating rock. ~ And so the invisible enters in. ~ That is why I know it is wise to act by doing nothing. ~ And how few, how very few understand this! ~ People teach in the world what I know to be true: ~ if you live violently that is how you will die.

[43c26t] Gu Zhengkun ~ The most supple in the world ~ Can go through the hardest in the world. ~ What consists of no substance can enter what has no crevices. ~ I thus know the benefit of inaction. ~ Teaching without words, ~ The benefit of inaction, ~ Are what few people in the world can perform and obtain.

[43c27t] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ The softest under Heaven can ride roughshod over the hardest. ~ That without substance can enter even into the smallest space. ~ That is why I know the benefit of doing nothing. ~ Teaching without words, benefiting without doing: ~ there are unfortunately very few people under Heaven who can reach these goals.

[43c28t] Liu Qixuan ~ The feeblest is the strongest ~ That can run everywhere in the world, ~ It can go through being and non-being alike ~ Without any effort. ~ I therefore come to know the good ~ Of doing nothing willfully. ~ The efficiency of wordless teaching and doing nothing ~ Is rarely matched.

[43c29t] Shi Fu Hwang ~ The Softest Thing ~ Lao Tze says, ~ The softest thing in the world dashes against and overwhelms the hardest; ~ that which is without form can go through where there is no crevice. ~ Through this I know that acting without the intent to control fate can be advantageous. ~ The advantage of teaching without speech and acting without the intent to control fate is incomparable in the world.

[43c30t] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ The non-existent can enter into the impenetrable. ~ By this I know that non-action is useful. ~ Teaching without words, utility without action - ~ Few in the world have come to this.

[43c31t] Paul J. Lin ~ The world's softest thing gallops to and fro through the world's hardest thing. ~ Things without substance can penetrate things without crevices. ~ Thus I know the benefit of inaction. ~ But teaching without words and benefitting without action are understood by few in the entire world.

[43c32t] Michael LaFargue ~ The Softest thing in the world, ~ rides right over the Hardest things in the world. ~ What-has-No-Being, ~ enters what-leaves-no-opening. ~ This makes me realize the advantage of Not Doing. ~ Teaching done by not talking, ~ the advantage gained by Not Doing - ~ few things in the world can match this.

[43c33t] Cheng Lin ~ The softest thing in the world can overcome the hardest. ~ Such a thing seems to issue forth from nowhere, and yet it penetrates everywhere. ~ From this I have learned the advantage of inaction. ~ Few men in this world have learned the precept of silence, and the advantage of inaction.

[43c34t] Yi Wu ~ That which is softest in the world overrides that which is hardest in the world. ~ Only that which has no existence can enter that which has no crevice. ~ Therefore, I know the benefit of non-action. ~ Teaching without words ~ And benefit without action; ~ Few in the world attain it.

[43c35t] Han Hiong Tan ~ The world's softest can ride roughshod over the world's hardest. ~ The pervasive force which has no form (thickness) ~ Can penetrate through the substance that has no breach (crevice). ~ Hence, I understand the advantage of non-action. ~ The principles of teaching without words (speechless tuition) and the benefits of non-action (laissez faire) are peerless under the sun.

[43c36t] Hua-Ching Ni ~ The softest of all things can overcome the hardest of all things. ~ Only the insubstantial can penetrate the spaceless. ~ Thus, we know the benefit of non-interference and the teaching of the subtle Way of the universe that does not rely on words. ~ Few people under Heaven can attain it.

[43c37t] Chang Chung-yuan ~ The meekest in the world ~ Penetrates the strongest in the world. ~ As nothingness enters into that-which-has-no-opening. ~ Hence, I am aware of the value of non-action ~ And of the value of teaching with no words, ~ As for the value of non-action, ~ Nothing in the world can match it.

[43c38t] Henry Wei ~ Universal Application ~ Pien Yung ~ The softest things in the world ~ Can match and overcome the hardest. ~ Non-being penetrates even the crackless. ~ Thus the value of non-interference is clear to me. ~ The teaching without words, ~ And the virtue of non-interference, ~ Can hardly be matched in the world.

[43c39t] Ha Poong Kim ~ The softest under Heaven ~ Rides roughshod over the hardest under Heaven. ~ The beingless [wu yu] penetrates the spaceless [wu chien]. ~ From this I know the advantage of no-action [wu-wei]. ~ The wordless teaching, ~ The advantage of no-action - ~ Nothing under Heaven exemplifies them better.

[43c40t] Tao Huang ~ What is softest in the world penetrates what is hardest in the world. ~ Nonbeing enters where there is no room. ~ From this I know the riches of nonaction. ~ Wordless teaching and the riches of nonaction is matched by very little in the world.

[43c41t] Tang Zi-chang ~ The world's softest can over-run the world's hardest. ~ It comes from the unknown (non-existence) and it enters no space. ~ From this we know how advantageous is non-interference! ~ Thus, education by non-preaching and the policy of non-interference have merits with which nothing under heaven can compare.

[43c42t] Wing-tsit Chan ~ The softest things in the world overcome the hardest things in the world. ~ Non-being penetrates that in which there is no space. ~ Through this I know the advantage of taking no action. ~ Few in the world can understand the teaching without words and the advantage of taking no action.

[43c91t] И. И. Семененко ~ Мягчайшее под Небесами проскакивает сквозь твердейшее. ~ Неналичие проходит в то, что не имеет промежутка. ~ Именно поэтому я знаю о полезности бездействия. ~ В Поднебесной редко кому удается овладеть учением, невыразимым в слове, и полезностью бездействия.

[43c92t] А. А. Маслов ~ Самое мягкое в Поднебесной может одолеть самое твёрдое в Поднебесной. ~ То, что не имеет сущности, проникает туда, где нет даже щели. ~ Потому-то я и постиг пользу недеяния. ~ Но учение вне слов и пользу недеяния крайне редко встретишь в Поднебесной.

[43c95t] Ян Хин-шун ~ В Поднебесной самые слабые побеждают самых сильных. ~ Небытие проникает везде и всюду. ~ Вот почему я знаю пользу от недеяния. ~ В Поднебесной нет ничего, что можно было бы сравнивать с учением, не прибегающим к словам, и пользой от недеяния.

[43c96t] Д. П. Конисси ~ Мир смирен: все люди едят и бегают над его твердынею. ~ Небытие поглощается беспромежуточным. ~ Поэтому я знаю, что бездеятельность имеет высокое достоинство. ~ Бессловесное учение и бездеятельность полезнее всего существующего между небом и землей.

[43c97t] В. В. Малявин ~ Самое мягкое в мире покроет самое твердое. ~ Невещественное войдет в то, что не имеет пустот. ~ Так узнаем, что от недеяния есть выгода. ~ Учение без слов, выгоду недеяния ~ В мире способны понять немногие.

[44c01t] Robert G. Henricks ~ Fame or your health - which is more dear? ~ Your health or possessions - which is worth more? ~ Gain or loss - in which is there harm? ~ {If your desires} are great, {you're bound to be extravagant}; ~ {If you store much away, you're bound} to lose {a great deal}. ~ Therefore, if you know contentment, you'll not be disgraced. ~ If you know when to stop, you'll suffer no harm. ~ And in this way you can last a very long time.

[44c02t] John C. H. Wu ~ As for your name and your body, which is the dearer? ~ As for your body and your wealth, which is the more to be prized? ~ As for gain and loss, which is the more painful? ~ Thus, an excessive love for anything will cost you dear in the end. ~ The storing up of too much goods will entail a heavy loss. ~ To know when you have enough is to be immune from disgrace. ~ To know when to stop is to be preserved from perils. ~ Only thus can you endure long.

[44c03T] D. C. Lau ~ Your name or your person, ~ Which is dearer? ~ Your person or your goods, ~ Which is worth more? ~ Gain or loss, ~ Which is a greater bane? ~ That is why excessive meanness ~ Is sure to lead to great expense; ~ Too much store ~ Is sure to end in immense loss. ~ Know contentment ~ And you will suffer no disgrace; ~ Know when to stop ~ And you will meet with no danger. ~ You can then endure.

[44c04T] R. L. Wing ~ Which is dearer, ~ Name or life? ~ Which means more, ~ Life or wealth? ~ Which is worse, ~ Gain or loss? ~ The stronger the attachments, ~ The greater the cost. ~ The more that is hoarded, ~ The deeper the loss. ~ Know what is enough; ~ Be without disgrace. ~ Know when to stop; ~ Be without danger. ~ In this way one lasts for a very long time.

[44c05T] Ren Jiyu ~ Which is more dear to me, credit or life? ~ Which is more valuable, life or wealth? ~ Which is more harmful, gain or loss? ~ Therefore the excessive stint must cause enormous expenses, ~ The rich hoard must suffer a serious loss. ~ Whoever is contented will meet no disgrace, ~ Whoever knows when and where to stop will meet no danger, ~ And he is able to endure long without worry.

[44c06T] Gia-fu Feng ~ Fame or self: Which matters more? ~ Self or wealth: Which is more precious? ~ Gain or loss: Which is more painful? ~ He who is attached to things will suffer much. ~ He who saves will suffer heavy loss. ~ A contented man is never disappointed. ~ He who knows when to stop does not find himself in trouble. ~ He will stay forever safe.

[44c07T] Lok Sang Ho ~ Which is the dearer, ~ Fame or the body? ~ Which means more, ~ The body or wealth? ~ Which can be called an ill, ~ To gain or to lose? ~ Greater cost comes with greater craving. ~ Greater loss comes with greater accumulation. ~ He who knows what he needs ~ will attract no dishonor. ~ He who knows when to stop ~ will come to no grief. ~ Such people can have a lasting life.

[44c08T] Xiaolin Yang ~ Fame or health, which is dearer to you? ~ Health or wealth, which is more important to you? ~ Gain or loss, which hurts you more? ~ The more you love something, the more you have to pay. ~ The more wealth you accumulate, the more likely you will lose it. ~ If you know when to be satisfied, you will not be insulted, ~ If you know when to stop, you will not be hurt, ~ This is how you last long.

[44c09T] Walter Gorn Old, STANDING STILL ~ Which is the nearer to you, your name or your person? ~ Which is the more precious, your person or your wealth? ~ Which is the greater evil, to gain or to lose? ~ Great devotion requires great sacrifice. ~ Great wealth implies great loss. ~ He who is content can never be ruined. ~ He who stands still will never meet danger. ~ These are the people who endure.

[44c10T] James Legge ~ Or fame or life, ~ Which do you hold more dear? ~ Or life or wealth, ~ To which would you adhere? ~ Keep life and lose those other things; ~ Keep them and lose your life: - which brings ~ Sorrow and pain more near? ~ Thus we may see, ~ Who cleaves to fame ~ Rejects what is more great; ~ Who loves large stores ~ Gives up the richer state. ~ Who is content ~ Needs fear no shame. ~ Who knows to stop ~ Incurs no blame. ~ From danger free ~ Long live shall he.

[44c11T] David Hinton ~ Name or self: which is precious? ~ Self or wealth: which is treasure? ~ Gain or loss: which is affliction? ~ Indulge love and the cost is dear. ~ Keep treasures and the loss is lavish. ~ Knowing contentment you avoid tarnish, and knowing when to stop you avoid danger. ~ Try it and your life will last and last.

[44c12T] Chichung Huang ~ Fame and life - which is dearer? ~ Life and wealth - which is weightier? ~ Gain and loss - which is drearier? ~ Excessive love entails enormous costs; ~ Abundant stores entail heavy losses. ~ Therefore, knowing content ~ Will exempt you from humiliation; ~ Knowing where to stop ~ Will exempt you from peril. ~ You may long endure.

[44c13T] Ellen M. Chen ~ Your name and your body (shen), which is dearer? ~ Your body and material goods, which is more abundant? ~ Gain and loss, which is illness? ~ Therefore in excessive love one necessarily goes to great expenses, ~ In hoarding much one necessarily loses heavily. ~ Knowing contentment (chih tsu) one does not suffer disgrace, ~ Knowing when to stop one does not become exhausted (tai). ~ This way one may last long.

[44c14T] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ Which is the dearest [to a person], fame or body? ~ Which is more important, body or goods? ~ Which is more sickening, gain or loss? ~ Therefore, the more a person would indulge in the love [of fame and body], the more will he be excessively wasteful; ~ The more a person would aggregates goods, the more will he be worried about losing them. ~ A person will live a long and perpetuated life if and only if: ~ He would free himself from the inferiority [complex of not having enough goods] by conscientiously drawing a line when his obtainment [of goods and wealth] provides him modestly comfortable life; ~ And he would also break off from the insecurity [complex] by ceasing and desisting [from accumulation of goods and wealth].

[44c15T] Tien Cong Tran ~ As for your name and your self, which is the dearer? ~ As for your self and your wealth, which is the more to be prized? ~ As for gain or loss, which is more painful? ~ Thus, extreme love leads to great cost. ~ Much storage leads to heavy loss. ~ To know when to have enough is to be immune from disgrace. ~ To know when to stop is to be preserved from danger. ~ Only thus can you last long.

[44c16T] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ Which is dearer, fame or health? ~ Which is more important, wealth or health? ~ Which is more damaging, obtaining the former or losing the latter? ~ Excessively loving results in great expense. ~ Excessive stocking leads to huge losses. ~ Therefore those who are not greedy can avoid disgrace. ~ Those who know where to stop can avoid failure. ~ They can have long-lasting success.

[44c17T] Arthur Waley ~ Fame or one's own self, which matters to one most? ~ One's own self or things bought, which should count most? ~ In the getting or the losing, which is worse? ~ Hence he who grudges expense pays dearest in the end; ~ He who has hoarded most will suffer the heaviest loss. ~ Be content with what you have and are, and no one can despoil you; ~ Who stops in time nothing can harm. ~ He is forever safe and secure.

[44c18T] Richard John Lynn ~ Reputation or one's person, which is dear? ~ One's person or what he possesses, which is more? ~ Gain or loss, which is harm? ~ Thus it is that extreme meanness is sure to result in great expense, and much hoarding is sure to result in heavy loss. ~ One who knows contentment will not suffer damage to his reputation, and one who knows how to stop will not place himself in danger. ~ As such, he will last long.

[44c19T] Lin Yutang ~ BE CONTENT ~ Fame or one's own self, which does one love more? ~ One's own self or material goods, which has more worth? ~ Loss (of self) or possession (of goods), which is the greater evil? ~ Therefore: ~ He who loves most spends most, ~ He who hoards much loses much. ~ The contented man meets no disgrace; ~ Who knows when to stop runs into no danger - ~ He can long endure.

[44c20T] Victor H. * * *

[44c21T] Tolbert McCarroll ~ Your integrity or your body: ~ Which is more important? ~ Your body or your possessions: ~ Which is worth more? ~ Gain or loss: ~ Which is more harmful? ~ Thus it is that the miser will pay much. ~ The hoarder will suffer great loss. ~ Be content with what you have ~ and you will not be disgraced. ~ Know when to stop ~ and you will be preserved from danger. ~ Only in this way will you long endure.

[44c22T] David H. Li ~ Fame and health - which is dearer? ~ Health and wealth - which is more valuable? ~ Gain and loss - which is more damaging? ~ Excessive love demands large outlay. ~ Overabundant wealth results in heavy loss. ~ Thus, ~ knowing contentment brings about no disgrace; ~ knowing moderation brings about no danger. ~ One lasts long.

[44c23T] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ Which is more precious, fame or health? ~ Which is more important, health or wealth? ~ Which is more painful, gaining or losing? ~ The more excessive is your attachment, ~ The greater is your suffering. ~ The more excessive is your possession, ~ The heavier is your loss. ~ To know what is enough is to be free from disgrace. ~ To know when to stop is to be free from danger. ~ Those who practice this will long endure.

[44c24T] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ Tao begets one, ~ One begets two, ~ Two begets three, ~ Three begets all things. ~ All things, back to the shade, front to the light, ~ The harmony between them is the breath of life. ~ What others teach, I also teach: ~ "The cruel and violent do not die a natural death." ~ I will use that sentence as my guide.

[44c25T] Man-Ho Kwok ~ What really matters most, ~ Your image or your soul? ~ What do you care about, ~ Your money, or your life? ~ What's actually the best, ~ Making it - or losing? ~ If you pour all your energy into one thing, ~ You're sure to harm the rest of your being ~ And if you invest it all in profit - ~ You'll end up losing the whole lot. ~ If you're not always wanting, you can be at peace. ~ And if you're not always trying to be someone ~ You can be who you really are and go the whole way.

[44c26T] Gu Zhengkun ~ Which is dearer, your name or your body? ~ Which is more important, your body or your goods? ~ Which is more harmful, gain or loss? ~ Excessive stinginess will result in great expense; ~ Too much amassment leads to great loss; ~ Knowing contentment avoids disgrace; ~ Knowing when to stop avoids danger. ~ Thus one can be long in safety.

[44c27T] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ Fame or your self: which is dearer? ~ Your self or your possessions: which is more precious? ~ To have or to lose: which is more detrimental? ~ That is why the most beloved will cost a great deal. ~ The more one stores, the more one will lose. ~ He who is content will not meet disgrace. ~ He who knows when to stop will not face danger. ~ Only then is there longevity.

[44c28T] Liu Qixuan ~ Which is more precious, the body or the name? ~ Which is more important, the body or the goods? ~ Which is more harmful, gains or losses? ~ One who cares for reputation pays more. ~ One who possesses much fears death most. ~ Therefore, ~ One who is easily satisfied is not a disgrace. ~ One who knows where to stop is not stopped in life.

[44c29T] Shi Fu Hwang ~ Gain And Loss ~ Lao Tze says, ~ Which means more to you, fame or self? ~ Which brings more to you, self or property? ~ Which ails you more, gain or loss? ~ The cost of the thing which you love is dear. ~ The treasure unscrupulously laid up shall result in heavy loss. ~ However, the contented man will not suffer disgrace. ~ A man who knows his limitations will not incur danger. ~ Namely, he can survive forever.

[44c30T] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ Fame or your person, which is nearer to you? ~ Your person or wealth, which is dearer to you? ~ Gain or loss, which brings more evil to you? ~ Over-love of anything will lead to wasteful spending; ~ Amassed riches will be followed by heavy plundering. ~ Therefore, he who knows contentment can never be humiliated; ~ He who knows where to stop can never be perishable; ~ He will long endure.

[44c31T] Paul J. Lin ~ Of fame and life, which is more dear? ~ Of life and wealth, which is more worthy? ~ Of gain and loss, which is more distressing? ~ Therefore, loving in excess incurs great cost. ~ Overhoarding brings heavy loss. ~ To know what is enough means to avoid disgrace. ~ To know where to stop is to avoid danger. ~ Thus one can last long and endure.

[44c32T] Michael LaFargue ~ Your fame or your self, which is closer to you? ~ Your self or your possessions, which counts for more? ~ Gaining or losing, which brings the pain? ~ Indeed: ~ Very fond, much expended; ~ much hoarding, heavy loss. ~ Be content and there will be no disgrace. ~ Know to stop and there will be no danger. ~ And you can last very long.

[44c33T] Cheng Lin ~ Fame and life, - which is the more precious? ~ Life and property, - which is the more important? ~ Gain and loss, - which is the more to be preferred? ~ Inordinate love will surely result in abandonment. ~ Over-hoarding will surely end in heavy loss. ~ He who knows contentment will not suffer disgrace. ~ He who knows when to stop will not incur danger.

[44c34T] Yi Wu ~ Of fame and body, which is dearer? ~ Of body and property, which is worth more? ~ Of gain and loss, which is more troublesome? ~ Therefore, excessive love surely is great waste. ~ Much storing up surely is a heavy loss. ~ To know when you have enough ~ is to avoid disgrace. ~ To know when to stop ~ is to be free from danger. ~ Only thus can one long endure.

[44c35T] Han Hiong Tan ~ Personal glory or your life, ~ Which do you treasure more? ~ Your life or worldly possessions, ~ Which is more precious to you? ~ Gaining one but losing the other, which is more deleterious? ~ Therefore, wanting something badly can cost you dearly. ~ The more goods you hoard, the more you can possibly lose. ~ By being contented, you will never suffer any humiliation. ~ Knowing when to stop, you will never put your life in jeopardy. ~ Hence, you will have a long and wonderful life.

[44c36T] Hua-Ching Ni ~ As for your fame and your life, which matters more? ~ As for your life and your wealth, which is more precious? ~ As for gain or loss, which is more damaging? ~ He who is most endeared to something must pay dearest for it. ~ He who has hoarded much will suffer great loss. ~ He who knows when enough is enough saves himself from humiliation. ~ He who knows when to stop protects himself from peril. ~ To know this is to be long enduring.

[44c37T] Chang Chung-yuan ~ Man's name or man's self - which is closer to him? ~ Man's self or his property - which is more valuable to him? ~ Success or failure - which is more harmful to him? ~ Things that are cherished more, cost more. ~ The more that is kept, the more that is missed. ~ The man who is easily contented is free from shame. ~ The man who knows the right time to stop is free from danger. ~ Thus, he will last long.

[44c38т] Henry Wei ~ Self-Imposed Abstinences ~ Li Chieh ~ Which is more dear: ~ Fame or health? ~ Which is more valuable: ~ Health or wealth? ~ Which is more baneful: ~ Gain or loss? ~ Excessive love is bound to cause great expense. ~ Immense hoarding is bound to end in heavy loss. ~ He who knows contentment is free from disgrace; ~ He who knows when to quit will be free from peril. ~ He can endure a long time.

[44c39т] Ha Poong Kim ~ Your name or your body, which is dearer? ~ Your body or your possessions, which is more valuable? ~ Gaining or losing, which worries you more? ~ Therefore, when your craving is excessive, your spending is extravagant. ~ When you store much, you are bound to lose much. ~ Know how to be content, and you will not be disgraced. ~ Know when to stop, and you will be free from danger. ~ Thus you will be long-lasting.

[44c40т] Tao Huang ~ Which is more cherished, the name or the body? ~ Which is worth more, the body or possessions? ~ Which is more beneficial, to gain or to lose? ~ Extreme fondness is necessarily very costly. ~ The more you cling to, the more you lose. ~ So knowing what is sufficient averts disgrace. ~ Knowing when to stop averts danger. ~ This can lead to a longer life.

[44c41т] Tang Zi-chang ~ Between your fame and yourself, which is closer to you? ~ Between yourself and your wealth, which is more dear to you? ~ Between gain and loss, which is more of a burden to you? ~ Thus, excessive lust will cost one a great deal in the end. ~ Excessive wealth will make one suffer a heavy loss. ~ One who knows satisfaction will not be disgraced. ~ One who knows when to stop will not reach a perilous end. ~ Then he can rule everywhere and forever.

[44c42т] Wing-tsit Chan ~ Which does one love more, fame or one's own life? ~ Which is more valuable, one's own life or wealth? ~ Which is worse, gain or loss? ~ Therefore he who has lavish desires will spend extravagantly. ~ He who hoards most will lose heavily. ~ He who is contented suffers no disgrace. ~ He who knows when to stop is free from danger. ~ Therefore he can long endure.

[46c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ When the world has the Way, ambling horses are retired to fertilize [fields]. ~ When the world lacks the Way, war horses are reared in the suburbs. ~ Of crimes - none is greater than having things that one desires; ~ Of disasters - none is greater than not knowing when one has enough. ~ Of defects - none brings more sorrow than the desire to attain. ~ {Therefore, the contentment one has when he knows that he has enough,} is abiding contentment indeed.

[46c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ WHEN the world is in possession of the Tao, ~ The galloping horses are led to fertilize the fields with their droppings. ~ When the world has become Taoless, ~ War horses breed themselves on the suburbs. ~ There is no calamity like not knowing what is enough. ~ There is no evil like covetousness. ~ Only he who knows what is enough will always have enough.

[46c03т] D. C. Lau ~ When the way prevails in the empire, fleet-footed horses are relegated to ploughing the fields; ~ When the way does not prevail in the empire, war-horses breed on the border. ~ There is no crime greater than having too many desires; ~ There is no disaster greater than not being content; ~ There is no misfortune greater than being covetous. ~ Hence in being content, one will always have enough.

[46c04t] R. L. Wing ~ When the world possesses the Tao, ~ Even fast horses are used for their dung. ~ When the world is without the Tao, ~ War-horses are raised in the suburbs. ~ There is no greater misfortune ~ Than not knowing what is enough. ~ There is no greater fault ~ Than desiring to acquire. ~ Therefore know that enough is enough. ~ There will always be enough.

[46c05t] Ren Jiyu ~ When state politics are on the right track, war horses are used in farming. ~ When state politics are off track, even mares with foal have to be used in battle. ~ There is no calamity greater than discontentment. ~ There is no guilt greater than covetousness. ~ Therefore the contentment with knowing contentment is always contented.

[46c06t] Gia-fu Feng ~ When the Tao is present in the universe, ~ The horses haul manure. ~ When the Tao is absent from the universe, ~ War horses are bred outside the city. ~ There is no greater sin than desire, ~ No greater curse than discontent, ~ No greater misfortune than wanting something for oneself. ~ Therefore he who knows that enough is enough will always have enough.

[46c07t] Lok Sang Ho ~ When things under heaven follow the Dao, ~ Horses will roam freely, and their droppings will be found anywhere. ~ When things under heaven have departed from the Dao, ~ The horses will be reared in special stables away from the city. ~ No wrong is greater than having objects to crave for. ~ No disaster is greater than not knowing one's true needs. ~ No greater ill is invited than by craving to possess. ~ Thus, the satisfaction from knowing one's true needs and asking for no more is eternal.

[46c08t] Xiaolin Yang ~ When the DAO rules, even the great war horses are used to plow the field, ~ When the DAO is overruled, even the pregnant horses are used in battle. ~ The biggest disaster is not knowing when to be satisfied, ~ The biggest mistake is to always want more. ~ Therefore, knowing when to be satisfied is the ever-lasting satisfaction.

[46c09t] Walter Gorn Old, CURBING DESIRE ~ When Tao is in the world, horses are used in the pasture land. ~ When Tao has left the world, chargers are reared in the wilderness. ~ There is no greater sin than indulging desire. ~ There is no greater pain than discontent. ~ There is nothing more disastrous than the greed of gain. ~ Hence the satisfaction of contentment is an everlasting competence.

[46c10t] James Legge ~ When the Tao prevails in the world, they send back their swift horses to (draw) the dung-carts. ~ When the Tao is disregarded in the world, the war-horses breed in the border lands. ~ There is no guilt greater than to sanction ambition; ~ no calamity greater than to be discontented with one's lot; ~ no fault greater than the wish to be getting. ~ Therefore the sufficiency of contentment is an enduring and unchanging sufficiency.

[46c11t] David Hinton ~ When all beneath heaven abides in Way, fast horses are kept to work the fields. ~ When all beneath heaven forgets Way, war horses are bred among the fertility altars. ~ What calamity is greater than no contentment, and what flaw greater than the passion for gain? ~ The contentment of fathoming contentment - there lies the contentment that endures.

[46c12t] Chichung Huang ~ When the empire possessed the Tao, ~ Galloping horses were turned back to manure the fields; ~ When the empire has lost the Tao, ~ War-horses are bred on the frontier. ~ No crime is greater than indulging in greed; ~ No misfortune is greater than not knowing content; ~ No catastrophe is more grievous than thirsting for gain. ~ Therefore, the content of knowing content ~ Makes one constantly content.

[46c13t] Ellen M. Chen ~ When the world practices Tao, ~ Fast horses are used for their dung. ~ When the world does not practice Tao, ~ War horses give birth at the borders. ~ Among offenses (tsui), none is greater than having what is desirable. ~ Among calamities (huo), none is greater than not knowing contentment. ~ Among blames (chiu), none is greater than the desire for gain. ~ Therefore the contentment that comes from knowing contentment ~ Is a long lasting contentment.

[46c14t] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ When the world was on the right course, the best way people could make use of their good running horses was to walk them, so that they could collect their manure [as fertilizer or fuels]; ~ When the world was not on the right course, [even pregnant] horses were used for combat that they were compelled to give births amidst ruins in battlefields. ~ There is no greater sin than the sin caused by over-indulging oneself; ~ There is no more serious misfortune [one may have than being suffered from] greed; ~ There is no more condemnable fault one has committed than being obsessed with obtainment. ~ Accordingly, one who knows what is reasonably enough shall always hold adequate [Te to be in harmony with Tao].

[46c16t] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ When Tao is dominant, the fast horse is used for farming. ~ When Tao is lost, the female horse is used for war and gives birth in the field. ~ The worst misfortune is insatiability. ~ The worst mistake is rapacity. ~ Therefore, content from knowing enough makes people always satisfied.

[46c17t] Arthur Waley ~ When there is Tao in the empire ~ The galloping steeds are turned back to fertilize the ground by their droppings. ~ When there is not Tao in the empire ~ War horses will be reared even on the sacred mounds below the city walls. ~ No lure is greater than to possess what others want, ~ No disaster greater than not to be content with what one has, ~ No presage of evil greater than that men should be wanting to get more. ~ Truly: 'He who has once known the contentment that comes simply through being content, will never again be otherwise than contented'.

[46c18t] Richard John Lynn ~ When the Dao prevails among all under Heaven, one relegates coursers to producing manure. ~ When the Dao does not prevail among all under Heaven, war horses are born in the fields outside towns. ~ Nothing causes greater disaster than not being content, and nothing brings about greater blame than craving something. ~ When contentment fills one perfectly, this is indeed constant contentment!

[46c19t] Lin Yutang ~ RACING HORSES ~ When the world lives in accord with Tao, ~ Racing horses are turned back to haul refuse carts. ~ When the world lives not in accord with Tao, ~ Cavalry abounds in the countryside. ~ There is no greater curse than the lack of contentment. ~ No greater sin than the desire for possession. ~ Therefore he who is contented with contentment shall be always content.

[46c20t] Victor H. Mair ~ When the Way prevails under heaven, ~ swift horses are relegated to fertilizing fields. ~ When the Way does not prevail under heaven, ~ war-horses breed in the suburbs. ~ No guilt is greater than giving in to desire, ~ No disaster is greater than discontent, ~ No crime is more grievous than the desire for gain. ~ Therefore, ~ Contentment that derives from knowing when to be content is eternal contentment.

[46c21t] Tolbert McCarroll ~ When the Tao prevails in the world ~ swift horses are used to fertilize the fields. ~ When the Tao is unheeded ~ war horses are bred on the border lands. ~ There is no greater offense than harboring desires. ~ There is no greater disaster than discontent. ~ There is no greater misfortune than wanting more. ~ Hence, if you are content ~ You will always have enough.

[46c22t] David H. Li ~ When the world is governed by Direction, horses haul manure. ~ When the world is not governed by Direction, mares foal near [war] location. ~ No calamity is greater than not being content; ~ No fault is greater than the desire to gain at any cost. ~ Thus, one who is content in being content is always content.

[46c23t] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ When the world follows the Tao, ~ Horses are used to fertilize the farm fields. ~ When the world does not follow the Tao, ~ Even mares are expended to breed in the battlefields. ~ When the individual follows the Tao, ~ Energy is used in his harmonious inner development. ~ When the individual does not follow the Tao, ~ Energy is expended in his continuous inner conflict. ~ There is no greater vice than giving in to greed, ~ No greater calamity than not knowing contentment, ~ No greater imputation than succumbing to covetousness. ~ Therefore, know and be content with what is enough, ~ Then you will always have enough.

[46c24t] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ When Tao rules the world ~ Racehorses are harnessed to the garbage cart in the fields. ~ When Tao does not rule the world ~ War-horses graze in the meadows on the outskirts of the city. ~ There is no greater sin than going after what man desires, ~ There is no greater sorrow than not knowing a measure of contentment, ~ There is no greater obstacle than falling into the pit of greed. ~ Therefore, it is sufficient for you to know a measure of contentment in order to know contentment in proportion, so as to satisfy your measure.

[46c25t] Man-Ho Kwok ~ 'When the Tao runs the world, the horses work the farms.' ~ Without Tao the horses are led into war along the borders. ~ You see, if people want more and more it can only lead to disaster. ~ Greed is the seed of apocalypse - ~ it is the rocket-fuel of selfishness: me, me, me! ~ If people could only be glad with all they have, if they only knew it, they'd be happy.

[46c26t] Gu Zhengkun ~ When the Tao prevails in the world, ~ The battle steeds are returned to farmers for tilling the fields; ~ When the Tao does not prevail in the world, ~ Even pregnant mares are taken over for wars. ~ No crime is greater than greediness; ~ No disaster is greater than the lack of contentment; ~ Thus the contentment of feeling content ~ Is an eternal contentment.

[46c27t] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ When there is Tao under Heaven, fleet-footed horses are working in the fields. ~ When there is no Tao under Heaven, war horses appear outside the city. ~ There is no greater crime than having wrong desires. ~ There is no greater hardship than being discontent. ~ There is no greater misfortune than obtaining one's own triumph. ~ That is why he who feels content is always content.

[46c28t] Liu Qixuan ~ With the Way, horses are used for farming. ~ With the Way lost, horses give births in battlefields. ~ No disaster is worse than greed. ~ No fault is worse than desire. ~ Therefore, one who can be easily satisfied ~ Will be always satisfied.

[46c29t] Shi Fu Hwang ~ On Contentment ~ Lao Tze says, ~ When the world lives in accord with the Tao, racing horses are sent to the dung-cart. ~ When the world lives not in accord with the Tao, the war-horses breed on the border. ~ There is no sin greater than to sanction ambition; ~ no calamity greater than not being contented; ~ no fault greater than the wish to obtain. ~ Therefore, he who is content with contentment shall be always content.

[46c30t] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ When Tao reigns in the world, ~ Swift horses are curbed for hauling the dung-carts (in the field). ~ When Tao does not reign in the world, ~ War horses are bred on the commons (outside the cities). ~ There is no greater crime than seeking what men desire; ~ There is no greater misery than knowing no content; ~ There is no greater calamity than indulging in greed. ~ Therefore the contentment of knowing content will ever be contented.

[46c31t] Paul J. Lin ~ In a world with Tao, ~ racing horses are drawn back [to the fields] for dung. ~ In a world without Tao, ~ war horses are raised outside the city. ~ No crime is greater than having desires. ~ No calamity is greater than not knowing contentment. ~ No fault is greater than longing for gain. ~ Therefore, the contentment of knowing contentment is always contentment.

[46c32t] Michael LaFargue ~ When the world has Tao, ~ they have no use for saddle horses, ~ using them to haul manure. ~ When the world has no Tao, ~ they raise war horses on sacred ground. ~ Nothing is more crime producing than desirable things; ~ nothing is a worse misfortune than not being content; ~ nothing makes for more guilt than desire for gain. ~ Yes: ~ Be content with enough, and there will always be enough.

[46c33t] Cheng Lin ~ When Truth prevails in this world, horses are employed to work on the farm. ~ When Truth fails to prevail in this world, horses employed in war are bred on the outskirts of the metropolis. ~ There is no error greater than that of having many desires. ~ There is no calamity greater than the feeling of discontent. ~ There is no fault greater than the desire for gain. ~ Therefore, he who knows contentment is always contented.

[46c34t] Yi Wu ~ When the world is with the Way, ~ Galloping horses are sent back for dung. ~ When the world is without the Way, ~ War horses are raised in the suburbs. ~ No calamity is greater than not knowing contentment; ~ No trouble is greater than desiring gain. ~ Therefore, the contentment of knowing contentment is constant contentment.

[46c35t] Han Hiong Tan ~ When Dao prevails, thoroughbred horses plough the land. ~ When Dao is in decline, cavalry horses give birth near the battlefields. ~ There is no curse worse than insatiable greed. ~ There is no misfortune worse than unquenchable desire. ~ Only a person who knows when enough is enough is always contented.

[46c36t] Hua-Ching Ni ~ When the people of the world live in accord with the subtle Way of the universe, ~ horses are used for agricultural purposes. ~ When the people of the world do not live in accord with the subtle Way of the universe, ~ then horses, even pregnant mares, are driven into the battlefield and bred there. ~ There is no greater calamity for a nation, or for an individual, ~ than not finding contentment with one's own sufficiency. ~ There is no greater mistake for a nation, or for an individual, ~ than to be covetous. ~ Hence, when one is content within one's own nature, one will always have enough.

[46c37t] Chang Chung-yuan ~ When the world is governed according to Tao, ~ Horses are used to work on the farm. ~ When the world is not governed according to Tao, ~ Horses and weapons are produced for the frontier. ~ No crime is greater than that of ambition. ~ No misfortune is greater than that of discontentment. ~ No fault is greater than that of conquering. ~ Therefore, to know

CONTENTMENT THROUGH CONTENTMENT ~ IS TO ALWAYS HAVE ENOUGH.

[47c24т] CHOU-WING CHOHAN ~ WITHOUT CROSSING THE THRESHOLD OF THE GATE ~ IT IS POSSIBLE TO KNOW THE ENTIRE WORLD. ~ WITHOUT LOOKING THROUGH THE WINDOW ~ IT IS POSSIBLE TO SEE THE TAO OF HEAVEN. ~ THE FURTHER THE PERSON GOES, ~ THE LESS HE KNOWS. ~ THEREFORE THE SAGE ~ KNOWS EVERYTHING WITHOUT GOING THROUGH THE STREETS, ~ NAMES EVERYTHING WITHOUT SEEING IT, ~ ACCOMPLISHES EVERY TASK WITHOUT DOING ANYTHING.

[47c25т] Man-Ho Kwok ~ Without going anywhere, ~ you can know the whole world. ~ Without even opening your window, ~ you can know the ways of Heaven. ~ You see: the further away you go, the less you know ... ~ The sage doesn't need to travel around: ~ Why? ~ Because he can still understand. ~ He sees without needing 'to see', ~ He never does anything, and yet it all happens.

[47c26т] Gu Zhengkun ~ Without stirring out of the house, ~ One can know everything in the world; ~ Without looking out of the window, ~ One can see the Tao of heaven. ~ The further one travels, ~ The less one knows. ~ That is why the sage ~ Knows everything without going out; ~ Sees the Tao of heaven without looking out of the window; ~ Succeeds without resorting to action.

[47c27т] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ Without going outside ~ one can know the whole world. ~ Without looking out of the window ~ one can see the Tao of Heaven. ~ The further one goes, the less one knows. ~ Therefore the sage ~ without walking, knows everything, ~ without seeing, identifies everything, ~ without doing, accomplishes everything.

[47c28т] Liu Qixuan ~ Without going out of the door, ~ One can feel the world. ~ Without looking out of the window, ~ One can feel the universe. ~ The farther one goes, ~ The less one knows. ~ Therefore, ~ The wise person arrives without traveling, ~ Knows without seeing, ~ And achieves without willful actions.

[47c29т] Shi Fu Hwang ~ Pursuit of Knowledge ~ Lao Tze says, ~ Without stepping outside the door, a man can know what has taken place in the world. ~ Without looking out the window, a man can discern the Tao of Heaven. ~ The farther a man goes out, the less he knows. ~ Therefore, the sages got their knowledge not through visiting there; ~ gave their names to things not because they had seen them; ~ and accomplished their ends not because they ever had intent to control fate.

[47c30т] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ Without going out of the door ~ One can know the whole world; ~ Without peeping out of the window ~ One can see the Tao of heaven. ~ The further one travels ~ The less one knows. ~ Therefore the Sage knows everything without travelling; ~ He names everything without seeing it; ~ He accomplishes everything without doing it.

[47c31т] Paul J. Lin ~ Without going out-of-doors, ~ One can know the whole world. ~ Without looking out of windows, ~ One can see the Tao of heaven. ~ The farther one goes, the less one knows. ~ Therefore, the Sage does not go and yet knows, ~ Doesn't see and yet names, ~ Doesn't act and yet completes.

[47c32т] Michael LaFargue ~ Understanding the world ~ without going out the door. ~ Understanding Heaven's Way ~ without looking out the window. ~ Traveling very widely, understanding very little. ~ And so the Wise Person: ~ Knows without any going, ~ names without any looking, ~ accomplishes without any doing.

[47c33т] Cheng Lin ~ Without leaving the house, one may know everything about the world. ~ Without looking through the window, one may see the way of Heaven. ~ The further one travels, the less he knows. ~ Thus, the Sage possesses wisdom without seeking; ~ becomes famous without display; ~ achieves success without effort.

[47c34т] Yi Wu ~ Without going out of doors, one can know the world. ~ Without looking out of windows, one can see the Way of Heaven. ~ The more one goes, the less one knows. ~ Therefore, the sage ~ knows without travelling, ~ names without looking, ~ achieves without action.

[47c35т] Han Hiong Tan ~ Without stepping out of the house, ~ You can know what is going on in the world. ~ Without peering out the window, ~ You can understand the way of Dao. ~ The farther you travel, the less you really know. ~ Therefore, the sage knows without having to travel. ~ Without seeing for himself, he can understand the law of nature. ~ Without meddling, he accomplishes easily.

[47c36т] Hua-Ching Ni ~ Without going out of your door, you can know the ways of the world. ~ Without looking through your window, you can see the Way of Heaven. ~ The farther you go, the less you know. ~ Thus, one of deep virtue knows without going, ~ sees without looking, ~ and accomplishes without doing.

[47c37т] Chang Chung-yuan ~ Without going out of the gate, ~ One is aware of the world. ~ Without peering outside, ~ One sees the way of heaven. ~ The farther away one is, ~ The less one is aware. ~ Therefore, the wise is aware of all things ~ Without moving a step. ~ He identifies all things ~ Without looking at them. ~ He completes all things ~ Without action.

[47c38т] Henry Wei ~ Far Seeing ~ Chien Yuan ~ Without going out of doors, ~ One can know the world; ~ Without looking through the window, ~ One can realize the Way of Heaven. ~ The farther one goes, ~ The less one knows. ~ Therefore, the Sage knows without going out, ~ Discriminates without seeing, ~ And accomplishes without action.

[47c39т] Ha Poong Kim ~ Without leaving the door, ~ You may know all under Heaven. ~ Without looking out the window, ~ You may know the way of Heaven. ~ The further you go, ~ The less you know. ~ Therefore the sage ~ Knows without going, ~ Sees without looking, ~ Fulfills without doing.

[47c40т] Tao Huang ~ In order to know the world, do not step outside the door. ~ In order to know the Tao of heaven, do not peer through the window. ~ The further out you go, the less you know. ~ So the sage knows without moving, identifies without seeing, accomplishes without acting.

[47c41т] Tang Zi-chang ~ Without leaving the door one may know the course of the world. ~ Without looking through the window one may see the law of nature. ~ The maximum extreme possesses a minimum of knowledge. ~ Hence a sage ruler knew without traveling; ~ designated without seeing; ~ and accomplished without interfering.

[47c42т] Wing-tsit Chan ~ One may know the world without going out of doors. ~ One may see the Way of Heaven without looking through the windows. ~ The further one goes, the less one knows. ~ Therefore the sage knows without going about, ~ Understands without seeing, ~ And accomplishes without any action.

[47c91т] И. И. Семененко ~ Знают Поднебесную, не выходя за дверь, и видят Дао Неба, не подглядывая из окна. ~ Чем далее уходят, тем меньше знают. ~ Именно поэтому Премудрый человек не делает ни шагу, а все знает, он прозревает в то, чего не видит, и добивается успеха, находясь в бездействии.

[47c92т] А. А. Маслов ~ Не выходя со двора, можно познать весь мир. ~ Не выглядывая в окно, можно узреть Путь Неба. ~ Чем дальше идёшь - тем меньше узнаёшь. ~ Поэтому мудрецы познавали, никуда не отправляясь; ~ постигали, не видя; ~ свершали, не действуя.

[47c93т] Е. А. Торчинов ~ Не выходя со двора, я познаю Поднебесную. ~ Не открывая окна, зрю я небесный Путь-Дао. ~ Чем дальше мы ходим, тем меньше мы знаем. ~ Поэтому совершенномудрый никуда не ходит, но все знает; ~ Он ни на что не смотрит, но все постигает; ~ Он ничего не творит, но все свершает.

[47c94т] А. Е. Лукьянов ~ Не выходя за дверь, познаю Поднебесную. ~ Не выглядывая в окно, вижу небесное Дао. ~ Чем дальше идешь, тем меньше знаешь. ~ Вот почему совершенномудрый человек не ходит, а познает; ~ не смотрит, но именует; ~ не деяет, но создает.

[47c95т] Ян Хин-шун ~ Не выходя со двора, можно познать мир. ~ Не выглядывая из окна, можно видеть естественное дао. ~ Чем дальше идешь, тем меньше познаешь. ~ Поэтому совершенномудрый не ходит, но познает [все]. ~ Не видя [вещей], он проникает в их [сущность]. ~ Не действуя, он добивается успеха.

[47c97т] В. В. Малявин ~ Не выходя со двора, можешь познать мир. ~ Не открывая окна, можешь узреть Небесный Путь. ~ Чем дальше уходишь, тем меньше узнаешь. ~ Вот почему премудрый человек ~ Никуда не ходит - а все знает, ~ Ни на что не смотрит - а все понимает, ~ Ничего не делает - а все свершает.

[47c98т] Б. Б. Виногродский ~ Не выходя в двери, осознаешь Нисхождение Небес. ~ Не выглядывая в окна, видишь небесный Путь. ~ Чем дальше ты выходишь, тем меньше ты осознаешь. ~ Это дает: ~ Человек мудрости не движется, а осознает. ~ Не видит, а именует. ~ Не осуществляет, а совершает.

[48c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ Those who work at their studies increase day after day; ~ Those who have heard the Tao decrease day after day. ~ The decrease and decrease, till they get to the point where they {do} nothing. ~ {They do nothing and yet there's nothing left undone}. ~ {When someone wants to} take control of the world, he must always be unconcerned with affairs. ~ For in a case where he's concerned with affairs, ~ {He'll be un}worthy, {as well}, of taking control of the {world}.

[48c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ LEARNING consists in daily accumulating; ~ The practice of Tao consists in daily diminishing. ~ Keep on diminishing and diminishing, ~ Until you reach the state of No-Ado. ~ No-Ado, and yet nothing is left undone. ~ To win the world, one must renounce all. ~ If one still has private ends to serve, ~ One will never be able to win the world.

[48c03т] D. C. Lau ~ In the pursuit of learning one knows more every day; ~ In the pursuit of the way one does less every day. ~ One does less and less until one does nothing at all, and when one does nothing at all there is nothing that is undone. ~ It is always through not meddling that the empire is won. ~ Should you meddle, then you are not equal to the task of winning the empire.

[48c05т] Ren Jiyu ~ The pursuit of learning is to increase (knowledge) day after day. ~ The pursuit of Tao is to decrease (knowledge) day after day. ~ Decreasing and decreasing again, till one has reached nonaction (wu-wei). ~ Nonaction and yet there is nothing that is not done by it. ~ To govern all under Heaven one usually should not take any arbitrary action. ~ If one tends to do anything arbitrarily, ~ One is not qualified to govern all under Heaven.

[48c07т] Lok Sang Ho ~ The more we learn, ~ The more things are plowed into our minds; ~ The more we follow the Dao, ~ The more things are taken out of our minds. ~ As we take more and more things out of our mind, ~ We finally arrive at the state of losing the sense of contriving and action. ~ At that point we be in the state of non-action. ~ At that point all actions will be done in the state of non-action. ~ To win the hearts of all under heaven, ~ We must always leave people alone. ~ If we do not leave them alone, ~ We will not win their adherence.

[48c08т] Xiaolin Yang ~ The more you study a subject, the more you know; ~ the more you study the DAO, the less you know; ~ Less and less, until at the end you achieve WUWEI. ~ By WUWEI, you can accomplish everything. ~ If you want to govern a country, always try to let nothing happen; ~ If you make things happen, you are not suitable for governing the country.

[48c10т] James Legge ~ He who devotes himself to learning (seeks) from day to day to increase (his knowledge); ~ he who devotes himself to the Tao (seeks) from day to day to diminish (his doing). ~ He diminishes it and again diminishes it, till he arrives at doing nothing (on purpose). ~ Having arrived at this point of non-action, there is nothing which he does not do. ~ He who gets as his own all under heaven does so by giving himself no trouble (with that end). ~ If one take trouble (with that end), he is not equal to getting as his own all under heaven.

[48c11т] David Hinton ~ To work at learning brings more each day. ~ To work at Way brings less each day, ~ less and still less ~ until you're doing nothing yourself. ~ And when you're doing nothing yourself, there's nothing you don't do. ~ To grasp all beneath heaven, leave it alone. ~ Leave it alone, that's all, ~ and nothing in all beneath heaven will elude you.

[48c12т] Chichung Huang ~ He who pursues learning daily increases; ~ He who hears the Tao daily decreases. ~ He decreases and decreases ~ Until he acts not ~ And has no intention to act. ~ He who wishes to win all under heaven ~ Never creates disturbances. ~ If he creates disturbances, ~ He is no longer fit to win all under heaven.

[48c13t] Ellen M. Chen ~ To pursue (wei) learning one increases daily. ~ To pursue (wei) Tao one decreases daily. ~ To decrease and again to decrease, ~ Until one arrives at not doing (wu-wei). ~ Not doing (wu-wei) and yet nothing is not done. ~ Always take the empire when there are no businesses. ~ If there are businesses, ~ It is not worthwhile to take the empire.

[48c14t] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ In order to enhance his scholarship, a person must strive for improvement all the time; ~ To enrich his cultivation of Te, a person must chip off [his selfishness] day after day; ~ [A Sage] reduces his [selfishness] bit by bit, until he is finally capable of practicing the principle of non-interference; ~ [After he has habitually internalized the above three self-improvements] he will be able to administer whatever tasks properly [without transgressing the principle of non-interference]. ~ Those [kings and lords], who had won over the world did not originally set out [with the intention] to triumph over the world; ~ [On the other hand] Those [kings and lords], who primarily intended to conquer the world, had for this reason have their arete pared too much that they are not able to accomplish such grand tasks of winning over the whole world.

[48c15t] Tien Cong Tran ~ By learning, one advances day by day. ~ By practicing the Way, one reduces day by day. ~ Reducing and reducing, until you reach the state of non-doing. ~ Non-doing, and yet not not doing. ~ To win over the world, one must "have no work". ~ If one still has work, one will never be able to win over the world.

[48c16t] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ Studying can be of benefit from day to day. ~ Following Tao one uses less force day after day. ~ Less and less, one uses no force. ~ Yet, he succeeds in everything. ~ To govern the world, one interferes nothing. ~ If he interferes, he is unqualified to govern the world.

[48c17t] Arthur Waley ~ Learning consists in adding to one's stock day by day; ~ The practice of Tao consists in ~ 'Subtracting day by day, ~ Subtracting and yet again subtracting ~ Till one has reached inactivity. ~ But by this very inactivity ~ Everything can be activated.' ~ Those who of old won the adherence of all who live under heaven ~ All did so by not interfering. ~ Had they interfered, ~ They would never have won this adherence.

[48c19t] Lin Yutang ~ CONQUERING THE WORLD BY INACTION ~ The student of knowledge (aims at) learning day by day; ~ The student of Tao (aims at) losing day by day. ~ By continual losing ~ One reaches doing nothing (laissez-faire). ~ By doing nothing everything is done. ~ He who conquers the world often does so by doing nothing. ~ When one is compelled to do something, ~ The world is already beyond his conquering.

[48c20t] Victor H. Mair ~ The pursuit of learning results in daily increase, ~ Hearing the Way leads to daily decrease. ~ Decrease and again decrease, until you reach nonaction. ~ Through nonaction, no action is left undone. ~ Should one desire to gain all under heaven, ~ One should remain ever free of involvements. ~ For, ~ Just as surely as one becomes involved, ~ One is unfit for gaining all under heaven.

[48c23t] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ The practice of ordinary learning increases complexity daily. ~ The practice of the Tao increases simplicity daily. ~ Simplicity leads to more simplicity, ~ Until it reaches the state of pristine nonaction. ~ Then nothing is done, yet nothing remains undone. ~ Thus, one who wins the world does so ~ By not meddling with it, through nonaction, with simplicity. ~ One who loses the world does so ~ By meddling with it, through action, with complexity.

[48c24t] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ The person who pursues his studies ~ Will be wiser with every passing day, ~ The person who seeks the Tao ~ Will decrease with every passing day. ~ Less and less, he will continue to decrease, ~ Until he reaches the state of non-action, ~ And by non-action it is possible to do everything. ~ Li Chia-mou said: ~ "He who pursues learning acquires knowledge; he who seeks the Tao casts off his ignorance. ~ The more the person knows, the more he has to get rid of. ~ Therefore, adding means nothing more than decreasing."

[48c25t] Man-Ho Kwok ~ Usually, people read because they want to know - ~ but the more you study the Tao, the less you want knowledge. ~ And as you want less and less, you come closer to not-doing. ~ Wu-wei - this is the way to get things done. ~ The best way to run the world is to let it take its course ~ - and to get yourself out of the way of it!

[48c26t] Gu Zhengkun ~ He who seeks learning must increase his knowledge every day; ~ He who seeks the Tao must reduce his knowledge every day; ~ He reduces and reduces until he reaches the state of inaction. ~ When reaching the state of inaction, one can succeeds in everything. ~ To govern the world well, one must take inaction as the principle. ~ If one governs with too much action, one is not a worthy governor.

[48c27t] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ In the course of learning, one increases every day. ~ In the course of Tao, one decreases every day. ~ Decreasing and decreasing, until doing nothing. ~ Doing nothing, yet everything is done. ~ That is why he who aims at rulership should let things take their course. ~ Should he try to interfere, he is not worthy of aiming at rulership.

[48c28t] Liu Qixuan ~ Those who approach being academically ~ Will become filled in mind day by day. ~ Those who approach non-being for the Way ~ Will become freed in mind day by day. ~ When one is freed of all wanton ideas and desires ~ One arrives at the state of no willful action. ~ One who does nothing out of personal will ~ Can achieve all purposes at the same time. ~ It is only when no willful actions are needed, ~ That one can win the world. ~ When a person must act willfully to achieve a purpose, ~ That person has not the sufficient conditions to be a leader.

[49c29t] Shi Fu Hwang ~ People's Minds ~ Lao Tze says, ~ The sage doesn't have an invariable mind, he takes people's minds as his own mind. ~ Those who are good to him; ~ he treats well; ~ and those who are not good to him; ~ he treats well too; ~ thus all become good to each other. ~ To those who are sincere; ~ he is sincere; ~ and to those who are not sincere; ~ he is also sincere; ~ thus all become sincere. ~ The sage in the world pays scrupulous attention to everything. ~ However, he treats his living with indifference. ~ The people all offer their eyes and ears to help him, and he deals with them all as his children.

[49c30t] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ The Sage has no self (to call his own); ~ He makes the self of the people his self. ~ To the good I act with goodness; ~ To the bad I also act with goodness: ~ Thus goodness is attained. ~ To the faithful I act with faith; ~ To the faithless I also act with faith: ~ Thus faith is attained. ~ The Sage lives in the world in concord, and rules over the world in simplicity. ~ Yet what all the people turn their ears and eyes to, ~ The Sage looks after as a mother does her children.

[49c31t] Paul J. Lin ~ The Sage has no constant heart [mind]. ~ He takes the people's heart as his heart. ~ Good men, I treat well. ~ Bad men, I also treat well. ~ Therein I attain goodness. ~ Honest men, I trust. ~ Dishonest men, I also trust. ~ Therein I attain trust. ~ The Sage in his position in the world, ~ Yieldingly harmonizes the people's heart with simplicity. ~ The people all strain their ears and eyes. ~ And the Sage regards them all as infants.

* * *

[49c32t] Michael LaFargue ~ The Wise Person is always a man without a mind - ~ he takes the mind of the hundred clans as his mind. ~ Those who are good, I am good to them; ~ those who are not good, I am also good to them - ~ Te is good. ~ Those who are honest, I am honest with them; ~ those who are not honest, I am also honest with them - ~ Te is honest. ~ The Wise Person, ~ lives in the world all drawn in, ~ for the world's sake he keeps his mind muddled. ~ The hundred clans, ~ all strain their eyes and ears toward him. ~ The Wise Person treats them all as his children.

[49c33t] Cheng Lin ~ The Sage has no fixed prejudices, but always regards the hearts of all mankind as his own. ~ Those who are good, he treats well; ~ those who are not good, he also treats well. ~ Thus he finds only good men. ~ Those who are sincere, he believes; ~ those who are not sincere, he also believes. ~ Thus he finds only sincere men. ~ The Sage wishes that all men in this world will soon return to simplicity. ~ While people in general strain their ears and eyes, the Sage wishes to have them all sealed.

[49c34t] Yi Wu ~ The sage's mind is not unchangeable; ~ He regards the people's mind as his mind. ~ He is good to those who are good; ~ He also is good to those who are not good. ~ This is the virtue of goodness. ~ He trusts those who are trustworthy; ~ He also trusts those who are not trustworthy. ~ This is the virtue of trustfulness. ~ The sage, in the world, ~ Harmoniously merges his mind with the world's. ~ The people all strain their ears and eyes; ~ The sage regards them as children.

[49c35t] Han Hiong Tan ~ The sage has no preconceived ideas. ~ He simply takes the lead from his subjects. ~ He treats the good people with kindness. ~ He also treats the bad people with kindness. ~ He thus cultivates the virtue of kindness. ~ He treats those who are trustworthy with sincerity. ~ He also treats those who are not trustworthy with sincerity. ~ Thus, he is cultivating the virtue of sincerity. ~ The sage always handles his affairs in an amicable way. ~ He steers his subjects towards a simple and unpretentious life. ~ Everyone pays attention to him and asks for guidance. ~ He nurtures them tenderly as if caring for babies.

[49c36t] Hua-Ching Ni ~ One with wholeness of virtue has an unconditioned mind. ~ He regards the mind of all being as his own mind. ~ He is kind to the kind. ~ He is also kind to the unkind, ~ for the subtle nature of the universe is kind. ~ He is faithful to the faithful. ~ He is also faithful to the unfaithful, ~ for the integral virtue of the universe is undeceiving. ~ In the midst of the world, ~ he dissolves all minds into harmonious Oneness. ~ All people strain their eyes and ears for excitement. ~ One of deep virtue brings all people back to their childlike-heartedness.

[49c37t] Chang Chung-yuan ~ The wise man is free from his own mind, ~ But identifies the people's minds as mind. ~ He considers good as good, ~ But he also considers not-good as good. ~ Thus, his attainment of non-differentiation is successful. ~ He considers truth as truth, ~ But he also considers not-truth as truth. ~ Thus, his attainment of non-differentiation is perfected. ~ In the world, the wise conscientiously non-differentiates ~ The minds of the people. ~ Because people rely on their senses of hearing and seeing, ~ The wise treats them as innocent children.

[49c38t] Henry Wei ~ Trust in Virtue ~ Ren Teh ~ The Sage has no fixed state of mind; ~ His reflects the state of mind of the people. ~ To the good, I show goodness; ~ To the not good, I also show goodness; ~ Hence goodness is realized. ~ To the sincere, I show sincerity; ~ To the insincere, I also show sincerity; ~ Hence sincerity is realized. ~ While in the world, the Sage is very anxious ~ To harmonize his mind for the harmony of the world. ~ To him all the people turn their eyes and ears; ~ He treats them all alike as children.

[49c39t] Ha Poong Kim ~ The sage has no fixed mind; ~ He takes the people's mind as his own. ~ I accept as good those who are good; ~ I also accept as good those who are not good. ~ Such is Te's goodness. ~ I trust those who trust; ~ I also trust those who do not trust. ~ Such is Te's trust. ~ The sage, in ruling all under Heaven, ~ Makes his mind one with it. ~ All his subjects set their ears and eyes on him. ~ He regards them all as his children.

[49c40t] Tao Huang ~ The sage is always without his own mind. ~ He uses people's minds as his mind. ~ He is kind to those who are kind. ~ He is also kind to those who are not kind. ~ It is the kindness of Action itself. ~ He is trustworthy to those who are trustworthy. ~ He is also trustworthy to those who are not trustworthy. ~ It is the trust of Action itself. ~ In the world, the sage inhales. ~ For the world, the sage keeps the mind simple. ~ All people are fixated on the ears and eyes, ~ While the sage always smiles like a child.

[49c41t] Tang Zi-chang ~ The sage ruler had no prejudice of his own. ~ He made his mind to be based on the mind of the people. ~ If it was perfect, he liked it; ~ if it was not perfect, he also liked it: ~ then perfection was attained. ~ If it was true, he understood it; ~ if it was not true, he also understood it: ~ then truth was attained. ~ Indifferently, indifferently sage rulers were in the world. ~ Effortlessly, effortlessly they ruled the world. ~ The people turned their eyes and ears toward them. ~ Sage rulers treated all people like their own children.

[49c42t] Wing-tsit Chan ~ The sage has no fixed (personal) ideas. ~ He regards the people's ideas as his own. ~ I treat those who are good with goodness, ~ And I also treat those who are not good with goodness. ~ Thus goodness is attained. ~ I am honest to those who are honest, ~ And I am also honest to those who are not honest. ~ Thus honesty is attained. ~ The sage, in the government of his empire, has no subjective viewpoint. ~ His mind forms a harmonious whole with that of his people. ~ They all lend their eyes and ears, and he treats them all as infants.

[50c01t] Robert G. Henricks ~ {We come out into} life and go back into death. ~ {The companions} of life {are thirteen}; ~ The companions of {death} are thirteen; ~ And yet people, because they regard life as LIFE, in all of their actions move toward the thirteen that belong to the realm of death. ~ Now, why is this so? ~ It's because they regard life as LIFE. ~ You've no doubt heard of those who are good at holding on to life: ~ When walking through hills, they don't avoid rhinos and tigers; ~ When they go into battle, they don't put on armor or shields; ~ The rhino has no place to probe with its horn; ~ The tiger finds no place to put its claws. ~ And weapons find no place to hold {their blades}. ~ {Now}, why is this so? ~ Because there is no place for death in them.

[50c02t] John C. H. Wu ~ WHEN one is out of Life, one is in Death. ~ The companions of life are thirteen; ~ the companions of Death are thirteen; ~ and, when a living person moves into the Realm of Death, his companions are also thirteen. ~ How is this? ~ Because he draws upon the resources of Life too heavily. ~ It is said that he who knows well how to live meets no tigers or wild buffaloes on his road, and comes out from the battle-ground untouched by the weapons of war. ~ For, in him, a buffalo would find no butt for his horns, a tiger nothing to lay his claws upon, and a weapon of war no place to admit its point. ~ How is this? ~ Because there is no room for Death in him.

[50c03t] D. C. Lau ~ When going one way means life and going the other means death, three in ten will be comrades in life, three in ten will be comrades in death, and there are those who value life and as a result move into the realm of death, and these also number three in ten. ~ Why is this so? Because they set too much store by life. ~ I have heard it said that one who excels in safeguarding his own life does not meet with rhinoceros or tiger when travelling on land nor is he touched by weapons when charging into an army. ~ There is nowhere for the rhinoceros to pitch its horn; ~ There is nowhere for the tiger to place its claws; ~ There is nowhere for the weapon to lodge its blade. ~ Why is this so? Because for him there is no realm of death.

[50c04T] R. L. Wing ~ As life goes out, death comes in. ~ Life has thirteen paths; ~ Death has thirteen paths. ~ Human life arrives at the realm of death ~ Also in thirteen moves. ~ Why is this so? ~ Because life is lived lavishly. ~ Now, as it is well known, ~ Those skilled in attracting life Can travel across the land ~ And not meet a rhinoceros or tiger. ~ When the military comes in, ~ Their defense cannot be attacked. ~ The rhinoceros is without a place to thrust its horn. ~ The tiger is without a place to affix its claw. ~ The military is without a place to admit its blade. ~ Why is this so? ~ Because they are without the realm of death.

[50c05T] Ren Jiyu ~ When one is born, he will eventually naturally meet his death. ~ Three out of every ten people will enjoy long life, ~ While three out of every ten people will meet premature death. ~ Chances that one strives to live and will die are also three out of ten. ~ And for what reason? ~ Because that one intensively craves life (and contrarily he fails to attain his objective). ~ I heard that one who is good at preserving his life is not afraid of meeting tigers or rhinoceroses when traveling on the land, and he will not be injured or killed in fighting battles. ~ (To those who are good at preserving their lives) ~ The rhinoceros cannot butt its horns against him, ~ The tiger cannot fasten its claws in him, ~ And weapons cannot thrust their blades into him. ~ For what reason are all these? ~ Because he is out of the range of death.

[50c06T] Gia-fu Feng ~ Between birth and death, ~ Three in ten are followers of life, ~ Three in ten are followers of death, ~ And men just passing from birth to death also number three in ten. ~ Why is this so? ~ Because they live their lives on the gross level. ~ He who knows how to live can walk abroad ~ Without fear of rhinoceros or tiger. ~ He will not be wounded in battle. ~ For in him rhinoceroses can find no place to thrust their horn, ~ Tigers no place to use their claws, ~ And weapons no place to pierce. ~ Why is this so? ~ Because he has no place for death to enter.

[50c07T] Lok Sang Ho ~ Anyone who is born dies. ~ If 13 people are born ~ All 13 people will eventually die. ~ From birth to life, ~ From life to death, ~ The great earth will afford the places to live and to die for exactly 13. ~ Why is this so? ~ It is because the mind cherishes the belief ~ that living is a privilege and not a natural right. ~ I have heard that those who are good at conserving and preserving life ~ Seldom meet tigers and horned animals when they move around. ~ If they should join the military forces, ~ They would not have the need to combat. ~ Horned animals will have no way to cast their horns on their bodies, ~ Nor will tigers find a place to lay their claws. ~ Even soldiers' swords will not hurt them. ~ Why is this so? ~ Because such people will never die.

[50c08T] Xiaolin Yang ~ Of people's lives from beginning to end, ~ One-third live long, ~ One-third die young, ~ And one-third live in the beginning, but cause their deaths half way by themselves. ~ Why do people die in the middle of their lives? ~ Because they live too well and do not cherish their lives. ~ It is said that those who know how to live long never come across a rhinoceros or a tiger; ~ When they are in battle, they never get hurt. ~ The rhinoceros has no place to impale them with its horn, ~ The tiger has no place to attack them with its claws, ~ And the weapon has no place to hurt them with its blade. ~ Why is this? Because they never get themselves into these deadly places.

[50c09T] Walter Gorn Old, THE VALUE OF LIFE ~ Men go forth from Life and enter into Death. ~ The Gates of Life are thirteen in number; and the same are the Gates of Death. ~ By as many ways does Life pass quickly into Death. And wherefore? ~ Because men strive only after the Sensuous Life. ~ It has been said that one who knows how to safeguard Life can go through the country without protection against the rhinoceros and tiger. ~ He may enter into battle without fear of the sword. ~ The rhinoceros finds no place wherein to drive his horn. ~ The tiger finds no place wherein to fix his claws. ~ The sword finds no place wherein to thrust itself. ~ Why is this? ~ It is because he has overcome Death.

[50c10T] James Legge ~ Men come forth and live; ~ they enter (again) and die. ~ Of every ten three are ministers of life (to themselves); ~ and three are ministers of death. ~ There are also three in every ten whose aim is to live, but whose movements tend to the land (or place) of death. ~ And for what reason? ~ Because of their excessive endeavours to perpetuate life. ~ But I have heard that he who is skilful in managing the life entrusted to him for a time travels on the land without having to shun rhinoceros or tiger, and enters a host without having to avoid buff coat or sharp weapon. ~ The rhinoceros finds no place in him into which to thrust its horn, nor the tiger a place in which to fix its claws, nor the weapon a place to admit its point. ~ And for what reason? ~ Because there is in him no place of death.

[50c11T] David Hinton ~ People born into life enter death. ~ Constant companion in life ~ and in death, ~ this body is the kill-site animating their lives. ~ And isn't that because ~ they think life is the fullness of life? ~ I've heard those who encompass the whole of life ~ could walk on and on without meeting rhinoceros or tiger, ~ could charge into armies without feeling shield or sword. ~ A rhinoceros would find nowhere to gore them, ~ a tiger nowhere to claw them, ~ a sword nowhere to slice them. ~ And isn't that because ~ for them there's no kill-site?

[50c12T] Chichung Huang ~ People emerge into life and enter into death. ~ The category of life constitutes three tenths; ~ The category of death constitutes three tenths; ~ And those who, seeking extravagant living, ~ All move to the realm of death ~ Also constitute three tenths. ~ Why so? ~ Because they seek extravagant living. ~ I hear that those who excel in preserving life, ~ Walking in mountains, ~ Shun neither rhinoceros nor tiger; ~ Entering a battle, ~ Incur wounds from neither weapon nor armor. ~ The rhinoceros has nowhere to thrust its horn; ~ The tiger has nowhere to press its claws; ~ Weapons have nowhere to lodge their blades. ~ Why so? ~ Because they do not belong to the realm of death.

[50c13T] Ellen M. Chen ~ From coming out to life to going back to death: ~ Those companions (t'u) of life, ~ They are one-third (shih-yu-san); ~ Those companions of death, ~ They are one-third; ~ Those living but moving toward the place of death, ~ They are also one-third. ~ Why? ~ Because of the intense (hou) life-producing activity. ~ I have heard that one who knows how to nourish life, ~ On land meets no tigers or wild buffaloes, ~ In battle needs to wear no armors or weapons, ~ A wild buffalo has nowhere to butt its horns, ~ A tiger has nowhere to sink its claws, ~ A weapon has nowhere to enter its blade. ~ Why? ~ Because such a one has no place of death.

[50c14T] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ Birth is the movement of coming out [of the obscurity to join the world]; ~ Death is the movement of going in [to the obscurity from this world]; ~ For every ten people [of the existing population], three more new-borns will join them; ~ For every ten people [of the existing population], three will die [naturally]; ~ Among the living, due to rash movements (wars and bad governments), three out of ten will also die unnaturally; ~ Why is the living condition of most people so [lamentable]? ~ It is all because people, in order to survive, must suffer enormously merely to make ends meet! ~ I have heard that those, who know how to conserve life, would evade [confrontation with] fierce rhinos and tigers when walking in the wild; ~ They would also avoid wearing armor and carrying weapons when they were in the army; ~ In this manner: ~ Fierce rhinos have no chance to use their horns, ~ Ferocious tigers have no occasion to brandish their claws, ~ And enemies have no opportunity to utilize their blades (weapons). ~ Why? ~ All of the above are examples of enhancing people's chances of survival through evading deadly situations.

[50c15T] Tien Cong Tran ~ "Out" is life; "In" is death. ~ Three in ten are followers of life. ~ Three in ten are followers of death. ~ Three in ten live as man but act in the realm of death. ~ How is this? ~ Because they all crave life. ~ It is said that he who knows well how to live meets no tigers or rhinoceroses on his road, and comes into the battlefield untouched by the weapons. ~ For, in him, a rhinoceros would find no place for his horns, a tiger no place to lay his claws upon, and a weapon no place to lodge its point. ~ How is this? ~ Because there is no room for death in him.

[50c16T] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ In the life and death cycle, ~ Three in ten enjoy natural longevity, ~ Three in ten die normally. ~ There are some, three in ten, who die unnaturally. ~ Why it is so? ~ Because they indulge themselves excessively. ~ It is well known that those who are good at protect themselves steer clear of rhinos and tigers when walking, And hardly hurt by armed enemy. ~ This is because rhinos cannot find them to gore, ~ Tigers cannot find them to claw, ~ Enemies cannot get a chance to use weapons upon them. ~ What is the reason? ~ They never put themselves into a fatal situation.

[50c17T] Arthur Waley ~ He who aims at life achieves death. ~ If the 'companions of life' are thirteen, so likewise are the 'companions of death' thirteen. ~ How is it that the 'death-spots' in man's life and activity are also thirteen? ~ It is because men feed life too grossly. ~ It is said that he who has a true hold on life, when he walks on land does not meet tigers or wild buffaloes; in battle he is not touched by weapons of war. ~ Indeed, a buffalo that attacked him would find nothing for its horns to butt, a tiger would find nothing for its claws to tear, a weapon would find no place for its point to enter in. ~ And why? ~ Because such men have no 'death-spot' in them.

[50c18T] Richard John Lynn ~ We emerge into life, enter into death. ~ Three out of ten are adherents of life; ~ three out of ten are adherents of death; ~ and there are three out of ten whose way of life also leads them to death. ~ Why is this so? ~ It is due to placing too much emphasis on life. ~ For I have heard that one good at preserving life, when traveling by land, does not encounter the wild buffalo and, when entering the army, suffers no wound from weapons. ~ The wild water buffalo has no way to strike at him with horn, the tiger has no way to strike at him with claw, and weapons of war have no way to use point or edge against him. ~ Why is this so? ~ It is due to the fact that he stays free of the land of death.

[50c19T] Lin Yutang ~ THE PRESERVING OF LIFE ~ Out of life, death enters. ~ The companions (organs) of life are thirteen; ~ The companions (organs) of death are (also) thirteen. ~ What send man to death in this life are also (these) thirteen. ~ How is it so? ~ Because of the intense activity of multiplying life. ~ It has been said that he who is a good preserver of his life ~ Meets no tigers or wild buffaloes on land, ~ Is not vulnerable to weapons in the field of battle. ~ The horns of the wild buffalo are powerless against him; ~ The paws of the tiger are useless against him; ~ The weapons of the soldier cannot avail against him. ~ How is it so? ~ Because he is beyond death.

[50c20T] Victor H. Mair ~ A person comes forth to life and enters into death. ~ Three out of ten are partners of life, ~ Three out of ten are partners of death, ~ And the people whose every movement leads them to the land of death because they cling to life ~ Are also three out of ten. ~ Now, ~ What is the reason for this? ~ It is because they cling to life. ~ Indeed, ~ I have heard that ~ One who is good at preserving life does not avoid tigers and rhinoceroses when he walks in the hills; ~ nor does he put on armor and take up weapons when he enters a battle. ~ The rhinoceros has no place to jab its horn, ~ The tiger has no place to fasten its claws, ~ Weapons have no place to admit their blades. ~ Now, ~ What is the reason for this? ~ Because on him there are no mortal spots.

[50c21T] Tolbert McCarroll ~ When going off one way means living ~ and going off the other way means dying, ~ three in ten are companions of Life, ~ three in ten are companions of Death, ~ and three in ten value Life but drift toward Death. ~ Why is all this so? ~ Because, these people are too greedy about living. ~ It is said: ~ People who are skillful in caring ~ for the life that has been given to them ~ travel abroad without fear of wild ox or tiger, ~ and enter a battle without concern for sharp weapons. ~ There is no place for the wild ox to thrust its horns, ~ there is no place for the tiger to put its claws, ~ there is no place for a weapon to lodge. ~ How is this so? ~ Because, there is no place for Death to enter in!

[50c22T] David H. Li ~ People are born and people die. ~ Three in ten live long; ~ Three in ten die young; ~ Three in ten move [prematurely] into death's realm. ~ Why so? ~ Because they care for their lives too well. ~ Those who care for themselves, it is said, are unlikely to encounter rhinoceroses or tigers on land, or face weaponry and soldiers in war. ~ Rhinoceroses have no occasion to use their horns; ~ tigers have no occasion to use their claws; ~ soldiers have no occasion to use their bayonets. ~ Why so? ~ Because they care for themselves to not move into death's realm.

[50c23T] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ Life is appearance; death is disappearance. ~ Three out of ten live a long life. ~ Three out of ten live a short life. ~ Three out of ten bring upon themselves an untimely death, ~ Because they cling too much to outer pleasures of life. ~ He who maintains a balanced life in accordance with the Tao, ~ Does not meet tigers or rhinoceroses in the wilderness, ~ Does not suffer attacks from the enemy in the battlefield. ~ Upon him the tiger has no place to fasten its claws, ~ The rhinoceros has no place to jab its horn, ~ The weapon has no place to pierce its blade. ~ Why is this so? ~ Because in him there is no room for death to enter.

[50c24T] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ It is easy to hold something that is motionless, ~ It is easy to create a mold for something that is not lacking, ~ It is easy to break something that is breakable, ~ It is easy to scatter a thing that is small. ~ Take care of a thing before it happens, ~ Arrange a thing before it gets out of hand. ~ The simple man generally fails in his affairs on the verge of success. ~ Take care of the end as you do of the beginning, ~ And you will not fail.

[50c26T] Gu Zhengkun ~ Men live when given to birth ~ And die when being buried. ~ One third of them are long-lived; ~ One third of them are short-lived; ~ One third of them die from their own choices though they could have lived longer; ~ Why in such cases? ~ Because they are too eager to live longer. ~ It is heard that he who is good at preserving his life ~ Does not meet with the rhinoceros or tiger when traveling on land, ~ Nor is he wounded in war, ~ For the rhinoceros has no use for its horns ~ And the tiger has no use for its claws; ~ The weapons have no use for their blades. ~ Why in such cases? ~ Because there is no realm of death for him to enter.

[50c27T] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ Emotions and longings are life. ~ Passions and desires are death. ~ There are thirteen kinds of life: ~ seven are emotions and they refer to the gates of the mind; ~ six are longings and they refer to the gates of the body. ~ There are also thirteen kinds of death: ~ seven are passions and they refer to the gates of the mind; ~ six are desires and they refer to the gates of the body. ~ These thirteen kinds of life and death rule also human beings, because one treasures life. ~ He who is good at conserving his life will not meet the rhinoceros and the tiger on his journey. ~ He can enter a battle without being hurt. ~ The rhinoceros cannot attack him with its horn, ~ the tiger cannot scratch him with its claws, ~ troops cannot use their swords against him. ~ That is only because he has no place for death to enter.

[50c28т] Liu Qixuan ~ Life and death co-exist in the same process. ~ The chance for life is thirty percent. ~ The chance for death is thirty percent. ~ The chance for death in the life's area is also thirty percent. ~ Why? ~ Because some live too actively for their lives. ~ It has been said that people good at living ~ Do not meet with tigers on land, ~ Or receive hits in battle. ~ Tigers can have no chance to apply their paws. ~ Weapons can have no chance to exert their edges. ~ Why? ~ Because people good at living have no chance of death.

[50c29т] Shi Fu Hwang ~ The Preserving of Life ~ Lao Tze says, ~ Men come forth from their mothers' wombs and live; ~ and they enter dust, and die. ~ Those men who depend on the three and ten to live; ~ die by the three and ten also. ~ Those who were living will be sent to the place of death by the three and ten. ~ And for what reason? ~ Because they made excessive stores to perpetuate their life. ~ For I have heard it is said that one who excels in safeguarding his own life does not shun the rhinoceros or tiger when travelling on land, nor does he avoid buff coat and sharp weapon at entering a host. ~ The rhinoceros finds no place to fix its claw on him, nor the weapon a place to admit its point on him. ~ And for what reason? ~ Because there is no place of death on him.

[50c30т] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ Men go out of life and enter into death. ~ The parts (proportions) of life are three in ten; the parts of death are also three in ten. ~ Men that from birth move towards the region of death are also three in ten. ~ Why is it so? ~ Because of their redundant effort in seeking to live. ~ But only those who do nothing for the purpose of living are better than those who prize their lives. ~ For I have heard that he who knows well how to conserve life, when travelling on land, does not meet the rhinoceros or the tiger; when going to a battle he is not attacked by arms and weapons. ~ The rhinoceros can find nowhere to drive his horn; the tiger can find nowhere to put his claws; the weapons can find nowhere to thrust their blades. ~ Why is it so? ~ Because he is beyond the region of death.

[50c31т] Paul J. Lin ~ Coming out means life; going in means death. ~ Three-tenths of men are disciples of life. ~ Three-tenths of men are disciples of death. ~ Three-tenths of men actually have life, but strive for death through activity. ~ Why is this so? ~ Because they over-nourish themselves. ~ So I have heard that he who is capable of sustaining life ~ Can travel on land without ever encountering a rhinoceros or tiger; ~ Can enter a battle without ever being touched by arms and weapons. ~ The rhinoceros cannot charge him with its horns. ~ The tiger cannot attack him with its claws. ~ Weapons have no place to lodge their blades. ~ Why is this so? ~ Because he has no grounds for death.

[50c32т] Michael LaFargue ~ "Setting out to live is entering into death." ~ "Thirteen are the life givers, ~ thirteen are the death bringers." ~ The thirteen body parts are also death spots in people's life and activity. ~ Why? ~ Because they live life so lavishly. ~ So we hear: ~ One who Excels at fostering life, ~ "travels on land without meeting rhinoceros or tiger, ~ enters combat without armor or weapon." ~ The rhinoceros finds no place to jab its horn, ~ the tiger finds no place to lay its claws, ~ a weapon finds no place where its point can enter. ~ Why? ~ Because he has no death spot.

[50c33т] Cheng Lin ~ Man begins with life, and ends with death. ~ During the span of man's existence, ~ three-tenths of it are passed in the processes of growth; ~ three-tenths are passed in the processes of decay. ~ That which is meant for the development of life but which is passed in the processes of decay also constitutes three-tenths. ~ Why is this so? ~ Because man over-taxes the life force. ~ It has been said that he who knows how to preserve life avoids the rhinoceros and tigers when travelling by land; ~ dodges arms and weapons when engaged in battle with a hostile army. ~ He sees to it that the rhinoceros have no opportunity to use their horns; ~ that tigers have no opportunity to use their claws; ~ that enemies have no opportunity to use their weapons. ~ Why is this so? ~ Because man avoids the risks of death.

[50c34т] Yi Wu ~ From birth to death, ~ One-third are fellows of life, ~ One-third are fellows of death, ~ And one-third are fellows of life who move to grounds for death. ~ Why is this? ~ Because they are overly attached to their lives. ~ It is said that those who are good at sustaining life ~ Travel on land without meeting wild buffalos or tigers, ~ Enter battle without protection of armor or weapons. ~ In them, a wild buffalo finds no place to gore with its horns, ~ A tiger finds no place to seize with its claws, ~ A weapon finds no place to pierce with its blade. ~ Why is this? ~ Because they have no grounds for death.

[50c35т] Han Hiong Tan ~ From the time you were born, you are dying. ~ About one-third of people are luxuriating in longevity, ~ Another third are enjoying a normal life span but travelling along the path towards a natural death. ~ The other third are heading on the path towards a premature death. ~ The cause of premature death is due to overindulgence in life. ~ I have heard that people, who master the art of living, ~ Can avoid meeting a rhinoceros or tiger in the jungle. ~ They can avoid getting hurt by any sharp weapons in a battle. ~ The rhinoceros cannot employ its horn against them. ~ The tiger cannot attack them with its paws. ~ Sharp weapons cannot inflict injury on them. ~ Why is this so? ~ They simply manage to stay away from the circle of death.

[50c36т] Hua-Ching Ni ~ That one's physical life will begin with birth and end in death seems a surety. ~ Also, in an individual life, the special opportunities of life and death are very much equal. ~ When there is an opportunity for death, ~ there is an opportunity for life also. ~ When there is an unusual opportunity for life, ~ it pulls one's life closer to death. ~ Aside from such opportunities, ~ there is the personal effort to maintain normalcy. ~ This is much more reliable than the special opportunities which place one's life on the verge of life and death. ~ People of awareness value normalcy and forsake seeking special opportunities which hold the promise of increasing the strength of living. ~ Such things are eventually only ways to speed up one's life. ~ One who can enjoy his natural life is content with the life of simple normalcy. ~ As I was told, one who knows how to tend his life with simple normalcy, ~ does not meet wild animals on the road or know the touch of weapons during war. ~ The mighty horns of the rhinoceros, ~ the powerful claws of the tiger, ~ the sharp blades of weapons, ~ find nowhere to pierce him. ~ Why is this so? ~ Because his mind holds no uncanny thoughts he gives death no opportunity.

[50c37т] Chang Chung-yuan ~ To live or to die: ~ Three out of ten men live, ~ While three out of ten men die. ~ Further, three out of ten men cling to life, ~ But they lose it. ~ Why? ~ Because they all crave life. ~ He who knows how to safeguard his life ~ Does not encounter tigers or rhinoceroses. ~ In the battlefield ~ He does not avoid dangerous weapons. ~ Rhinoceroses cannot gore him, ~ Tigers cannot claw him, ~ Dangerous weapons cannot harm him. ~ Why? ~ Because there is no place in him for death.

[50c38т] Henry Wei ~ Importance of Life ~ Kuei Sheng ~ As life emerges, death enters. ~ The agents of life are thirteen; ~ The agents of death are likewise thirteen; ~ The thirteen also may make men move in a death spot. ~ Why so? ~ Because life is lived in too intense a manner. ~ I have heard that - ~ He, who is adept in guarding his life, ~ Will not come across rhinoceros and tigers, ~ When travelling on land; ~ And when in the armed forces, ~ Will not get wounded by deadly weapons. ~ In him the rhinoceros can find no place to butt, ~ Nor can the tiger find any place to claw, ~ Nor can the weapons find any place to injure. ~ Why so? ~ Because there is no death spot in him.

[50c39т] Ha Poong Kim ~ You come out to life and enter death. ~ The companions of life are three in ten; ~ The companions of death are three in ten: ~ The way humans live, ~ There are those who move into death-spots. ~ They too are three in ten. ~ Why is this so? ~ It is because of their hoarding of life. ~ I hear that those who nurture life well, ~ When traveling on land, do not meet wild buffaloes or tigers, ~ Nor do they, when going into battle, put on armor or shields. ~ The wild buffalo would find no place to thrust its horns; ~ The tiger would find no place to place its claws; ~ The sword would find no place to lodge its blade. ~ Why is this so? ~ Because for such men there are no death-spots.

[50c40т] Tao Huang ~ We live, we die. ~ The companions of life are three and ten. ~ The companions of death are three and ten. ~ That people live their active life necessarily leading to the ground of death is three and ten. ~ Why so? ~ It is the nature of life itself. ~ As a matter of fact, I hear of those who are good at preserving their lives: ~ Walking through, not avoiding rhinos and tigers. ~ Entering battle without wearing armaments. ~ The rhino has no place to dig its horns. ~ The tiger has no place to drag its claws. ~ The soldier has no place to thrust his blade. ~ Why is this so? ~ Because they have no place to die.

[50c41т] Tang Zi-chang ~ Throughout human life, from birth to death: ~ There are one third who die naturally; ~ There are one third who die from disease; ~ And the other one third who die by speeding to death. ~ For what reasons have they done so? ~ Because they live by overdrawing upon their lives heavily. ~ As I used to hear that: ~ "One who takes good care of his life will not meet a rhinoceros or a tiger when he is traveling on land. ~ He does not need to wear armour or carry weapons when he is leading an army." ~ The rhinoceros finds no place to insert its horn. ~ The tiger finds no place to put its claws. ~ Weapons of war find no place to thrust their blades. ~ For what reasons? ~ Because one never lets himself be in a vulnerable situation.

[50c42т] Wing-tsit Chan ~ Man comes in to life and goes out to death. ~ Three out of ten are companions of life. ~ Three out of ten are companions of death. ~ And three out of ten in their lives lead from activity to death. ~ And for what reason? ~ Because of man's intensive striving after life. ~ I have heard that one who is a good preserver of his life will not meet tigers or wild buffaloes, ~ And in fighting will not try to escape from weapons of war. ~ The wild buffalo cannot butt its horns against him, ~ The tiger cannot fasten its claws in him, ~ And weapons of war cannot thrust their blades into him. ~ And for what reason? ~ Because in him there is no room for death.

отсутствует место, куда применить свои когти. ~ Для воина отсутствует место, куда вонзить свой клинок. ~ И какова же причинность: ~ Из-за отсутствия в нем Земли смерти.

[51c01t] Robert G. Henricks ~ The Way gives birth to them and Virtue nourishes them; ~ Substance gives them form and their unique capacities complete them. ~ Therefore the ten thousand things venerate the Way and honor Virtue. ~ As for their veneration of the Way and their honoring of Virtue - ~ No one rewards them for it; it's constantly so on its own. ~ The Way gives birth to them, nourishes them, matures them, completes them, rests them, rears them, supports them, and protects {them}. ~ {It gives birth to them but} doesn't try to own them; ~ It acts on their behalf but doesn't make them dependent; ~ It matures them but doesn't rule them. ~ This we call Profound Virtue.

[51c02t] John C. H. Wu ~ TAO gives them life, ~ Virtue nurses them, ~ Matter shapes them, ~ Environment perfects them. ~ Therefore all things without exception worship Tao and do homage to Virtue. ~ They have not been commanded to worship Tao and do homage to Virtue, ~ But they always do so spontaneously. ~ It is Tao that gives them life: ~ It is Virtue that nurses them, grows them, fosters them, shelters them, comforts them, nourishes them, and covers them under her wings. ~ To give life but to claim nothing, ~ To do your work but to set no store by it, ~ To be a leader, not a butcher, ~ This is called hidden Virtue.

[51c03t] D. C. Lau ~ The way gives them life; ~ Virtue rears them; ~ Things give them shape; ~ Circumstances bring them to maturity. ~ Therefore the myriad creatures all revere the way and honour virtue. ~ Yet the way is revered and virtue honoured not because this is decreed by any authority but because it is natural for them to be treated so. ~ Thus the way gives them life and rears them; ~ Brings them up and nurses them; ~ Brings them to fruition and maturity; ~ Feeds and shelters them. ~ It gives them life yet claims no possession; ~ It benefits them yet exacts no gratitude; ~ It is the steward yet exercises no authority. ~ Such is called the mysterious virtue.

[51c04t] R. L. Wing ~ The Tao produces; ~ Its Power supports; Its Natural Law forms; Its influence completes. ~ Thus All Things without exception ~ Respect the Tao and value its Power. ~ To respect the Tao and value its Power - ~ No one demands this, and it comes naturally. ~ Therefore the Tao produces and its Power supports; ~ It advances, cultivates, comforts, matures, nourishes, and protects. ~ Produce but do not possess. ~ Act without expectation. ~ Advance without dominating. ~ These are called the Subtle Powers.

[51c05t] Ren Jiyu ~ Tao begets all beings, ~ And De fosters them. ~ The physical gives them forms, ~ And the vessels mark them accomplished. ~ Therefore all beings without exception venerate Tao and value De. ~ The veneration of Tao and valuing of De, is not out of obedience to any orders, but is always like this. ~ Therefore Tao begets all beings, ~ And De fosters them, grows and raises them, makes them fruitful and mature, breeds them and protects them. ~ To give birth to them without taking possession of them, ~ To put them in motion without vaunting this as its merits, ~ And to be their sovereign without controlling them, ~ - These are called the profound De.

[51c06t] Gia-fu Feng ~ All things arise from Tao. ~ They are nourished by Virtue. ~ They are formed from matter. ~ They are shaped by environment. ~ Thus the ten thousand things all respect Tao and honor Virtue. ~ Respect of Tao and honor of Virtue are not demanded, ~ But they are in the nature of things. ~ Therefore all things arise from Tao. ~ By Virtue they are nourished, ~ Developed, cared for, ~ Sheltered, comforted, ~ Grown, and protected. ~ Creating without claiming, ~ Doing without taking credit, ~ Guiding without interfering, ~ This is Primal Virtue.

[51c07t] Lok Sang Ho ~ The Dao gives them birth. ~ The Virtue rears them. ~ They get their shapes from substance. ~ They become what they are from the working of various forces. ~ For these reasons all living things pay homage to the Dao, ~ And respect the Virtue. ~ The stately status of the Dao and that of the Virtue ~ Are such that they are at the command of no one, ~ And are always in their natural states. ~ The Dao gives birth; ~ The Virtue rears them; ~ Raises and nourishes them; ~ Brings them up and lets them down; ~ Claims no ownership even though it brings them to life. ~ The Dao accomplishes but is never arrogant; ~ It lets them grow but never dictates their fates. ~ This is known as the Mystical Virtue.

[51c08t] Xiaolin Yang ~ The DAO gives birth to everything, the DE looks after everything, ~ The elements give a shape to everything, and nature makes everything grow and mature. ~ Therefore, everything respects the DAO and values the DE. ~ The dignity of the DAO and the nobleness of the DE are not forced upon anything, but allow everything to be natural. ~ So, the DAO gives birth to everything, the DE looks after everything; ~ They grow and cultivate everything, making them complete and mature; ~ They bring everything up and protect them. ~ Giving birth to everything but not owning them, ~ Taking care of everything but not claiming the credit, ~ Leading everything but not controlling them; ~ This is called real DE.

[51c09t] Walter Gorn Old, CHERISHING VIRTUE ~ Tao brings forth, and Teh nourishes. ~ All things take up their several forms, and natural forces bring them to perfection. ~ Therefore all things conspire to exalt Tao and to cherish virtue. ~ But this regard of Tao and Teh is not in deference to any mandate. ~ It is unconstrained, and therefore it endures for ever. ~ For Tao produces all things, and Teh nourishes, increases, feeds, matures, protects, and watches over them. ~ To produce without possessing; to work without expecting; to enlarge without usurping; this is the sublime virtue!

[51c10t] James Legge ~ All things are produced by the Tao, and nourished by its outflowing operation. ~ They receive their forms according to the nature of each, and are completed according to the circumstances of their condition. ~ Therefore all things without exception honour the Tao, and exalt its outflowing operation. ~ This honouring of the Tao and exalting of its operation is not the result of any ordination, but always a spontaneous tribute. ~ Thus it is that the Tao produces (all things), nourishes them, brings them to their full growth, nurses them, completes them, matures them, maintains them, and overspreads them. ~ It produces them and makes no claim to the possession of them; ~ it carries them through their processes and does not vaunt its ability in doing so; ~ it brings them to maturity and exercises no control over them; ~ - this is called its mysterious operation.

[51c11t] David Hinton ~ Way gives birth to them and Integrity nurtures them. ~ Matter shapes them and conditions complete them. ~ That's why the ten thousand things always honor Way and treasure Integrity. ~ Honoring Way and treasuring Integrity ~ isn't obedience to command, ~ it's occurrence perennially appearing of itself. ~ Way gives birth to them and Integrity nurtures them: ~ it fosters and sustains them, harbors and succors them, nourishes and shelters them. ~ Giving birth without possessing, ~ animating without subjecting, ~ fostering without dominating: ~ this is called dark-enigma Integrity.

[51c12t] Chichung Huang ~ The Tao generates them, ~ Virtue nurtures them, ~ Matter forms them, ~ And instruments complete them. ~ Hence, the ten thousand things ~ Honor the Tao and treasure virtue. ~ That the Tao is honored ~ And virtue is treasured is not because ~ Anyone has conferred titles upon them; ~ It is constantly the way things are. ~ The Tao generates them, ~ Nurtures them, ~ Grows them, ~ Raises them, ~ Shapes them, ~ Solidifies them, ~ Stores them, ~ Covers them. ~ It generates without possessing, ~ Assists without taking credit, ~ Leads without dominating. ~ This is called deep and remote virtue.

[51c13t] Ellen M. * * *

[51c14t] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ Tao originates [each and every thing]; ~ Te cultivates [each and every thing]; ~ The material world gives the form [to each and every thing]; ~ The situation completes the formation [of each and every thing]. ~ For this reason, each and every thing must resort to venerating Tao and treasuring Te; ~ The omnipotence of Tao and the invaluableness of Te [are so compelling]; ~ Even though people are not required to recognize the omnipotence of Tao and the invaluableness of Te, they shall always [propelled to] follow their rules, because this is the way of Nature. ~ Accordingly, Tao originates [each and everything]; ~ Te cultivates, grows, nourishes, fulfills, ripens, nurtures and shelters [each and everything]. ~ [I have therefore said before, if a person carries out any of the following practices:] ~ Helping [others] to live [better lives] without being possessive; ~ Stimulating [others] (to maximize their potentials) without claiming the contribution; ~ Leading [others with the best guidance] without being manipulative; ~ This person has performed [successfully in accord with] the profound Te!

[51c15t] Tien Cong Tran ~ The Way gives birth [to all things]; Virtue nourishes; matter shapes; environment perfects. ~ Therefore all things without exception revere the Way and honor Virtue, although they are not commanded, but left to do so naturally. ~ Hence, the Way gives birth; Virtue nurses, grows, fosters, shelters, comforts, nourishes, and guards. ~ It gives birth but does not claim as its own; it does but does not claim its doing; it grows but does not claim to be master. ~ This is called hidden Virtue.

[51c16t] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ Everything is born from Tao, and nurtured by Te; shaped by substance, and completed by environment. ~ Thus, everything follows Tao and is guided by Te. ~ Tao is honored. ~ Te is valued. ~ This is not the result of promotion, but occurs naturally. ~ This is why everything is born by Tao and nurtured by Te. ~ Te raises, educates, mentors, coaches, nourishes, and protects everything. ~ Giving lives without possessing them, ~ Guiding without forcing, ~ Developing without controlling, ~ This is called Profound Te.

[51c17t] Arthur Waley ~ Tao gave them birth; ~ The 'power' of Tao reared them, ~ Shaped them according to their kinds, ~ Perfected them, giving to each its strength. ~ Therefore of the ten thousand things there is not one that does not worship Tao and do homage to its 'power'. ~ No mandate ever went forth that accorded to Tao the right to be worshipped, nor to its 'power' the right to receive homage. ~ It was always and of itself so. ~ Therefore as Tao bore them and the 'power' of Tao reared them, made them grow, fostered them, harboured them, brewed for them, so you must ~ 'Rear them, but not lay claim to them, ~ Control them, but never lean upon them, ~ Be chief among them, but not manage them. ~ This is called the mysterious power.'

[51c18t] Richard John Lynn ~ The Dao gives life to them; virtue nurtures them, matter gives them physical form, and characteristic potential completes them. ~ This is why the myriad things without exception must honor the Dao and esteem virtue. ~ This honoring of the Dao and this esteeming of virtue, none are ordered to do so, yet it always happens spontaneously. ~ The Dao gives them life, and virtue nurtures them, that is, grows them, rears them, ensures them their proper shapes, matures them, and protects them. ~ He gives them life yet possesses them not. ~ He acts, yet they do not depend on him. ~ They mature, yet he is not their steward. ~ This we call mysterious virtue.

[51c19t] Lin Yutang ~ THE MYSTIC VIRTUE ~ Tao gives them birth, ~ Teh (character) fosters them. ~ The material world gives them form. ~ The circumstances of the moment complete them. ~ Therefore all things of the universe worship Tao and exalt Teh. ~ Tao is worshipped and Teh is exalted ~ Without anyone's order but is so of its own accord. ~ Therefore Tao gives them birth, ~ Teh fosters them, ~ Makes them grow, develops them, ~ Gives them a harbor, a place to dwell in peace, ~ Feeds them and shelters them. ~ It gives them birth and does not own them, ~ Acts (helps) and does not appropriate them, ~ Is superior, and does not control them. ~ This is the Mystic Virtue.

[51c20t] Victor H. Mair ~ The Way gives birth to them and integrity nurtures them. ~ Matter forms them and function completes them. ~ For this reason, ~ The myriad creatures respect the Way and esteem integrity. ~ Respect for the Way and esteem for integrity are by no means conferred upon them but always occur naturally. ~ The Way ~ gives birth to them, ~ nurtures them, ~ rears them, ~ follows them, ~ shelters them, ~ toughens them, ~ sustains them, ~ protects them. ~ It ~ gives birth but does not possess, ~ acts but does not presume, ~ rears but does not control. ~ This is what is called "mysterious integrity."

[51c21t] Tolbert McCarroll ~ The Tao gives life to all things, ~ and its Virtue nourishes them, forms each according to its nature and gives to each its inner strength. ~ Therefore, ~ the ten thousand things all venerate the Tao and honor its Virtue. ~ It has never been decreed that the Tao be venerated and its Virtue be honored; ~ they have always been so treated spontaneously. ~ Thus, ~ the Tao gives life to all things; ~ and its Virtue raises them, nourishes them, brings them to their full growth, feeds, shelters, and protects them. ~ Giving life without claiming authority, ~ benefiting without demanding gratitude, ~ guiding without control. ~ This is called hidden Virtue.

[51c22t] David H. Li ~ Cultivated by Direction, reared by virtue; ~ formed by matter, completed by interaction. ~ Thus, myriad matters revere Direction and value virtue. ~ The reason Direction is revered and virtue valued is that they do not command but let myriad matters visit Nature. ~ Thus, ~ Direction cultivates, ~ virtue rears, nurtures, guides, comforts, protects, cares, shelters. ~ Cultivating without possessing, ~ providing without claiming, ~ nurturing without dominating, ~ This is the Profoundest Virtue.

[51c23t] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ The Tao begets existence. ~ Intelligence nurtures existence. ~ Substance forms existence. ~ Forces complete existence. ~ For this reason, ~ Everything in existence, without exception, ~ Reveres the Tao and honors Intelligence, ~ Not by any decree, but with utter spontaneity. ~ Thus, the Tao begets everything in existence, ~ And Intelligence nurtures it, ~ Rears it, ~ Develops it, ~ Completes it, ~ Ripens it, ~ Sustains it, ~ Protects it. ~ Giving birth without possessing, ~ Availing life without claiming, ~ Promoting growth without controlling, ~ These are the Profound Virtues of Kosmic Intelligence.

[51c24t] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ The Tao created all things, ~ The way of the Tao nourished them, ~ All things emerge in different forms, ~ Each of them is perfect in the nature of the Tao within it. ~ Therefore, there is not one among the myriad of things ~ That does not honor the Tao and cherish its way. ~ Honoring the Tao and cherishing its way are not dictated by law, ~ But rather come from within. ~ Therefore the Tao creates them, makes them grow, nourishes them, ~ Guards them, lifts them, and protects them. ~ When all things are created, the Tao does not reject them. ~ It creates them without owning them. ~ It operates without depending on them, and raises them without controlling them. ~ When its work is completed, it does not lay any claim to them. ~ Since it does not lay claim to them, it does not lose them.

[51c25т] Man-Ho Kwok ~ Everything streams from the Tao, ~ Everything is nurtured by Te, ~ Everything is made out of substance, ~ Everything is created by the Tao of Nature ~ - and from everything on earth that surrounds it. ~ So every living thing should bow to the Tao, the Tao and its Virtue because they are what it is. ~ Everything that breathes comes from the Tao, ~ And the Virtue feeds and takes care of it. ~ They grace things without possessing them, ~ They benefit everything but ask for nothing back, ~ They give themselves into everything without seeking control. ~ This is the essence of the original intention.

[51c26т] Gu Zhengkun ~ The Tao begets all creatures; ~ The virtue rears them; ~ Substance gives them shape; ~ Forces in opposition accomplish them. ~ Therefore all creatures worship the Tao and honor virtue. ~ This worship and honor stems from the fact ~ That the Tao and virtue never unnaturally ~ Impose their influence on all creatures. ~ In this way ~ The Tao begets all creatures; ~ The virtue rears them, ~ Promotes them, natures them, ~ Brings them to fruition and maturity, ~ Meanwhile maintains and defends them. ~ Giving them life without claiming to be their owner; ~ Availing them without claiming to be their benefactor; ~ And being their head without ruling them; ~ All these are called the most intrinsic Teh (virtue).

[51c27т] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ The Tao creates. ~ The virtue nourishes. ~ The things form. ~ The environment shapes them to completion. ~ That is why the myriad creatures all respect the Tao, and value virtue. ~ When the Tao is respected, virtue is valued. ~ No one can command them but the Tao. ~ That is why the Tao creates myriad creatures. ~ Virtue nourishes them, cultivates them, educates them, completes them, ripens them, supports them, carries them. ~ The Tao creates them without possessing them, benefits them without profiting from them, guides them without commanding them. ~ That is what profound virtue means.

[51c28т] Liu Qixuan ~ Things are produced by the Way, ~ Cultivated by their accumulation through time, ~ Realized in their forms by substances, ~ And guided in their development ~ By the potential in specific circumstances. ~ Therefore, everything respects the Way ~ And values what has been accumulated in the culture. ~ In the respected Way and valued accumulation, ~ Things grow and develop ~ By following their natural courses. ~ That's why we say that things are produced by the Way, ~ And, through diachronic accumulation, reared, ~ Cultivated, developed, matured, and protected naturally. ~ That process is the basic moral model for providers: ~ Produce without possessing anything, ~ Achieve without showing off anything, ~ And lead without making personal decisions.

[51c29т] Shi Fu Hwang ~ The Mystic Virtue ~ Lao Tze says, ~ The Tao is the one to give existence; ~ and its attribute, the Teh, is responsible for nurturing it. ~ In this way all things are formed. ~ They are brought forth to maturity according to their condition. ~ Therefore, all existence without exception honors the Tao and exalts the Teh. ~ This honoring of the Tao and exalting of the Teh is not decreed through an authority, but through spontaneous tribute. ~ So it is that the Tao gives existence; ~ and its attribute, the Teh, completes, matures, maintains and shelters. ~ It gives life but doesn't claim the possession of it. ~ It carries all things through their processes but does not boast its ability. ~ It brings them to maturity, but does not control them. ~ This is called the mystic virtue.

[51c30т] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ Tao produces them (all things); ~ Virtue feeds them; ~ All of them appear in different forms; ~ Each is perfected by being given power. ~ Therefore none of the numerous things does not honour Tao and esteem virtue. ~ The honouring of Tao and the esteem of virtue are done, not by command, but always of their own accord. ~ Therefore Tao produces them, makes them grow, nourishes them, shelters them, brings them up and protects them. ~ When all things come into being Tao does not reject them. ~ It produces them without holding possession of them. ~ It acts without depending upon them, and raises without lording it over them. ~ When merits are accomplished it does not lay claim to them. ~ Because it does not lay claim to them, therefore it does not lose them.

[51c31т] Paul J. Lin ~ Tao begets them. ~ Virtue nurtures them. ~ Matter gives them form. ~ Circumstances bring them into completion. ~ Therefore all things not only respect Tao but also value virtue. ~ Yet Tao is respected and virtue is valued. ~ Without being ordered, they come naturally. ~ Therefore Tao begets them. ~ Virtue nurtures them, grows them and rears them, perfects them and ripens them, nourishes them and shelters them. ~ Begetting without possessing; ~ Acting without asserting; ~ Developing without controlling; ~ This is called mystical virtue.

[51c32т] Michael LaFargue ~ Tao produces them, ~ Te rears them, ~ events shape them, ~ talents complete their development. ~ And so: ~ Among the thousands of things, ~ there are none that do not honor Tao and treasure Te. ~ This honoring Tao and treasuring Te - ~ no one commands it, it always happens naturally. ~ Tao produces them, ~ Te rears them, makes them grow, nurses them, settles them, heals them, sustains them, protects them. ~ Produces but does not possess; ~ works but does not rely on this; ~ presides but doesn't rule. ~ This is mysterious Te.

[51c33т] Cheng Lin ~ It is Truth that gives both life and form to things. ~ The nature of a thing determines its individuality and perfection. ~ Therefore, as regards all things, Truth and Nature are the most important. ~ The importance of Truth and Nature is a matter of course, and requires no comment. ~ Truth gives birth to life. ~ Nature determines the individuality, growth, development, completion, maturity, protection, and security of a thing. ~ The mysterious Nature is that which lives without the desire for ownership, gives without the wish for return, rules without claiming lordship.

[51c34т] Yi Wu ~ The Way brings them forth, ~ Virtue nurtures them, ~ Matter shapes them, ~ Environment forms them. ~ Therefore, all things without exception venerate the Way and value virtue. ~ The Way's venerability and virtue's value ~ are that they do not command but constantly are natural. ~ Therefore, the Way brings them forth, ~ Virtue nurtures them, ~ Grows them and rears them, ~ Matures them and ripens them, ~ Nourishes them and shelters them. ~ Producing without possessing, ~ Acting without taking credit, ~ Growing without controlling, -- ~ This is called mystical virtue.

[51c35т] Han Hiong Tan ~ Dao produces everything. ~ De nourishes everything. ~ Dao and De work in tandem and things begin to take shape. ~ Things begin to evolve according to the circumstances. ~ Hence, all beings respect and venerate Dao and De. ~ Dao and De are so venerated because they do not exert control. ~ Everything is allowed to develop naturally. ~ Therefore, Dao procreates everything; De nurtures. ~ De facilitates growth, development, fruition and ripening. ~ It also nourishes and protects. ~ Dao procreates but does not possess. ~ De accomplishes but does not claim credit. ~ It facilitates growth but does not exert control. ~ This is known as "inconspicuous virtue".

[51c36т] Hua-Ching Ni ~ The natural essence of the universe gives life to all things. ~ Virtue nurses them. ~ Matter shapes them. ~ The natural environment brings them to maturity. ~ Therefore, all things without exception revere the subtle essence and honor virtue. ~ Though the subtle essence deserves reverence, ~ it does not demand it. ~ And though virtue ought to be honored, ~ it, too, does not demand it. ~ Thus, it is the subtle essence that gives life to all things, and with its virtue nurses them, grows them, fosters them, shelters them, comforts them, nourishes them and embraces them. ~ It does all this, yet it claims no possession, ~ expects no gratitude, and desires no lordship. ~ This is called the subtle virtue of the universe.

[51c37т] Chang Chung-yuan ~ Tao creates all things; ~ Tê cultivates them. ~ Things are shaped according to their natures; ~ Relational conditions fulfill them. ~ Therefore, ten thousand things all venerate the source of Tao ~ And value the potentialities of Tê. ~ Tao is venerated and Tê is valued spontaneously; ~ No one orders that it be so. ~ Thus, Tao creates all things; ~ Tê cultivates them. ~ They give them birth. ~ They nourish them. ~ They give them shape. ~ They give them quality. ~ They shelter them. ~ They guard them. ~ They create them but do not possess them. ~ They work for them but expect no reward. ~ They bring them to maturity but do not control them. ~ This is called invisible attainment.

[51c38т] Henry Wei ~ Nourishing Virtue ~ Yang Teh ~ Tao produces all things; ~ Teh (virtue) rears them; ~ Material elements shape them; ~ Environmental forces perfect them. ~ That's why of the ten thousand things, ~ None does not honor Tao and exalt Teh. ~ Tao is honored and Teh is exalted, ~ Not in obedience to anyone's command, ~ But always in accord with Innate Freedom. ~ Thus while Tao produces things, Teh rears them, ~ Brings them up, develops them, perfects them, ~ Matures them, feeds them, and shelters them. ~ To produce but not to claim ownership, ~ To act but not to presume on the result, ~ To lead but not to manipulate - ~ This is called Mystic Virtue.

[51c39т] Ha Poong Kim ~ Tao gives life [to the ten thousand things]; ~ Te nurtures them. ~ Materiality shapes them; ~ The circumstances fulfill them. ~ Therefore, of the ten thousand things ~ None fails to revere Tao and honor Te. ~ The revering of Tao, ~ The honoring of Te - ~ No one orders it. ~ It is always so of itself [tzu-jan]. ~ Therefore Tao gives them life; ~ Te nurtures them. ~ Makes them flourish and grow; ~ Gives them security and comfort; ~ Feeds and shelters them. ~ To give them life, without possessing them; ~ To rule them, without depending on them; ~ To lead them, without presiding over them - ~ This is called the mysterious Te.

[51c40т] Tao Huang ~ Tao enlivens. ~ Action nourishes. ~ Matter forms. ~ Mechanism completes. ~ For that reason, all things worship Tao and exalt Action. ~ The worship of Tao and exaltation of Action are not conferred, but always arise naturally. ~ Tao enlivens and nourishes, develops and cultivates, integrates and completes, raises and sustains. ~ It enlivens without possessing. ~ It acts without relying. ~ It develops without controlling. ~ Such is called mystic Action.

[51c41т] Tang Zi-chang ~ Dao gives birth to All Things. ~ Its virtue nourishes them. ~ Its Matter forms them, and its Forces perfect them. ~ Thus among All Things there is none which does not esteem Dao and envy its virtues. ~ To esteem Dao and envy its Virtues do not take any order whatever, but follow the eternity of Nature. ~ Since Dao gives life; ~ and its virtues nourish it, grow it, cultivate it, accomplish it, mature it, nurse it, and protect it. ~ It produces All Things but it does not possess them. ~ It provides everything for them but it does not take anything from them. ~ It leads them but does not lord over them. ~ It is called "the Profound Virtue".

[51c42т] Wing-tsit Chan ~ Tao produces them. ~ Virtue fosters them. ~ Matter gives them physical form. ~ The circumstances and tendencies complete them. ~ Therefore the ten thousand things esteem Tao and honor virtue. ~ Tao is esteemed and virtue is honored without anyone's order! ~ They always come spontaneously. ~ Therefore Tao produces them and virtue fosters them. ~ They rear them and develop them. ~ They give them security and give them peace. ~ They nurture them and protect them. ~ (Tao) produces them but does not take possession of them. ~ It acts, but does not rely on its own ability. ~ It leads them but does not master them. ~ This is called profound and secret virtue.

[51c92т] А. А. Маслов ~ Дао порождает, Благость вскармливает. ~ В вещах оформляется, в обстоятельствах воплощается. ~ Поэтому мириады существ не только почитают Дао, но и ценят Благость. ~ Почитают Дао и ценят Благость не за то, что они предопределяют судьбу, а потому, что извечно следуют естественности. ~ Вот поэтому Дао порождает, Благость вскармливает. ~ Взращивает и воспитывает, классифицирует и укрепляет, пестует и оберегает, порождает, но не обладает этим, свершает и не требует воздаяния, взращивает [мириады вещей] и не властвует над ними. ~ Оттого и зовётся это сокровенной Благостью.

совершенствует, делает зрелыми, кормит и защищает. ~ Оно производит их и не делает их своими; ~ делает их тем, что они есть, и не хвалится ими; ~ оно царствует над ними и оставляет их свободными. ~ Вот что называют глубокой добродетелью.

[51c98т] Б. Б. Виногродский ~ Путь порождает это. ~ Потенция накапливает это. ~ Сущности-вещи оформляют это. ~ Энергия-сила завершает это. ~ Это дает: ~ Из мириад сущностей нет не почитающих Путь и не возвышающих Потенцию. ~ Почитание Пути и возвышение Потенции делается не по чьему-то наставлению, а является самопроизвольной естественностью постоянства. ~ Причинность: ~ Путь порождает это, Потенция накапливает это, взращивает это, питает это, распределяет это, регулирует это, вскармливает это, покрывает это. ~ Порождая, не вступай в отношения обладания. ~ Осуществляя, не отождествляйся. ~ Возрастая, не главенствуй. ~ Это определяется: ~ Мистическая потенция.

[52c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ The world had a beginning, ~ Which can be considered the mother of the world. ~ Having attained the mother, in order to understand her children, ~ If you return and hold on to the mother, till the end of your life you'll suffer no harm. ~ Block up the holes; ~ Close the doors; ~ And till the end of your life you'll not labor. ~ Open the holes; ~ Meddle in affairs; ~ And till the end of your life you'll not be saved. ~ To perceive the small is called "discernment." ~ To hold on to the pliant is called "strength." ~ If you use the rays to return to the bright light, ~ You'll not abandon your life to peril. ~ This is called Following the Constant.

[52c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ All-under-Heaven have a common Beginning. ~ This Beginning is the Mother of the world. ~ Having known the Mother, ~ We may proceed to know her children. ~ Having known the children, ~ We should go back and hold on to the Mother. ~ In so doing, you will incur no risk ~ Even though your body be annihilated. ~ Block all the passages! ~ Shut all the doors! ~ And to the end of your days you will not be worn out. ~ Open the passages! ~ Multiply your activities! ~ And to the end of your days you will remain helpless. ~ To see the small is to have insight. ~ To hold on to weakness is to be strong. ~ Use the lights, but return to your insight. ~ Do not bring calamities upon yourself. ~ This is the way of cultivating the Changeless.

[52c03т] D. C. Lau ~ The world had a beginning ~ And this beginning could be the mother of the world. ~ When you know the mother ~ Go on to know the child. ~ After you have known the child ~ Go back to holding fast to the mother, ~ And to the end of your days you will not meet with danger. ~ Block the openings, ~ Shut the doors, ~ And all your life you will not run dry. ~ Unblock the openings, ~ Add to your troubles, ~ And to the end of your days you will be beyond salvation. ~ To see the small is called discernment; ~ To hold fast to the submissive is called strength. ~ Use the light ~ But give up the discernment. ~ Bring not misfortune upon yourself. ~ This is known as following the constant.

[52c04т] R. L. Wing ~ The beginning of the world ~ May be regarded as the Mother of the world. ~ To apprehend the Mother, ~ Know the offspring. ~ To know the offspring ~ Is to remain close to the Mother, ~ And free from harm throughout life. ~ Block the passages, Close the doors; ~ In the end, life is idle. ~ Open the passages, ~ Increase undertakings; ~ In the end, life is hopeless. ~ To perceive the small is called insight. ~ To remain yielding is called strength. ~ If, in using one's brightness, ~ One returns to insight, ~ Life will be free of misfortune. ~ This is called learning the Absolute.

[52c05т] Ren Jiyu ~ All the things in the world have their origin in something, which is their foundation (mother). ~ Having grasped the Mother as the foundation of all things, one can know her children as all things. ~ Having grasped the children as the thing, one must hold to the Mother as the foundation of all things. ~ Thus one will never encounter danger all his life. ~ Blocking the vent (of knowledge) and closing the door (of knowledge) can keep one from sickness all his life. ~ Opening the vent (of knowledge) and completing the enterprise (of knowledge) will make one helpless all his life. ~ So, perceiving the minute is "sagaciousness," ~ Remaining soft and weak is "powerfulness." ~ Using one's contained light and reverting to one's sagaciousness of knowing the minute, ~ And thus keeping oneself from disaster, is to become accustomed to the eternal Way.

[52c06т] Gia-fu Feng ~ The beginning of the universe ~ Is the mother of all things. ~ Knowing the mother, one also knows the sons. ~ Knowing the sons, yet remaining in touch with the mother, ~ Brings freedom from the fear of death. ~ Keep your mouth shut, ~ Guard the senses, ~ And life is ever full. ~ Open your mouth, ~ Always be busy, ~ And life is beyond hope. ~ Seeing the small is insight; ~ Yielding to force is strength. ~ Using the outer light, return to insight, ~ And in this way be saved from harm. ~ This is learning constancy.

[52c07т] Lok Sang Ho ~ Everything under heaven has a beginning. ~ That beginning we take as our mother. ~ Now that we know our mother, ~ We can begin to know our role as sons(and daughters). ~ Since we know our role as sons(and daughters), ~ We must guard and stay with our mother, ~ This way, even if our bodies perish, ~ We will never die. ~ Let the passages be blocked. ~ Let the doors be closed. ~ (So long as we stay with our mother,) ~ Till the end of life no worry need bother us. ~ (If we do the contrary,) ~ Then even though the roads are opened up, ~ And help is available, ~ Till the end of our lives we will still be doomed. ~ To be able to see the small things is to be illuminated; ~ To adhere to the principle of flexibility and suppleness is to be strong. ~ Let people use their own light to illuminate and restore their understanding. ~ Let them leave nothing to regret about when their bodies perish. ~ This is called the gradual realization of the Eternal.

[52c08т] Xiaolin Yang ~ Since the beginning of the world, the DAO has been the mother of everything. ~ If you know the mother, the DAO, you know the child, the world. ~ Knowing the world, but also keeping the DAO, will prevent disasters throughout your life. ~ If you shut off your senses and desires, you will not have any trouble throughout your life; ~ If you open your senses and you do things for your own purposes, you cannot be saved throughout your life. ~ By focusing on the minor and subtle, your vision is clear; ~ By staying on the side of weak, you are strong. ~ Using the "light" of the world, but also keeping the "light source" of the DAO, ~ Will bring no harm to you and make you natural and long-lasting.

[52c09т] Walter Gorn Old, GOING BACK TO THE CAUSE ~ That from which the universe sprang may be looked upon as its Mother. ~ By knowing the Mother you have access to the child. ~ And if, knowing the child, you prefer the Mother, though your body perish, yet you will come to no harm. ~ Keep your mouth shut, and close up the doors of sight and sound, and as long as you live you will have no vexation. ~ But open your mouth, or become inquisitive, and you will be in trouble all your life long. ~ To perceive things in the germ is intelligence. ~ To remain gentle is to be invincible. ~ Follow the light that guides you homeward, and do not get lost in the darkness. ~ This I call using the eternal.

[52c10т] James Legge ~ (The Tao) which originated all under the sky is to be considered as the mother of them all. ~ When the mother is found, we know what her children should be. ~ When one knows that he is his mother's child, and proceeds to guard (the qualities of) the mother that belong to him, to the end of his life he will be free from all peril. ~ Let him keep his mouth closed, and shut up the portals (of his nostrils), and all his life he will be exempt from laborious exertion. ~ Let him keep his mouth open, and (spend his breath) in the promotion of his affairs, and all his life there will be no safety for him. ~ The perception of what is small is (the secret of) clear-sightedness; ~ the guarding of what is soft and tender is (the secret of) strength. ~ Who uses well his light, ~ Reverting to its (source so) bright, ~ Will from his body ward all blight, ~ And hides the unchanging from men's sight.

[52c11т] David Hinton ~ There's a source all beneath heaven shares: call it the mother of all beneath heaven. ~ Once you fathom the mother you understand the child, and once you understand the child you abide in the mother, ~ self gone, free of danger. ~ If you block the senses and close the mind, you never struggle. ~ If you open the senses and expand your endeavors, nothing can save you. ~ Seeing the small is called enlightenment, and abiding in the gentle strength. ~ Wielding radiance return to enlightenment, then you're beyond all harm. ~ This is the cultivation of constancy.

[52c12т] Chichung Huang ~ All under heaven have a beginning, ~ Which is considered the mother of all under heaven. ~ Having found their mother, ~ You thereby know her children. ~ Having known her children, ~ You revert and adhere to their mother, ~ A lifetime without peril. ~ Stop your hole, ~ Close your door, ~ A lifetime without end. ~ Open your hole, ~ Increase your disturbances, ~ A lifetime without remedy. ~ Seeing tiny things is clear-sightedness. ~ Adhering to softness is strength. ~ Use its light, ~ Withdraw your own clear-sightedness, ~ And you shall bring yourself no calamity. ~ This is called following the constant.

[53c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ Were I to have the least bit of knowledge, in walking on a Great Road, it's only going astray that I would fear. ~ The Great Way is very level; ~ But people greatly delight in tortuous paths. ~ The courts are swept very clean; ~ While the fields are full of weeds; ~ And the granaries are all empty. ~ Their clothing - richly embroidered and colored; ~ While at their waists they carry sharp swords. ~ They gorge themselves on food, and of possessions and goods {they have plenty}. ~ {This is called} thievery! ~ {And thievery} certainly isn't {the Way}!

[53c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ If only I had the tiniest grain of wisdom, ~ I should walk in the Great Way, ~ And my only fear would be to stray from it. ~ The Great Way is very smooth and straight; ~ And yet the people prefer devious paths. ~ The court is very clean and well garnished, ~ But the fields are very weedy and wild, ~ And the granaries are very empty! ~ They wear gorgeous clothes, ~ They carry sharp swords, ~ They surfeit themselves with food and drink, ~ They possess more riches than they can use! ~ They are the heralds of brigandage! ~ As for Tao, what do they know about it?

[53c03т] D. C. Lau ~ Were I possessed of the least knowledge, I would, when walking on the great way, fear only paths that lead astray. ~ The great way is easy, yet people prefer by-paths. ~ The court is corrupt, ~ The fields are overgrown with weeds, ~ The granaries are empty; ~ Yet there are those dressed in fineries, ~ With swords at their sides, ~ Filled with food and drink, ~ And possessed of too much wealth. ~ This is known as taking the lead in robbery. ~ Far indeed is this from the way.

[53c04т] R. L. Wing ~ Using only a little knowledge, I would travel the Great Way And fear only of letting go. ~ The Great Way is very even; Yet people love the byways. ~ When an organization is divided, Fields are overgrown, Stores are empty, ~ Clothes are extravagant, Sharp swords are worn, Food and drink are excessive, ~ Wealth and treasure are hoarded. ~ This is called stealing and exaggeration And certainly not the Way!

[53c05т] Ren Jiyu ~ If I have a certain knowledge, ~ I will go along the highway (Great Tao), ~ And I will be afraid of nothing but the oblique way. ~ The highway is very even, ~ But the people are fond of the shortcut. ~ (Those who make) ~ the palace very clear and neat, ~ the field uncultivated and weedy, ~ the granary empty and vacant, ~ wearing glorious and coloured clothes, ~ carrying precious and sharp swords, ~ satiated with exquisite food and drink, ~ possessing an abundance of wealth and property, ~ can be called chieftains of robbers. ~ That is contrary to rationality (Tao).

[53c06т] Gia-fu Feng ~ If I have even just a little sense, ~ I will walk on the main road and my only fear ~ will be of straying from it. ~ Keeping to the main road is easy, ~ But people love to be sidetracked. ~ When the court is arrayed in splendor, ~ The fields are full of weeds, ~ And the granaries are bare. ~ Some wear gorgeous clothes, ~ Carry sharp swords, ~ And indulge themselves with food and drink; ~ They have more possessions than they can use. ~ They are robber barons. ~ This is certainly not the way of Tao.

[53c07т] Lok Sang Ho ~ What makes me know what I know, ~ And adhere to the Dao ~ Is the fear of departing from it. ~ The Dao is level and straight. ~ Yet people prefer to go on their devious paths. ~ When the court is busy with granting honors to its dignitaries, ~ And not caring for the fields that are overgrown by weeds, ~ While the granaries are empty; ~ When the officers of the nation dress themselves up beautifully, ~ And carry sharp swords with an air of superiority and power; ~ While excessive dining and drinking go hand in hand with excessive consumption and waste, ~ You know this is arrogance at the Dao. ~ This is certainly not the Dao.

[53c08т] Xiaolin Yang ~ If one day I am to have desires, ~ As I am walking along a big road, I am only afraid of straying into the small alleys. ~ The big road is so smooth, but people prefer to take the small alleys. ~ The government is a mess, the fields are barren, and the barns are empty, ~ But they wear bright and colorful clothing, carrying sharp swords, overeat and overdrink; ~ They steal countless treasures, so they are the heads of thieves. ~ This is completely against the DAO!

[53c09т] Walter Gorn Old, INCREASING EVIDENCE ~ Ah that I were wise enough to follow the great Tao! ~ Administration is a great undertaking. ~ The great Tao is extremely simple, but the people prefer the complex ways. ~ While the palace is extremely well appointed, the fields may be full of tares, and the granaries may be empty. ~ To dress grandly, to carry sharp swords, to eat and drink excessively, and to amass great wealth, this I call stylish theft. ~ That it is not Tao is certain.

[53c10т] James Legge ~ If I were suddenly to become known, and (put into a position to) conduct (a government) according to the Great Tao, what I should be most afraid of would be a boastful display. ~ The great Tao (or way) is very level and easy; but people love the by-ways. ~ Their court(-yards and buildings) shall be well kept, but their fields shall be ill-cultivated, and their granaries very empty. ~ They shall wear elegant and ornamented robes, carry a sharp sword at their girdle, pamper themselves in eating and drinking, and have a superabundance of property and wealth; ~ - such (princes) may be called robbers and boasters. ~ This is contrary to the Tao surely!

[53c11т] David Hinton ~ Understanding sparse and sparser still I travel the great Way, nothing to fear unless I stray. ~ The great Way is open and smooth, but people adore twisty paths: ~ Government in ruins, fields overgrown and graineries bare, ~ they indulge in elegant robes ~ and sharp swords, ~ lavish food and drink, ~ all those trappings of luxury. ~ It's vainglorious thievery - ~ not the Way, not the Way at all.

[53c12т] Chichung Huang ~ Were I but firmly enlightened, ~ Walking along the great Tao, ~ My only fear would be going astray. ~ The great Tao is exceedingly even, ~ But the sovereign is exceedingly fond of gullies. ~ While the court is exceedingly well-kept, ~ The fields are exceedingly weedy, ~ And the granaries exceedingly empty. ~ Clad in elegant and colorful attire, ~ Wearing a sharp sword, ~ And sated with food, ~ He has enough wealth and to spare. ~ Such a man is called the chieftain of bandits; ~ Being the chieftain of bandits goes against the Tao.

[53c13т] Ellen M. Chen ~ If I have a little (chieh-jan) knowledge (chih), ~ To walk the great path (Tao), ~ I shall fear this: ~ The great path (Tao) is very flat and easy, ~ Yet others (jen) are fond of bypaths. ~ The courts are very neat, ~ The fields are very weedy, ~ The granaries are very empty. ~ Wearing embroidered clothes, ~ Carrying sharp swords, ~ Being surfeited with foods and drinks. ~ To accumulate wealth and treasures in excess, ~ This is called robbery and crime. ~ This is not to follow Tao.

[53c14т] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ Even if I realize that I am unmistakably proceeding on the [right path of] the great Tao; ~ I still would be vigilant since I may go astray [inadvertently]. ~ The path of the great Tao is fundamentally very flat, still people prefer to take by-paths; ~ [For instance:] ~ In the Court, officers are frequently replaced, ~ In outskirts, fields are inadequately planted, ~ National granaries are running empty, ~ [Civil servants implore the fashion of] wearing beautifully embroidered clothes, ~ [Military officers pride themselves on] carrying sharp swords, ~ [People indulge on] gourmandizing endlessly; ~ [General public rush to] accumulate personal wealth and goods excessively. ~ All of the above signifies nothing but shameless vanities of the superficial people, ~ Behaviors of the above exemplified pattern signalize the repudiation of Tao (the right way for the survival of humanity)!

[53c15т] Tien Cong Tran ~ If only I had a slight wisdom, I should walk in the great Way, and my only fear would be to stray from it. ~ The great Way is very smooth and straight; and yet the people prefer circuitous paths. ~ Nowadays people like circuitous paths, even though these paths bring many evil crimes. ~ The court is extremely elegant; but the fields are extremely weedy and wild, and the granaries are extremely empty. ~ They wear gorgeous clothes, they carry sharp swords, they surfeit themselves with food and drink, they possess more riches than they can use. ~ This is boastful robbery. ~ And it is indeed against the Way.

[53c16т] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ I firmly believe that I must follow Tao. ~ What I fear is to wander astray. ~ Tao is like a boulevard. ~ Yet, some people prefer small trails. ~ The yards are excessively clean, the fields full of weeds, and the warehouses nearly empty. ~ Dressing extravagantly, carrying sharp swords, wasting food, excessively collecting money or properties are the worst sins. ~ These do not conform to Tao.

[53c17т] Arthur Waley ~ He who has the least scrap of sense, once he has got started on the great highway has nothing to fear so long as he avoids turnings. ~ For great highways are safe and easy. ~ But men love by-paths. ~ So long as the Court is in order ~ They are content to let their fields run to weed ~ And their granaries stand empty. ~ They wear patterns and embroideries, ~ Carry sharp swords, glut themselves with drink and food, have more possessions than they can use. ~ These are the riotous ways of brigandage; they are not the Highway.

[53c18т] Richard John Lynn ~ If, with firm resolve, I had the knowledge to travel on the great Dao [Way], I need only fear that I might try to meddle with it. ~ The great Dao [Way] might be very smooth, yet the common folk prefer byways. ~ The court is kept in good order, ~ But the fields are overgrown with weeds, the granaries empty. ~ Garbed in patterned and colorful clothes, wearing sharp swords, satiated with food and drink, and overflowing with wealth and goods: all this is stolen extravagance and has nothing to do with the Dao!

[53c19т] Lin Yutang ~ BRIGANDAGE ~ If I were possessed of Austere Knowledge, ~ Walking on the Main Path (Tao), ~ I would avoid the by-paths. ~ The Main Path is easy to walk on, ~ Yet people love the small by-paths. ~ The (official) courts are spic and span, ~ (While) the fields go untilled, ~ And the (people's) granaries are very low. ~ (Yet) clad in embroidered gowns, ~ And carrying fine swords, ~ Surfeited with good food and drinks, ~ (They are) splitting with wealth and possessions. ~ This is to lead the world toward brigandage. ~ Is it not the corruption of Tao?

[53c20t] Victor H. Mair ~ If I were possessed of the slightest knowledge, traveling on the great Way, ~ My only fear would be to go astray. ~ The great Way is quite level, ~ but the people are much enamored of mountain trails. ~ The court is thoroughly deserted, ~ The fields are choked with weeds, ~ The granaries are altogether empty. ~ Still there are some who wear clothes with fancy designs and brilliant colors, ~ sharp swords hanging at their sides, ~ are sated with food, ~ overflowing with possessions and wealth. ~ This is called "the brazenness of a bandit." ~ The brazenness of a bandit is surely not the Way!

[53c21t] Tolbert McCarroll ~ If I have even a little sense, ~ I will walk upon the great path of Tao and only fear straying from it. ~ This Great Way is straight and smooth ~ yet people often prefer the side roads. ~ The courtyard is well kept ~ but the fields are full of weeds, and the granaries stand empty. ~ Still, there are those of us ~ who wear elegant clothes, carry sharp swords, pamper ourselves with food and drink and have more possessions than we can use. ~ These are the actions of robbers. ~ This is certainly far from the Tao.

[53c22t] David H. Li ~ This little I know: ~ In moving toward the Grand Direction, the only fear is moving astray. ~ The Grand Direction is straight forward; still, people go astray. ~ The court is not filled; the field is not tilled. ~ Storehouses are empty, but gorgeous gowns are aplenty. ~ Bearing sharp swords, tired of exquisite boards, ~ With wealth to the burst, they are bandits at their worst. ~ This is not Direction.

[53c23t] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ With clear, appreciative discernment, ~ I choose to walk the great way of the Tao, ~ And fear naught save going astray. ~ The great way is very smooth and straight, ~ Yet people prefer uneven and winding by-paths, and thus go astray. ~ Therefore, in the world that has gone astray, ~ While the courts are clean and decorated, ~ The fields are untilled and the granaries are empty. ~ If the ruler wears fancy clothes, ~ Carries around sharp swords, ~ Indulges in extravagant food and drink, ~ And possesses more riches than he needs, ~ He is indeed a brazen bandit. ~ This is contrary to the great way of the Tao.

[53c24t] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ The beginning of the universe, when materialized, is considered to be a mother. ~ When a man finds the mother, he will know the children, accordingly. ~ Even though he knows the children, he still clings to the mother: ~ Therefore, although his body wanes, he never perishes. ~ The person who shuts his mouth and closes his doors ~ Will never perish. ~ If he opens his mouth and increases his affairs, ~ He will never be saved. ~ The person who sees the tiniest thing possesses clear vision, ~ The person who adheres to the weak possesses strength. ~ Use your light, but dim your brightness, ~ In this way you will not do yourself any harm. ~ This is called following the eternal Tao.

[53c25t] Man-Ho Kwok ~ If all I know is a fraction - ~ then my only fear is of losing the thread ... ~ The Great Way is easy ~ but people are forever being taken down sidetracks. ~ They look after the palaces, ~ But ignore the fields! ~ The granaries are empty ~ - but they wear wonderful clothes! ~ They go about with arms and gorge themselves on fine food and drink. ~ How rich they are - ~ and they have stolen it all from the poor. ~ They are the robber barons of now - ~ This is not the real Tao!

[53c26t] Gu Zhengkun ~ If I have acquired a little knowledge, ~ I will be afraid of going astray ~ When I walk on the road. ~ The road is even, ~ Yet people prefer to take by-paths. ~ While the court is corrupt, ~ The fields lie waste; ~ The granaries are empty; ~ There are persons who are still dressed gaudily, ~ Wearing ornamented swords, ~ Satiated with fine food and drink, ~ In possession of extravagant goods. ~ They can be called the chieftains of robbers. ~ What a phenomenon against the Tao!

[53c27t] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ Should I know just a fraction of Tao, ~ I would walk on the great way, fearing to impose upon the people. ~ The main road is smooth to walk but the people prefer the smaller footpath. ~ That is why the court is corrupt, ~ the fields lie in waste, the granaries are empty. ~ Yet the rulers wear clothes adorned with finery, ~ carry sharp swords decorated with patterns, ~ possess storehouses overflowing with goods and wealth. ~ This is to rule by stealing. ~ This is not the Tao.

[53c28t] Liu Qixuan ~ Unless an utter fool, a person should know that ~ It is not wise to wander here and there ~ While walking on a wide road. ~ The wide road is the flattest and safest, ~ But rulers like to stray from this safe road. ~ Their courts are luxuriously constructed; ~ And, while the fields are neglected, ~ The barns are empty. ~ They fuss about clothes and ornaments, ~ Carry sharp swords wherever they go, ~ Gobble down best food to excess, ~ And care only for goods and money. ~ They are robbers rather than rulers. ~ Being robbers, they are doing things against the Way.

[53c29t] Shi Fu Hwang ~ Taoku or Tao ~ Lao Tze says, ~ Make me have sudden enlightenment, ~ I can implement great Tao in government. ~ Still I am afraid I might go astray. ~ Great Tao is a smooth and easy highway, ~ My noblemen like to walk on its trails. ~ Your courtyards are new and pretty, ~ Your people's farms are still unfilled. ~ There is nothing in their barns. ~ You wear your embroidered gowns, ~ Walk with sharp-bladed swords. ~ You satiate with good food and drink, ~ Collect abundant wealth beyond your deserving. ~ I shall call you Taoku, the bandit's chief, ~ For you have never practiced the way of the Tao.

[53c30t] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ Let me have sound knowledge and walk on the great way (Tao); ~ Only I am in fear of deviating. ~ The great way is very plain and easy, ~ But the people prefer by-paths. ~ While the royal palaces are very well kept, ~ The fields are left weedy ~ And the granaries empty. ~ To wear embroidered clothes, ~ To carry sharp swords, ~ To be satiated in drink and food, ~ To be possessed of redundant riches - ~ This is called encouragement to robbery. ~ Is it not deviating from Tao?

[53c31t] Paul J. Lin ~ If only I could have a little knowledge, I would walk in the Great Tao, ~ Being afraid only of acting on it. ~ The Great Tao is very smooth, ~ But people prefer the by-paths; ~ The court is very well kept; ~ The fields are full of weeds; ~ And the granaries are extremely empty. ~ To wear embroidered clothes, ~ To carry sharp weapons, ~ To be satiated in food and drink, ~ And to have excessive treasures and goods - ~ This is called robbery and extravagance. ~ Really, this is not Tao.

[53c32t] Michael LaFargue ~ If I had the least bit of understanding, ~ I would walk on the great Way. ~ Only display will be dangerous. ~ The great Way is very smooth, ~ but people love bypaths. ~ The court is very well kept, ~ the fields are very weedy, ~ the granaries very empty. ~ "Their clothes are fine and colorful, on their belts are sharp swords, they are filled with food and drink" - ~ a superabundance of expensive goods. ~ This is robbers boasting, ~ certainly not the Way.

[53c33t] Cheng Lin ~ If I am truly enlightened and travel the way of great Truth, I should always feel apprehensive lest I deviate from it. ~ The way of great Truth is most easy to travel, yet men prefer the by-paths. ~ The Court is very corrupt, the fields are much neglected, the granaries are much depleted; ~ yet there are men who still don expensive dresses, carry sharp swords, gorge themselves with food and wine, and wallow in superfluous wealth. ~ These men may be called the captains of robbers.

[53c34t] Yi Wu ~ If I, subtly, have knowledge, ~ Walking in the great Way, ~ My only fear is to act on it. ~ The great Way is very level, ~ But the people prefer short cuts. ~ The court is very remote; ~ The fields are very weedy; ~ The storehouses are very empty. ~ But officials wear gorgeous garments, ~ Carry sharp swords, ~ Are surfeited with food and drink, ~ And possess more money and goods than they can use. ~ This is called, "to steal reputation." ~ This is not the Way!

[53c35t] Han Hiong Tan ~ Even if I confidently know that I am on the right path, I will still tread gingerly for fear of deviating from it. ~ The correct path of Dao is smooth and easily accessible. ~ However, people still choose to travel on the small paths. ~ While the magnificent imperial palace is immaculate and pristine, ~ The paddy fields are neglected and the granaries empty. ~ Yet, the ruler still dresses elegantly, wears fine swords and feasts in style. ~ He continues to amass great personal wealth. ~ This is the behaviour of a chief of robbers. ~ He is not following the way of Dao.

[53c36t] Hua-Ching Ni ~ If I had even the tiniest grain of insight, ~ I should live in accordance with the subtle Way of the universe; ~ my only fear would be to stray from it. ~ The Integral Way of the universe is very smooth and straight, yet people's minds prefer devious bypaths. ~ The courts are polished and decorated, ~ while the fields are untilled, ~ and the granaries are empty. ~ People wear fine clothes to adorn their external appearance. ~ They carry sharp swords at their sides and worship might rather than righteousness. ~ They know only to make merry by indulging in food and drink. ~ They crave to possess more riches than they could ever use. ~ This is the committing of robbery and is not the Universal Integral Way of natural life.

[53c37t] Chang Chung-yuan ~ If I had even a slight awareness, ~ And practiced the great Way, ~ What I would fear would be deviating from it. ~ The great Way is a very level road, ~ But men like to take circuitous paths. ~ Thus, the palaces are extremely elegant, ~ But the people's farms are extremely desolate, ~ And there is no grain reserved in the storehouses. ~ The rulers wear expensive garments, ~ Carry fine swords, ~ Satiate themselves with food and drink, ~ And possess inordinate riches and precious things. ~ This is the greatest robbery, ~ And is indeed against the great Way.

[53c38t] Henry Wei ~ Increasing Evidence ~ I Cheng ~ If I were determined, with the knowledge I have, ~ To walk along the Great Highway, ~ My only fear would be to stray from it. ~ The Great Highway is very safe and plain; ~ Yet people prefer the bypaths. ~ While the Court is very magnificent, ~ The fields have become very barren, ~ And the granaries have become very empty; ~ Yet officials are dressed in gorgeous garments, ~ Carry sharp swords, ~ Gorge themselves with sumptuous food and drink, ~ And possess a superabundance of precious articles. ~ Such patent robbery is the usher of other robberies. ~ Verily it goes contrary to Tao.

[53c39t] Ha Poong Kim ~ Let me have even the slightest of wisdom. ~ Traveling the great way [Tao], ~ I will only fear going astray. ~ The great way is level. ~ Yet people prefer small paths. ~ The court is overrun with corruption; ~ The fields are overgrown with weeds; ~ The granaries are utterly empty; ~ Yet the officials wear embroidered clothes, ~ Carry sharp swords, ~ Feast on food and wine, ~ Possess more goods than they need. ~ This is called the robber's extravagance. ~ It is indeed contrary to Tao!

[53c40t] Tao Huang ~ Through discrimination, I have the knowledge to walk in the great Tao. ~ The only fear is what is other than that. ~ The great Tao is quite smooth, yet people prefer a short-cut. ~ The court is so busy legislating that the fields go uncultivated and granaries are all empty. ~ They wear the magnificent clothing, girdle the sharp swords. ~ They are gorged with food and possess many brides. ~ Their bounty suffices but they continue to steal. ~ This is opposite of Tao.

[53c41t] Tang Zi-chang ~ If I have just a little wisdom to lead me to approach the superior way of Dao, I fear that I may stray from it. ~ The superior way of Dao is plain and yet man prefers devious paths. ~ When government officers are very neglected; ~ farm lands are very weedy; ~ public granaries are very empty; ~ yet, brilliant clothes are displayed; ~ sharp swords are carried; ~ and excessive food and drinks are over used, and personal wealth and treasures are abundant. ~ This is called "Exhibition of Robbery". ~ Really it is aberration of Dao!

[53c42t] Wing-tsit Chan ~ If I had but little knowledge ~ I should, in walking on a broad way, ~ Fear getting off the road. ~ Broad ways are extremely even, ~ But people are fond of bypaths. ~ The courts are exceedingly splendid, ~ While the fields are exceedingly weedy, ~ And the granaries are exceedingly empty. ~ Elegant clothes are worn, ~ Sharp weapons are carried, ~ Foods and drinks are enjoyed beyond limit, ~ And wealth and treasures are accumulated in excess. ~ This is robbery and extravagance. ~ This is indeed not Tao (the Way).

удовлетворяется [обычной] пищей и накапливает излишние богатства. ~ Все это называется разбоем и бахвальством. ~ Оно является нарушением дао.

[53c97т] В. В. Малявин ~ Имей я толику знания, то, идя Путем, ~ Боялся бы только сбиться с него. ~ Великий Путь так ровен, так широк, ~ Но люди любят кривые тропинки. ~ Палаты царские так чисто прибраны, ~ Поля же заросли бурьяном, житницы пусты. ~ Носят шелка, расшитые узорами, на поясе мечи, ~ Вкусно едят и пьют, в домах избыток всякого добра. ~ Вот что я зову великим разбоем, ~ Великого Пути здесь нет в помине!

[53c98т] Б. Б. Виногродский ~ Ниспошли мне четкого наличия знания, как двигаться по великому Пути. ~ Страшусь лишь отклониться от него. ~ Великий Путь максимально рассеян, и народ предпочитает дорожки. ~ Приемные очень опрятны. ~ Поля совсем заросли. ~ Хранилища совершенно пусты. ~ Одежда в цветных узорах. ~ На поясе острые мечи. ~ Пресыщение питьем и пищей. ~ Наличие избытка товаров, предметов. ~ Это определяется: ~ Воровской беспредел. ~ Но ведь это же отрицание Пути.

[54c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ What is firmly set up {can't be} pulled down; ~ {What is firmly embraced cannot slip free}. ~ And your sons and grandsons, as a result, will sacrifice without end. ~ When you cultivate it in your person, your virtue will then be genuine; ~ When you cultivate it in your family, your virtue will then overflow; ~ When you cultivate it in your village, your virtue will then be long lasting; ~ When you cultivate it in your state, your virtue will then be abundant; ~ And when you cultivate it throughout the world, your virtue will then be widespread. ~ Use the individual to examine the individual; ~ Use the family to examine the family; ~ Use the village to examine the village; ~ Use the state to examine the state; ~ And use the world to examine the world; ~ How do I know that the world is so? ~ By {this}.

[54c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ WHAT is well planted cannot be uprooted. ~ What is well embraced cannot slip away. ~ Your descendants will carry on the ancestral sacrifice for generations without end. ~ Cultivate Virtue in your own person, ~ And it becomes a genuine part of you. ~ Cultivate it in the family, ~ And it will abide. ~ Cultivate it in the community, ~ And it will live and grow. ~ Cultivate it in the state, ~ And it will flourish abundantly. ~ Cultivate it in the world, ~ And it will become universal. ~ Hence, a person must be judged as person; ~ A family as family; ~ A community as community; ~ A state as state; ~ The world as world. ~ How do I know about the world? ~ By what is within me.

[54c03т] D. C. Lau ~ What is firmly rooted cannot be pulled out; ~ What is tightly held in the arms will not slip loose; ~ Through this the offering of sacrifice by descendants will never come to an end. ~ Cultivate it in your person ~ And its virtue will be genuine; ~ Cultivate it in the family ~ And its virtue will be more than sufficient; ~ Cultivate it in the hamlet ~ And its virtue will endure; ~ Cultivate it in the state ~ And its virtue will abound; ~ Cultivate it in the empire ~ And its virtue will be pervasive. ~ Hence look at the person through the person; ~ Look at the family through the family; ~ Look at the hamlet through the hamlet; ~ Look at the state through the state; ~ Look at the empire through the empire. ~ How do I know that the empire is like that? ~ By means of this.

[54c04т] R. L. Wing ~ What is skillfully established will not be uprooted; ~ What is skillfully grasped will not slip away. ~ Thus it is honored for generations. ~ Cultivate the inner self; Its Power becomes real. ~ Cultivate the home; Its Power becomes abundant. ~ Cultivate the community; Its Power becomes greater. ~ Cultivate the organization; Its Power becomes prolific. ~ Cultivate the world; Its Power becomes universal. ~ Therefore through the inner self, ~ The inner self is conceived. ~ Through the home, ~ The home is conceived. ~ Through the community, ~ The community is conceived. ~ Through the organization, ~ The organization is conceived. ~ Through the world, ~ The world is conceived. ~ How do I know the world? ~ Through this.

[54c14т] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ An excellent builder would make sure that houses he builds can not be knocked over [even by hurricanes]; ~ A person with a strong grip [of his project] makes it impossible to slip out of his grasp; ~ Consequently, to such a thoughtful person [whose solid accomplishments] will be offered thanks by later generations ceaselessly. ~ If a person cultivates the above mentioned practice for his own personal satisfaction, his Te is genuine; ~ If a person advances it within his family, their [jointly aggregated] Te will be more than enough to benefit other families; ~ If it is promoted in a village, the villagers' [reciprocally enhanced] Te will extend its growth [to other villages]; ~ If this practice thrives in a country, the [collective] Te of its people will further flourish [that their Te will spill over to other countries]; ~ When it is upheld in the world, their [jointly summative] Te will spread universally [in Universe]. ~ Accordingly: ~ [The cultivation of Te] by an individual sets a good example to his family; ~ [The promotion of Te] within a family exemplifies Te to other families; ~ [The advancement of Te] in a village manifests [the goodness of Te] to other villages; ~ [The broadening of Te] in a country demonstrates [the benefit of Te] to other countries; ~ [The expansion of Te] in a world would manifest [the greatness of Te] to other worlds. ~ How do I know that things work this way? ~ It is all because of this (the observation stated in the previous paragraphs of this Chapter).

[54c15т] Tien Cong Tran ~ What is well planted cannot be uprooted. ~ What is well embraced cannot slip away. ~ The descendants will carry on the ancestral sacrifice from generation to generation. ~ Cultivate Virtue in your own person, and it will be genuine. ~ Cultivate it in the family, and it will be more than sufficient. ~ Cultivate it in the village, and it will last long. ~ Cultivate it in the state, and it will flourish abundantly. ~ Cultivate it in the world, and it will become universal. ~ Hence, a person must be perceived as person; a family as family; a village as village; a state as state; the world as world. ~ How do I know about the world? ~ It is through this.

[54c16т] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ What is established cannot be uprooted. ~ What is well held cannot slip. ~ Likewise, descendents will continue to perform traditional rituals. ~ Cultivating oneself, Te is genuine. ~ Cultivating the family, Te is plentiful. ~ Cultivating the village, Te is long lasting. ~ Cultivating the kingdom, Te is prevailing. ~ Cultivating the world, Te is ubiquitous. ~ Therefore, observe all individuals through one individual. ~ Observe all families through one family. ~ Observe all villages through one village. ~ Observe all kingdoms through one kingdom. ~ Observe all worlds through the world. ~ How do I know the world is so? ~ By using the above observation(s).

[54c17т] Arthur Waley ~ What Tao plants cannot be plucked, ~ What Tao clasps, cannot slip. ~ By its virtue alone can one generation after another carry on the ancestral sacrifice. ~ Apply it to yourself and by its power you will be freed from dross. ~ Apply it to your household and your household shall thereby have abundance. ~ Apply it to the village, and the village will be made secure. ~ Apply it to the kingdom, and the kingdom shall thereby be made to flourish. ~ Apply it to an empire, and the empire shall thereby be extended. ~ Therefore just as through oneself one may contemplate Oneself, ~ So through the household one may contemplate the Household, ~ And through the village, one may contemplate the Village, ~ And through the kingdom, one may contemplate the Kingdom, ~ And through the empire, one may contemplate the Empire. ~ How do I know that the empire is so? ~ By this.

[54c18т] Richard John Lynn ~ The well-founded will not be pulled up. ~ The well-embraced will not get dropped. ~ Such a one's descendants, accordingly, will never let sacrifices to him cease. ~ If you cultivate it within your own person, your virtue will be authentic. ~ If you cultivate it within your family, your virtue will exceed all need. ~ If you cultivate it within your village, your virtue will endure. ~ If you cultivate it within your state, your virtue will be abundant. ~ If you cultivate it among all under Heaven, your virtue will reach everywhere. ~ Look at the person from the point of view of the person. ~ Look at the family from the point of view of the family. ~ Look at the village from the point of view of the village. ~ Look at the state from the point of view of the state. ~ Look at all under Heaven from the point of view of all under Heaven. ~ How do I know that all under Heaven is so? ~ It is by this.

[54c19T] Lin Yutang ~ THE INDIVIDUAL AND THE STATE ~ Who is firmly established is not easily shaken. ~ Who has a firm grasp does not easily let go. ~ From generation to generation his ancestral sacrifices ~ Shall be continued without fail. ~ Cultivated in the individual, character will become genuine; ~ Cultivated in the family, character will become abundant; ~ Cultivated in the village, character will multiply; ~ Cultivated in the state, character will prosper; ~ Cultivated in the world, character will become universal. ~ Therefore: ~ According to (the character of) the individual, judge the individual; ~ According to (the character of) the family, judge the family; ~ According to (the character of) the village, judge the village; ~ According to (the character of) the state, judge the state; ~ According to (the character of) the world, judge the world. ~ How do I know the world is so. ~ By this.

[54c20T] Victor H. Mair ~ What is firmly established cannot be uprooted; ~ What is tightly embraced cannot slip away. ~ Thus sacrificial offerings made by sons and grandsons will never end. ~ Cultivated in the person, integrity is true. ~ Cultivated in the family, integrity is ample. ~ Cultivated in the village, integrity lasts long. ~ Cultivated in the state, integrity is abundant. ~ Cultivated everywhere under heaven, integrity is vast. ~ Observe other persons through your own person. ~ Observe other families through your own family. ~ Observe other villages through your own village. ~ Observe other states through your own state. ~ Observe all under heaven through all under heaven. ~ How do I know the nature of all under heaven? ~ Through this.

[54c21T] Tolbert McCarroll ~ What is well rooted cannot be pulled up. ~ What is firmly grasped will not slip loose. ~ It will be honored from generation to generation. ~ When cultivated in your person, Virtue will be real. ~ When cultivated in your household, Virtue will be plentiful. ~ When cultivated in your village, Virtue will endure. ~ When cultivated in your country, Virtue will abound. ~ When cultivated in your world, Virtue will be universal. ~ Hence, ~ through yourself look at Self. ~ Through your household look at Household. ~ Through your community look at Community. ~ Through your country look at Country. ~ Through your world look at World. ~ How do I know that the world is like this? ~ Because of what is within me.

[54c22T] David H. Li ~ What is well planted will not uproot; ~ What is firmly held will not drop. ~ Descendants will not discontinue remembrance ceremonies. ~ Cultivating it in self, virtue is true; ~ Cultivating it in the family, virtue overflows; ~ Cultivating it in the village, virtue lasts; ~ Cultivating it in the state, virtue is abundant; ~ Cultivating it in the world, virtue is universal. ~ Thus, ~ look at self through self; ~ look at the family through the family; ~ look at the village through the village; ~ look at the state through the state; ~ look at the world through the world. ~ How do I know the world? ~ Because it is so.

[54c23T] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ What is firmly established within cannot be uprooted. ~ What is firmly embraced within cannot be disengaged. ~ The Tao, thus firmly established and embraced within you, ~ Will be respected for generations to come. ~ Cultivate the Tao in your character, ~ Then its virtues will be genuine. ~ Cultivate the Tao in your family, ~ Then its virtues will abound. ~ Cultivate the Tao in your community, ~ Then its virtues will endure. ~ Cultivate the Tao in your country, ~ Then its virtues will flourish. ~ Cultivate the Tao in the world, ~ Then its virtues will pervade. ~ Therefore, you can observe the virtues of the Tao, ~ In your character, if you cultivate it in your character; ~ In your family, if you cultivate it in your family; ~ In your community, if you cultivate it in your community; ~ In your country, if you cultivate it in your country; ~ And in the world, if you cultivate it in the world. ~ How can you know how the state of the world is? ~ Simply by thus observing.

[54c24T] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ Let me have knowledge and follow the great way of the Tao, ~ I alone am afraid of straying from this path. ~ The great way is easy and simple, ~ But people prefer byways. ~ The royal palaces are wonderfully maintained, ~ But the people's fields are full of thorns, ~ And the barns are empty. ~ There are those who wear expensive clothes, ~ There are those who carry polished swords, ~ There are those who gorge themselves on food and drink, ~ There are those who amass property and possessions: ~ This is called encouraging the robbers. ~ Is this not straying from the path of the Tao?

[54c25T] Man-Ho Kwok ~ What is built on rock cannot be pulled down; ~ What is held lightly can never be lost. ~ Meditate on virtue within yourself, and you will find the benefit of virtue. ~ Use it as the ground for the family, ~ and your virtue will last for generations. ~ Take it as your guidance for the village, ~ and the place will blossom for years to come. ~ Use it to guide the nation, ~ and that nation will create abundance. ~ Be guided by it for the Whole, ~ and it will flood its way over the world. ~ So, look at someone else as you would yourself ~ And treat other families as you would your own; ~ See your community in other communities, ~ Think of all countries as part of your being ~ And treasure the world as the round centre of everything. ~ How can I see the world like this? ~ Because I have eyes.

[54c26T] Gu Zhengkun ~ What is well planted cannot be pulled out; ~ What is well held cannot be disengaged; ~ The principle being observed, ~ The offering of sacrifice by descendants will be kept making for ever. ~ Similarly cultivating the principle in oneself, ~ One can purify his virtue; ~ Cultivating it in the family, ~ One makes his own virtue more than enough; ~ Cultivating it in the village, ~ One can have the virtue to be the leader; ~ Cultivating it in the state, ~ One can have the prodigious virtue; ~ Cultivating it in the world, ~ One can have the virtue widely known. ~ Hence I can have an insight ~ Into other individuals by examining myself; ~ Into other families by examining my family; ~ Into other villages by examining my village; ~ Into other states by examining my state; ~ Into other worlds by examining my world. ~ How do I know about the whole world? ~ By employing the method above.

[54c27T] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ He who is well established cannot be uprooted. ~ He who is holding tight cannot slip away. ~ His descendants will never cease to honour him. ~ He who cultivates the moral character, his virtue will be clear. ~ He who cultivates his own family, his virtue will flourish. ~ He who cultivates the village, his virtue will endure. ~ He who cultivates the country, his virtue will be abundant. ~ He who cultivates the land, his virtue will be widespread. ~ Therefore look at others as at your own person. ~ Look at other families as at your own family. ~ Look at other villages as at your own village. ~ Look at other countries as at your own country. ~ Look at other lands as at your own land. ~ How do I know it is like this under Heaven? ~ By means of this.

[54c28T] Liu Qixuan ~ A well-founded establishment cannot be uprooted, ~ And a well-preserved tradition can not be dissolved: ~ Each will go on generation after generation. ~ One has true being when one keeps the Way body and soul, ~ Effective being when one extends the Way over the family, ~ Long being when one extends the Way over the community, ~ Rich being when one extends the Way over a nation, ~ Universal being when one extends the Way over the world. ~ Therefore, one knows others by looking at one's self, ~ Other communities by looking at one's own community, ~ Other states through the comparison with one's own state ~ And other worlds by inferring from one's own world. ~ That's how I come to know the world.

[54c29T] Shi Fu Hwang ~ The Individual and The World ~ Lao Tze says, ~ He who is skillful in establishment shall establish the Tao in his heart so that no one can pluck it. ~ He who is skillful in enfolding arms shall enfold the Teh in his arms so that no one can take it. ~ From generation to generation his ancestral sacrifices shall be continued without fail. ~ When this precept is applied by whomever to instruct himself, his character will be made true; ~ applied to his neighborhood, his neighborhood will thrive; ~ applied to the state, his state will find good fortune; ~ applied to the world, the world will inherit with good traditions. ~ In this way he can observe the others in comparison with the self; ~ observe others' families in comparison with his own family; ~ observe others' neighborhoods in comparison with his own neighborhood; ~ observe others' states in comparison with his own state; ~ observe the world before in comparison with what it is now. ~ How do I know that this effect is sure to hold all in the world? ~ By observation.

[54c30T] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ What is planted by the best planter can never be removed; ~ What is embraced by the best embracer can never be loosened. ~ Thus his children and grandchildren will be able to continue their ancestral sacrifice for endless generations. ~ If he applies Tao to himself his virtue will be genuine; ~ If he applies it to his family his virtue will be abundant; ~ If he applies it to his village his virtue will be lasting; ~ If he applies it to his country his virtue will be full; ~ If he applies it to the world his virtue will be universal. ~ Therefore by one's person one may observe persons; ~ By one's family one may observe families; ~ By one's village one may observe villages; ~ By one's country one may observe countries; ~ By one's world one may observe worlds. ~ How do I know that the world may be so (governed by Tao)? ~ By this (observation).

[54c31T] Paul J. Lin ~ To be built well is not to be toppled. ~ To be held fast is not to slip. ~ With this, children and grandchildren will never stop offering sacrifice to their ancestors. ~ With this to cultivate oneself, one's virtue will be true; ~ With this to cultivate the family, its virtue will be plentiful; ~ With this to cultivate the community, its virtue will last long; ~ With this to cultivate the nation, its virtue will be abundant; ~ With this to cultivate the world, its virtue will be good. ~ Therefore, ~ Examine a person with a person, ~ Examine a family with a family, ~ Examine a community with a community, ~ Examine a nation with a nation, ~ Examine a world with a world. ~ How can I know this is the way of the world? ~ By this.

[54c32T] Michael LaFargue ~ Excellently founded: it will not be uprooted; ~ Excellently embraced and cared for: it will not slip away; ~ so sons and grandsons will never cease to offer the sacrifices. ~ Cultivate It in your person, its Te will be pure; ~ cultivate It in the clan, its Te will be abundant; ~ cultivate It in the village, its Te will be lasting; ~ cultivate It in the state, its Te will be ample; ~ cultivate It in the empire, its Te will be all-embracing. ~ Yes: ~ Judge a person taking that person as the measure, ~ judge a clan taking that clan as the measure, ~ judge a village taking that village as the measure, ~ judge a state taking that state as the measure, ~ judge the world taking the world as the measure. ~ How do I know the nature of the world? ~ By this.

[54c33T] Cheng Lin ~ He who knows how to establish himself cannot be uprooted. ~ He who knows how to hold fast cannot lose his grip. ~ The descendants of such a man will worship him without cease. ~ When one's conduct is in accordance with Truth, the inherent qualities become real. ~ When a whole family follows Truth, the inherent qualities become abundant. ~ When a whole village follows Truth, the inherent qualities become enduring. ~ When the whole State follows Truth, the inherent qualities become superabundant. ~ When a whole Empire follows Truth, the inherent qualities become universal. ~ Thus, ~ one man is the measure of other men, ~ one family is the measure of other families, ~ one village is the measure of other villages, ~ one State is the measure of other States, ~ and one Empire is the measure of other Empires.

[54c34T] Yi Wu ~ What is well established cannot be uprooted. ~ What is well embraced cannot slip away. ~ [Practicing these], one's descendants will offer sacrifices without end. ~ Cultivate them in oneself, one's virtue will be true. ~ Cultivate them in the family, one's virtue will increase. ~ Cultivate them in the community, one's virtue will develop. ~ Cultivate them in the country, one's virtue will be abundant. ~ Cultivate them in the world, one's virtue will be universal. ~ Therefore, ~ by the self, contemplate the self; ~ by the family, contemplate the family; ~ by the community, contemplate the community; ~ by the country, contemplate the country; ~ by the world, contemplate the world. ~ How can I know about the world as such? ~ By these.

[54c35T] Han Hiong Tan ~ A person who is adept at increasing virtue will adhere to it unswervingly. ~ A person who holds steadfastly to his virtue will resolutely persist with it. ~ His deeds will endure because his progeny will continue to commemorate him for generations to come. ~ If he diligently cultivates his personal virtue, the virtue will be genuine. ~ Diligently cultivating virtue in a family, the virtue will be abundant. ~ Diligently cultivating virtue in a community, the virtue will be expansive. ~ Diligently cultivating virtue throughout the country, the virtue will be prolific. ~ Diligently cultivating virtue throughout the world, the virtue will be ubiquitous. ~ Therefore, looking from the individual perspective, you can see the benefit. ~ From the respective viewpoints of family, community, country or the world, the benefits are also obvious. ~ How do you know cultivating virtue will benefit the world? ~ It is through this inference.

[54c36T] Hua-Ching Ni ~ What is well planted cannot be pulled up. ~ What is closely embraced cannot slip away. ~ The wise establish virtue firmly within themselves, and are honored for generations ever after. ~ Apply natural, integral virtue to your own character, ~ and it will be genuine. ~ Apply natural, integral virtue to the family, ~ and it will abound. ~ Apply natural, integral virtue to the state, ~ and it will flourish abundantly. ~ Apply natural, integral virtue to the world, ~ and it will be pervasive. ~ Understand other people's lives by means of your own life. ~ Understand other people's families by means of your own family. ~ Understand other societies by means of your own society. ~ Understand other countries by means of your own country. ~ How can you know what is right for the world? ~ By knowing what is right for your own life.

[54c37T] Chang Chung-yuan ~ Nothing can be taken away if it is well-founded. ~ Nothing can be lost if it is well-grasped. ~ For generations to come, the worship will not be discontinued. ~ To cultivate (Tao) in one's self makes attainment real. ~ To cultivate (Tao) in one's family makes attainment a surplus. ~ To cultivate (Tao) in one's community makes attainment long-lasting. ~ To cultivate (Tao) in one's nation makes attainment abundant. ~ To cultivate (Tao) in one's world makes attainment all-embracing. ~ Thus, through the self, one contemplates the self. ~ Through the family, one contemplates the family. ~ Through the community, one contemplates the community. ~ Through the nation, one contemplates the nation. ~ Through the world, one contemplates the world. ~ How do I know the world as world? ~ It is through this.

[54c38T] Henry Wei ~ Rectifying Viewpoints ~ Hsiu Kuan ~ Those adept in establishing themselves ~ Cannot be plucked up; ~ Those adept in the act of embracing ~ Cannot be made to relax their hold. ~ They are worshipped for generations in a row. ~ Cultivate Tao in one's person, ~ And its virtue will be genuine; ~ Cultivate Tao in one's family, ~ And its virtue will be overflowing; ~ Cultivate Tao in one's village, ~ And its virtue will be long enduring; ~ Cultivate Tao in one's state, ~ And its virtue will be abundant; ~ Cultivate Tao in one's empire, ~ And its virtue will be pervasive. ~ Therefore, ~ By one's person, one sizes up other persons; ~ By one's family, one sizes up other families; ~ By one's village, one sizes up other villages; ~ By one's state, one sizes up other states; ~ By one's empire, one sizes up other empires. ~ How do I know this is so with the empire? ~ By this.

[54c39t] Ha Poong Kim ~ What is firmly planted cannot be pulled out; ~ What is tightly held in the arms cannot slip away, ~ So that the descendants will never stop offering ancestral sacrifice. ~ Cultivate it in yourself, ~ And its Te will be genuine. ~ Cultivate it in the household, ~ And its Te will be more than sufficient. ~ Cultivate it in the village, ~ And its Te will be long-lasting. ~ Cultivate it in the state, ~ And its Te will be plentiful. ~ Cultivate it in all under Heaven, ~ And its Te will be all-encompassing. ~ Therefore, observe yourself through yourself; ~ The household through the household; ~ The village through the village; ~ The state through the state; ~ All under Heaven through all under Heaven. ~ How do I know that all under Heaven is so? ~ With this.

[54c40t] Tao Huang ~ What is well-built is not pulled down. ~ What is well-fastened is not separated. ~ Sons and grandsons worship unceasingly. ~ Cultivate the self, and the Action is pure. ~ Cultivate the family, the Action is plentiful. ~ Cultivate the community, the Action endures. ~ Cultivate the nation, the Action is fruitful. ~ Cultivate the world, the Action is all-pervading. ~ Treat the self by the standard of self. ~ Treat the family by the standard of family. ~ Treat the community by the standard of community. ~ Treat the nation by the standard of nation. ~ Treat the world by the standard of world. ~ How do I know how the world is such? ~ Thus.

[54c41t] Tang Zi-chang ~ What is perfectly planted will not be uprooted. ~ What is perfectly held will not slip away. ~ Through generations the family's memorial service will not be discontinued. ~ Thus, ~ by cultivating Dao in a person, virtues become manifest; ~ by cultivating Dao in a family, virtues become abundant; ~ by cultivating Dao in the community, virtues become enduring; ~ by cultivating Dao in a country, virtues become flourishing; ~ and by cultivating Dao in the world, virtues become universal. ~ Thus, ~ by taking care of one's self, one takes care of others; ~ by taking care of one's family, one takes care of others' families; ~ by taking care of one's own community, one takes care of others' communities; ~ by taking care of one's own country, one takes care of others' countries; ~ and by taking care of the world, one takes care of the universe. ~ How do we know in what way the world should be ruled? ~ Through this.

[54c42t] Wing-tsit Chan ~ He who is well established (in Tao) cannot be pulled away. ~ He who has a firm grasp (of Tao) cannot be separated from it. ~ Thus from generation to generation his ancestral sacrifice will never be suspended. ~ When one cultivates virtue in his person, it becomes genuine virtue. ~ When one cultivates virtue in his family, it becomes overflowing virtue. ~ When one cultivates virtue in his community, it becomes lasting virtue. ~ When one cultivates virtue in his country, it becomes abundant virtue. ~ When one cultivates virtue in the world, it becomes universal. ~ Therefore the person should be viewed as a person. ~ The family should be viewed as a family. ~ The community should be viewed as a community. ~ The country should be viewed as a country. ~ And the world should be viewed as the world. ~ How do I know this to be the case in the world? ~ Through this.

[55c16t] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ People with profound Te are like babies. ~ Poisonous insects cannot bite them. ~ Ferocious beasts cannot grab them. ~ Birds of prey cannot pounce on them. ~ With tough bones and flexible muscles they can hold firmly. ~ Without knowing male and female union, sexual organs can function, because the hormone comes into play. ~ They can cry a whole day without getting hoarse, because harmony comes into play. ~ Knowing harmony is called normalcy. ~ Knowing normalcy is called wisdom. ~ Fortifying oneself is ominous. ~ Things become old while still in their golden time. ~ This does not conform to Tao. ~ Departing from Tao leads to a premature end.

[55c17t] Arthur Waley ~ The impunity of things fraught with the 'power' ~ May be likened to that of an infant. ~ Poisonous insects do not sting it, ~ Nor fierce beasts seize it, ~ Nor clawing birds maul it. ~ Its bones are soft, its sinews weak; but its grip is strong. ~ Not yet to have known the union of male and female, but to be completely formed, ~ Means that the vital force is at its height; ~ To be able to scream all day without getting hoarse ~ Means that harmony is at its perfection. ~ To understand such harmony is to understand the always-so. ~ To understand the always-so is to be illumined. ~ But to fill life to the brim is to invite omens. ~ If the heart makes calls upon the life-breath, rigidity follows. ~ Whatever has a time of vigour also has a time of decay. ~ Such things are against Tao, ~ And whatever is against Tao is soon destroyed.

[55c18t] Richard John Lynn ~ One who has profoundly internalized virtue is comparable to the infant. ~ Wasps, scorpions, adders, and vipers do not sting or bite him. ~ Fierce animals do not attack him. ~ Birds of prey do not seize him. ~ His bones are soft and sinews pliant, but his grip is firm. ~ That he is ignorant of the union of male and female yet completely erect ~ Is because his semen is at the full. ~ That he can cry all day long yet never grow hoarse ~ Is because his bodily balance is perfect. ~ To know how to maintain balance is called "constancy." ~ To understand constancy is called "perspicacity." ~ To extend life beyond its natural span is called "inauspicious." ~ For the heart/mind to control the vital force is called "forcing strength." ~ Once a thing reaches its prime, it grows old. ~ We say it goes against the Dao, and what is against the Dao comes to an early end.

[55c19t] Lin Yutang ~ THE CHARACTER OF THE CHILD ~ Who is rich in character ~ Is like a child. ~ No poisonous insects sting him, ~ No wild beasts attack him, ~ And no birds of prey pounce upon him. ~ His bones are soft, his sinews tender, yet his grip is strong. ~ Not knowing the union of male and female, yet his organs are complete, ~ Which means his vigor is unspoiled. ~ Crying the whole day, yet his voice never runs hoarse, ~ Which means his (natural) harmony is perfect. ~ To know harmony is to be in accord with the eternal, ~ (And) to know eternity is called discerning. ~ (But) to improve upon life is called an ill-omen; ~ To let go the emotions through impulse is called assertiveness. ~ (For) things age after reaching their prime; ~ That (assertiveness) would be against Tao. ~ And he who is against Tao perishes young.

[55c20t] Victor H. Mair ~ He who embodies the fullness of integrity is like a ruddy infant. ~ Wasps, spiders, scorpions, and snakes will not sting or bite him; ~ Rapacious birds and fierce beasts will not seize him. ~ His bones are weak and his sinews soft, yet his grip is tight. ~ He knows not the joining of male and female, yet his penis is aroused. ~ His essence has reached a peak. ~ He screams the whole day without becoming hoarse; ~ His harmony has reached perfection. ~ Harmony implies constancy; ~ Constancy requires insight. ~ Striving to increase one's life is ominous; ~ To control the vital breath with one's mind entails force. ~ Something that grows old while still in its prime is said to be not in accord with the Way; ~ Not being in accord with the Way leads to an early demise.

[55c21t] Tolbert McCarroll ~ A person who is filled with Virtue is like a newborn child. ~ Poisonous insects will not sting, ~ wild animals will not pounce, ~ birds of prey will not swoop down. ~ Although bones are soft and sinews weak, ~ a child's grip is firm. ~ The union of man and woman is not known, ~ yet there is completeness, ~ because a child's vital force is at its height. ~ Crying all day will not produce hoarseness, ~ because there is perfect harmony. ~ To know harmony is to know the Always-so. ~ To know the Always-so is to be awakened. ~ Trying to fill life to the brim invites a curse. ~ For the mind to make demands upon the breath of life brings strain. ~ Whatever has been forced to a peak of vigor approaches its decay. ~ This is not the way of Tao. ~ And that which goes against the Tao will quickly pass away.

[55c22t] David H. Li ~ One possessing virtue may be compared to an infant. ~ Poisonous insects will not bite, ferocious animals will not pounce, ~ Fetching birds will not prey. ~ Though weak in bones and soft in muscles, his hold is firm; ~ Though ignorant of union, his instrument is turgid. ~ This is supreme energy. ~ Crying all day without turning hoarse, this is supreme harmony. ~ Knowing harmony is normalcy; ~ knowing normalcy is discernment. ~ Enriching oneself is ominous; ~ overexerting oneself is ruinous. ~ Matter withers after saturation; ~ This is not in line with Direction. ~ Not in line with Direction, early demise is the expectation.

[55c23t] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ He who embodies the fullness of the Tao is like a ruddy infant. ~ No poisonous wasps will sting him. ~ No fierce beasts will seize him. ~ No rapacious birds will maul him. ~ His bones are tender and muscles soft, ~ Yet his grip is tight. ~ He knows not of the union of male and female, ~ Yet, filled with vitality, ~ His manhood becomes vigorously erect. ~ He can howl all day without becoming hoarse, ~ Because he is the embodiment of perfect balance. ~ To know balance is to know the eternal. ~ To know the eternal is to be illumined. ~ To overprotect life is to invite sure disaster. ~ To overuse the mind is to invite lopsided strength. ~ To overdevelop a thing is to invite early decay. ~ All are out of balance, and thus contrary to the Tao. ~ Being contrary to the Tao, things soon cease to be.

[55c24t] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ What is sown by the best sower will never be uprooted, ~ What is fastened by the best fastener will never be loosened. ~ And so his children and grandchildren can continue the ancestral ritual for many generations. ~ If he nurtures the Tao by himself, his virtue is genuine, ~ If he nurtures the Tao in his family, his virtue is abundant, ~ If he nurtures the Tao in his village, his virtue is inestimable, ~ If he nurtures the Tao in his country, his virtue fills the country, ~ If he nurtures the Tao in the world, his virtue fills the universe. ~ Therefore, when you observe the individual, know individuals, ~ When you observe the family, know families, ~ When you observe the village, know villages, ~ When you observe the country, know countries, ~ When you observe the world, know the universe. ~ How do I know that it is possible to rule the world with the Tao? ~ From this observation.

[55c25t] Man-Ho Kwok ~ 'Those who have true te ~ Are like a newborn baby.' ~ - and if they seem like this, they will not be stung by wasps or snakes, or pounced on by animals in the wild or birds of prey. ~ A baby is weak and supple, but his hand can grasp your finger. ~ He has no desire as yet, and yet he can be erect - ~ he can cry day and night without even getting hoarse such is the depth of his harmony. ~ It's stupid to rush around. ~ When you fight against yourself, it shows in your face. ~ But if you draw your sap from your heart then you will be truly strong. ~ You will be great.

[55c26t] Gu Zhengkun ~ A man of prodigious virtue is just like a newly-born baby: ~ Poisonous insects will not sting it; ~ Beasts of prey will not harm it; ~ Birds of prey will not swoop down upon it. ~ Its bones and muscles are weak and supple, ~ Yet its hold is tight. ~ It does not know sexual intercourse between the male and female, ~ Yet its little penis often erects itself; ~ This is because it is at the height of virility. ~ It cries all day long, ~ Yet its throat does not become hoarse; ~ This is because it is at the height of harmonious vim and vigor. ~ To know harmony is to know the law of unity; ~ To know the law of unity is to know discernment; ~ To indulge in sensual pleasures is to look for disasters; ~ To let virility driven by desires is to give free rein to strength. ~ A creature in its prime is at the turning-point of being old, ~ For it is against the Tao. ~ What is against the Tao comes to an early end.

[55c27t] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ He who cherishes deep virtue is comparable to a newborn baby. ~ Poisonous insects will not sting him. ~ Ferocious animals will not pounce upon him. ~ Predatory birds will not swoop down upon him. ~ His bones are weak and his muscles are soft. ~ He does not know of the union between male and female. ~ He has the highest spirit. ~ He can cry all day but never become hoarse. ~ He has perfect harmony. ~ He knows harmony as constancy. ~ He knows constancy as clarity. ~ To nourish the body with abundant food and clothing means to borrow the outer energy. ~ To command the 'chi' with the mind means to use force. ~ When reaching their prime, creatures begin to age. ~ He who tries to oppose this rule means to go against the Tao.

[55c28t] Liu Qixuan ~ The truest being can be illustrated by the infant. ~ Infants are not attacked by poisonous insects ~ Or by the birds and beasts of prey. ~ Though they are weak and fragile, ~ They have a firm grasp. ~ Though they don't know about sexual intercourse, ~ The male penises can naturally erect ~ (Which is the best embodiment of energy). ~ Though they can cry the whole day, ~ Their voices never crack ~ (Which is the best function of harmony). ~ Keeping harmony is keeping eternity. ~ The keeper of eternity can attain true wisdom. ~ Exertion of will beyond harmony is strength. ~ What is strong will soon weaken, ~ What is weakening is against the Way. ~ What is against the Way will die early.

[55c29t] Shi Fu Hwang ~ The Character of The Child ~ Lao Tze says, ~ He who has in himself abundant Teh, the attribute of the Tao, is like a baby. ~ Poisonous insects will not sting him; ~ fierce beasts will not seize him; ~ and birds of prey will not pounce upon him. ~ A baby is weak with tender bones and feeble sinews, but his grasp is firm and tight. ~ He doesn't know men and women's affairs, yet his virile member may be excited, showing the perfection of his vigor. ~ He cries all day long without his throat becoming hoarse, thus showing the perfection of his harmonious constitution. ~ When one knows harmony, he knows the absolute. ~ When he knows the absolute, he deserves to be called the enlightened. ~ But he who knows the life-increasing arts transforms himself by having an evil heart. ~ He who lets his emotions go through impulse is called strong. ~ When things become strong in maturity, they become old, ~ which may be said to be contrary to the Tao. ~ Whatever is contrary to the Tao ends soon.

[55c30t] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ He who is endowed with ample virtue may be compared to an infant. ~ No venomous insects sting him; ~ Nor fierce beasts seize him; ~ Nor birds of prey strike him. ~ His bones are frail, his sinews tender, but his grasp is strong. ~ He does not know the conjugation of male and female, and yet he has sexual development; ~ It means he is in the best vitality. ~ He may cry all day long without growing hoarse; ~ It means that he is in the perfect harmony. ~ To know this harmony is to approach eternity; ~ To know eternity is to attain enlightenment. ~ To increase life is to lead to calamity; ~ To let the heart exert the breath is to become stark.

[55c31t] Paul J. Lin ~ Maintaining an abundance of virtue is comparable to being an infant. ~ Poisonous insects will not sting; ~ Ferocious beasts will not seize; ~ Predatory birds will not pounce; ~ The bones are tender, the sinews are soft, but the grasp is firm. ~ Not knowing the union of male and female, ~ The organ is fully formed; ~ This is the zenith of essence. ~ Howling and screaming all day without getting hoarse; ~ This is the zenith of harmony. ~ To know harmony means to be constant; ~ To know constancy means enlightenment; ~ To benefit one's own life is ill-fated. ~ To let one's heart direct vigor is to become stark. ~ Things in their prime will become old; ~ This is not Tao. ~ Being not Tao means to die early.

[55c32t] Michael LaFargue ~ One who has an abundance of Te, ~ is like a newborn child: ~ Poisonous bugs will not bite it, ~ fierce beasts will not snatch it, ~ birds of prey will not attack it. ~ Its bones are Soft, its sinews Weak, ~ but its grip is firm. ~ It has not known the union of man and woman, ~ but its organs get aroused: ~ Vital energy at its height. ~ It will scream all day without getting hoarse: ~ Harmony at its height. ~ To experience Harmony is called being Steady, ~ to experience Steadiness is called Clarity. ~ 'Increasing life': ominous; ~ 'the mind controlling the ch'i': forcing. ~ Things are vigorous, then grow old: ~ A case of 'not-Tao'. ~ Not-Tao, soon gone.

[55c33t] Cheng Lin ~ When the inherent qualities are completely preserved, one is like a new-born babe. ~ Poisonous insects will not bite him, ferocious beasts will not crouch in wait for him, predatory birds will not attack him. ~ Though his body is weak and supple, yet he has a firm grip. ~ Though he is ignorant about the reproductive organs, yet he possesses them all. ~ This is because he is full of the elemental force. ~ He may cry all day, yet he never loses his voice. ~ This is because he attains the perfect harmony. ~ When the elemental force is in perfect harmony, there is normalcy. ~ When one knows normalcy, there is enlightenment. ~ When one tampers with life, there is calamity. ~ When the heart is subservient to the will, there is compulsion.

[55c34t] Yi Wu ~ One who has an abundance of virtue is like a newborn baby. ~ Wasps and serpents do not sting it; ~ Fierce beasts do not seize it; ~ Birds of prey do not pounce on it. ~ Its bones are weak, its sinews are soft, but its grasp is firm. ~ Not yet knowing the union of female and male, its spirit is whole. ~ This is perfect essence. ~ It howls all day without getting hoarse. ~ This is perfect harmony. ~ To know harmony is to be constant; ~ To know constancy is to be enlightened. ~ To increase one's life span is ominous. ~ To control one's energy by mind is called strength; ~ To become strong is to become old. ~ This cannot be called the Way. ~ Not being in the Way, one will soon die.

[55c35t] Han Hiong Tan ~ The person of great virtue is akin to an infant. ~ Poison snakes and insects will not bite him. ~ Ferocious animals will not harm him. ~ Birds of prey will not attack him. ~ The infant is weak and floppy, ~ But his grip is firm and tight. ~ Although he does not knows anything about copulation, ~ He has a strong erection and this signifies the pinnacle of vitality. ~ He can scream all day without suffering from hoarseness. ~ This epitomises that his vital energy is in harmony. ~ When the energy is harmonised, it is acting in accord with Dao. ~ If you understand the way of Dao, you have transcendental wisdom. ~ Overindulgence in life is harmful. ~ Forcing the body to work beyond its limits is excessive. ~ Whenever anything reaches its peak, it then begins to decline. ~ Action that is unnatural is contrary to Dao. ~ Action contrary to Dao will lead to an early demise.

[55c36t] Hua-Ching Ni ~ One who is steeped in natural virtue is akin to a newborn babe. ~ Wasps and poisonous serpents do not sting it. ~ Fierce beasts do not seize it. ~ Birds of prey do not maul it. ~ Its bones are tender, its muscles soft, yet its grip is firm. ~ It has not known the union of male and female, yet its male member will stir naturally. ~ This is because its vitality is perfectly whole. ~ It can howl and scream all day long without becoming hoarse. ~ This is because it embodies perfect harmony. ~ To know harmony is to know natural virtue. ~ To recognize the natural virtue of the universe is to have insight. ~ To overprotect one's life is to invite danger. ~ To follow the fantasy of the mind is to drain away one's life energy. ~ To hasten growth is to hasten decay. ~ All of this is against the Way of natural virtue. ~ Whatever is against the Universal Way of life soon ceases to be.

[55c37t] Chang Chung-yuan ~ When man is enriched with Tê, ~ He may be identified with an innocent child. ~ He is free from the stings of insects, ~ Free from the claws of wild beasts, ~ Free from the attacks of devouring birds. ~ None of his bones or muscles are said to be strong, ~ But the grip of his hand is always firm. ~ Nothing concerning the union of male and female is yet known, ~ But potentiality is evident. ~ The essence of his life is perfect. ~ He can cry all the time without losing his voice. ~ His inner harmony is supreme. ~ To be aware of inner harmony is to abide with reality. ~ To abide with reality is to be enlightened. ~ However, to push life to the full leads to evil. ~ The mind forcing one's potential is artificial. ~ When things are artificial, they lead to decay. ~ This deviates from Tao. ~ That which deviates from Tao ends life soon.

[55c38t] Henry Wei ~ The Mystic Charm ~ Hsuan Fu ~ He who is profoundly endowed with virtue ~ May be compared to an infant. ~ Poisonous insects do not sting him; ~ Wild beasts do not seize hold of him; ~ Birds of prey do not pounce upon him. ~ Weak in bone and soft in sinews, ~ He yet has a firm grip. ~ Though ignorant of intercourse between the sexes, ~ His genital organ is yet firm and strong, ~ Indicating the plenitude of his vital essence. ~ He may scream all day, ~ Yet his voice does not become hoarse, ~ Indicating the plenitude of his inner harmony. ~ To know harmony is to accord with the Immutable; ~ To accord with the Immutable means enlightenment. ~ Improvement in health is a good omen; ~ Mental control of the breath means strength. ~ Things begin to decay after reaching the prime. ~ Decay indicates disregard of Tao. ~ Whatever disregards Tao soon vanishes.

[55c93t] Е. А. Торчинов ~ Того, кто крепко держится за Силу-Дэ благую, сравню я с новорожденным младенцем. ~ Пчелы, пауки и змеи ядовитые его не жалят. ~ Хищные звери его не тронут, хищные птицы его не клюнут. ~ Его кости мягки, его мышцы слабы, но хватает он крепко. ~ Ничего не знает он о союзе самца и самки, но уд его вздымается, ибо его семя-энергия предельно совершенно. ~ Гармония - источник постоянства, а постоянство - корень просветления. ~ Стремление к пестованию жизни зовется благовещим. ~ Контроль сознания над жизненной энергией дарит силу. ~ Коль существо сильно и вдруг стареет - оно отвергло истинный Путь-Дао, значит. ~ Тот, кто с Пути сворачивает, гибнет рано.

кричит, а горло не садится. ~ Это предельное выражение гармонии. ~ Осознание гармонии выражается в постоянстве. ~ Осознание постоянства выражается в ясности. ~ Прибыль в жизни выражается благими знамениями. ~ Управление дыхания-ци сердцем выражается в силе. ~ Сущность, став крепкой, начинает стареть. ~ Это определяется: ~ Не Путь. ~ Если не Путь, устраняйся пораньше.

[56c01t] Robert G. Henricks ~ Those who know don't talk about it; those who talk don't know it. ~ He blocks up his holes, ~ Closes his doors, ~ Softens the glare, ~ Settles the dust, ~ Files down the sharp edges, ~ And unties the tangles. ~ This is called Profound Union. ~ Therefore, there is no way to get intimate with him, ~ But there is also no way to shun him. ~ There is no way to benefit him, ~ But there is also no way to harm him. ~ There is no way to ennoble him, ~ But there is also no way to debase him. ~ For this very reason he's the noblest thing in the world.

[56c02t] John C. H. Wu ~ HE who knows does not speak. ~ He who speaks does not know. ~ Block all the passages! ~ Shut all the doors! ~ Blunt all edges! ~ Untie all tangles! ~ Harmonize all lights! ~ Unite the world into one whole! ~ This is called the Mystical Whole, ~ Which you cannot court after nor shun, ~ Benefit nor harm, honour nor humble. ~ Therefore, it is the Highest of the world.

[56c03t] D. C. Lau ~ One who knows does not speak; ~ One who speaks does not know. ~ Block the openings; ~ Shut the doors. ~ Blunt the sharpness; ~ Untangle the knots; ~ Soften the glare; ~ Let your wheels move only along old ruts. ~ This is known as mysterious sameness. ~ Hence you cannot get close to it, nor can you keep it at arm's length; ~ You cannot bestow benefit on it, nor can you do it harm; ~ You cannot ennoble it, nor can you debase it. ~ Therefore it is valued by the empire.

[56c04t] R. L. Wing ~ Those who know do not speak. ~ Those who speak do not know. ~ Block the passages. ~ Close the door. ~ Blunt the sharpness. ~ Untie the tangles. ~ Harmonize the brightness. ~ Identify with the ways of the world. ~ This is called Profound Identification. ~ It cannot be gained through attachment. ~ It cannot be gained through detachment. ~ It cannot be gained through advantage. ~ It cannot be gained through disadvantage. ~ It cannot be gained through esteem. ~ It cannot be gained through humility. ~ Hence it is the treasure of the world.

[56c05t] Ren Jiyu ~ He who knows does not speak, ~ And he who speaks does not know. ~ Blocking the vent (of knowledge), ~ closing the door (of knowledge), ~ covering the cutting-edge, ~ going beyond entanglement, ~ containing the light, ~ and mixing with the dust, ~ - These can be called "the mysterious agreement." ~ So, (the person with "the mysterious agreement") ~ Cannot be treated intimately, ~ Cannot be estranged, ~ Cannot be given profits, ~ Cannot be injured, ~ Cannot be raised to nobility, ~ And cannot be made humble, ~ And can therefore be esteemed by all the people under Heaven.

[56c06t] Gia-fu Feng ~ Those who know do not talk. ~ Those who talk do not know. ~ Keep your mouth closed. ~ Guard your senses. ~ Temper your sharpness. ~ Simplify your problems. ~ Mask your brightness. ~ Be at one with the dust of the earth. ~ This is primal union. ~ He who has achieved this state ~ Is unconcerned with friends and enemies, ~ With good and harm, with honor and disgrace. ~ This therefore is the highest state of man.

[56c07t] Lok Sang Ho ~ Those who know do not speak much. ~ Those who speak much do not know. ~ Block the passage of exchange with the outside world. ~ Close the doors; ~ Blunt the protruding points; ~ Absolve the disputes; ~ Tone down the dazzling light; ~ Receive outside stimuli with an equanimous mind. ~ This is called the mystical union. ~ With a non-possessive mind we get together; ~ With a non-possessive mind we separate. ~ With a non-possessive mind we experience what seems advantageous to us; ~ With a non-possessive mind we experience what seems disadvantageous; ~ With a non-possessive mind we experience high positions; ~ With a non-possessive mind we experience low positions. ~ This way we achieve the most valuable under heaven.

[56c08t] Xiaolin Yang ~ People who have knowledge do not talk about it; ~ people who like to talk about it do not have knowledge. ~ Shut off your senses, block your desires, ~ Dull your sharpness, untie your knots with the outside world, ~ Dim your brightness, and make yourself as low as dust; ~ This will lead you to the world of the DAO. ~ Therefore, no one can own the DAO, ~ No one can cast it away, ~ No one can benefit it, ~ No one can hurt it, ~ No one can make it noble, ~ No one can make it low; ~ This is why the DAO is the noblest.

[56c09t] Walter Gorn Old, THE MYSTERIOUS VIRTUE ~ He who knows the Tao does not discuss it, and those who babble about it do not know it. ~ To keep the lips closed, to shut the doors of sight and sound, to smooth off the corners, to temper the glare, and to be on a level with the dust of the earth, this is the mysterious virtue. ~ Whoever observes this will regard alike both frankness and reserve, kindness and injury, honour and degradation. ~ For this reason he will be held in great esteem of all men.

[56c10t] James Legge ~ He who knows (the Tao) does not (care to) speak (about it); ~ he who is (ever ready to) speak about it does not know it. ~ He (who knows it) will keep his mouth shut and close the portals (of his nostrils). ~ He will blunt his sharp points and unravel the complications of things; ~ he will attemper his brightness, and bring himself into agreement with the obscurity (of others). ~ This is called 'the Mysterious Agreement.' ~ (Such an one) cannot be treated familiarly or distantly; ~ he is beyond all consideration of profit or injury; ~ of nobility or meanness: ~ - he is the noblest man under heaven.

[56c11t] David Hinton ~ Those who know don't talk, and those who talk don't know. ~ Block the senses and close the mind, ~ blunt edges, loosen tangles, soften glare, mingle dust: ~ this is called dark-enigma union. ~ It can't be embraced and can't be ignored, ~ can't be enhanced and can't be harmed, ~ can't be treasured and can't be despised, ~ for it's the treasure of all beneath heaven.

[56c12t] Chichung Huang ~ He who knows does not speak; ~ He who speaks does not know. ~ Stop your hole, ~ Close your door, ~ Soften your brightness, ~ Mingle with the dust, ~ File your sharpness, ~ And unravel your entanglements. ~ This is called deep and remote concord. ~ Therefore, neither can anyone become intimate with you, ~ Nor can anyone become alienated from you; ~ Neither can anyone benefit you, ~ Nor can anyone harm you; ~ Neither can anyone exalt you, ~ Nor can anyone debase you. ~ Therefore, you are exalted by all under heaven.

[56c13t] Ellen M. Chen ~ One who knows does not speak, ~ One who speaks does not know. ~ Stop the apertures, ~ Close the door; ~ Blunt the sharp, ~ Untie the entangled; ~ Harmonize the bright, ~ Make identical the dust. ~ This is called the mystical identity (hsüan t'ung). ~ Therefore with this person you cannot get intimate (ch'in), ~ Cannot get distant, ~ Cannot benefit, ~ Cannot harm, ~ Cannot exalt, ~ Cannot humiliate. ~ Therefore such person is the exalted of the world.

[56c14t] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ A person who knows [comprehensively] would not be garrulous; ~ A person who is garrulous is not wise [he may likely base his bloated talks on his incomprehensive knowledge]. ~ [People's garrulity, as described above, can be equalized in the following fashion:] ~ By blocking their passages and openings [i.e. connections to the outside world]; ~ By blunting [their excessive] sharpness [i.e. their arrogance]; ~ By untying entanglements [i.e. disputes they have produced]; ~ By tempering the disturbing ray [i.e. harms they have caused]; ~ By pushing [sophistry to] where it belongs, i.e. the dust. ~ All of this is meant to accentuate [our knowledge after Tao] in a profound manner. ~ Therefore: ~ One shall not wanting to achieve Tao for the purpose of practicing favoritism; ~ One shall not use Tao for the purpose of distancing himself from people he dislikes; ~ One shall not exploit Tao for the purpose of profiting himself; ~ One shall not employ Tao for the purpose of harming others; ~ One shall not gain Tao for the purpose of promoting himself; ~ One shall not apply Tao for the purpose of debasing others. ~ This is why Tao originates the most valuable [canon for] the world.

[56c15t] Tien Cong Tran ~ He who knows does not speak. ~ He who speaks does not know. ~ Blocking all the passages; shutting all the doors, blunting all edges, untying all tangles, harmonizing all lights, uniting the worldly dusts. ~ This is called the mysterious One. ~ Hence, you cannot have it by nearness, by distance, by benefit, by harm, by praise, by dislike. ~ Therefore, it is the most prized of the world.

[56c16t] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ Knowledgeable people rarely show off. ~ Boastful people are not truly knowledgeable. ~ Block up leakages; ~ Close doors; ~ Smooth out sharp edges; ~ Resolve conflicts; ~ Harmonize glares; ~ And blend into the base. ~ These are profound concords. ~ Do not become intimate when receiving the desired. ~ Do not become alienating when receiving the undesired. ~ Do not become greedy when obtaining profit. ~ Do not retaliate when receiving hostility. ~ Do not prize when obtaining the precious. ~ Do not debase when receiving humility. ~ Doing so can gain respect from others.

[56c17t] Arthur Waley ~ Those who know do not speak; ~ Those who speak do not know. ~ Block the passages, ~ Shut the doors, ~ Let all sharpness be blunted, ~ All tangles untied, ~ All glare tempered, ~ All dust smoothed. ~ This is called the mysterious levelling. ~ He who has achieved it cannot either be drawn into friendship or repelled, ~ Cannot be benefited, cannot be harmed, ~ Cannot either be raised or humbled, ~ And for that very reason is highest of all creatures under heaven.

[56c18t] Richard John Lynn ~ He who knows does not speak. ~ He who speaks does not know. ~ Block up your apertures; ~ Close your door; ~ Blunt your sharpness; ~ Cut away the tangled; ~ Merge with the brilliant; ~ Become one with the very dust. ~ We call this "one with mystery." ~ Thus one can neither get close to such a one nor get distant from him. ~ One can neither benefit nor harm him. ~ One can neither ennoble him nor debase him. ~ Thus such a one is esteemed by all under Heaven.

[56c19t] Lin Yutang ~ BEYOND HONOR AND DISGRACE ~ He who knows does not speak; ~ He who speaks does not know. ~ Fill up its apertures, ~ Close its doors, ~ Dull its edges, ~ Untie its tangles, ~ Soften its light, ~ Submerge its turmoil - ~ This is the Mystic Unity. ~ Then love and hatred cannot touch him. ~ Profit and loss cannot reach him. ~ Honor and disgrace cannot affect him. ~ Therefore is he always the honored one of the world.

[56c20t] Victor H. Mair ~ One who knows does not speak; ~ One who speaks does not know. ~ He ~ Stopples the openings of his heart, ~ Closes his doors, ~ Diffuses the light, ~ Mingles with the dust, ~ Files away his sharp points, ~ Unravels his tangles. ~ This is called "mysterious identity." ~ Therefore, ~ Neither can one attain intimacy with him, ~ Nor can one remain distant from him; ~ Neither can one profit from him, ~ Nor can one be harmed by him; ~ Neither can one achieve honor through him, ~ Nor can one be debased by him. ~ Therefore, ~ He is esteemed by all under heaven.

[56c21t] Tolbert McCarroll ~ Those who know do not speak. ~ Those who speak do not know. ~ Block the passages! ~ Shut the doors! ~ Blunt the sharpness! ~ Untangle the knots! ~ Soften the glare! ~ Settle with the dust! ~ This is the Mystery of Evenness. ~ Those who have achieved this cannot be enclosed nor kept at a distance; ~ they cannot be benefited nor harmed, honored nor disgraced. ~ Therefore, ~ this is the noblest state under heaven.

[56c22t] David H. Li ~ One who knows is reticent; one who glibs is ignorant. ~ Stuff channels, block portals; ~ blunt sharpness, resolve conflicts; ~ harmonize brightness, mingle with dust. ~ This is the Profoundest Assimilation. ~ Thus, after gaining possession, ~ one does not patronize, nor slight, nor take advantage of, nor damage, nor treasure, nor debase. ~ Thus, one is treasured by the world.

[56c23t] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ Those who know do not talk. ~ Those who talk do not know. ~ Close the openings of your senses, ~ Blunt the sharpness of your intellect, ~ Untie the tangles of your attachment, ~ Soften the brightness of your knowledge. ~ Be one with the dust of the world. ~ This is to be one with the Tao. ~ He who is one with the Tao cannot be courted, cannot be distanced, cannot be bought, cannot be harmed, cannot be honored, cannot be humiliated. ~ For this reason, he becomes the true treasure of the world.

[56c24t] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ The person who is blessed with great virtue can be compared to a child. ~ He will not be bitten by an insect or a snake, ~ He will not be devoured by wild animals, ~ Birds of prey will not swoop down on him. ~ His bones are fragile, his tendons soft, but his grip is strong. ~ He is not familiar with the union of man and woman, but he possesses reproductive powers. ~ This means that he is at the peak of his vitality. ~ He can weep all day and not become hoarse. ~ This means that he is in perfect harmony. ~ Being familiar with this harmony brings him closer to eternity, ~ Being familiar with eternity enables man to attain enlightenment. ~ Increasing life invites trouble, ~ Let your heart become addicted to the breath of the spirit, and you will be filled with potency.

[56c25t] Man-Ho Kwok ~ If you know what it is, don't talk it away: ~ If you do, then you don't understand. ~ Hush, keep it in, and your doorway shut - ~ Steer clear of sharpness and untangle the knots. ~ Feel your lightness and let it merge with others, ~ This, we say, is our basic oneness. ~ The sage who does this doesn't have to worry about people called 'friends' or 'enemies', with profit or loss, honour or disgrace - ~ He is a Master of Life, instead.

[56c26t] Gu Zhengkun ~ He who is wise will not speak; ~ He who speaks is not wise. ~ When one blocks the openings (of knowledge), ~ Shuts the door (of desires), ~ Dulls sharpness, ~ Stays away from entanglements, ~ Glows with veiled radiance, ~ Mingles with dust, ~ That is called subtle identification. ~ Hence you are in no way ~ To be friends with him, ~ To estrange him, ~ To benefit him, ~ To harm him, ~ To honor him, ~ To debase him. ~ That is why he is held in esteem in the world.

[56c27t] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ One who knows does not speak. ~ One who speaks does not know. ~ He closes his mouth, seals his ears. ~ He subdues his sharpness, releases his worries. ~ He blends himself with the light, he becomes one with the dust. ~ This is what is called mysterious identity. ~ Therefore he regards things out of his reach as dear. ~ He regards things out of his reach as distant, ~ he perceives unreachable things with harm, ~ he perceives unreachable things with value, ~ he perceives unreachable things with humbleness. ~ That is why he values everything under Heaven.

[56c28t] Liu Qixuan ~ One who knows says nothing. ~ One who says knows nothing. ~ Cover the ears, close the eyes; ~ Blunt the sharpness, dissolve the currents; ~ Soften the light, blend the substances. ~ And the result is called the profound sameness. ~ One who holds that sameness cannot be ~ Approached too close, ~ Or estranged too far, ~ Or favored too much, ~ Or harmed too badly, ~ Or valued too high, ~ Or degraded too low. ~ And is therefore the most appreciated in the world.

[56c29t] Shi Fu Hwang ~ The Noblest One ~ Lao Tze says, ~ He who knows the Tao does not care to speak about it; ~ he who is ever ready to speak about it does not know it. ~ Therefore the Tao practician would rather close his eyes and shut up his mouth, in order to frustrate his ambition and untie the confused knot in his heart. ~ Further, he proceeds to temper his brightness, and brings himself into agreement with obscurity. ~ Then he deserves to be called the one in accordance with Heaven. ~ Such a one cannot be treated familiarly nor distantly, rendered with profit or injury, made noble or mean. ~ Hence he is regarded as the noblest one in the world.

[56c30t] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ Blunt all that is sharp; ~ Cut all that is divisible; ~ Blur all that is brilliant; ~ Mix with all that is humble as dust; ~ This is called absolute equality. ~ Therefore it cannot be made intimate; ~ Nor can it be alienated. ~ It cannot be benefited; ~ Nor can it be harmed. ~ It cannot be exalted; ~ Nor can it be debased. ~ Therefore it is the most valuable thing in the world.

[56c31t] Paul J. Lin ~ The one who knows does not speak. ~ The one who speaks does not know. ~ Block the passage. ~ Close the door. ~ Dull the sharpness. ~ Loosen the tangles. ~ Blend with light. ~ Become one with the dust. ~ This is called mystical identity. ~ Hence, ~ One can be neither close to it, nor far from it; ~ One can neither benefit it, nor harm it; ~ One can neither value it, nor despise it. ~ Therefore, it is valued by the world.

[56c32t] Michael LaFargue ~ Those who understand are not talkers, ~ talkers don't understand. ~ Close your eyes, ~ shut your doors. ~ Dampen the passion, ~ untie the tangles, ~ make the flashing things harmonious, ~ make the dust merge together. ~ This is called the mysterious Merging. ~ Yes: ~ You cannot get close, ~ you cannot stay away, ~ you cannot help It, ~ you cannot harm It, ~ you cannot treasure It, ~ you cannot look down on It. ~ Yes: ~ It is the Treasure of the World.

[56c33t] Cheng Lin ~ Those who know do not speak; those who speak do not know. ~ Stop up all the orifices of lust, ~ shut out all forms of distraction, ~ repress all manner of cunning, ~ unravel all causes of confusion, ~ eliminate all opportunities for rivalry, ~ remove all kinds of inequality, ~ - then there is great harmony. ~ When there is no cause for favour or disfavour, gain or loss, honour or disgrace, ~ the world will become rectified.

[56c34t] Yi Wu ~ One who is wise does not speak; ~ One who speaks is not wise. ~ Blocking the passages, ~ Shutting the doors, ~ Blunting the sharpness, ~ Untying the tangles, ~ Tempering the brightness, ~ Uniting with the dust, -- ~ This is called the mystical union. ~ Therefore, ~ There is no way to get close to it; ~ There is no way to leave it; ~ There is no way to benefit it; ~ There is no way to harm it; ~ There is no way to value it; ~ There is no way to despise it; ~ Therefore, it is revered in the world.

[56c35t] Han Hiong Tan ~ He who really knows does not speak. ~ He who speaks does not know. ~ You must block the portals to your sensory organs. ~ You must also blunt the sharp edge and reduce the complexity. ~ You must attenuate the glares and mix with commoners. ~ This is to attain "the divine oneness". ~ Henceforth, you are not concerned about intimacy or estrangement. ~ You have no concerns about advantage and disadvantage. ~ You have no concerns about nobility and lowliness. ~ Everyone treasures you.

[56c36t] Hua-Ching Ni ~ One who knows does not speak. ~ One who speaks does not know. ~ The one who knows is the one whose doors are shut, whose openings are blocked, whose sharpness is blunted, and whose glare is softened. ~ He is one with the subtle truth of the universe. ~ Thus you cannot get close to such a person by your love to do so, ~ nor can you keep away from him by your desire to do so. ~ You cannot bestow benefit on him, ~ nor can you do him harm, ~ because he holds the subtle essence of the universe.

[56c37t] Chang Chung-yuan ~ One who is aware does not talk. ~ One who talks is not aware. ~ Ceasing verbal expressions, ~ Stopping the entry of sensations, ~ Dulling its sharpness, ~ Releasing its entanglements, ~ Tempering its brightness, ~ And unifying with the earth: ~ This is called the identity of Tao. ~ Hence, no nearness can reach him nor distance affect him. ~ No gain can touch him nor loss disturb him. ~ No esteem can move him nor shame distress him. ~ Thus, he is the most valuable man in the world.

[56c38t] Henry Wei ~ Mystic Virtue ~ Hsuan Teh ~ Those who know do not speak; ~ Those who speak do not know. ~ Stop up the aperture of the vessel, ~ Shut the doors of the senses, ~ Blunt the sharp, ~ Unravel the tangled, ~ Harmonize with the light, ~ Merge with the dust, - ~ This is called Mystic Assimilation. ~ Men with this attainment, therefore, are ~ Above endearment or estrangement, ~ Above enrichment or impoverishment, ~ And above exaltation or degradation. ~ Therefore they are highly honored by the world.

[56c39t] Ha Poong Kim ~ He who knows does not speak; ~ He who speaks does not know. ~ Block the holes, ~ Shut the gates. ~ [He] blunts the sharpness, ~ Unravels the tangles, ~ Softens the brilliance, ~ Identifies with the dust. ~ This is called mysterious identity. ~ Therefore you can neither befriend him, ~ Nor alienate him, ~ Nor benefit him, ~ Nor harm him, ~ Nor exalt him, ~ Nor humble him. ~ That is why he is the noblest of all under Heaven.

[56c40t] Tao Huang ~ Those who know, do not say. ~ Those who say, do not know. ~ Close the mouth. ~ Shut the door. ~ Merge into light. ~ As ordinary as dust. ~ Blunt the sharpness. ~ Unravel the entanglements. ~ This is called mysterious sameness. ~ You are not intimate by acquiring it; ~ You are not distant in not acquiring it. ~ You do not profit by acquiring it; ~ You do not lose it by not acquiring it. ~ You are not ennobled by acquiring it; ~ You are not disgraced by not acquiring it. ~ This enables the nobility of the world.

[56c41t] Tang Zi-chang ~ One who knows may not preach. ~ One who preaches may not know. ~ Close the entrances to attractions and control the excess of desires. ~ It blunts all sharpness. ~ It settles all disputes. ~ It harmonizes all lights. ~ It unites all lands. ~ They are the "Profound Similarities" of Dao. ~ Thus, ~ It cannot be involved, nor can it be ignored. ~ It cannot be utilized, nor can it be harmed. ~ It cannot be honored, nor can it be disgraced. ~ Thus, it is cherished by all things under the heaven.

[56c42t] Wing-tsit Chan ~ He who knows does not speak. ~ He who speaks does not know. ~ Close the mouth. ~ Shut the doors. ~ Blunt the sharpness. ~ Untie the tangles. ~ Soften the light. ~ Become one with the dusty world. ~ This is called profound identification. ~ Therefore: ~ It is impossible either to be intimate and close to him or to be distant and indifferent to him. ~ It is impossible either to benefit him or to harm him. ~ It is impossible either to honor him or to disgrace him. ~ For this reason he is honored by the world.

[56c93t] Е. А. Торчинов ~ Знающий не говорит, говорящий не знает. ~ Заслони свои отверстия, ~ запри свои врата, ~ притупи свою остроту, ~ развяжи свои узлы, ~ умерь свой свет и ~ уподобься пыли. ~ Зовется это Сокровенным Единением. ~ Поэтому с человеком, обретшим его, нельзя сблизиться, чтобы с ним сродниться, и с ним нельзя сблизиться, чтобы его отбросить. ~ С ним нельзя сблизиться, чтобы извлечь из этого пользу, и с ним нельзя сблизиться, чтобы другим причинить с его помощью вред. ~ С ним нельзя сблизиться, чтобы стать знатным, и с ним нельзя сблизиться, чтобы стать низкородным. ~ Поэтому он почитается всей Поднебесной.

[56c97t] В. В. Малявин ~ Знающий не говорит, ~ Говорящий не знает. ~ Завали дыры, ~ Затвори ворота, ~ Затупи острые края, ~ Развяжи узлы, ~ Смири сияние, ~ Уподобься праху. ~ Вот что зовется "сокровенным уподоблением". ~ Посему нельзя его обрести и быть ему родным; ~ Нельзя его обрести и быть ему далеким. ~ Нельзя его обрести и ему угодить; ~ Нельзя его обрести и ему навредить. ~ Нельзя его обрести и его почитать, ~ Нельзя его обрести и его унизить. ~ Вот чем оно ценно в мире.

[56c98t] Б. Б. Виногродский ~ Познание - не речь. ~ Речь - не познание. ~ Закрывают их отверстия. ~ Запирают их врата. ~ Затупляют их остроту. ~ Разрубают их путы. ~ Смягчают их сияние. ~ Объединяют их прах. ~ Это определяется: ~ Мистическое объединение. ~ Причинность: ~ Нельзя, захотев, быть родственным. ~ Нельзя, захотев, быть отчужденным. ~ Нельзя, захотев, иметь выгоду. ~ Нельзя, захотев, причинить вред. ~ Нельзя, захотев, быть благородным. ~ Нельзя, захотев, быть подлым. ~ Причинность: ~ Осуществляют благородное в Поднебесной.

[57c01t] Robert G. Henricks ~ Use the upright and correct to order the state; ~ Use surprise tactics when you use troops; ~ Use unconcern with affairs to take control of the world. ~ How do I know that this is so? ~ Well, the more taboos and prohibitions there are in the world, the poorer the people will be; ~ The more sharp weapons the people possess, the more muddled the states will be; ~ The more knowledge {and skill} people have, the more novel things {will appear}; ~ The more {legal} matters are made prominent, {the more} robbers and thieves {there will be}. ~ Therefore, the words of the {Sage} say: ~ I do nothing, and the people of themselves are transformed; ~ I love tranquility, and the people of themselves are upright; ~ I'm unconcerned with affairs, and the people of themselves become rich; ~ I desire not to desire, and the people of themselves are [genuine and simple, like] uncarved wood.

[57c02t] John C. H. Wu ~ You govern a kingdom by normal rules; ~ You fight a war by exceptional moves; ~ But you win the world by letting alone. ~ How do I know that this is so? ~ By what is within me! ~ The more taboos and inhibitions there are in the world, ~ The poorer the people become. ~ The sharper the weapons the people possess, ~ The greater confusion reigns in the realm. ~ The more clever and crafty the men, ~ The oftener strange things happen. ~ The more articulate the laws and ordinances, ~ The more robbers and thieves arise. ~ Therefore, the Sage says: ~ I do not make any fuss, and the people transform themselves. ~ I love quietude, and the people settle down in their regular grooves. ~ I do not engage myself in anything, and the people grow rich. ~ I have no desires, and the people return to Simplicity.

[57c03t] D. C. Lau ~ Govern the state by being straightforward; ~ Wage war by being crafty; ~ But win the empire by not being meddlesome. ~ How do I know that it is like that? ~ By means of this. ~ The more taboos there are in the empire ~ The poorer the people; ~ The more sharpened tools the people have ~ The more benighted the state; ~ The more skills the people have ~ The further novelties multiply; ~ The better known the laws and edicts ~ The more thieves and robbers there are. ~ Hence the sage says, ~ I take no action and the people are transformed of themselves; ~ I prefer stillness and the people are rectified of themselves; ~ I am not meddlesome and the people prosper of themselves; ~ I am free from desire and the people of themselves become simple like the uncarved block.

[57c04t] R. L. Wing ~ Lead the organization with correctness. ~ Direct the military with surprise tactics. ~ Take hold of the world with effortlessness. ~ How do I know it is so? ~ Through this: ~ Too many prohibitions in the world, ~ And people become insufficient. ~ Too many sharp weapons among people, ~ And the nation grows confused. ~ Too much cunning strategy among people, ~ And strange things start to happen. ~ Too obvious a growth in laws and regulations, ~ And too many criminals emerge. ~ Thus Evolved Individuals say: ~ Look to nonaction, ~ And people will be naturally influenced. ~ Look to refined tranquillity, ~ And people will be naturally correct. ~ Look to effortlessness, ~ And people will be naturally affluent. ~ Look to nondesire, ~ And people will be naturally simple.

[57c05t] Ren Jiyu ~ A state should be governed in a normal way, ~ A war should be prosecuted in an unusual way, ~ And the kingdom should be controlled by doing nothing. ~ How do I know that it is so? ~ On the grounds: ~ In the kingdom the more prohibitive enactments there are, the poorer the people become; ~ The more weapons the people have, the greater disorder the state and clan fall into; ~ The more crafts and technics men possess, the more strange contrivances appear; ~ The more display of statutes there is, the more robbers and thieves there are. ~ So the sage said: ~ "I do nothing, then the people submit spontaneously, ~ I am fond of keeping still, then the people are righteous spontaneously, ~ I take no trouble, and the people naturally enrich themselves, ~ I have no desires, then the people naturally remain in primitive simplicity."

[57c06t] Gia-fu Feng ~ Rule a nation with justice. ~ Wage war with surprise moves. ~ Become master of the universe without striving. ~ How do I know that this is so? ~ Because of this! ~ The more laws and restrictions there are, ~ The poorer people become. ~ The sharper men's weapons, ~ The more trouble in the land. ~ The more ingenious and clever men are, ~ The more strange things happen. ~ The more rules and regulations, ~ The more thieves and robbers. ~ Therefore the sage says: ~ I take no action and people are reformed. ~ I enjoy peace and people become honest. ~ I do nothing and people become rich. ~ I have no desires and people return to the good and simple life.

[57c07t] Lok Sang Ho ~ We rule a nation with the straight mind. ~ We deploy the military forces with surprises. ~ We win the hearts of all under heaven with non-intervention. ~ How do I know that this should be so, with this: ~ The more prohibitions that are imposed by the emperor, ~ The poorer the people become. ~ The more clever products that people own, ~ The less clever the nation becomes. ~ The more people use their tricks and knacks, ~ The more odd products there are, and ~ The more rules and laws there are, ~ It is likely that there are the more thieves and bandits. ~ The Sage says: "I do not contrive, and people automatically become cultured and well-mannered. ~ I keep still, and people automatically become straight; ~ I do not intervene, and people automatically become rich; ~ I do not crave, and people automatically lead a simple life."

[57c08t] Xiaolin Yang ~ When governing a country you must be fair and just; ~ When fighting a battle, you must use tricks; ~ When taking over the world, you must practice WUWEI. ~ How do I know everything in this world? This is how. ~ The more restrictions the government sets, the more people become poor; ~ The more people have dangerous weapons, the more the country falls into chaos; ~ The more people become clever, the more bizarre things happen; ~ The more severe the law becomes, the more thieves there are. ~ So the great men said: "If I practice WUWEI, the people will govern themselves; ~ If I am always peaceful, the people will be upright by themselves; ~ If I do not initiate things for my own purposes, the people will become rich by themselves; ~ If I do not have desires, the people will become simple and plain by themselves."

[57c09t] Walter Gorn Old, THE GENUINE GOVERNMENT ~ The righteous man may rule the nation. ~ The strategic man may rule the army. ~ But the man who refrains from active measures should be the king. ~ How do I know how things should be? ~ I know by this:- ~ When the actions of the people are controlled by prohibited laws, the country becomes more and more impoverished. ~ When the people are allowed the free use of arms, the Government is in danger. ~ The more crafty and dexterous the people become, the more do artificial things come into use. ~ And when these cunning arts are publicly esteemed, then do rogues prosper. ~ Therefore the wise man says:- ~ I will design nothing; and the people will shape themselves. ~ I will keep quiet; and the people will find their rest. ~ I will not assert myself; and the people will come forth. ~ I will discountenance ambition; and the people will revert to their natural simplicity.

[57c10t] James Legge ~ A state may be ruled by (measures of) correction; ~ weapons of war may be used with crafty dexterity; ~ (but) the kingdom is made one's own (only) by freedom from action and purpose. ~ How do I know that it is so? ~ By these facts: ~ - In the kingdom the multiplication of prohibitive enactments increases the poverty of the people; ~ the more implements to add to their profit that the people have, the greater disorder is there in the state and clan; ~ the more acts of crafty dexterity that men possess, the more do strange contrivances appear; ~ the more display there is of legislation, the more thieves and robbers there are. ~ Therefore a sage has said, ~ 'I will do nothing (of purpose), and the people will be transformed of themselves; ~ I will be fond of keeping still, and the people will of themselves become correct. ~ I will take no trouble about it, and the people will of themselves become rich; ~ I will manifest no ambition, and the people will of themselves attain to the primitive simplicity.'

[57c11t] David Hinton ~ You may govern the nation through principle ~ and lead armies to victory through craft, ~ but you win all beneath heaven through indifference. ~ How can I know this to be so? ~ Through this. ~ The more prohibitions rule all beneath heaven the deeper poverty grows among the people. ~ The more shrewd leaders there are the faster dark confusion fills the nation. ~ The more cleverness people learn the faster strange things happen. ~ The faster laws and decrees are issued the more bandits and thieves appear. ~ Therefore a sage says: ~ I do nothing ~ and the people transform themselves. ~ I cherish tranquility ~ and the people rectify themselves. ~ I cultivate indifference ~ and the people enrich themselves. ~ I desire nothing ~ and the people return of themselves to uncarved simplicity.

[57c12t] Chichung Huang ~ Use the norm to govern the state; ~ Use the abnormal to conduct warfare; ~ Use nondisturbance to win all under heaven. ~ How do I know it should be so? ~ For the more prohibitions and taboos in the empire, ~ The poorer the people; ~ The more sharp weapons the sovereign has, ~ The more chaotic state and fief; ~ The craftier the sovereign, ~ The more perverse things will arise; ~ The more ostentatious royal processions, ~ The more robbers and thieves there will be. ~ Hence, the sage man's saying goes: ~ "If I implement nonaction, ~ The people will live and grow spontaneously; ~ If I love stillness, ~ The people will turn aright spontaneously; ~ If I create no disturbances, ~ The people will become rich spontaneously; ~ If I desire to be desireless, ~ The people will turn into unhewn logs spontaneously."

* * *

[57c13t] Ellen M. Chen ~ Govern a state by (i) the normal (cheng); ~ Conduct warfare as (i) the abnormal (ch'i); ~ Take the empire when (i) there is no business. ~ How do I know such should be the case? ~ By the following: ~ In an empire with many prohibitions, ~ People are often poor; ~ When people have many sharp weapons, ~ The state is in great darkness (tzu hun); ~ When persons abound in ingenuity (ch'iao), ~ Abnormal (ch'i) objects multiply (tzu ch'i); ~ When laws are abundantly promulgated (tzu chang), ~ There are many thieves and brigands. ~ Therefore the sage says: ~ I do not act (wei), ~ Hence the people transform by themselves (tzu-hua); ~ I love tranquillity (ching), ~ Hence the people are normal by themselves (tzu-cheng); ~ I have no business, ~ Hence the people grow rich by themselves; ~ I have no desire, ~ Hence the people are like the uncarved wood by themselves (tzu-p'u).

[57c14t] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ A country is [most properly] governed by a ruler who believes in the principle of righteousness; ~ A military operation is [most efficiently] executed with the strategy which generates surprises; ~ The world has been [most often] won by leaders who were not motivated by the desire to conquer others. ~ How do I know that the above statements are accountable? ~ [I shall explain next.] ~ In this world, the more restrictions and prohibition [a government imposes], the poorer its people are; ~ The more people possessing lethal weapons, the more chaotic the country is; ~ The more cunning and artful people are, the more outrageous occurrences flourish; ~ The more laws and their [hairsplitting] multiplication [a state has], the more beneficial will it be for robbers and thieves to thrive. ~ Therefore a Sage once said: ~ "If I practice the principle of non-interference, people shall yield voluntarily to the influence of the natural force; ~ If I demonstrate that I love Serenity [,i.e. I'll restrain myself from using my power,] people will choose right courses spontaneously; ~ If I do not use my power to control people, people will prosper naturally; ~ If I diminish my selfish desires, people will be motivated to be simple and truthful accordingly."

[57c15t] Tien Cong Tran ~ You govern a state by straightness. ~ You engage in war by rare operations. ~ It is by non-doing that you win the world. ~ How do I know that this is so? ~ By the fact it is so. ~ The more restrictions and inhibitions there are in the world, the poorer the people become. ~ The sharper the weapons the people possess, the more disordered the nation is. ~ The more skills the people have, the more strange things happen. ~ The more articulate the laws and rules, the more thieves and robbers there are. ~ Therefore, the sage says: ~ I do not do, and the people transform themselves. ~ I love quietude, and the people become straight by themselves. ~ I do not engage myself in anything, and the people grow rich by themselves. ~ I have no desires, and the people return to simplicity.

[57c16t] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ Govern the kingdom by the normal way. ~ Fight the battle by the unexpected way. ~ And one can win the world without using force. ~ How do I know this is so? ~ By the following: ~ When there are too many restrictions and regulations, people become poor. ~ When there are too many weapons, the kingdom is in disarray. ~ When there are too many tricks, bizarre things happen. ~ When there are too many decrees, the crime rate increases. ~ This is why the sage says: ~ "I do not force my way, and people live peacefully. ~ I keep quiet, and people live normally. ~ I do not interfere, and people become rich. ~ I do not covet anything, and people would be honest."

[57c17t] Arthur Waley ~ 'Kingdoms can only be governed if rules are kept; ~ Battles can only be won if rules are broken.' ~ But the adherence of all under heaven can only be won by letting-alone. ~ How do I know that it is so? ~ By this. ~ The more prohibitions there are, the more ritual avoidances, ~ The poorer the people will be. ~ The more 'sharp weapons' there are, ~ The more benighted will the whole land grow. ~ The more cunning craftsmen there are, ~ The more pernicious contrivances will be invented. ~ The more laws are promulgated, ~ The more thieves and bandits there will be. ~ Therefore a sage has said: ~ So long as I 'do nothing' the people will of themselves be transformed. ~ So long as I love quietude, the people will of themselves go straight. ~ So long as I act only by inactivity the people will of themselves become prosperous. ~ So long as I have no wants the people will of themselves return to the 'state of the Uncarved Block'.

[57c18t] Richard John Lynn ~ If one governs the state with governance, he will use the military with perversity. ~ It is by tending to matters without conscious purpose that one takes all under Heaven as his charge. ~ How do I know that this is so? ~ It is by this: ~ The more all under Heaven are beset with taboos and prohibitions, the poorer the common folk grow. ~ The more the common folk are beset with sharp instruments, the more muddled the state becomes. ~ The more people have skill and cleverness, the more often perverse [ji] things will happen. ~ The more laws and ordinances are displayed, the more thieves and robbers there will be. ~ Thus the sage says: ~ I engage in no conscious effort, and the common folk undergo moral transformation spontaneously. ~ I love quietude, and the common folk govern themselves. ~ I tend to matters without conscious purpose, and the common folk enrich themselves. ~ I am utterly free of desire, and the common folk achieve pristine simplicity by themselves.

[57c19t] Lin Yutang ~ THE ART OF GOVERNMENT ~ Rule a kingdom by the Normal. ~ Fight a battle by (abnormal) tactics of surprise. ~ Win the world by doing nothing. ~ How do I know it is so? ~ Through this: ~ The more prohibitions there are, ~ The poorer the people become. ~ The more sharp weapons there are, ~ The greater the chaos in the state. ~ The more skills of technique, ~ The more cunning things are produced. ~ The greater the number of statutes, ~ The greater the number of thieves and brigands. ~ Therefore the Sage says: ~ I do nothing and the people are reformed of themselves. ~ I love quietude and the people are righteous of themselves. ~ I deal in no business and the people grow rich by themselves. ~ I have no desires and the people are simple and honest by themselves.

[57c20t] Victor H. Mair ~ Rule the state with uprightness, ~ Deploy your troops with craft, ~ Gain all under heaven with noninterference. ~ How do I know this is actually so? ~ Now, ~ The more taboos under heaven, the poorer the people; ~ The more clever devices people have, the more confused the state and ruling house; ~ The more knowledge people have, the more strange things spring up; ~ The more legal affairs are given prominence, the more numerous bandits and thieves. ~ For this reason, ~ The sage has a saying: ~ "I take no action, yet the people transform themselves; ~ I am fond of stillness, yet the people correct themselves; ~ I do not interfere in affairs, yet the people enrich themselves; ~ I desire not to desire, yet the people of themselves become simple as unhewn logs."

[57c21t] Tolbert McCarroll ~ Govern the country by being straightforward. ~ Wage war by being crafty. ~ Win all under heaven by not meddling. ~ How do I know that this is so? ~ By what is within me. ~ The more restrictions there are, ~ the poorer are the people. ~ The more pointed the people's weapons, ~ the more disorder there is in the country. ~ The more ingenious and clever the people, ~ the more strange the contrivances that appear. ~ The more laws and edicts that are posted, ~ the more thieves and robbers that arise. ~ Hence an Old One has said: ~ I act without striving and the people transform themselves. ~ I love stillness and the people straighten themselves. ~ I do not meddle and the people prosper by themselves. ~ I am free from desires and the people themselves return to the simplicity of the Uncarved Block.

[57c22t] David H. Li ~ Govern a state with orthodoxy; ~ fight a war with heterodoxy; ~ take the world with laissez-faire. ~ How do I know this is so? ~ Because: ~ The world is full of prohibitions, yet the populace is poor; ~ People are stacked with weapons, yet the states are in turmoil; ~ People are loaded with cleverness, yet strange schemes sprout; ~ Rules are stringent and well known, yet robbers and thieves abound. ~ Thus, the sage says: ~ Let me practice laissez-faire, and the populace self-develop; ~ Let me seek serenity, and the populace self-manage; ~ Let me be without fanfare, and the populace self-prosper; ~ Let me discard avarice, and the populace self-simplify.

[57c23t] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ Govern a nation with enduring justice. ~ Command troops with unpredictable moves. ~ Lead the world with empowering noninterference. ~ How do I know this to be so? ~ From witnessing the following: ~ The more restrictions there are in the world, the poorer people become. ~ The more weapons people possess, the darker nations become. ~ The more cunning and cleverness there is, the more there are anomalous things. ~ The more rules and regulations there are, the more there are thieves and robbers. ~ Therefore the sage says: ~ I take no action, and people are naturally transformed. ~ I delight in stillness, and people naturally do what is right. ~ I do not interfere, and people on their own prosper. ~ I have no greed, and people on their own return to simplicity.

[57c24т] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ Make all the weapons blunt, ~ Cut everything that is tangled, ~ Make everything that is shiny dull, ~ Mix with anything that is as humble as dust, ~ And this is called absolute equality. ~ Therefore ~ One cannot get close to it ~ Nor can one get away from it. ~ It is impossible to derive benefit from it, ~ Nor to be harmed by it. ~ It does not publicize a person's honor, ~ Nor does it publicize a person's shame. ~ Therefore it is the most exalted thing in the world.

[57c25т] Man-Ho Kwok ~ To rule a nation, use justice ~ To win a battle - cunning, ~ But remember: wu-wei is the only true way. ~ How do I know this? ~ I will explain: ~ The more rules you have, the more unhappy people are; ~ And the more weapons there are, the worse things happen. ~ The more we want luxuries, the more we abandon simplicity; ~ And the more laws you pass, the more we will break them. ~ So the sage says: ~ I do nothing, and the people come together; ~ By leaving them alone I let them be on the path; ~ By not using my power, they become rich in themselves; ~ And if I want nothing, they will return to the essence of their being.

[57c26т] Gu Zhengkun ~ Rule the state with peace and inaction; ~ Wage a war with crafty tricks; ~ Governing the world by not troubling the people. ~ How do I know it is the right way? ~ The reason is as follows: ~ The more prohibitions there are in the world, ~ The poorer the people; ~ The more weapons the people own, ~ The more chaotic the state; ~ The more skills the people have, ~ The more strange things occur; ~ The more laws and orders are issued, ~ The more thieves and robbers there are. ~ Thus the sage says, ~ If I prefer inaction, ~ The people will naturally crave for peace; ~ If I act little, ~ The people will be naturally rectified; ~ If I am not meddlesome, ~ The people will naturally become rich; ~ If I get rid of desires, ~ The people will naturally become simple.

[57c27т] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ Govern the nation with correctness. ~ Resort to arms with surprise manoeuvres. ~ Obtain the land under Heaven without tiring out the people. ~ How do I know this? ~ Because: ~ The more rules there are in the country, ~ the poorer the people will become. ~ The more power the people hold, ~ the more confused the country will become. ~ The more skills and intelligence the people possess, ~ the more valuable goods will be created and the more strict the laws will become, ~ yet the more thieves and robbers will breed. ~ That is why the sage says: ~ 'I do nothing, and the people are nurtured by themselves.' ~ 'I do not tire people and drain the treasury, and the people become rich by themselves.' ~ 'I prefer quietness, and the people behave correctly by themselves.' ~ 'I have no desire, and the people return to the simple life by themselves.' ~ 'I have no emotions, and the people become pure by themselves.'

[57c28т] Liu Qixuan ~ A nation should be governed with simplicity. ~ A war should be directed with sophistication. ~ The world should be won without any action. ~ Why should I think that? ~ Here are the reasons: ~ The more prohibitions there are, ~ The poorer people are; ~ The more weapons there are, ~ The more confused the social order is; ~ The more skills and tricks there are, ~ The more confusing machines are invented; ~ The more laws there are, ~ The more thieves there can appear. ~ That is why the wise would say: ~ "I stay idle, and the world will be naturally changed; ~ I stay quiet, and the world will be naturally restrained; ~ I do nothing, and the world will be naturally provided; ~ I desire nothing, and the world will be naturally simplified."

[57c29т] Shi Fu Hwang ~ The Art of Government ~ Lao Tze says, ~ A state may be ruled by measures of justice; ~ the military force may be handled with tactics of surprise; ~ but the world is kept in peace by freedom from action and purpose. ~ How do I know that is so? ~ Through these: ~ In the world the multiplication of prohibitive enactments increases the poverty of the people. ~ The more assertions are put into influencing the people's thinking, the greater chaos there is in the state. ~ The more acts of crafty dexterity men possess, the more cunning things are produced. ~ The larger the number of statues displayed, the more thieves and robbers there are. ~ That is why a sage has said, ~ 'I will do by acting without intent to control fate, and the people will be transformed of themselves. ~ I will be fond of keeping still, and the people will be righteous of themselves. ~ I will take no trouble about it, and the people will become rich of themselves. ~ I have no desire, and the people will strive for the pristine simplicity of themselves.'

[57c30т] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ Albeit one governs the country by rectitude, ~ And carries on wars by stratagems, ~ Yet one must rule the empire by meddling with no business. ~ The empire can always be ruled by meddling with no business. ~ Otherwise, it can never be done. ~ How do I know it is so? ~ By this: ~ The more restrictions and avoidances are in the empire, ~ The poorer become the people; ~ The more sharp implements the people keep, ~ The more confusions are in the country; ~ The more arts and crafts men have, ~ The more are fantastic things produced; ~ The more laws and regulations are given, ~ The more robbers and thieves there are. ~ Therefore the Sage says: ~ Inasmuch as I betake myself to non-action, the people of themselves become developed. ~ Inasmuch as I love quietude, the people of themselves become righteous. ~ Inasmuch as I make no fuss, the people of themselves become wealthy. ~ Inasmuch as I am free from desire, the people of themselves remain simple.

[57c31т] Paul J. Lin ~ Rule the state with rectitude. ~ Direct the army with trickery. ~ Capture the world through inactivity. ~ How can I know it shall be so? ~ By this: ~ When the world is full of taboos and prohibitions, ~ The people will become very poor. ~ When the people possess many sharp weapons, ~ The nation will become more chaotic. ~ When the people possess much craftiness, ~ Trickery will flourish. ~ When law and order become more conspicuous, ~ There will be more robbers and thieves. ~ Therefore the Sage says: ~ I do not act and the people reform themselves; ~ I love serenity and the people rectify themselves; ~ I employ inactivity and the people become prosperous themselves; ~ I have no desires and the people become simple by themselves.

[57c32т] Michael LaFargue ~ "Rule the kingdom by the norm; ~ wage war by the unexpected." ~ Take over the world by Not Working. ~ How do I know it is so? ~ By this. ~ In the world: ~ The more rules and restrictions there are, ~ the poorer the people will be. ~ The people: ~ The more 'sharp weapons' they have, ~ the more disordered the state and the clans will be. ~ Men: ~ The more clever and skillful they are, ~ the more weird things will start to happen. ~ The more you publicize rules and laws, ~ the more robbers and thieves you will have. ~ Yes, the Wise Person says: ~ I Do Nothing, ~ and the people transform themselves. ~ I love Stillness, ~ and the people bring themselves to correctness. ~ I do No Work, ~ and the people enrich themselves. ~ I have no desires, ~ and the people by themselves become Simple.

[57c33т] Cheng Lin ~ When one rules the State with uprightness, and uses stratagem in war, ~ he cannot hope to win over a whole Empire. ~ How do I know that this is true? ~ Because of the following: ~ When there are many prohibitory statutes in the Empire, the people become the more impoverished. ~ When the people possess numerous weapons of war, the State becomes more chaotic. ~ When men possess much skill and cunning, there is an increase of fanciful goods. ~ When there is a profusion of laws and regulations, banditry becomes rife. ~ Therefore, one of the Sages said: ~ "I abide by inaction, and the people reform themselves. ~ I esteem quietude, and the people rectify themselves. ~ I make no effort, and the people enrich themselves. ~ I have no desires, and the people of their own accord practise simplicity."

* * *

[57c34т] Yi Wu ~ Govern the country correctly, ~ Use the army trickily, ~ Have the world by doing nothing. ~ How can I know that is so? ~ By these: ~ The more taboos and prohibitions there are in the world, ~ the poorer the people are. ~ The more sharp weapons the people have, ~ the more chaotic the nation is. ~ The more craft and skill people have, ~ the more strange things happen. ~ The more laws and commands a nation has, ~ the more robbers and thieves there are. ~ Therefore, the sage says: ~ I am in non-action, and the people transform themselves. ~ I like to be tranquil, and the people correct themselves. ~ I do not interfere, and the people prosper naturally. ~ I have no desires, and the people return naturally to simplicity.

[57c35т] Han Hiong Tan ~ You should govern a country by moral rectitude. ~ You should fight a war by employing stratagems. ~ You should follow the principle of non-intervention to rule a country. ~ How do I know all these are going to work? ~ Let us look at the followings: ~ The more rules and regulations you establish, the more destitute the people become. ~ The more intense the machination amongst the ruling classes, the more discordant the country will become. ~ The more cunning the people, the more outlandish things they do. ~ The more laws you proclaim, the more thieves you produce. ~ Therefore, the sage says: ~ "I follow non-action, and thus my people will live harmoniously. ~ I remain calm, and thus my people become righteous. ~ I do not meddle, and thus my people become more prosperous. ~ I have no desire, and thus my people will be simple and contented."

[57c36т] Hua-Ching Ni ~ When serving the public, use upright means. ~ When commanding troops in war, employ the principle of surprise. ~ To win the world, do nothing to interfere with it. ~ Why? ~ Because the more prohibitions and inhibitions that are imposed on people, ~ the more difficult their lives become. ~ The more destructive weapons a nation or its people possess, ~ the poorer the people of that country become, ~ and the greater is the chaos that occurs in the world. ~ The more clever and crafty people become, ~ the more often strange things happen. ~ The more laws and ordinances there are, ~ the more criminals and dissidents will arise. ~ Therefore, the ancient sages of natural virtue said: ~ "I do nothing, and people's contention dissolves by itself. ~ I enjoy serenity, and people rectify themselves. ~ I make no effort, and people enrich themselves. ~ I have no desire, and people return to simplicity."

[57c37т] Chang Chung-yuan ~ Guide the country through tranquillity. ~ Engage in war with rare operations. ~ Win over the world through non-action. ~ How am I aware that this ought to be so? ~ Because of this, the more restrictions and limitations there are, ~ The more impoverished men will be. ~ The more arms men possess, ~ The more disordered the country will be. ~ The more scheming and deceitful men are, ~ The more strange things will occur. ~ The more rules and precepts are enforced, ~ The more bandits and crooks will be produced. ~ Hence, we have the words of the wise: ~ Through my non-action, ~ Men are spontaneously transformed. ~ Through my quiescence, ~ Men spontaneously become tranquil. ~ Through my non-interfering, ~ Men spontaneously increase their wealth. ~ Through my non-willing, ~ Men spontaneously return to original simplicity.

[57c38т] Henry Wei ~ Atmosphere of Innocence ~ Ch'un Feng ~ Use justice to rule a country; ~ Use strange tactics to conduct battles; ~ Use non-assertion to win the world. ~ How do I know this should be the case? ~ By this - ~ When the world abounds in prohibitions, ~ The people will become impoverished. ~ When men have plenty of weapons in hand, ~ The state will be in great confusion. ~ When men have plenty of techniques and skills, ~ Queer articles will crop up in abundance. ~ When laws and decrees are numerous and manifest, ~ Bandits and robbers will increase and multiply. ~ Therefore, the Sage has said - ~ I practice non-interference, ~ And the people reform themselves; ~ I love to be quiescent, ~ And the people become upright; ~ I do not assert myself, ~ And the people become wealthy; ~ I cherish no desires, ~ And the people become simple and innocent.

[57c39т] Ha Poong Kim ~ "Govern the state according to what is right; ~ Use the troops by surprise tactics." ~ But take all under Heaven through no-action. ~ How do I know this is so? ~ Because of this - ~ The more bans and taboos under Heaven, ~ The poorer the people; ~ The more sharp instruments in the hands of the people, ~ The more trouble for the state; ~ The more skills the people have, ~ The more fanciful inventions appear; ~ The more laws and decrees, ~ The more thieves and robbers. ~ Therefore the sage says: ~ "I engage in no-action, and the people transform of themselves; ~ I love stillness, and the people correct themselves; ~ I engage in no work, and the people prosper of themselves; ~ I am free from desire, and the people turn into the uncarved block of themselves."

* * *

[57c40т] Tao Huang ~ Using the right lawfulness to govern the country. ~ Using unexpectancy to conduct the battle. ~ Using disengagement to take over the world. ~ How do I know this is so? ~ Thus. ~ The more prohibitions there are in the world, the poorer people will be. ~ The more destructive weapons people have, the more chaotic the nation will become. ~ The more know-how people have, the more bizarre things will appear. ~ The more rules and demands that flourish, the more thefts there will be. ~ Therefore the sage says: ~ When I am inactive, people transform themselves. ~ When I abide in stillness, people organize themselves lawfully. ~ When I am disengaged, people enrich themselves. ~ When I choose nondesire, people remain simple.

[57c41т] Tang Zi-chang ~ By positive policy rule the kingdom, by negative strategy conduct the war and by unselfish design lead the world. ~ How do we know that is so? ~ By this: ~ Where there were more taboos and inhibitions in the country, the general public was getting poorer and poorer. ~ Where there were more new tools and techniques in the hands of certain people, there were more confusions and injustices in the government. ~ The more laws and decrees were issued, the more robbers and crooks were propagated. ~ Thus a Sage ruler said: ~ "If I do not interfere, the people will cultivate themselves naturally. ~ If I love to be inactive, the people will govern themselves automatically. ~ If I do not look for display, the people will enrich themselves automatically. ~ If I have no excessive desires, the people will return themselves to the Pure Matter naturally. ~ If I have no emotional needs, the people will tranquilize themselves automatically."

[57c42т] Wing-tsit Chan ~ Govern the state with correctness. ~ Operate the army with surprise tactics. ~ Administer the empire by engaging in no activity. ~ How do I know that this should be so? ~ Through this: ~ The more taboos and prohibitions there are in the world, ~ The poorer the people will be. ~ The more sharp weapons the people have, ~ The more troubled the state will be. ~ The more cunning and skill man possesses, ~ The more vicious things will appear. ~ The more laws and orders are made prominent, ~ The more thieves and robbers there will be. ~ Therefore the sage says: ~ I take no action and the people of themselves are transformed. ~ I love tranquility and the people of themselves become correct. ~ I engage in no activity and the people of themselves become prosperous. ~ I have no desires and the people of themselves become simple.

сильнее смута в государстве. ~ Чем больше люди искусны в ремесле своём, тем больше творится неправедных дел. ~ Чем лучше знают законы, тем больше становится воров и бандитов. ~ Поэтому мудрец говорит: ~ "Я пребываю в недеянии, а народ сам преображается. ~ Я люблю покой, а народ сам исправляется. ~ Я не предпринимаю действий, а народ сам богатеет. ~ Я не имею желаний, а народ сам опрощается".

[57c93т] Е. А. Торчинов ~ Прямотою упорядочивается государство, хитростью война ведется, и бездействием берется Поднебесная. ~ Откуда знаю я, что это так и есть? ~ Отсюда знаю это: ~ Когда в Поднебесной много запретов и ограничений, народ нищает и беднеет; ~ когда у людей много смертоносного оружия, государство и семья погружаются в брань и смуты; ~ когда среди людей много искусников-умельцев, влечение к дорогим диковинам растет; ~ когда закон издается за законом, разбойники и воры множатся на воле. ~ Поэтому совершенный мудрец так говорит: ~ Я буду пребывать в недеянии, ~ и народ начнет самоизменяться. ~ Я буду любить покой, ~ и народ исправится сам собой. ~ Я буду в бездействии, ~ и народ тогда разбогатеет. ~ Я буду в бесстрастии, ~ и народ сам вернется к исконной простоте.

[57c97т] В. В. Малявин ~ Государством управляй прямо, ~ На войне применяй хитрость ~ И посредством бездействия завладевай Поднебесной. ~ Отчего мне известно, что это так? ~ Вот отчего: ~ Чем больше в мире запретов, тем люди беднее. ~ Чем больше народ знает о выгоде, тем больше в царстве смуты. ~ Чем больше в народе мастерства и сноровки, тем больше бездельниц. ~ Чем больше в стране законов и приказов, тем больше разбойников. ~ Посему премудрые люди говорили: ~ Я не действую, а люди сами становятся лучше, ~ Я приверженпокою, а люди сами себя выправляют, ~ Я не вмешиваюсь в дела, а люди сами богатеют, ~ Я не имею желаний, а люди сами блюдут простоту.

[57c98т] Б. Б. Виногродский ~ Посредством нормального упорядочивают государство. ~ Посредством аномального применяют оружие. ~ Посредством отсутствия дел-ситуаций овладевают Поднебесной. ~ Каким образом сущность моя знает, что это так? ~ А так оно и есть. ~ В Поднебесной растет количество запретов и табу, а народ становится беднее. ~ У народа увеличивается количество полезной утвари, а в государстве и семье все больше беспорядка. ~ Чем больше у людей мастерства и хитрых приемов, тем больше возникает аномальных явлений. ~ Чем больше издают указов и распоряжений, тем больше появляется воров и разбойников. ~ Причинность: ~ Человек мудрости говорит: ~ Я - в отсутствии осуществления, и народ сам изменяется. ~ Я - в стремлении к покою, и народ сам себя исправляет. ~ Я - в отсутствии дел-ситуаций, и народ сам богатеет. ~ Я - в отсутствии стремлений, и народ сам приходит к изначальной целостности.

[58c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ When the government is muddled and confused, ~ The people are genuine and sincere. ~ When the government is discriminate and clear, ~ The state is crafty and cunning. ~ Disaster is that on which good fortune depends. ~ Good fortune is that in which disaster's concealed. ~ Who knows where it will end? ~ {For} there is no [fixed] "correct." ~ The "correct" {turns into the "deviant"}; ~ And "good" turns into {"evil."} ~ {People's} state of confusion ~ Has certainly existed for a long time. ~ Therefore be square but don't cut; ~ Be sharp but don't stab; ~ Be straightforward but not unrestrained; ~ Be bright but don't dazzle.

[58c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ WHERE the ruler is mum, mum, ~ The people are simple and happy. ~ Where the ruler is sharp, sharp, ~ The people are wily and discontented. ~ Bad fortune is what good fortune leans on, ~ Good fortune is what bad fortune hides in. ~ Who knows the ultimate end of this process? ~ Is there no norm of right? ~ Yet what is normal soon becomes abnormal, ~ And what is auspicious soon turns ominous. ~ Long indeed have the people been in a quandary. ~ Therefore, the Sage squares without cutting, carves without disfiguring, straightens without straining, enlightens without dazzling.

[58c03т] D. C. Lau ~ When the government is muddled ~ The people are simple; ~ When the government is alert ~ The people are cunning. ~ It is on disaster that good fortune perches; ~ It is beneath good fortune that disaster crouches. ~ Who knows the limit? Does not the straightforward exist? ~ The straightforward changes again into the crafty, and the good changes again into the monstrous. ~ Indeed, it is long since the people were perplexed. ~ Therefore the sage is square-edged but does not scrape, ~ Has corners but does not jab, ~ Extends himself but not at the expense of others, ~ Shines but does not dazzle.

[58c04т] R. L. Wing ~ If the administration is subdued, The people are sincere. ~ If the administration is exacting, The people are deficient. ~ Misfortune! Good fortune supports it. ~ Good Fortune! Misfortune hides within. ~ Who knows where it ends? ~ Is there no order? ~ Order can revert to the unusual; ~ Good can revert to the abnormal; ~ And people indeed are bewildered For a long, long time. ~ Thus Evolved Individuals are Square without dividing; ~ Honest without offending; ~ Straightforward without straining; ~ Bright without dazzling.

[58c05т] Ren Jiyu ~ When the government is generous, the people will be honest and loyal; ~ When the government is severe, the people will complain. ~ O Misery! Happiness lies by its side; ~ O Happiness! Misery lurks beneath it. ~ Who knows the destination? ~ There is no master indeed. ~ The normal can at anytime become the abnormal, ~ The good can at anytime become the evil. ~ The delusion of the people (on this point) has persisted for a long time. ~ Therefore, the sage is right as a square, but not stiff, has edges, but cuts nobody. ~ He is straightforward, but not aggressive, bright, but not dazzling.

[58c06т] Gia-fu Feng ~ When the country is ruled with a light hand ~ The people are simple. ~ When the country is ruled with severity, ~ The people are cunning. ~ Happiness is rooted in misery. ~ Misery lurks beneath happiness. ~ Who knows what the future holds? ~ There is no honesty. ~ Honesty becomes dishonest. ~ Goodness becomes witchcraft. ~ Man's bewitchment lasts for a long time. ~ Therefore the sage is sharp but not cutting, ~ Pointed but not piercing, ~ Straightforward but not unrestrained, ~ Brilliant but not blinding.

[58c07т] Lok Sang Ho ~ When the government appears dull and boring, ~ The people enjoy a good and rich life. ~ When the government appears clever and innovative, ~ The people suffer a shortage. ~ What appears to be misfortune may pave the way for fortune. ~ What appears to be fortune may pave the way for misfortune. ~ Who knows the absolute? ~ The right that we know is often not right. ~ What is right may prove to be wrong. ~ What is good may prove to be bad. ~ Mankind has been lost in the maze since the old days. ~ The Sage has an open mind and is unpretentious. ~ He is incorruptible and will not succumb to bribery. ~ He is straight but is not arrogant. ~ He shines but not dazzles.

[58c08т] Xiaolin Yang ~ When the government is low-key, the people are sturdy and simple; ~ When the government is harsh, the people are selfish and heartless. ~ Fortune is followed by disaster, ~ Disaster is followed by fortune. ~ Who knows the ultimate outcome of this cycle? No one knows. ~ The straight can become crooked; the kind can become wicked. ~ People have not figured out this puzzle for a long time. ~ So the great men were square but not rigid, self-abstaining but did not hurt people, upright but not blunt, glowing but not blinding.

[58c09т] Walter Gorn Old, LETTING OTHERS REFORM THEMSELVES ~ A free and generous government gives the people a chance to develop. ~ When the government is rigid and exacting the people are cramped and miserable. ~ Misery is but the shadow of happiness. ~ Happiness is but the cloak of misery. ~ When will there be an end to them? ~ If we dispense with rectitude, distortion will assert itself; and what was good in its way will give place to what is evil. ~ Verily the people have been under a cloud for a long time. ~ Therefore the wise man is full of rectitude, but he does not chip and carve at others. ~ He is just, but does not admonish others. ~ He is upright, but he does not straighten others. ~ He is enlightened, but he does not offend with his brightness.

[58c10т] James Legge ~ The government that seems the most unwise, ~ Oft goodness to the people best supplies; ~ That which is meddling, touching everything, ~ Will work but ill, and disappointment bring. ~ Misery! - happiness is to be found by its side! ~ Happiness! - misery lurks beneath it! ~ Who knows what either will come to in the end? ~ Shall we then dispense with correction? ~ The (method of) correction shall by a turn become distortion, and the good in it shall by a turn become evil. ~ The delusion of the people (on this point) has indeed subsisted for a long time. ~ Therefore the sage is (like) a square which cuts no one (with its angles); ~ (like) a corner which injures no one (with its sharpness). ~ He is straightforward, but allows himself no license; ~ he is bright, but does not dazzle.

[58c11т] David Hinton ~ When government is pensive and withdrawn people are pure and simple. ~ When government is confident and effective people are cunning and secretive. ~ Prosperity springs from calamity and calamity lurks in prosperity. ~ Who knows where it will all end ~ without leaders of principle? ~ And principle always reverts to sinister trickery, ~ virtue to depraved sorcery. ~ People have been confused for such a long long time. ~ That's why a sage is sharp but never cuts, ~ austere but never grates, ~ forthright but never provokes, ~ bright but never dazzles.

[58c12т] Chichung Huang ~ If your government is muddled, ~ Your people will be simple; ~ If your government is exacting, ~ Your people will be daring. ~ Against misfortune leans good fortune; ~ In good fortune lurks misfortune. ~ Who knows its extremity? ~ There is no norm. ~ Normal reverts to abnormal; ~ Good reverts to evil. ~ The perplexity of rulers ~ Has been long indeed! ~ Hence, be square without cutting, ~ Angular without pricking; ~ Straight without binding; ~ Bright without dazzling.

[58c13т] Ellen M. Chen ~ When the government (cheng) is dull, ~ Its people are wholesome; ~ When the government is efficient (ch'a), ~ Its people are deficient (ch'üeh). ~ Calamities (huo) are what blessings depend on, ~ In blessings are latent calamities (huo). ~ Who knows where is the turning point (chi)? ~ Because there is no longer the normal (cheng), ~ The normal reverts and appears as the strange (ch'i), ~ The good reverts and appears as the uncanny. ~ Rulers (jen) have lost their way, ~ For a long stretch of days. ~ Therefore the sage is square but not cutting (ko), ~ Sharp but not injurious, ~ Straight but not overreaching, ~ Bright (kuang) but not dazzling.

[58c14т] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ If a ruler [is diligent but] keeps a low profile, his people shall remain simple and truthful; ~ If a ruler is [harsh and] censorious, his people shall be deceptive and dishonest. ~ Misfortune may be a blessing in disguise; ~ [On the other hand] under the surface of good luck may lie the seeds of misfortune. ~ [Accordingly, the question is] how can we be certain that ultimately an occurrence is [leading to good or to bad] consequence? ~ If there is no standard for righteousness: ~ What is [righteously] right-minded may be turned upside down to be called weird; ~ What is [righteously] good may be distorted to be referred to as sorcerous. ~ People definitely have had been bewitched [and perplexed by such trickery] for a long time already! ~ Accordingly: ~ A Sage keeps his integrity fair and square, still he does not truncate (impinge on) rights of others; ~ He is scrupulous and thrifty, yet he hurts nobody; ~ He is straightforward, but immune from being unrestrained [so he does not harm innocent people]; ~ He is open but free from being showy.

[58c15т] Tien Cong Tran ~ Where the government is dull, the people are simple. ~ Where the government is sharp, the people are deceitful. ~ Bad fortune is what good fortune leans on. ~ Good fortune is what bad fortune hides in. ~ Who knows the ultimate end of bad fortune and good fortune? ~ Is there the right? ~ The right changes into the strange. ~ The good changes into the monstrous. ~ Long indeed have the people been ignorant. ~ Therefore, the sage squares without cutting, sharpens without disfiguring, straightens without straining, enlightens without dazzling.

[58c16т] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ If the policy is liberal, people are honest. ~ If the policy is stringent, people play tricks. ~ Misfortune is where fortune can build upon. ~ Fortune is where misfortune can loom. ~ Who knows where is the extreme? ~ There is no such a thing as normal. ~ Normalcy can become an anomaly. ~ Good can become evil. ~ This has puzzled people for a long time. ~ This is why the sage is righteous yet not annoying. ~ He is just, yet not harsh. ~ He is outspoken, yet not offensive. ~ He is shiny, yet not glaring.

[58c17t] Arthur Waley ~ When the ruler looks depressed the people will be happy and satisfied; ~ When the ruler looks lively and self-assured the people will be carping and discontented. ~ 'It is upon bad fortune that good fortune leans, upon good fortune that bad fortune rests.' ~ But though few know it, there is a bourn where there is neither right nor wrong; ~ In a realm where every straight is doubled by a crooked, and every good by an ill, surely mankind has gone long enough astray? ~ Therefore the Sage: ~ Squares without cutting, ~ Shapes the corners without lopping, ~ Straightens without stretching, ~ Gives forth light without shining.

[58c18t] Richard John Lynn ~ When the government is completely muddled, the common folk become pure and simple. ~ When the government conducts meticulous scrutiny, the common folk become devious and inscrutable. ~ It is on disaster that good fortune depends; ~ it is in good fortune that disaster lurks. ~ Who understands what the very best is? ~ It is to have no government at all! ~ Correctness turns into perversion. ~ Goodness turns into deviancy. ~ The people's confusion has certainly lasted a long time. ~ This is why the sage is square but does not cut, ~ He is pointed but does not stab. ~ He is straight but does not align. ~ He is bright but does not shine.

[58c19t] Lin Yutang ~ LAZY GOVERNMENT ~ When the government is lazy and dull, ~ Its people are unspoiled; ~ When the government is efficient and smart, ~ Its people are discontented. ~ Disaster is the avenue of fortune, ~ (And) fortune is the concealment for disaster. ~ Who would be able to know its ultimate results? ~ (As it is), there would never be the normal, ~ But the normal would (immediately) revert to the deceitful, ~ And the good revert to the sinister. ~ Thus long has mankind gone astray! ~ Therefore the Sage is square (has firm principles), but not cutting (sharp-cornered), ~ Has integrity, but does not hurt (others), ~ Is straight, but not high-handed, ~ Bright, but not dazzling.

[58c20t] Victor H. Mair ~ When government is anarchic, the people are honest; ~ When government is meddlesome, the state is lacking. ~ Disaster is that whereon good fortune depends, ~ Good fortune is that wherein disaster lurks. ~ Who knows their limits? ~ When there is no uprightness, correct reverts to crafty, good reverts to gruesome. ~ The delusion of mankind, ~ How long have been its days! ~ For this reason, be ~ Square but not cutting, ~ Angular but not prickly, ~ Straight but not arrogant, ~ Bright but not dazzling.

[58c21t] Tolbert McCarroll ~ When the government is unseen ~ the people are simple and happy. ~ When the government is lively ~ the people are cunning and discontented. ~ On misery perches happiness. ~ Beneath happiness crouches misery. ~ Who knows when this will cease? ~ The straight changes into the crooked. ~ The good becomes the ominous. ~ Surely the people have been confused for a long time. ~ Therefore, ~ the True Person squares without cutting, carves without hacking, straightens without dislocating, gives forth light without blinding.

[58c22t] David H. Li ~ When policies are broad, the populace live simply; ~ When policies are rigid, the populace complain roundly. ~ Facing disaster, is fortune not in the wing? ~ Experiencing fortune, is disaster not ready to spring? ~ Who knows the limit? ~ There is no norm. ~ Orthodoxy turns into heterodoxy, good turns into evil. ~ People have been bewildered long. ~ Thus, ~ the sage is square without infringing upon others, ~ fair without harming others, ~ straight without imposing upon others, ~ bright without overshadowing others.

[58c23t] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ When the government is inwardly contained and disciplined, ~ The people become wholesome and good. ~ When the government is outwardly demanding and exacting, ~ The people become tense and cunning. ~ Fortune rests on misfortune. ~ Misfortune hides in fortune. ~ There is no end to their perpetual cyclic interchange. ~ Likewise, there is nothing that is permanently fitting. ~ What is fitting eventually becomes unfitting. ~ What is proper eventually becomes improper. ~ Not knowing the complementarity inherent in cyclic interchange, ~ People's delusion of permanence tends to last for a long time. ~ Thus, knowing the dynamic balance existing in complementarity, ~ The sage chooses what is right without being divisive, ~ Points out what is true without being critical, ~ Straightens out distortions without overextending them, ~ Enlightens others without dazzling them.

[58c24t] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ Although the wise man rules the country with integrity, ~ And wages war cunningly, ~ He who wishes to rule the empire ~ Must not interfere with anything. ~ His wish is unattainable in any other way. ~ How do I know this? ~ Thus: ~ The more limitations and prohibitions there are, ~ The more poor people there will be. ~ The more weapons people possess, ~ The more riots there will be throughout the country. ~ The more artists and artisans there are among the people, ~ The greater the desire to create things that belong to the imagination. ~ The more rules and regulations there are, ~ The more robbers and thieves there will be. ~ Therefore the sage says: ~ When I choose non-action of my own accord, ~ The people reach the path of their own accord. ~ When I love peace and quiet of my own accord, ~ The people behave with integrity of their own accord. ~ When I desist from all occupation of my own accord, ~ The people become very wealthy of their own accord. ~ When I am free of all desire of my own accord, ~ The people remain simple of their own accord.

[58c25t] Man-Ho Kwok ~ 'If you govern with a generous hand - ~ then your people will be good people. ~ But if your system is too constricting ~ then your people will outwit you ...' ~ Good fortune, we say, can come from disaster: ~ And the reverse is true as well. ~ Who knows where all this will lead? ~ Honesty can flip into deceit in a moment, ~ People trying to be good can fall into the dark ~ And it can take them years to get out of it. ~ So the sage is like a razor, but he doesn't cut ~ He is straight as a die, but not pointedly so - ~ He is bright, but not blindingly so ...

[58c26t] Gu Zhengkun ~ When the governor is magnanimous, ~ The people will become simple; ~ When the governor is harsh, ~ The people will become cunning. ~ Disaster hides itself behind good fortune; ~ Good fortune leans against disaster. ~ Who knows the secret? ~ There is no definite answer. ~ The normal changes into the abnormal; ~ The good changes into the evil. ~ People have been long perplexed. ~ Thus the sage is square and upright ~ But does not wound the people; ~ He is edged but does not cut the people; ~ He is candid but does not behave wantonly; ~ He gives light but does not dazzle.

[58c27t] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ When the government is unobtrusive, the people will be simple and honest. ~ When the government is dictatorial, the people will be seized with panic. ~ Fortune depends on misfortune. ~ Misfortune is hidden in fortune. ~ He who knows how to stay within the limits will not have misfortune. ~ Correctness will lead to deceit. ~ Good will lead to evil. ~ Nothing can remain always the same. ~ People have been confused by this since ancient times. ~ That is why the sage ~ behaves correctly without hurting others, ~ behaves honestly without damaging others, ~ behaves straightforwardly without vilifying others, ~ behaves brightly without dazzling others.

[58c28t] Liu Qixuan ~ If the government seems dark and tolerant, ~ The people will be honest and friendly; ~ If the government seems bright and sophisticated, ~ The people will be sly and cold-hearted. ~ What is bad goes with what is good; ~ What is good lies in what is bad. ~ Who can tell the exact difference ~ When all factors are considered? ~ The positive changes into the negative ~ And the negative changes into the positive. ~ Changing over and over again is the action of evil souls. ~ Such action has long been a confusing force in the world. ~ The wise person therefore prefers to be a simple square ~ That points in no directions, ~ A cutting tool that has no edge, ~ A straight line that goes nowhere, ~ And a light source that causes no fire.

[58c29t] Shi Fu Hwang ~ An Easy Government ~ Lao Tze says, ~ When the government is dull and drowsy, its people are simple and sincere. ~ When the government is sharp and shrewd, its people are dishonest and deceitful. ~ Disaster is that by which side fortune is to be found. ~ Fortune is that beneath which disaster lurks. ~ Who would be able to know its ultimate results? ~ If a king of men cannot dispense with correction, correct subjects will in their turn become distorted, and a good government will in its turn become evil. ~ The delusion of the ruler on this point has indeed subsisted for a long time. ~ Therefore the sage inherits correctitude like a square symbol, but punishes no one. ~ He inherits honest property, but tells no tales. ~ He is straightforward, but allows himself no license. ~ He is bright, but does not dazzle.

[58c30t] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ When the government is blunt and inactive, the people will be happy and prosperous; ~ When the government is discriminative, the people will be dissatisfied and restless. ~ It is upon misery that happiness rests; ~ It is under happiness that misery lies. ~ Who then can know the supremacy (good government)? ~ Only when the government does no rectifying. ~ Otherwise, rectitude will again become stratagem, ~ And good become evil. ~ Men have been ignorant of this, since long ago. ~ Therefore the Sage is square but does not cut others; ~ He is angled but does not chip others; ~ He is straight but does not stretch others; ~ He is bright but does not dazzle others.

[58c31t] Paul J. Lin ~ When the government is sluggish and dull, ~ The people are honest and content; ~ When the government is discriminating and exacting, ~ The people are wily and restless. ~ Calamity is what good fortune depends on. ~ Good fortune is what calamity hides in. ~ Who knows their utmost? ~ Is it not better to have no rectitude? ~ Rectitude returns to trickery; ~ And goodness returns to evil. ~ The people's delusion has long existed. ~ Therefore, the Sage is square but not cutting; ~ is honest but does not hurt; ~ is straight but does not bully; ~ is bright but does not shine.

[58c32t] Michael LaFargue ~ When the ruler is dull and incompetent, ~ the people are pure and simple. ~ When the ruler is sharp and alert, ~ the people are a bad lot. ~ "Bad luck: good luck depends on it; ~ good luck: bad luck hides in it." ~ Who knows where this ends? ~ There is no norm. ~ What accords with the norm turns around and becomes weird; ~ what is excellent turns around and becomes ominous. ~ "People's blindness - ~ it has been going on so long now." ~ And so the Wise Person: ~ Is square and honest but does not cut, ~ is pointed and exact but does not hurt, ~ is straight and direct but not tactless, ~ shines but does not dazzle.

[58c33t] Cheng Lin ~ When the government is simple, the people are honest. ~ When the government is complicate, the people are wily. ~ What one calls calamity is often a fortune under disguise. ~ What one calls fortune is often a cause of calamity. ~ Who knows what the final outcome will be? ~ How can there be absolute right! ~ The right may turn out to be wrong. ~ How can there be absolute goodness! ~ The good may turn out to be evil. ~ Indeed, men have been under a delusion for such a long time. ~ The Sage, ~ though he is strict in his own conduct, does not require other men to conform; ~ though he is honest, does not hurt other men; ~ though he is upright, does not condemn other men; ~ though he is glorious, he does not dazzle other men.

[58c34t] Yi Wu ~ When the government is obscure and withdrawn, ~ The people are simple and honest. ~ When the government inspects and reinspects, ~ The people lack [morality and virtue]. ~ Bad fortune is what good fortune depends on; ~ Good fortune is what bad fortune hides in. ~ Who knows the ultimate end? ~ There is no norm. ~ Normality turns out to be odd; ~ Goodness turns out to be bad. ~ People's confusion has been long. ~ Therefore, the sage is ~ upright but not cutting, ~ incorruptible but not harmful, ~ straight but not reckless, ~ bright but not dazzling.

[58c35t] Han Hiong Tan ~ When the government is magnanimous, the people are contented and unsophisticated. ~ When the government is overbearing and mean-spirited, the people are resentful and miserable. ~ Whenever calamity occurs, boon is also lurking around the corner. ~ Whenever good fortune strikes, misfortune is always stalking in its shadow. ~ Nobody will ever know how things will end in any given situation, as there are no fixed patterns. ~ Sometimes, a normal affair can turn out to become exceptionally eventful. ~ Sometimes, an apparently good thing can go terribly wrong. ~ For a very long time, these things continue to befuddle the ordinary people. ~ Nevertheless, the sage is always sharp but not cutting. ~ He is incorruptible but not contemptuous of others. ~ He is upright and direct but not repugnant. ~ He is brilliant but not dazzling.

[58c36t] Hua-Ching Ni ~ When the government does not interfere, the people are simple and happy. ~ When the government does interfere, the people are tense and cunning. ~ Disaster is what blessing perches on. ~ Blessing is where disaster abides. ~ Who can say what the ultimate end of all possibilities will be? ~ Appropriate means soon become unfitting. ~ Good means soon turn to evil. ~ Long indeed have the people been perplexed by the endless, topsy-turvy movement of life. ~ Therefore, one of subtle virtue dissolves and eliminates the vicious cycle of duality. ~ He may have sharp corners, but he does not jab. ~ He may extend himself, but not at the expense of others. ~ He may shine, but he does not dazzle.

[58c37t] Chang Chung-yuan ~ When the country is governed through simplicity and leniency, ~ The people are genuine and honest. ~ When the country is governed through harshness and sharp investigation, ~ The people are more deceitful and dishonest. ~ From misfortune, good fortune is derived. ~ In good fortune, misfortune is conceived. ~ Who can determine the ultimate truth? ~ Or is there no ultimate truth at all? ~ As truth often turns out to be untruth, ~ Goodness often turns out to be evil. ~ This has long confused the people. ~ Thus, when the wise deals with things he is firm in his principles, ~ Yet not sharp. ~ He is pure, yet not harmful. ~ He is straightforward, yet not violent. ~ He is illuminated, yet not glittery.

[58c38t] Henry Wei ~ Transformation Without Friction ~ Shun Hua ~ When the government is shrouded in gloom, ~ The people will be simple and honest. ~ When the government is sharp and officious, ~ The people will get disgusted and discontented. ~ Misfortune is what fortune leans on; ~ Fortune is where misfortune conceals itself. ~ Who can know the ultimate result? ~ Is there no justice? ~ Anyway, justice will become injustice again, ~ And good will turn into evil once more. ~ Mankind has been thus deluded for a long time. ~ That's why the Sage acts four-square, ~ But does not "cut" people to his own shape; ~ He has a high sense of integrity, ~ But is not offensive to people; ~ He is upright and straightforward, ~ But does not push people around; ~ He is bright and brilliant, ~ But does not outshine people.

[58c39t] Ha Poong Kim ~ When the government is dull, ~ The people are simple. ~ When the government is keen, ~ The people are discontented. ~ Bad fortune is what good fortune leans on; ~ Good fortune is where bad fortune lurks. ~ Who knows the fortune's end? ~ There is nothing straight. ~ What is straight turns monstrous. ~ What is beautiful turns grotesque. ~ Man has been deluded ~ From time immemorial. ~ Therefore the sage ~ Is square without cutting; ~ Honest without scraping; ~ Straight without overbearing; ~ Bright without dazzling.

[58c40t] Tao Huang ~ When the government is silent, people are sincere. ~ When the government is intrusive, the state is decisive. ~ Disaster is what fortune depends upon, ~ Fortune is what disaster subdues. ~ Who knows a final outcome? ~ There is no right lawfulness. ~ Justice tends towards the extreme. ~ Kindness tends towards evil. ~ People have been familiar with this for a long time. ~ So, ~ Be rounded without cutting. ~ Be compatible without puncturing. ~ Be straightforward without trapping. ~ Be bright without dazzling.

[58c41т] Tang Zi-chang ~ Modest, and modest will be the government, then prosperous, and prosperous will be the people! ~ Shrewd will be the government, then discontented, and discontented will be the people! ~ Catastrophe rests upon fortune. ~ Fortune underlies catastrophe. ~ Who knows the ultimate answers? ~ What is normal soon becomes abnormal. ~ What is auspicious soon becomes ominous. ~ Do away with dogmatism! ~ Indeed, it is a long, long time ago since Man lost his way of Dao! ~ Therefore, a Sage is: ~ solidly square but has no sharp corners; ~ purely austere but not harmful; ~ straightly upright but not offensive; ~ humbly modest but not submissive; ~ and harmoniously bright but not dazzling.

[58c42т] Wing-tsit Chan ~ When the government is non-discriminative and dull, ~ The people are contented and generous. ~ When the government is searching and discriminative, ~ The people are disappointed and contentious. ~ Calamity is that upon which happiness depends; ~ Happiness is that in which calamity is latent. ~ Who knows when the limit will be reached? ~ Is there no correctness (used to govern the world)? ~ Then the correct again becomes the perverse. ~ And the good will again become evil. ~ The people have been deluded for a long time. ~ Therefore the sage is as pointed as a square but does not pierce. ~ He is as acute as a knife but does not cut. ~ He is as straight as an unbent line but does not extend. ~ He is as bright as light but does not dazzle.

[58c96т] Д. П. Конисси ~ Когда не будет мелочности в управлении государством, то народ обогатится. ~ А когда управление государством мелочно, то народ обеднеет. ~ О, беда! Где благо, там и несчастье. ~ О, благо! Где беда, там и счастье. ~ Но я не знаю, где оканчивается беда и где начинается счастье. ~ Где нет правды, там люди будут относиться к правде как к чему-то странному, к добру - как к призрачному. ~ Издавна люди находятся в заблуждении, поэтому святой муж никогда не сделает им уступки. ~ Он не корыстолюбив, но ничего не раздает им. ~ Он - праведник, поэтому он ничего не сделает своевольно. ~ Хотя он - светило для всего мира, но не любит блеска.

[59c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ For ordering humanity and serving Heaven, nothing's so good as being sparing. ~ For only if you are sparing can you, therefore, early submit [to the Way]. ~ Early submission - this is called to repeatedly accumulate {Virtue}. ~ {If you repeatedly accumulate Virtue, then there is nothing you can't overcome}. ~ {When there is nothing you can't overcome}, no one knows {where} it will {end}. ~ {When no one knows where it will end}, you can possess the state. ~ And when you possess the mother of the state, you can last a very long time. ~ This is called [having] deep roots and a firm base, ~ It's the Way of long life and long-lasting vision.

[59c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ In governing a people and in serving Heaven, ~ There is nothing like frugality. ~ To be frugal is to return before straying. ~ To return before straying is to have a double reserve of virtue. ~ To have a double reserve of virtue is to overcome everything. ~ To overcome everything is to reach an invisible height. ~ Only he who has reached an invisible height can have a kingdom. ~ Only he who has got the Mother of a kingdom can last long. ~ This is the way to be deep-rooted and firm-planted in the Tao. ~ The secret of long life and lasting vision.

[59c03т] D. C. Lau ~ In ruling the people and in serving heaven it is best for a ruler to be sparing. ~ It is because he is sparing ~ That he may be said to follow the way from the start; ~ Following the way from the start he may be said to accumulate an abundance of virtue; ~ Accumulating an abundance of virtue there is nothing he cannot overcome; ~ When there is nothing he cannot overcome, no one knows his limit; ~ When no one knows his limit ~ He can possess a state; ~ When he possesses the mother of a state ~ He can then endure. ~ This is called the way of deep roots and firm stems by which one lives to see many days.

[59c04т] R. L. Wing ~ In leading people and serving Nature, ~ There is nothing better than moderation. ~ Since, indeed, moderation means yielding early; ~ Yielding early means accumulating Power. ~ When Power is accumulated, ~ Nothing is impossible. ~ When nothing is impossible, ~ One knows no limits. ~ One who knows no limits ~ Can possess the organization. ~ An organization that possesses the Mother ~ Can endure and advance. ~ This means deep roots and firm foundation: ~ Durability and longevity through observation of the Tao.

[59c05т] Ren Jiyu ~ For the rule of the people and the service of Heaven, there is nothing better than the principle of "parsimony." ~ Only by "parsimony" can one be unhurried and get ready early. ~ Being unhurried and getting ready early is what I call the repeated accumulation of the "De" of "parsimony." ~ With the repeated accumulation of De, one can victoriously overcome any obstacles. ~ The power which can overcome any obstacles is immeasurable. ~ With immeasurable power one can govern a state. ~ Having the foundation of government, one can maintain sovereignty very long. ~ This is called the Way in which one can plant the roots deep and make the stalks firm and maintain a long life.

[59c06т] Gia-fu Feng ~ In caring for others and serving heaven, ~ There is nothing like using restraint. ~ Restraint begins with giving up one's own ideas. ~ This depends on Virtue gathered in the past. ~ If there is a good store of Virtue, then nothing is impossible. ~ If nothing is impossible, then there are no limits. ~ If a man knows no limits, then he is fit to be a ruler. ~ The mother principle of ruling holds good for a long time. ~ This is called having deep roots and a firm foundation, ~ The Tao of long life and eternal vision.

[59c07т] Lok Sang Ho ~ To rule over men or to serve heaven ~ Nothing works better than following the farmer's example. ~ The farmer does his preparatory work early. ~ To be like him, one must pay attention to the accumulation of virtue. ~ That way one can overcome all difficulties. ~ That way one's ability knows no limit. ~ That way one can sustain a nation. ~ Virtue being the mother of a nation, ~ With virtue the nation can last a long time. ~ With deep roots and secure trunks, one is on the way to a long life and a long view.

[59c08т] Xiaolin Yang ~ The best thing in life is to be thrifty. ~ Only when you are thrifty, can you be prepared ahead of time. ~ Preparing ahead of time allows you to accumulate more DE. ~ Accumulating more DE allows you to overcome everything. ~ Overcoming everything allows you to have unmeasurable limits. ~ Having unmeasurable limits allows you to control a country. ~ When a country has the DAO, it can last long. ~ This is how you deepen and secure your roots, live long and last forever.

[59c09т] Walter Gorn Old, PRESERVING THE TAO ~ In ruling men and in serving Heaven there is nothing like moderation. ~ By means of it one attains to his first estate. ~ When this is attained a man is possessed of an indefinite store of virtue. ~ With such a store of virtue he will overcome everything. ~ And of this mastery there will be no limit. ~ Thus, without hindrance, he may possess the Kingdom. ~ Such a man has the mother-constitution, and will endure indefinitely. ~ He is like the plant whose roots are deep and whose stem is firm. ~ Thus may a man live long and see many days.

[59c10т] James Legge ~ For regulating the human (in our constitution) and rendering the (proper) service to the heavenly, there is nothing like moderation. ~ It is only by this moderation that there is effected an early return (to man's normal state). ~ That early return is what I call the repeated accumulation of the attributes (of the Tao). ~ With that repeated accumulation of those attributes, there comes the subjugation (of every obstacle to such return). ~ Of this subjugation we know not what shall be the limit; ~ and when one knows not what the limit shall be, he may be the ruler of a state. ~ He who possesses the mother of the state may continue long. ~ His case is like that (of the plant) of which we say that its roots are deep and its flower stalks firm: ~ - this is the way to secure that its enduring life shall long be seen.

[59c11т] David Hinton ~ To govern people and serve heaven ~ there's nothing like thrift. ~ Thrift means submitting early, ~ and submitting early means storing up Integrity. ~ Store up Integrity and nothing is beyond you. ~ Once nothing is beyond you, ~ no one knows where it will all end. ~ Once no one knows where it will end, ~ you can nurture a nation. ~ And nurturing the nation's mother too ~ you can last and last. ~ This is called rooted deep and solid, ~ the Way of long life and enduring insight.

[59c12т] Chichung Huang ~ In governing the people and serving heaven, ~ There is nothing like sparingness. ~ Sparingness alone ~ Can lead you to early submission. ~ Early submission means accumulating virtue repeatedly. ~ If you accumulate virtue repeatedly, ~ There is nothing you cannot overcome. ~ If there is nothing you cannot overcome, ~ Nobody knows its limit. ~ If nobody knows its limit, ~ You are fit to possess a state. ~ If you possess the mother of governing a state, ~ You may long endure. ~ This is called the way ~ To deepen the roots and strengthen the base, ~ To lengthen life and perpetuate vision.

[59c13т] Ellen M. Chen ~ In governing people and serving heaven, ~ Nothing is better than being sparing (se). ~ Being sparing, ~ Is called early adherence [to Tao]. ~ Adhering early, ~ Is called being heavy with accumulated te (chung chi te). ~ To be heavy with accumulated te, ~ Then [such a person is] all overcoming. ~ Being all overcoming, ~ Then there is no knowing the limit (chi). ~ Not knowing the limit, ~ One may rule a state. ~ Having the mother of a state, ~ It may last long. ~ This is called being deeply rooted and firmly founded, ~ The way to long life and enduring vision (chiu shih).

[59c14т] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ In order to carry out the heavenly Tao, it is most important for [a leader to be] well-prepared, i.e. he must know more than what is fundamentally required, before he takes charge of people's affairs; ~ In order to be so well prepared, [a leader] should start early in his life to seriously pursue [Tao and aggravated Te]; ~ [In other words] those who starts early will have accumulated adequately [knowledge and arete before he takes charge of other people's affairs]; ~ Consequently, [his well-rounded knowledge and arete] will facilitate him to overcome all kinds of obstacles; ~ It is difficult for others to determine the limits of a person who can overcome all kinds of obstacles; ~ [Therefore] one whose limits are difficult to be ascertained can be entrusted with the sovereign responsibility of a country; ~ A country which has a creative resource (mother) will last for a long time. ~ This is what I described as the [growth of the main root was perceived through its] deeper and deeper penetration into the ground, ~ So that the main root [of a tree] could support the [gradual] expansion and strengthening (hardening) of its branch roots; ~ If one would make improvement in this way, he shall look far ahead and his establishment will thus exist for a very long time.

[59c15t] Tien Cong Tran ~ In governing a people and in serving Heaven, there is nothing like frugality. ~ To be frugal is to return early. ~ To return early is to accumulate an abundance of Virtue. ~ Accumulating an abundance of Virtue, everything can be overcome. ~ Overcoming everything, the unknown height is reached. ~ He who has reached an unknown height can reign a state. ~ He who reigns a state from its root can last long. ~ This is the Way of the deep root and the firm foot, of the of long life and not-getting-old.

[59c16t] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ Frugality is the best for governing people or serving heaven. ~ With frugality, we can be prepared in advance. ~ Advanced preparation is to emphasize accumulating Te. ~ Accumulating Te, we can accomplish any endeavor. ~ Accomplishing any endeavor means there is not limit. ~ With no limit we can have a kingdom. ~ With frugality as the mother of the kingdom, the kingdom can last long. ~ This is called deep root and firm foundation. ~ With such root and foundation we can enjoy longevity.

[59c17t] Arthur Waley ~ You cannot rule men nor serve heaven unless you have laid up a store; ~ This 'laying up a store' means quickly absorbing, ~ And 'quickly absorbing' means doubling one's garnered 'power'. ~ Double your garnered power and it acquires a strength that nothing can overcome. ~ If there is nothing it cannot overcome, it knows no bounds, ~ And only what knows no bounds ~ Is huge enough to keep a whole kingdom in its grasp. ~ But only he who having the kingdom goes to the Mother ~ Can keep it long. ~ This is called the art of making the roots strike deep by fencing the trunk, of making life long by fixed staring.

[59c18t] Richard John Lynn ~ For ordering the people and serving Heaven, nothing is better than husbandry. ~ Only husbandry can be called the quick way to submission. ~ By "quick way to submission" we mean the repetitive accumulation of virtue. ~ If one repetitively accumulates virtue, there is nothing that he cannot conquer. ~ As there is nothing that he cannot conquer, no one knows the limits he can reach. ~ As no one knows his limits, he can, accordingly, keep his state. ~ If one maintains the mother of the state, he can, accordingly, long endure. ~ This we refer to as having deep roots firmly established, for it is the Dao of long life and enduring oversight.

[59c19t] Lin Yutang ~ BE SPARING ~ In managing human affairs, there is no better rule than to be sparing. ~ To be sparing is to forestall; ~ To forestall is to be prepared and strengthened; ~ To be prepared and strengthened is to be ever-victorious; ~ To be ever-victorious is to have infinite capacity; ~ He who has infinite capacity is fit to rule a country, ~ And the Mother (principle) of a ruling country can long endure. ~ This is to be firmly rooted, to have deep strength, ~ The road to immortality and enduring vision.

[59c20t] Victor H. Mair ~ To rule men and serve heaven, there is nothing like thrift. ~ Now, ~ Only through thrift can one be prepared; ~ Being prepared means having a heavy store of integrity; ~ With a heavy store of integrity, he can overcome everything. ~ Able to overcome everything, no one knows his limits; ~ If no one knows his limits, he can have the kingdom; ~ Having the mother of the kingdom, he can long endure. ~ This is called "sinking roots firm and deep, the Way of long life and lasting vision."

[59c21t] Tolbert McCarroll ~ For governing others and serving heaven there is nothing better than moderation. ~ A person who is moderate returns to the path. ~ Returning to the path brings an abundance of Virtue. ~ This good store of Virtue cannot be conquered. ~ Virtue that cannot be conquered knows no limit. ~ Only a person who has limitless Virtue is fit to lead. ~ Only the leader who possesses the Mother of the country will long endure. ~ This is called making the roots go deep by restraining the trunk. ~ Learn to focus your life and you will see many days.

[59c22t] David H. Li ~ In governing people and in taking care of the cosmos, the best is restraint. ~ With restraint, one is ever ready. ~ Ever ready, one focuses on virtue. ~ Focusing on virtue, one overcomes everything. ~ Overcoming everything, one's limit does not come into being. ~ With one's limit not coming into being, one gains the state. ~ Having the foundation to governance, one lasts long. ~ This is deep root and solid foundation. ~ This is Direction - long lasting and long living.

[59c23t] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ In governing people and serving heaven, ~ There is nothing better than thrift. ~ Thrift means expeditiously regaining balance after expending resources. ~ Expeditiously regaining balance means continually accumulating virtue. ~ Continually accumulating virtue means increasingly becoming invincible. ~ Increasingly becoming invincible means knowing that everything is possible. ~ One who knows that everything is possible is fit to govern people. ~ The mother principle of governing people holds good for a long time. ~ This is called deepening the root and firming the foundation, ~ Which is the way of long life and lasting vision.

[59c24t] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ When the government is indifferent and inactive, ~ The people will be happy and wealthy, ~ When the government discriminates and divides, ~ The people will be restless and dissatisfied. ~ Happiness is borne on the back of sorrow, ~ Sorrow dwells beneath happiness. ~ Therefore, who can know the virtues of good government? ~ Only when the government does not rectify anything. ~ Otherwise, the rectification becomes a strategy, ~ And good becomes evil. ~ People have been aware of this for a long time. ~ Therefore the sage is square and does not cut others, ~ He has a point, but he does not pierce others, ~ He is straight, but he does not straighten others, ~ He shines, but he does not dazzle others.

[59c25t] Man-Ho Kwok ~ When ruling the world and serving Heaven, ~ The sage uses simplicity in everything he does. ~ Simplicity comes from letting go of what you want. ~ If you've been true to yourself earlier in your life ~ Then te builds up in you like a well that never fails. ~ Nothing is impossible, then - and nothing can stop you. ~ And if you have no limits - then you can hold the State. ~ If the sage can find the Mother of a Nation ~ Then he will govern for a long, long time. ~ All this comes from his rootedness in the Tao, ~ The Tao of Ages, the Mountain Of Vision And Of Wings.

[59c26t] Gu Zhengkun ~ The best way to govern the state and keep in good health ~ Is to stint vitality. ~ To stint vitality means to attempt an early preparation; ~ The early preparation means to keep accumulating virtue; ~ Keep accumulating virtue and one can become all-conquering; ~ Be all-conquering and one's power will be beyond measure; ~ When one's power is beyond measure, ~ He can be entrusted with the duty of defending the state. ~ When there is the principle of governing the state, ~ The government can long endure. ~ This is called the Tao of deep roots and sturdy stems ~ By which one can live and see longer time.

[59c27t] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ The best way to rule the people and serve Heaven is to be frugal. ~ To be frugal means to return to the beginning of creation. ~ To know the beginning of creation means to accumulate virtue. ~ Accumulating virtue means to overcome everything. ~ To overcome everything means to reach the limit. ~ By reaching the limit, one can possess a kingdom. ~ When one has possessed the mother of the kingdom, ~ the kingdom will then live long. ~ This is called the deep-rooted foundation. ~ This is the way to long life.

[59c28t] Liu Qixuan ~ To govern the world to cultivate one's nature, ~ One should stick to frugality. ~ For being frugal, ~ One will not stray from the Way as others do. ~ Staying with the Way, one can accumulate earlier. ~ Since one has stayed and accumulated longer in the Way, ~ One can overcome more wanton desires. ~ When one has overcome all desires, ~ Others would by no means be able to know ~ The limits of one's abilities. ~ One can then be qualified to lead a nation. ~ With a qualified leader, a nation can be long. ~ The Way is therefore the longest-rooted system ~ That supports the longest life span.

[59c29t] Shi Fu Hwang ~ A Way To The Longevity ~ Lao Tze says, ~ If a king of men knows to regulate human affairs by using the way of Heaven, he should know there is nothing better than to be sparing. ~ It is only by being sparing that an early obedience to the Tao is effected. ~ That early obedience is what I call the repeated accumulation of the attributes. ~ With the repeated accumulation of those attributes, there comes the conquest of every obstacle in the way. ~ Of this conquest he knows not what shall be the limit, and when he knows not what the limit shall be, he is qualified to be the ruler of a state. ~ He who possesses this motherly method of governing may continue to hold his rulership. ~ This method may be compared to a giant tree with its roots deep and its flower stalks firm; ~ and it is also a way which leads to enjoy long life and eternal gazing.

[59c30t] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ In ruling men and in serving Heaven, the Sage uses only moderation. ~ By moderation alone he is able to have conformed early (to Tao). ~ This early conformity is called intensive accumulation of virtue. ~ With this intensive accumulation of virtue, there is nothing that he cannot overcome. ~ Because there is nothing that he cannot overcome, no one will be able to know his supremacy. ~ Because no one knows his supremacy he can take possession of a country. ~ Because what he does is identified with the Mother in taking possession of a country, he can long endure. ~ This means that he is deep rooted and firmly based, and knows the way of longevity and immortality.

[59c31t] Paul J. Lin ~ In governing the people and serving heaven, ~ There is nothing like thriftiness. ~ Only through thriftiness can one submit [to Tao] early; ~ Having submitted early, one accumulates virtue. ~ Having accumulated virtue, one can overcome everything. ~ Having overcome everything, one can know no limits. ~ Knowing no limits, one is able to rule a nation. ~ Possessing the mother of the nation, he may last long. ~ This is called the deep root and firm stalks, ~ And the way to longevity and everlasting vision.

[59c32t] Michael LaFargue ~ "When it comes to governing the people and serving Heaven, there's no one like a farmer." ~ Just being a farmer - ~ this means getting dressed early. ~ Getting dressed early means increasing one's store of Te; ~ increasing one's store of Te, then nothing is impossible; ~ nothing impossible, then no telling the limit; ~ no telling the limit, then one can possess the state. ~ One who possesses the Mother of the state, ~ can last a long time. ~ This means having deep roots and strong foundations, ~ the Way of 'lasting life, good eyesight into old age'.

[59c33t] Cheng Lin ~ In governing men and serving Heaven, there is nothing better than temperance. ~ In order to practise temperance, one must first follow Truth, and this means adherence to the inherent qualities. ~ When one adheres to the inherent qualities, he becomes invincible. ~ When he is invincible, he also becomes unfathomable. ~ When he is unfathomable, he also becomes one with Truth. ~ When he is one with Truth, he becomes everlasting. ~ This is the way to attain immortality.

[59c34t] Yi Wu ~ In governing people and serving Heaven, ~ There is nothing better than thrift. ~ Only by thrift can one submit early. ~ To submit early is to fully accumulate virtue. ~ With a full accumulation of virtue, ~ there is nothing that cannot be overcome. ~ With nothing that cannot be overcome, ~ one's limits are beyond knowing. ~ With limits beyond knowing, ~ one can rule a nation. ~ If one has the country's mother, ~ one can long endure. ~ This is called deep-root and firm-stalk. ~ This is the way of long life and lasting vision.

[59c35t] Han Hiong Tan ~ Nothing beats frugality in governing a country or following the way of Dao. ~ Frugality compels you to get ready in advance. ~ To get ready in advance means you start to amass virtues straightaway. ~ The accumulation of virtues will enable you to achieve practically anything in life. ~ Ability to accomplish anything means you have incredible power. ~ With this limitless power, you can govern a country. ~ Governing the country by following the way of Dao, you will endure. ~ A plant can bear great fruit only if it has deep roots. ~ Building deep roots is the way to perpetuate.

[59c36t] Hua-Ching Ni ~ In managing people and serving Heaven, there is nothing better than sparing unnecessary activities and expense. ~ To be thrifty means to return to the simple essence of life. ~ To return to the simple essence of life is to nourish subtle virtue. ~ To nourish subtle virtue is to be able to overcome any difficulty. ~ Being able to overcome difficulties, ~ one can break through all limitations. ~ One's limitlessness is derived from whole and boundless virtue. ~ The source of such virtue can support one to serve a nation. ~ Then one's benevolence can be enduring. ~ This is the way to firmly plant and deeply root oneself in the subtle path of universal integration. ~ This is the achievement of the Way of immortality.

[59c37t] Chang Chung-yuan ~ In guiding people and working according to nature, ~ It is best to follow renunciation. ~ Following renunciation means returning soon. ~ Returning soon means accumulating attainment. ~ Accumulating attainment, everything can be dealt with. ~ Dealing with everything leads to limitlessness. ~ With limitlessness, one can govern the country. ~ Governing the country through its origin leads to endurance. ~ This means that to root deeply and to plant firmly leads to longevity and eternal consciousness. ~ Therefore, governing a large nation is as simple as preparing a dish of food.

[59c38t] Henry Wei ~ Adherence to Tao ~ Shou Tao ~ In ruling men and serving Heaven, ~ Nothing is comparable to a prudent economy. ~ A prudent economy means early preparation; ~ Early preparation means further accumulation of virtue; ~ Further accumulation of virtue can subdue everything; ~ The ability to subdue everything knows no bounds; ~ Knowing no bounds (in subduing opposition) ~ Can lead to the possession of a kingdom; ~ Possession of a kingdom along with its Mother ~ Can endure a long time. ~ This is called "deep roots and strong stalks." ~ It is the way to eternal life and everlasting vision.

[59c39t] Ha Poong Kim ~ In ruling the people and serving Heaven ~ Nothing is better than being sparing. ~ Truly, being sparing ~ Means submitting early. ~ Submitting early ~ Means accumulating Te heavily. ~ If you accumulate Te heavily, ~ There will be nothing you cannot overcome. ~ If there is nothing you cannot overcome, ~ You will find no limit. ~ If you find no limit, ~ You will be fit to rule a state. ~ If you possess the mother of the state, ~ You will be long-lasting. ~ This is called deeply rooted and firmly planted. ~ It is the way of long life and lasting sight.

[59c40t] Tao Huang ~ For governing people and serving the heaven, nothing is better than frugality. ~ Only frugality enables the pre-empty measures. ~ Pre-empty measures mean a great accumulation of Action. ~ A great accumulation of Action leaves nothing to be conquered. ~ When nothing needs to be conquered, ~ No-boundary is known. ~ When no-boundary is known, it allows the country to exist. ~ The country, existing from its source, can endure. ~ This is the Tao of having a deep root, a strong stem, a long life, and an enduring vision.

[59c41т] Tang Zi-chang ~ To rule the people and serve the world there is nothing better than to follow the model of nature. ~ To follow the model of nature is to be the early appreciation of Dao. ~ To be the early appreciation of Dao is to give emphasis to the accumulation of Virtues. ~ To give emphasis to the accumulation of Virtues there is nothing that cannot be overcome. ~ When one has nothing that cannot be overcome, then nobody knows his limit. ~ When nobody knows his limit, then he may have a kingdom to rule. ~ When one has a kingdom to rule, he may mother (rule) the world. ~ He may rule everywhere and forever. ~ This is called the way of deepening the root; ~ consolidating the sprout; ~ prolonging the life; ~ and enduring the rule.

[59c42т] Wing-tsit Chan ~ To rule people and to serve Heaven there is nothing better than to be frugal. ~ Only by being frugal can one recover quickly. ~ To recover quickly means to accumulate virtue heavily. ~ By the heavy accumulation of virtue one can overcome everything. ~ If one can overcome everything, then he will acquire a capacity the limit of which is beyond anyone's knowledge. ~ When his capacity is beyond anyone's knowledge, he is fit to rule a state. ~ He who possesses the Mother (Tao) of the state will last long. ~ This means that the roots are deep and the stalks are firm, ~ Which is the way of long life and everlasting vision.

[59c92т] А. А. Маслов ~ В правлении людьми и служении Небу ничто не сравнится с воздержанностью. ~ Тот, кто воздержан, зовётся изначально готовым [следовать Дао]. ~ Тот, кто готов изначально, зовётся собравшим Благость в избытке. ~ Для того, в ком Благость собрана в избытке, нет ничего, способного противостоять ему. ~ Если ему ничто не может противостоять, то нет ему предела. ~ Если нет ему предела, то он может владеть государством. ~ Обладая Матерью государства, можно стать долговечным. ~ Это зовётся глубокими и крепкими корнями нетленного и долговечного Дао.

[59c94т] А. Е. Лукьянов ~ В управлении людьми и служении Небу-Отечеству нет ничего лучшего, чем бережливость. ~ Если проявить бережливость - значит, заблаговременно позаботиться. ~ Заблаговременно позаботиться - значит, вдвое приумножить Дэ. ~ Если вдвое приумножить Дэ, то не будет непреодолимого. ~ Если не будет непреодолимого, ~ то никому не будет известен и его предел. ~ Если никому не будет известен его предел, ~ то можно овладеть царством. ~ Овладев Матерью-Родиной царства, ~ можно стать долговечным [вождем]. ~ (Вариант перевода: можно обеспечить долговечность [царству].) ~ Это и называется глубоким истоком, прочным корнем, вечно живущим и вечно существующим Дао.

[59c97т] В. В. Малявин ~ В управлении людьми и служении Небу ~ Нет ничего лучше, чем быть бережливым. ~ Кто умеет беречь, первым изготовится. ~ Первым изготовиться означает копить Совершенство. ~ Кто умеет копить Совершенство, тот все превзойдет. ~ Если он все превзойдет, никто не будет знать, где его предел. ~ Кто не имеет предела, может владеть царством. ~ А кто владеет матерью царства, будет жить долго. ~ Вот что такое "глубокий корень, прочная основа", ~ Это Путь вечной жизни и долгого взгляда.

[59c98т] Б. Б. Виногродский ~ Упорядочивание - люди. ~ Дела - Небо. ~ Нет ничего, что сравнится с бережливостью. ~ Будь только бережливым. ~ Это определяется: ~ Заранее воспринимать. ~ Заранее воспринимать. ~ Это определяется: ~ Двойное накопление Потенции. ~ Двойное накопление Потенции - тогда отсутствие не-преодолимого. ~ Отсутствие не-преодолимого - тогда никто не знает своего Предела. ~ Никто не знает своего предела - может быть наличие государства. ~ Наличие материнского принципа в государстве позволяет достичь длительности и долготы. ~ Это определяется: Глубокий корень, прочный ствол. ~ Путь длинной жизни и долгого видения.

[60c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ Ruling a large state is like cooking small fish. ~ When you use the Way to govern the world, evil spirits won't have godlike power. ~ Actually, it's not that evil spirits won't have godlike power, ~ It's that their power will not harm men. ~ But it's not [just] that their power won't harm men, ~ The Sage, also, will not harm them. ~ Since these two do not harm others, ~ Therefore their Virtues intermingle and return to them.

[60c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ RULING a big kingdom is like cooking a small fish. ~ When a man of Tao reigns over the world, demons have no spiritual powers. ~ Not that the demons have no spiritual powers, but the spirits themselves do no harm to men. ~ Not that the spirits do no harm to men, but the Sage himself does no harm to his people. ~ If only the ruler and his people would refrain from harming each other, all the benefits of life would accumulate in the kingdom.

[60c03т] D. C. Lau ~ Governing a large state is like boiling a small fish. ~ When the empire is ruled in accordance with the way, ~ The spirits lose their potencies. ~ Or rather, it is not that they lose their potencies, ~ But that, though they have their potencies, they do not harm the people. ~ It is not only they who, having their potencies, do not harm the people, ~ The sage, also, does not harm the people. ~ As neither does any harm, each attributes the merit to the other.

[60c04т] R. L. Wing ~ Leading a large organization is like cooking a small fish. ~ If the Tao is present in the world, ~ The cunning are not mysterious. ~ Not only are the cunning not mysterious, ~ Their mystery does not harm others. ~ Not only does their mystery not harm others, ~ The Evolved also do not harm others. ~ Since together they do no harm, ~ The Power returns and accumulates.

[60c05т] Ren Jiyu ~ Governing a great state is like frying small fish (so frequent disturbance should be avoided). ~ Applying Tao to the kingdom can render ghosts harmless. ~ It is not that the ghosts cannot function, ~ But that the function cannot harm men. ~ It is not that the function cannot harm men, ~ But that the sage never harms men at all. ~ So, men and ghosts will not harm each other, ~ Therefore both (men and ghosts) praise the De of the sage.

* * *

[60c06т] Gia-fu Feng ~ Ruling the country is like cooking a small fish. ~ Approach the universe with Tao, ~ And evil will have no power. ~ Not that evil is not powerful, ~ But its power will not be used to harm others. ~ Not only will it do no harm to others, ~ But the sage himself will also be protected. ~ They do not hurt each other, ~ And the Virtue in each one refreshes both.

[60c07т] Lok Sang Ho ~ To govern a great nation ~ Is not much different from frying a small fish. ~ To govern a nation according to the Dao, ~ Even the demons will not show their influences. ~ Not that they have lost all their influences, ~ But their influences will do people no harm. ~ Not only do the influences of the evil spirits do people no harm. ~ The Sage will also do people no harm. ~ Since demons at one extreme, ~ through the Sage at the other extreme, ~ All do people no harm. ~ We can conclude that the Virtue has perfected its job.

[60c08т] Xiaolin Yang ~ Governing a big country is like carefully cooking a small fish. ~ When the DAO rules, ghosts will not show their spirits. ~ Not only will the ghosts not show their spirits, but also the spirits will not hurt people. ~ Not only will the spirits not hurt people, but also the great men will not hurt people. ~ When neither the spirits nor the great men hurt people, the DE becomes natural and lasts long.

* * *

[60c09т] Walter Gorn Old, FILLING THE THRONE ~ The state should be governed as we cook small fish, without much business. ~ Bringing the Tao to the governing of the Kingdom will give rest to the shades of the dead. ~ Not that the Spirits will be inactive, but that they will cease to trouble the people. ~ But what is of more importance, the wise ruler of the people will not hurt them. ~ And in so far as they do not interfere with one another, their influences conspire to the general good!

[60c10т] James Legge ~ Governing a great state is like cooking small fish. ~ Let the kingdom be governed according to the Tao, and the manes of the departed will not manifest their spiritual energy. ~ It is not that those manes have not that spiritual energy, but it will not be employed to hurt men. ~ It is not that it could not hurt men, but neither does the ruling sage hurt them. ~ When these two do not injuriously affect each other, their good influences converge in the virtue (of the Tao).

[60c11т] David Hinton ~ Govern a great nation as you would cook a small fish. ~ Use Way to rule all beneath heaven and spirits never become ghosts. ~ When spirits don't become ghosts, ghosts do people no harm. ~ When ghosts do people no harm, sages do them no harm. ~ And once humans and ghosts do each other no harm, they return together to Integrity.

[60c12т] Chichung Huang ~ Governing a large state ~ Is like frying small fish. ~ Use the Tao to preside over the empire, ~ And its spirits will not be mischievous; ~ Not that its spirits will not be mischievous, ~ But that their mischief will not harm the people; ~ Not that their mischief will not harm the people, ~ But that a sage man never does any harm. ~ Since neither harms anyone, ~ Their favors will converge.

* * *

[60c13т] Ellen M. Chen ~ Governing a great state, ~ Is like cooking small fish. ~ If you rule the world by Tao, ~ The ghosts (kuei) will lose their spiritual (shen) power. ~ Not that the ghosts lose their spiritual power, ~ But their spiritual power will not harm the people. ~ Not that their spiritual power will not harm the people, ~ But neither does the sage harm the people. ~ Since both are harmless, ~ Te flows back and forth [without impediment].

[60c14т] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ Governing a big country is like cooking small fish unscathed [,as both are delicate matters that requires extraordinary caution]. ~ If one leads the world in accordance with Tao, his ghosts (antagonists) cannot be efficacious [in such a righteous society]; ~ Even if his ghosts are efficacious, [yet under the influence of Tao] they still cannot harm people; ~ A Sage would [under no circumstance] harm them either; ~ Because neither one would harm the other side, their Te shall be reciprocally beneficial to each other.

[60c15т] Tien Cong Tran ~ Governing a big state is like cooking a small fish. ~ When a man of the Way reigns over the world, demons no longer have spiritual powers. ~ Not that the demons have no spiritual powers, but the spirits themselves do no harm to men. ~ Not that the spirits do no harm to men, but the sage himself does no harm to his people. ~ If the sage and his people refrain from harming each other, Virtue will return.

[60c16т] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ Governing a big kingdom is like cooking small seafood. ~ With Tao as guidance, evils will never have their way. ~ It is actually not that the evils do not have their way, but that the evils will not hurt people. ~ Not only do Evils not hurt people, but also do not hurt the sage. ~ When both people and the sage are not hurt, Te is in dominance.

[60c17т] Arthur Waley ~ Ruling a large kingdom is indeed like cooking small fish. ~ They who by Tao ruled all that is under heaven did not let an evil spirit within them display its powers. ~ Nay, it was not only that the evil spirit did not display its powers; neither was the Sage's good spirit used to the hurt of other men. ~ Nor was it only that his good spirit was not used to harm other men, the Sage himself was thus saved from harm. ~ And so, each being saved from harm, their 'powers' could converge towards a common end.

[60c18т] Richard John Lynn ~ Ruling a large state is like cooking a small fish. ~ If one uses the Dao to oversee all under Heaven, the malign spirits there will lose their numinous power. ~ It is not that these malign spirits have no numinous power; ~ It is just that they will do no harm to the people. ~ It is not these numinous powers that do not harm the people but the sage, in fact, who does not harm the people. ~ It is because neither of these two cause any harm that they unite their virtues and revert to it.

[60c19т] Lin Yutang ~ RULING A BIG COUNTRY ~ Rule a big country as you would fry small fish. ~ Who rules the world in accord with Tao ~ Shall find that the spirits lose their power. ~ It is not that the spirits lose their power, ~ But that they cease to do people harm. ~ It is not (only) that they cease to do people harm, ~ The Sage (himself) also does no harm to the people. ~ When both do not do each other harm, ~ The original character is restored.

[60c20т] Victor H. Mair ~ Ruling a big kingdom is like cooking a small fish. ~ If one oversees all under heaven in accord with the Way, demons have no spirit. ~ It is not that the demons have no spirit, but that their spirits do not harm people. ~ It is not merely that their spirits do not harm people, but that the sage also does not harm them. ~ Now, ~ When neither harms the other, integrity accrues to both.

[60c21t] Tolbert McCarroll ~ Governing a big country is like cooking a small fish. ~ Let all under heaven be governed in accordance with the Tao, ~ and demons will not manifest their power. ~ It is not that they lack power but rather they will not use their power to harm the people. ~ They are not the only ones who have power and do not use it to harm the people. ~ The True Person does not harm the people. ~ Whenever there is no harm done, ~ that power flows into the common Virtue.

[60c22t] David H. Li ~ Govern a large state is like frying a small fish. ~ With Direction embracing the world, ghosts become ineffective. ~ It is not because ghosts become ineffective; ~ it is because their effect becomes inoffensive. ~ Not only have ghosts become inoffensive; ~ The sage has also become inoffensive. ~ With the two not inflicting harm, the people are showered with virtue.

[60c23t] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ Governing a big country is like cooking a small fish. ~ The more you stir the pot, the less the fish stays intact. ~ If the world is guided by the Tao, ~ Even evil spirits are rendered spiritless. ~ Not that evil spirits are in themselves spiritless, ~ But their spirits do not harm people. ~ Not only do evil spirits not harm people, ~ But powerful rulers also do not harm people. ~ When no harm is done from either side, ~ Virtue accrues to both and all return to pristine oneness.

[60c24t] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ When ruling people, like serving heaven, the sage acts only in moderation. ~ Only with moderation can he learn the Tao in an instant. ~ This study is called "the rapid accumulation of a virtue." ~ Through the rapid accumulation of a virtue ~ He can overcome everything. ~ Since there is nothing he cannot overcome, ~ No one can know of his superiority. ~ Since no one knows of his superiority, ~ He can rule the country. ~ Since what he does when he acquires everything is identified with the mother, his days are extended. ~ Thus his roots are deep and his foundations strong, and he knows the way of longevity and immortality.

[60c25t] Man-Ho Kwok ~ Ruling a big country ~ Is like cooking a small fish: ~ You have to handle it with care. ~ If a sage uses the Tao ~ Then evil forces have no power: ~ He doesn't harm people either. ~ Through te, you see ~ We have harmony.

[60c26t] Gu Zhengkun ~ Ruling a large state resembles frying a small fish ~ (It is inappropriate to turn it over frequently). ~ When the Tao prevails in the world, ~ Even ghosts and spirits become harmless. ~ It is not that ghosts become harmless ~ But that their potencies can no longer harm people. ~ Not only ghosts become harmless, ~ Sages harm no people either. ~ Hence neither does any harm to the people ~ And both sages and ghosts help the people to enjoy the benefit of virtue.

[60c27t] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ Governing a large country is like cooking a small fish. ~ It is spoiled by too much interference. ~ When the ruler presents his country with Tao, Heaven will not harm him. ~ Not only will the curse not fall upon him, but it will not even cause harm to the people. ~ As the curse will not hurt the people, neither will the sage cause harm to the people. ~ Only because they do not hurt one another, will they blend their virtue.

[60c28t] Liu Qixuan ~ Governing a big country is like cooking small fish: ~ Too much stirring will spoil the whole dish. ~ If the ruler governs the country by the Way, ~ The evil souls will not work against the society. ~ It is not that evil souls will have lost their influence, ~ But that their influence can do no harm to the living. ~ When evil souls can exert no bad influence from below, ~ Nor rulers harm people from above, ~ Then the Way will have extended far enough ~ To bring all the living back to their nature.

[60c29t] Shi Fu Hwang ~ Governing A Great State ~ Lao Tze says, ~ Governing a great state is like cooking small fish. ~ The king of men knows to pacify his kingdom by using the Tao; ~ the dead men's ghosts will not manifest their spiritual energy. ~ Not only will those ghosts not manifest their spiritual energy, but they will not hurt men. ~ Not only will they hurt men, even the sage in exercise of his government will not disturb those ghosts. ~ As these two do not injuriously affect each other, so in the Tao's attribute, the living and the departed both find their rest places.

[60c30t] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ Govern a great state as you would cook a small fish (do it gently). ~ Let Tao reign over the world, and no spirits will show their ghostly powers. ~ Not that the spirits have no more powers, ~ But their powers will not harm men. ~ Neither will they harm men, ~ Nor will the Sage harm the people. ~ Inasmuch as none of them harms anybody, ~ Therefore virtue belongs to them both.

[60c31t] Paul J. Lin ~ To rule a large nation is as to cook a small fish. ~ In a world with Tao prevailing, ~ Ghosts will not become goblins. ~ Not that ghosts will not become goblins, ~ But God will not hurt the people; ~ Not that God will not hurt the people, ~ But the Sage will not hurt them either. ~ When both will not hurt each other, ~ All virtue will converge to them.

* * *

[60c32t] Michael LaFargue ~ Governing a large state is like cooking a small fish. ~ Rule the world by Tao, ~ then ghosts will not take to haunting. ~ It is not that the ghosts will not haunt, ~ their haunting will cause no hurt to humankind. ~ (It's not only that their haunting will not hurt humankind, ~ the Wise Person also does not cause hurt to them. ~ These two do not hurt each other.) ~ Yes, Te unifies and restores.

[60c33t] Cheng Lin ~ To govern a large State is as easy as frying small fishes. ~ When one rules an Empire according to Truth, the spirits become powerless. ~ Not only the spirits, but also the gods are powerless to do harm to men. ~ Not only the gods, but also the Sages are powerless to do harm to men. ~ When these do not do harm to one another, their inherent qualities will enable them to arrive at a common end.

* * *

[60c34t] Yi Wu ~ Govern a big country as if cooking a small fish. ~ Reign over the world with the Way, ~ Then its demons will have no spiritual power. ~ Not that demons are not spiritually powerful, ~ But their spiritual powers will not harm people. ~ Not that their spiritual powers cannot harm people, ~ But, because the sage also will not harm people, ~ Neither harms the other. ~ Therefore, they return to virtue together.

[60c35t] Han Hiong Tan ~ Governing a big country is akin to frying a small fish. ~ When the power of Dao is prevalent, ~ Even the demons become impotent. ~ Although the demons continue to possess magical power, ~ Their power is rendered innocuous. ~ Hence, the demons cannot harm people. ~ The sage also does not harm people. ~ Both do not interfere with people. ~ Thus by sticking to non-intervention, both let their virtues merge together.

[60c36t] Hua-Ching Ni ~ Managing a big country is like cooking small fish. ~ The more you stir them, the less their shape can be maintained. ~ When one applies the subtle Way of the universe to the world, ~ all high spirits unite and harmonize their potencies. ~ Thus, they do not harm people. ~ All the world's leaders know to merge with the great Oneness, ~ thus all people are preserved from harm. ~ When the subtle Way of the universe is all pervading, ~ there is no longer any distinction between subject and object, ~ between spiritual and material, ~ between holy and unholy. ~ All energies merge into harmonious Oneness.

[60c37t] Chang Chung-yuan ~ When Tao prevails in the world, evil loses its power. ~ It is not that evil no longer possesses spiritual power. ~ It is that its power does not damage men. ~ Indeed, it is not that its power does not damage men. ~ It is primarily that the ruler does not become harmful to men. ~ When opposites no longer damage each other, ~ Both are benefitted through the attainment of Tao.

[60c38t] Henry Wei ~ Maintaining One's Position ~ Chu Wei ~ Ruling a big country is like frying a little fish. ~ When Tao is made to prevail in the world, ~ Evil spirits will lose their supernal power. ~ Not that they lose their supernal power, ~ But rather that the supernal power does no harm to people. ~ Not only the supernal power does no harm to people, ~ The Sage (Ruler) also will do no harm. ~ As both do not mutually cause any harm, ~ Virtue reverts to all parties respectively.

[60c39t] Ha Poong Kim ~ Governing a large state ~ Is like boiling a small fish. ~ When you rule all under Heaven according to Tao, ~ The spirits of the dead cease to exercise supernatural power. ~ It is not that they cease to exercise supernatural power. ~ Their supernatural power does not harm the people. ~ It is not simply that their supernatural power does not harm the people. ~ The sage, too, does not harm the people. ~ Since neither of them harms the people, ~ Their Te, united, returns.

[60c40t] Tao Huang ~ Governing a large country is like cooking a small fish. ~ If Tao is utilized to manage the society, its ghost will not become spirit. ~ Not that ghost is not spiritual, but that the spirit harms no people; ~ Not only does the spirit harm not the people, but that the sage is harmless. ~ As those two cause no harm, they are united in Action.

* * *

[60c41t] Tang Zi-chang ~ To rule a big country should be so simple like cooking small fish. ~ When the world rule is approaching Dao: ~ The Ghost and Spirit will not necessarily be divine. ~ It is not that the Ghost and Spirit will not necessarily be divine but the divine will not be utilized to threaten people with harm. ~ Not only the divine should not threaten people with harm, the Sage ruler should not threaten people with harm either. ~ When those two (state and religion) do no harm to each other, both will achieve the same goal - Return to Nature.

[60c42t] Wing-tsit Chan ~ Ruling a big country is like cooking a small fish. ~ If Tao is employed to rule the empire, ~ Spiritual beings will lose their supernatural power. ~ Not that they lose their spiritual power, ~ But their spiritual power can no longer harm people. ~ Not only will their supernatural power not harm people, ~ But the sage also will not harm people. ~ When both do not harm each other, ~ Virtue will be accumulated in both for the benefit (of the people).

[60c93t] Е. А. Торчинов ~ Управлять большим государством - все равно что готовить блюдо из мелкой рыбы. ~ Если посредством Дао-Пути власть над всей Поднебесной обрести, то нави не будут обладать божественностью. ~ И не только нави Поднебесной не будут обладать божественностью, но и сами божества не смогут навредить народу. ~ Но не только сами божества не смогут навредить народу, совершенномудрый тоже не сможет навредить народу. ~ А коль эти двое навредить народу не смогут, благие силы их соединятся и возвратятся к людям на их благо.

[60c98t] Б. Б. [61c01t] Robert G. Henricks ~ The large state is like the lower part of a river; ~ It is the female of the world; ~ It is the meeting point of the world. ~ The female constantly overcomes the male with tranquility. ~ Because she is tranquil, therefore she is fittingly underneath. ~ The large state - if it is below the small state, then it takes over the small state; ~ The small state - if it is below the large state, then it is taken over by the large state. ~ Therefore some by being low take over, ~ And some by being low are taken over. ~ Therefore the large state merely desires to unite and rear others; ~ While the small state merely desires to enter and serve others. ~ If both get what they want, ~ Then the large {state} should fittingly be underneath.

[61c02t] John C. H. Wu ~ A GREAT country is like the lowland toward which all streams flow. ~ It is the Reservoir of all under heaven, the Feminine of the world. ~ The Feminine always conquers the Masculine by her quietness, by lowering herself through her quietness. ~ Hence, if a great country can lower itself before a small country, it will win over the small country; ~ and if a small country can lower itself before a great country, it will win over the great country. ~ The one wins by stooping; the other, by remaining low. ~ What a great country wants is simply to embrace more people; ~ and what a small country wants is simply to come to serve its patron. ~ Thus, each gets what it wants. ~ But it behooves a great country to lower itself.

[61c03t] D. C. Lau ~ A large state is the lower reaches of a river - ~ The place where all the streams of the world unite. ~ In the union of the world, ~ The female always gets the better of the male by stillness. ~ Being still, she takes the lower position. ~ Hence the large state, by taking the lower position, annexes the small state; ~ The small state, by taking the lower position, affiliates itself to the large state. ~ Thus the one, by taking the lower position, annexes; ~ The other, by taking the lower position, is annexed. ~ All that the large state wants is to take the other under its wing; ~ All that the small state wants is to have its services accepted by the other. ~ If each of the two wants to find its proper place, ~ It is meet that the large should take the lower position.

[61c04t] R. L. Wing ~ A large organization should flow downward ~ To intersect with the world. ~ It is the female of the world. ~ The female always overcomes the male by stillness; ~ Through stillness, she makes herself low. ~ Thus if a large organization ~ Is lower than a small organization, ~ It can receive the small organization. ~ And if a small organization ~ Stays lower than a large organization, It can receive the large organization. ~ Therefore one receives by becoming low; Another receives by being low. ~ Yet what a large organization desires ~ Is to unite and support others. ~ And what a small organization desires ~ Is to join and serve others. ~ So for both to gain the position they desire, The larger should place itself low.

[61c05t] Ren Jiyu ~ A great state lies lower (like rivers and seas into which all streams run), ~ To it all things under Heaven tend, It considers itself as the female under Heaven. ~ The female always overcomes the male by stillness, because it is still and lies lower. ~ Therefore, a great state can, by lowering itself to small states, make the small states rely upon the big states. ~ Small states can, by lowering themselves to a great state, win trust from it. ~ Thus a great state sometimes makes small states rely upon it by lowering itself, ~ And sometimes, small states win the trust from a great state only by lowering themselves. ~ What the great state desires is to lead the small states, ~ And what the small states desire is to serve the great state. ~ Then each side gets what it desires, ~ But the great state should especially learn to lower itself.

[61c06t] Gia-fu Feng ~ A great country is like low land. ~ It is the meeting ground of the universe, ~ The mother of the universe. ~ The female overcomes the male with stillness, ~ Lying low in stillness. ~ Therefore if a great country gives way to a smaller country, ~ It will conquer the smaller country. ~ And if a small country submits to a great country, ~ It can conquer the great country. ~ Therefore those who would conquer must yield, ~ And those who conquer do so because they yield. ~ A great nation needs more people; ~ A small country needs to serve. ~ Each gets what it wants. ~ It is fitting for a great nation to yield.

[61c07t] Lok Sang Ho ~ Big nations should be like a stream that flows low. ~ In relating to other nations under heaven. ~ They should be like a female animal. ~ Female animals often lie low and still. ~ By doing so they win over male animals. ~ Big nations that take on a lower profile than small nations ~ will win the adherence of small nations. ~ Small nations that take on a lower profile than big nations ~ will win the assistance from the big nations. ~ Big nations keep low and get what they want. ~ Small nations keep low and get what they want. ~ Big nations(with an abundance of land) want to have a bigger population. ~ Small nations(with a shortage of land) want to have more jobs. ~ If big nations keep low, both the needs of big nations ~ and those of the small will be fulfilled.

[61c08t] Xiaolin Yang ~ When governing a big country, you should be humble, ~ Like the lowest point where water meets, or like the females of the world. ~ Females always overcome males by being peaceful; being peaceful is humble. ~ Therefore, if a big country humbles itself to a small country, it can lead the small country; ~ If a small country humbles itself to a big country, it can get help from the big country. ~ So, humbleness leads either to leading a small country or to getting help from a big country. ~ A big country always wants to lead a small country, ~ A small country always wants to get help from a big country; ~ They can achieve their goals by being humble. ~ So the big should be humble.

[61c09t] Walter Gorn Old, THE VIRTUE OF HUMILITY ~ The kingdom, like a river, becomes great by being lowly; it is thereby the centre to which all the world tends. ~ It is similar in the case of woman: ~ She conquers man by continual quietness. ~ And quietness is the same as submission. ~ Therefore a great state, by condescension to those beneath it, may gain the government of them. ~ Likewise a small state, by submission to one that is greater, may secure its alliance. ~ Thus the one gains adherence, and the other obtains favours. ~ Although the great state desires to annex and to nourish others, yet the small state desires to be allied to and serve the greater. ~ Thus both will be satisfied, if only the greater will condescend.

[61c10t] James Legge ~ What makes a great state is its being (like) a low-lying, down-flowing (stream); ~ - it becomes the centre to which tend (all the small states) under heaven. ~ (To illustrate from) the case of all females: ~ - the female always overcomes the male by her stillness. ~ Stillness may be considered (a sort of) abasement. ~ Thus it is that a great state, by condescending to small states, gains them for itself; ~ and that small states, by abasing themselves to a great state, win it over to them. ~ In the one case the abasement leads to gaining adherents, in the other case to procuring favour. ~ The great state only wishes to unite men together and nourish them; ~ a small state only wishes to be received by, and to serve, the other. ~ Each gets what it desires, but the great state must learn to abase itself.

[61c12t] Chichung Huang ~ A large state is the lower stream, ~ The female to all under heaven, ~ The converging point of all under heaven. ~ The female constantly uses stillness ~ To overcome the male. ~ As she is still, ~ It is proper that she stay low. ~ Therefore, if a large state ~ Stays low to a small state, ~ It wins the small state; ~ If a small state ~ Stays low to a large state, ~ It is won by the large state. ~ Therefore, one stays low to win; ~ One stays low to be won. ~ Therefore, the large state ~ Merely wishes to annex and feed the other; ~ The small state ~ Merely wishes to join and serve the other. ~ If each is to have its wish, ~ The large state should stay lower.

[61c13t] Ellen M. Chen ~ A large state is down stream (hsia liu). ~ Where the rivers under heaven (t'ien hsia) converge, ~ Is the female (p'in) under heaven. ~ The female always wins the male (mou) by stillness (ching), ~ By stillness it is low-lying (hsia). ~ Therefore, by being low-lying (hsia) to a small state, ~ A large state acquires (ch'ü) a small state. ~ By lowering (hsia) itself to a large state, ~ A small state acquires a large state. ~ The one acquires by being low-lying (hsia), ~ The other acquires by lowering (hsia). ~ A large state without overstepping its boundary (pu kuo), ~ Wishes to keep others under its wings. ~ A small state without overstepping its boundary (pu kuo), ~ Wishes to offer service to others. ~ Now both are granted their proper wishes, ~ It is fitting that a large state takes the low (hsia) place.

[61c14t] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ A big country was formed by being at the right position, i.e. like the waterway at the lowest position where other waterways (small countries) converged together spontaneously; ~ Diplomacy in this world was generally conducted similar to the manner a cow took an initiative to tempt an ox; ~ The fact was that the ox was led to believe deceptively that serenely passive cow was the weaker [party to be mastered]. ~ Therefore: ~ If a big country deals with small countries by taking the lower position [for currents to flow in], then it would secure small countries [with ease]; ~ If a small country negotiates with a big country, by positioning itself in the lower [passive] position, it could insinuate big country to yield to its needs; ~ One country may lower itself in order to take possession of another country, or one country may insinuate itself into favor through submissiveness [it all depends on the circumstance]. ~ A big country should not press onward too far its intention to lord over people of small countries; ~ A small country should not let itself be overridden by its intention to yield to the big country; ~ Accordingly, when a big country and a small country each has achieved its intended purpose respectfully, the big country should try harder to be modest.

[61c15t] Tien Cong Tran ~ A great country is like the low stream. ~ It is where the world flows together. ~ It is the feminine of the world. ~ The feminine always conquers the masculine by her quietness; she is in a lower place by her quietness. ~ Hence, if a big state is below a small state, it will win over the small state. ~ If a small is below a big state, it will win over the big state. ~ The one wins by lowering itself; the other, by remaining low. ~ What a great state wants is simply to embrace and protect more people. ~ What a small country wants is simply to participate and to submit its patron. ~ Thus, each gets what it wants. ~ But it behooves a big state to lower itself.

[61c16t] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ A great kingdom is like the mouth of rivers; it is like the female, or the hub of the world. ~ Females frequently win males with their serenity. ~ Serenity means humbleness. ~ Therefore when a great kingdom is humble, it wins small kingdoms. ~ When a small kingdom is humble, it wins great kingdoms. ~ This is why with humbleness one can win and will win. ~ A great kingdom should not excessively conquer. ~ A small kingdom should avoid undue vassalage. ~ In order for both great and small kingdoms to have their wishes, it is better for great kingdoms to be humble.

[61c17t] Arthur Waley ~ A large kingdom must be like the low ground towards which all streams flow down. ~ It must be a point towards which all things under heaven converge. ~ Its part must be that of the female in its dealings with all things under heaven. ~ The female by quiescence conquers the male; by quiescence gets underneath. ~ If a large kingdom can in the same way succeed in getting underneath a small kingdom then it will win the adherence of the small kingdom; ~ and it is because small kingdoms are by nature in this way underneath large kingdoms that they win the adherence of large kingdoms. ~ The one must get underneath in order to do it; ~ the other is underneath and therefore does it. ~ What large countries really need is more inhabitants; ~ and what small countries need is some place where their surplus inhabitants can go and get employment. ~ Thus each gets what it needs. ~ That is why I say the large kingdom must 'get underneath'.

[61c18t] Richard John Lynn ~ A large state is a catchment into which flow occurs. ~ It is where all under Heaven unite. ~ It is the female for all under Heaven. ~ The female always conquers the male because of quietude. ~ She is able to take the low position because of quietude. ~ Thus the large state, by placing itself beneath the small state, ~ Consequently takes over the small state. ~ The small state, by placing itself beneath the large state, subsequently is taken over by the large state. ~ Thus some, by taking a place beneath, take over, and some, by taking a place beneath, are taken over. ~ The large state should desire nothing more than to bring people together and nurture them, and the small state should desire nothing more than to join in and serve people. ~ In order that both obtain what they desire, it is fitting that the large one place itself beneath.

[61c19t] Lin Yutang ~ BIG AND SMALL COUNTRIES ~ A big country (should be like) the delta low-regions, ~ Being the concourse of the world, ~ (And) the Female of the world. ~ The Female overcomes the Male by quietude, ~ And achieves the lowly position by quietude. ~ Therefore if a big country places itself below a small country, ~ It absorbs the small country; ~ (And) if a small country places itself below a big country, ~ It absorbs the big country. ~ Therefore some place themselves low to absorb (others), ~ Some are (naturally) low and absorb (others). ~ What a big country wants is but to shelter others, ~ And what a small country wants is but to be able to come in and be sheltered. ~ Thus (considering) that both may have what they want, ~ A big country ought to place itself low.

[61c20t] Victor H. Mair ~ A large state is like a low-lying estuary, ~ the female of all under heaven. ~ In the congress of all under heaven, ~ the female always conquers the male through her stillness. ~ Because she is still, it is fitting for her to lie low. ~ By lying beneath a small state, ~ a large state can take over a small state. ~ By lying beneath a large state, ~ a small state can be taken over by a large state. ~ Therefore, ~ One may either take over or be taken over by lying low. ~ Therefore, ~ The large state wishes only to annex and nurture others; ~ The small state wants only to join with and serve others. ~ Now, ~ Since both get what they want, ~ It is fitting for the large state to lie low.

[61c21t] Tolbert McCarroll ~ A great country is like the low lands where all the streams unite. ~ In all things under heaven the female overcomes the male by her stillness, ~ and because she is still she lies below. ~ Hence, ~ if the great country will take the low place ~ it will win over the little country. ~ If the little country will take the low place ~ it will win over the great country. ~ Thus, ~ the one gets below and prospers ~ and the other remains below and prospers. ~ All that the great country wants is more people. ~ All that the little country wants is a place for its people to go and to be employed. ~ If each is to get what it wants ~ it is necessary for the great country to take the low place.

[61c23т] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ A great country is like a low-lying estuary, ~ A place where the myriad streams of the world come together. ~ She is also like a receptive female drawing in an eager male. ~ The female always conquers the male through her stillness, ~ Because she knows how to lie low through her stillness. ~ Thus, ~ a great country can win over a small country by lying low. ~ A small country can also win over a great country by lying low. ~ Therefore, one may either win over or be won over by taking the lower position. ~ A great country only wants to embrace and nourish more people. ~ A small country only wants to be embraced and serve her benefactor. ~ Thus, both can achieve their ends by practicing humility. ~ Therefore, especially a great country must practice humility.

[61c24т] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ Govern a large country as you would cook a small fish, gently. ~ Let the Tao govern the world, and spirits will not roam freely. ~ This does not mean that spirits will not have powers, ~ But rather that their powers will not harm people. ~ They will not harm people, ~ Nor will the sage harm people. ~ When neither he nor they harm anybody, ~ The virtue belongs to both of them. ~ When the Tao governs the world, the spirits are not known as spirits and the sage is not considered a sage, says Wang-Pi.

[61c25т] Man-Ho Kwok ~ A great country is like a low-lying estuary - ~ It is a place where all the lesser streams mingle and merge. ~ Everything comes together there ... ~ And a woman wins her man: how does she do it? ~ By using the power of her yin like an anchor, ~ A still deep bowl into which it all flows. ~ This is passiveness. ~ So if a great country takes a low place ~ It wins over the trust of a smaller state; ~ And if a small country shows humility ~ It wins the trust of a whole nation. ~ And it's like this: ~ those who want to win must yield, ~ And those who are yielding should stay where they are. ~ A great country needs to grow: ~ A small one needs protection. ~ That way, everyone gets what they want - ~ when the greater learns to be below.

[61c26т] Gu Zhengkun ~ A large state should play the role of female, ~ Just like the lowest reaches of a river ~ Where all the other streams meet. ~ The female always conquers the male by motionlessness, ~ Because the motionless female always takes the lower position. ~ Hence the large state can annex the small one by taking the lower position (being modest); ~ The small state can gain the trust of the large one by taking the lower position, ~ The case being either the former or vice versa. ~ The large state wants to put the small one under its protection, ~ The small state wants to be shielded by the large one, ~ Thus both can satisfy their wishes, ~ But the large state should be more willing to take the lower position.

[61c27т] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ When a large country is like water, ~ which runs towards lower places, ~ all the other countries will unite with it. ~ In the unity of the world, the female always overcomes the male with stillness. ~ The stillness is akin to the lower position - that is how a large country can be respected by a small country and conquer it. ~ And if a small country takes the lower position and allows itself to be influenced by the large country, the small can conquer the large. ~ That is why by being lower to take, or lower to be taken, ~ a large country only tries to annex a small one and a small country only tries to protect its people. ~ They both find what they want. ~ Therefore it is fitting for a large country to be the lower one.

[61c28т] Liu Qixuan ~ A big country should position itself low ~ So as to be the world's mother ocean. ~ The biggest producer is for ever still and peaceful, ~ Dissolves all the commotions with her stillness, ~ And keeps her lowness with her stillness, too. ~ Therefore, if a big country can be humble toward a small one, ~ It will win over the small country. ~ If a small country can be humble toward a big one, ~ It will win over the big country. ~ Thus, countries either lower themselves to win over others ~ Or lower themselves to be tolerated by others. ~ A big country's purpose is to support all kinds of people. ~ A small country's purpose is to gain support to serve people. ~ To satisfy the two purposes, ~ The big country should be more yielding in attitude.

[61c29т] Shi Fu Hwang ~ The Large And Small States ~ Lao Tze says, ~ Like water, a large state should keep a low profile as it goes down stream, in order that it becomes the pivot of the world. ~ The female is the master of the world. ~ The female always overcomes the male by being still. ~ Stillness may be considered as a sort of abasement. ~ Thus a large state, by abasing itself to smaller states, annexes the small states; ~ while small states, by abasing themselves, affiliate themselves with larger states. ~ In one case the abasement leads to gaining allies, in the other case it procures favors. ~ The large state wishes only to increase population; ~ small states wish only to be guarded. ~ Each gets what it desires, but the large state must learn to abase itself first.

[61c30т] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ A great state is the world's low-stream (to which all the river flows down), the world's field and the world's female. ~ The female always conquers the male by quietude, which is employed as a means to lower oneself. ~ Thus a great state lowers itself towards a small state before it takes over the small state. ~ A small state lowers itself towards a great state before it takes over the great state. ~ Therefore some lower themselves to take, while others lower themselves to gather. ~ A great state wishes nothing more than to have and keep many people, and a small state wishes nothing more than to get more things to do. ~ When the two both mean to obtain their wishes, the greater one should lower itself.

[61c31т] Paul J. Lin ~ A large state is like the low land; ~ It is the focus point of the world ~ And the female of the world. ~ The female always conquers the male by serenity. ~ In serenity, she puts herself low. ~ Therefore, the large state puts itself beneath the small state, ~ And thereby absorbs the small state. ~ The small state puts itself under the large state, ~ And thereby joins with the large state. ~ Therefore, one either puts himself beneath to absorb others, ~ Or puts himself under to join with others. ~ What the large state wants is no more than to feed the people. ~ What the small state wants is no more than to join and serve the people. ~ Both have their needs satisfied. ~ Thus the large ought to stay low.

[61c32т] Michael LaFargue ~ The great state is a low and easy, ~ woman for the world, ~ the one the whole world unites with. ~ Femininity always overcomes Masculinity, by Stillness, ~ in Stillness it takes the low place. ~ Yes: ~ A great state, ~ by putting itself lower than the smaller state, ~ will win out over the smaller state. ~ A small state, ~ by putting itself lower than the great state, ~ will win out over the great state. ~ Yes: ~ One puts itself lower so it will win out, ~ if the other gets lower, then it will win. ~ (A great state has no further desire, ~ than to embrace and protect other states. ~ A small state has no further desire, ~ than to enter and serve other states. ~ So both get what they want.) ~ The greatest should be the lowest.

[61c33т] Cheng Lin ~ In order to govern a large State, one must practise humility. ~ The father of an Empire should behave as though he were the mother. ~ The female willing to occupy a subordinate position uses quietude to subjugate the male. ~ Thus, ~ when a large State is humble, it can win over the small States; ~ when a small State is humble, it can win over the large States. ~ In the case of the large States, humility makes them desirous of protecting all men, and no more. ~ In the case of the small States, humility makes them desirous of serving all men, and no more. ~ These obtain what they desire because they practise humility.

[61c34т] Yi Wu ~ A big state puts itself in the low place: ~ It is the focal point of the world ~ And the female of the world. ~ The female constantly wins over the male by her tranquility. ~ Tranquility is regarded as the low place; ~ Therefore, a big state, by lowering itself beneath a small state, ~ Can have the small state. ~ The small state, by lowering itself beneath a big state, ~ Can be taken to the big state's heart. ~ Therefore, one puts itself low to take, ~ and the other puts itself low to be accepted. ~ The big state wants only to embrace more people; ~ The small state wants only to join and serve the big state; ~ Thus, both have satisfied their needs. ~ The big one is right to put itself in the low place.

[61c35т] Han Hiong Tan ~ When a great nation takes a low profile, it becomes the hub of small nations. ~ Dao is the world's mystic female. ~ The mystic female triumphs over the male by her quietude. ~ Her characteristics are quietude and humility. ~ If the larger nation is humble, it will gain the trust of the smaller nations and absorb them. ~ By being compliant, the smaller nations will gain protection from the larger nation. ~ Both need to take a lowly position to gain control or to be protected. ~ The large nation aims to embrace and expand. ~ The smaller nation wishes to gain protection and to prosper. ~ Although they both aim to achieve their respective objectives, the larger nation should still take the lower profile.

[61c36т] Hua-Ching Ni ~ A great country is like the lower regions of a river: a place where all the streams of the world unite. ~ She is the mother of the world. ~ The peaceful and feminine always overpowers the masculine. ~ Being peaceable, one takes the lower position. ~ Hence, if a great country can lower itself to greet a small country, ~ it will win the friendship and trust of the small country. ~ If a small country can lower itself to greet a great country, ~ it will win the friendship and support of the great country. ~ One wins by taking the lower position, ~ while the other wins by remaining low. ~ Thus, if each is to find its proper place, ~ the one that is great must place itself low and offer help.

[61c37т] Chang Chung-yuan ~ A greater nation must be humble and like a reservoir ~ Where all the waters join together. ~ It is the passivity of the universe. ~ Passivity always prevails over activity through quiescence. ~ Quiescence is humble before activity. ~ When a greater nation is humble before a lesser nation, ~ It prevails over the lesser nation. ~ When a lesser nation is humble before a greater nation, ~ It prevails over the greater nation. ~ Thus, by being humble one prevails over others. ~ Or, by being originally in a lower position, ~ One prevails over others. ~ A greater nation simply likes to bring people together ~ And to nurture them. ~ A lesser nation simply likes to participate ~ And work together with others. ~ In this way, both have what they like, ~ But the greater nation must be humble.

[61c38т] Henry Wei ~ Virtue of Humility ~ Ch'ien Teh ~ A great country should assume a low position. ~ Being the hub of the world, ~ It should play the part of the Female. ~ The Female always employs quiescence ~ To subdue the Male, and takes a low position. ~ Therefore, a big country, stooping low, ~ Will win over a small country; ~ And a small country, staying low, ~ Will win over a big country. ~ Therefore, some stoop low to conquer, ~ And some stay low to conquer. ~ What a big country wants is merely ~ To absorb and support more people; ~ What a small country wants is merely ~ To enter a big country to offer services. ~ For each of the two to get what it wants, ~ The big country, therefore, should be lowly.

[61c39т] Ha Poong Kim ~ The large state is the lower reaches of a river, ~ The place where all under Heaven meets - ~ The female of all under Heaven. ~ The female always overcomes the male by stillness. ~ With stillness she plays the lower part. ~ Therefore, when the large state plays the lower part toward the small state, ~ It takes the small state. ~ When the small state plays the lower part toward the large state, ~ It takes the large state. ~ Therefore some take by playing the lower part; ~ Some are taken by playing the lower part. ~ The large state merely wants to unite with the other and nurture it; ~ The small state merely wants to join and serve the other. ~ Each gets what it wants. ~ It is right that the large state should play the lower part.

[61c40т] Tao Huang ~ A great nation flows downwardly, it is the mother of the world and the integration of the world. ~ The mother is always tranquil and overcomes the male by her tranquility, so she benefits the world. ~ A great nation relies on a low position to take over a small nation. ~ A small nation, being in a low position, is taken over by a great nation. ~ So being lower allows taking over or being taken over. ~ Being a great nation only desires to unify the people. ~ Being a small nation only seeks people's business. ~ They both get what they want, but the greater is being lower.

[61c41т] Tang Zi-chang ~ To conduct a policy of a large country should be like a valley staying in the lower ground. ~ To conduct international affairs the best policy, is to be humble and non-aggressive (inactive). ~ Everyplace under the sun, all females outsmart the males by inaction. ~ Be inactive and be humble. ~ Therefore, the large country which is humble before the small country will lead the small country. ~ The small country which is humble before the large country will please the large country. ~ Thus sometimes a country unites the world by being humble and sometimes a country becomes humble in order to unite the world. ~ What a great country wants is no more than to lead more people. ~ What the small country wants is no more than to serve others. ~ To let both of them get what they want is simply to insure that the large country be humble.

[61c42т] Wing-tsit Chan ~ A big country may be compared to the lower part of a river. ~ It is the converging point of the world; ~ It is the female of the world. ~ The female always overcomes the male by tranquility, ~ And by tranquility she is underneath. ~ A big state can take over a small state if it places itself below the small state; ~ And the small state can take over a big state if it places itself below the big state. ~ Thus some, by placing themselves below, take over (others), ~ And some, by being (naturally) low, take over (other states). ~ After all, what a big state wants is but to annex and herd others, ~ And what a small state wants is merely to join and serve others. ~ Since both big and small states get what they want, ~ The big state should place itself low.

[61c92т] А. А. Маслов ~ Великое государство подобно низовью реки, где сходятся [воды] Поднебесной, и самке Поднебесной. ~ Самка всегда одолевает самца своим покоем. ~ Пребывая в покое, она занимает нижнюю позицию. ~ Поэтому великое государство, занимая нижнюю позицию, завоёвывает доверие малого государства. ~ Малое государство, занимая нижнюю позицию, оказывает доверие великому государству. ~ Поэтому то, что занимает нижнюю позицию, либо завоёвывает доверие, либо оказывает его. ~ Всё, к чему стремится большое государство, - лишь принимать людей под своё крыло. ~ Всё, к чему стремится малое государство, - это вникать в людские дела. ~ Если оба хотят достичь желаемого, большее должно занять нижнюю позицию.

царства и так берет эти малые царства. ~ Если же малое царство опустится под великое государство, то оно возьмет великое государство. ~ Поэтому одни опускаются вниз, чтобы взять, а другие опускаются вниз, чтобы их взяли. ~ Великое государство не должно желать ничего сверх возможности равно пестовать свой народ. ~ Малое царство не должно желать ничего сверх возможности равным образом служить своим людям. ~ Поэтому и то и другое получают желаемое, когда великое соглашается опуститься под малое.

[61c94т] А. Е. Лукьянов ~ Великое царство - это низовье реки, ~ это связь Поднебесной, это Самка Поднебесной. ~ Самка всегда спокойствием побеждает самца, тихо ложась внизу. ~ Поэтому если великое царство ляжет под малое царство, ~ то овладеет малым царством. ~ Если малое царство ляжет под великое царство, ~ то овладеет великим царством. ~ Поэтому одно стремится лечь внизу, чтобы овладеть, другое лежит внизу и овладевает. ~ Великое царство желает лишь принять заботу о людях, ~ малое царство желает лишь впустить людей для дела. ~ Из них каждое получает то, что желает. ~ Великому полагается быть внизу.

[61c96т] Д. П. Конисси ~ Великая страна похожа на устье реки. ~ Совокупление вселенной есть начало всего мира. ~ Самка всегда побеждает самца потому, что она тиха и спокойно стоит ниже самца. ~ Когда большая страна стоит ниже маленькой, то первая завладеет последней. ~ Когда маленькая страна стоит ниже большой, то первая завладеет последней. ~ Отсюда видно, что стоящая ниже других страна будет владычествовать над всеми другими. ~ Что такое большая страна и маленькая? ~ Большая страна - вместилище многих народов, а маленькая - вместилище немногих. ~ Если правитель страны будет стоять ниже других, то он осуществит свой добрый замысел. ~ Отсюда ясно, что желающий быть великим должен быть ниже всех.

[61c98т] Б. Б. Виноградский ~ Большое государство - это нисходящий поток, фокус нисхождения Небес, ~ женский принцип нисхождения Небес. ~ Постоянство женского в том, что покой побеждает мужское. ~ Покой осуществляет нисхождение. ~ Причинность: ~ Большое государство способно нисходить к маленькому государству, и тогда берет маленькое государство. ~ Маленькое государство способно нисходить к большому государству, и тогда берет большое государство. ~ Причинность: ~ Или, нисходя, способен взять; или нисходишь и берешь. ~ Большое государство стремится только присоединить и накопить людей. ~ Маленькое государство стремится только подключиться к делам других людей. ~ Вот пара, в которой каждый обретает то, к чему стремится. ~ Большое - это необходимость осуществлять нисхождение.

[62c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ The Way is that toward which all things flow. ~ It is the treasure of the good man, ~ And that which protects the bad. ~ Beautiful words can be bought and sold; ~ Honored deeds can be presented to others as gifts; ~ [Even with] things that people regard as no good - will they be rejected? ~ Therefore, when the Son of Heaven is being enthroned or the Three Ministers installed, ~ Though you might salute them with disks of jade preceded by teams of four horses, ~ That's not so good as sitting still and offering this. ~ The reason why the ancients valued this - what was it? ~ Did they not say, "Those who seek, with this will attain, and those who commit offenses, with this will escape"?! ~ Therefore, it's the most valued thing in the world.

[62c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ THE Tao is the hidden Reservoir of all things. ~ A treasure to the honest, it is a safeguard to the erring. ~ A good word will find its own market. ~ A good deed may be used as a gift to another. ~ That a man is straying from the right path ~ Is no reason that he should be cast away. ~ Hence, at the Enthronement of an Emperor, ~ Or at the Installation of the Three Ministers, ~ Let others offer their discs of jade, following it up with teams of horses; ~ It is better for you to offer the Tao without moving your feet! ~ Why did the ancients prize the Tao? ~ Is it not because by virtue of it he who seeks finds, ~ And the guilty are forgiven? ~ That is why it is such a treasure to the world.

[62c03т] D. C. Lau ~ The way is the refuge for the myriad creatures. ~ It is that by which the good man protects, ~ And that by which the bad is protected. ~ Beautiful words when offered will win high rank in return; ~ Beautiful deeds can raise a man above others. ~ Even if a man is not good, why should he be abandoned? ~ Hence when the emperor is set up and the three ducal ministers are appointed, he who makes a present of the way without stirring from his seat is preferable to one who offers presents of jade disks followed by a team of four horses. ~ Why was this way valued of old? ~ Was it not said that by means of it one got what one wanted and escaped the consequences when one transgressed? ~ Therefore it is valued by the empire.

[62c04т] R. L. Wing ~ The Tao is a refuge for All Things, ~ The treasure of the good, ~ The protector of the not good. ~ Honor can be bought with fine words; ~ Others can be joined with fine conduct. ~ So if some are not good, ~ Why waste them? ~ In this way the Emperor is established; ~ The three officials are installed. ~ And although the large jade disc ~ Is preceded by a team of horses, This is not as good as sitting, ~ Advancing in the Tao. ~ Why did those of old treasure the Tao? ~ Did they not say: ~ Seek it and it is attained; ~ Possess faults and they are released? ~ Thus it is the treasure of the world.

[62c05т] Ren Jiyu ~ Tao, as the abyss where all the things are hidden, is effective and precious to good men, and also must be preserved by bad men. ~ Eloquent words can purchase honour from others, ~ And admirable deeds can put one above others, ~ How can it be abandoned by men, even in their evil deeds? ~ Therefore, when the Son of Heaven mounts the throne and the principal ministers come to their places, ~ It is better to offer Tao as a present (without any ceremonies), ~ Though there is the round jadeware, followed by the four-horse chariot. ~ Why is Tao so much valued from the old days on? ~ Can it not be said that (with it) one can get what he seeks for and be forgiven his sin? ~ Thus it is valued by all under Heaven.

[62c06т] Gia-fu Feng ~ Tao is the source of the ten thousand things. ~ It is the treasure of the good man, and the refuge of the bad. ~ Sweet words can buy honor; ~ Good deeds can gain respect. ~ If a man is bad, do not abandon him. ~ Therefore on the day the emperor is crowned, ~ Or the three officers of state installed, ~ Do not send a gift of jade and a team of four horses, ~ But remain still and offer the Tao. ~ Why does everyone like the Tao so much at first? ~ Isn't it because you find what you seek and are forgiven when you sin? ~ Therefore this is the greatest treasure of the universe.

[62c07т] Lok Sang Ho ~ The Dao is the deepest learning for all living things, ~ It is the good man's treasure ~ and the bad man's refuge. ~ Fine words attract respect; ~ Fine deeds make people look gallant. ~ (Because of such fine consequences that are expected) ~ even men who are bad ~ may not be stingy with fine words and good deeds! ~ On the occasion of the enthronement of the Emperor ~ or at the installation of three ministers of the state, therefore, ~ It is far better to follow the Dao (which certainly will bring good fortune) than to have a jade disc displayed, leading a chariot of four horses. ~ In the ancient times those people who value the Dao ~ do not do so for the consequences, ~ or in order to achieve atonement for their sins. ~ For this reason they are truly honored by all under heaven.

[62c08т] Xiaolin Yang ~ The DAO is the protector of everything. ~ Kind people treat it like a treasure; ~ Unkind people also seek its protection. ~ The DAO makes people say nice words, and thus, they are respected. ~ The DAO makes people do good deeds, and thus, they are greater. ~ Even for the unkind people, have you ever seen the DAO neglect them? ~ Therefore, being an emperor or a minister, receiving jade gifts, or being equipped with fast carriers are not as precious as having the DAO. ~ Why did the ancient people value the DAO? ~ Did they not say that it is for gaining things and redeeming sins? ~ So the DAO is the most valuable thing in the world.

[62c09т] Walter Gorn Old, PRACTICAL TAO ~ Tao is the secret guardian of all things. ~ It enriches the good man and forefends the evildoer. ~ Its counsel is always in season; its benevolence is always in demand. ~ Even those who are not good it does not forsake. ~ Therefore, when the Emperor takes his throne and appoints his nobles, he who comes before him bearing the insignia of a prince and escorted by a mounted retinue is not to be compared with one who humbly presents this Tao. ~ For why did the ancients hold it in such esteem? ~ Was it not because it could be had without much seeking, and because by means of it man might escape from sin? ~ For this it was esteemed the greatest thing in the world!

[62c10т] James Legge ~ Tao has of all things the most honoured place. ~ No treasures give good men so rich a grace; ~ Bad men it guards, and doth their ill efface. ~ (Its) admirable words can purchase honour; ~ (its) admirable deeds can raise their performer above others. ~ Even men who are not good are not abandoned by it. ~ Therefore when the sovereign occupies his place as the Son of Heaven, and he has appointed his three ducal ministers, though (a prince) were to send in a round symbol-of-rank large enough to fill both the hands, and that as the precursor of the team of horses (in the court-yard), such an offering would not be equal to (a lesson of) this Tao, which one might present on his knees. ~ Why was it that the ancients prized this Tao so much? ~ Was it not because it could be got by seeking for it, and the guilty could escape (from the stain of their guilt) by it? ~ This is the reason why all under heaven consider it the most valuable thing.

[62c11т] David Hinton ~ Way is the mystery of these ten thousand things. ~ It's a good person's treasure ~ and an evil person's refuge. ~ Its beautiful words are bought and sold ~ and its noble deeds are gifts enriching people. ~ It never abandons even the evil among us. ~ When the Son of Heaven is enthroned and the three dukes installed, parades with jade discs and stately horses can't compare to sitting still in Way's company. ~ Isn't it said that ~ the ancients exalted this Way because ~ in it whatever we seek we find, ~ and whatever seeks us we escape? ~ No wonder it's exalted throughout all beneath heaven.

[62c12т] Chichung Huang ~ The Tao is where ~ The ten thousand things flow; ~ The good man's treasure, ~ That by which the evil man is preserved. ~ Good words can win one honor; ~ Good deeds can command esteem from others. ~ The evil among men - ~ Why should they be abandoned? ~ Therefore, in enthroning the Son of Heaven, ~ Or installing the Three Counselors, ~ Though one has a jade-disk ~ That fills one's arms, ~ Preceding a team of four horses, ~ It is better to prostrate oneself ~ And present this. ~ Why did the ancients treasure this Tao so? ~ Is it not said: ~ "What one seeks will thereby be obtained; ~ What one is guilty of will thereby be pardoned?" ~ Therefore it was treasured by all under heaven.

[62c13т] Ellen M. Chen ~ To all beings Tao is the hidden secret (ao): ~ To the good persons it is their treasure (pao), ~ To the not good it is that by which they are preserved (pao). ~ Beautiful speech can go to the market. ~ Respectable conduct can be bestowed on others. ~ Those who are not good, ~ Why discard them? ~ Therefore on crowning the Son of Heaven, ~ On appointing the Three Ducal Ministers (kung), ~ Although there are tributes of jade, ~ Preceding teams of four horses, ~ It is better to kneel (tso) and present this Tao. ~ Why did the ancients honor this Tao? ~ One does not say that they did it for the purpose of gain, ~ Rather they wish to be free from offenses (tsui). ~ Therefore they were the honored under heaven.

[62c14т] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ Tao provides the profound maxim for myriad things and creatures; ~ It provides security for all the good people; ~ Even people of no good [morality] must seek security through it. ~ Beautiful and appealing talks could buy appreciation; ~ Actions of celebrities could carry their weight around; ~ If people are not good [at discernment that they are deceived in the manner described above], would this be the reason [for me] to abandon them? ~ Accordingly [by reconciling the above two, I conclude as follows]: ~ Neither the honor of becoming an emperor, or being appointed as one of the Three Grand Dukes, ~ Nor [the prominence of] marching down the public street, surrounded by servants carrying jade cups and riding in carriages drawn by four horses, ~ Can match the fulfillment of the pursuit and advancement of this (Tao). ~ Why has [Tao] had being been valued ever since very ancient times? ~ Didn't someone say that [the apprehension of Tao] enabled us to achieve what we had prayed for? ~ And [practicing Tao] would purge us of our sins? ~ For all of the above reasons, [Tao] is extremely valuable for this world.

[62c15т] Tien Cong Tran ~ The Way is the shelter of all things, the treasure of the good, and the refuge of the bad. ~ A beautiful word may bring admiration. ~ A precious deed may bring a high rank. ~ That a man is not good is not a reason that he should be cast away. ~ Hence, at the enthronement of an emperor, or at the appointment of the three ministers, the offering of jade and four-horsed carriages is not as good as the kneeling presentation of the Way. ~ Why did the ancients prize the Way? ~ Is it not because they said that "by virtue of it he who seeks finds, and the guilty are forgiven"? ~ That is why it is such a treasure to the world.

[62c16т] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ Tao is the law of the universe. ~ For able people Tao is a treasure. ~ For less able people, Tao is a guardian. ~ Good words can win reverence. ~ Good behavior can win admiration. ~ For people who are inept, should they be abandoned? ~ Therefore for the emperor who is enthroned and the three senior administrators who are appointed, there may be priceless jades and fast carriages, none is as good as adopting Tao. ~ Why Tao is so treasured by generations? ~ Is it not because it helps us reach our goals and avoid mistakes? ~ Therefore it is treasured by the whole world.

[62c17т] Arthur Waley ~ Tao in the Universe is like the south-west corner in the house. ~ It is the treasure of the good man, ~ The support of the bad. ~ There is a traffic in speakers of fine words; ~ Persons of grave demeanour are accepted as gifts; ~ Even the bad let slip no opportunity to acquire them. ~ Therefore on the day of an Emperor's enthronement ~ Or at the installation of the three officers of State ~ Rather than send a team of four horses, preceded by a disc of jade, ~ Better were it, as can be done without moving from one's seat, to send this Tao. ~ For what did the ancients say of this Tao, how did they prize it? ~ Did they not say of those that have it 'Pursuing, they shall catch; pursued, they shall escape?' ~ They thought it, indeed, most precious of all things under heaven.

[62c18t] Richard John Lynn ~ The Dao is the shelter of the myriad things. ~ It is the treasure of the good man ~ And the protector of the man who is not good. ~ Fine words can be used to market it, and noble behavior can be used to influence others by it. ~ As for men who are not good, how could they ever be discarded? ~ Thus the son of Heaven is established, and the three dukes are installed. ~ Although one could promote it by providing them with disks of jade to hold and teams of four horses to lead, this falls short of promoting this Dao by just letting them sit quietly. ~ How did the ancients show their esteem for the Dao? ~ Did they not say: ~ "When beseeching it, one obtains, and, when in violation of it, one is forgiven"? ~ Thus it was that it was esteemed by all under Heaven.

[62c19t] Lin Yutang ~ THE GOOD MAN'S TREASURE ~ Tao is the mysterious secret of the universe, ~ The good man's treasure, ~ And the bad man's refuge. ~ Beautiful sayings can be sold at the market, ~ Noble conduct can be presented as a gift. ~ Though there be bad people, ~ Why reject them? ~ Therefore on the crowning of an emperor, ~ On the appointment of the Three Ministers, ~ Rather than send tributes of jade and teams of four horses, ~ Send in the tribute of Tao. ~ Wherein did the ancients prize this Tao? ~ Did they not say, "to search for the guilty ones and pardon them"? ~ Therefore is (Tao) the treasure of the world.

[62c20t] Victor H. Mair ~ The Way is the cistern of the myriad creatures; ~ It is the treasure of the good man, ~ And that which is treasured by the bad man. ~ Beautiful words can be traded, ~ Noble deeds can be used as gifts for others. ~ Why should we reject even what is bad about men? ~ Therefore, ~ When the son of heaven is enthroned or the three ministers are installed, ~ Although they may have large jade disks ~ And be preceded by teams of four horses, ~ It would be better for them to sit down and make progress in this. ~ What was the reason for the ancients to value this so highly? ~ Did they not say: ~ "Seek and thou shalt receive; ~ Sin and thou shalt be forgiven"? ~ Therefore, ~ It is valued by all under heaven.

[62c21t] Tolbert McCarroll ~ The Tao is to the ten thousand things what the shrine is in the home. ~ It is the treasure of the virtuous ~ and the protection of the wrongdoer. ~ Good words are appreciated. ~ Good deeds are accepted as gifts. ~ Even the wrongdoers are not abandoned. ~ Hence, ~ on the day an Emperor is installed ~ and appoints the three ducal ministers, ~ remain where you are and make an offering of the Tao. ~ It will be preferable to a gift of jade discs followed by a team of four horses. ~ Why did the ancients value the Tao? ~ Was it not because through it ~ you can find what you seek, ~ and because of it ~ you can escape what is hounding you? ~ Therefore, it is the most valuable thing under heaven.

[62c22t] David H. Li ~ Direction, ~ to myriad matters, is an enclosure; ~ to people who are good, it is a treasure; ~ to people who are not good, it can reassure. ~ Good words gain people's respect; ~ good deeds gain people's admiration. ~ Why abandon people who are not good? ~ Thus, when a King is enthroned, three senior positions are filled. ~ Though there are precious jades and speedy stallions, the best present is Direction. ~ Why, through the ages, is Direction so valued? ~ Is it not because whoever seeks it gets it, and whoever is guilty, with it, receives amnesty? ~ That is why it is so valued by the world.

[62c23t] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ The Tao is the Innermost of all life, ~ The treasure of the virtuous who is centered therein, ~ And the refuge of the non-virtuous who has gone astray. ~ Beautiful words arising from the Tao will find an appreciative audience, ~ Noble deeds arising from the Tao will make great contributions to people, ~ And even if a person may have gone astray, ~ the Tao will not abandon him. ~ Therefore, on the day a new emperor is crowned or new ministers installed, ~ Rather than rushing to offer them discs of jade or teams of horses, ~ Simply be still and show them the Tao. ~ Why did the ancients esteem the Tao so highly? ~ Did they not say that with the Tao, ~ Those who seek find what they seek ~ and those who go astray are forgiven? ~ This is why the Tao is esteemed as the greatest treasure of the world.

[62c24t] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ A great country is like the drainage basin of the entire world, ~ Into which all the rivers flow, ~ It is the field of the entire world, ~ It is the femininity of the entire world. ~ Femininity always overcomes masculinity with its calmness of spirit, ~ Which it uses as a means to lower itself. ~ Thus the great country lowers itself before the small country, ~ Before it conquers the small country. ~ A small country lowers itself before a great country, ~ Before it conquers the great country. ~ Therefore some lower themselves to take, ~ And others lower themselves to gather. ~ The only wish of a great country is to hold on to and keep its endless subjects, ~ And the only wish of a small country is to engage in many occupations and tasks. ~ When they both wish to realize their aspirations, ~ Both of them together, ~ The greater of them must lower itself.

[62c25t] Man-Ho Kwok ~ The Tao is the source of 'the ten thousand things', ~ It is the sage's priceless pearl, ~ And it redeems everything. ~ You know, people like to use nice words to impress you. ~ People act nicely to gain your respect - ~ but even if a person is bad, ~ neither the sage nor the Tao will desert him. ~ They accept him. ~ And when the Emperor is crowned and the three ministers appointed, ~ it's better to stay where you are and be with the Tao than to hurry off with gifts of jade and a team of four horses. ~ The old ones 'knew this gesture', ~ and by ruling this way they were never guilty of transgressions or errors. ~ Nothing under Heaven matters more than this kind of knowing.

[62c26t] Gu Zhengkun ~ The Tao is the innermost recess of all things; ~ It is what the good man cherishes ~ As well as what the bad man wants to keep. ~ With the Tao, beautiful words can buy respect; ~ Beautiful deeds can be highly regarded. ~ How can the bad man desert the Tao? ~ Hence when the emperor ascends the throne and appoints three ducal ministers, ~ It would be better to present to the emperor the Tao than jade disks followed by a team of four horses. ~ Why did ancients value the Tao so much? ~ Was it not said that by making use of the Tao ~ One could get what one desired ~ Or avoid punishment when committing an offense? ~ That is why it is valued so mush in the world.

[62c27t] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ The Tao is the mystery of the myriad creatures. ~ It is the treasure of good men. ~ It is the protection of bad men. ~ Beautiful words of Tao can reach a high rank. ~ Respectful deeds of Tao can raise a man above others. ~ Even if a man is not good, why should he be abandoned? ~ That is why when the emperor takes office and the three ducal ministers are appointed, although gifts such as the ceremonial jade and the carriage and horses are usually given, it is better to offer the Tao. ~ And the Tao has been valued since ancient times, ~ so why shouldn't the emperor seek for it every day? ~ If he can follow this Tao, all sins will be absolved. ~ That is why the most valuable thing under Heaven is Tao.

[62c28t] Liu Qixuan ~ The Way is the pacifier appreciated by all. ~ It is the treasure of the wise and the shelter for the unwise. ~ Eloquent words can win respect. ~ Kind deeds can win praises. ~ Since the unwise are not affected, ~ Why should they be given up as hopeless? ~ Therefore, ~ It is better to sit down and present the Way ~ Than to present a king and officials to the world ~ And to give them a precious jade ~ And a carriage and four horses at the ceremony. ~ Didn't the ancient wise ones rightly appreciate the Way ~ Because it can both satisfy our needs ~ And forgive us for our sins and folly? ~ That is why the Way is the most respected.

[62c29t] Shi Fu Hwang ~ The Most Valuable Thing ~ Lao Tze says, ~ The Tao is the refuge for all existence, a treasure to men of correctitude, and a guard of less capable men. ~ Its admirable words can purchase honor; ~ its noble deeds can raise a man above others. ~ The less capable man should not be rejected. ~ That's why there is the king being selected as the Son of Heaven, and three premier ministers are arranged on their positions. ~ Although riding chariots pulled by four horses and studded with precious stones is a great honor, ~ it is even more honorable to ride on a chariot which is made of the Tao. ~ Why was it that the ancients prized this Tao so much? ~ Was it not because it could be found by seeking, and the guilty could be pardoned by it? ~ This is the reason why the whole world considered it the most valuable thing.

[62c30t] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ Tao is the source of all things, the treasure of good men, and the sustainer of bad men. ~ Therefore at the enthronement of an emperor and the appointment of the three ministers, better still than those, who present jewels followed by horses, is the one who sitting presents (propounds) this Tao. ~ Why did the ancients prize this Tao? ~ Was it not because it could be attained by seeking and thus sinners could be freed? ~ For this reason it has become the most valuable thing in the world. ~ Good words will procure one honour; good deeds will get one credit.

[62c31t] Paul J. Lin ~ Tao is the refuge of all things: ~ The treasure of the good man and the shield of the bad man. ~ Beautiful words can be for sale. ~ Good deeds can become gifts to others. ~ If a man is bad, can he be forsaken? ~ Therefore when the king is crowned and the three dukes are installed, ~ Though large, priceless jade preceding a team of four horses can be offered, ~ It is not as good as sitting down and offering this Tao. ~ Why did the ancients treasure this Tao? ~ Wasn't it said: ~ "With this Tao, the seeker will obtain, and the guilty will be spared"? ~ Therefore it is valued by the world!

[62c32t] Michael LaFargue ~ Tao is the honored center for the thousands of things. ~ The treasure of the good; ~ what protects the not good. ~ Elegant words can buy and sell; ~ fine conduct gets people promoted. ~ People who are not good, ~ why are they rejected? ~ Yes: ~ When they are enthroning the Son of Heaven or installing the Three Ministers - ~ although they are presenting in tribute jade medallions out in front of four-horse teams, ~ this cannot compare to sitting and setting forth this Tao. ~ What was the reason that the ancients treasured this Tao? ~ Is it not said: ~ "By it the seeker obtains; ~ by it the guilty escapes." ~ Yes: ~ It is the Treasure of the World.

[62c33t] Cheng Lin ~ Truth is the abode of the whole of creation. ~ It is treasured by good men, and it should also be treasured by bad men. ~ Good words enable one to obtain honour, and good conduct enables one to receive respect. ~ When a man is bad, why should we spurn him? ~ Wherefore, it is better to advance toward Truth than to be an Emperor, or a Grand Minister, or a royal messenger wearing precious jades and riding in fine carriages. ~ Why did the ancients esteem Truth? ~ Was it not for the reason that by following Truth men could obtain what was desirable and avoid what was undesirable? ~ Because of Truth they could rule the whole Empire.

[62c34t] Yi Wu ~ The Way is the refuge of all beings. ~ It is the good man's treasure ~ And the safeguard of the man who is not good. ~ Fine words can buy, ~ Respectable conduct can win people over. ~ If a man is not good, ~ How could he abandon the Way? ~ Therefore, if one is crowned king, ~ Installed by three dukes, ~ Although with hands full of jade, ~ Preceded by a four-horse team, ~ It is not as good as sitting here, advancing the Way. ~ Why, since ancient times, has the Way been thus valued? ~ Is it not because the one can get what he seeks ~ And the other can get rid of his sins? ~ Therefore, the Way is valued by the world.

[62c35t] Han Hiong Tan ~ Dao is the safe haven for all beings. ~ The good people value it. ~ The bad people receive protection from it. ~ Words consistent with Dao will place you in a coveted position. ~ Deeds consistent with Dao will make you stand out from the crowd. ~ Even if people are bad, Dao will not reject them. ~ There are important events as such coronation and swearing in of ministers. ~ In these pompous ceremonies, officials carrying precious jade lead the procession followed by four thoroughbreds. ~ This largess becomes insignificant when compared to simply presenting Dao as a gift. ~ Why has Dao always been valued since antiquity? ~ It is as the saying goes: ~ "If you seek it, you will get it; if you make an error, you will be forgiven." ~ Hence, Dao is valued by all.

[62c36t] Hua-Ching Ni ~ The subtle essence of the universe supports all things. ~ It is a treasure to virtuous people, ~ yet it is a refuge for unvirtuous people too. ~ Good words will find their market. ~ Good deeds may be presented as a gift to another. ~ Though a person has strayed from the right path, ~ the all-encompassing subtle essence of the universe will never abandon him. ~ Hence, at the enthronement of an emperor, ~ or the appointment of the three highest ministers of the empire, ~ rather than present them with discs of jade and teams of fine horses, ~ show them the priceless subtle Way of the universe. ~ Why did the ancients esteem the subtle Way of the universe? ~ Didn't they say that a seeker will find nothing, ~ but that he can be free from all transgression? ~ That is why it is such a treasure to the world.

[62c37t] Chang Chung-yuan ~ Tao is concealed in the depths of all things. ~ The worthy value it. ~ The unworthy are protected by it. ~ Good words may be traded for honor. ~ Good works may impress men. ~ Even if a man is unworthy, Tao will never exclude him. ~ Although in a great nation an emperor is established, ~ Ministers are appointed, and ~ Jade and horses are all decorated, ~ None of these is a better offer to the nation than Tao. ~ Tao has been highly esteemed since the remote past. ~ Why? ~ Because not searching for it, one obtains it. ~ Even if one has faults, one is free from them. ~ Thus, the Tao is the most highly esteemed thing in the universe.

[62c38t] Henry Wei ~ Practicing Tao ~ Wei Tao ~ Tao is a mystery within all things. ~ It is a treasure to the good men; ~ To the bad men it gives protection. ~ Fine words may be shown at the market place; ~ Noble deeds may serve as gifts to people. ~ Some people may not be good, ~ But why should any of them be discarded? ~ Therefore, when an emperor is enthroned, ~ Or when the three chief ministers are installed, ~ Though they may have fine pieces of jade ~ Respectfully presented before the team of horses, ~ There is nevertheless nothing better for them ~ Than to sit (in meditation) and advance in Tao. ~ For what reason did the ancients prize this Tao? ~ Did they not say: ~ "With Tao one finds what one seeks, ~ And can get pardoned for one's offenses"? ~ Hence Tao is highly prized by the world.

[62c39t] Ha Poong Kim ~ Tao ~ Is the sanctuary of the ten thousand things, ~ The good man's treasure, ~ The bad man's refuge. ~ Beautiful words can buy honor, ~ Beautiful deeds can benefit people. ~ Though a man may be bad, ~ How can he be abandoned? ~ Therefore, on occasion of crowning the Son of Heaven ~ Or installing the three ministers of state, ~ Rather than present a large disc of jade, accompanied by a team of four horses, ~ Better remain in your seat and offer a tribute of this

Tao. ~ Why did the ancients honor this Tao? ~ Did they not say: ~ "You get thereby what you seek; ~ You escape thereby when you have sinned." ~ Therefore they regarded it as the most precious of all things under Heaven.

[62c40t] Tao Huang ~ Tao is the conductor of all things. ~ The treasure of the good. ~ The protector of the bad. ~ Beautiful words can advertise well. ~ Noble conduct brings praise to people. ~ As for those who conduct the bad, why reject them for it? ~ Therefore, after the crowning of the emperor comes the appointing of three administrations. ~ Being presented with jade in front of the team of four horses is not better than sitting and entering thus. ~ The reason why this is valued of old is, ~ It allows having without asking, and it allows forgiveness of wrong. ~ Thus, it is most valuable to the world.

[62c41t] Tang Zi-chang ~ Dao is the wonder of All Things. ~ Perfection is what people like. ~ Imperfection is what people dislike. ~ Beautiful words may be used for markets. ~ Beautiful deeds may be used for pride. ~ If a person is imperfect why should he be ignored? ~ Hence, the "Son of Heaven" was installed and the three dukes (Ministers) were appointed, ~ Even though one has abundant jade and wealth to establish war horses and chariots, it is not as good as to consolidate and advance Dao. ~ For what reasons did the ancients bless this Dao? ~ Is it not said that: ~ "Whatever is prayed for is obtained. ~ Whoever has sin is forgiven."? ~ Thus Dao becomes the blessing of the world.

[62c42t] Wing-tsit Chan ~ Tao is the storehouse of all things. ~ It is the good man's treasure and the bad man's refuge. ~ Fine words can buy honor, ~ And fine deeds can gain respect from others. ~ Even if a man is bad, when has (Tao) rejected him? ~ Therefore on the occasion of crowning an emperor or installing the three ministers, ~ Rather than present large pieces of jade preceded by teams of four horses, ~ It is better to kneel and offer this Tao. ~ Why did the ancients highly value this Tao? ~ Did they not say, "Those who seek shall have it and those who sin shall be freed"? ~ For this reason it is valued by the world.

[62c92t] А. А. Маслов ~ Дао - величайшее хранилище мириад существ. ~ Это то, что является сокровищем добрых людей и защитой для тех, в ком нет добра. ~ Прекрасные слова высоко ценятся при продаже. ~ Прекрасные поступки могут вызвать людское уважение. ~ Даже если в человеке нет добра, зачем же отвергать его? ~ Поэтому взошедший на трон правитель и три властвующих князя, хотя и имеют драгоценные кольца и сопровождаются четвёркой лошадей, не сравнятся с теми, кто, не сходя с места, снискал дары Дао. ~ Почему древние ценили Дао? ~ Разве не говорилось: "Устремись, дабы достичь его, и даже если ты имел пороки - избегнешь зла". ~ За это оно и ценится в Поднебесной.

[62c94t] А. Е. Лукьянов ~ Дао - таинственная основа мириад вещей, ~ драгоценность добрых людей, защита от недобрых людей. ~ Красивыми речами, конечно, можно заворожить толпу на базарной площади. ~ Благопристойным поведением, конечно, можно возвыситься над другими. ~ Однако как же избавиться от того недоброго, что глубоко таится в людях? ~ Для этого утверждают на престоле Сына Неба и назначают трех гунов. ~ Они хотя и держат в руках символы власти и ездят в экипажах, ~ запряженных четверками лошадей, но все же не лучше ли [им] воссесть и ехать на самом Дао! ~ Почему в древности ценили это Дао? ~ Безгласные через него получали необходимое, ~ а совершившие злодеяние через него искореняли вредное. ~ Вот почему [оно] было ценностью для Поднебесной.

[62c95t] Ян Хин-шун ~ Дао - глубокая [основа] всех вещей. ~ Оно сокровище добрых и защита недобрых людей. ~ Красивые слова можно произносить публично, доброе поведение можно распространять на людей. ~ Но зачем же покидать недобрых людей? ~ В таком случае для чего же выдвигают государя и назначают ему трех советников? ~ Государь и советники хотя и имеют драгоценные камни и могут ездить на колесницах, но лучше будет им спокойно следовать дао. ~ Почему в древности ценили дао? ~ В то время люди не стремились к приобретению богатств и преступления прощались. ~ Поэтому [дао] в Поднебесной ценилось дорого.

[62c97t] В. В. Малявин ~ Путь - это хранилище всех вещей, ~ Сокровищница для добрых людей и убежище для недобрых. ~ Красивыми речами можно торговать, ~ Славными поступками можно привлечь почитателей. ~ Пусть человек недобр - бывало ли так, чтоб его отвергали? ~ Посему, когда восходит Сын Неба или жалуют ~ Трех Князей, ~ Не подносите им яшмовые жезлы и четверки коней, ~ А лучше, сидя покойно, вручите им этот Путь. ~ Древние ценили этот Путь - что же он такое? ~ Разве не сказано: "Кто ищет с ним, тот обрящет, ~ Кто провинился, тот, обладая им, уцелеет"? ~ Вот почему его ценили в мире.

[63c01t] Robert G. Henricks ~ Act without acting; ~ Serve without concern for affairs; ~ Find flavor in what has no flavor. ~ Regard the small as large and the few as many, ~ And repay resentment with kindness. ~ Plan for the difficult while {it is easy}; ~ {Act on the large} while it's minute. ~ The most difficult things in the world begin as things that are easy; ~ The largest things in the world arise from the minute. ~ Therefore the Sage, to the end does not strive to do the great, ~ And as a result, he is able {to accomplish the great}; ~ {Those who} too lightly agree {will necessarily be trusted by few}; ~ And those who regard many things as easy will necessarily [end up] with many difficulties. ~ Therefore, even the Sage regards things as difficult, ~ And as a result, in the end he has no difficulty.

[63c02t] John C. H. Wu ~ DO the Non-Ado. ~ Strive for the effortless. ~ Savour the savourless. ~ Exalt the low. ~ Multiply the few. ~ Requite injury with kindness. ~ Nip troubles in the bud. ~ Sow the great in the small. ~ Difficult things of the world ~ Can only be tackled when they are easy. ~ Big things of the world ~ Can only be achieved by attending to their small beginnings. ~ Thus, the Sage never has to grapple with big things, ~ Yet he alone is capable of achieving them! ~ He who promises lightly must be lacking in faith. ~ He who thinks everything easy will end by finding everything difficult. ~ Therefore, the Sage, who regards everything as difficult, ~ Meets with no difficulties in the end.

[63c03t] D. C. Lau ~ Do that which consists in taking no action; ~ Pursue that which is not meddlesome; ~ Savour that which has no flavour. ~ Make the small big and the few many; ~ Do good to him who has done you an injury. ~ Lay plans for the accomplishment of the difficult before it becomes difficult; ~ Make something big by starting with it when small. ~ Difficult things in the world must needs have their beginnings in the easy; ~ Big things must needs have their beginnings in the small. ~ Therefore it is because the sage never attempts to be great that he succeeds in becoming great. ~ One who makes promises rashly rarely keeps good faith; ~ One who is in the habit of considering things easy meets with frequent difficulties. ~ Therefore even the sage treats some things as difficult. ~ That is why in the end no difficulties can get the better of him.

[63c04t] R. L. Wing ~ Act without action; work without effort. ~ Taste without savoring. ~ Magnify the small; increase the few. ~ Repay ill-will with kindness. ~ Plan the difficult when it is easy; ~ Handle the big where it is small. ~ The world's hardest work begins when it is easy; ~ The world's largest effort begins where it is small. ~ Evolved Individuals, finally, take no great action, ~ And in that way the great is achieved. ~ Those who commit easily, inspire little trust. ~ How easy to inspire hardness! ~ Therefore Evolved Individuals view all as difficult. ~ Finally they have no difficulty!

[63c05t] Ren Jiyu ~ Consider nonaction as an action, having no trouble as an affair and flavourless as a flavour. ~ No matter how hostile others are towards me, I always repay them with "De." ~ Prepare for a difficult problem while it is easy, ~ Enter on a great task while it is small. ~ All the difficult things under Heaven necessarily arise from the state in which they were easy; ~ All the great tasks under Heaven arise from the state in which they were small. ~ For this reason, the sage never does great things, ~ And he can accomplish great things just on that account. ~ Light promising makes one lose one's credit, ~ And thinking things easy leads to difficulties. ~ So, the sage, though he is very wise, pays much attention to the difficulties, ~ Therefore he is free from difficulties in the end.

[63c06t] Gia-fu Feng ~ Practice non-action. ~ Work without doing. ~ Taste the tasteless. ~ Magnify the small, increase the few. ~ Reward bitterness with care. ~ See simplicity in the complicated. ~ Achieve greatness in little things. ~ In the universe the difficult things are done as if they are easy. ~ In the universe great acts are made up of small deeds. ~ The sage does not attempt anything very big, ~ And thus achieves greatness. ~ Easy promises make for little trust. ~ Taking things lightly results in great difficulty. ~ Because the sage always confronts difficulties, ~ He never experiences them.

[63c07t] Lok Sang Ho ~ Act in the state of non-action; ~ Work but do not work for gain; ~ Taste but do not taste for the taste. ~ Never mind if it is big, small, many, or few, ~ Just repay injury with benevolence. ~ To do the difficult we start with the easy. ~ To do the great thing we start with the small. ~ All the difficult tasks under heaven must begin with the easy parts. ~ All the great achievements under heaven must begin with the small steps. ~ The Sage never sets out to do great things. ~ That way he accomplishes great results. ~ Those who make easy promises will not be trusted. ~ Those who say everything is easy ~ will often have difficulty accomplishing their tasks, ~ The Sage, on the other hand, takes on the easy tasks as he takes on the difficult. ~ So in the end no difficulty will hold him up.

[63c08t] Xiaolin Yang ~ Treat lack of achievement as the achievement, ~ treat lack of accomplishment as the accomplishment, ~ treat lack of flavor as the flavor. ~ Make the small big, make the less more, return hatred with DE. ~ Solve problems while they are simple; accomplish big things while they are small. ~ The most difficult tasks in the world can only be finished if you attack them while they are simple; ~ The most important things in the world can only be accomplished if you start them while they are small. ~ Therefore, the great men never started with big things, so they accomplished big things. ~ Promises made easily have no credibility; if you view everything as easy, you will meet many difficulties. ~ So, the great men tried to find as many difficulties as possible, so they never had difficulties.

[63c09t] Walter Gorn Old, FORETHOUGHT ~ Acting without design, occupying oneself without making a business of it, finding the great in what is small, and the many in the few, repaying injury with kindness, effecting difficult things while they are easy, and managing great things in their beginnings, is the method of Tao. ~ All difficult things have their origin in that which is easy, and great things in that which is small. ~ Therefore the wise man can accomplish great things without even attempting them. ~ He who lightly assents will seldom keep his word. ~ He who accounts all things easy will have many difficulties. ~ Therefore the Sage takes great account of small things, and so never has any difficulty.

[63c10t] James Legge ~ (It is the way of the Tao) to act without (thinking of) acting; ~ to conduct affairs without (feeling the) trouble of them; ~ to taste without discerning any flavour; ~ to consider what is small as great, and a few as many; ~ and to recompense injury with kindness. ~ (The master of it) anticipates things that are difficult while they are easy, and does things that would become great while they are small. ~ All difficult things in the world are sure to arise from a previous state in which they were easy, and all great things from one in which they were small. ~ Therefore the sage, while he never does what is great, is able on that account to accomplish the greatest things. ~ He who lightly promises is sure to keep but little faith; ~ he who is continually thinking things easy is sure to find them difficult. ~ Therefore the sage sees difficulty even in what seems easy, and so never has any difficulties.

[63c11t] David Hinton ~ If you're nothing doing what you do, ~ you act without acting and savor without savoring, ~ you render the small vast and the few many, ~ use Integrity to repay hatred, ~ see the complexity in simplicity, ~ find the vast in the minute. ~ The complex affairs of all beneath heaven are there in simplicity, ~ and the vast affairs of all beneath heaven are there in the minute. ~ That's why a sage never bothers with vastness and so becomes utterly vast. ~ Easy promises breed little trust, and too much simplicity breeds too much complexity. ~ That's why a sage inhabits the complexity of things and so avoids all complexity.

[63c12T] Chichung Huang ~ Act without action; ~ Disturb without disturbance; ~ Taste the tasteless. ~ Great, small, much, little, ~ Requite enmity with favor. ~ Tackle a difficult issue while it is easy; ~ Create a great enterprise while it is small. ~ All difficult issues under heaven ~ Begin from easy ones; ~ All great enterprises under heaven ~ Begin from small ones. ~ Hence, the sage man never presumed vastness, ~ So, he could achieve vastness. ~ For he who makes promises lightly ~ Must lack in trustworthiness; ~ He who takes many things easy ~ Must encounter many difficulties. ~ Hence, even the sage man ~ Considered the task difficult, ~ Therefore, eventually he had no difficulty.

[63c13T] Ellen M. Chen ~ Do (wei) when there is nothing to do (wu-wei), ~ Manage affairs (shih) when there are none to manage, ~ Know (chih) by not knowing. ~ Regard the great as small, the much as little. ~ Repay injury (yüan) with te. ~ Plan the difficult while it is easy. ~ Accomplish (wei) the great when it is small. ~ Difficult affairs of the world, ~ Must be done while they are easy. ~ Great affairs of the world, ~ Must be done while they are small. ~ The sage never does anything great, ~ Therefore he can accomplish the great. ~ He who makes promises lightly seldom keeps his words. ~ He who takes much to be easy finds much to be difficult. ~ Therefore even the sage takes things to be difficult, ~ So that in the end they are not difficult.

[63c14T] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ A person who quests for Tao must carry out the principle of non-interference; ~ He must restrain himself from implementing his selfish desires [particularly at the cost of others]; ~ He must examine facts thoroughly in spite of boredom; ~ He must requite all accusations and animosities with virtuous acts, no matter whether it is serious, minor, many, or few. ~ A difficult problem should be tackled from its easiest points; ~ To accomplish a great deed one should start from working on its minute details; ~ Difficult works in this world must be built up from easy points; ~ Grand tasks in this world should be started from within small scales. ~ Accordingly, a Sage did not [consciously] aim at accomplishing a grand task, yet he would eventually complete great deeds [with accrual of realistic achievements through working diligently step-by-step]. ~ A person who makes promises easily would keep only a few of them; ~ A person who seeks easy way out will confront more difficulties later; ~ Therefore, a Sage would think hard and keep in mind that each task could be more intricate than it appears to be; ~ Eventually no hardship can hampered him.

[63c15T] Tien Cong Tran ~ Do non-doing. ~ Carry out no-work. ~ Taste the tasteless. ~ Make the small big. ~ Make the little much. ~ Render Virtue to enmity. ~ Plan the difficult when it is still easy. ~ Accomplish the great when it is still small. ~ Difficult things in the world can be achieved in what is easy. ~ Big things in the world can be achieved in what is minute. ~ Thus, the sage never does big things, yet by that he is capable of achieving them! ~ He who promises lightly must rarely fulfill it. ~ He who thinks a thing easy will find it difficult. ~ Therefore, the sage, who regards everything as difficult, meets with no difficulties in the end.

[63c16T] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ Practice no forcing; undertake natural tasks; eat plain food. ~ No matter big or small, more or less, reply hostility with kindness. ~ When handling difficulties, one should start with the easiest first. ~ When eating the elephant, take one bite at a time. ~ In the world, difficult tasks are composed of easy ones; ~ Big tasks are formed by small ones. ~ This is why the sage never attempt big, but can achieve big. ~ Easily promising results in less credibility. ~ Broadly underestimating leads to a lot of difficulties. ~ This is why sages treat everything as if it was difficult. ~ So they never have difficulties.

[63c17T] Arthur Waley ~ It acts without action, does without doing, finds flavour in what is flavourless, ~ Can make the small great and the few many, ~ 'Requites injuries with good deeds, ~ Deals with the hard while it is still easy, ~ With the great while it is still small.' ~ In the governance of empire everything difficult must be dealt with while it is still easy, ~ Everything great must be dealt with while it is still small. ~ Therefore the Sage never has to deal with the great; and so achieves greatness. ~ But again ~ 'Light assent inspires little confidence ~ And "many easies" means many a hard.' ~ Therefore the Sage knows too how to make the easy difficult, and by doing so avoid all difficulties!

[63c18T] Richard John Lynn ~ Act by not acting; ~ do by not doing; ~ find flavor in that which has no flavor. ~ Deal with the small as if it were the great, and deal with the few as if it were the many, but respond to resentment in terms of virtue. ~ Plan for the difficult while it is still easy; ~ work on the great while it is still small. ~ Every difficult matter under Heaven surely originates in something easy, and every great matter under Heaven surely originates in something small. ~ Therefore it is because the sage never tries to be great that he fulfills his greatness. ~ Assent lightly given surely inspires little trust. ~ Regarding many things as easy is sure to result in many difficulties. ~ Therefore the sage still regards them as difficulties. ~ Thus he never has difficulties.

[63c19T] Lin Yutang ~ DIFFICULT AND EASY ~ Accomplish do-nothing. ~ Attend to no-affairs. ~ Taste the flavorless. ~ Whether it is big or small, many or few, ~ Requite hatred with virtue. ~ Deal with the difficult while yet it is easy; ~ Deal with the big while yet it is small. ~ The difficult (problems) of the world ~ Must be dealt with while they are yet easy; ~ The great (problems) of the world ~ Must be dealt with while they are yet small. ~ Therefore the Sage by never dealing with great (problems) ~ Accomplishes greatness. ~ He who lightly makes a promise ~ Will find it often hard to keep his faith. ~ He who makes light of many things ~ Will encounter many difficulties. ~ Hence even the Sage regards things as difficult, ~ And for that reason never meets with difficulties.

[63c20T] Victor H. Mair ~ Act through nonaction, ~ Handle affairs through noninterference, ~ Taste what has no taste, ~ Regard the small as great, the few as many, ~ Repay resentment with integrity. ~ Undertake difficult tasks by approaching what is easy in them; ~ Do great deeds by focusing on their minute aspects. ~ All difficulties under heaven arise from what is easy, ~ All great things under heaven arise from what is minute. ~ For this reason, ~ The sage never strives to do what is great. ~ Therefore, ~ He can achieve greatness. ~ One who lightly assents will seldom be believed; ~ One who thinks everything is easy will encounter much difficulty. ~ For this reason, ~ Even the sage considers things difficult. ~ Therefore, ~ In the end he is without difficulty.

[63c21T] Tolbert McCarroll ~ Act without striving. ~ Work without interfering. ~ Find the flavor in what is flavorless. ~ Enlarge the small, increase the few. ~ Heal injury with goodness. ~ Handle the difficult while it is still easy. ~ Cultivate the great while it is still small. ~ All difficult things begin as easy things. ~ All great things begin as small things. ~ Therefore, ~ the True Person never attempts anything great, and accomplishes great things. ~ Lightly made promises inspire little faith. ~ Trying to make things easy results in great difficulties. ~ Therefore, ~ the True Person regards everything as difficult, and is never overcome by difficulties.

[63c22T] David H. Li ~ Govern with laissez-faire. ~ Act without fanfare. ~ Dine with the commonest fare. ~ Big begins as small; many accrue from few. ~ In tackling difficult tasks, first tackle those easy; ~ In tackling big tasks, first tackle those flimsy. ~ The difficult tasks of the world begin as easy; ~ The big tasks of the world begin as flimsy. ~ Thus, the sage, who never considers self big, completes many big tasks. ~ Thus, ~ promise easily made leads to promise not fulfilled; ~ difficulty underestimated leads to difficulty multiplied. ~ Thus, the sage, in treating every task as difficult, encounters no difficulties.

[63c23T] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ Act from the still fulcrum of non-action, ~ Engage from the still fulcrum of non-engagement, ~ Experience from the still fulcrum of non-experience. ~ Regard the insignificant as significant, ~ Regard the minor as major, ~ Requite the unkind with kindness. ~ Meet the difficult while it is still easy, ~ Solve the major while it is still minor. ~ Difficult problems of the world always arise from easy ones, ~ Major issues of the world always arise from minor ones. ~ Therefore, the sage never deals with major issues, ~ Yet his action always leads to major accomplishment. ~ Those who commit lightly are seldom to be trusted. ~ Those who assume things to be easy are always met with difficulties. ~ Therefore, the sage assumes everything to be difficult, ~ And ends up having no difficulty at all.

[63c24T] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ The Tao is the source of everything, ~ The treasure of the good man, ~ The sustainer of the bad man. ~ Therefore, ~ Even the ceremonial splendor of the coronation of the emperor and his three ministers, ~ And the value of the jewels and the knights' horses, ~ Are nothing compared to the splendor of this Tao. ~ Why did the ancients value the Tao? ~ Is it because it is possible to seek it and find it and liberate sinners with it? ~ For this reason, the Tao is the most valuable thing in the world. ~ Good words will nurture our honor, ~ Good deeds will give a person a good name.

[63c25T] Man-Ho Kwok ~ The sage does nothing, and so he never fails - ~ He holds on to nothing, and so he never loses ... ~ Whereas the rest of us always seem to mess up our lives just at the moment when we seem to be succeeding! ~ That's why the sage wants nothing for himself. ~ He doesn't want precious things or possessions. ~ What is he? ~ A Student Of The Unknowable, so he doesn't make mistakes like the rest of us but always tries to help us to be true to who we are without ever standing in our way. ~ And so he says: ~ Do things wu-wei, by doing nothing; ~ Achieve without trying to achieve anything; ~ Savour the taste of what you cannot taste; ~ Make a small thing great, and the few into many; ~ Take on the largest things when they're still small, ~ Start the hardest things while they're still easy. ~ It's always the person who thinks things are easy that finds them the hardest in the end. ~ The way he sees it: everything's potentially tricky, so he never ends up out of his depth.

[63c26T] Gu Zhengkun ~ Act by means of inaction; ~ Deal with matters by means of not being meddlesome; ~ Taste by means of tastelessness. ~ The big stems from the small; ~ The many is based on the few. ~ To overcome the difficult should begin with the easy; ~ To accomplish what is big should begin with the small. ~ The difficult things in the world must originate in the easy; ~ The big things in the world must take root in the small. ~ That is why the sage can accomplish what is great by never attempting to be great. ~ Light promise-giving, light promise-breaking; ~ The easier one considers things, the more difficult things become. ~ That is why the sage never meets with difficulty ~ Because he always considers things difficult.

[63c27T] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ Do that which takes no action. ~ Deal with that which engenders no effort. ~ Taste that which has no flavour. ~ Treat the small as the great. ~ Return enmity with virtue. ~ Plan the difficult as the easy. ~ Carry out the hard work as if it were the finer details. ~ The difficult things under Heaven come from the easy things. ~ Great matter is made up of minor matter. ~ Therefore the sage does not try to be great, and thus he can be great. ~ He who makes easy promises can be little trusted. ~ He who considers things to be easy will meet many difficulties. ~ That is why the sage expects difficulties, and therefore encounters none.

[63c28T] Liu Qixuan ~ One does things so that one needs to do nothing. ~ One takes actions so that one needs no action. ~ One tastes so that one can appreciate tastelessness. ~ One values what is small or little, and returns good for evil. ~ One starts from the easiest to achieve the most difficult. ~ One starts from the most trivial to achieve the highest. ~ For it is only by taking easy measures ~ That one can achieve the most difficult in the world. ~ It is only by taking trivial steps ~ That one can achieve the highest in the world. ~ Therefore, the wise person who never looks important ~ Is able to be the most important. ~ Those who make hasty promises can rarely keep them. ~ Those who think nothing difficult will have many difficulties. ~ That is why the wise person worries about difficulties ~ And can therefore solve them successfully.

[63c29T] Shi Fu Hwang ~ Difficult And Easy ~ Lao Tze says, ~ He who practices acting without intent to control fate will find that there is no business which is troubling him to manage. ~ He who can taste a tasteless thing will learn to regard what is small as great, and a few as many; ~ and to recompense injury with kindness. ~ He will deal with things that are difficult while they are easy, ~ and handle things that would become great while they are still small. ~ All difficult things in the world arise from an original state of having been easy, ~ and all great things arise from an original state of having been small. ~ Therefore the sage never attempts to achieve a great feat. ~ He who makes promises lightly rarely keeps good faith. ~ He who likes to think things will be easy will find them difficult. ~ Therefore the sage sees difficulty even in what seems easy, so they are always free of difficulties.

[63c30T] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ Act non-action; undertake no undertaking; taste the tasteless. ~ The Sage desires the desireless, and prizes no articles that are difficult to get. ~ He learns no learning, but reviews what others have passed through. ~ Thus he lets all things develop in their natural way, and does not venture to act. ~ Regard the small as great; regard the few as many. ~ Manage the difficult while they are easy; ~ Manage the great while they are small. ~ All difficult things in the world start from the easy; ~ All great things in the world start from the small. ~ The tree that fills a man's arms arises from a tender shoot; ~ The nine-storeyed tower is raised from a heap of earth; ~ A thousand miles' journey begins from the spot under one's feet. ~ Therefore the Sage never attempts great things, and thus he can achieve what is great. ~ He who makes easy promises will seldom keep his word; ~ He who regards many things as easy will find many difficulties. ~ Therefore the Sage regards things as difficult, and consequently never has difficulties.

[63c31T] Paul J. Lin ~ Acting by inaction; ~ Doing by not doing; ~ Tasting by not tasting. ~ Whether it is great or small, whether it is much or little, ~ Always repaying malice with virtue. ~ Planning difficulties from the easier. ~ Employing the great from the small. ~ The world's difficult things surely begin with the easy. ~ The world's great things surely begin with the small. ~ Therefore, the Sage never does anything to be great ~ And so accomplishes greatness. ~ To take one's promises lightly results in little confidence. ~ To take things too easily results in much difficulty. ~ Therefore, even the Sage takes things seriously. ~ And never has any difficulty.

[63c32T] Michael LaFargue ~ Be a Non Doer, ~ work at Not Working, ~ acquire a taste for that which has no taste. ~ Treat small things as though they were great; ~ treat few things as though they were many. ~ "Reward what is injurious, with kind Te." ~ Plan difficult things focusing on the easy parts; ~ do great things focusing on the small details. ~ Difficult tasks in the world always begin from what is easy, ~ great tasks in the world always begin from what is small. ~ And so the Wise Person: ~ Does not 'do great things', ~ and so is able to fulfill his greatness. ~ Yes: ~ Light agreement is never very trustworthy, ~ considering everything easy makes everything difficult. ~ And so the Wise Person: ~ Treats things as difficult, ~ and in the end has no difficulty.

[63c33т] Cheng Lin ~ Abide by inaction. ~ Do not crave for accomplishment. ~ Discard learning. ~ Regard great, small, much and little as the same. ~ Deal with what is easy as though it were difficult; ~ with what is trivial as though it were important. ~ The world's difficult tasks may appear easy in the beginning, just as the world's great achievements may appear small in the beginning. ~ Because the Sage does not go about great undertakings, he is able to accomplish great things. ~ He who lightly makes promises will surely be found wanting in good faith. ~ He who often underestimates difficult tasks will surely be beset with difficulties. ~ Because the Sage is always aware of the existence of difficulties, he never encounters difficulties.

[63c34т] Yi Wu ~ Act through non-action, ~ Serve through non-doing, ~ Taste through non-tasting, ~ Do the great through the small, ~ Deal with the myriad through the few, ~ Repay malice with virtue, ~ Solve the difficult problem at its easiest, ~ Do the great work at its smallest. ~ The difficult affairs of the world surely start from the easy, ~ The great works of the world surely begin from the small. ~ Therefore, the sage, never doing anything for greatness, ~ Is able to achieve greatness. ~ One who promises lightly surely will not be trustworthy; ~ One who thinks everything easy will end in more difficulty. ~ Therefore, the sage, taking everything as difficult, ~ Will have no difficulty in the end.

[63c35т] Han Hiong Tan ~ Normal people act rashly, but the sage does not. ~ Normal people interfere freely, but the sage is different. ~ Normal people prefer tasty cuisine, but the sage prefers plain food. ~ The sage will deal with all matters, big or small, by always recompensing ill will with goodwill. ~ To solve a complex issue, you must first start working with the easy problems. ~ To accomplish a huge task, you must start and graduate from a series of simpler tasks. ~ To solve the most complex problem, you must tackle the simplest one first. ~ The greatest task in the world is often the aggregation of smaller tasks. ~ The sage has never endeavoured to accomplish a great task. ~ Yet, he accomplishes a great task. ~ A person who readily gives promises often fails to keep them. ~ A person who takes things too lightly will definitely be plagued with many problems. ~ The sage regards everything as potentially troublesome. ~ Consequently, he will never encounter any difficulty.

[63c36т] Hua-Ching Ni ~ Do that which is not done by doing. ~ Make that which is not made by making. ~ Taste that which cannot be distinguished by taste. ~ Hold the same regard for the few and the many. ~ Requite the unkind with kindness. ~ Thus, one of subtle virtue desires what is not connected with desire, ~ sets no value on the rare goods of the world, ~ learns what is not learned through learning, ~ and induces people to return to that which they have overlooked.

[63c37т] Chang Chung-yuan ~ Action or non-action, work or non-work, knowledge or non-knowledge, ~ Large or small, more or less: ~ It is just like returning hatred with love, ~ Contemplating the difficult with the easy, ~ Working on the great through the small. ~ Because the hard tasks in the world must be preceded by what is easy, ~ Great affairs in the world must begin with what is minute. ~ Hence, the wise never works on what is great; ~ He achieves what is great. ~ The easier it is to promise a thing, ~ The less one can fulfill. ~ The more lightly things are taken, ~ The more difficulties occur. ~ Therefore, the wise takes things as difficult; ~ He is always free from the difficult.

[63c38т] Henry Wei ~ Origin of Favors ~ En Shih ~ Practice non-interference. ~ Assert non-assertion. ~ Taste the tasteless. ~ Regard small as great, little as much. ~ Requite evil with virtue. ~ Tackle difficult tasks while they are easy; ~ Perform great tasks while they are small. ~ Difficult tasks must be begun when yet easy; ~ Great tasks must be begun when yet small. ~ That's why the Sage, to the end of his days, ~ Does not have to tackle great tasks, ~ And for this very reason achieves greatness. ~ Promises lightly made show little good faith; ~ Duties neglected are bound to become difficult. ~ That's why the Sage assumes things to be difficult, ~ And never in life incurs any difficulty.

[63c39т] Ha Poong Kim ~ Act through no-action, ~ Attend to no-affair, ~ Relish no-flavor, ~ Take the small as big and the few as many. ~ Repay hatred with Te. ~ Plan difficult things while they are easy. ~ Handle big things while they are small. ~ Difficult things under Heaven ~ Always arise from what is easy; ~ Big things under Heaven ~ Always arise from what is small. ~ For this reason the sage ~ Never intends big things, ~ And thus can accomplish big things. ~ He who agrees lightly invariably inspires little faith. ~ He who considers many things easy invariably encounters many difficulties. ~ For this reason even the sage considers things difficult; ~ Therefore he never encounters difficulties.

[63c40т] Tao Huang ~ Do nondoing. ~ Engage in non-affairs. ~ Savor non-flavor. ~ Large or small, many or few, reward or punishment, are all being done through Action. ~ Seek what is difficult with ease. ~ Effect what is great while it is small. ~ The most difficult things in the world are done while they are easy. ~ The greatest things in the world are done while they are small. ~ The sage never plans to do a great thing. ~ Thus, he accomplishes what is great. ~ Facile promises necessarily result in little trust. ~ What is easy necessarily entails difficulty. ~ Thus the sage, through extreme trials, encounters no difficulty.

[63c41т] Tang Zi-chang ~ Do not interfere; ~ prepare the unprepared; ~ and think the unthinkable. ~ No matter whether it is great or small, whether it is much or little, hatred must be met with love. ~ Therefore, resolve the difficulty when it is easy. ~ Change the graveness when it is insignificant. ~ A difficult world affair must be solved when it is still easy. ~ A grave world situation must be changed when it is insignificant. ~ However, the Sage ruler never wishes himself to be superior, therefore he eventually becomes superior. ~ Hence an easy promise must result in promise-breaking. ~ Frequent easy-goings meet more difficulties. ~ A Sage was always aware of difficulties, thus he met no difficulty at last.

[63c42т] Wing-tsit Chan ~ Act without action. ~ Do without ado. ~ Taste without tasting. ~ Whether it is big or small, many or few, repay hatred with virtue. ~ Prepare for the difficult while it is still easy. ~ Deal with the big while it is still small. ~ Difficult undertakings have always started with what is easy. ~ And great undertakings have always started with what is small. ~ Therefore the sage never strives for the great, ~ And thereby the great is achieved. ~ He who makes rash promises surely lacks faith. ~ He who takes things too easily will surely encounter much difficulty. ~ For this reason even the sage regards things as difficult. ~ And therefore he encounters no difficulty.

[63c96т] Д. П. Конисси ~ Все должны быть бездеятельными. ~ Всем следует соблюдать полное спокойствие. ~ Все должны употреблять простейшую пищу. ~ Великое есть малое, многое - не многое. ~ Ненавидящим вас отмстите добром. ~ Когда вы благополучны, то подумайте, что нужно предпринять во время беды, так как великая беда начинается с незначительной. ~ Беда всего мира происходит из мелочи, как великое дело - из малых. ~ Святой муж не желает быть великим мира, поэтому и совершает великое дело. ~ Легко достигнутое согласие не заслуживает доверия. ~ Где много легких дел, там много и трудных. ~ Вот почему святой муж всегда живет как в беде, поэтому для него не существует беды.

[63c98т] Б. Б. Виноградский ~ Осуществляют отсутствие осуществления. ~ Действуют в отсутствии дел. ~ Вкушают отсутствие вкуса. ~ Большое - маленькое. ~ Многое - малое. ~ Отвечай на обиды посредством Потенции. ~ Замышляя трудное, будь в его легком. ~ Осуществляя большое, будь в его тонком. ~ В Поднебесной трудные дела обязательно складываются из легких. ~ В Поднебесной большие дела обязательно складываются из мелочей. ~ Это дает: ~ Человек мудрости заканчивает, не осуществляя большого. ~ Причинность: ~ Может совершить это большое. ~ Ведь, легко обещая, уменьшаешь веру. ~ Умножая легкое, обязательно умножаешь трудное. ~ Это дает: ~ Человек мудрости приближает к трудному. ~ Причинность: ~ Заканчивает в отсутствии трудного.

[64c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ What is at rest is easy to hold; ~ {What has not yet given a sign is} easy to plan for; ~ {The brittle is easily shattered}; ~ {The minute is easily scattered}; ~ {Act on it before it comes into being}; ~ {Order it before it turns into chaos}. ~ A tree {[so big] that it takes both arms to surround} starts out as the tiniest shoot; ~ A nine-story terrace rises up from a basket of dirt. ~ A high place one hundred, one thousand feet high begins from under your feet. ~ Those who act on it ruin it; ~ Those who hold on to it lose it. ~ Therefore the Sage does not act, ~ {And as a result}, he doesn't ruin [things]; ~ He does not hold on to [things], ~ And as a result, he doesn't lose [things]; ~ In people's handling of affairs, they always ruin things when they're right at the point of completion. ~ Therefore we say, "If you're as careful at the end as you were at the beginning, you'll have no failures." ~ Therefore the Sage desires not to desire and doesn't value goods that are hard to obtain; ~ He learns not to learn and returns to what the masses pass by; ~ He could help all things to be natural, yet he dare not do it.

[64c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ WHAT is at rest is easy to hold. ~ What manifests no omens is easily forestalled. ~ What is fragile is easily shattered. ~ What is small is easily scattered. ~ Tackle things before they have appeared. ~ Cultivate peace and order before confusion and disorder have set in. ~ A tree as big as a man's embrace springs from a tiny sprout. ~ A tower nine stories high begins with a heap of earth. ~ A journey of a thousand leagues starts from where your feet stand. ~ He who fusses over anything spoils it. ~ He who grasps anything loses it. ~ The Sage fusses over nothing and therefore spoils nothing. ~ He grips at nothing and therefore loses nothing. ~ In handling affairs, people often spoil them just at the point of success. ~ With heedfulness in the beginning and patience at the end, nothing will be spoiled. ~ Therefore, the Sage desires to be desireless, ~ Sets no value on rare goods, ~ Learns to unlearn his learning, ~ And induces the masses to return from where they have overpassed. ~ He only helps all creatures to find their own nature, ~ But does not venture to lead them by the nose.

[64c03т] D. C. Lau ~ It is easy to maintain a situation while it is still secure; ~ It is easy to deal with a situation before symptoms develop; ~ It is easy to break a thing when it is yet brittle; ~ It is easy to dissolve a thing when it is yet minute. ~ Deal with a thing while it is still nothing; ~ Keep a thing in order before disorder sets in. ~ A tree that can fill the span of a man's arms ~ Grows from a downy tip; ~ A terrace nine storeys high ~ Rises from hodfuls of earth; ~ A journey of a thousand miles ~ Starts from beneath one's feet. ~ Whoever does anything to it will ruin it; ~ Whoever lays hold of it will lose it. ~ Therefore the sage, because he does nothing, never ruins anything; ~ And, because he does not lay hold of anything, loses nothing. ~ In their enterprises the people ~ Always ruin them when on the verge of success. ~ Be as careful at the end as at the beginning ~ And there will be no ruined enterprises. ~ Therefore the sage desires not to desire ~ And does not value goods which are hard to come by; ~ Learns to be without learning ~ And makes good the mistakes of the multitude ~ In order to help the myriad creatures to be natural and to refrain from daring to act.

[64c04t] R. L. Wing ~ What is at rest is easy to hold; ~ What is not yet begun is easy to plan. ~ What is thin is easy to melt; ~ What is minute is easy to disperse. ~ Deal with things before they emerge; ~ Put them in order before there is disorder. ~ A tree of many arm spans is produced from a tiny sprout. ~ A tower of nine stories is raised from a pile of earth. ~ A journey of a thousand miles begins with a footstep. ~ Those who act on things, spoil them; ~ Those who seize things, lose them. ~ Thus Evolved Individuals do nothing; ~ Hence they spoil nothing. ~ They seize nothing; ~ Hence they lose nothing. ~ People often spoil their work at the point of its completion. ~ With care at the end as well as the beginning, No work will be spoiled. ~ Thus Evolved Individuals desire to be desireless ~ And do not treasure goods that are hard to get. ~ They learn without learning, ~ By returning to the place where the Collective Mind passes. ~ In this way they assist All Things naturally Without venturing to act.

[64c05t] Ren Jiyu ~ The stability of things is easy to hold while they are stable; ~ Things are easy to deal with while they show no sign of change; ~ Things are easily broken while they are fragile; ~ Things are easily dispersed while they are minute. ~ Deal with things before they have happened, ~ And get things in order before their disorder begins. ~ A huge tree which fills one's arms grows from a tiny seedling; ~ A high terrace which has nine storeys rises from a small heap of earth; ~ A journey of a thousand li begins with the first step. ~ He who takes action messes things up; ~ And he who holds things fast loses them. ~ Therefore, the sage does not fail in anything since he does nothing; ~ Does not lose anything since he holds nothing. ~ People often fail when they are about to succeed in their business. ~ If they are as careful at the end as at the beginning, ~ They would not ruin their business. ~ Therefore the sage's desire is to have no desire, ~ And he doesn't value rare goods. ~ (The Sage's) learning is to learn nothing, in order to remedy the fault that people often have. ~ Thus he helps the natural development of all things, and does not dare to act constrainedly.

[64c06t] Gia-fu Feng ~ Peace is easily maintained; ~ Trouble is easily overcome before it starts. ~ The brittle is easily shattered; ~ The small is easily scattered. ~ Deal with it before it happens. ~ Set things in order before there is confusion. ~ A tree as great as a man's embrace springs up from a small shoot; ~ A terrace nine stories high begins with a pile of earth; ~ A journey of a thousand miles starts under one's feet. ~ He who acts defeats his own purpose; ~ He who grasps loses. ~ The sage does not act, and so is not defeated. ~ He does not grasp and therefore does not lose. ~ People usually fail when they are on the verge of success. ~ So give as much care to the end as to the beginning; ~ Then there will be no failure. ~ Therefore the sage seeks freedom from desire. ~ He does not collect precious things. ~ He learns not to hold on to ideas. ~ He brings men back to what they have lost. ~ He helps the ten thousand things find their own nature, ~ But refrains from action.

[64c07t] Lok Sang Ho ~ When the situation is peaceful and orderly, ~ Maintaining peace and order is not difficult; ~ When the situation has not yet developed to a mature stage, planning to change the outcome is easy; ~ What is brittle is easy to break; ~ What is minute is easy to scatter. ~ We set out to work before problems emerge. ~ We put things in order before they get out of order. ~ A tree that is big enough for one to embrace around it grew from a tiny seed. ~ A nine-story pagoda begins from a heap of earth. ~ A journey of a thousand miles ("li") begins with the first step. ~ Those who work for gain in the end will be frustrated. ~ Those who hold on to something in the end will lose it. ~ The Sage never works for gain and so will never be frustrated. ~ He never holds on to anything so he never loses anything. ~ People often fail in their tasks when they are about to accomplish them. ~ If only they take the same care in the end as they do in the beginning, ~ they will avoid many failures. ~ The Sage desires to be free of desires, so he will not value goods that most people value; ~ He learns to unlearn, ~ so he will value things that most people do not value. ~ The Sage only hopes that all living things will live out their inner nature. ~ He will not dare to go against Nature.

[64c08t] Xiaolin Yang ~ When the situation is peaceful, it is easy to control; ~ when nothing has happened, it is easy to plan; ~ Brittle things are easily broken, thin things are easily dispersed. ~ Do things when they have not yet happened, control things when they are not yet out of control. ~ A full-grown tree began as a sapling; ~ A nine-story building began with a bucket of dirt; ~ A thousand-mile trip began with the first step. ~ If you fiddle with something for your own purposes, you will ruin it; ~ If you are stubborn, you will fail. ~ Therefore, the great men practiced WUWEI, so they did not fail anything; ~ They were not stubborn, so they did not make mistakes. ~ People often fail at the last step to success. ~ Be cautious at the end like you are at the beginning; then you will never fail. ~ Therefore, the great men treated having no desire as their desire, and did not value things that were precious. ~ They treated not learning as learning, and repaired the mistakes people had made. ~ They helped everything and made them natural, but did not dare to do things for their own purposes.

[64c09t] Walter Gorn Old, GUARDING THE SMALL ~ What is still is easily held. ~ What is expected is easily provided for. ~ What is brittle is easily broken. ~ What is small is soon dispersed. ~ Transact your business before it takes shape. ~ Regulate things before confusion begins. ~ The tree which fills the arms grew from a tender shoot. ~ The castle of nine storeys was raised on a heap of earth. ~ The journey of a thousand miles begins with one step. ~ Whoever designs only destroys. ~ Whoever grasps, loses. ~ The Sage does not thus act, therefore he does no harm. ~ He does not grasp, and therefore he never loses. ~ But the common people, in their undertakings, fail on the eve of success. ~ If they were as prudent at the end as they are at the beginning, there would be no such failures. ~ Therefore the Sage is only ambitious of what others despise, and sets no value on things difficult to obtain. ~ He acquires no common learning, but returns to that which the people have passed by. ~ Thus he aims at simple development in all things, and acts without design.

[64c10t] James Legge ~ That which is at rest is easily kept hold of; ~ before a thing has given indications of its presence, it is easy to take measures against it; ~ that which is brittle is easily broken; ~ that which is very small is easily dispersed. ~ Action should be taken before a thing has made its appearance; ~ order should be secured before disorder has begun. ~ The tree which fills the arms grew from the tiniest sprout; ~ the tower of nine storeys rose from a (small) heap of earth; ~ the journey of a thousand li commenced with a single step. ~ He who acts (with an ulterior purpose) does harm; ~ he who takes hold of a thing (in the same way) loses his hold. ~ The sage does not act (so), and therefore does no harm; ~ he does not lay hold (so), and therefore does not lose his hold. ~ (But) people in their conduct of affairs are constantly ruining them when they are on the eve of success. ~ If they were careful at the end, as (they should be) at the beginning, they would not so ruin them. ~ Therefore the sage desires what (other men) do not desire, and does not prize things difficult to get; ~ he learns what (other men) do not learn, and turns back to what the multitude of men have passed by. ~ Thus he helps the natural development of all things, and does not dare to act (with an ulterior purpose of his own).

[64c11t] David Hinton ~ It's easy to embrace the tranquil ~ and easy to prevent trouble before omens appear. ~ It's easy for the trifling to melt away ~ and easy for the slight to scatter away. ~ Work at things before they've begun ~ and establish order before confusion sets in, ~ for a tree you can barely reach around ~ grows from the tiniest rootlet, ~ a nine-tiered tower ~ starts as a basket of dirt, ~ a thousand-mile journey ~ begins with a single step. ~ Work at things and you ruin them; cling to things and you lose them. ~ That's why a sage does nothing and so ruins nothing, clings to nothing and so loses nothing. ~ When people devote themselves to something they always ruin it on the verge of success. ~ Finish with the same care you took in beginning and you'll avoid ruining things. ~ This is why a sage desires without desire, ~ never longing for rare treasures, ~ learns without learning, ~ always returning to what people have passed by, ~ helps the ten thousand things occur of themselves by never presuming to work at them.

[64c12t] Chichung Huang ~ When stable, ~ It is easy to maintain; ~ When no symptoms have emerged, ~ Easy to deal with; ~ When tender, ~ Easy to break; ~ When tiny, ~ Easy to disperse. ~ Tackle it before it takes shape; ~ Bring order before it becomes chaotic. ~ A tree the circumference of an embrace ~ Grows out of a downy tip; ~ A nine-storied tower ~ Rises from a basketful of earth; ~ A hundred-ren ascent ~ Begins from under one's foot. ~ He who acts upon them ruins them; ~ He who holds on to them loses them. ~ Hence, the sage man acted not ~ So that he ruined not; ~ He did not hold on to them ~ So that he did not lose them. ~ When people engage in a task, ~ They often ruin it at its completion. ~ Therefore, it is said: ~ "Be discreet in the end as in the beginning, ~ And you will not ruin your task." ~ Hence, the sage man ~ Desired to be desireless, ~ And treasured not goods hard to come by; ~ He learned to be unlearned, ~ And was exempted from the errors ~ Other rulers had committed; ~ He was able to assist the ten thousand things ~ To be the way they were ~ Without daring to act.

[64c13t] Ellen M. Chen ~ What is at equilibrium is easy (i) to maintain; ~ What has not emerged is easy (i) to plan (mou); ~ What is fragile is easy (i) to dissolve; ~ What is minute is easy (i) to disperse. ~ Act (wei) when there is yet nothing to do. ~ Govern (chih) when there is yet no disorder (luan). ~ A tree whose trunk is of a man's embrace, ~ Begins from something extremely tiny. ~ A tower of nine stories high, ~ Is built from a heap of earth. ~ A trip of a thousand miles, ~ Begins right at one's feet. ~ He who acts (wei) fails, ~ He who holds on to loses. ~ Therefore the sage does not act (wei) so he does not fail, ~ He does not hold on to, so he does not lose. ~ The people in launching their projects, ~ Often fail when these are near completion. ~ Had they been as careful at the end as at the beginning, ~ There would have been no failures. ~ Therefore the sage desires not to desire, ~ He does not treasure hard-to-get goods; ~ Learns not to learn, ~ He recovers the transgressions (kuo) of many. ~ In assisting the self-becoming (tzu-jan) of all beings, ~ He dares not act (wei).

[64c14t] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ A stable situation is easier to handle; ~ Before the situation [of danger or chaos] shapes up, it is easier to work out strategies for its disintegration; ~ When [its effect on] the environment is weak, it is easier to break it loose; ~ When its influence is still small, it is easier to dispense it; ~ Danger should be guarded against before it develops; ~ Chaos should be averted before it emerges. ~ A tree, with a trunk big enough for a person to encircle it with both arms stretched, was evolved primarily from something as tiny as a fine tip of its branch; ~ A nine-story terrace is elevated from the small beginning of a basket of dirt; ~ A journey of one thousand miles started out from one single step. ~ A person who tampers with [Tao] will fail; ~ A person who treats [Tao] as a possession has already lost it; ~ A Sage would not tamper with [Tao], so he will not flounder; ~ A Sage would not treat [Tao] as his possession, so he will not lose it; ~ Many people, when engaging in pursuing Tao, often failed at the point when they were just about to gain final success; ~ [Nevertheless] If one is [constantly] careful from beginning to end, he will never ruin his pursuit. ~ For reasons stated above: ~ A Sage shall extinguish [selfish] desires; ~ He shall not value hard-to-get goods; ~ He shall study the [lackluster fundamental] learnings most people [of the world] are reluctant to pursue; ~ He shall point out to people mistakes they have made; ~ He shall help myriad things and creatures to embark and stay on their natural courses but shall never dare to intervene.

[64c15t] Tien Cong Tran ~ What is still is easy to keep. ~ What does not manifest yet is easy to deal with. ~ What is fragile is easily broken. ~ What is small is easily scattered. ~ Deal with a thing before it occurs. ~ Repair a thing before it is in disorder. ~ A tree as big as a man's embrace springs from a tiny sprout. ~ A nine story tower begins with a basket of earth. ~ A journey of a thousand miles starts from where one stands. ~ To do is to fail. ~ To grip is to lose. ~ Therefore the sage does not do and so does not fail, does not grip and so does not lose. ~ In handling affairs, people often fail just at the point of completion. ~ Be as careful at the end as at the beginning, then there will be no failure. ~ Therefore, the sage desires no-desire, does not prize rare goods, learns non-learning, helps the masses return from their ignorance. ~ He wants to help all creatures to live by their own nature, and does not interfere with them.

[64c16t] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ When things are stable, it is easy to hold. ~ When problems have not occurred, they are easy to cope with. ~ When things are brittle, they break easily. ~ When things are tiny, they dissolve easily. ~ Prepare for problems before they appear. ~ Put things in order before they become chaotic. ~ Giant trees grow from tiny seeds. ~ High-rise buildings start from the first mound of earth. ~ Long journeys begin with a first step. ~ People often fail when the tasks are close to complete. ~ If they keep working as diligently as the beginning, then they would not fail. ~ Sages want things others do not want. ~ They do not treasure rare goods. ~ They study things others ignore. ~ They remind themselves of others' mistakes. ~ They let everything develops naturally and do not dare to force it.

[64c17t] Arthur Waley ~ 'What stays still is easy to hold; ~ Before there has been an omen it is easy to lay plans. ~ What is tender is easily torn, ~ What is minute is easy to scatter.' ~ Deal with things in their state of not-yet-being, ~ Put them in order before they have got into confusion. ~ For 'The tree big as a man's embrace began as a tiny sprout, ~ The tower nine storeys high began with a heap of earth, ~ The journey of a thousand leagues began with what was under the feet'. ~ He who acts, harms; he who grabs, lets slip. ~ Therefore the Sage does not act, and so does not harm; ~ Does not grab, and so does not let slip. ~ Whereas the people of the world, at their tasks, ~ Constantly spoil things when within an ace of completing them. ~ 'Heed the end no less than the beginning,' ~ And your work will not be spoiled. ~ Therefore the Sage wants only things that are unwanted, ~ Sets no store by products difficult to get, ~ And so teaches things untaught, ~ Turning all men back to the things they have left behind, ~ That the ten thousand creatures may be restored to their Self-so. ~ This he does; but dare not act.

[64c18t] Richard John Lynn ~ The secure is easy to maintain; the premanifest [weizhao] is easy to plan for. ~ The fragile is easy to melt; the tiny is easy to dissolve. ~ So take action while it still does not exist ~ And control it before it turns into disorder. ~ A tree that takes both arms to clasp grows from a tiny shoot; ~ a nine-story terrace starts from a pile of dirt; ~ a journey of a thousand li begins under one's feet. ~ One who takes deliberate action [wei] will become ruined; ~ one who consciously administers will become lost. ~ This is why the sage engages in no deliberate action and so never becomes ruined, does not consciously administer and so never becomes lost. ~ People pursue matters in such a way that they always suffer ruin just when they are about to succeed. ~ If one is as mindful of ends as he is of beginnings, his endeavors will never end in defeat. ~ This is why the sage desires to have no desire and does not value goods hard to get. ~ He learns not to learn and redeems the errors that the mass of common folk make. ~ Accordingly, he enhances the natural state of the myriad folk but dares not engage in deliberate action.

[64c19т] Lin Yutang ~ BEGINNING AND END ~ That which lies still is easy to hold; ~ That which is not yet manifest is easy to forestall; ~ That which is brittle (like ice) easily melts; ~ That which is minute easily scatters. ~ Deal with a thing before it is there; ~ Check disorder before it is rife. ~ A tree with a full span's girth begins from a tiny sprout; ~ A nine-storied terrace begins with a clod of earth. ~ A journey of a thousand li begins at one's feet. ~ He who acts, spoils; ~ He who grasps, lets slip. ~ Because the Sage does not act, he does not spoil, ~ Because he does not grasp, he does not let slip. ~ The affairs of men are often spoiled within an ace of completion, ~ By being careful at the end as at the beginning ~ Failure is averted. ~ Therefore the Sage desires to have no desire, ~ And values not objects difficult to obtain. ~ Learns that which is unlearned, ~ And restores what the multitude have lost. ~ That he may assist in the course of Nature ~ And not presume to interfere.

[64c20т] Victor H. Mair ~ What is secure is easily grasped, ~ What has no omens is easily forestalled, ~ What is brittle is easily split, ~ What is minuscule is easily dispersed. ~ Act before there is a problem; ~ Bring order before there is disorder. ~ A tree that fills the arms' embrace is born from a downy shoot; ~ A terrace nine layers high starts from a basketful of earth; ~ An ascent of a hundred strides begins beneath one's foot. ~ Who acts fails; ~ Who grasps loses. ~ For this reason, ~ The sage does not act. ~ Therefore, ~ He does not fail. ~ He does not grasp. ~ Therefore, ~ He does not lose. ~ In pursuing their affairs, people often fail when they are close to success. ~ Therefore, ~ If one is as cautious at the end as at the beginning, there will be no failures. ~ For this reason, ~ The sage desires to be without desire and does not prize goods that are hard to obtain; ~ He learns not to learn and reverts to what the masses pass by. ~ Thus, ~ he can help the myriad creatures be natural, but dares not act.

[64c21т] Tolbert McCarroll ~ Peace is easily maintained while things are still at rest. ~ Trouble is easily handled before it starts. ~ What is brittle is easily broken. ~ What is minute is easily scattered. ~ Handle a problem before it appears. ~ Secure order before confusion begins. ~ A tree as big as a person's embrace begins as a tiny shoot. ~ A terrace nine stories high rises from a shovelful of earth. ~ A journey of a thousand miles begins under your feet. ~ A person who interferes does harm, ~ and those who grasp lose their hold. ~ Therefore, ~ the True Person acts without striving and does no harm, ~ avoids grabbing and never loses hold. ~ People often ruin their ventures when they are on the verge of success. ~ So, be as careful at the end as at the beginning, and your work will not be ruined. ~ Therefore, ~ the True Person ~ seeks freedom from desire, ~ does not value things that are hard to come by, ~ learns without scholarship, ~ brings people back to what they have passed by, ~ and assists the ten thousand things to find their own natures; ~ all without daring to interfere.

[64c22т] David H. Li ~ Governing is easy when there is peace; ~ Planning is easy when there is time; ~ Nipping is easy when buds are young; ~ Reconciling is easy when issues are minor. ~ Handle matters before they come about; ~ Govern people before there is chaos. ~ A tree two-arms'-length wide grows from a seedling; ~ A tower nine stories high starts with a spadeful; ~ A journey a thousand miles long begins with a step. ~ The populace often fail when they are close to completing their tasks. ~ Be as deliberate at the end as at the beginning; then, there can be no failure. ~ Thus, the sage desires what others do not desire, and places no premium on rare goods. ~ [The sage] studies what others do not study, ~ and revisits people's faults. ~ [The sage] assists myriad matters to develop naturally but does not dare to interfere.

[64c23т] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ That which has balance is easy to maintain. ~ That which has not arisen is easy to forestall. ~ That which is brittle is easy to shatter. ~ That which is minuscule is easy to scatter. ~ Therefore, manage problems before they arise; ~ Create order before disorder sets in. ~ A tree as large as the arms' embrace grows from a downy shoot. ~ A terrace nine stories high rises from a shovelful of earth. ~ A journey of a thousand miles begins with a single step. ~ One who acts from the delusion of grandiosity fails. ~ One who clings to the delusion of grandiosity loses. ~ The sage does not act from delusion, and therefore he does not fail, ~ Nor does he cling to delusion, and therefore he does not lose. ~ Because of the delusion of grandiosity, ~ On the verge of success, people often fail. ~ If they would take as much care at the end as at the beginning, ~ They would not fail in their affairs. ~ The sage does not desire what the masses desire; ~ He does not treasure what the masses treasure. ~ He studies what the masses do not study; ~ He returns to the source of knowledge ignored by the masses. ~ Thus, without acting in delusion, ~ The sage supports all beings as they naturally exist.

[64c24т] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ Do a non-deed, ~ Do a non-action, ~ Taste tastelessness. ~ The sage desires non-desire, ~ And does not value anything rare. ~ He learns the unlearnable, ~ But peruses what others have discarded. ~ Thus he enables all things ~ To develop in their natural way, ~ And he does not engage in hasty action. ~ See the small as big, ~ See the little as a lot. ~ Take care of the difficult when it is still easy, ~ Take care of the big when it is still small. ~ All difficult things in the world begin as easy things, ~ All big things in the world begin as small things. ~ The tree whose trunk cannot be encircled by a man's arms began as a sapling, ~ A nine-story tower rose from a heap of dirt, ~ A thousand-mile journey began with the earth under a man's foot. ~ Therefore the sage does not try to do big things, ~ And in that way can achieve greatness. ~ The person who makes casual promises ~ Will not keep them. ~ The person who perceives many things as easy ~ Will encounter many difficulties. ~ Therefore the sage perceives things as difficult, ~ And consequently never encounters difficulties.

[64c26т] Gu Zhengkun ~ A stable situation is easy to be maintained; ~ A condition without the sign of apparent change is easy to be coped with; ~ A fragile thing is easy to break; ~ A minute thing is easy to dissolve. ~ The proper treatment should be given to what has happened; ~ Keep things in order before disorder sets in. ~ A huge tree grows from a tiny seedling; ~ A nine-storey terrace rises from a mound of earth; ~ A journey of a thousand li starts from beneath one's feet. ~ Those who wants to obtain it by force will ruin it; ~ Those who hold it by force will lose it. ~ Thus the sage never ruins anything, ~ Because of his inaction; ~ He never loses anything. ~ In doing things, ~ People often fail on the verge of success. ~ If they are as prudent at the end as at the beginning, ~ They will never fail. ~ That is why the sage ~ Desires what others do not desire, ~ Values not rare goods, ~ Learns to lack learning, ~ Makes up for people's faults. ~ In this way he helps all things develop naturally ~ And refrains from interfering in them.

[64c27т] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ It is easy to control a situation when it is tranquil. ~ It is easy to deal with a matter before the omen is cast. ~ It is easy to break something when it is fragile. ~ It is easy to scatter something when it is minute. ~ Deal with things before they arise. ~ Govern a situation before it descends into disorder. ~ A huge tree as great as a man's arm-span grows from a tiny seed. ~ A nine-storey terrace rises from a pile of earth. ~ A thousand-mile journey starts from a single footstep. ~ He who acts to reach something will lead to its decline. ~ He who tries hard to hold on to something will lose it. ~ That is why the sage does nothing, and leads nothing to decline. ~ He does not hold on to anything, therefore he does not lose anything. ~ People often lead their actions to the verge of success, then fail. ~ Be careful to treat the end with equal care as the beginning. ~ Then you will not fail. ~ Therefore the sage desires not to desire, not to value precious goods, ~ to learn how not to learn, to cover the mistakes of the multitude, ~ to assist the myriad creatures according to the law of Nature. ~ Yet he dares not act.

[64c28т] Liu Qixuan ~ What is still is easy to keep. ~ What has not developed is easy to guide. ~ What is fragile is easy to break. ~ What is little is easy to scatter. ~ One starts a project before things develop otherwise. ~ One prevents tumults before they happen otherwise. ~ A huge tree starts from a small sprout. ~ A nine-story tower starts from the first shovel full of dirt. ~ A long journey starts from the spot under the feet. ~ One who willfully starts a cause will ruin it. ~ One who willfully ends a cause will lose it. ~ The wise person does nothing willfully ~ And will therefore neither ruin nor lose. ~ People often fail when they are about to succeed. ~ If one is careful from start to end, one will not fail. ~ The wise ruler therefore desires what none would desire, ~ Values what none would value, learns what none can learn, ~ Remembers the useful experiences and lessons of all, ~ And does nothing willfully so as to help cultivate the natural.

[64c33т] Cheng Lin ~ When chaos has not yet appeared, it is easy to maintain peace. ~ When portents have not yet appeared, it is easy to devise measures. ~ When a thing is brittle, it can be easily broken. ~ When a thing is minute, it can be easily dispersed. ~ Measures should be adopted to forestall future emergencies. ~ Action should be taken to safeguard against possible confusion. ~ A giant tree whose trunk measures several feet in diameter is grown from a tiny seed. ~ A tall tower nine storeys high is built upon basketfuls of earth. ~ A long journey of a thousand Lii is covered step by step. ~ Those who try to gain by action are sure to fail; ~ those who try to hold are sure to lose. ~ Because the Sage abides by inaction, he does not fail. ~ Because he does not try to hold, he does not lose. ~ Men often fail in their undertakings when they are on the verge of success. ~ If the same care is exercised towards the end as at the beginning, they can never fail. ~ Wherefore, the Sage has no desires, covets not rarities, and acquires not learning in order that he may avoid the faults of the multitude. ~ He promotes the spontaneous development of all things, and does not venture to interfere by his own action.

[64c34т] Yi Wu ~ What is at rest is easy to hold; ~ What has not yet appeared is easy to plan. ~ What is fragile is easy to shatter; ~ What is small is easy to scatter. ~ Act before the problem happens; ~ Manage before disorder arises. ~ A tree as big as one's embrace springs from a tiny sprout; ~ A tower with nine stories starts from a heap of earth; ~ A walk of a thousand miles begins from where one stands. ~ One who acts will fail; ~ One who becomes attached will lose. ~ Therefore, the sage, without acting, does not fail, ~ Without becoming attached, does not lose. ~ The people, in doing, fail at the point of success. ~ One should be as cautious at the end as at the beginning; ~ Then there will be no failure. ~ Therefore, the sage desires to be desireless ~ And does not value rare treasures, ~ Learns to be unlearned ~ And reforms the faults of people. ~ He aids all things in their natural development ~ And dares to not act on them.

[64c35т] Han Hiong Tan ~ It is easier to maintain the status quo when things are established and stabilised. ~ It is easier to correct things when the incipient signs of trouble have just occurred. ~ Fragile things disintegrate quickly. ~ Minute things disperse readily. ~ You should act well before the rot has set in. ~ You should take effective measures before chaos arises. ~ A tree broader than a man's embrace grows from a tiny seedling. ~ The tallest tower starts from a clod of earth. ~ The longest journey begins with the first step. ~ He who schemes will fail, and he who grasps tightly will lose it. ~ Hence, the sage does not scheme and will not fail. ~ He does not hold fast so he will not lose it. ~ Failure usually occurs at the cusp of succeeding. ~ If you pay careful attention from start to finish, there will be few failures. ~ What the sage wants is the opposite of what others want. ~ Hence, the sage does not covet rare objects. ~ The sage learns what others don't want to learn. ~ Thus, he avoids making mistakes that others commonly make. ~ The sage only facilitates. ~ He lets things evolve, but he does not interfere.

[64c36т] Hua-Ching Ni ~ Tackle difficulties when they are easy. ~ Accomplish great things when they are small. ~ Handle what is going to be rough when it is still smooth. ~ Control what has not yet formed its force. ~ Deal with a dangerous situation while it is safe. ~ Manage what is hard while it is soft. ~ Eliminate what is vicious before it becomes destructive. ~ This is called "attending to great things at small beginnings." ~ A tree so big it can fill the span of a man's arms grows from a tiny sprout. ~ A terrace nine stories high rises from a shovelful of earth. ~ A journey of a thousand miles begins with a single step. ~ Thus, one of integral virtue never sets about grandiose things, ~ yet he is able to achieve great things. ~ Lightly made promises inspire little confidence. ~ Making light of things at the beginning, ~ one will meet with failure in the end. ~ Being prepared for hardship, one will not be overcome by it. ~ In handling their affairs, people often ruin them just as they are on the verge of success. ~ With heedfulness in the beginning and all the way through to the end, ~ nothing is ruined.

[64c37т] Chang Chung-yuan ~ That which is motionless is easy to maintain. ~ That which is prior to emergence is easy to deal with. ~ That which is just beginning is easy to destroy. ~ That which is minute is easy to disperse. ~ Act on what is before it occurs. ~ Manage things before they are in disorder. ~ Big trees grow out of small shoots. ~ A nine story tower begins to be built from one little lump. ~ A journey of a thousand miles begins from where one stays. ~ Those who proceed through action fail. ~ Those who grasp on to a thing lose it. ~ Therefore, the wise does not act on things and is free from failure. ~ He does not grasp on to things, and does not lose them. ~ People who are engaged with things often fail when they almost complete them. ~ Therefore, one should be as careful in the last stage of one's work as at the beginning. ~ Then one will be free from failure. ~ Hence, for the wise, willing is non-willing. ~ He never values things which are hard to attain. ~ He learns what is unlearned. ~ He avoids the mistakes that have been made by others. ~ He is in accordance with the nature of ten thousand things, yet he never interferes with them.

[64c38т] Henry Wei ~ Attend to the Insignificant ~ Shou Wei ~ What is secure can be easily maintained. ~ What is yet unmanifest can be easily tackled. ~ What is brittle can be easily broken. ~ What is puny can be easily scattered. ~ Act before any trouble starts. ~ Enforce order before disorder arises. ~ A big tree, whose girth fills a man's embrace, ~ Springs from a tender shoot. ~ A terrace nine stories in height ~ Rises from a heap of earth. ~ A journey one thousand miles long ~ Begins with the first step. ~ He who interferes will fail; ~ He who grasps will lose. ~ Therefore, the Sage does not interfere, ~ And incurs no failure; ~ He does not grasp, ~ And suffers no loss. ~ People in handling their affairs ~ Often fail when within an ace of fulfilment. ~ Be circumspect at the end as at the beginning, ~ And there will be no failure. ~ Therefore the Sage desires what is not desired (by others), ~ And does not treasure hard-to-get objects. ~ He learns what is not learned (by others), ~ And restores what the multitude has skipped. ~ He assists the natural trend of all things, ~ But dares not venture to tamper with it.

[64c39т] Ha Poong Kim ~ What is at rest is easy to hold; ~ What has not yet shown its sign is easy to prepare for. ~ What is tender is easy to break up; ~ What is minute is easy to scatter. ~ Deal with things before they become reality; ~ Put things in order before disorder arises. ~ A tree as big as a man's embrace ~ Grows from the tip of a fine hair. ~ A terrace nine stories high ~ Rises from a heap of earth. ~ A journey of a thousand miles ~ Starts from where one stands. ~ Whoever acts on it will ruin it; ~ Whoever lays hold of it will lose it. ~ For this reason the sage ~ Does nothing and therefore ruins nothing; ~ Lays hold of nothing and therefore loses nothing. ~ People, in handling their affairs, ~ Always ruin their work on the verge of completion. ~ Be careful at the end as at the start, ~ And you will never fail. ~ For this reason the sage ~ Desires not to desire, ~ Does not treasure rare goods, ~ Learns not to learn. ~ He returns to what the multitude passes by. ~ He thus helps the ten thousand things to be so of themselves [tzu jan], ~ And does not try to rule.

[64c40т] Tao Huang ~ It is easy to sustain what is at rest. ~ It is easy to plan for that of which there is not even a sign. ~ What is fragile is easily broken. ~ What is minute is easily dispersed. ~ Act upon it before it exists. ~ Regulate it before it becomes chaos. ~ A massive tree grows from a little sprout. ~ A nine-story-building rises from a clod of earth. ~ A thousand fathoms begin with a single step. ~ Those who impose action upon it will fail. ~ Those who cling to it lose it. ~ So the sage, through nonaction, does not fail. ~ Not clinging, he does not lose. ~ The common people's engagement in affairs fails prior to success. ~ So the saying goes, ~ "Give as much careful attention to the end as to the beginning, then the affairs will not fail." ~ It is on that account that the sage desires not to desire and does not value goods that are hard to get. ~ He learns not to learn and restores the common people's losses. ~ He is able to support the nature of all things and, not by daring, to impose action.

[64c41т] Tang Zi-chang ~ What is still at rest is easy to maintain. ~ What is still insignificant is easy to dispose of. ~ What is still fragile is easily shattered. ~ What is still not yet begun is easy to plan. ~ Action should be taken before the emergency occurs. ~ Measures should be taken before confusion is formed. ~ A large tree, so large arms can hardly go around, was grown from a tiny seed. ~ A tall tower, of nine stories height, was built first with a handful of dirt. ~ A long journey of a thousand miles can be finished by moving feet. ~ One who intervenes will be defeated. ~ One who grasps the world will lose it. ~ So the Sage ruler does not intervene, thus he does not fail. ~ He does not grasp, thus he never loses. ~ Sometimes people fail to reach the end when they are already on the verge of success. ~ A Sage was as cautious at the end as in the beginning, so he could avoid failure. ~ Thus a Sage ruler never desired what should not be desired, such as he never cherished rare goods. ~ He did not experience what should not be experienced, such as he never repeated the faults of others. ~ It gives supplementary help to the nature of All Things, and yet it dares not to assert itself.

[64c42т] Wing-tsit Chan ~ What remains still is easy to hold. ~ What is not yet manifest is easy to plan for. ~ What is brittle is easy to crack. ~ What is minute is easy to scatter. ~ Deal with things before they appear. ~ Put things in order before disorder arises. ~ A tree as big as a man's embrace grows from a tiny shoot. ~ A tower of nine stories begins with a heap of earth. ~ The journey of a thousand li starts from where one stands. ~ He who takes action fails. ~ He who grasps things loses them. ~ For this reason the sage takes no action and therefore does not fail. ~ He grasps nothing and therefore he does not lose anything. ~ People in their handling of affairs often fail when they are about to succeed. ~ If one remains as careful at the end as he was at the beginning, there will be no failure. ~ Therefore the sage desires to have no desire, ~ He does not value rare treasures. ~ He learns to be unlearned, and returns to what the multitude has missed (Tao). ~ Thus he supports all things in their natural state but does not take any action.

[65c27t] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ In ancient times, those who knew well how to serve the Tao did not use it to enlighten the people but to fool them. ~ People are difficult to govern only because they are intelligent and resourceful. ~ Therefore to rule with intelligence harms the country. ~ To govern the country without intelligence is a blessing for the nation. ~ He who knows the difference, knows the principle. ~ To know the principle is called mysterious virtue. ~ Mysterious virtue is deep and far. ~ It might at first seem to go against the natural order but it will then lead to harmony.

[65c28t] Liu Qixuan ~ The ancient wise persons who were good at keeping the Way ~ Did not try to achieve it by teaching sophisticated knowledge, ~ But by ridding people of the folly such knowledge holds. ~ A foolishly sophisticated nation is difficult to govern. ~ Therefore, there are two models which a ruler may follow: ~ One who rules with sophistication is stealing a nation, ~ One who rules with no sophistication is saving a nation. ~ To make the wise choice always is to be subtle and profound. ~ The subtle and profound wisdom is rooted far back in time ~ And such wisdom will also function far ahead into the future. ~ Therefore, such wisdom can be used ~ To help bring about what is natural in the world.

[65c29t] Shi Fu Hwang ~ Mysterious Excellence ~ Lao Tze says, ~ In ancient times, those who learned the Tao in exercise of the government would work not to enlighten the people, but rather to make them ignorant. ~ The difficulty in governing the people arises from their having much craftiness. ~ He who tries to govern a state by his craftiness is a scourge to the state; ~ and he who does not try to do so is a boon to the state. ~ He who knows these two different results finds in them an absolute rule. ~ Ability to know this absolute rule constitutes what we call the mysterious excellence. ~ Profound and far-reaching is this mysterious excellence; ~ showing indeed its possessor to be contrary to others, but leading him to be completely obedient to the Tao.

[65c30t] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ In olden times the best practisers of Tao did not use it to awaken the people to knowledge, ~ But used it to restore them to simplicity. ~ People are difficult to govern because they have much knowledge. ~ Therefore to govern the country by increasing the people's knowledge is to be the destroyer of the country; ~ To govern the country by decreasing their knowledge is to be the blesser of the country. ~ To be acquainted with these two ways is to know the standard; ~ To keep the standard always in mind is to have sublime virtue. ~ Sublime virtue is infinitely deep and wide. ~ It goes reverse to all things; ~ And so it attains perfect peace.

[65c31t] Paul J. Lin ~ The Ancients who were good in practicing Tao ~ Did not teach the people with intelligence ~ But kept them in ignorance. ~ The people are hard to govern when they know too much. ~ Therefore, one who rules the nation with knowledge robs the nation. ~ One who does not rule the nation with knowledge brings good fortune to the nation. ~ To know these two things means to know the standard. ~ To constantly know the standard is called mystical virtue. ~ Mystical virtue goes deep and far. ~ It returns with all things to reach great harmony.

[65c32t] Michael LaFargue ~ Those Excellent at doing Tao in ancient times - ~ it was not to enlighten the people, but to keep them stupid. ~ The difficulty in governing the people - ~ because of their knowledge. ~ Yes: ~ By "Knowledge!" govern the state - ~ a crime against the state. ~ By "Ignorance!" govern the state - ~ a boon to the state. ~ Always: ~ To understand these two lines, ~ is also to understand the Ideal Pattern. ~ Always: ~ To understand the Ideal Pattern, ~ is to have mysterious Te. ~ Mysterious Te is deep, far-reaching, ~ in opposition to things - ~ only afterward comes the Great Harmony.

[65c33t] Cheng Lin ~ The ancients who knew Truth well did not make the people acquire learning, but kept them in the state of simplicity. ~ The people become difficult to govern when they are full of wiles. ~ Therefore, ~ the ruler who relies on learning does harm to the State; ~ the ruler who relies not on learning does good to the State. ~ These two ways are the ways of government. ~ When one always follows the right course, he acts in accordance with the mysterious Nature. ~ The mysterious Nature is profound and far-reaching. ~ When things revert to it, there is great concord.

[65c34t] Yi Wu ~ In ancient times, one who was good at practicing the Way ~ Did not make the people clever ~ But kept them in ignorance. ~ If the people are hard to govern, ~ It is because they have too much knowledge. ~ Therefore, ~ one who governs the state with knowledge is a malefactor to the state; ~ one who does not govern the state with knowledge is a benefactor to the state. ~ Knowing both of these is also knowing to follow the pattern. ~ Constantly knowing to follow the pattern ~ Is called mystical virtue. ~ Mystical virtue reaches deep and far; ~ It returns with all things, ~ After which, supreme harmony will be attained.

[65c35t] Han Hiong Tan ~ The ancient ruler who followed the way of Dao, ~ Attempted to make people simple and unsophisticated, not clever and scheming. ~ People are unruly because they are too clever and devious. ~ Using sophisticated measures to run a country, you can only cause harm. ~ Using unsophisticated measures, you will bring prosperity to the country. ~ These two models are consistent with the immutable principles of Dao. ~ Understanding the immutable principles, you are a person of inconspicuous virtue. ~ Inconspicuous virtue is profound and enduring. ~ Inconspicuous virtue is the opposite of conventional wisdom. ~ By going with the flow, you will achieve great harmony.

[65c36t] Hua-Ching Ni ~ In ancient times, those who were well-versed in the practice of the subtle Way of the universe did not lead people to disintegrate their minds through intellectual development for the sake of partial achievement. ~ Instead, they dissolved all contradictory concepts and images in order to maintain the natural state of simplicity. ~ Why are people so hard to manage? ~ Because they have become complicated. ~ He who leads others with a conditioned and complicated mind is the source of calamity. ~ He who leads others with simplicity is the source of blessing. ~ To know these two principles is to possess a rule and measure, the symbol of the ancient wise one. ~ To keep the rule and measure constantly in your mind, ~ is to spontaneously manifest integral virtue. ~ Deep and far-reaching is the subtle truth of integrity. ~ It leads all things to return from worldly divergence to one great and universal life.

[65c37t] Chang Chung-yuan ~ In the remote past, the man who was good in Tao did not lead his people to calculative thinking, ~ But let them remain ignorant of it. ~ The difficulty in cultivating men is that they are full of intellectual discrimination. ~ Governing the nation through intellectual discrimination is harmful to it. ~ Not governing the nation through intellectual discrimination is a blessing to it. ~ Knowing the difference between these two sets a standard. ~ To be aware of this standard is profound attainment. ~ Profound attainment is deep and far-reaching. ~ It is the reversal of ordinary things, yet it leads to great harmony with Tao.

[65c38t] Henry Wei ~ Virtue of Innocence ~ Ch'un Teh ~ The ancients who were adept in following Tao ~ Used it not to develop the people's intelligence, ~ But to keep the people simple-minded. ~ People are difficult to rule, ~ Because they have too much knowledge. ~ Therefore, to use knowledge to rule a country ~ Inflicts a curse on the country; ~ Not to use knowledge to rule a country ~ Confers a boon on the country. ~ He who is aware of these two rules ~ Also sets a standard pattern (as the ancients did). ~ Awareness of the standard pattern is called Mystic Virtue. ~ As Mystic Virtue goes deep and reaches far, ~ And leads creatures to revert to their origin, ~ Then Great Concord will prevail.

[65c39t] Ha Poong Kim ~ Of old a man who practiced Tao best ~ Did not thereby seek to make the people bright, ~ But to make them ignorant. ~ The people are difficult to govern, ~ Because they are too clever. ~ Therefore, to govern a state through knowledge ~ Is the robbing of the state; ~ Not to govern a state through knowledge ~ Is a blessing to the state. ~ Those who know these two ~ Also know the standard. ~ Always to know the standard ~ Is called the mysterious Te. ~ Deep and far-reaching is the mysterious Te! ~ Turn away from things. ~ Only then will the great obedience be attained.

[65c40t] Tao Huang ~ Those who practiced Tao in olden times did not enlighten people, ~ Rather they made them simple. ~ What makes it the hardest to govern the people is what they already know. ~ It becomes most difficult to govern people because of their knowledge. ~ So, using knowledge to govern the country, knowledge itself becomes the thief of the country. ~ Not using knowledge to govern the country, knowledge itself is the Action of the country. ~ Always realize that these two are the model for ruling. ~ Always be aware that this model is the mystic Action. ~ Mystic Action is deep and far-reaching. ~ It is the opposite of matter. ~ Only thus does it approach the Great Harmony.

[65c41t] Tang Zi-chang ~ The perfect ruler of ancient times did not teach the people to be intelligent, but rather taught them to be simple, ~ Because the difficulty of ruling people is always due to their being too intelligent. ~ Thus to use intelligence and skills to rule a country is robbing the country; ~ not to use intelligence and skills to rule a country is blessing the country. ~ By knowing these two - Dao and virtues, both of them are the models of Nature. ~ By constantly following the models is called the "Profound Virtues". ~ The Incomprehensive is unfathomable and far-reaching. ~ It (Change) brings all things to return (from the extreme) until perfect harmony - "Grand Concord" is reached.

[65c42t] Wing-tsit Chan ~ In ancient times those who practiced Tao well ~ Did not seek to enlighten the people, but to make them ignorant. ~ People are difficult to govern because they have too much knowledge. ~ Therefore he who rules the state through knowledge is a robber of the state; ~ He who rules a state not through knowledge is a blessing to the state. ~ One who knows these two things also (knows) the standard. ~ Always to know the standard is called profound and secret virtue. ~ Virtue becomes deep and far-reaching, ~ And with it all things return to their original state. ~ Then complete harmony will be reached.

PSEUDO-CHAPTER Sixty-Six

[66c01t] Robert G. Henricks ~ The reason why rivers and oceans are able to be the kings of the one hundred valleys is that they are good at being below them. ~ For this reason they are able to be the kings of the one hundred valleys. ~ Therefore in the Sage's desire to be above the people, ~ He must in his speech be below them. ~ And in his desire to be at the front of the people, ~ He must in his person be behind them. ~ Thus he dwells above, yet the people do not regard him as heavy; ~ And he dwells in front, yet the people do not see him as posing a threat. ~ The whole world delights in his praise and never tires of him. ~ Is it not because he is not contentious, ~ That, as a result, no one in the world can contend with him?!

[66c02t] John C. H. Wu ~ HOW does the sea become the king of all streams? ~ Because it lies lower than they! ~ Hence it is the king of all streams. ~ Therefore, the Sage reigns over the people by humbling himself in speech; ~ And leads the people by putting himself behind. ~ Thus it is that when a Sage stands above the people, they do not feel the heaviness of his weight; ~ And when he stands in front of the people, they do not feel hurt. ~ Therefore all the world is glad to push him forward without getting tired of him. ~ Just because he strives with nobody, ~ Nobody can ever strive with him.

[66c03t] D. C. Lau ~ The reason why the River and the Sea are able to be king of the hundred valleys is that they excel in taking the lower position. ~ Hence they are able to be king of the hundred valleys. ~ Therefore, desiring to rule over the people, ~ One must in one's words humble oneself before them; ~ And, desiring to lead the people, ~ One must, in one's person, follow behind them. ~ Therefore the sage takes his place over the people yet is no burden; ~ takes his place ahead of the people yet causes no obstruction. ~ That is why the empire supports him joyfully and never tires of doing so. ~ It is because he does not contend that no one in the empire is in a position to contend with him.

[66c05t] Ren Jiyu ~ The rivers and seas can become the leaders of many streams just because they skillfully stay in lower valleys. ~ So they can be the leaders of many streams. ~ Therefore (he) who wants to rule over the people should show his modesty by his words. ~ He who wants to lead the people should place himself behind them. ~ In this way, the sage is above the people, but the people do not feel him as a burden; ~ He is in front of the people (leading them), but the people do not feel him as a hindrance. ~ Therefore all the people under Heaven revere him and do not tire of him. ~ Just because he does not compete with others, ~ Nobody under Heaven can compete with him.

[66c06t] Gia-fu Feng ~ Why is the sea king of a hundred streams? ~ Because it lies below them. ~ Therefore it is the king of a hundred streams. ~ If the sage would guide the people, he must serve with humility. ~ If he would lead them, he must follow behind. ~ In this way when the sage rules, the people will not feel oppressed; ~ When he stands before them, they will not be harmed. ~ The whole world will support him and will not tire of him. ~ Because he does not compete, ~ He does not meet competition.

[66c07t] Lok Sang Ho ~ The reason why the great rivers and the seas can claim ~ to be the kings of the hundred valleys ~ is that they lie low, ~ so the water in all valleys come to them. ~ The Sage who wants to be on top of his people must use humble words. ~ He who wants to lead his people must follow his people. ~ For these reasons, though the Sage is on top of his people, ~ his people are not burdensome. ~ Although he is ahead of his people, ~ his people will do him no harm. ~ He wins the heart of his people and ~ is never abandoned by the people. ~ Because he never struggles with anyone for favor, ~ none under heaven can out-struggle him.

[66c08t] Xiaolin Yang ~ The great rivers and oceans can hold the water of all the streams. ~ Because they are lower, the water flows to them. ~ Therefore, if you want to be the head of the people, you must first humble yourself; ~ If you want to lead the people, you must first put yourself behind. ~ This is why the great men were above the people, but the people did not feel burdened; ~ They were in front of the people, but the people did not feel harmed. ~ So, the people were happy to make the great men their leaders, and did not feel tired of them. ~ Only because the great men did not fight, was there no one who could compete with them.

[66c09t] Walter Gorn Old, GOING BEHIND ~ That by which the great rivers and seas receive the tribute of all the streams, is the fact of their being lowly; that is the cause of their superiority. ~ Thus the Sage, wishing to govern the people, speaks of himself as beneath them; and wishing to lead them, places himself behind them. ~ So, while he is yet above them, they do not feel his weight; and being before them, he yet causes no obstruction. ~ Therefore all men exalt him with acclamations, and none is offended. ~ And because he does not strive, no man is his enemy.

[66c10t] James Legge ~ That whereby the rivers and seas are able to receive the homage and tribute of all the valley streams, is their skill in being lower than they; ~ - it is thus that they are the kings of them all. ~ So it is that the sage (ruler), wishing to be above men, puts himself by his words below them, and, wishing to be before them, places his person behind them. ~ In this way though he has his place above them, men do not feel his weight, nor though he has his place before them, do they feel it an injury to them. ~ Therefore all in the world delight to exalt him and do not weary of him. ~ Because he does not strive, no one finds it possible to strive with him.

[66c11t] David Hinton ~ Oceans and rivers become emperors of the hundred valleys ~ because they stay so perfectly below them. ~ This alone makes them emperors of the hundred valleys. ~ So, wanting to rule over the people a sage speaks from below them, and wanting to lead the people he follows along behind them, ~ then he can reign above without weighing the people down and stay ahead without leading the people to ruin. ~ All beneath heaven rejoices in its tireless praise of such a sage. ~ And because he's given up contention, ~ nothing in all beneath heaven contends with him.

[66c12t] Chichung Huang ~ The reason why rivers and oceans ~ Can become kings of a hundred valley streams ~ Is that they are good at lying below them; ~ Hence, they can become ~ Kings of a hundred valley streams. ~ Hence, when the sage man ~ Wished to be above the people, ~ He always placed himself below them in speech; ~ When he wished to be in front of the people, ~ He always stayed behind them in person. ~ Therefore, when he was above, ~ People did not consider him a burden; ~ When he was in front, ~ People did not consider him an obstacle. ~ All under heaven delighted in supporting him unwearily. ~ Is it not because he did not contend ~ That none under heaven could with him contend?

[66c13t] Ellen M. Chen ~ Rivers and seas can be kings of the hundred valleys, ~ Because they are good at flowing downwards (hsia). ~ Therefore they can be kings of the hundred valleys. ~ Thus if you desire to be above the people, ~ Your words must reach down (hsia) to them. ~ If you desire to lead the people, ~ Your person (shen, body) must be behind them. ~ Thus the sage is above, ~ Yet the people do not feel his weight. ~ He stays in front, ~ Yet the people do not suffer any harm. ~ Thus all gladly praise him untiringly (pu yen). ~ Because he does not contend with any, ~ Therefore no one under heaven can contend with him.

[66c14t] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ Rivers and seas (huge lake), to which hundreds of other streams feed in, are supported by vast valleys huge enough to accommodate [voluminous water of] hundreds of downstream; ~ The reason this huge valley can hold hundreds of waterways and support other valleys is because it is situated in the lowest position [so that it is natural for all the other rivers carrying water from huge lakes to flow into it]. ~ Therefore this huge valley is like the king presiding over hundreds of other smaller valleys. ~ Accordingly, if a Sage intends to be the master of people, he should talk in a humble manner; ~ If he wants to be the leader of people, he should put behind consideration of [either the benefit or the disadvantage of] his physical self; ~ Accordingly, even though he rides on top of people, his weight (the pressure of his administration) will not be felt by the people below him; ~ Being an [authentic] leader, his frontal position should pose no hindrance to people's [development]. ~ For this reason the world is happy to be driven [by a Sage], and people will not form any abhorrence towards him; ~ Because a Sage would not contend [for wealth and fame against people]; ~ So nobody in the world can [or want to] be his rival.

[66c15t] Tien Cong Tran ~ How do the river and the sea become the king of all streams? ~ Because they place themselves in low positions, they are the kings of all streams. ~ Therefore, to reign over the people, one must use humble words. ~ To wish to stand in front of the people, one must put oneself in back of them. ~ Therefore the sage is above the people, and they do not feel the heaviness of his weight; he stands in front of them, they do not feel hurt. ~ Therefore all the world is glad to adore him without getting tired of him. ~ Just because he contends with nobody, nobody contends with him.

[66c16t] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ The river and the sea can be the king of hundreds of valleys, because they are adept to place themselves low. ~ This is why they can be the kings of hundreds of valleys. ~ Therefore sages speak humbly in order to win people. ~ They put people before themselves in order to lead people. ~ This is why when sages are the superior, people do not feel oppressed. ~ When sages are leading, people would not be hurt. ~ Consequently, when world is happy to support them and is never tired. ~ Since the sage does not contend with anybody, nobody can compete with one.

[66c17t] Arthur Waley ~ How did the great rivers and seas get their kingship over the hundred lesser streams? ~ Through the merit of being lower than they; that was how they got their kingship. ~ Therefore the Sage ~ In order to be above the people ~ Must speak as though he were lower than the people. ~ In order to guide them ~ He must put himself behind them. ~ Only thus can the Sage be on top and the people not be crushed by his weight. ~ Only thus can he guide, and the people not be led into harm. ~ Indeed in this way everything under heaven will be glad to be pushed by him and will not find his guidance irksome. ~ This he does by not striving; and because he does not strive, none can contend with him.

[66c18t] Richard John Lynn ~ The reason the river and the sea are able to be kings of all the river valleys is that they are good at keeping below them. ~ Thus they are able to be kings of all the river valleys. ~ This is why, if one wishes to be above the common folk, he must use his words to place himself below them. ~ If one wishes to be at the front of the common folk, he must use his person in such a way that they think of him as behind them. ~ Therefore the sage positions himself above, yet the common folk do not regard him as heavy; ~ he positions himself in front, yet the common folk do not regard him as an obstacle. ~ Therefore all under Heaven happily promote him without ever tiring of it. ~ It is because he does not contend that none among all under Heaven can contend with him.

[66c19t] Lin Yutang ~ THE LORDS OF THE RAVINES ~ How did the great rivers and seas become the Lords of the Ravines? ~ By being good at keeping low. ~ That was how they became the Lords of the Ravines. ~ Therefore in order to be the chief among the people, ~ One must speak like their inferiors. ~ In order to be foremost among the people, ~ One must walk behind them. ~ Thus it is that the Sage stays above, ~ And the people do not feel his weight; ~ Walks in front, ~ And the people do not wish him harm. ~ Then the people of the world are glad to uphold him forever. ~ Because he does not contend, ~ No one in the world can contend against him.

[66c20t] Victor H. Mair ~ The river and sea can be kings of the hundred valley streams because they are good at lying below them. ~ For this reason, ~ They can be kings of the hundred valley streams. ~ For this reason, too, ~ If the sage wants to be above the people, ~ in his words, he must put himself below them; ~ If he wishes to be before the people, ~ in his person, he must stand behind them. ~ Therefore, ~ He is situated in front of the people, ~ but they are not offended; ~ He is situated above the people, ~ but they do not consider him a burden. ~ All under heaven happily push him forward without wearying. ~ Is this not because he is without contention? ~ Therefore, ~ No one under heaven can contend with him.

[66c21t] Tolbert McCarroll ~ How did the sea gain kingship of a hundred streams? ~ Because it takes the lower position. ~ Hence, it is king of a hundred streams. ~ Therefore, ~ when True Persons are over the people ~ they put themselves below the people by their speech. ~ When they lead the people ~ they stand behind the people. ~ When True Persons are given places above the people ~ they do not crush the people with their weight. ~ When they take their place ahead of the people ~ they do not obstruct the people's progress. ~ That is why everything under heaven supports them gladly and does not tire of them. ~ Because they strive with no one, ~ no one can ever strive with them.

[66c22t] David H. Li ~ The sea is the king to hundreds of streams. ~ Because it is good at lying low, it can be the king to hundreds of streams. ~ Thus, a sage, ~ desirous of being the populace's superior, must be obsequious to them; ~ desirous of being in front of the populace, must follow them. ~ Thus, a sage, ~ sitting high, in no way burdens the populace; ~ standing in front, in no way harms the populace. ~ Thus, the world is happy to support [the sage] and is not tired of doing so. ~ Because [the sage] is not in competition, the people in the world cannot engage him/her in competition.

[66c23t] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ The reason the sea is king of a hundred streams is because it lies below them. ~ Therefore, it is called king of a hundred streams. ~ When the sage wants to guide the people, in speech he always lies below them. ~ When the sage wants to lead the people, in deed he always follows behind them. ~ Thus, ~ even though he is above them, the people do not feel oppressed. ~ Even though he is ahead of them, the people do not feel obstructed. ~ Therefore, the people willingly and joyously put him in a leadership position. ~ Because he is above contention, the people never contend with him.

[66c24t] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ The best soldier does not love war, ~ The best warrior is not bloodthirsty, ~ The best conqueror does not take part in the war, ~ The best employer places himself beneath his workers. ~ That is called the virtue of self-control, ~ That is called the ability to be helped by others, ~ That is called the enlightenment that comes from uniting with heaven.

[66c25т] Man-Ho Kwok ~ Why is the sea the king of a hundred tributaries? ~ Because everything comes down to it - ~ So it is kingly ~ By this name. ~ So a sage that wants to rule the people must be below them. ~ If he wants to be their leader, he must be behind them. ~ If he has no desire to control then the people will not feel oppressed; ~ And if he stands before them for their own sake, and not his they will not harm him. ~ Trusted by everyone, no one will tire of him. ~ What is his secret? ~ He never competes. ~ So there is no one else but him.

[66c26т] Gu Zhengkun ~ All the streamlets flow towards the river and the sea ~ Because the latter takes the lower positions, ~ Hence the latter becomes the king of countless valleys. ~ Therefore, if one wants to be the ruler of the people, ~ One must put oneself behind the people. ~ Thus the sage, though being placed high over the people, ~ Never burdens the people; ~ The sage, though going ahead of the people, ~ Never stands in the way of the people. ~ That is why the people hold him in esteem ~ And are never tired of him. ~ He contends with no one, ~ So no one in the world is able to contend with him.

[66c27т] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ Rivers and seas can be king of the hundred valleys, ~ only because they accept their lower position. ~ Therefore they can be king of the hundred valleys. ~ That is why the sage ~ who wishes to rule the people ~ must stay beneath them, ~ who wishes to lead the people ~ must follow behind them. ~ In this way the sage stays above the people, ~ yet does not oppress them. ~ He stays ahead of the people, ~ yet does not exhaust them. ~ Then the people will support him with joy and never tire of following him. ~ And because he does not fight, no one can fight against him.

[66c28т] Liu Qixuan ~ The ocean can be the king of all deep places ~ Because it positions itself lowest in the world. ~ Similarly, the one who wants to be influential ~ Must first be humble in his speech and actions. ~ The one who wants to be the leader ~ Must first go back behind all others. ~ When such a leader is above, people will feel no weight. ~ When such a leader is in front, people will feel no hindrance. ~ He/She is therefore recommended without reservation, ~ For one who fights for nothing advances best.

[66c29т] Shi Fu Hwang ~ The Lord of Waters ~ Lao Tze says, ~ That the reason whereby the rivers and sea can be the lord of a hundred streams is because they know to afford a low level, thus they can be the lord of hundreds of streams. ~ Hence the sage who intends to lead the people from above has to speak humbly to the people. ~ He who intends to walk ahead to guide the people has to seek his own benefit after seeking the people's. ~ In this way, ~ although he has placed himself above the people, the people do not feel his weight, ~ and though he has his place before the people, the people will not feel it is an injury to them. ~ Therefore, ~ all in the world are glad to enthrone him to be the lord, and do not weary of him. ~ Because he does not strive, no one finds it possible to strive with him.

[66c30т] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ As Tao is to the world so are streams and valleys to rivers and seas. ~ Rivers and seas can be kings to all valleys because the former can well lower themselves to the latter. ~ Thus they become kings to all valleys. ~ Therefore the Sage, in order to be above the people, must in words keep below them; ~ In order to be ahead of the people, he must in person keep behind them. ~ Thus when he is above, the people do not feel his burden; ~ When he is ahead, the people do not feel his hindrance. ~ Therefore all the world is pleased to hold him in high esteem and never get tired of him. ~ Because he does not compete; therefore no one competes with him.

[66c31т] Paul J. Lin ~ Rivers and seas become the kings of one hundred valleys ~ Because they are able in putting themselves below; ~ So they can become their kings. ~ Therefore, for the sake of staying above the people, ~ The Sage must lower himself with words. ~ For the sake of staying ahead of the people, ~ He must put himself behind them. ~ Therefore, the Sage stays above and the people do not feel the burden. ~ He stays in front and the people do not consider him harmful. ~ Therefore the whole world delights in exalting him without tiring. ~ Because he does not compete, ~ The whole world cannot fight with him.

[66c32т] Michael LaFargue ~ The Yang-tze and the ocean: ~ How are they able to be Kings of the hundred streams? ~ Because they excel at being low - ~ this is how they are able to be Kings of the hundred streams. ~ And so: ~ Wishing to be high above the people, ~ you must by your speech put yourself at the bottom. ~ Wishing to be out in front of the people, ~ you must put your self in the last place. ~ And so, the Wise Person: ~ Stands above, but the people are not weighed down; ~ stands out in front, but the people are not harmed; ~ and so the world delights in praising him, and does not tire. ~ Because of his not contending, ~ no one in the world can contend with him.

[66c33т] Cheng Lin ~ That the rivers and seas are the lords of all waterways is because they occupy the lowest position, which fact is the cause of their lordship. ~ Wherefore, he who wishes to be above the people must be content to be at the bottom. ~ He who wishes to be at the head of the people must be content to be in the rear. ~ Thus the Sage occupies a superior position, and the people do not find it burdensome. ~ He occupies a leading position, and the people do not find it irksome. ~ Therefore the whole Empire takes delight, and is never weary of paying him homage. ~ Because he himself does not strive for superiority, there is none in this world who can contend with his superiority.

[66c34т] Yi Wu ~ The reason rivers and seas are able to be the kings of all valleys ~ Is because they excel in taking the lowest places. ~ So, they become the kings of all valleys. ~ Therefore, one who wants to be above the people ~ Surely must, in words, be below them. ~ One who wants to stay before people ~ Surely must, in body, stay behind them. ~ Therefore, though the Sage's place is above, ~ The people are not burdened. ~ The Sage is ahead, ~ But the people are not obstructed. ~ Therefore, the world happily praises and does not tire of him. ~ Because he does not compete, ~ The world cannot compete with him.

[66c35т] Han Hiong Tan ~ How does the sea become the king of all waters? ~ It is because it is good at lying low. ~ Hence, it is the king of all waters. ~ Therefore, the sage must be modest in order to reign successfully. ~ In order to lead, the sage must follow the people wishes. ~ Consequently, when the sage reigns, people are not oppressed. ~ When the sage leads, the people are not suppressed. ~ Hence, the sage is esteemed and not hated. ~ As the sage does not contend, ~ No one can contend with him.

[66c36т] Hua-Ching Ni ~ How does the sea become the queen of all rivers and streams? ~ By lying lower than they do! ~ Hence, it is the queen of all rivers and streams. ~ One who humbles himself, therefore, can serve all people. ~ By putting himself last, he comes to be their leader. ~ Thus, when one of subtle virtue is set above people, ~ they do not feel that he is their burden. ~ And, when he stands in front of people, ~ they do not feel that he is an obstruction to them. ~ Therefore, the world follows one of subtle virtue joyfully, ~ and never tires of doing so. ~ He does not compete with anyone, ~ thus he is above all competition.

[66c37т] Chang Chung-yuan ~ Rivers and seas become the leading powers over all the waters from the highlands ~ Because they place themselves in low positions before the other waters. ~ That is why rivers and seas become the leading powers over all the waters from the highlands. ~ Thus, when the ruler wishes to become the leader of his people, ~ He first humbles himself before them. ~ When he wishes to be in front of his people, ~ He first remains in back of them. ~ When he is in a high position, people do not feel his authority. ~ When he is in front of his people, they do not feel any obstruction. ~ Therefore, all the people want to support him, and no one dislikes him. ~ It is because he never contends with others that others are unable to quarrel with him.

[66c38т] Henry Wei ~ Apres Vous ~ Hou Chi ~ That rivers and seas can be kings of all valleys ~ Is because they are good in staying low. ~ That's why they can be kings of all valleys. ~ Thus the Sage wishing to be above the people ~ Always speaks as if he were inferior to them; ~ And wishing to lead the people, ~ Always places himself behind them. ~ So when the Sage occupies a high position, ~ The people do not feel any oppression; ~ And when he occupies a leading position, ~ The people do not receive any harm. ~ Therefore the world is glad to support him, ~ And never gets tired of doing so. ~ Because he does not contend, ~ No one in the world can contend with him.

[66c39т] Ha Poong Kim ~ The great rivers and seas are kings of hundred valleys, ~ Because they are good at keeping low. ~ That is why they can be kings of hundred valleys. ~ Therefore, if you want to stand above the people, ~ You must keep low in speaking to them. ~ If you want to stand ahead of the people, ~ You must put yourself behind them. ~ For this reason the sage ~ Is above the people yet does not weigh heavy on them; ~ He is ahead of the people yet causes no harm to them. ~ Therefore all under Heaven are happy to uphold him and never tire of him. ~ Because he does not contend, ~ No one under Heaven can contend with him.

[66c40т] Tao Huang ~ The reason why rivers and seas have the capacity for kingship over all the valleys is that they excel in lowliness. ~ That is why they have the capacity for kingship over all valleys. ~ Thus, since the sage wants to elevate the people, his speech is down to earth. ~ Since the sage wants to advance the people, he positions himself at the back, ~ So that when he is at the front, people do not harm him. ~ When he stands above, people do not feel pressure. ~ The whole world supports him untiringly. ~ Since he does not rely on competition, the world has nothing with which to compete.

[66c41т] Tang Zi-chang ~ Oceans and rivers can be the destinations of a hundred waters because the former place themselves just lower than the latter, thus they can be the destinations of a hundred waters. ~ Hence if one wishes to be on top of others he must place himself lower than others; ~ If he wishes to lead others he must put his own interest behind others. ~ Hence, when a Sage ruler was on top of others, yet, they did not feel pressure; ~ when he was in front of others, still, they did not feel hurt. ~ And the whole world was glad to have him on top, and did not weary of him. ~ Because of non-struggle, therefore, there is nothing under heaven which can struggle with him.

[66c42т] Wing-tsit Chan ~ The great rivers and seas are kings of all mountain streams ~ Because they skillfully stay below them. ~ That is why they can be their kings. ~ Therefore, in order to be the superior of the people, ~ One must, in the use of words, place himself below them. ~ And in order to be ahead of the people, ~ One must, in one's own person, follow them. ~ Therefore the sage places himself above the people and they do not feel his weight. ~ He places himself in front of them and the people do not harm him. ~ Therefore the world rejoices in praising him without getting tired of it. ~ It is precisely because he does not compete that the world cannot compete with him.

[66c92т] А. А. Маслов ~ Моря и реки лишь потому могут быть властителями сотен долин, что способны ставить себя ниже их. ~ Вот почему они могут быть властителями сотен долин. ~ Поэтому тот, кто желает возвыситься над людьми, в речах своих должен ставить себя ниже их. ~ Тот, кто желает идти впереди людей, должен встать позади них. ~ Вот почему мудрец стоит над людьми, но не бывает им в тягость; ~ находится впереди, но не вредит народу. ~ Оттого вся Поднебесная без устали и с радостью поддерживает его. ~ Он не вступает в борьбу, и потому нет в Поднебесной того, кто мог бы соперничать с ним.

[66c96т] Д. П. Конисси ~ Причина того, что реки и моря суть цари многочисленных долин (по которым текут речки), заключается в том, что первые находятся ниже последних. ~ Вот почему реки и моря суть цари многочисленных долин. ~ Когда святой желает поднять народ, то понижает его. ~ Когда он желает поставить его вперед, то ставит его назад. ~ Отсюда - когда народ займет высокое место, то не будет гордиться; ~ когда пойдет вперед, то никому не сделает вреда. ~ Когда осуществится все, что сказано мною, то на всей земле будет мир. ~ Когда будет мир на всей земле, то не будет ссоры.

восхваляет его без пресыщения. ~ Он ни с кем не соперничает, и мир не соперничает с ним.

[67c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ The {whole} world says, I'm Great; ~ Great, yet unlike [everyone else]. ~ But it's precisely because I'm unlike [everyone else], that I'm therefore able to be Great. ~ Were I like [everyone else], for a long time now I'd have seemed insignificant and small. ~ I constantly have three treasures; ~ Hold on to them and treasure them. ~ The first is compassion; ~ The second is frugality; ~ And the third is not presuming to be at the forefront in the world. ~ Now, it's because I'm compassionate that I therefore can be courageous; ~ And it's because I'm frugal that I therefore can be magnanimous; ~ And it's because I don't presume to be at the forefront in the world that I therefore can be the head of those with complete talent. ~ Now, if you abandon this compassion and yet try to be courageous, ~ And if you abandon this frugality and yet try to be magnanimous, ~ And if you abandon this staying behind and yet go to the fore, ~ Then you will die. ~ If with compassion you attack, then you'll win; ~ If you defend, then you'll stand firm. ~ When Heaven's about to establish him, ~ It's as though he surrounds him with the protective wall of compassion.

[67c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ ALL the world says that my Tao is great, but seems queer, like nothing on earth. ~ But it is just because my Tao is great that it is like nothing on earth! ~ If it were like anything on earth, how small it would have been from the very beginning! ~ I have Three Treasures, which I hold fast and watch over closely. ~ The first is Mercy. ~ The second is Frugality. ~ The third is Not Daring to Be First in the World. ~ Because I am merciful, therefore I can be brave. ~ Because I am frugal, therefore I can be generous. ~ Because I dare not be first, therefore I can be the chief of all vessels. ~ If a man wants to be brave without first being merciful, generous without first being frugal, a leader without first wishing to follow, he is only courting death! ~ Mercy alone can help you to win a war. ~ Mercy alone can help you to defend your state. ~ For Heaven will come to the rescue of the merciful, and protect him with its Mercy.

[67c03т] D. C. Lau ~ The whole world says that my way is vast and resembles nothing. ~ It is because it is vast that it resembles nothing. ~ If it resembled anything, it would, long before now, have become small. ~ I have three treasures ~ Which I hold and cherish. ~ The first is known as compassion, ~ The second is known as frugality, ~ The third is known as not daring to take the lead in the empire; ~ Being compassionate one could afford to be courageous, ~ Being frugal one could afford to extend one's territory, ~ Not daring to take the lead in the empire one could afford to be lord over the vessels. ~ Now, to forsake compassion for courage, to forsake frugality for expansion, to forsake the rear for the lead, is sure to end in death. ~ Through compassion, one will triumph in attack and be impregnable in defence. ~ What heaven succours it protects with the gift of compassion.

[67c04т] R. L. Wing ~ All the world thinks that my Tao is great; ~ And yet it seems inconceivable. ~ Only its greatness makes it seem inconceivable. ~ If it could be conceived of, ~ It would have become insignificant long ago. ~ I have Three Treasures that support and protect: ~ The first is compassion. ~ The second is moderation. ~ The third is daring not to be first in the world. ~ With compassion one becomes courageous; ~ With moderation one becomes expansive. ~ In daring not to be first in the world, ~ One becomes the instrument of leadership. ~ Now if one is courageous without compassion, Or expansive without moderation, ~ Or first without holding back, One is doomed! ~ Compassion always triumphs when attacked; ~ It brings security when maintained. ~ Nature aids its leaders ~ By arming them with compassion.

[67c05т] Ren Jiyu ~ All the people under Heaven say that my Tao is great, ~ But it is not like anything concrete. ~ Just because it is great, ~ It is not like anything concrete. ~ If it is like something concrete, ~ It would have been very small for long. ~ I have three precious things which I hold up and preserve: ~ The first is "tolerance"; ~ The second is "economy"; ~ The third is "to dare not go ahead of all the people under Heaven." ~ With tolerance, one can be brave; ~ With economy, one can be generous; ~ With not daring to go ahead of all the people under Heaven, one can be a leader. ~ Now, ~ seeking bravery without tolerance, ~ seeking generosity without economy, ~ and seeking precedence without retreat will only end with death. ~ With tolerance, one can be victorious in war or strengthen himself in defense. ~ When Heaven is to save a person, it will protect him through tolerance.

[67c06т] Gia-fu Feng ~ Everyone under heaven says that my Tao is great and beyond compare. ~ Because it is great, it seems different. ~ If it were not different, it would have vanished long ago. ~ I have three treasures which I hold and keep. ~ The first is mercy; the second is economy; ~ The third is daring not to be ahead of others. ~ From mercy comes courage; from economy comes generosity; ~ From humility comes leadership. ~ Nowadays men shun mercy, but try to be brave; ~ They abandon economy, but try to be generous; ~ They do not believe in humility, but always try to be first. ~ This is certain death. ~ Mercy brings victory in battle and strength in defense. ~ It is the means by which heaven saves and guards.

[67c07т] Lok Sang Ho ~ All under heaven say that my Dao though great seems to be useless. ~ Exactly because it is great it seems to be useless. ~ If it seemed to be useful, in all likelihood ~ it would be small, not great. ~ I have three treasures that I keep and adhere to always. ~ The first is compassion. ~ The second is thrift. ~ The third is humility. ~ Because I am compassionate, I have courage. ~ Because I am thrifty, I am generous. ~ Because I am humble, my potential can be fully developed. ~ These days people have forgotten about compassion, ~ instead they are daring; ~ They have forgotten about thrift, ~ instead they are spendthrift; ~ They have forgotten about humility, ~ and they always want to be number one. ~ They are doomed. ~ He who fights a war with compassion will win the war. ~ He who defends with compassion will hold out against his enemy. ~ Heaven will help him and defend him with compassion.

[67c08т] Xiaolin Yang ~ Everyone says my DAO is so great that it does not look like anything. ~ I say because it is so great, it does not look like anything. ~ If it were like anything, it would have disappeared long ago. ~ I have three treasures to keep and protect: ~ The first is kindness, the second is thrift, and the third is not fighting to be first. ~ Only if you are kind, can you be brave; ~ Only if you are thrifty, can you be generous; ~ Only if you do not fight to be first, can you be a leader. ~ However, the people today are not kind but brave, ~ Are not thrifty but generous, ~ Are not humble but want to be leaders. ~ These people are destined for failure. ~ With kindness, when you fight, you will win; when you defend, you will be strong. ~ If the heavens wants to save someone, it will always give him kindness as his defense.

[67c09т] Walter Gorn Old, THREE PRECIOUS THINGS ~ All the world avows that while my Taoism is great, it is yet incompetent! ~ It is its greatness which makes it appear incompetent. ~ If it were like others, it would long ago have been recognised as incompetent. ~ But I hold fast to three precious things, which also I cherish. ~ The first is gentleness. ~ The second is economy. ~ The third is humility. ~ With such gentleness I can be daring. ~ With such economy I can be generous. ~ With such humility I can be great in service, as a vessel of honour. ~ But in these days men forsake gentleness and become only obtrusive. ~ They abandon economy and become only excessive. ~ They relinquish humility and strive for precedence, and thus for death. ~ Gentleness is ever victorious in attack and secure in defence. ~ Therefore when Heaven would preserve a man it enfolds him with gentleness.

[67c10т] James Legge ~ All the world says that, while my Tao is great, it yet appears to be inferior (to other systems of teaching). ~ Now it is just its greatness that makes it seem to be inferior. ~ If it were like any other (system), for long would its smallness have been known! ~ But I have three precious things which I prize and hold fast. ~ The first is gentleness; ~ the second is economy; ~ and the third is shrinking from taking precedence of others. ~ With that gentleness I can be bold; ~ with that economy I can be liberal; ~ shrinking from taking precedence of others, I can become a vessel of the highest honour. ~ Now-a-days they give up gentleness and are all for being bold; ~ economy, and are all for being liberal; ~ the hindmost place, and seek only to be foremost; ~ - (of all which the end is) death. ~ Gentleness is sure to be victorious even in battle, and firmly to maintain its ground. ~ Heaven will save its possessor, by his (very) gentleness protecting him.

[67c11т] David Hinton ~ People throughout all beneath heaven say ~ my Tao is so vast it's like nothing at all. ~ But it's only vast because it's like nothing at all: ~ if it were like anything else ~ it would have long since become trifling. ~ There are three treasures ~ I hold and nurture: ~ The first is called compassion, ~ the second economy, ~ and the third never daring to lead all beneath heaven. ~ Courage comes of compassion, generosity comes of economy, ~ and commanding leadership comes of never daring to lead all beneath heaven. ~ But these days it's all courage without compassion, generosity without economy, and leading without following. ~ There's nothing but death in that. ~ To overcome, attack with compassion. ~ To stand firm, defend with compassion. ~ Whatever heaven sustains it shelters with compassion.

[67c12т] Chichung Huang ~ All under heaven say I am vast; ~ Vast, but resemble nothing. ~ It is precisely because I resemble nothing ~ That I can be vast. ~ If I had resembled anything, ~ Long ago I would have become tiny indeed. ~ I constantly have three treasures ~ Which I uphold and value: ~ First, compassion; ~ Second, frugality; ~ Third, not daring to precede all under heaven. ~ Being compassionate, ~ I can be courageous; ~ Being frugal, ~ I can be all-embracing; ~ Not daring to precede all under heaven, ~ I can serve as ~ Head of the great vessels. ~ Now, if I had abandoned compassion and chosen courage, ~ Abandoned frugality and chosen all-embracingness; ~ Abandoned the back and chosen the front, ~ It would have been the death of me. ~ For compassion, used in battle, ~ Will bring you victory; ~ Used in defence, ~ Will make you impregnable. ~ When heaven is about to establish someone, ~ It seems to wall him up with compassion.

[67c13т] Ellen M. Chen ~ All under heaven say that my Tao is great, ~ That it seems useless (pu hsiao). ~ Because it is great, ~ Therefore it seems useless. ~ If it were useful, ~ It would have long been small. ~ I have three treasures (pao), ~ To hold and to keep: ~ The first is motherly love (tz'u), ~ The second is frugality (chien), ~ The third is daring not be at the world's front. ~ With motherly love one can be courageous, ~ With frugality one can be wide reaching, ~ Daring not be at the world's front, ~ One can grow to a full vessel (ch'i). ~ Now to discard motherly love, yet to be courageous, ~ To discard frugality, yet to be wide reaching, ~ To discard staying behind, yet to be at the front, ~ One dies! ~ One with motherly love is victorious in battle, ~ Invulnerable in defense. ~ When Heaven wills to save a people, ~ It guards them with motherly love.

[67c14т] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ People in this world often complained: either that my theory was big and empty, or worse than that it does not appear to be about anything significant; ~ It is just because I discussed matters of great importance that it was difficult for [ordinary people] to comprehend its outline; ~ If its contents is familiar to [any kind of those superficial] discourses people were accustomed to, [then they could pick it up lightheartedly and argue about it frivolously]; ~ Before long, the meaning [of my theory] will be shifted [to satisfy their flippancy] that it will end up to be [nothing more than] trivial talks too! ~ I have three pieces of treasure which I maintain steadily; ~ The first one is compassion; ~ The second one is frugality; ~ The third one is "I would never dare to consider myself the first priority of the world." (I will always be selfless and humble). ~ Through being compassionate, a person will be brave; ~ Through being frugal, a person can [retain enough] to expand; ~ Through being selfless and humble, a person will complete [the proper development] to be an [authentic] leader of people; ~ Nowadays, leaders abandon compassion yet demand bravery from people; ~ They neglect the practice of frugality, yet seek expansion; ~ They discard humility, yet strive to lead the world. ~ All these performances are heading for end (death of their nation)! ~ Soldiers, who march to the battlefield with compassion in their hearts, will win the fight; ~ People, who stay behind to defend with compassion in their hearts, will resist [the aggression] firmly; ~ If Heaven will save a country, it will bestow its people with compassion in their hearts to protect it.

[67c15т] Tien Cong Tran ~ All the world says that my Way is great, but seems queer, like nothing on earth. ~ But it is just because my Way is great that it is like nothing on earth. ~ If it were like anything on earth, it would have been small from the very beginning. ~ I have three treasures, which I hold fast and watch over closely. ~ The first is compassion; the second is frugality; the third is not daring to be first in the world. ~ Being compassionate, I can be brave; being frugal, I can be generous; daring not be first, I can be the chief. ~ If a man forsakes compassion for courage, forsakes frugality for expansiveness, forsakes the rear position for front position, he is only courting death! ~ Compassionate to engage in war, one wins; in defense, one is secure. ~ When Heaven wants to help a man, it takes compassion to protect him.

[67c16т] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ People in the world say to me that Tao is great but it resembles nothing. ~ It is because of the greatness that nothing is like it. ~ If it were similar to anything, it would have turned trivial long ago. ~ I have three great treasures - Hold and maintain them. ~ The first is kindness. ~ The second is frugality. ~ The third is the reluctance to be prestigious in the world. ~ Being kind, one can have courage. ~ Being frugal, one can grow wide. ~ Reluctance to be prestigious, one can become the leader. ~ If one is courageous without kindness, expanding without frugality, and prestigious without modesty, he is doomed to fail. ~ With kindness, one would win in war, and be secure in defense. ~ When heaven come to rescue, it guards by using kindness.

[67c17т] Arthur Waley ~ Every one under heaven says that our Way is greatly like folly. ~ But it is just because it is great, that it seems like folly. ~ As for things that do not seem like folly - ~ well, there can be no question about their smallness! ~ Here are my three treasures. ~ Guard and keep them! ~ The first is pity; the second, frugality; the third: refusal to be 'foremost of all things under heaven'. ~ For only he that pities is truly able to be brave; ~ Only he that is frugal is truly able to be profuse; ~ Only he that refuses to be foremost of all things ~ Is truly able to become chief of all Ministers. ~ At present your bravery is not based on pity, nor your profusion on frugality, nor your vanguard on your rear; and this is death. ~ But pity cannot fight without conquering or guard without saving. ~ Heaven arms with pity those whom it would not see destroyed.

[67c18т] Richard John Lynn ~ All under Heaven say that my Dao is great but seems to have no likeness [buxiao]. ~ The reason why it seems to have no likeness is that greatness is its only attribute. ~ If it had a likeness, all this time it would have been insignificant! ~ I have three treasures, which I hold tight and protect. ~ The first is called "kindness," the second "frugality," and the third is "no presumption that I am first among all under Heaven." ~ It is thanks to kindness that one can be brave. ~ It is thanks to frugality that one can be generous. ~ It is by not presuming to be first among all under Heaven that one can make one's ready device last long. ~ Now, if one abandons kindness and takes bravery, abandons frugality and takes generosity, and abandons the back and takes first place, such a one will die! ~ Thanks to kindness, when one takes the field, he is victorious, and, when he takes a defensive position, he holds firm, for it is Heaven that will save him by protecting him with guards of kindness.

[67c19т] Lin Yutang ~ THE THREE TREASURES ~ All the world says: ~ My teaching (Tao) greatly resembles folly. ~ Because it is great; therefore it resembles folly. ~ If it did not resemble folly, ~ It would have long ago become petty indeed! ~ I have Three Treasures; ~ Guard them and keep them safe: ~ The first is Love. ~ The second is, never too much. ~ The third is, never be the first in the world. ~ Through Love, one has no fear; ~ Through not doing too much, one has amplitude (of reserve power); ~ Through not presuming to be the first in the world, one can develop one's talent and let it mature. ~ If one forsakes love and fearlessness, forsakes restraint and reserve power, forsakes following behind and rushes in front, ~ He is doomed! ~ For love is victorious in attack, ~ And invulnerable in defense. ~ Heaven arms with love ~ Those it would not see destroyed.

[67c20т] Victor H. Mair ~ All under heaven say that I am great, great but unconventional. ~ Now, ~ Precisely because I am unconventional, ~ I can be great; ~ If I were conventional, ~ I would long since have become a trifle. ~ I have always possessed three treasures that I guard and cherish. ~ The first is compassion, ~ The second is frugality, ~ The third is not daring to be ahead of all under heaven. ~ Now, ~ Because I am compassionate, I can be brave; ~ Because I am frugal, I can be magnanimous; ~ Because I dare not be ahead of all under heaven, I can be a leader in the completion of affairs. ~ If, today, I were to ~ Be courageous while forsaking compassion, ~ Be magnanimous while forsaking frugality, ~ Get ahead while forsaking the hindmost, ~ that would be death! ~ For compassion ~ In war brings victory, ~ In defense brings invulnerability. ~ Whomsoever heaven would establish, ~ It surrounds with a bulwark of compassion.

[67c21т] Tolbert McCarroll ~ Everyone under heaven says my Tao is great and resembles nothing else. ~ It is because it is great that it seems different. ~ If it were like anything on earth ~ it would have been small from the beginning. ~ I have three treasures that I cherish and hold fast. ~ The first is gentleness, ~ the second is simplicity, ~ the third is daring not to be first among all things under heaven. ~ Because of gentleness I am able to be courageous. ~ Because of simplicity I am able to be generous. ~ Because of daring not to be first I am able to lead. ~ If people ~ forsake gentleness and attempt to be courageous, ~ forsake simplicity and attempt to be generous, ~ forsake the last place and attempt to get the first place, ~ this is certain death. ~ Gentleness conquers in battle and protects in defense. ~ What heaven guards, it arms with the gift of gentleness.

[67c22т] David H. Li ~ People in the world say that my Direction is grand as if without a referent. ~ It is because it is grand that Direction is without a referent. ~ Were it capable of being referenced, it would not be grand. ~ I have three treasures - embrace and safeguard them. ~ One, affection. ~ Two, restraint. ~ Three, daring not to be at the front of [the people] of the world. ~ With affection, one becomes courageous; ~ With restraint, one becomes tolerant; ~ Daring not to be at the front of the world, one is at the head. ~ One courts death if one ~ forsakes affection for courage, ~ forsakes restraint for tolerance, ~ forsakes humility for prominence. ~ With affection, ~ in war, one wins; ~ in defense, strengthens. ~ When cosmos comes to the rescue, it shields with affection.

[67c23т] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ People say that my Tao is too immense and beyond compare. ~ However, because it is so immense, it is so different. ~ If it were not so different, ~ It would long ago have been reduced to something insignificant. ~ There are three treasures that I hold and cherish: ~ The first is tenderheartedness. ~ The second is thrift. ~ The third is daring not to be first in the world. ~ From tenderheartedness comes courage. ~ From thrift comes generosity. ~ From humility comes leadership. ~ If you try to be courageous without being tenderhearted, ~ If you try to be generous without being thrifty, ~ If you try to be a leader without learning humility, ~ You are courting your own self-destruction. ~ Venture with tenderheartedness and you will win the battle. ~ Defend with tenderheartedness and you will be invulnerable. ~ For tenderheartedness is the way Heaven guards you for your inner protection.

[67c24т] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ What the Tao is to the world, ~ So the streams and valleys are to the rivers and seas. ~ Rivers and seas can be like kings to all the streams and valleys ~ Since the former can lower themselves before the latter. ~ Thus they are the kings of all the streams and valleys. ~ Therefore the sage, in order to be above the people, ~ Must lower himself before them in words, ~ And in order to head the people, ~ He must place himself behind them in body. ~ Thus, when he is above the people, the people do not suffer at his hand, ~ When he is at the head of the people, the people are not held back by him. ~ Therefore the whole world wants to carry him on its shoulders ~ And never tires of him. ~ He competes with nobody, ~ And therefore nobody competes with him.

[67c25т] Man-Ho Kwok ~ I have three priceless treasures: ~ The first is Compassion ~ The second, thrift ~ And the third is that I never want to be ahead of you. ~ If I have compassion, you will die for me. ~ I know that. ~ If I waste nothing, I can give myself to you all - ~ And if I don't seem perfect, then you'll trust me to lead you. ~ These days people scorn compassion. ~ They try to be tough. ~ They spend all they have, and yet want to be generous. ~ They despise humility, and want to be the best. ~ I tell you that way is Death's. ~ If you have loved your people, you will know it ~ they will fight tooth and nail for you in attack or defence. ~ This is the protection of Heaven, and your harvest.

[67c26т] Gu Zhengkun ~ The whole world says that my Tao is great, ~ Resembling nothing concrete, ~ Resembling nothing concrete, ~ Just because it is great. ~ If it resembled anything concrete, ~ It would have long become minute. ~ I have three magic weapons ~ Which I hold and treasure: ~ The first is mercy; ~ The second is thrift; ~ The third is unwillingness to take the lead in the world. ~ Being merciful, one can be brave; ~ Being thrifty, one can be generous; ~ Being unwilling to take the lead in the world, one can become the leader of the world. ~ Now seeking bravery by giving up mercy, ~ Seeking generosity by giving up thrift, ~ Seeking advance by giving up retreat, ~ One is bound to end in death. ~ Being merciful, one will triumph in the offensive ~ And be impregnable in defense. ~ If heaven wants to save one, ~ It must save him with mercy.

[67c27т] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ The whole world says that the Tao is great, and that it seems without form. ~ It is great - that is why it has no form. ~ It has existed for a long time, and can also seem small. ~ I have three treasures that I keep and protect: ~ the first is goodheartedness, ~ the second is frugality, ~ the third is not daring to take the lead. ~ Only goodheartedness can bring courage. ~ Only frugality can bring generosity. ~ Not daring to take the lead can bring leadership. ~ Now to give up goodheartedness for courage, frugality for generosity, the rear for the lead, ~ will surely lead to the end. ~ Goodheartedness in battle will lead to victory, ~ and defence will strengthen the territory. ~ Heaven will save the one who follows this and guard him with goodheartedness.

[67c28т] Liu Qixuan ~ It is said that my Way is the biggest ~ And nothing could be like it. ~ Because it is the biggest, ~ There can be nothing like it. ~ If there were anything like it, ~ It wouldn't have been the Way. ~ I have three things to keep it: ~ One is motherly love; one is frugality, ~ And one is the courage to lag behind. ~ Cherishing motherly love, one can be the bravest. ~ Being frugal, one can give the most. ~ Lagging behind, one can grow to the fullest. ~ The absurdity of today is this: ~ Foolhardiness is preferred more than motherly love; ~ Wastefulness preferred more than frugality; ~ Front positions preferred more than growing to the fullest. ~ The result can be nothing other than death! ~ Cherishing motherly love, ~ An army is invincible, ~ And unconquerable, ~ Because it is protected by Heaven with love.

[67c29т] Shi Fu Hwang ~ The Three Treasures ~ Lao Tze says, ~ All the people in the world would say that my Tao is too great and that there is nothing similar to compare it with. ~ Now it is just because of its greatness that nothing similar can be compared with it. ~ If anything can be found similar to it, for long its smallness has been known. ~ At the same time, there are three precious things which I prize and hold fast. ~ The first is charity; ~ the second is economy; ~ and the third is shrinking from being the first of the world. ~ With that charity I can be bold. ~ With that economy I can be liberal. ~ Shrinking from being the first of the world, I can become a vessel of the highest value. ~ Present day kings give up charity, and are all for being bold; ~ give up economy, and are all for being liberal; ~ give up following behind, and rush in front; ~ of which the end is death. ~ For the result of using charity in battle is sure to be victory, ~ and firm maintenance of its ground in defense. ~ Heaven will save its possessor, his charitable attribute will protect him.

[67c30т] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ All the world says to me: ~ 'Great as Tao is, it resembles no description (form).' ~ Because it is great, therefore it resembles no description. ~ If it resembled any description it would have long since become small. ~ I have three treasures, which I hold and keep safe: ~ The first is called love; ~ The second is called moderation; ~ The third is called not venturing to go ahead of the world. ~ Being loving, one can be brave; ~ Being moderate, one can be ample; ~ Not venturing to go ahead of the world, one can be the chief of all officials. ~ Instead of love, one has only bravery; ~ Instead of moderation, one has only amplitude; ~ Instead of keeping behind, one goes ahead: ~ These lead to nothing but death. ~ For he who fights with love will win the battle; ~ He who defends with love will be secure. ~ Heaven will save him, and protect him with love.

[67c31т] Paul J. Lin ~ The whole world says that ~ My Tao is great but seems to resemble nothing. ~ Because it is great, it seems to resemble nothing. ~ If resembling anything, it would have become small long ago. ~ I have three treasures ~ To be kept and treasured; ~ One is compassion. ~ The second is thriftiness. ~ The third is not daring to be ahead of the world. ~ Through compassion, one can be brave. ~ Through thriftiness, one can be expansive. ~ Not daring to be ahead of the world, ~ One can be the master of the vessels. ~ Now to abandon compassion and to be brave, ~ To abandon thriftiness and to be expansive, ~ To abandon the rear and to be in front - ~ That means death! ~ Compassion, in attack, will bring victory; ~ In defense, it will hold firmly. ~ When heaven is going to save a person, ~ It will protect him with compassion.

[67c32т] Michael LaFargue ~ Everyone in the world says of me: ~ 'Great - but doesn't seem normal'. ~ It's just 'greatness' - ~ that's why it does not seem normal. ~ If I were normal, I'd have been of little worth for a long time now. ~ I have three treasures, ~ I protect and keep hold of them. ~ The first is called 'gentleness', ~ the second is called 'frugality', ~ the third is called 'not presuming to act like leader of the world'. ~ Gentle, so able to be bold; ~ frugal, so able to be lavish; ~ not presuming to act like leader of the world, so able to become head of a government. ~ Now: ~ To be bold without being gentle, ~ to be lavish without being frugal, ~ to act like leader without putting oneself last: ~ This is death. ~ Yes, gentleness: ~ "Attack with it and you will win, ~ defend with it and you will stand firm." ~ When Heaven wants to rescue someone, ~ it surrounds him with a wall of gentleness.

[67c33т] Cheng Lin ~ The world thinks that Truth which I describe is so great that it seems unreal. ~ It seems unreal because it is indeed so great. ~ If it were considered real, then it must be small. ~ There are three treasures which I cherish as the most precious. ~ The first is compassion. ~ The second is frugality. ~ The third is humility. ~ Because of compassion, there is courage. ~ Because of frugality, there is liberality. ~ Because of humility, there is supremacy. ~ Perdition will be the lot of those who choose courage, and abandon compassion; ~ who choose liberality, and abandon frugality; ~ who choose supremacy, and abandon humility. ~ When there is compassion, one can be victorious in an offensive war, and hold his position in a defensive war. ~ Because of the compassion of such a man, Heaven will deliver and protect him.

[67c34т] Yi Wu ~ All the world says that my Way is too great to be like a thing. ~ It alone is great; so, it seems like no thing. ~ If it were like a thing, it would be already small. ~ I have three treasures to be kept and protected: ~ The first is called compassion; ~ The second is called thrift; ~ The third is called not daring to be ahead of the world. ~ Compassionate, one can be brave; ~ Thrifty, one can be expansive; ~ Not daring to be ahead of the world, one is able to be the leader. ~ Now, ~ Bravery without compassion, ~ Expansiveness without thrift, ~ Going ahead without retreat, ~ Is fatal. ~ Compassion, ~ In war, will result in victory; ~ In defense, will result in holding firm. ~ When Heaven is going to save someone, ~ It protects him with compassion.

[67c35т] Han Hiong Tan ~ Everyone says that Dao is so huge that it does not resemble anything we know. ~ As it is so phenomenally huge, it becomes incomparable. ~ If it does remotely resemble something on earth, then with the passage of time, its uniqueness will evaporate and gradually become inconsequential. ~ I steadfastly hold on to my three treasures. ~ These are compassion, frugality and humility. ~ With compassion, I can arouse real courage from my subordinates. ~ With frugality, I would enjoy popular support. ~ With humility, I become the natural leader. ~ Let us examine the following scenarios. ~ Demanding bravery from the subjects without showing compassion towards them, ~ Expecting popular support without dispensing benefits, ~ And wanting to become the leader without exhibiting humility. ~ These are negative attributes that will lead to self-destruction. ~ By applying compassion in war, you will be triumphant in attack and invincible in defence. ~ When Providence wants to save a nation, ~ It does so by bestowing great compassion to its leader.

[67c36т] Hua-Ching Ni ~ The world may say that the subtle Way of the universe which I describe is great, ~ but that it has little bearing on worldly life. ~ Truly, it is just that it is not definable, like the small ways of the world, thus it is indeed great. ~ There are three treasures which I embrace and follow closely: ~ the first is to be kind; ~ the second is to be simple; ~ the third is to not put one's own importance first in the world. ~ Because kindness and compassion can produce courage, ~ simplicity can thus be broadened to contain the world. ~ By not putting your own importance first in worldly affairs, ~ you will not impede the natural growth of all things. ~ If a person endeavors to be brave without first being kind, ~ great purposed, without first simplifying his life, ~ an authority, without first denying himself, ~ he cannot evolve freely from strife, and is only courting destruction. ~ Kindness can help to win a war. ~ Kindness can help to defend a fortification. ~

Kindness will invite the corresponding energy of kindness from Heaven through all the divine beings who support and protect.

[67c37т] Chang Chung-yuan ~ The world says that I am beyond determination ~ And cannot be identified with anything. ~ It is because I am beyond determination that I cannot be identified with anything. ~ If I could be identified with anything, ~ I would no longer be beyond determination. ~ There are three essentials that I value and maintain: ~ One is compassion (tz'u), ~ Another is renunciation (ch'ien), ~ The third is never longing to be first in the world. ~ One who is compassionate is able to be valiant. ~ One who renounces is able to broaden one's self. ~ One who never longs to be first in the world ~ Is able to achieve the full growth of his capacity. ~ In the present day, people wish to be valiant, ~ But they are not compassionate. ~ They wish to broaden their selves, ~ But they do not renounce. ~ They wish to achieve the full growth of their capacities, ~ But they long to be first in the world. ~ This indeed leads to death. ~ Through compassion, engaging in war, one wins. ~ In self-defense, one is very well protected. ~ This type of person is saved by heaven. ~ Because he is compassionate, one is taken care of well.

[67c38т] Henry Wei ~ Three Treasures ~ San Pao ~ All the world says I am great ~ But rather odd and different from the ordinary. ~ Be it noted that greatness itself is the very reason ~ Why it appears rather odd and different from the ordinary. ~ If it had resembled the ordinary, ~ It would have become pettiness long ago. ~ I have three treasures. ~ Keep them and treasure them. ~ The first is compassion; ~ The second is frugality; ~ The third is: ~ Dare not be first in the world. ~ Because compassionate, a person can be courageous; ~ Because frugal, he can expand his scope; ~ Because he dare not be first in the world, he can develop his gifts of leadership. ~ Nowadays people are courageous without compassion, ~ Expand their scope without frugality, ~ And assume leadership without being humble. ~ They are doomed! ~ Compassion is invincible in offense, ~ And in defense invulnerable. ~ When Heaven wants to deliver a person from harm, ~ It grants him compassion as a protective charm.

* * *

[67c39т] Ha Poong Kim ~ All under Heaven says that ~ My Tao is great yet doesn't look like it [Tao]. ~ Truly, because it is great, ~ It doesn't look like it. ~ If it did, ~ It would have turned out a petty one long ago. ~ I have three treasures. ~ I hold and cherish them. ~ The first is called mercifulness; ~ The second, frugality; ~ The third, refusal to be ahead of all under Heaven. ~ Being merciful, you can therefore be brave; ~ Being frugal, you can therefore be liberal; ~ Refusing to be ahead of all under Heaven, ~ You can therefore become the leader of the vessels. ~ Now, to be brave, forsaking mercifulness, ~ To be liberal, forsaking frugality, ~ To be ahead, forsaking being behind ~ Is death. ~ With mercifulness - ~ If you fight, you will be triumphant, ~ If you defend, you will be invincible. ~ Whatever Heaven is about to save ~ Heaven will protect it with mercifulness.

[67c40т] Tao Huang ~ Everyone in the world says I am great, great without parallel. ~ Being without parallel is what enables greatness. ~ If there is a long-standing parallel, it becomes small. ~ I always have three treasures: ~ First is compassion. ~ Second is frugality. ~ Third is to not dare act in front of the world. ~ So compassion enables courage. ~ Frugality enables abundance. ~ Not daring to act in front of the world enables the mechanism to endure. ~ Today there is courage without compassion. ~ There is abundance without frugality. ~ There is appearance alone without substance. ~ This means no-life. ~ Through compassion: fight and win, defend and be secure. ~ When the heaven establishes itself, it always relies upon compassion.

[67c41т] Tang Zi-chang ~ All in the world may think that Dao is unlike to be so superior, that nothing in the world can compare to it. ~ If it were comparable to anything, it would be inferior. ~ If it is not superior, it would not be Dao. ~ I have three treasured strategies to which I hold fast and embrace them all: ~ the first is Mercy; ~ the second is Economy of Force; ~ and the third is Dare Not to Take Initiative Before the World. ~ Because of Mercy, one can be courageous. ~ Because of Economy of Force, one can have superior force. ~ Because of Dare Not To Take Initiative Before the World, one can be the master of instruments. ~ Alas! ~ Nowadays, rulers want to be brave without being merciful; ~ want to have superior force without knowing economy of force; ~ and want to take initiative without being able to be resistant. ~ They will surely die in the war. ~ Mercy helps one to win when on the offensive; ~ to consolidate when on the defensive. ~ If one guides oneself by mercy Heavens will protect him.

[67c42т] Wing-tsit Chan ~ All the world says that my Tao is great and does not seem to resemble (the ordinary). ~ It is precisely because it is great that it does not resemble (the ordinary). ~ If it did resemble, it would have been small for a long time. ~ I have three treasures. ~ Guard and keep them: ~ The first is deep love, ~ The second is frugality, ~ And the third is not to dare to be ahead of the world. ~ Because of deep love, one is courageous. ~ Because of frugality, one is generous. ~ Because of not daring to be ahead of the world, one becomes the leader of the world. ~ Now, to be courageous by forsaking deep love, ~ To be generous by forsaking frugality, ~ And to be ahead of the world by forsaking following behind - ~ This is fatal. ~ For deep love helps one to win in the case of attack, ~ And to be firm in the case of defense. ~ When Heaven is to save a person, ~ Heaven will protect him through deep love.

[67c91т] И. И. Семененко ~ Все говорят о том, как сходство Дао моего велико с недостойным сыном. ~ Но мое Дао потому-то и велико, что напоминает сына, не похожего на предков. ~ А было бы похожим, то уж давно бы измельчало. ~ У меня есть три сокровища, я их держусь и берегу. ~ Одно зовется материнскою любовью, ~ второе - бережливостью, ~ а третье - тем, когда не смеют находиться впереди других. ~ Люблю по-матерински и поэтому способен преисполниться бесстрашия, ~ обладаю бережливостью и потому способен обрести широкость, ~ не смею находиться впереди других и потому способен стать распорядителем готовых чаш. ~ Кто отрекается любить по-матерински и предпочитает быть бесстрашным, ~ отбрасывает бережливость и предпочитает широту, ~ отказывается быть сзади и предпочитает находиться впереди, ~ того ждет гибель. ~ Когда сражаются, преисполняясь материнскою любовью, побеждают, ~ а оборона с ее помощью становится незыблемой. ~ Спасение грядет от Неба, дающего защиту с материнскою любовью.

[67c92т] А. А. Маслов ~ Все в мире говорят, что моё Дао велико и ни на что не похоже. ~ Лишь потому, что оно велико, оно и ни на что не похоже. ~ Если бы оно походило на что-нибудь, то давно бы стало едва приметным. ~ Я обладаю тремя сокровищами, [кои] храню и [коими] дорожу. ~ Первое - великодушие. ~ Второе - бережливость. ~ Третье - не смею быть первым в Поднебесной. ~ Благодаря великодушию могу быть храбрым. ~ Благодаря бережливости могу быть щедрым. ~ Благодаря тому, что не смею быть первым в Поднебесной, могу стать господином сосудов. ~ Сегодня те, кто жертвует великодушием ради храбрости, бережливостью ради щедрости, местом позади ради того, чтобы быть впереди, обречены на смерть. ~ Великодушием побеждаешь в наступлении и становишься неприступным в обороне. ~ Даже Небо спасает тех, кто бережёт себя великодушием.

[67c95т] Ян Хин-шун ~ Все говорят о том, что мое дао велико и не уменьшается. ~ Если бы оно уменьшилось, то после долгого времени оно стало бы маленьким. ~ Не уменьшается потому, что оно является великим. ~ Я имею три сокровища, которыми дорожу: ~ первое - это человеколюбие, ~ второе - бережливость, ~ а третье состоит в том, что я не смею быть впереди других. ~ Я человеколюбив, поэтому могу стать храбрым. ~ Я бережлив, поэтому могу быть щедрым. ~ Я не смею быть впереди других, поэтому могу стать умным вождем. ~ Кто храбр без человеколюбия, щедр без бережливости, находясь впереди, отталкивает тех, кто находится позади, - тот погибает. ~ Кто ведет войну человеколюбию, побеждает, ~ и возведенная им оборона неприступна. ~ Небо его спасает, человеколюбие его охраняет.

[67c98т] Б. Б. Виногродский ~ В Поднебесной всегда называют мой Путь великим. ~ А он, похоже, ни с чем не сравним. ~ Ведь только потому и велик. ~ Причинность: ~ В схожести ни с чем не сравним. ~ Если уподоблять, то с течением времени он становится крошечным. ~ У меня в наличии три драгоценности. ~ Удерживаю и сберегаю их. ~ Первая выражается в милосердии. ~ Вторая выражается в умеренности. ~ Третья выражается в том, что не осмеливаюсь осуществлять впереди Поднебесной. ~ Милосердие - ~ Причинность: ~ Способность к мужеству. ~ Умеренность - ~ Причинность: ~ Способность к широте. ~ Не осмеливаюсь осуществлять впереди Поднебесной - ~ Причинность: ~ Способность главенствовать в сотворении инструментов. ~ Теперь же, если, оставив милосердие быть мужественным, ~ оставив умеренность быть широким, ~ оставив задних быть впереди - ~ это смерть. ~ Ведь, воюя с милосердием, побеждаешь. ~ Удерживая с милосердием, достигаешь крепости. ~ Когда Небо помогает тебе, оно посредством милосердия охраняет тебя.

[69c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ Those who use weapons have a saying which goes: ~ "I don't presume to act like the host, and instead play the part of the guest; ~ I don't advance an inch, but rather retreat a foot." ~ This is called moving forward without moving forward - ~ Rolling up one's sleeves without baring one's arms - ~ Grasping firmly without holding a weapon - ~ And enticing to fight when there's no opponent. ~ Of disasters, none is greater than [thinking] you have no rival. ~ To think you have no rival is to come close to losing my treasures. ~ Therefore, when weapons are raised and [the opponents] are fairly well matched, ~ Then it's the one who feels grief that will win.

[69c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ THE strategists have a saying: ~ I dare not be a host, but rather a guest; ~ I dare not advance an inch, but rather retreat a foot. ~ This is called marching without moving, ~ Rolling up one's sleeves without baring one's arms, ~ Capturing the enemy without confronting him, ~ Holding a weapon that is invisible. ~ There is no greater calamity than to under-estimate the strength of your enemy. ~ For to under-estimate the strength of your enemy is to lose your treasure. ~ Therefore, when opposing troops meet in battle, victory belongs to the grieving side.

[69c03т] D. C. Lau ~ The strategists have a saying, ~ I dare not play the host but play the guest, ~ I dare not advance an inch but retreat a foot instead. ~ This is known as marching forward when there is no road, ~ Rolling up one's sleeves when there is no arm, ~ Dragging one's adversary by force when there is no adversary, ~ And taking up arms when there are no arms. ~ There is no disaster greater than taking on an enemy too easily. ~ So doing nearly cost me my treasure. ~ Thus of two sides raising arms against each other, ~ It is the one that is sorrow-stricken that wins.

[69c04т] R. L. Wing ~ The strategists have a saying: ~ "I dare not act as a host, Yet I act as a guest. I dare not advance an inch, Yet I retreat a foot." ~ This is called ~ Traveling without moving, Rising up without arms, Projecting without resistance, Capturing without strategies. ~ No misfortune is greater than underestimating resistance; ~ Underestimating resistance will destroy my Treasures. ~ Thus when mutually opposing strategies escalate, ~ The one who feels sorrow will triumph.

[69c05т] Ren Jiyu ~ A master of the art of war is very correct in saying: ~ "I dare not take the offensive, but prefer to take the defensive; ~ I dare not advance an inch, but prefer to retreat a foot." ~ This is called: ~ Disposing no lines of troops, ~ Raising no arms, ~ Confronting no enemy, ~ And grasping no weapons. ~ There is no disaster greater than underestimating the enemy, ~ Underestimating the enemy nearly makes me lose my "three precious things." ~ Therefore the side in grief conquers in case of the balance of the forces of two sides.

[69c06т] Gia-fu Feng ~ There is a saying among soldiers: ~ I dare not make the first move but would rather play the guest; ~ I dare not advance an inch but would rather withdraw a foot. ~ This is called marching without appearing to move, ~ Rolling up your sleeves without showing your arm, ~ Capturing the enemy without attacking, ~ Being armed without weapons. ~ There is no greater catastrophe than underestimating the enemy. ~ By underestimating the enemy, I almost lose what I value. ~ Therefore when the battle is joined, ~ The underdog will win.

[69c07т] Lok Sang Ho ~ Military strategists have this dictum: ~ "When I am not ready to take the role of the host (defend), ~ I will take the role of the guest (attack); ~ When I am not ready to advance an inch, ~ I will retreat a foot." ~ This is known as moving but not having a pattern of moving; ~ Pushing away, but not showing the arms to push with; ~ Dispelling, but not having visible enemies to dispel; ~ Taking command, but having no armies to take command over. ~ The greatest ill lies in slighting one's opponents; ~ Slighting my opponent, I could easily lose my treasure. ~ When two armies of equal strength meet in combat, ~ It is the army that considers itself weak that will win.

[69c08т] Xiaolin Yang ~ There is a saying in the military: ~ "I dare not attack but would rather retreat; ~ I dare not move forward an inch but would rather move back a foot." ~ This is called advancing without appearing to advance, ~ Making a resolution without rolling up your sleeves, ~ Carrying a weapon without revealing the weapon, ~ Preparing to fight without showing the preparation. ~ The biggest disaster is to underestimate the enemy; ~ Underestimating the enemy will cause you to lose all your armies. ~ When two fighting armies have similar strength, the side that is sorrowful and cautious will win.

[69c09т] Walter Gorn Old, THE USE OF SUPREME VIRTUE ~ A great warrior has said, "I dare not be the host, I would rather be the guest; I dare not advance an inch, I would rather retire a foot." ~ Now this I call filing in without marshalling the ranks; baring the arms without preparing to fight; grasping the sword without unsheathing it; and advancing upon the enemy without coming into conflict. ~ There is nothing so unfortunate as entering lightly into battle. ~ For by so doing we are in danger of losing that which is most precious. ~ Thus it happens that when opposing forces meet in battle, he who feels the pity of it assuredly conquers.

[69c10т] James Legge ~ A master of the art of war has said, ~ 'I do not dare to be the host (to commence the war); ~ I prefer to be the guest (to act on the defensive). ~ I do not dare to advance an inch; ~ I prefer to retire a foot.' ~ This is called marshalling the ranks where there are no ranks; ~ baring the arms (to fight) where there are no arms to bare; ~ grasping the weapon where there is no weapon to grasp; ~ advancing against the enemy where there is no enemy. ~ There is no calamity greater than lightly engaging in war. ~ To do that is near losing (the gentleness) which is so precious. ~ Thus it is that when opposing weapons are (actually) crossed, he who deplores (the situation) conquers.

[69c11т] David Hinton ~ There was once a saying among those who wielded armies: ~ I'd much rather be a guest than a host, ~ much rather retreat a foot than advance an inch. ~ This is called marching without marching, ~ rolling up sleeves without baring arms, ~ raising swords without brandishing weapons, ~ entering battle without facing an enemy. ~ There's no greater calamity than dishonoring an enemy. ~ Dishonor an enemy and you'll lose those treasures of mine. ~ When armies face one another in battle, ~ it's always the tender-hearted one that prevails.

[69c12т] Chichung Huang ~ A strategist once said: ~ "I dare not play the host, ~ Rather, I'd play the guest; ~ I dare not advance one inch, ~ Rather, I'd retreat one foot. ~ Which means: ~ Marching without ranks, ~ Baring no arms, ~ Holding no weapons, ~ I will still emerge invincible. ~ No calamity is greater than being invincible; ~ Being invincible almost cost me my treasures." ~ Therefore, when two confronting armies are equally matched, ~ The compassionate party wins.

* * *

[69c13т] Ellen M. Chen ~ In engaging in warfare it is said: ~ I dare not be the host but be the guest, ~ I dare not advance an inch but retreat a foot. ~ This is called to march without advancing, ~ To roll up one's sleeves without baring one's arms, ~ To throw a rope without an enemy, ~ To carry without a weapon. ~ Of all calamities (huo), ~ None is greater than underestimating one's enemy. ~ In underestimating my enemy, ~ I risk losing my treasure (pao). ~ Therefore when opposing armies are engaged in battle, ~ The sorrowful party will win.

[69c14т] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ In ancient time a military strategist had once said: ~ "I do not dare to take the [subjective] position of a host in the battlefield, on the contrary, I adopt the [objective] position of a visitor; ~ I do not dare to advance one inch [counter-productively] at the cost of retreating one foot." ~ This game-plan was described [in military strategy] as: ~ "To march [in such secrecy] that the traces [of the procession of the army] are invisible; ~ To throw [so swiftly that observers] can not detect thrower's arms [in action]; ~ To file soldiers [so unconventionally that it misleads] people to draw the conclusion that the army is not ready for combat yet; ~ To disguise [soldiers' weapons so skillfully that] there is no clue." ~ The mistake which is most disastrous [in military operation] is underestimating one's enemy; ~ Underestimating one's enemy will lose almost all my [three] treasures; ~ Therefore, when two combatant forces encounter each other, the one with mourning soldiers will prevail.

[69c15т] Tien Cong Tran ~ The strategists have a saying: I dare not be a host, but rather a guest; I dare not advance an inch, but rather retreat a foot. ~ This is called going without marching, rolling up one's sleeves without baring one's arms, capturing the enemy without confronting him, holding a weapon that is invisible. ~ There is no greater calamity than to underestimate the enemy. ~ To underestimate the enemy is to lose your treasure. ~ Therefore, when opposing troops meet in battle, victory belongs to the grieving side.

[69c16т] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ It is a military saying that when engaging in war, we do not aggress but defend; we do not advance an inch but retreat a foot. ~ This is marching without formation. ~ Do not roll up sleeves. ~ Confront no enemy. ~ Commit to no weapons. ~ The most serious mistake is to underestimate the enemy. ~ Underestimating the enemy almost caused me to lose my treasures. ~ Thus, when two comparable armies fight, the lamenting one wins.

[69c17т] Arthur Waley ~ The strategists have the sayings: ~ 'When you doubt your ability to meet the enemy's attack, take the offensive yourself', and ~ 'If you doubt your ability to advance an inch, then retreat a foot'. ~ This latter is what we call to march without moving, ~ To roll the sleeve, but present no bare arm, ~ The hand that seems to hold, yet has no weapon in it, ~ A host that can confront, yet presents no battle-front. ~ Now the greatest of all calamities is to attack and find no enemy. ~ I can have no enemy only at the price of losing my treasure. ~ Therefore when armies are raised and issues joined it is he who does not delight in war that wins.

[69c18т] Richard John Lynn ~ Military specialists have a saying: ~ "I dare not play the host but instead play the guest. ~ I dare not advance an inch but instead retreat a foot." ~ In other words, ~ campaign in such a way that there is no campaign; ~ push up your sleeve so that no arm is exposed; ~ wield weapons in such a way that no weapons are involved; ~ and lead in such a way that you face no opponent. ~ There is no greater disaster than having no viable opponent. ~ If one has no viable opponent, he will soon lose my [the Laozi's] treasures. ~ Thus, when they raise armies that are equally matched, he who feels pity will be the victor.

[69c19т] Lin Yutang ~ CAMOUFLAGE ~ There is the maxim of military strategists; ~ I dare not be the first to invade, but rather be the invaded. ~ Dare not press forward an inch, but rather retreat a foot. ~ That is, ~ To march without formations, ~ To roll not up the sleeves, ~ To charge not in frontal attacks, ~ To arm without weapons. ~ There is no greater catastrophe than to underestimate the enemy. ~ To underestimate the enemy might entail the loss of my treasures. ~ Therefore when two equally matched armies meet, ~ It is the man of sorrow who wins.

[69c20т] Victor H. Mair ~ The strategists have a saying: ~ "I dare not be host, but would rather be guest; ~ I advance not an inch, but instead retreat a foot." ~ This is called ~ Marching without ranks, ~ Bearing nonexistent arms, ~ Flourishing nonexistent weapons, ~ Driving back nonexistent enemies. ~ There is no greater misfortune than not having a worthy foe; ~ Once I believe there are no worthy foes, I have well-nigh forfeited my treasures. ~ Therefore, ~ When opposing forces are evenly matched, ~ The one who is saddened will be victorious.

[69c21т] Tolbert McCarroll ~ The master soldiers have a saying: ~ I dare not be the host but prefer to be the guest. ~ I dare not advance an inch but prefer to retreat a foot. ~ This is called ~ marching without moving, ~ rolling up a sleeve without baring an arm, ~ capturing a foe without a battlefront, ~ arming yourself without weapons. ~ There is no disaster greater than attacking and finding no enemy. ~ Doing so will cost you your treasure. ~ Thus it is that when opposing forces meet, ~ victory will go to those who take no delight in the situation.

[69c22т] David H. Li ~ A saying among warriors: ~ I dare not play host, I prefer playing guest; ~ I dare not advance an inch, I prefer retreating a foot. ~ This is formless formation, ~ this is defenseless advancement, ~ this is oppositionless encounter, ~ this is weaponless display. ~ No disaster is greater than underestimating the enemy. ~ Underestimating the enemy verges on losing my treasures. ~ Thus, when two equal-size armies are in combat, the one that is grieved wins.

[69c23т] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ The strategist par excellence says: ~ Dare not to be the aggressor but rather to be the defender. ~ Dare not to advance an inch but rather to retreat a foot. ~ This is called ~ Letting the opponent march toward nowhere to which to march, ~ Letting the opponent capture nothing to be captured, ~ Letting the opponent attack none to be attacked, ~ Letting the opponent arm with weapons for nothing for which to arm. ~ There is no greater calamity than underestimating your opponent. ~ To underestimate your opponent is surely to lose your treasures. ~ Therefore, when opposing forces are engaged in conflict, ~ The one who yields with caution will triumph in the end.

[69c24т] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ A tactician in ancient times said: ~ "I do not dare to act as a host, ~ I prefer to act as a guest, ~ I do not dare to advance an inch, ~ I prefer to retreat a foot." ~ This implies that he does not muster his armies, as if he has no armies, ~ He does not roll up his sleeves, as if his arms are not ready, ~ He does not go out to battle, as if he has no weapons, ~ He does not fight, as if he has no enemies. ~ The greatest calamity is to underestimate the strength of the enemy, ~ For underestimating the strength of the enemy leads to the loss of our treasure of love. ~ Therefore, when armies clash on the battlefield, ~ The one that possesses the treasure will triumph.

[69c25т] Man-Ho Kwok ~ There is a saying, you know, which soldiers have: ~ 'I never use my force before my enemy uses his. ~ I'd sooner go back a foot than advance an inch.' ~ This is called going forward without moving, ~ Rolling up your sleeve without showing your arm - ~ And by not, you defeat him without apparently doing anything. ~ This is like being armed, but no one sees what you have. ~ Never think your enemy is feeble. ~ That's disastrous. ~ If I do that, I'm bound to lose all I have! ~ So, you see, when the battle begins ~ It is the one who seems weakest that will win.

[69c26т] Gu Zhengkun ~ A strategist says: ~ I dare not launch an attack but strengthen defense capabilities; ~ I dare not advance an inch but retreat a foot instead. ~ This means to deploy battle array by showing no battle array; ~ To wield one's arm to attack by showing no arm to lift; ~ To face the enemy by showing no enemy to attack; ~ To hold weapons by showing no weapons to hold. ~ No disaster is greater than underestimating the enemy. ~ Underestimating the enemy nearly cost me my treasure (i. e. three treasured weapons, see 67). ~ That is why the sorrow-laden side wins ~ When two armies are at war.

[69c27т] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ There is a saying among military strategists: ~ 'I dare not act as the host, but the guest. ~ I dare advance an inch, but retreat a foot.' ~ This is called conducting in non-conducting. ~ Pulling back without using force. ~ Facing the fight without engaging the enemy. ~ Holding no weapons. ~ The greatest danger is to undervalue the enemy. ~ To undervalue the enemy will cause loss of the three treasures. ~ That is why when two forces fight against each other, the one that is full of sorrow will win.

[69c28т] Liu Qixuan ~ The ancient wise generals all held: ~ "Start no war. ~ Fight only when forced to. ~ A foot back instead of an inch forward." ~ Such military creeds all boil down to this: ~ Advance invisible ranks; ~ Raise invisible arms; ~ Poise invisible armies; ~ Fight as if one is not fighting with enemies. ~ The biggest military disaster is this: ~ To attack an enemy thoughtlessly ~ With threats, menaces and challenges. ~ For such an attack means the loss of all advantages. ~ When two armies battle, one against the other, ~ The army that fights out of love and sadness wins.

[69c29т] Shi Fu Hwang ~ The Art of War ~ Lao Tze says, ~ A master of strategy once said, ~ 'I do not dare to be the first to arouse a war. ~ I prefer to be passive to rise against an invasion. ~ I do not dare to march an inch. ~ I prefer to withdraw a foot.' ~ This is called proceeding to make an action without walking, to resist without lifting arms; ~ to dart without facing enemies, and to seize them without combating. ~ There is no calamity greater than to lightly engage in war. ~ To do that nearly results in the loss of the three precious things I mentioned before. ~ That is why when opposing armies meet, the sorrowful side conquers.

[69c40т] Tao Huang ~ There is a saying on using military force: ~ I dare not be the host, but rather a guest. ~ I dare not advance an inch, but rather retreat a foot. ~ This is called performing without performing, rolling up one's sleeves without showing the arms. ~ By not holding on to an enemy, there is no enemy. ~ There is no disaster greater than having no enemy. ~ Having no enemy almost destroys my treasure. ~ When opposing armies clash, those who cry win!

* * *

[69c41т] Tang Zi-chang ~ The Conduct of War has this to say: ~ "I dare not take the initiative but rather to be resistant. ~ I dare not advance an inch but rather I withdraw a foot." ~ So that, engage the enemy without advancing. ~ Drive out the enemy without arms. ~ Subdue the enemy without battle. ~ Take the enemy with invincibility. ~ No fault is greater than to underestimate the enemy: ~ To underestimate the enemy is to destroy all my treasured principles. ~ When an army of resistance engages, the mournful one - the army of resistance, wins.

[69c42т] Wing-tsit Chan ~ The strategists say: ~ "I dare not take the offensive but I take the defensive; ~ I dare not advance an inch but I retreat a foot." ~ This means: ~ To march without formation, ~ To stretch one's arm without showing it, ~ To confront enemies without seeming to meet them, ~ To hold weapons without seeming to have them. ~ There is no greater disaster than to make light of the enemy. ~ Making light of the enemy will destroy my treasures. ~ Therefore when armies are mobilized and issues joined, ~ The man who is sorry over the fact will win.

[69c96т] Д. П. Конисси ~ В "военном искусстве" говорится, что на войне я никогда не бываю активным, а - пассивным. ~ Не сделав ни шага вперед, идти назад аршин - значит уступить врагам оспариваемое без сопротивления. ~ Когда нет врагов, то не бывает войны. ~ Нет беды тяжелее, чем презирать врагов. ~ Презирать врагов - все равно что бросить богатства без надобности. ~ Плачущий об увеличении своего войска всегда будет победителем.

[69c98т] Б. Б. Виногродский ~ У использующих оружие есть изречения: ~ "Сущность моя не осмеливается осуществлять функцию хозяина, а осуществляет функцию гостя; ~ Не осмеливается продвинуться на сантиметр, а отступает на метр. ~ Это определяется: ~ Движутся в отсутствии движения. ~ Закатывают рукава в отсутствии рук. ~ Бросаются на отсутствие противника. ~ Удерживают отсутствие оружия. ~ Нет большей беды, чем недооценивать противника. ~ Недооценивая противника, близок к потере драгоценностей сущности своей". ~ Причинность: ~ Когда скрещивают оружие при равных силах, побеждает сожалеющий.

[70c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ My words are easy to understand, ~ And easy to put into practice. ~ Yet no one in the world can understand them, ~ And no one can put them into practice. ~ Now my words have an ancestor, and my deeds have a lord, ~ And it's simply because [people] have no understanding [of them], that they therefore don't understand me. ~ But when those who understand me are few, then I'm of great value. ~ Therefore the Sage wears coarse woolen cloth, but inside it he holds on to jade.

[70c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ MY words are very easy to understand, and very easy to practise: ~ But the world cannot understand them, nor practise them. ~ My words have an Ancestor. ~ My deeds have a Lord. ~ The people have no knowledge of this. ~ Therefore, they have no knowledge of me. ~ The fewer persons know me, ~ The nobler are they that follow me. ~ Therefore, the Sage wears coarse clothes, ~ While keeping the jade in his bosom.

* * *

[70c03т] D. C. Lau ~ My words are very easy to understand and very easy to put into practice, ~ Yet no one in the world can understand them or put them into practice. ~ Words have an ancestor and affairs have a sovereign. ~ It is because people are ignorant that they fail to understand me. ~ Those who understand me are few; ~ Those who harm(imitate) me are honoured. ~ Therefore the sage, while clad in homespun, conceals on his person a priceless piece of jade.

* * *

[70c04т] R. L. Wing ~ My words are very easy to know, ~ Very easy to follow. ~ Yet the world is unable to know them, ~ Unable to follow them. ~ My words have a source, ~ My efforts have mastery. ~ Indeed, since none know this, They do not know me. ~ The rare ones who know me Must treasure me. ~ Therefore, Evolved Individuals Wear a coarse cloth covering With precious jade at the center.

* * *

[70c05т] Ren Jiyu ~ My words are very easy to understand, and very easy to practise. ~ But no one under Heaven is able to understand them or to practise them. ~ Speeches should have their main principle, ~ And deeds should have their master. ~ Because of their ignorance, the people are not able to understand me. ~ Those who are able to understand me are very few, ~ And those who are able to follow me are very hard to meet. ~ Therefore the sage (who is not understood) looks like he is wearing coarse garb, but he has a precious jade in his heart.

[70c06т] Gia-fu Feng ~ My words are easy to understand and easy to perform, ~ Yet no man under heaven knows them or practices them. ~ My words have ancient beginnings. ~ My actions are disciplined. ~ Because men do not understand, they have no knowledge of me. ~ Those that know me are few; ~ Those that abuse me are honored. ~ Therefore the sage wears rough clothing and holds the jewel in his heart.

* * *

[70c07т] Lok Sang Ho ~ What I say is easy to understand and easy to practice ~ Yet few people under heaven understand and practice it. ~ What I preach has a respectable ancestry, ~ What I do serves a lord well. ~ Yet few people are aware of this, ~ And therefore few understand me. ~ The fewer people know about me. ~ The rarer and the better positioned are those who know and practice my teaching. ~ The Sage is like someone hiding a precious jade piece underneath his clothes.

* * *

[70c08т] Xiaolin Yang ~ My teaching is very easy to understand and very easy to practice. ~ However, in this world, no one understands it and no one practices it. ~ Your speech must be based on facts, your actions must follow principles. ~ Only because people do not understand the DAO, do they not understand me. ~ Few people know my teaching; even fewer people follow my cause. ~ Therefore, the great men wore coarse clothing, but hid treasures inside.

* * *

[70c09т] Walter Gorn Old, THE DIFFICULT RECOGNITION ~ Easy are my words to know, and also to practise. ~ Yet none is able to understand nor yet to practise them. ~ For there is a remote origin for my words, and a supreme law for my actions. ~ Not knowing these, men cannot know me. ~ Those who know me are few, and by them I am esteemed. ~ For the wise man is outwardly poor, but he carries his jewel in his bosom.

* * *

[70c10т] James Legge ~ My words are very easy to know, and very easy to practise; ~ but there is no one in the world who is able to know and able to practise them. ~ There is an originating and all-comprehending (principle) in my words, and an authoritative law for the things (which I enforce). ~ It is because they do not know these, that men do not know me. ~ They who know me are few, and I am on that account (the more) to be prized. ~ It is thus that the sage wears (a poor garb of) hair cloth, while he carries his (signet of) jade in his bosom.

[70c11т] David Hinton ~ My words are so simple to understand ~ and so easily put into practice ~ that no one in all beneath heaven understands them ~ and no one puts them into practice. ~ Words have their ancestral origins and actions their sovereign: ~ it's only because people don't understand this that they don't understand me. ~ And the less people understand me the more precious I become. ~ So it is that a sage wears sackcloth, keeping pure jade harbored deep.

* * *

[70c12т] Chichung Huang ~ My words are exceedingly easy to understand, ~ Exceedingly easy to practice. ~ Yet none under heaven can understand them, ~ None can practice them. ~ Words have their progenitor; ~ Affairs have their sovereign. ~ It is because of ignorance ~ That they do not me understand. ~ Those who understand being rare, ~ I become all the more valuable. ~ Hence, the sage man wore a coarse tunic, ~ But carried in his bosom a piece of jade.

* * *

[70c13т] Ellen M. Chen ~ My words (yen) are very easy to understand (i-chih), ~ Very easy to put into practice (i-hsing). ~ But no one under heaven can understand (chih) them, ~ No one can put them into practice. ~ Words (yen) have their ruler (chün); ~ Events (shih) have their progenitor (tsung). ~ Because people do not understand (chih) this, ~ Therefore they do not understand me. ~ Those who understand me are rare, ~ Those who follow (tsê) my teaching are (preciously) few (kuei). ~ Therefore the sage wears hair-cloth, ~ While carrying jade in his breast.

[70c14т] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ My theory is [basically] very easy to understand and to put to practice; ~ [Unfortunately majority people of] the world would not [make an effort to] learn about it, [let alone to] carry it out. ~ All my discussions have strong footings; ~ My theory is based on [venerable] practices. ~ People [in vogue] are ignorant, so they do not know me; ~ There are only a handful of people who [would make an effort to] understand me; ~ Those who understand me will discover that my theory is valuable; ~ The description, that ancient Sages were like men who carried priceless jades under coarse ragged cloaks, was not made from casual observation.

[70c15т] Tien Cong Tran ~ My words are very easy to understand, and very easy to practice. ~ But the world cannot understand them, nor practice them. ~ My words have a root. ~ My deeds have a lord. ~ Because people are not aware of this, they do not understand me. ~ Those who understand me are few, those who follow me are honored. ~ Therefore, the sage wears coarse clothes, while keeping the jade in his bosom.

* * *

[70c16т] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ My words are easy to understand and easy to practice. ~ However, people in the world rarely understand and practice them. ~ The words have their origins. ~ The events have their causes. ~ People can hardly understand this. ~ Therefore they rarely understand me. ~ Few people understand me. ~ Those who do follow me are prized. ~ This is why sages dress in crude clothes but carry jades.

* * *

[70c18т] Richard John Lynn ~ My words are very easy to understand, very easy to practice, yet none among all under Heaven can understand them, and none can practice them. ~ My words have a progenitor, and my undertakings have a sovereign. ~ It is just because there is no understanding of this that they do not understand me. ~ As long as those who understand me are rare, someone like me is precious. ~ Thus it is that the sage wears coarse woolen cloth but harbors jade in his bosom.

* * *

[70c19т] Lin Yutang ~ THEY KNOW ME NOT ~ My teachings are very easy to understand and very easy to practice, ~ But no one can understand them and no one can practice them. ~ In my words there is a principle. ~ In the affairs of men there is a system. ~ Because they know not these, ~ They also know me not. ~ Since there are few that know me, ~ Therefore I am distinguished. ~ Therefore the Sage wears a coarse cloth on top ~ And carries jade within his bosom.

[70c20т] Victor H. Mair ~ My words are very easy to understand, very easy to practice. ~ But no one is able to understand them, ~ And no one is able to practice them. ~ Words have authority. ~ Affairs have an ancestry. ~ It is simply because of their ignorance, that they do not understand me; ~ Those who understand me are few, thus I am ennobled. ~ For this reason, ~ The sage wears coarse clothing over his shoulders, but carries jade within his bosom.

* * *

[70c21т] Tolbert McCarroll ~ My words are easy to understand and easy to put into practice. ~ Yet no one under heaven understands them or puts them into practice. ~ My words have an ancestor. ~ My actions are governed. ~ Because people do not understand this they do not understand me. ~ Those who understand me are few. ~ Those who follow me should be respected. ~ Therefore, ~ the True Person wears homespun clothes and carries jade in the heart.

* * *

[70c22т] David H. Li ~ My words are easy to understand and easy to put into practice. ~ But no one in the world understands [my words], and no one puts them into practice. ~ Words must be principled; actions must be justified. ~ Because these are not understood, I am not understood. ~ With few who understand me, fewer will put [my words] into practice. ~ Thus, a sage dresses simply but bears a jade.

* * *

[70c23т] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ My words are very easy to understand and very easy to practice, ~ Yet the people of the world can neither understand nor practice them. ~ My words point to a source and my deeds a master, ~ Yet the people of the world know neither the source nor the master. ~ Thus, they know not who and what I am. ~ But for the few who know, I am precious. ~ Therefore, the sage may wear coarse clothes, ~ But will always hold a luminous treasure within.

* * *

[70c24т] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ Words have an ancestor, deeds have a master. ~ It is easy to understand my words and practice them. ~ But all the people in the world do not know them, ~ And do not practice them. ~ Since they have knowledge, they do not know me. ~ When those that know me are few, I am beyond all praise. ~ Therefore the sage wears coarse woolen clothes but carries jade jewels in his bosom, ~ He knows himself, but does not present himself, ~ He loves himself, but does not act arrogantly. ~ Therefore he rejects the latter and adopts the former.

[70c25т] Man-Ho Kwok ~ My words are really very easy to understand ~ And be with, and walk in … but no one can! ~ My words have roots, my actions have precedents ~ But people don't see this, and so they don't see me. ~ So few of you know or understand me ~ And so the Tao becomes ever more important … ~ The sage goes round like a supertramp, ~ Hiding the jade, the jewel he carries in his inmost heart.

* * *

[70c26т] Gu Zhengkun ~ My words are very easy to understand, ~ And very easy to put into practice, ~ Yet there should have been no one in the world ~ Who can understand them ~ Or can put them into practice. ~ Words must be purpose-oriented, ~ Deeds must be reasonably grounded. ~ People cannot understand me ~ Because they fail to understand what is said above. ~ Those who understand me are few; ~ Those who can follow my advice are even less. ~ That is why the sage ~ Is always dressed in coarse cloth ~ But conceals about him a beautiful piece of jade (the Tao).

[70c27т] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ My words are very easy to understand, very easy to practise. ~ Yet no one in the world can understand them and put them into practice. ~ The words have a root. ~ The affairs have a sovereign. ~ Because people are ignorant, they do not understand me. ~ Those who understand me are few. ~ That is why I become valued. ~ This is why the sage does not flaunt himself but holds the treasure in his heart.

* * *

[70c28т] Liu Qixuan ~ As it can happen, ~ What I say is easy to understand and to do, ~ But none can understand it and do it, ~ In spite of the fact that what I say has a source ~ And what I do has a reason. ~ Since people don't understand what I say and what I do, ~ They don't know me. ~ Since people don't know me, ~ I am special. ~ That explains why the wise person wears rough clothes ~ And cherishes a heart of jade.

* * *

[70c29т] Shi Fu Hwang ~ They Know Me Not ~ Lao Tze says, ~ My words are very easy to know and very easy to practice; ~ but there is no one in the world who is able to know and able to practice them. ~ In my words there is a traditional precept and a ruling art. ~ It is because that they do not know these, that men do not know me. ~ That is why there are few that know me, and there are even fewer that model after me. ~ There is a sage who wears coarse clothes and hides jade in his bosom, which anyone shall see.

[70c30т] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ Words have an ancestor; deeds have a governor. ~ My words are very easy to know, and very easy to practise, ~ Yet all men in the world do not know them, nor do they practise them. ~ It is because they have knowledge that they do not know me. ~ When those who know me are few, eventually I am beyond all praise. ~ Therefore the Sage wears clothes of coarse cloth but carries jewels in his bosom; ~ He knows himself but does not display himself; ~ He loves himself but does not hold himself in high esteem. ~ Thus he rejects the latter and takes the former.

[70c31т] Paul J. Lin ~ My words are very easily understood, and very easily put into practice. ~ Yet no one in the world is able to understand and to practice them. ~ My words have their root; my deeds have their lord. ~ Just because the people do not know, they do not know me. ~ Those who know me are few. ~ Those who emulate me are rare. ~ Therefore, the Sage wears coarse clothes on the outside, ~ And bears precious jade near his breast.

* * *

[70c32т] Michael LaFargue ~ My words are very easy to understand, ~ very easy to practice. ~ No one in the world can understand, ~ no one can practice them. ~ The words have an ancestor, ~ the practice has a master. ~ They just do not understand ~ and so they do not understand me. ~ (So few understand me - a rare treasure indeed.) ~ And so the Wise Person: ~ Dressed in shabby clothes, jade under his shirt.

[70c33т] Cheng Lin ~ My teaching is very easy to understand and very easy to practise. ~ Yet the world does not understand or practise it! ~ My teaching has its basis, and my conduct has its reason. ~ Because the world is ignorant of them, I am misunderstood. ~ There are few who understand me, and those who abuse me are placed in positions of honour. ~ Therefore the Sage must dress in coarse robes while hiding precious jewels within his breast!

* * *

[70c34т] Yi Wu ~ My words are very easy to understand ~ and very easy to practice, ~ But the world cannot understand them ~ and cannot practice them. ~ My words have their primal meaning; ~ My deeds have their principle. ~ Only I am without knowledge; ~ Therefore, I am not known. ~ If those who know me are few, ~ Then, what I have is of value. ~ Therefore, the sage is covered by coarse clothes, but embraces jade.

* * *

[70c35т] Han Hiong Tan ~ Though my words are easily comprehended and easily followed, ~ People do not understand and do not want to follow. ~ My words are based on the principles of Dao. ~ I also follow the same principles in all my dealings. ~ Because people do not understand my teachings, they fail to understand me as well. ~ Few people understand me. ~ Fewer people follow my teachings. ~ The sage always dresses shabbily but still embraces the treasure in his bosom.

* * *

[70c36т] Hua-Ching Ni ~ My words are very easy to understand and easy to practice, ~ yet the world can neither understand nor practice them. ~ My words have only one source: the subtle truth of the universe. ~ My deeds have only one master: the natural virtue of the universe. ~ The people of the world have no knowledge of this. ~ Thus, they have no knowledge of me. ~ The fewer the persons that know me, ~ the nobler are they that follow me. ~ Therefore, the one of whole virtue wears coarse clothes superficially, ~ but holds a precious treasure within.

[70c37т] Chang Chung-yuan ~ It is not difficult to grasp my words or to follow them. ~ Yet no one in the world can grasp them or follow them. ~ Because words must derive from the source of words, ~ Action requires an actor who acts. ~ Since you are not aware of this, you cannot know me. ~ The less people know me, the more valuable I am. ~ Thus, the wise is covered with tattered clothes which conceal precious jade.

* * *

[70c38т] Henry Wei ~ Difficult to Understand ~ Chih Nan ~ My teaching is very easy to understand, ~ And very easy to carry out. ~ Yet the world is incapable of understanding it, ~ And incapable of carrying it out. ~ My teaching has an ancient source, ~ My practices have a ruling principle. ~ As people are ignorant of this, ~ So they fail to understand me. ~ When those who understand me are few, ~ Then I am distinguished indeed. ~ That's why the Sage wears a coarse cotton robe, ~ To conceal the jade ornament worn on his bosom.

[70c39т] Ha Poong Kim ~ My words are very easy to understand, ~ Very easy to put into practice. ~ Yet no one under Heaven can understand them ~ Or put them into practice. ~ Words have their source, ~ Deeds have their lord. ~ Truly, because people don't know this, ~ They don't understand me. ~ Those who know me are few; ~ Those who follow me are rare. ~ For this reason the sage ~ Wears coarse cloth but carries jade inside.

* * *

[70c40т] Tao Huang ~ My words are easy to understand and easy to apply. ~ Yet no one in the world can understand them and no one could apply them. ~ Words have their origin, and events have their leader. ~ Only because of prevailing ignorance am I not understood. ~ The fewer who understand me, the more precious I am. ~ So the sage wears shabby cloth, but holds a treasure within.

* * *

[70c41т] Tang Zi-chang ~ My teaching is very easy to be understood and very easy to be followed, ~ Yet very few people in the world can understand and follow it. ~ My teaching is to trace the origin of all things and my service is to serve the fundamentals of Nature. ~ If one does not understand Nature, surely, he cannot understand me. ~ If I am known only by a few, I feel envious of it. ~ Therefore, the Sage ruler even wore coarse clothes but embraced his jadelike personality.

[70c42т] Wing-tsit Chan ~ My doctrines are very easy to understand and very easy to practice, ~ But none in the world can understand or practice them. ~ My doctrines have a source (Nature), ~ My deeds have a master (Tao). ~ It is because people do not understand this that they do not understand me. ~ Few people know me, and therefore I am highly valued. ~ Therefore the sage wears a coarse cloth on top and carries jade within his bosom.

* * *

[70c93т] Е. А. Торчинов ~ Мои слова так легко понять, им так легко следовать, ~ Но в Поднебесной их никто не может понять, им никто не может следовать. ~ В словах есть главное, в делах есть первенствующее. ~ Ведь незнание людей заключается в том, что они не знают меня. ~ Поскольку знающих меня так мало, то я являюсь их сокровищем. ~ Поэтому на совершенномудром одежда из простой грубой ткани, но на груди у него скрыта драгоценная яшма.

[70c94т] А. Е. Лукьянов ~ Мои слова очень легко понять, очень легко [им] следовать. ~ Но в Поднебесной нет таких, кто мог бы понять, кто мог бы последовать. ~ В словах есть предок, в делах есть царь. ~ Поскольку [этого] не знают, постольку и меня не понимают. ~ Понимающие меня - редки, подражающие мне - ценны. ~ Вот почему у совершенномудрого человека сверху рубище, внутри яшма.

[70c96т] Д. П. Конисси ~ Я говорю, что очень легко приобрести знание и творить благие дела. ~ Между тем на всей земле никто не знает этого и не делает благих дел. ~ В словах должен быть принцип, в делах - господин. ~ Нет знания. ~ Вот почему я не знаю ничего. ~ Знающих меня мало, поэтому я почитателен. ~ Отсюда святой муж надевает на себя худую одежду, но в себе имеет драгоценный камень.

[70c97т] В. В. Малявин ~ Мои слова очень легко понять ~ И очень легко исполнить. ~ Но никто в мире не может их понять, ~ Не может их исполнить. ~ Мои слова имеют предка. ~ Мои дела имеют государя. ~ И оттого, что люди этого не понимают, ~ Они не понимают и меня. ~ И если тех, кто понимает меня, мало, ~ Значит, во мне есть что ценить. ~ Вот почему "премудрый ходит в рубище, но хранит яшму у груди".

[70c98т] Б. Б. Виногродский ~ Речь сущности моей - ~ очень легка для осознания, ~ очень легка для действия-движения. ~ В Поднебесной никто не способен осознавать, никто не способен действовать-двигаться. ~ В речи - наличие предков. ~ В делах - наличие владыки. ~ Вот только отсутствует осознание. ~ Это дает: ~ Не "я" осознает. ~ Осознание "я" - это разреженность. ~ Подражание "я" - это придавание ценности. ~ Это дает: ~ Человек мудрости покрыт грубой шерстяной материей, а за пазухой яшма-нефрит.

[71c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ To know you don't know is best. ~ Not to know you [don't] know is a flaw. ~ Therefore, the Sage's not being flawed ~ Stems from his recognizing a flaw as a flaw. ~ Therefore, he is flawless.

[71c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ To realize that our knowledge is ignorance, ~ This is a noble insight. ~ To regard our ignorance as knowledge, ~ This is mental sickness. ~ Only when we are sick of our sickness ~ Shall we cease to be sick. ~ The Sage is not sick, being sick of sickness; ~ This is the secret of health.

[71c03т] D. C. Lau ~ To know yet to think that one does not know is best; ~ Not to know yet to think that one knows will lead to difficulty. ~ It is by being alive to difficulty that one can avoid it. ~ The sage meets with no difficulty. ~ It is because he is alive to it that he meets with no difficulty.

* * *

[71c04т] R. L. Wing ~ To know that you do not know is best. ~ To not know of knowing is a disease. ~ Indeed, to be sick of the disease, Is the way to be free of the disease. ~ Evolved Individuals are free of the disease. ~ Because they are sick of the disease ~ This is the way to be free of disease.

* * *

[71c05т] Ren Jiyu ~ It is the best for one to know that he does not know; ~ It is an illness to pretend to know when he actually does not know. ~ Recognizing the illness as an illness prevents one from illness. ~ The sage is free from the illness, ~ Because he recognizes the illness as an illness. ~ He can prevent the illness thereby.

* * *

[71c06т] Gia-fu Feng ~ Knowing ignorance is strength. ~ Ignoring knowledge is sickness. ~ If one is sick of sickness, then one is not sick. ~ The sage is not sick because he is sick of sickness. ~ Therefore he is not sick.

[71c07т] Lok Sang Ho ~ One who knows what most people do not know is superior; ~ One who forgets what one by nature knows is sick. ~ The Sage is free from this sickness. ~ Because he avoids the sickness, he is not sick.

[71c08т] Xiaolin Yang ~ If you have knowledge, but you feel like you do not have knowledge, this is super. ~ If you do not have knowledge, but you feel like you have knowledge, this is sick. ~ The great men were not sick because they knew what the sickness is. ~ Only when you know what the sickness is, will you not be sick.

[71c09т] Walter Gorn Old, THE DISEASE OF KNOWING ~ To know one's ignorance is the best part of knowledge. ~ To be ignorant of such knowledge is a disease. ~ If one only regards it as a disease, he will soon be cured of it. ~ The wise man is exempt from this disease. ~ He knows it for what it is, and so is free from it.

[71c10т] James Legge ~ To know and yet (think) we do not know is the highest (attainment); ~ not to know (and yet think) we do know is a disease. ~ It is simply by being pained at (the thought of) having this disease that we are preserved from it. ~ The sage has not the disease. ~ He knows the pain that would be inseparable from it, and therefore he does not have it.

* * *

[71c11т] David Hinton ~ Knowing not-knowing is lofty. ~ Not knowing not-knowing is affliction. ~ A sage stays free of affliction. ~ Just recognize it as affliction and you're free of it.

[71c12т] Chichung Huang ~ Knowing as if not knowing ~ Is peerless; ~ Not knowing as if knowing ~ Is a sickness. ~ Hence, the sage man was not sick: ~ Being sick of the sickness, ~ Hence, he was not sick.

[71c13т] Ellen M. Chen ~ From knowing to not knowing (chih, pu chih), ~ This is superior. ~ From not knowing to knowing (pu chih, chih), ~ This is sickness. ~ It is by being sick of sickness, ~ That one is not sick. ~ The sage is not sick. ~ Because he is sick of sickness, ~ Therefore he is not sick.

[71c14т] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ Recognizing that one is always in a position of not knowing [enough] is in character of a superior person; ~ Not knowing what [true] knowledge is a kind of sickness; ~ Only those who worry about being sick (ignorant) will be able to avoid the sickness [of ignorance].

[71c15т] Tien Cong Tran ~ If we know that we do not know, this is a high insight. ~ If we do not know that we know, this is sickness. ~ When we are sick of our sickness, we will cease to be sick. ~ The sage is not sick. ~ He is sick of his sickness; thus he is not sick.

* * *

[71c16т] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ Knowing what is not known is good. ~ Not knowing but pretending to know is bad. ~ Sages rarely ail, because they hate ills. ~ Thus, hating ills, one can be free of ills.

[71c17т] Arthur Waley ~ 'To know when one does not know is best. ~ To think one knows when one does not know is a dire disease. ~ Only he who recognizes this disease as a disease ~ Can cure himself of the disease.' ~ The Sage's way of curing disease ~ Also consists in making people recognize their diseases as diseases and thus ceasing to be diseased.

[71c18т] Richard John Lynn ~ To regard not knowing as knowing is the highest; ~ not to regard knowing as knowing is harmful. ~ It is only by regarding harm as harm that one suffers no harm. ~ That the sage suffers no harm is because he regards harm as harm, and this is why he suffers no harm.

[71c19т] Lin Yutang ~ SICK-MINDEDNESS ~ Who knows that he does not know is the highest; ~ Who (pretends to) know what he does not know is sick-minded. ~ And who recognizes sick-mindedness as sick-mindedness is not sick-minded. ~ The Sage is not sick-minded. ~ Because he recognizes sick-mindedness as sick-mindedness, ~ Therefore he is not sick-minded.

[71c20т] Victor H. Mair ~ To realize that you do not understand is a virtue; ~ Not to realize that you do not understand is a defect. ~ The reason why ~ The sage has no defects, ~ Is because he treats defects as defects. ~ Thus, ~ He has no defects.

[71c21т] Tolbert McCarroll ~ It is well to know that you do not know. ~ To think you know when you do not is sickness. ~ When you are sick of sickness you will no longer be sick. ~ True Persons are not sick because they are sick of sickness; ~ this is the way to health.

[71c22т] David H. Li ~ Knowing that one does not know is best; ~ Not knowing but pretending to know is a fault. ~ A sage has no faults, because he/she is aware of his/her faults and works on these faults. ~ Because a sage is aware of faults and works on them, he/she has no faults.

[71c23т] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ Having knowledge, yet being aware of the unknown, is superior intelligence. ~ Not having knowledge, yet pretending to know, is intellectual stagnation. ~ To be aware of stagnation is to be free of it. ~ The sage is free of any stagnation, ~ because he is keenly aware of all stagnation. ~ Therefore, he is forever free of stagnation.

[71c24т] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ Not knowing what one knows is the best, ~ To think that one knows when one does not know is sick. ~ Only when one becomes sick of this sickness, ~ Is it possible to get free of the sickness. ~ The sage is never sick, ~ Since he is sick of this sickness, ~ He is not sick.

[71c25т] Man-Ho Kwok ~ Those who know seem not to know ~ And those who don't pretend they do - ~ This is what it means to be flawed. ~ If you're sick at this, then you'll win through. ~ The sage is. ~ He is sick of all faults - ~ He is sick of being sick. ~ He is well.

[71c26т] Gu Zhengkun ~ Knowing one's ignorance of certain knowledge is the best attitude; ~ Not knowing certain knowledge yet pretending to know is a bad attitude. ~ The sage is of no shortcoming, ~ Because he considers shortcoming as shortcoming. ~ He considers shortcoming as shortcoming, ~ Thus he has no shortcoming.

[71c27т] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ Knowing ignorance is best. ~ Thinking one knows is foolish. ~ Only by being a fool can one avoid becoming a fool. ~ The sage does not think he knows, therefore he is not a fool.

[71c28т] Liu Qixuan ~ The best knower knows how to know. ~ The worst knower knows that he/she knows. ~ The wise person knows how poor knowers stray ~ And can therefore keep himself/herself on the right path.

[71c29т] Shi Fu Hwang ~ Exemption From Sick-Mindedness ~ Lao Tze says, ~ To know and yet think you don't know is the highest attainment; ~ not to know and yet think you know is sick-minded. ~ It is simply in being pained at the thought of having sick-mindedness that one is free from being sick-minded. ~ The sage is not sick-minded because he knows the pain that would be inseparable from sick-mindedness and therefore he is totally exempted from this sick-mindedness.

[71c30т] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ Not knowing that one knows is best; ~ Thinking that one knows when one does not know is sickness. ~ Only when one becomes sick of this sickness can one be free from sickness. ~ The Sage is never sick; because he is sick of this sickness, therefore he is not sick.

[71c31т] Paul J. Lin ~ He who knows that he does not know is the best. ~ He who does not know but pretends to know is sick. ~ He who realizes the sickness is sickness ~ Doesn't have any sickness. ~ The Sage is without sickness ~ Because he realizes the sickness is sickness. ~ Therefore, he doesn't have any sickness.

[71c32т] Michael LaFargue ~ "Aware but not aware of it: a high thing." ~ Not aware but aware of it: sick of this. ~ Simply sick of the sickness - and so no longer sick. ~ The Wise Person's lack of this sickness: ~ He became sick of being sick, and so he's no longer sick.

[71c33т] Cheng Lin ~ Those who know, and yet do not think they know, belong to the highest type of men. ~ Those who do not know, and yet think they know, are really at fault. ~ When one knows that he is at fault, he can be free of faults. ~ The Sage is free of faults because he knows when he is at fault.

[71c34т] Yi Wu ~ One who knows, but does not know, is best. ~ One who does not know, but knows, is sick. ~ Only one who recognizes this sickness as sickness ~ Will not have the sickness. ~ The sage does not have this sickness ~ Because he recognizes this sickness as sickness. ~ Therefore, he has no sickness.

[71c35т] Han Hiong Tan ~ Knowing but thinking you do not really know, you are a man of great virtue. ~ Not knowing but thinking that you know, you have a severe affliction. ~ Because you are aware of this fault, you can then try to avoid committing this mistake. ~ The sage has no flaws because he is cognizant of this malady. ~ Hence, he has no shortcomings.

[71c36т] Hua-Ching Ni ~ He who regards his intellectual knowledge as ignorance has deep insight. ~ He who overrates his intellectual achievement as definite truth is deeply sick. ~ Only when one is sick of this sickness can one cease to be sick. ~ One who returns his mind to the simplicity of the subtle truth is not sick. ~ He knows to break through conceptual knowledge in order to directly reach the subtle truth of the universe. ~ This is the foundation of his health!

[71c37т] Chang Chung-yuan ~ Knowing that which cannot be known is perfect. ~ Not being aware of this knowing is a defect. ~ To be aware of defects as defects is to be free from defects. ~ The wise is free from defects. ~ He is aware of defects as defects. ~ Therefore, he is free from defects.

[71c38т] Henry Wei ~ Knowing the Disease ~ Chih Ping ~ He who knows what he does not know is superior. ~ He who does not know what he knows is diseased. ~ Only when a disease is recognized as a disease ~ Can the disease cease to be disease. ~ The Sage is free from disease; ~ He recognizes a disease as a disease, ~ Therefore he is free from disease.

[71c39т] Ha Poong Kim ~ To know yet not to know is best; ~ Not to know yet to know is a disease. ~ Truly, when you recognize a disease as a disease, ~ You are free of disease. ~ The sage is free of disease. ~ Because he recognizes a disease as a disease, ~ He is free of disease.

[71c40т] Tao Huang ~ Knowing that you don't know (everything) is superior. ~ Not knowing that you don't know (everything) is a sickness. ~ So the sage's being without sickness is that he knows sickness as sickness; ~ Thus, he is without sickness.

[71c41т] Tang Zi-chang ~ One who knows the unknown is a high type of man. ~ One who does not know the known is at fault. ~ Thus a Sage was not at fault because he was aware of faults.

[71c42т] Wing-tsit Chan ~ To know that you do not know is the best. ~ To pretend to know when you do not know is a disease. ~ Only when one recognizes this disease as a disease can one be free from the disease. ~ The sage is free from the disease. ~ Because he recognizes this disease to be disease, he is free from it.

[71c93т] Е. А. Торчинов ~ Тот, кто знает, что он не знает, - превосходен. ~ Тот, кто не знает, что он знает, - недужен. ~ Но ведь тот, кто недужит свой недуг, - тот вовсе не недужен. ~ Совершенный мудрец не недужен, он недужит недуг свой и поэтому не недужен.

[71c95т] Ян Хин-шун ~ Кто, имея знания, делает вид, что не знает, тот выше всех. ~ Кто, не имея знаний, делает вид, что знает, тот болен. ~ Кто, будучи больным, считает себя больным, тот не является больным. ~ Совершенномудрый не болен. ~ Будучи больным, он считает себя больным, поэтому он не болен.

[71c98т] Б. Б. Виногродский ~ Осознание не-осознания - ориентация вверх. ~ Не-осознание осознания - болезнь. ~ Ведь только боление болезнью - ~ Это дает: ~ Не боление. ~ Человек мудрости не болеет - ~ Через боление своей болезнью. ~ Это дает: ~ Не боление.

[72c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ When the people don't respect those in power, then what they greatly fear is about to arrive. ~ Don't narrow the size of the places in which they live; ~ Don't oppress them in their means of livelihood. ~ It's simply because you do not oppress them, that they therefore will not be fed up. ~ Therefore the Sage knows himself but doesn't show himself; ~ He cherishes himself but doesn't value himself. ~ For this reason, he rejects that and takes this.

[72c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ WHEN the people no longer fear your power, ~ It is a sign that a greater power is coming. ~ Interfere not lightly with their dwelling, ~ Nor lay heavy burdens upon their livelihood. ~ Only when you cease to weary them, ~ They will cease to be wearied of you. ~ Therefore, the Sage knows himself, ~ But makes no show of himself; ~ Loves himself, ~ But does not exalt himself. ~ He prefers what is within to what is without.

[72c03т] D. C. Lau ~ When the people lack a proper sense of awe, then some awful visitation will descend upon them. ~ Do not constrict their living space; ~ Do not press down on their means of livelihood. ~ It is because you do not press down on them that they will not weary of the burden. ~ Hence the sage knows himself but does not display himself, ~ Loves himself but does not exalt himself. ~ Therefore he discards the one and takes the other.

[72c04т] R. L. Wing ~ If the people do not fear authority, ~ Then authority will expand. ~ Do not disrespect their position; ~ Do not reject their lives. ~ Since, indeed, they are not rejected, ~ They do not reject. ~ Therefore Evolved Individuals know themselves ~ But do not display themselves. ~ They love themselves ~ But do not treasure themselves. ~ Hence they discard one and receive the other.

[72c05т] Ren Jiyu ~ When the people do not fear the force (of the ruler), ~ Something forceful and terrible would happen. ~ Don't force the people out of their houses, ~ Don't block their way of livelihood. ~ Only by not oppressing the people, can one make the people feel no oppression. ~ Therefore the sage seeks for self-knowledge, not for self-parade, for self-love, not for self-importance. ~ So, self-parade and self-importance should be abandoned and self-knowledge and self-love should be kept.

[72c06т] Gia-fu Feng ~ When men lack a sense of awe, there will be disaster. ~ Do not intrude in their homes. ~ Do not harass them at work. ~ If you do not interfere, they will not weary of you. ~ Therefore the sage knows himself but makes no show, ~ Has self-respect but is not arrogant. ~ He lets go of that and chooses this.

[72c07т] Lok Sang Ho ~ Truly reverence-inspiring is he who displays nothing to intimidate his people. ~ Do not despise people for their humble residences; ~ Do not shun them for their modest births. ~ Because you do not despise and shun them, ~ They also will not despise and shun you. ~ The Sage knows himself and frees himself from prejudice. ~ He treasures and takes care of his own life but will not exalt himself. ~ He gives something up and gains something else.

[72c08т] Xiaolin Yang ~ When the people are not afraid of the ruler, the ruler is in the most danger. ~ Do not bother the people, do not suppress the people. ~ Only when you do not suppress the people, will they not be annoyed with you. ~ So, the great men understood everything but did not let themselves be known. ~ They valued their lives but did not let themselves be worshipped. ~ Therefore, keep the former and discard the latter.

[72c09т] Walter Gorn Old, LOVING ONESELF ~ When men do not have a right fear of present dangers, they run into extremes of peril. ~ Let them beware of enlarging the house, being weary of present conditions. ~ If they do not despise it, no such weariness will arise. ~ This is why the Sage, while possessed of self-knowledge, does not parade himself. ~ He loves, but does not value himself highly. ~ Thus he puts away pride, and is content.

* * *

[72c10T] James Legge ~ When the people do not fear what they ought to fear, that which is their great dread will come on them. ~ Let them not thoughtlessly indulge themselves in their ordinary life; ~ let them not act as if weary of what that life depends on. ~ It is by avoiding such indulgence that such weariness does not arise. ~ Therefore the sage knows (these things) of himself, but does not parade (his knowledge); ~ loves, but does not (appear to set a) value on, himself. ~ And thus he puts the latter alternative away and makes choice of the former.

[72c11T] David Hinton ~ When the people stop fearing the fearsome something truly fearsome will descend upon them. ~ Don't hem them in ~ and choke their lives with oppression. ~ That's all. ~ Just let them be, ~ and they'll never tire of you. ~ A sage sees through himself without revealing himself, ~ loves himself without exalting himself, ~ always ignores that and chooses this.

* * *

[72c12T] Chichung Huang ~ If the people do not fear terror, ~ Greater terror shall arrive. ~ Do not squeeze their habitation; ~ Do not obstruct their livelihood. ~ Only when you stop oppressing them ~ Will they stop loathing you. ~ Hence, the sage man ~ Knew himself without parading himself, ~ Loved himself without exalting himself. ~ Therefore, he abandoned that and chose this.

* * *

[72c13T] Ellen M. Chen ~ When the people fear no power, ~ Then great power has indeed arrived. ~ Do not disturb them in their dwellings, ~ Do not weary them in their living. ~ It is because you do not weary (pu yen) them, ~ That they are not wearied of you. ~ Therefore the sage knows himself (tzu chih), ~ But does not see himself (tzu chien). ~ He loves himself (tzu ai), ~ But does not exalt himself (tzu kuei). ~ Therefore he leaves that and takes this.

[72c14T] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ If people are not intimidated by the existing authority, then a more overbearing authority will be imposed on them. ~ [A leader] should not oppress people and leave them no room for personal freedom; ~ [He also should not be the cause for] people to feel that life is cheap and unbearable; ~ [In other words] people would not feel their lives are cheap and unbearable if they are not oppressed and restricted. ~ Therefore, ~ A Sage knows himself [so well that he is not] self-opinionated; ~ He loves himself [so appropriately that he is not] self-conceited; ~ He renounces that (being self-opinionated and self-conceited) and chooses this (truthfully pursuing self-knowledge and self-improvement).

[72c15T] Tien Cong Tran ~ When the people no longer fear power, it is a sign that a great power is coming. ~ Do not constrict their dwelling, nor lay heavy burdens upon their life. ~ Only when you do not weary them, they will not be wearied of you. ~ Therefore, the sage knows himself, but makes no show of himself; loves himself, but does not exalt himself. ~ He prefers what is within to what is without.

* * *

[72c16T] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ When people defy authority, great threat will come. ~ Do not disturb people's homes; do not interfere with people's lives. ~ Only this way, we can avoid getting weary. ~ Sages know themselves but are not presumptuous. ~ They have self-esteem but are not self-conceit. ~ That is, take the former and abandon the latter.

* * *

[72c17T] Arthur Waley ~ Never mind if the people are not intimidated by your authority. ~ A Mightier Authority will deal with them in the end. ~ Do not narrow their dwellings or harass their lives; and for the very reason that you do not harass them, they will cease to turn from you. ~ Therefore the Sage knows himself but does not show himself. ~ Knows his own value, but does not put himself on high. ~ Truly, 'he rejects that but takes this'.

* * *

[72c18T] Richard John Lynn ~ If the common folk do not fear force, then such great force will arrive that there will be no restricting them to the boundaries within which they should dwell, no satisfying them within the limits in which they should live. ~ It is just because one is insatiable ~ That there is no satisfying him. ~ Therefore what the sage himself knows he does not himself reveal. ~ He cherishes himself but does not value himself. ~ Thus he rejects the one and keeps the other.

* * *

[72c19T] Lin Yutang ~ ON PUNISHMENT (1) ~ When people have no fear of force, ~ Then (as is the common practice) great force descends upon them. ~ Despise not their dwellings, ~ Dislike not their progeny. ~ Because you do not dislike them, ~ You will not be disliked yourself. ~ Therefore the Sage knows himself, but does not show himself, ~ Loves himself, but does not exalt himself. ~ Therefore he rejects the one (force) and accepts the other (gentility).

* * *

[72c20T] Victor H. Mair ~ When the people do not fear the majestic, ~ Great majesty will soon visit them. ~ Do not limit their dwellings, ~ Do not suppress their livelihood. ~ Simply because you do not suppress them, they will not grow weary of you. ~ For this reason, ~ The sage is self-aware, but does not flaunt himself; ~ He is self-devoted, but does not glorify himself. ~ Therefore, ~ He rejects the one and adopts the other.

* * *

[72c21T] Tolbert McCarroll ~ When the people lack a sense of awe disaster will descend upon them. ~ Do not constrict their living space. ~ Do not harass them in their work. ~ If you do not oppress them, they will not weary of you. ~ Therefore, ~ True Persons know themselves but make no show of themselves. ~ They know their value but do not exalt themselves. ~ They prefer this within to that without.

[72c22T] David H. Li ~ When the populace is unafraid of threats, major threats loom. ~ Do not harass their neighborhood; ~ Do not interfere with their livelihood. ~ Thus, without interference, people will not interfere. ~ Thus, the sage knows self without self-touting, respects self without self-aggrandizement. ~ Thus, ~ forsake self-touting and self-aggrandizement; ~ embrace self-knowledge and self-respect.

[72c23T] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ If people do not revere the Law of Nature, ~ It will inexorably and adversely affect them. ~ If they accept it with knowledge and reverence, ~ It will accommodate them with balance and harmony. ~ Therefore, the sage, in harmony with the Law of Nature, ~ Knows himself but does not flaunt his knowledge, ~ Loves himself but does not exalt his status, ~ Accepts where he is without complaint, ~ Enjoys what he does without dislike. ~ Thus, he rejects imbalance and disharmony, ~ And chooses balance and harmony.

[72c24T] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ If the people do not fear the ruling authority, ~ A much greater fear will befall them. ~ Be sure that you do not make them live in crowded quarters ~ Or make their lives unbearable. ~ Only when their living quarters are not crowded ~ Will their dissatisfaction disappear.

* * *

[72c25T] Man-Ho Kwok ~ When the people lack a sense of awe, ~ There is bound to be disorder or disaster. ~ Never oppress them in their own homes, or interfere with their means of livelihood. ~ If you don't oppose them, ~ They won't try to depose you. ~ So, the sage who really knows himself never shows himself off to his people - ~ loves himself, without false pride - ~ discards the mask, and wears his true face.

* * *

[72c26T] Gu Zhengkun ~ When the people are not afraid of the threatening might of the authority, ~ The great tumult will soon ensue. ~ Do not harass their living places; ~ Do not deprive them of their means of livelihood. ~ If you do not oppress the people, ~ The people will not be tired of you (the ruler). ~ Hence the sage knows himself but does not praise himself; ~ loves himself but does not honor himself. ~ That is why he discards the latter and takes the former.

* * *

[72c27T] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ When people lack a sense of awe, then disaster will descend upon them. ~ Do not narrow the living space of the mind. ~ Do not reject the inherent character. ~ Because one does not reject, one will not be rejected. ~ That is why the sage knows himself but does not flaunt himself. ~ He loves himself but does not value himself. ~ Therefore he discards one and takes the other.

[72c28T] Liu Qixuan ~ When people revolt, ~ Governmental prestige ends. ~ The ruler should always bear this in mind: ~ Never narrow the roads of life; ~ Never cause people to be dissatisfied with their existence. ~ For, satisfied with life, ~ None would revolt against the government. ~ The moral for the ruler is: ~ Know one's own shortcomings ~ Instead of being occupied with one's own views. ~ Appreciate others' appreciation ~ Instead of imposing one's self upon others. ~ That is how the wise person makes choices.

[72c29T] Shi Fu Hwang ~ On Gentility ~ Lao Tze says, ~ The time when people do not fear punishment is the time when a great dread will descend upon them. ~ Let them not thoughtlessly indulge themselves in their ordinary life. ~ Let them not act as if they are weary of what life depends on. ~ It is by avoiding such indulgence that such weariness does not arise. ~ Therefore the sage knows himself, but does not parade his knowledge; ~ loves himself, but does not value himself. ~ Therefore he rejects the punishment and accepts the gentility.

[72c30T] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ If the people have no fear of their ruling authority, still greater fear will come. ~ Be sure not to give them too narrow a dwelling; ~ Nor make their living scanty. ~ Only when their dwelling place is no longer narrow will their dissatisfaction come to an end.

* * *

[72c31T] Paul J. Lin ~ If the people do not dread power, ~ There will be the appearance of great power. ~ Do not restrict their living quarters. ~ Do not disturb their livelihood. ~ Just because one does not annoy them, ~ He will not be annoyed by them. ~ Therefore, the Sage knows himself but does not display himself. ~ He loves himself but does not distinguish himself. ~ Therefore, he rejects that to prefer this.

* * *

[72c32T] Michael LaFargue ~ When the people are not in awe of your majesty, ~ then great majesty has been achieved. ~ Do not restrict where they can live, ~ do not tire them out by taxing what they live on. ~ Simply do not tire them, ~ and they will not tire of you. ~ And so, the Wise Person: ~ Knows himself, ~ does not make a show of himself. ~ Loves himself, ~ does not exalt himself. ~ Yes, he leaves 'that' aside, and attends to 'this'.

* * *

[72c33T] Cheng Lin ~ When the people are not afraid of punishment, the exercise of authority will be hampered. ~ Do not oppress the people; do not make them weary of life. ~ When the ruler does not oppress the people, they will not be weary of life. ~ The Sage knows his own worth, but makes no self-display. ~ He has self-respect, but does not feel self-important.

* * *

[72c34T] Yi Wu ~ When the people no longer fear authority, ~ Then the great authority will come. ~ Do not neglect their livelihood; ~ Do not scorn their spiritual lives. ~ If you do not scorn them, ~ They will not reject you. ~ Therefore, the sage ~ Knows himself, but is not opinionated; ~ Loves himself, but is not conceited. ~ So, he renounces that and chooses this.

* * *

[72c35T] Han Hiong Tan ~ When people do not respect the authority, ~ Legislation bearing stiff penalties will soon follow. ~ Nevertheless, the ruler should not make people's lives a living hell. ~ If the ruler is not oppressive, they will not loathe him. ~ Although the sage is conscious of his ability, he does not show off his talent. ~ While maintaining his self-righteousness, he does not flaunt his eminence. ~ He thus rejects parading his eminence, but he embraces his self-esteem.

[72c36T] Hua-Ching Ni ~ When people lack a sense of pure spiritual piety toward natural life, ~ then awful things happen in their life. ~ Therefore, respect where you dwell. ~ Love your life and livelihood. ~ Because you do not disparage your life and livelihood, you will never become tired of life. ~ Thus, one of natural whole virtue respects his own life, but is not egotistical. ~ He loves his life, but does not exalt himself. ~ He holds a sense of spiritual serenity for all things, and disparages nothing. ~ Hence, he does what is right and gives up what is not right.

[72c37T] Chang Chung-yuan ~ When people are free from fear, ~ They experience "basic dread." ~ Because they are not limited by the places in which they stay, ~ They are at peace with their lives. ~ Because they are at peace with their lives, ~ Their lives are peaceful. ~ Therefore, the wise is aware of himself, ~ But does not display himself. ~ He cultivates himself, ~ But is not proud of himself. ~ He leaves behind small fear, ~ But experiences basic dread.

* * *

[72c38T] Henry Wei ~ Self-Respect ~ Ai Chi ~ When people no longer fear authority, ~ Great Authority will come to them. ~ Do not pen them up in narrow surroundings; ~ Do not make them weary of life. ~ Only when they are not wearied, ~ Will they cease to be weary. ~ That's why the Sage has self-knowledge, ~ But does not display himself; ~ He maintains his self-respect, ~ But does not feel high and mighty. ~ Forsooth, he rejects this and adopts that.

* * *

[72c39T] Ha Poong Kim ~ When the people do not fear the authority [of the sovereign], ~ The supreme authority arrives. ~ They are neither contented in their abodes, ~ Nor satisfied with their lives. ~ Only because they are not satisfied, ~ They cannot be suppressed. ~ Therefore the sage ~ Knows himself but does not show himself, ~ Cherishes himself but does not exalt himself. ~ Therefore he discards that and takes this.

* * *

[72c40T] Tao Huang ~ People are fearless before the power. ~ If fear arises, it will be a great fear. ~ Not constraining the living environment, ~ They do not get bored by life. ~ Because we do not get bored, there is no boredom. ~ Therefore the sage is self-aware but not introspective. ~ He has self-respect but does not price himself. ~ He rejects one and takes the other.

* * *

[72c41T] Tang Zi-chang ~ People are not afraid of punishment, yet capital punishment is enforced. ~ Do not force people into moving. ~ Do not weary people of living. ~ Hence, only non-interference prevents people from becoming weary. ~ Therefore, Sage rulers were aware of self but not self-displaying; ~ self-respecting but not self-exalting. ~ He eliminated the former and supplied the later.

* * *

[72c42T] Wing-tsit Chan ~ When the people do not fear what is dreadful, ~ Then what is greatly dreadful will descend on them. ~ Do not reduce the living space of their dwellings. ~ Do not oppress their lives. ~ It is because you do not oppress them that they are not oppressed. ~ Therefore the sage knows himself but does not show himself. ~ He loves himself but does not exalt himself. ~ Therefore he rejects the one but accepts the other.

тошно. ~ Именно поэтому Премудрый человек в своем самопознании себя не видит и при любви к себе не придает себе значения. ~ Он отвергает то и берет это.

[72c92т] А. А. Маслов ~ Если народ не трепещет перед властью, то власть достигает величайшего могущества. ~ Не сгоняйте народ с его мест, не презирайте устоев его жизни. ~ Тот, кто не презирает этого, не презрен будет. ~ Вот почему мудрецы, познав себя, не проявляли себя; ~ любили себя, не превознося себя. ~ И потому, отказываясь от одного, они достигали другого.

[72c95т] Ян Хин-шун ~ Когда народ не боится могущественных, тогда приходит могущество. ~ Не тесните его жилища, не презирайте его жизни. ~ Кто не презирает [народа], тот не будет презрен [народом]. ~ Поэтому совершенномудрый, зная себя, себя не выставляет. ~ Он любит себя и себя не возвышает. ~ Он отказывается от самолюбия и предпочитает невозвышение.

[72c98т] Б. Б. Виногродский ~ Если народ не боится власти, тогда придет еще большая власть. ~ Будьте в отсутствии привыкания к тому, что приносит покой. ~ Будьте в отсутствии пресыщения тем, что вас порождает. ~ Ведь только не пресыщение - ~ Это дает: ~ Не пресыщение. ~ Это дает: ~ Человек мудрости осознает себя, не показывая себя. ~ Любит себя, не предавая ценности себе. ~ Причинность: ~ Отбрасывает то, берет это.

[73c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ If you're brave in being daring, you'll be killed; ~ If you're brave in not being daring, you'll live. ~ {With these} two things, in one case there's profit, in the other there's harm. ~ The things Heaven hates - who knows why? ~ The Way of Heaven is not to fight yet to be good at winning - ~ Not to speak yet skillfully respond - ~ No one summons it, yet it comes on its own - ~ To be at ease yet carefully plan. ~ Heaven's net is large and vast; ~ Its mesh may be coarse yet nothing slips through.

[73c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ He who is brave in daring will be killed; ~ He who is brave in not daring will survive. ~ Of these two kinds of bravery, one is beneficial, while the other proves harmful. ~ Some things are detested by Heaven, ~ But who knows the reason? ~ Even the Sage is baffled by such a question. ~ It is Heaven's Way to conquer without striving, ~ To get responses without speaking, ~ To induce the people to come without summoning, ~ To act according to plans without haste. ~ Vast is Heaven's net; ~ Sparse-meshed it is, and yet ~ Nothing can slip through it.

[73c03т] D. C. Lau ~ He who is fearless in being bold will meet with his death; ~ He who is fearless in being timid will stay alive. ~ Of the two, one leads to good, the other to harm. ~ Heaven hates what it hates, ~ Who knows the reason why? ~ Therefore even the Sage treats some things as difficult. ~ The way of heaven ~ Excels in overcoming though it does not contend, ~ In responding though it does not speak, ~ In attracting though it does not summon, ~ In laying plans though it appears slack. ~ The net of heaven is cast wide. ~ Though the mesh is not fine, yet nothing ever slips through.

* * *

[73c04т] R. L. Wing ~ Those bold in daring will die; ~ Those bold in not daring will survive. ~ Of these two, either may benefit or harm. ~ Nature decides which is evil, But who can know why? ~ Even Evolved Individuals regard this as difficult. ~ The Tao in Nature ~ Does not contend, ~ Yet skillfully triumphs. ~ Does not speak, ~ Yet skillfully responds. ~ Does not summon, ~ And yet attracts. ~ Does not hasten, ~ Yet skillfully designs. ~ Nature's network is vast, so vast. ~ Its mesh is coarse, yet nothing slips through.

[73c05т] Ren Jiyu ~ He who is brave in daring everything will be killed, ~ And he who is brave in daring nothing will live on. ~ Of the results of the two kinds of braveness, one is advantageous, the other is harmful. ~ When Heaven has some detestation, Who can know its cause? ~ So even the sage feels it difficult to explain. ~ It is the Tao (Way) of Heaven: ~ Not to struggle and yet be good at winning, ~ Not to speak and yet be good at replying, ~ Without being called it comes of itself, ~ Though slow, it plans skillfully. ~ The net of Heaven is vast, ~ It has large meshes, but it lets nothing escape.

[73c06т] Gia-fu Feng ~ A brave and passionate man will kill or be killed. ~ A brave and calm man will always preserve life. ~ Of these two which is good and which is harmful? ~ Some things are not favored by heaven. Who knows why? ~ Even the sage is unsure of this. ~ The Tao of heaven does not strive, and yet it overcomes. ~ It does not speak, and yet is answered. ~ It does not ask, yet is supplied with all its needs. ~ It seems at ease, and yet it follows a plan. ~ Heaven's net casts wide. ~ Though its meshes are coarse, nothing slips through.

[73c07т] Lok Sang Ho ~ He who is brave enough to challenge the Dao perishes. ~ He who is brave enough to revere the Dao lives. ~ These two personalities, with their respective harms and benefits, ~ will invite favor or disfavor from heaven. ~ Does any one know the reason behind it? ~ The way of heaven, the Dao, is apt to win benefits ~ though it never struggles for any benefit. ~ He who follows the Dao, though he never asks for any favor, ~ receives the favor. ~ Results come of their own accord where results are due. ~ Without deliberating, heaven appears to have its plans. ~ Although its net appears to consist of course meshes, ~ No one can sneak through and escape the law.

[73c08т] Xiaolin Yang ~ If you have the courage to be strong, you will fail; ~ If you have the courage to be weak, you will succeed. ~ These two courages have completely opposite results. ~ Who knows why the heavens does not like the strong? ~ Even the great men found this question difficult to answer. ~ The law of the heavens never fights but always wins, ~ Never speaks but always gets a response, ~ Never calls but always gets an answer, ~ Moves slowly but has everything arranged perfectly. ~ The law of the heavens is like a huge net; the net holes are large, but nothing can escape.

[73c09т] Walter Gorn Old, FREEDOM OF ACTION ~ He whose courage is expressed in daring will soon meet death. ~ He whose courage is shown in self-restraint will be preserved. ~ There are, then, two kinds of courage; the one is injurious and the other of advantage. ~ But who is to say why one of them should incur the judgment of Heaven? ~ That is why the Sage finds it difficult to act. ~ The celestial Tao does not strive, and yet overcomes everything. ~ It does not speak, yet it is skilful in replying. ~ It does not call, yet things come to it readily. ~ It is quiet in its methods, yet its plans are thoroughly effective. ~ The net of Heaven has large meshes, and yet nothing escapes it!

[73c10т] James Legge ~ He whose boldness appears in his daring (to do wrong, in defiance of the laws) is put to death; ~ he whose boldness appears in his not daring (to do so) lives on. ~ Of these two cases the one appears to be advantageous, and the other to be injurious. ~ But ~ When Heaven's anger smites a man, ~ Who the cause shall truly scan? ~ On this account the sage feels a difficulty (as to what to do in the former case). ~ It is the way of Heaven not to strive, and yet it skilfully overcomes; ~ not to speak, and yet it is skilful in (obtaining) a reply; ~ does not call, and yet men come to it of themselves. ~ Its demonstrations are quiet, and yet its plans are skilful and effective. ~ The meshes of the net of Heaven are large; ~ far apart, but letting nothing escape.

[73c11т] David Hinton ~ To infuse daring with courage means death. ~ To infuse caution with courage means life. ~ The one enriches you, and the other ruins you. ~ No one knows why heaven ~ despises what it despises, ~ that's why a sage inhabits the complexity of things. ~ The Way of heaven never contends ~ and so overcomes perfectly, ~ never speaks ~ and so answers perfectly, ~ never summons ~ and so arrives of itself, ~ stays calm ~ and so plans perfectly. ~ The net of heaven is vast, woven so vast and wide open nothing slips through.

[73c12т] Chichung Huang ~ Brave in daring, one gets killed; ~ Brave in not daring, one lives. ~ Of these two - ~ One is beneficial, one harmful. ~ That which heaven loathes - ~ Who knows its reason? ~ Heaven's Tao, ~ Without battling, excels in triumphing; ~ Without speaking, excels in responding; ~ Without being summoned, comes spontaneously; ~ Though loose, excels in planning. ~ Heaven's net is vast: ~ Though wide-meshed, misses nothing.

[73c13т] Ellen M. Chen ~ One who is courageous out of daring (kan) is killed. ~ One who is courageous out of not daring lives. ~ Of these two, this is beneficial while that is harmful. ~ What heaven hates, who knows the reason? ~ Therefore even the sage takes it to be difficult. ~ The way of heaven: ~ Without contending (cheng), it is yet good at winning, ~ Without speaking, it is yet good in responding, ~ Without being beckoned, it yet comes of its own accord, ~ Unhurried, it is yet good at planning (mou). ~ The net of heaven is vast, ~ Widely spaced, yet missing nothing.

[73c14т] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ To be brave, to the extent of being reckless, a person will end up involving in the business of killing [people] or being killed; ~ To be brave, in the manner of opposing killing [people even if challenged], a person will end up staying alive; ~ Each of these two modes of being brave has its advantages and disadvantages. ~ There are matters which basically disagree with the heavenly (highest) good, but how can we ostensively see through their appearance [if we fail to examine them thoroughly and lay out a careful conjecture of their manifestation]? ~ [Not to mention the fact that even] Sages have difficulties to [pin-point the ultimate justification] after much fumbling. ~ The heavenly (the highest) Tao permeates in the following way: ~ It prevails with certainty, though it is not competitive [with anything or anyone]; ~ It responds with precision, though it is speechless; ~ It befalls spontaneously, though nobody calls for it; ~ Its plan has been laid out meticulously, though it is open and truthful; ~ [The heavenly Tao] is like a gigantic net whose snare covers and all and every thing exhaustively that nothing can slip through its [seemingly] loose mesh.

[73c15т] Tien Cong Tran ~ He who is brave in daring will be killed. ~ He who is brave in not daring will survive. ~ Of these two kinds of bravery, one is beneficial, while the other is harmful. ~ Some things are hated by Heaven, but who knows the reason? ~ Even the sage does not know it. ~ It is Heaven's Way not to contend but win, not to speak but respond, not to be summoned but come, to be relaxed but lay good plans. ~ Heaven's net is vast, sparse-meshed, and yet nothing can slip through it.

[73c16т] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ When courage is combined with boldness, one dies. ~ When courage is combined with prudence, one survives. ~ Of the two, which is beneficial and which is harmful? ~ It is hard to know what Heaven dislikes. ~ This is why even sages feel the difficulty. ~ The Tao of the nature is that: ~ The best winnings come without rivaling. ~ The best responses are not wordy. ~ The best friends come without formal invitation. ~ The best plans are made when relaxed. ~ Heaven's net is wide. ~ Although it has meshes, nothing escapes from it.

[73c17т] Arthur Waley ~ He whose braveness lies in daring, slays. ~ He whose braveness lies in not daring, gives life. ~ Of these two, either may be profitable or unprofitable. ~ But 'Heaven hates what it hates; ~ None can know the reason why'. ~ Wherefore the Sage, too, disallows it. ~ For it is the way of Heaven not to strive but none the less to conquer, ~ Not to speak, but none the less to get an answer, ~ Not to beckon; yet things come to it of themselves. ~ Heaven is like one who says little, yet none the less has laid his plans. ~ Heaven's net is wide; ~ Coarse are the meshes, yet nothing slips through.

[73c18т] Richard John Lynn ~ If one's bravery is expressed in daring, he will be killed. ~ If one's bravery is expressed in not daring, he will live. ~ But both these two sometimes result in benefit, sometimes in harm. ~ When Heaven is cruel, who understands why? ~ Therefore even the sage finds this fraught with danger. ~ The Dao of Heaven is such that one excels at winning without contending. ~ He excels at making people respond without speaking. ~ He spontaneously attracts without summoning. ~ He excels at planning while utterly at ease. ~ The net of Heaven spreads far and wide. ~ Though its mesh is coarse, it never loses anything.

[73c19т] Lin Yutang ~ ON PUNISHMENT (2) ~ Who is brave in daring (you) kill, ~ Who is brave in not daring (you) let live. ~ In these two, ~ There is some advantage and some disadvantage. ~ (Even if) Heaven dislikes certain people, ~ Who would know (who are to be killed and) why? ~ Therefore even the Sage regards it as a difficult question. ~ Heaven's Way (Tao) is good at conquest without strife, ~ Rewarding (vice and virtue) without words, ~ Making its appearance without call, ~ Achieving results without obvious design. ~ The heaven's net is broad and wide. ~ With big meshes, yet letting nothing slip through.

[73c20т] Victor H. Mair ~ He who is brave in daring will be killed, ~ He who is brave in not daring will survive. ~ One of these two courses is beneficial, ~ The other is harmful. ~ Who knows the reason for heaven's dislikes? ~ The Way of heaven ~ does not war yet is good at conquering, ~ does not speak yet is good at answering, ~ is not summoned yet comes of itself, ~ is relaxed yet good at making plans. ~ Heaven's net is vast; ~ Though its meshes are wide, nothing escapes.

* * *

[73c21т] Tolbert McCarroll ~ A person whose courage lies in daring will meet death. ~ A person whose courage lies in not daring will encounter life. ~ Of the two courses, either may be beneficial or harmful. ~ Heaven dislikes what it dislikes. ~ Who knows the reason why? ~ Even the True Person has difficulty with such a question. ~ The Tao of Heaven ~ does not strive and yet it overcomes, ~ does not speak and yet it gets responses, ~ does not beckon and yet it attracts, ~ is at ease and yet it follows a plan. ~ The net of heaven is cast wide. ~ Though the mesh is coarse, ~ nothing ever slips through.

[73c22т] David H. Li ~ Courageous in accepting dare results in demise; ~ courageous in declining dare results in survival. ~ Between these two, there are advantages and disadvantages. ~ The cosmos has dislikes, but no one knows the reason. ~ It is hard even for the sage to explain. ~ The Direction of the cosmos, ~ though does not compete, is good at winning; ~ though wordless, is good at responding; ~ needs no invitation and comes on own volition; ~ and is at ease and is good at planning. ~ The cosmos's net is immense; it is loose but it does not miss.

[73c23т] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ Courage in daring action will lead to death. ~ Courage in caring action will lead to life. ~ Of these two, one is beneficial and the other harmful. ~ Heaven does not favor harmful courage, ~ Yet, there are few who really know the reason. ~ Thus, the sage does not make light of this truth. ~ He who abides by the way of Heaven ~ Triumphs without fighting, ~ Responds without chattering, ~ Reaches out without being asked, ~ Plans ahead without being impetuous. ~ Though its meshes may appear wide, ~ Through the vast net of heavenly law, ~ Nothing can ever slip.

[73c24т] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ The person who shows courage in daring will perish. ~ The person who shows courage in a lack of daring will live. ~ To know these two things means to differentiate between the one, which is beneficial, and the other, which is harmful. ~ Who knows that heaven loathes one of them? ~ The superior Tao does not fight, yet it wins for certain. ~ It does not speak, yet it responds to everything. ~ It does not call, yet everyone comes to hear it. ~ It is not a tactician, yet it makes plans. ~ Heaven's net is all-embracing, and its holes are wide, ~ And even so, nothing escapes its sweep.

[73c25т] Man-Ho Kwok ~ A person who's brash and fearless will die, ~ A person who is cautious will survive - ~ These two are right, and they are wrong ~ Heaven looks down on both and who knows the truth? ~ So even the sage admits some things are beyond him. ~ The Tao of Heaven doesn't struggle, but it wins through ~ It doesn't ask yet it always hears the answer; ~ It doesn't demand yet things come, because they want to; ~ It has no desires and yet everything works out as if planned. ~ And though the Net Of Heaven is wide, ~ Not even the tiniest whisper escapes it.

[73c26т] Gu Zhengkun ~ Bravery in being bold leads to death; ~ Bravery in being timid leads to life. ~ These two kinds of bravery, ~ One leads to good the other to harm, ~ Who knows why ~ Heaven hates what it hates? ~ Even the sage feels it difficult to understand. ~ This is the Tao of heaven: ~ To excel in triumphing by means of non-contention; ~ To be good at answering by means of taciturnity; ~ To attract people by using no summons; ~ To be quick in planning by acting slowly. ~ The net of heaven is spread wide and far, ~ Though the mesh is largely knit, ~ Nothing can slip through the net.

[73c27т] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ He who is brave and unscrupulous will meet his death. ~ He who is brave and cautious will stay alive. ~ Of these both, one leads to good, one leads to harm. ~ Everyone hates the bad - the reason why is clear. ~ That is why the sage is always cautious. ~ The Tao of Heaven does not fight but wins, ~ does not speak but is answered, ~ is not summoned but appears, ~ does not plan but consults. ~ The net of Heaven is widely cast; ~ the mesh is loose, yet nothing slips through.

[73c28т] Liu Qixuan ~ One who is brave enough to dare gets death. ~ One who is brave enough not to dare gets life. ~ The big difference between the two ~ Is the result of heaven's intervention. ~ And that is where the ruler should hesitate. ~ Heaven's way wins without fighting, ~ Responds without being asked, ~ Comes to the rescue without being summoned, ~ And has wonderful schemes within a simple expanse. ~ Heaven's net of law is the most sparsely woven, ~ But it is the biggest and lets off no criminals.

* * *

[73c29т] Shi Fu Hwang ~ On True Boldness ~ Lao Tze says, ~ He who is fearless in his daring to do wrong goes against the Tao, and meets with death. ~ He who is fearless in his not daring to do so, remains alive. ~ Of these two cases one is apparently advantageous, and the other harmful. ~ But when Heaven's hate imposes on a man, who would know why? ~ On this account even the sage feels it is difficult to understand. ~ The way of Heaven does not contend yet skillfully excels in overcoming; ~ it does not speak yet skillfully responds to asking; ~ it does not summon yet attracts men to it. ~ It is unselfish and magnanimous, yet its plans are skillful and effective. ~ The net of Heaven spreads wide with its meshes far apart; ~ yet it lets nothing slip through.

[73c30т] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ He who shows courage in daring will perish; ~ He who shows courage in not-daring will live. ~ To know these two is to distinguish the one, benefit, from the other, harm. ~ Who can tell that one of them should be loathed by heaven? ~ The Tao of heaven does not contend; yet it surely wins the victory. ~ It does not speak; yet it surely responds. ~ It does not call; yet all things come of their own accord. ~ It remains taciturn; yet it surely makes plans. ~ The net of heaven is vast, and its meshes are wide; ~ Yet from it nothing escapes.

[73c31т] Paul J. Lin ~ To be brave in daring is to be killed. ~ To be brave in not daring is to live. ~ Both of them are either beneficial or harmful. ~ Who knows the real reason for heaven's hatred? ~ Even the Sage would find it difficult. ~ The Tao of heaven does not compete, but is good in winning; ~ does not speak, but is good in responding; ~ does not summon, but things come by themselves; ~ behaves calmly, but is good in planning. ~ The net of heaven is so vast. ~ Although it is wide open, it loses nothing.

[73c32т] Michael LaFargue ~ "One who shows bravery by being daring will get killed; ~ one who shows bravery by not being daring will survive." ~ But in both these cases: ~ "Sometimes it helps, sometimes it harms." ~ "What Heaven picks to hate - who knows the reason?" ~ And so the Wise Person: ~ Treats things as difficult. ~ Heaven's Way: ~ Not contending, but excels at overcoming; ~ not speaking, but excels in getting answers; ~ not summoning, but people come of themselves; ~ lax, but excels at organization. ~ Heaven's net is very wide - ~ loosely woven, ~ but it lets nothing slip by.

[73c33т] Cheng Lin ~ When one is daring to the point of recklessness, he will meet with violent death. ~ When one's daring is tempered by caution, he will find his life secure. ~ Of these two types, one is beneficial and the other harmful. ~ Who knows the cause of Heaven's preference? ~ The way of Heaven is victorious, and there is no strife convincing, and there is no speech; ~ responsive, and there is no compulsion; ~ sure of success, and there is no haste. ~ The rule of Heaven is extensive and comprehensive, slow but sure.

[73c34т] Yi Wu ~ One who shows bravery in daring will be killed. ~ One who shows bravery in not daring will live. ~ Of them both, one is beneficial and the other is harmful. ~ About Heaven's dislike, ~ Who knows the reason? ~ Therefore, even a sage finds it difficult. ~ The way of Heaven ~ does not compete, but is good at winning; ~ does not speak, but is good at responding; ~ does not summon, but all things come of themselves; ~ is broad, but is good at planning. ~ Heaven's net is vast; ~ It is loose, but never misses.

[73c35т] Han Hiong Tan ~ Brave and reckless will be killed. ~ Brave but prudent will survive. ~ Two different types of bravery have dissimilar outcomes: ~ one is beneficial but the other is disastrous. ~ Why Providence dislikes one but not the other is a puzzle. ~ Even the sage is unable to fathom the reason. ~ The way of Dao is to accomplish without contention; ~ To evoke response without utterance; ~ All things come to pay homage without being told. ~ Dao does not resort to scheming but its plan is perfect. ~ The dragnet cast by Providence has wide meshes, ~ Yet, no wrongdoers ever slip through.

[73c36т] Hua-Ching Ni ~ He who is brave in daring will meet an unnatural death. ~ He who is brave in gentleness will be preserved. ~ Of these two kinds of bravery, one is beneficial, while the other proves harmful. ~ The subtle truth of the universe does not support those who are brave in daring, ~ yet there are still many people who do not understand such apparent truth. ~ So, even the one who integrates his being with the subtle essence of the universe, ~ dares not make light of the subtle law of life. ~ The subtle Way of the universe gave birth to a world of peace and order. ~ It responds to the order and harmony of all beings and things without needing to talk to them. ~ Without your summoning it, it comes to you. ~ Without scheming, its plan is perfect. ~ Vast is the subtle energy network of the universe. ~ Sparsely meshed it is, yet nothing can slip through it!

[73c37т] Chang Chung-yuan ~ Courageous but foolhardy, one perishes. ~ Courageous but not foolhardy, one's life is saved. ~ Between these two, one gains, the other loses. ~ Who knows what nature loathes? ~ Even the sage can hardly make a wise choice. ~ According to the way of heaven, ~ Without contending, one inevitably wins. ~ Without asking, one spontaneously receives a response. ~ Without invitation, success comes by itself. ~ Unintentionally, the heavenly way is well-devised. ~ The net of nature is all-embracing. ~ Although the spaces are large, nothing escapes it.

[73c38т] Henry Wei ~ Natural Action ~ Ren Wei ~ Courage in daring leads to slaughter; ~ Courage in daring not leads to life. ~ Either may have its advantage or disadvantage. ~ When Heaven detests anything, ~ Who can know the reason why? ~ Thus even the Sage feels some difficulty here. ~ Heaven's way does not contend, yet excels in winning; ~ It does not speak, yet excels in making response; ~ It receives no summons, yet would come of itself; ~ It is patient and easy-going, yet excels in planning. ~ The net of Heaven spreads far and wide; ~ Though its meshes are large, ~ Yet it allows nothing to slip through.

[73c39т] Ha Poong Kim ~ Being brave in daring leads to death, ~ Being brave in not daring leads to life. ~ Of these two, ~ One is advantageous and the other injurious. ~ What Heaven detests - ~ Who knows its reason? ~ Therefore even the sage finds it hard to tell. ~ The way of Heaven - ~ It never contends yet is good at winning, ~ It never speaks yet is good at responding. ~ It comes of itself without being invited, ~ It seems remiss yet good at planning. ~ Heaven's net is vast. ~ Though its meshes are coarse, nothing escapes it.

[73c40т] Tao Huang ~ Courage combined with daring promotes killing. ~ Courage not combined with daring promotes life. ~ These two can be either beneficial or harmful. ~ Who knows the reason for what heaven hates? ~ The Tao of heaven is ~ Good at winning without fighting, ~ Good at responding without speaking, ~ Appearing without being asked, ~ Good at strategizing while fighting. ~ The net of heaven is broad and loose, ~ Yet nothing slips through.

[73c41т] Tang Zi-chang ~ The courage of one daring to be aggressive will eventually kill his life. ~ The courage of one not daring to be aggressive will eventually ensure his life. ~ Between these two kinds of courage we know which one is good and which one is harmful. ~ Who knows the reason why? ~ Because it is hated by nature. ~ The law of Nature does not strive, yet achieves a perfect victory. ~ It does not use words, yet it is perfectly convincing. ~ It receives no call, yet it automatically responds. ~ It is plain and unnoticed, yet it is skillfully planned. ~ It covers every place all the time like a heavenly net, it seems to be wide meshed, yet it does not let anything slip away.

[73c42т] Wing-tsit Chan ~ He who is brave in daring will be killed. ~ He who is brave in not daring will live. ~ Of these two, one is advantageous and one is harmful. ~ Who knows why Heaven dislikes what it dislikes? ~ Even the sage considers it a difficult question. ~ The Way of Heaven does not compete, and yet it skillfully achieves victory. ~ It does not speak, and yet it skillfully responds to things. ~ It comes to you without your invitation. ~ It is not anxious about things and yet it plans well. ~ Heaven's net is indeed vast. ~ Though its meshes are wide, it misses nothing.

[73c91т] И. И. Семененко ~ Когда смелы в том, чтобы сметь, предают смерти; ~ когда смелы в том, чтобы не сметь, то воскрешают. ~ В обоих случаях приносится иной раз польза, а иной раз вред. ~ Кто знает, почему бывает Небу что-то ненавистно? ~ Именно поэтому Премудрый человек как бы во всем испытывает затруднение. ~ Дао Небес умеет без борьбы одерживать победу, ~ умеет молчаливо откликаться, ~ является само без зова, ~ умеет неумышленно замыслить. ~ Широко раскинута сеть Неба, и хоть она редка, но из нее не выскользнуть.

спокойно и умеет управлять [вещами]. ~ Сеть природы редка, но ничего не пропускает.

[73c96т] Д. П. Конисси ~ Кто силен и дерзок, тот убьет людей. ~ Кто силен, но не дерзок, тот оживит людей. ~ Эти оба либо полезны, либо вредны. ~ Никто не знает, почему небо любит один предмет, а другой нет. ~ Решить этот вопрос даже святой муж не может. ~ Небесное Тао никогда не ссорится, поэтому оно побеждает всех. ~ Хотя оно мало говорит, но обсуждает лучше, нежели многоречивые. ~ Никто не вызывает (Тао), но оно присутствует везде. ~ Нам кажется, что оно ничего не делает, но на самом деле оно действует лучше всех. ~ Небесная сеть не плотна и как будто пропускает все предметы через себя; но из нее ничего не выйдет наружу.

[73c98т] Б. Б. Виногродский ~ Храбрость в смелости ведет к гибели. ~ Храбрость в не-смелости ведет к жизни. ~ В этой паре может быть польза, может быть вред. ~ Если Небо не любит кого-то, кто знает причину этого? ~ Это дает: ~ Человек мудрости приближает процесс к трудности. ~ В Пути Небес - нет соперничества - а совершенствование в победах; нет речи - а совершенствование отклика; нет призывания - а само приходит; такая беспечность - а совершенствование замыслов. ~ Сеть Неба необъятно редка, а нет упущений.

[74c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ If the people were constant [in their behavior] and yet did not fear death, ~ How could you use execution to intimidate them? ~ If you brought it about that the people were constant [in their behavior] and moreover feared death, and [we] took those who behaved in abnormal ways and killed them - who would dare act in this way?! ~ If the people are constant and moreover necessarily fear death, then we constantly have the one in charge of executions. ~ Now killing people in place of the one in charge of executions, this [is like] cutting wood in place of the head carpenter. ~ And of those who cut wood in place of the head carpenter, very few do not hurt their hands!

[74c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ WHEN the people are no longer afraid of death, ~ Why scare them with the spectre of death? ~ If you could make the people always afraid of death, ~ And they still persisted in breaking the law, ~ Then you might with reason arrest and execute them, ~ And who would dare to break the law? ~ Is not the Great Executor always there to kill? ~ To do the killing for the Great Executor ~ Is to chop wood for a master carpenter, ~ And you would be lucky indeed if you did not hurt your own hand!

[74c03т] D. C. Lau ~ When the people are not afraid of death, wherefore frighten them with death? ~ Were the people always afraid of death, and were I able to arrest and put to death those who innovate, then who would dare? ~ There is a regular executioner whose charge it is to kill. ~ To kill on behalf of the executioner is what is described as chopping wood on behalf of the master carpenter. ~ In chopping wood on behalf of the master carpenter, there are few who escape hurting their own hands instead.

[74c04т] R. L. Wing ~ When people do not fear death, ~ How can they be threatened with death? ~ Suppose people fear death and still do not conform. ~ Who would dare seize them and put them to death? ~ There is always the Master Executioner who kills. ~ To substitute for the Master Executioner in killing ~ Is like substituting for the Master Carpenter who carves. ~ Whoever substitutes for the Master Carpenter in carving, ~ Rarely escapes injury to his hands.

[74c05т] Ren Jiyu ~ Since the people do not fear death, ~ What is it for to frighten them with death? ~ If the people fear death and I can catch and kill those who make trouble, ~ Who dares to make trouble? ~ There is always someone who is in charge of inflicting death. ~ Inflicting death in place of those who are in charge of it can be described as hewing wood in place of a skillful carpenter. ~ Of those who hew wood in place of skillful carpenters, few have not cut their own hands.

* * *

[74c06т] Gia-fu Feng ~ If men are not afraid to die, ~ It is of no avail to threaten them with death. ~ If men live in constant fear of dying, ~ And if breaking the law means that a man will be killed, ~ Who will dare to break the law? ~ There is always an official executioner. ~ If you try to take his place, ~ It is like trying to be a master carpenter and cutting wood. ~ If you try to cut wood like a master carpenter, you will only hurt your hand.

* * *

[74c07т] Lok Sang Ho ~ People may not be afraid of death. ~ Why should we intimidate them with the threat of death? ~ If people are generally afraid of death, ~ And we are able to seize the exceptions and to kill them, ~ Why would anyone still disregard the death penalty? ~ The Lord of Killing does kill from time to time. ~ Yet anyone who kills in his place ~ is like someone who takes the place of the master carpenter and uses his sharp tools. ~ It is unlikely that he can avoid hurting his own hands.

[74c08т] Xiaolin Yang ~ The people are not afraid of death; what is the purpose of using death to frighten them? ~ However, if the people are afraid of death, and very few people violate the law, catch and execute these criminals, and who will dare to do it again? ~ Killing people is the job of the heavens. ~ If you take over the job of the heavens, it is like carving wood for the carpenter. ~ If you carve wood for the carpenter, it is rare that you will not hurt your own hand.

[74c09т] Walter Gorn Old, THE FAULT OF COERCION ~ When the people do not fear death, of what use is it to overawe them with it as a penalty? ~ And if they were always held in fear of death, and I could lay my hand upon all evil doers and slay them, would I dare to do it? ~ There is always the Great Executioner! ~ For one to usurp that office is like a novice cutting out the work of a great architect. ~ Such an one rarely fails to cut his own hands!

* * *

[74c10т] James Legge ~ The people do not fear death; ~ to what purpose is it to (try to) frighten them with death? ~ If the people were always in awe of death, and I could always seize those who do wrong, and put them to death, who would dare to do wrong? ~ There is always One who presides over the infliction of death. ~ He who would inflict death in the room of him who so presides over it may be described as hewing wood instead of a great carpenter. ~ Seldom is it that he who undertakes the hewing, instead of the great carpenter, does not cut his own hands!

[74c11т] David Hinton ~ In their misery, the people no longer fear death, so how can you threaten them even with death? ~ Let the people fear death always, ~ then if we seize those who follow sinister ways ~ and put them to death, ~ no one will dare live such lives. ~ The Executioner's killing is perennial, it's true. ~ But to undertake the killing yourself - ~ that's like trying to carve lumber for a master carpenter. ~ Try to carve lumber for a master carpenter ~ and you'll soon have blood on your hands.

[74c12т] Chichung Huang ~ If the majority of people do not fear death, ~ Why use killing to intimidate them? ~ If the majority of people do fear death, ~ Those who act perversely - ~ I can arrest and kill them. ~ Who would dare then? ~ The Executioner is always the one in charge of killing; ~ To kill in place of the Executioner ~ Is to chop wood in place of a master carpenter. ~ To chop wood in place of a master carpenter, ~ One can hardly avoid injuring one's own hand.

[74c13т] Ellen M. Chen ~ The people do not fear death, ~ Why threaten them with death? ~ Suppose the people always fear death, ~ One who does strange things (ch'i), ~ I shall seize and kill, ~ Then who dares [to do strange things]? ~ Killing is carried out by the executioner. ~ To replace the executioner and kill, ~ Is like chopping wood in place of the master carpenter. ~ To chop wood in place of the master carpenter, ~ Rarely one does not hurt one's own hand.

[74c14т] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ If people [are driven to such extreme that they] are no longer afraid of death, then what is the point of frightening them with the threat of death? ~ [Someone may get the idea] "If I frequently scare people with the [terror of] death, and I would also make sure to arrest and execute disobedient ones to enforce it. ~ Subsequently, who would dare [to go against me]?" [This is rash and improper!] ~ Killings should be carried out by the naturally right administrator; ~ Whoever, other than the appropriate administrator commits killing [is under no circumstance justifiable, for he] has thus trespassed his appropriate role; ~ It is just as improper as an apprentice carver tampers with his master's work; ~ Hardly any apprentice carver, who tampers with his master's work, can avoid hurting his own hands.

[74c15т] Tien Cong Tran ~ When the people are not afraid of death, why scare them with the specter of death? ~ If you could make the people always afraid of death, and when someone persisted in breaking the law, then we might arrest and execute him, and who would dare to break the law? ~ Is not the great executor always there to kill? ~ If we want to do the killing for the great executor, this is like to chop wood for a master carpenter. ~ To chop wood for a master carpenter: we would be lucky indeed if we did not hurt our own hand.

[74c16т] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ If people are not afraid to die, how death can be used to threaten them? ~ If we make people afraid of death, and execute a few extreme offenders, who would dare to offend again? ~ It is normal to have executioners who kill. ~ Substituting an executioner in killing is like substituting a master lumberjack in chopping trees. ~ Chopping trees by non-professionals rarely results in no hand injuries.

[74c17т] Arthur Waley ~ The people are not frightened of death. ~ What then is the use of trying to intimidate them with the death-penalty? ~ And even supposing people were generally frightened of death and did not regard it as an everyday thing, which of us would dare to seize them and slay them? ~ There is the Lord of Slaughter always ready for this task, and to do it in his stead is like thrusting oneself into the master-carpenter's place and doing his chipping for him. ~ Now 'he who tries to do the master-carpenter's chipping for him is lucky if he does not cut his hand'.

[74c18т] Richard John Lynn ~ If the common folk did not fear death, trying to use death to intimidate them would have no effect. ~ If one caused the common folk always to fear death, there would still be those who behaved perversely, but these I could seize and put to death, so who would dare be perverse? ~ There is the constant executioner who puts people to death. ~ If one puts people to death instead of this executioner, this means that he is doing the hewing instead of the great carpenter. ~ It rarely happens that one who tries to do the hewing instead of the great carpenter does not injure his own hand.

[74c19т] Lin Yutang ~ ON PUNISHMENT (3) ~ The people are not afraid of death; ~ Why threaten them with death? ~ Supposing that the people are afraid of death, ~ And we can seize and kill the unruly, ~ Who would dare to do so? ~ Often it happens that the executioner is killed. ~ And to take the place of the executioner ~ Is like handling the hatchet for the master carpenter. ~ He who handles the hatchet for the master carpenter ~ Seldom escapes injury to his hands.

* * *

[74c20т] Victor H. Mair ~ If the people never fear death, ~ what is the purpose of threatening to kill them? ~ If the people ever fear death, ~ and I were to capture and kill those who are devious, ~ who would dare to be so? ~ If the people must be ever fearful of death, ~ then there will always be an executioner. ~ Now, ~ To kill in place of the executioner ~ Is like ~ Hewing wood in place of the master carpenter; ~ Few indeed will escape cutting their own hands!

* * *

[74c21т] Tolbert McCarroll ~ When the people do not fear death, ~ of what use is it to threaten them with death? ~ If the people were always afraid of death ~ and if those who did wrong would always be arrested and put to death, ~ who would do wrong? ~ There is always a Lord of Execution whose duty it is to kill. ~ If you try to fill that function ~ it is like trying to hew wood in place of a master carpenter. ~ You will probably injure your own hands.

[74c22т] David H. Li ~ When the populace are unafraid of death, what good is threatening them with death? ~ When the populace are afraid to die, hold devious ones and put them to death. ~ After that, who dares? ~ The official executioner is always there to do executions. ~ Doing executions by anyone else is like felling trees by other than an arborist. ~ A non-arborist, in felling trees, is unlikely not to hurt his hands.

[74c23т] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ If the people do not fear death, ~ For reasons of extreme poverty or suffering, ~ What is the point of threatening them with death? ~ If the people fear death, ~ And if the outlaws are captured and killed, ~ Who will dare to break the law? ~ Yet, the act of killing should always be ~ The exclusive province of the Great Executioner. ~ Therefore, to kill in place of the Great Executioner is ~ Like hewing wood in place of the master carpenter; ~ Few, if ever, will escape cutting their own hands.

[74c24т] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ When people do not fear death, ~ What is the use of frightening them with the death penalty? ~ When people are constantly afraid of death, ~ And we can arrest and execute criminals, ~ Who would dare to commit crimes? ~ Only the executioner kills. ~ To kill instead of the executioner is like a woodcutter taking a master-carpenter's place. ~ When someone carves instead of the master-carpenter, ~ He can usually expect to injure his hand.

[74c25т] Man-Ho Kwok ~ If the people are not afraid, ~ It is useless to try and scare them with death. ~ And if people are afraid of death ~ And you make a point of hanging every criminal, ~ Then who would dare to do anything? ~ Any killing must be done by an official executioner. ~ If someone else were to do it, ~ It would be like trying to copy a master carpenter - ~ And if you try to cut like him you will only bloody your own hands!

* * *

[74c26т] Gu Zhengkun ~ When the people are not afraid of death, ~ What is the point of threatening them with death? ~ Should the people really fear death, ~ Who dare go against laws ~ If we put to death those who do evils? ~ It is the duty of a regular executioner to kill, ~ If one wants to kill on behalf of the executioner, ~ It is like chopping wood on behalf of the master carpenter. ~ There are few who can escape cutting their own hands ~ When they chop wood on behalf of the master carpenter.

[74c27т] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ If people are not afraid of death, ~ why threaten them with death to prevent them from committing a crime? ~ When people are afraid of death, ~ there are still those who are not afraid of it, ~ who will dare to commit a crime, and so why arrest and execute them? ~ There is an official executioner who is in charge of execution. ~ To kill on behalf of the executioner is like carving wood on behalf of the carpenter. ~ Those who cut wood on behalf of the carpenter can seldom escape from hurting their own hand.

[74c28т] Liu Qixuan ~ Since people are not afraid of death, ~ Why should they be threatened with it? ~ If they were afraid of death, ~ Who would dare to be executioner ~ When the evil ones are captured and executed? ~ The best killer kills all the time. ~ One who kills in the most accurate and exacting way ~ Can seldom avoid injuring one's own hands.

[74c29т] Shi Fu Hwang ~ On Punishment ~ Lao Tze says, ~ The people do not fear death; ~ what purpose is in trying to frighten them with death? ~ Supposing the people are afraid of death; ~ I could always seize those who do wrong, and put them to death. ~ Who would dare to do wrong? ~ There is a regular one who presides over the execution of death. ~ He who would execute death on behalf of the executioner is what is described as chopping wood on behalf of the great carpenter. ~ Seldom is it that he who undertakes the chopping on behalf of the great carpenter does not hurt his own hands.

[74c30т] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ When the people are not afraid of death, what use is it to frighten them with the punishment of death? ~ If the people were constantly afraid of death and we could arrest and kill those who commit treacheries, who then would dare to commit such? ~ Only the Supreme Executioner kills. ~ To kill in place of the Supreme Executioner is to hack instead of a greater carpenter. ~ Now if one hacks in place of a great carpenter one can scarcely avoid cutting one's own hand.

[74c31т] Paul J. Lin ~ If the people do not fear death, ~ Why threaten them with death? ~ If we let the people always fear death, ~ And we capture and kill those who use trickery, ~ Who would dare [to use trickery]? ~ Those responsible for executions perform executions. ~ But those who perform executions for them ~ Are doing no more than carving wood for the greater carpenter. ~ And those who carve wood for the great carpenter ~ Can rarely fail to injure their own hands.

* * *

[74c32т] Michael LaFargue ~ "The people are always lacking in the fear of death." ~ Then why frighten them with death? ~ Supposing the people always had the fear of death, ~ and we could catch law breakers and kill them - ~ who would dare? ~ There is always The Executioner - he does the killing. ~ Doing the killing in The Executioner's place, ~ this is like "doing the cutting in the master carpenter's place." ~ One who cuts in the master carpenter's place - ~ seldom it is he does not cut his hand.

[74c33т] Cheng Lin ~ When the people are not afraid of death, why try to frighten them by capital punishment? ~ If the people are really afraid of death and when the wrongdoers are promptly executed, who will dare to do wrong? ~ There should be a certain authority to decide on the death of men. ~ If the decision of death is given to other men than the qualified party, it is comparable to asking a novice to do the work of a master-craftsman. ~ In so doing, the novice seldom escapes injuring his hands.

[74c34т] Yi Wu ~ If the people no longer fear death, ~ How can one threaten them with death? ~ If one causes them constantly to fear death and captures and kills those who are tricky, ~ Who would dare to be tricky? ~ The one who constantly is the executioner can kill. ~ One who kills by taking the place of the great executioner ~ is like one who takes the place of the great carpenter in cutting wood. ~ Of those who have taken the place of the great carpenter, ~ Few have not hurt their own hands!

[74c35т] Han Hiong Tan ~ If people are not afraid to die, why bother threatening them with death? ~ If people are afraid of dying, then death penalties should be summarily dished out to criminals. ~ Consequently, there will be no more offenders. ~ Normally, Nature usually does the job of the executioner. ~ If the government tries to do what Nature normally does, ~ It is akin to the apprentice trying to do the job of the master carpenter. ~ The apprentice usually ends up cutting his own hand.

[74c36т] Hua-Ching Ni ~ If people are not afraid to die, what is the use of threatening them with the punishment of death? ~ On the other hand, ~ if people value their lives, and if outlaws are seized and killed or are killed by what they are doing, ~ who would dare risk a life of peace for the sake of an insecure future? ~ Yet it is always true that one who takes charge of killing is killed in turn. ~ To become the executioner of artificial righteousness is like the inexperienced lad who would brandish a sharp axe of a master carpenter. ~ He can seldom escape cutting himself.

[74c37т] Chang Chung-yuan ~ Men are no longer afraid to die. ~ Why should we frighten them with dying? ~ If men were still as afraid of death as they used to be, ~ We could catch a criminal and put him to death. ~ Who would have the courage to commit a crime? ~ (In nature), there is always one who is responsible for ending the life of man. ~ If we take over the responsibility of killing, ~ It is just like taking over the great lumberjack's work of cutting wood. ~ If we take over the great lumberjack's work of cutting, ~ We can hardly help but hurt our hands.

[74c38т] Henry Wei ~ Subdue Delusion ~ Chih Huo ~ When the people are not afraid of death, ~ What avails it to scare them with death? ~ Assuming that they often do fear death, ~ And that any pervert can be seized and killed, ~ Who dares to do the killing? ~ It is the job of the Director of Death to kill. ~ To take over the job of the Director of Death ~ Is like wielding the hammer for the master-builder. ~ He who wields the hammer for the master-builder ~ Seldom escapes wounding himself in the hand.

[74c39т] Ha Poong Kim ~ When the people do not fear death, ~ How can you frighten them with death? ~ Suppose the people do always fear death, ~ And we can seize and kill ~ Those who are lawless. ~ But who would dare to do so? ~ There is always the one who administers killings, and he does the killing. ~ If you do the killing, taking his place, ~ This is called hewing wood taking the place of the master-carpenter. ~ If you hew wood taking the place of the master-carpenter, ~ You will seldom escape injuring your own hand.

[74c40т] Tao Huang ~ Whenever people are unafraid of death, how can killing be used as a threat? ~ Whenever people are afraid of death and are acting contrary, I will catch and kill them, who else can act so? ~ When people are absolutely afraid of death but perform killing, they are the best qualified to be executioners. ~ This is like doing carving for a master craftsman. ~ Doing the carving for a master craftsman, how could one's hand not get cut?

* * *

[74c41т] Tang Zi-chang ~ When people are no longer afraid of death, how can they be disciplined by death? ~ And if someone likes to be abnormal he may be arrested and punished, then who else would dare to be abnormal? ~ Since the one to kill is killed, a great professional killer is like a great professional chopper whose hands are subject to be hurt.

[74c42т] Wing-tsit Chan ~ The people are not afraid of death. ~ Why, then, threaten them with death? ~ Suppose the people are always afraid of death and we can seize those who are vicious and kill them, ~ Who would dare to do so? ~ There is always the master executioner (Heaven) who kills. ~ To undertake executions for the master executioner is like hewing wood for the master carpenter. ~ Whoever undertakes to hew wood for the master carpenter rarely escapes injuring his own hands.

[74c91т] И. И. Семененко ~ Когда народ не ощущает страха смерти, то как же можно смертью устрашать народ? ~ И кто посмел бы это делать, если бы народ незыблемо боялся смерти, а тех, кто строят козни, мне удалось бы взять и предать смерти? ~ В незыблемости пребывает ведающий убиением, который подвергает смерти. ~ Убивать вместо него - это все равно как попытаться что-либо вытесывать, вообразив себя великим плотником. ~ Скорей всего поранишь только свои руки.

[74c92т] А. А. Маслов ~ Когда народ не боится смерти, зачем же угрожать ему смертью? ~ Если бы народ постоянно боялся смерти, а я хватал провинившихся и предавал их казни, кто посмел бы творить беззаконие? ~ Всегда существует Палач, который казнит. ~ Казнить от имени Палача - подобно тому, как рубить дерево от имени Великого мастера. ~ Редко найдётся тот, кто, рубя от имени Великого мастера, не поранил бы себе руки.

[74c93т] Е. А. Торчинов ~ Если люди не боятся даже смерти, то чем же запугаешь их до смерти? ~ Если найдется такой, кто будет все время запугивать людей до смерти и этим тешиться, а я его поймаю и убью, кто еще посмеет так поступить? ~ Ведь в государстве есть всегда палач. ~ А подменять собою палача не то же самое ли, что вместо лесоруба идти рубить деревья? ~ Ведь тот, кто вместо лесоруба пойдет деревья рубить, тот всегда рискует собственную руку отрубить!

[74c94т] А. Е. Лукьянов ~ Если люди не боятся смерти, то зачем же пугать их смертью? ~ Если было бы так, что люди постоянно боялись бы смерти и творили зло, ~ а я хватал бы и казнил, то кто посмел бы [нарушить закон]! ~ Всегда есть тот, кто отвечает за казнь и казнит. ~ Но если заменить собой того, кто отвечает за казнь и казнит, ~ то это все равно, что заменить великого мастера рубить. ~ Тот, кто заменит великого мастера рубить, редко когда не поранит себе руку.

[74c98т] Б. Б. Виногродский ~ Если народ не боится смерти, то что его смертью пугать? ~ А вот, если человек при постоянстве страха смерти осуществляет аномальное, то "сущность моя" должна схватить и убить его. ~ Кто осмелится? ~ Постоянно есть ведающий убийствами, который убивает. ~ А вот если убивать вместо ведающего убийствами - ~ Это определяется: ~ Заменить великого мастера-плотника. ~ Вот замените великого мастера-плотника, - и редко будет такой, кто не поранит себе руки.

[75c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ The reason why people starve, ~ Is because they take so much in tax-grain. ~ Therefore they starve. ~ The reason why the common people cannot be ruled, ~ Is because their superiors have their reasons for acting. ~ Therefore they cannot be ruled. ~ The reason why people take death lightly, ~ Is because they so avidly seek after life. ~ Therefore they take death lightly. ~ Only those who do not act for the purpose of living - ~ Only these are superior to those who value life.

[75c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ WHY are the people starving? ~ Because those above them are taxing them too heavily. ~ That is why they are starving. ~ Why are the people hard to manage? ~ Because those above them are fussy and have private ends to serve. ~ That is why they are hard to manage. ~ Why do the people make light of death? ~ Because those above them make too much of life. ~ That is why they make light of death. ~ The people have simply nothing to live upon! ~ They know better than to value such a life!

[75c03т] D. C. Lau ~ The people are hungry: ~ It is because those in authority eat up too much in taxes ~ That the people are hungry. ~ The people are difficult to govern: ~ It is because those in authority are too fond of action ~ That the people are difficult to govern. ~ The people treat death lightly: ~ It is because the people set too much store by life ~ That they treat death lightly. ~ It is just because one has no use for life that one is wiser than the man who values life.

[75c04т] R. L. Wing ~ People are hungry. ~ Because those above consume too much in taxes, People are hungry. ~ People are difficult to lead. ~ Because those above interfere with them, People are difficult to lead. ~ People make light of death. ~ Because those above deeply seek survival, People make light of death. ~ Indeed, it is those who do not interfere with life ~ Who are capable of respecting life.

[75c05т] Ren Jiyu ~ The people suffer from famine because too many of the taxes are swallowed by their rulers. ~ Thus they suffer from famine. ~ The people are difficult to rule because their rulers are fond of taking action. ~ Thus they are difficult to rule. ~ The people take risks with their lives because the rulers take good care of their own lives. ~ Thus the people are forced to risk their lives. ~ Those who do not value their lives are wiser than those who overvalue their lives.

[75c06т] Gia-fu Feng ~ Why are the people starving? ~ Because the rulers eat up the money in taxes. ~ Therefore the people are starving. ~ Why are the people rebellious? ~ Because the rulers interfere too much. ~ Therefore they are rebellious. ~ Why do the people think so little of death? ~ Because the rulers demand too much of life. ~ Therefore the people take death lightly. ~ Having little to live on, one knows better than to value life too much.

* * *

[75c07t] Lok Sang Ho ~ People are hungry. ~ That is because the government imposes too many taxes. ~ People are difficult to rule over. ~ That is because the government contrives and wants to do too much. ~ People do not think much of death. ~ That is because the government makes life a privilege ~ instead of treating it as a natural right. ~ Those who make living an unconditional right are good ~ in that they pay due respect to life.

[75c08t] Xiaolin Yang ~ The people are hungry because the ruler taxes them too heavily, so they are hungry. ~ The people are difficult to control because the ruler is doing too many useless things, so they are difficult to control. ~ The people are not afraid of death because the ruler enjoys himself too much, so they are not afraid of death. ~ The ruler who does not care for his life is superior to the ruler who enjoys his life.

* * *

[75c09t] Walter Gorn Old, THE EVIL OF AVARICE ~ The people suffer from famine on account of the heavy taxation put upon them. ~ This is the cause of their need. ~ The people are difficult to govern because of the overbearing of their superiors. ~ This is the cause of their trouble. ~ The people make light of dying because of the great hardships of trying to live. ~ This is the reason of their indifference to death. ~ Therefore to keep living in obscurity is better than making overmuch of it.

[75c10t] James Legge ~ The people suffer from famine because of the multitude of taxes consumed by their superiors. ~ It is through this that they suffer famine. ~ The people are difficult to govern because of the (excessive) agency of their superiors (in governing them). ~ It is through this that they are difficult to govern. ~ The people make light of dying because of the greatness of their labours in seeking for the means of living. ~ It is this which makes them think light of dying. ~ Thus it is that to leave the subject of living altogether out of view is better than to set a high value on it.

[75c11t] David Hinton ~ The people are starving, ~ and it's only because you leaders feast on taxes ~ that they're starving. ~ The people are impossible to rule, ~ and it's only because you leaders are masters of extenuation ~ that they're impossible to rule. ~ The people take death lightly, ~ and it's only because you leaders crave life's lavish pleasures ~ that they take death lightly, ~ they who act without concern for life: it's a wisdom far beyond treasuring life.

* * *

[75c12t] Chichung Huang ~ The people are starving, ~ Because he takes too much grain tax, ~ Hence, they are starving. ~ The hundred family names are unruly, ~ Because their sovereign has the intention to act, ~ Hence, they are unruly. ~ The people take death lightly, ~ Because he seeks after extravagant living, ~ Hence, they take death lightly. ~ Only one who does not apply himself to living ~ Is worthier than those who exalt living.

* * *

[75c13t] Ellen M. Chen ~ People are hungry. ~ Because their rulers levy too much grain tax, ~ Therefore they are hungry. ~ People are hard to rule. ~ Because their rulers rule by action (wei), ~ Therefore they are hard to rule. ~ People take death lightly. ~ Because they are in thick pursuit of life, ~ Therefore they take death lightly. ~ One who has nothing to pursue in life, ~ Is wiser than one who values life.

[75c14t] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ The reason people suffer from hunger is because their superiors (government) taxed them heavily, so after the taxation not much was left to support their bare necessity; ~ The reason people were difficult to govern was because their superiors were meddling with their affairs [thus their sense of propriety was impeded]; ~ The reason people risked their lives for trivial causes was because their superiors (government officials) demand to lived affluently [at the cost of other people's survival], people thus were forced to risk their lives [even for meager livelihood]; ~ Accordingly, those [Solipsists] who did not get involve with other people's affairs were better human beings than those who wanted to live very well personally [at the cost of the survivals of other people]; ~ Even though the latter value the growth of the population (lives) for his community.

[75c15t] Tien Cong Tran ~ The people are starving. ~ It is because those above them are taxing them too heavily. ~ That is why they are starving. ~ The people are hard to govern. ~ It is because those above them have a lot of interference. ~ That is why they are hard to govern. ~ The people make light of death. ~ It is because those above them live an extravagant life. ~ That is why they make light of death. ~ Only he who works not for life knows to value life.

[75c16t] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ People starve because they pay heavy taxes. ~ People are hard to govern because the rulers force their wishes on people. ~ People are not afraid to rebel, because the rulers live extravagantly. ~ Therefore those who avoid extravagant life-style are wiser than those who live extravagantly.

[75c17t] Arthur Waley ~ The people starve because those above them eat too much tax-grain. ~ That is the only reason why they starve. ~ The people are difficult to keep in order because those above them interfere. ~ That is the only reason why they are so difficult to keep in order. ~ The people attach no importance to death, because those above them are too grossly absorbed in the pursuit of life. ~ That is why they attach no importance to death. ~ And indeed, in that their hearts are so little set on life they are superior to those who set store by life.

[75c18t] Richard John Lynn ~ The reason the common folk starve is that the ruler eats too much grain tax. ~ This is why they starve. ~ The reason the common folk are hard to govern is that the ruler takes deliberate actions [you-wei]. ~ This is why they are hard to govern. ~ The reason the common folk take death lightly is that they place too much emphasis on life. ~ This is why they take death lightly. ~ It is only by acting without regard for life that one becomes more of a worthy than one who values life.

[75c19t] Lin Yutang ~ ON PUNISHMENT (4) ~ When people are hungry, ~ It is because their rulers eat too much tax-grain. ~ Therefore the unruliness of hungry people ~ Is due to the interference of their rulers. ~ That is why they are unruly. ~ The people are not afraid of death, ~ Because they are anxious to make a living. ~ That is why they are not afraid of death. ~ It is those who interfere not with their living ~ That are wise in exalting life.

* * *

[75c20t] Victor H. Mair ~ Human hunger is the result of overtaxation. ~ For this reason, ~ There is hunger. ~ The common people are not governable because of their superiors' actions. ~ For this reason, ~ They are not governable. ~ The people make light of death because of too much emphasis on the quest for life. ~ For this reason, ~ They make light of death. ~ Now, ~ Only she who acts not for the sake of life ~ Is wiser than those who value life highly.

* * *

[75c21t] Tolbert McCarroll ~ Why are the people starving? ~ Because their leaders eat up too much of the tax-grain; ~ that is why the people are starving. ~ Why are the people difficult to govern? ~ Because their leaders interfere; ~ that is why the people are difficult to govern. ~ Why do the people treat death lightly? ~ Because their leaders are so grossly absorbed in the pursuit of living; ~ that is why the people treat death lightly. ~ Indeed, it is wiser to ignore life altogether than to place too high a value on it.

[75c22t] David H. Li ~ Starvation in the populace is caused by excessive taxes. ~ Excessive taxes result in starvation. ~ Difficulty in governing the populace is caused by a governor's interferences. ~ Interferences result in difficulties in governance. ~ Indifference to death in the populace is caused by a governor's overindulgence. ~ A governor's overindulgence results in the populace's indifference to death. ~ One who does not overindulgence is wiser than one who overvalues one's life.

[75c23t] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ Why are the people starving? ~ Because the rulers eat up the money in taxes. ~ That is why. ~ Why are the people difficult to govern? ~ Because the rulers interfere too much. ~ That is why. ~ Why do the people think so little of death? ~ Because the rulers think too much of their own life. ~ That is why. ~ Those who do not overvalue their life are wiser than those who do.

[75c24t] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ The people are starving, ~ Because their clerks impose heavy taxes on them. ~ That is why they are starving. ~ It is difficult to govern the people, ~ Because their clerks interfere in their affairs. ~ That is why they are difficult to govern. ~ The people do not respect death, ~ Because their clerks direct them to seek life. ~ That is why they do not respect death.

[75c25t] Man-Ho Kwok ~ Why are the people hungry? ~ Because you crush them with your taxes; ~ That is why they have nothing. ~ Why are the people angry? ~ Because you endlessly impose your laws; ~ That is why they can't take any more. ~ And why aren't they scared of death? ~ Because you are voracious and you want everything. ~ So what have they got left to lose? ~ Those who only have a little really know how to value life.

* * *

[75c26t] Gu Zhengkun ~ The hunger on the part of the people ~ Is the result of exorbitant taxes on the part of the ruler; ~ Thus the people are hungry. ~ The unruliness on the part of the people ~ Is the result of meddlesome actions on the part of the ruler; ~ Thus the people are unruly. ~ Making light of life on the part of the people ~ Is the result of setting too much store by life on the part of the ruler; ~ Thus the people make light of life. ~ Those who make light of their own life ~ Are wiser than those who overvalue their life.

[75c27t] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ The people are hungry. ~ It is because those who govern them consume too much in taxes. ~ That is why the people are hungry. ~ The people are hard to govern. ~ It is because those who govern them interfere too much. ~ That is why the people are hard to govern. ~ The people scorn death. ~ It is because they seek dearly for life. ~ That is why people treat death with disdain. ~ Only he who does not seek dearly for his life can value life worthily.

[75c28t] Liu Qixuan ~ People are hungry because "the Above" tax too much. ~ People are disobedient because "the Above" do too much. ~ People would rather die because "the Above" live too high. ~ Therefore, one who does nothing to benefit one's own life ~ Is good at keeping and supporting lives.

[75c29t] Shi Fu Hwang ~ On Valuing Life ~ Lao Tze says, ~ The people suffer from hunger because their superior agencies have imposed a heavy tax, thus they are hungry. ~ The people are difficult to govern because their superior agencies are too fond of meddling, thus they are difficult to govern. ~ The people make lightly of dying because of the excessive costs in seeking the means of living, thus they think lightly of dying. ~ Therefore the benevolent should be those who do not interfere with people's living; ~ instead of those who value people's living.

[75c30t] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ The people starve. ~ Because their officials take heavy taxes from them, therefore they starve. ~ The people are hard to rule. ~ Because their officials meddle with affairs, therefore they are hard to rule. ~ The people pay no heed to death. ~ Because they endeavour to seek life; therefore they pay no heed to death.

[75c31t] Paul J. Lin ~ The people are starving ~ Because the man on top devours too much tax money. ~ So they are starving. ~ The people are hard to govern ~ Because the man on top is too active in governing. ~ So they are hard to govern. ~ The people think little of death ~ Because the man on top strives for a rich life. ~ So they think little of death. ~ Therefore it is better to do nothing for one's life ~ Than to value it.

[75c32t] Michael LaFargue ~ 'The people are starving'. ~ It is because those high up eat too much tax grain, ~ this is why they are starving. ~ 'The people are hard to govern'. ~ It is because there is Working among those high up, ~ this is why they are hard to govern. ~ 'The people take death lightly'. ~ It is because they pursue a lavish life, ~ this is why they take death lightly. ~ Simply: ~ Those who do not Work at 'living' - ~ these are better men than those who 'love life'.

* * *

[75c33t] Cheng Lin ~ The people suffer hunger because the rulers levy so many taxes. ~ That is why they starve. ~ The people become difficult to govern because the rulers demand too much action. ~ That is why they are difficult to govern. ~ The people risk death because the rulers have too many desires. ~ That is why they risk death. ~ He who does not occupy himself with the preservation of his own body is superior to those who regard it as a matter of utmost importance.

[75c34t] Yi Wu ~ The people are starving ~ Because those above tax them too heavily. ~ Therefore, they starve. ~ The people are hard to govern ~ Because those above are too active. ~ Therefore, they are hard to govern. ~ The people make light of death ~ Because those above seek too much for their own lives. ~ Therefore, they make light of death. ~ To do nothing for one's life ~ Is better than to value it.

[75c35t] Han Hiong Tan ~ People are starving because they are forced to pay onerous taxes. ~ That is why they are starving. ~ People are unruly because they are burdened by excessive rules. ~ This is why they become unruly. ~ Whilst living lavishly, the ruler extorts heavy taxes from the people, forcing them to risk their lives simply to eke out a living. ~ That is why the people are not afraid to die. ~ Hence, frugal rulers are infinitely better than those harsh ones who extort heavy taxes to live luxuriously.

[75c36t] Hua-Ching Ni ~ Why are people starving and leading a difficult life? ~ Is it not because their rulers consume too much tax grain? ~ Is that why they are starving and leading a difficult life? ~ Why are people hard to manage? ~ Is it not because those above them create distress with their oppressive interference? ~ Is that why they are hard to manage? ~ Why do people make light of death? ~ Is it not because those above them demand too much for themselves and value only their own personal power and glory? ~ Is that why they take death so lightly? ~ One who is a guardian of people and does nothing for his own life knows how to value all lives well.

[75c37t] Chang Chung-yuan ~ When men are deprived of food, ~ It is because their kings tax them too heavily. ~ Therefore, they are deprived of food. ~ When men are hard to govern, ~ It is because their kings interfere with their lives. ~ Therefore, they are hard to govern. ~ When men give up their lives lightly, ~ It is because their kings are anxious to live extravagantly. ~ Therefore, men give up their lives lightly. ~ Only one who disregards his own life ~ Knows how to value the lives of others.

[75c38t] Henry Wei ~ The Harm of Greed ~ T'an Sun ~ The reason why the people are starving ~ Is that the officials "eat their taxes" too much. ~ That's why the people are starving. ~ The reason why the people are difficult to rule ~ Is that the authorities resort to interference. ~ That's why the people are difficult to rule. ~ The reason why the people make light of death ~ Is that they are too eager for high living. ~ That's why the people make light of death. ~ Those who have nothing to make life pleasurable ~ Are worthier than those who value high living.

[75c39т] Ha Poong Kim ~ The people starve ~ Because the ruler consumes too much tax-grain. ~ Because of this they starve. ~ The people are hard to govern ~ Because the ruler rules through action [yu wei]. ~ Because of this they are hard to govern. ~ The people take their death lightly ~ Because the ruler hoards his life. ~ Because of this they take their death lightly. ~ Truly, one who does nothing with life ~ Is wiser than one who prizes [the value of] life.

* * *

[75c40т] Tao Huang ~ The reason people are starving is because the government taxes too much. ~ This is the reason for starvation. ~ The reason people are hard to govern is because their leaders are actively engaged. ~ This is why they are hard to govern. ~ The reason people are not serious about death is because they seek the burdens of life. ~ This is why they are not serious about death. ~ Only those who are not slaves to life are wise to the value of life.

[75c41т] Tang Zi-chang ~ The hunger of people is caused by the ruler who levies too many taxes. ~ Thus they are hungry. ~ The difficulty of ruling people is due to the fact that the ruler interferes. ~ Thus they are difficult to rule. ~ The reason people take life lightly is because they live by overdrawing their lives heavily. ~ Therefore, they take life lightly. ~ Hence, only the one who has not overdone his living knows his life better.

[75c42т] Wing-tsit Chan ~ The people starve because the ruler eats too much tax-grain. ~ Therefore they starve. ~ They are difficult to rule because their ruler does too many things. ~ Therefore they are difficult to rule. ~ The people take death lightly because their ruler strives for life too vigorously. ~ Therefore they take death lightly. ~ It is only those who do not seek after life that excel in making life valuable.

[75c94т] А. Е. Лукьянов ~ Народ голодает, потому что налоги на содержание верхов велики. ~ Вот почему [он] голодает. ~ Народом трудно управлять, если верхи деятельны. ~ Вот почему трудно управлять. ~ Народ презирает смерть, потому что требования стоящих над ним верхов к жизни чрезмерны. ~ Вот почему презирает смерть. ~ Только тот, кто не считается с жизнью, мудр в оценке жизни.

[75c98т] Б. Б. Виногродский ~ Голод в народе - это из-за того, что их высшие берут много налогов на зерно. ~ Это дает: ~ Голод. ~ Народом трудно управлять - это из-за того, что их высшие осуществляют наличие. ~ Это дает: ~ Трудно управлять. ~ Народ легко относится к смерти - это из-за того, что их высшие стремятся в толщу жизни. ~ Это дает: ~ Легко относится к смерти. ~ Ведь только в отсутствии осуществления за счет жизни заключается мудрая способность ценить жизнь.

[76c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ When people are born, they're supple and soft; ~ When they die, they end up stretched out firm and rigid; ~ When the ten thousand things and grasses and trees are alive, they're supple and pliant; ~ When they're dead, they're withered and dried out. ~ Therefore we say that the firm and rigid are companions of death, ~ While the supple, the soft, the weak, and the delicate are companions of life. ~ If a soldier is rigid, he won't win; ~ If a tree is rigid, it will come to its end. ~ Rigidity and power occupy the inferior position; ~ Suppleness, softness, weakness, and delicateness occupy the superior position.

[76c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ WHEN a man is living, he is soft and supple. ~ When he is dead, he becomes hard and rigid. ~ When a plant is living, it is soft and tender. ~ When it is dead, it becomes withered and dry. ~ Hence, the hard and rigid belongs to the company of the dead: ~ The soft and supple belongs to the company of the living. ~ Therefore, a mighty army tends to fall by its own weight, ~ Just as dry wood is ready for the axe. ~ The mighty and great will be laid low; ~ The humble and weak will be exalted.

[76c03т] D. C. * * *

[76c04т] R. L. Wing ~ A man living is yielding and receptive. ~ Dying, he is rigid and inflexible. ~ All Things, the grass and trees: ~ Living, they are yielding and fragile; ~ Dying, they are dry and withered. ~ Thus those who are firm and inflexible ~ Are in harmony with dying. ~ Those who are yielding and receptive ~ Are in harmony with living. ~ Therefore an inflexible strategy will not triumph; ~ An inflexible tree will be attacked. ~ The position of the highly inflexible will descend; ~ The position of the yielding and receptive will ascend.

[76c05т] Ren Jiyu ~ Man has a soft and weak body when he is alive, ~ Whereas his body becomes rigid after his death. ~ All things, grasses and trees have tender twigs and branches when they are alive, ~ Whereas they become dry and withered when they are dead. ~ Therefore the hard and strong belong to death, ~ Whereas the soft and weak belong to life. ~ Thus the armed forces will be shattered when they become strong, ~ And trees will be broken when they grow strong. ~ The hard and strong are in the inferior position, ~ And the soft and weak are in the superior position.

[76c06т] Gia-fu Feng ~ A man is born gentle and weak. ~ At his death he is hard and stiff. ~ Green plants are tender and filled with sap. ~ At their death they are withered and dry. ~ Therefore the stiff and unbending is the disciple of death. ~ The gentle and yielding is the disciple of life. ~ Thus an army without flexibility never wins a battle. ~ A tree that is unbending is easily broken. ~ The hard and strong will fall. ~ The soft and weak will overcome.

[76c07т] Lok Sang Ho ~ People at birth are weak and supple. ~ People at death are strong and hard. ~ All living things including the trees and other plants are supple and weak. ~ When they die, however, they all turn dry and hard. ~ Being hard and strong is the way of the dead. ~ Being soft and weak is the way of the alive. ~ Armed forces that show their strength will not win. ~ Trees that hold strong against the wind are likely to be blown down. ~ To be strong is a disadvantage. ~ To be weak is an advantage.

[76c08т] Xiaolin Yang ~ When people are alive, they are soft; when dead, they are hard. ~ When every living thing is alive, it is soft; when dead, it is hard. ~ So, the strong and hard have no vitality; the soft and weak have vitality. ~ Therefore, when an army is too strong and rigid, it will be extinguished; ~ when a tree is too stiff, it will break. ~ The strong and hard are inferior; the weak and soft are superior.

* * *

[76c09т] Walter Gorn Old, THE DANGER OF STRENGTH ~ Man at his birth is supple and tender, but in death he is rigid and strong. ~ It is the same with everything. ~ Trees and plants in their early growth are pliant and soft, but at the end they are withered and tough. ~ Thus rigidity and strength are concomitants of death, but softness and gentleness are companions of life. ~ Therefore the warrior who relies on his strength cannot conquer death, while the powerful tree becomes a mere timber support. ~ For the place of the strong and the firm is below, while that of the gentle and yielding is above.

[76c10т] James Legge ~ Man at his birth is supple and weak; ~ at his death, firm and strong. ~ (So it is with) all things. ~ Trees and plants, in their early growth, are soft and brittle; ~ at their death, dry and withered. ~ Thus it is that firmness and strength are the concomitants of death; ~ softness and weakness, the concomitants of life. ~ Hence he who (relies on) the strength of his forces does not conquer; ~ and a tree which is strong will fill the out-stretched arms, (and thereby invites the feller.) ~ Therefore the place of what is firm and strong is below, and that of what is soft and weak is above.

[76c11т] David Hinton ~ People are soft and weak in life, ~ hard and strong in death. ~ The ten thousand plants and trees are soft and frail in life, ~ withered and brittle in death. ~ Things hard and strong follow death's ways and things soft and weak follow life's: ~ so it is that strong armies never overcome and strong trees always suffer the axe. ~ Things great and strong dwell below. ~ Things soft and weak dwell above.

* * *

[76c12т] Chichung Huang ~ When born, man is soft and weak; ~ When dead, he is stiff, tough, hard and strong. ~ When born, the ten thousand things, ~ Grasses and trees are soft and tender; ~ When dead, they are withered and dry. ~ Therefore, it is said: ~ "The hard and strong belong to the category of death; ~ The soft and weak belong to the category of life." ~ Hence, if an army is strong, it perishes; ~ If a tree is strong, it breaks. ~ Therefore, the strong and big rank low; ~ The soft and weak rank high.

[76c13т] Ellen M. Chen ~ At birth a person is soft (jou) and yielding (jo), ~ At death hard (chien) and unyielding (ch'iang). ~ All beings, grass and trees, when alive, are soft and bending, ~ When dead they are dry and brittle. ~ Therefore the hard and unyielding are companions of death, ~ The soft and yielding are companions of life. ~ Hence an unyielding army (ping) is destroyed (mieh). ~ An unyielding tree breaks (che). ~ The unyielding and great takes its place below, ~ The soft and yielding takes its place above.

[76c14т] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ When people are alive [their bodies] are soft (pliable) and flexible (supple), but when they are dead [their bodies] are stiff (rigid) and inflexible; ~ When plants are alive they are soft and flexible, but when they are dead they are withered and rigid; ~ Therefore: When [creatures are] soft and flexible, they are on the course of continuing to live; ~ When [creatures are turning] stiff and inflexible, they are on the course of dying. ~ The fact is: ~ When an army is strong [it worries its potential rivals], it is thus exposed to the risk of being annihilated; ~ When a tree is at the peak of its growth, its expansive spread [i.e. abundant branches and leaves] would catch strong wind quickly; ~ Consequently, it is in the higher danger of being blown down. ~ Accordingly, the strong (stiff) and inflexible ones [e.g. roots] would grow downward; ~ Whereas the soft (weak) and flexible ones [e.g. leaves] would grow and develop upward.

[76c15т] Tien Cong Tran ~ When a man is living, he is soft and supple. ~ When he is dead, he becomes hard and rigid. ~ When a plant is living, it is soft and tender. ~ When it is dead, it becomes withered and dry. ~ Hence, the hard and rigid belongs to the company of the dead; the soft and supple belongs to the company of the living. ~ Therefore, a mighty army will not win, just as hard tree is ready for the axe. ~ The mighty and great are below; the soft and weak are above.

[76c16т] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ When alive, people are pliable and soft; at death, people become rigid and hard. ~ When alive, grasses and trees are flexible and tender; at death, they become withered and rotten. ~ Therefore, rigidity leads to death, flexibility results in survival. ~ It is because of this, the inflexible army would be defeated, like stiff trees would be broken by wind. ~ The big and rigid would be overtaken by the nimble and flexible.

* * *

[76c17т] Arthur Waley ~ When he is born, man is soft and weak; in death he becomes stiff and hard. ~ The ten thousand creatures and all plants and trees while they are alive are supple and soft, but when they are dead they become brittle and dry. ~ Truly, what is stiff and hard is a 'companion of death'; what is soft and weak is a 'companion of life'. ~ Therefore 'the weapon that is too hard will be broken, the tree that has the hardest wood will be cut down'. ~ Truly, the hard and mighty are cast down; the soft and weak set on high.

[76c18т] Richard John Lynn ~ While alive, humans are soft and pliable, but, when dead, they are hard and stiff. ~ While alive, plants, trees, and all the other myriad things are also soft and fragile, but, when dead, they are dried up and withered. ~ Thus it is that the hard and stiff are adherents of death, and the soft and pliable are adherents of life. ~ This is why, if military power is stiff, it will not be victorious. ~ If a tree is stiff, it will be attacked. ~ The stiff [strong] and great occupy a position below. ~ The soft and pliant occupy a position above.

[76c19т] Lin Yutang ~ HARD AND SOFT ~ When man is born, he is tender and weak; ~ At death, he is hard and stiff. ~ When the things and plants are alive, they are soft and supple; ~ When they are dead, they are brittle and dry. ~ Therefore hardness and stiffness are the companions of death, ~ And softness and gentleness are the companions of life. ~ Therefore when an army is headstrong, it will lose in battle. ~ When a tree is hard, it will be cut down. ~ The big and strong belong underneath. ~ The gentle and weak belong at the top.

[76c20т] Victor H. Mair ~ Human beings are soft and supple when alive, stiff and straight when dead. ~ The myriad creatures, the grasses and trees are soft and fragile when alive, dry and withered when dead. ~ Therefore, it is said: ~ The rigid person is a disciple of death; ~ The soft, supple, and delicate are lovers of life. ~ An army that is inflexible will not conquer; ~ A tree that is inflexible will snap. ~ The unyielding and mighty shall be brought low; ~ The soft, supple, and delicate will be set above.

[76c21т] Tolbert McCarroll ~ At birth you are supple and soft. ~ At death you are stiff and hard. ~ Grass and trees are pliant and tender when living, ~ but they are dry and brittle when dead. ~ Therefore, ~ the stiff and hard are attendants of death, ~ the supple and soft are attendants of life. ~ Thus, ~ the hard weapon will be broken. ~ The mighty tree will invite the axe. ~ Therefore, ~ the hard and mighty belong below; ~ the yielding and gentle belong above.

[76c22т] David H. Li ~ At birth, one is soft and tender; ~ at death, hard and stiff. ~ At the beginning, flora are tender and crisp; ~ at the end, brittle and dry. ~ Thus, hardness and stiffness symbolize death; softness and tenderness, life. ~ Thus, an army, hard and stiff, is annihilated; a tree, hard and stiff, is cut. ~ Hard and stiff are inferior; soft and tender, superior.

[76c23т] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ Human beings are soft and supple at birth, ~ But stiff and hard at death. ~ All things in Nature are soft and pliant when alive, ~ But dry and withered when dead. ~ Thus, the stiff and hard is the companion of death, ~ And the soft and supple is the companion of life. ~ Therefore, an army that is unyielding will soon perish, ~ And a tree that is unbending will soon break. ~ The hard and unyielding is an inferior quality; ~ The soft and yielding is a superior quality.

[76c24т] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ The living person is soft and pliant, and is hard and rigid in death. ~ All creatures and plants, ~ Are soft and vulnerable in life, ~ And dry and brittle in death. ~ Therefore it is said: ~ The hard and the rigid are part of death, ~ The soft and gentle are part of life. ~ This is the reason why soldiers who are too rigid ~ Do not triumph. ~ When the tree is too rigid, it will break. ~ The stance of the strong and the great is stooped, ~ The stance of the weak and the small is erect.

[76c25т] Man-Ho Kwok ~ When a body is alive, it is soft and supple ~ - it is cold and rigid when it dies. ~ When plants are alive, they are tender and trailing ~ - and burnt and brittle when they're dead. ~ What's iron hard is what is dead, then ~ And what is fluid and sensuous and rippling is alive ... ~ And that is why a huge army ~ With all its strength and complacency will be defeated: ~ Like a great tree axed down. ~ Everything hard and strong will come down, ~ And everything soft shall rise, shall overcome.

[76c26т] Gu Zhengkun ~ While alive, a man's body is supple; ~ When dead, it becomes hard. ~ While alive, grass and trees are supple; ~ When dead, they become dry and stiff. ~ Thus the hard and strong is of the dying sort; ~ The supple and weak is of the living sort. ~ That is why the army, having grown strong, will be wiped out, ~ And the tree, when grown up, will be cut down. ~ Thus the strong and big is inferior ~ To the weak and supple.

[76c27т] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ A man is soft and weak when living. ~ But hard and rigid when dead. ~ The myriad creatures and grass and plants, when living, are soft and fragile. ~ When dead, they are dried and withered. ~ That is why the hard and the rigid are the disciples of death, the soft and the weak the disciples of the living. ~ Therefore an army which is inflexible cannot win. ~ A plant which is hard will break. ~ The strong and hard will fall. ~ The soft and weak will overcome.

* * *

[76c28т] Liu Qixuan ~ Life is soft and weak, death is hard and strong. ~ Plants are soft or fragile while living ~ And wither and harden while dying. ~ Therefore death grows in strength and hardness, ~ And life grows in softness and weakness. ~ A strong army perishes and a strong tree breaks. ~ What is hard and strong should not be valued, ~ And "the Above" should keep soft and weak.

[76c29т] Shi Fu Hwang ~ Strong and Weak ~ Lao Tze says, ~ A man at his living is tender and weak and at his death adamant and strong. ~ Living creatures and plants at their living are soft and supple and at their death dry and withered. ~ Thus those who are adamant and strong are the concomitant of death; ~ and soft and weak, the concomitant of life. ~ Hence he who relies on the strength of his forces can not win, ~ and a tree which grows to be strong will invite the feller. ~ Hence the rule: ~ The big and the strong stay underneath and the soft and the weak exist above.

[76c30т] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ Man when living is soft and tender; when dead he is hard and tough. ~ All animals and plants when living are tender and fragile; when dead they become withered and dry. ~ Therefore it is said: the hard and tough are parts of death; the soft and tender are parts of life. ~ This is the reason why the soldiers when they are too tough cannot carry the day; the tree when it is too tough will break. ~ The position of the strong and great is low, and the position of the weak and tender is high.

[76c31т] Paul J. Lin ~ In life, man is supple and tender. ~ In death, he becomes rigid and stark. ~ Myriad things such as grass and trees are supple and frail in life, ~ And shrivelled and dry in death. ~ Therefore, the rigid and stark are disciples of death, ~ While the supple and weak are disciples of life. ~ Therefore the army that uses strength cannot win. ~ The tree that stands firm will break. ~ The strong and large are subordinate; ~ The soft and weak are superior.

* * *

[76c32т] Michael LaFargue ~ People begin life Soft and Weak, ~ when they are dead they are hard and firm. ~ Among the thousands of things: ~ Grass and trees begin life Soft and tender, ~ when they are dead they are withered and brittle. ~ Yes, strength and hardness accompany death; ~ Softness and Weakness accompany life. ~ And so: ~ With a battle axe too hardened, you cannot win; ~ when a tree becomes hard, then comes the axe. ~ The strong and the great stand lowest, ~ the Soft and Weak stand highest.

* * *

[76c33т] Cheng Lin ~ When a man is alive, his body is supple and pliant. ~ When he is dead, it is hard and stiff. ~ When a plant is alive, it is supple and pliant. ~ When it is dead, it is dry and brittle. ~ Therefore, ~ to be hard and stiff is the way of death; ~ to be supple and pliant is the way of life. ~ A stiff weapon may break, just as a stiff tree may crack. ~ That which is hard and stiff occupies a disadvantageous position. ~ That which is supple and pliant occupies an advantageous position.

* * *

[76c34т] Yi Wu ~ One who is living is soft and weak. ~ One who is dead is hard and rigid. ~ All living things, like grass and trees, are soft and frail. ~ With death, they become withered and dry. ~ Therefore, hardness and rigidity are associated with death. ~ Softness and weakness are associated with life. ~ Therefore, powerful weapons will not win; ~ Massive trees will be cut down; ~ The strong and great will be laid low; ~ The soft and weak will be exalted.

* * *

[76c35т] Han Hiong Tan ~ When a person is alive and kicking, his body is soft and pliable. ~ When he is dead, his body is rigid and stiff. ~ Living plants are soft and supple. ~ Dead plants become dried and stiff. ~ Therefore, hard and stiff epitomises the dead. ~ Soft and supple typifies the living. ~ Hence, when an army flaunts its might, it will be defeated. ~ As the tree grows big and tall, it will be felled. ~ The strong and powerful should occupy the lower position. ~ While the meek and weak should be sitting atop.

[76c36т] Hua-Ching Ni ~ When a person is alive, he is soft and supple. ~ When a person dies, he becomes hard and rigid. ~ When a plant is alive, it is pliant and tender. ~ When a plant is dead, it becomes dry and brittle. ~ Hence, the hard and rigid are companions of the dead. ~ The soft and supple are companions of the living. ~ Therefore, a mighty army is ready to be vanquished. ~ A tree that is dry is ready for the ax. ~ The mighty and the great will be laid low. ~ The soft and the gentle will outlive them all!

* * *

[76c37т] Chang Chung-yuan ~ When a man is alive, ~ His body is soft and frail. ~ After his death, ~ It is hard and solid. ~ When grass and trees are growing, ~ They are delicate and fragile. ~ After their deaths, ~ They are wizened and decayed. ~ Therefore, what is hard is close to death. ~ What is soft is close to life. ~ Thus, when troops are inflexible, they lose the war. ~ When a wood board is dried hard, it cracks. ~ What is strongest and most solid remains low. ~ What is softest and meekest remains high.

[76c38т] Henry Wei ~ Abstain from Hardness ~ Chieh Ch'iang ~ Man is soft and weak at birth; ~ At death he is hard and rigid. ~ The ten thousand things, herbs and trees, ~ Are soft and delicate when growing up; ~ In dying, they wither and look haggard. ~ Thus hardness and rigidity are companions of death; ~ Softness and weakness are companions of life. ~ Therefore armies, having become rigid, will not win; ~ Trees, having become rigid, will break asunder. ~ The big and rigid will be laid low; ~ The soft and weak will be lifted up.

[76c39т] Ha Poong Kim ~ People are soft and weak when born, ~ But bard and strong when dead. ~ Plants are soft and supple when born, ~ But dry and shriveled when dead. ~ Therefore the hard and strong are companions of death, ~ The soft and weak are companions of life. ~ Therefore a strong weapon loses, ~ A strong tree breaks. ~ The strong and big belong below, ~ The soft and weak belong above.

* * *

[76c40т] Tao Huang ~ When people are born, they are soft and gentle. ~ When they die, they are stiff and callous. ~ When myriad things, grasses and trees, are born, they are soft and tender. ~ When they die, they are withered. ~ So stiffness and callousness are the company of death. ~ Softness and suppleness are the company of life. ~ The powerful army will not win. ~ A stiff tree will break. ~ So stiffness and power stay below. ~ Softness and suppleness stay above.

* * *

[76c41т] Tang Zi-chang ~ A living person is gentle and tender, while a dying person is rigid and hard. ~ A living plant is gentle and tender, while a dying plant is dry and withered. ~ Thus, one who is rigid and hard is on the way to die. ~ One who is gentle and tender is on the way to live. ~ Thus, a strong army will soon be annihilated. ~ A hard stick of wood will soon be broken. ~ A piece of hard leather will soon be split. ~ Teeth are stronger than lips, yet the teeth decay first. ~ Therefore, hardness and strength are inferior, gentleness and tenderness are superior.

[76c42т] Wing-tsit Chan ~ When man is born, he is tender and weak. ~ At death, he is stiff and hard. ~ All things, the grass as well as trees, are tender and supple while alive. ~ When dead, they are withered and dried. ~ Therefore the stiff and the hard are companions of death. ~ The tender and the weak are companions of life. ~ Therefore if the army is strong, it will not win. ~ If a tree is stiff, it will break. ~ The strong and the great are inferior, while the tender and the weak are superior.

[76c96т] Д. П. Конисси ~ Новорожденный младенец нежен и слаб. ~ Труп мертвеца крепок и не гибок. ~ Только что распустившееся растение нежно и слабо. ~ Засохшее растение твердо и не гибко. ~ Отсюда ясно, что нежное и слабое живет. ~ Сильное войско не победоносно. ~ Нельзя поломать связку прутьев. ~ Сильное находится внизу, а слабое - наверху.

[76c97т] В. В. Малявин ~ Человек, рождаясь, мягок и нежен. ~ Умирая, он тверд и напряжен. ~ Когда

все вещи, трава и деревья, живут, они мягки и гибки. ~ А умирают они сухими и жесткими. ~ Посему жестокость и напряженность - спутники смерти, ~ Мягкость и нежность - спутники жизни. ~ Вот почему, коли войско сильно, оно не победит. ~ А если дерево крепко, оно сломается. ~ Крепкое и большое будет внизу. ~ Мягкое и слабое будет вверху.

[76c98т] Б. Б. Виногродский ~ Человек в жизни - мягкость и слабость. ~ В его смерти - твердость и сила. ~ Из мириад сущностей травы и деревья в жизни - это мягкость и хрупкость. ~ В их смерти - сухость, крепость. ~ Причинность: ~ Твердость и сила - это попутчики смерти. ~ Мягкость и слабость - это попутчики жизни. ~ Это дает: ~ Сила оружия ведет к уничтожению. ~ Сила дерева ведет к перелому. ~ В сильном и большом находится ориентация вниз. ~ В мягком и слабом находится ориентация вверх.

[77c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ The Way of Heaven is like the flexing of a bow. ~ The high it presses down; the low it raises up. ~ From those with a surplus it takes away; to those without enough it adds on. ~ Therefore the Way of Heaven - ~ Is to reduce the excessive and increase the insufficient; ~ The Way of Man - ~ Is to reduce the insufficient and offer more to the excessive. ~ Now, who is able to have a surplus and use it to offer to Heaven? ~ Clearly, it's only the one who possesses the Way. ~ Therefore the Sage - ~ Takes actions but does not possess them; ~ Accomplishes his tasks but does not dwell on them. ~ Like this, is his desire not to make a display of his worthiness.

[77c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ PERHAPS the Way of Heaven may be likened to the stretching of a composite bow! ~ The upper part is depressed, while the lower is raised. ~ If the bow-string is too long, it is cut short: ~ if too short, it is added to. ~ The Way of Heaven diminishes the more-than-enough to supply the less-than-enough. ~ The way of man is different: ~ it takes from the less-than-enough to swell the more-than-enough. ~ Who except a man of the Tao can put his superabundant riches to the service of the world? ~ Therefore, the Sage does his work without setting any store by it, accomplishes his task without dwelling upon it. ~ He does not want his merits to be seen.

* * *

[77c03т] D. C. Lau ~ Is not the way of heaven like the stretching of a bow? ~ The high it presses down, ~ The low it lifts up; ~ The excessive it takes from, ~ The deficient it gives to. ~ It is the way of heaven to take from what has in excess in order to make good what is deficient. ~ The way of man is otherwise. It takes from those who are in want in order to offer this to those who already have more than enough. ~ Who is there that can take what he himself has in excess and offer this to the empire? ~ Only he who has the way. ~ Therefore the sage benefits them yet exacts no gratitude, ~ Accomplishes his task yet lays claim to no merit. ~ Is this not because he does not wish to be considered a better man than others?

[77c04т] R. L. Wing ~ The Tao in Nature ~ Is like a bow that is stretched. ~ The top is pulled down, ~ The bottom is raised up. ~ What is excessive is reduced, ~ What is insufficient is supplemented. ~ The Tao in Nature ~ Reduces the excessive ~ And supplements the insufficient. ~ The Tao in Man is not so; ~ He reduces the insufficient, ~ Because he serves the excessive. ~ Who then can use excess to serve the world? ~ Those who possess the Tao. ~ Therefore Evolved Individuals Act without expectation, ~ Succeed without taking credit, ~ And have no desire to display their excellence.

[77c05т] Ren Jiyu ~ Does not the Way (Tao) of Heaven resemble drawing a bow (and aiming an arrow at the target)? ~ When it is high, it will be brought down; ~ When it is low, it will be raised up; ~ When it is overfull, it will be diminished; ~ And when it is not full, it will be supplemented. ~ It is the Way of Heaven to diminish the excessive, so as to supplement the deficient. ~ This is not so with the Way of man - It takes away from those who have not enough so as to supply those who have superabundance. ~ Who can supply all the people under Heaven by diminishing the excessive? ~ Only the man who has "Tao." ~ Therefore the sage promotes all things, but does not think the effort as his own, ~ Achieves merit, but does not claim credit for himself, ~ And does not wish to parade his wisdom and ability.

* * *

[77c06т] Gia-fu Feng ~ The Tao of heaven is like the bending of a bow. ~ The high is lowered, and the low is raised. ~ If the string is too long, it is shortened; ~ If there is not enough, it is made longer. ~ The Tao of heaven is to take from those who have too much and give to those who do not have enough. ~ Man's way is different. ~ He takes from those who do not have enough to give to those who already have too much. ~ What man has more than enough and gives it to the world? ~ Only the man of Tao. ~ Therefore the sage works without recognition. ~ He achieves what has to be done without dwelling on it. ~ He does not try to show his knowledge.

[77c07т] Lok Sang Ho ~ The Dao of Heaven is like pulling a bow. ~ The top end comes down and the bottom end goes up. ~ It takes away from those with surplus to spare ~ and gives to those who are short. ~ The way of Heaven takes away from those with surplus to spare ~ and gives to those who are short. ~ The way of men is just the opposite. ~ It takes away from those who are short ~ and offers to those who have more than enough. ~ The Sage does his work but is not arrogant. ~ He accomplishes but will not dwell on his accomplishments. ~ He does not want to show off his accomplishments.

[77c08т] Xiaolin Yang ~ Isn't the law of heavens like using a bow and arrow? ~ When it is aimed too high, it is lowered; when it is aimed too low, it is raised; ~ When it is aimed too far, it is loosened; when it is aimed too close, it is tightened. ~ The law of the heavens is to reduce the wealthy and give to the needy. ~ But the law of present-day people is just the opposite: they take from the needy to give to the wealthy. ~ Who can contribute the surplus to the needy? ~ Only the people who follow the DAO. ~ So the great men do not do things for themselves and do not claim credit when things are accomplished. ~ They just do not want to show their goodness.

[77c09т] Walter Gorn Old, THE TAO OF HEAVEN ~ Like the bending of an archer's bow is the Tao of Heaven! ~ It brings down that which is high, and raises up that which is depressed. ~ It takes away where there is excess, and gives where there is deficiency. ~ The Tao of Heaven makes all things equal. ~ This Tao is not of man. ~ Man takes from the needy to add to his own excess. ~ Who is he that, having a superabundance, can bring it to the service of the world? ~ Only he who has the Tao. ~ This is why the wise man acts without expectation of reward, and completes his task without claiming merit. ~ For thus he hides his wealth.

[77c10т] James Legge ~ May not the Way (or Tao) of Heaven be compared to the (method of) bending a bow? ~ The (part of the bow) which was high is brought low, and what was low is raised up. ~ (So Heaven) diminishes where there is superabundance, and supplements where there is deficiency. ~ It is the Way of Heaven to diminish superabundance, and to supplement deficiency. ~ It is not so with the way of man. ~ He takes away from those who have not enough to add to his own superabundance. ~ Who can take his own superabundance and therewith serve all under heaven? ~ Only he who is in possession of the Tao! ~ Therefore the (ruling) sage acts without claiming the results as his; ~ he achieves his merit and does not rest (arrogantly) in it: ~ - he does not wish to display his superiority.

[77c11т] David Hinton ~ The Way of heaven is like a drawn bow pulling down the high and raising up the low: ~ it takes away where there's abundance and restores where there's want. ~ The Way of heaven takes away where there's abundance ~ and restores where there's want, ~ but the Way of humankind isn't like that: ~ it takes away where there's want ~ and gives where there's abundance. ~ Only a master of the Way can give abundance to all beneath heaven. ~ Such a sage acts without presumption and never dwells on success: ~ great worth has no need to be seen.

[77c12т] Chichung Huang ~ Heaven's Tao ~ Is like the fixing of a bowstring: ~ Too high, lower it; ~ Too low, lift it. ~ More than enough, reduce it; ~ Not enough, replenish it. ~ Therefore, heaven's Tao ~ Takes from those who have more than enough ~ To replenish those who do not have enough; ~ Man's way ~ Takes from those who do not have enough ~ To offer to those who have more than enough. ~ Who can, having more than enough, ~ Offer some to heaven? ~ Perhaps only those who possess the Tao. ~ Hence, the sage man ~ Helped without possessing, ~ Scored merits without claiming. ~ That is how ~ He did not wish to parade his worth.

[77c13т] Ellen M. Chen ~ The way of heaven, ~ Is it not like stretching a bow? ~ What is high up is pressed down, ~ What is low down is lifted up; ~ What has surplus (yu yŭ) is reduced, ~ What is deficient (pu tsu) is supplemented. ~ The way of heaven, ~ It reduces those who have surpluses, ~ To supplement those who are deficient. ~ The human way is just not so. ~ It reduces those who are deficient, ~ To offer those who have surpluses. ~ Who can offer his surpluses to the world? ~ Only a person of Tao. ~ Therefore the sage works (wei) without holding on to, ~ Accomplishes without claiming credit. ~ Is it not because he does not want to show off his merits?

* * *

[77c14т] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ Doesn't the heavenly (highest) Tao work like the way we adjust bow and arrow in archery for coordination? ~ When the arrow aimed too high, [the archer] lowered it; ~ When the arrow aimed too low, [the archer] raised it; ~ When the loop was too big, [the archer] tensed the bow; ~ When the loop was too small, [the archer] loosened the bow. ~ The heavenly Tao draws away from the affluent people to assist the people in need; ~ Whereas human's way (natural impulse), on the contrary, is to deprive the people in need to serve the affluent. ~ Who [on Earth] would give away extra possessions [that exceeds the needs of his diminutive physical self] for the cause of relieving [the needy] of the world? ~ Only people who quest for Tao would respond to this [noble] calling. ~ That is why I have said: ~ "A Sage helps [creatures] to survive without being possessive; ~ He accomplishes [good] deeds without claiming credits." ~ The reason is that a Sage does not seek the celebrity status as a sage [or saint] [he seeks but the substantial deeds of being a sage or saint].

[77c15т] Tien Cong Tran ~ Is the Way of Heaven similar to a stretched bow? ~ The upper part is pressed down, while the lower is raised. ~ The overfull part is reduced, the deficient part is supplemented. ~ The Way of Heaven is to reduce what is overfull and to supplement what is deficient. ~ The way of man is different: it reduces what is deficient and supplements what is overfull. ~ Who, except the man of the Way, can put his excessive riches to the service of the world? ~ Therefore, the sage does his work without saying it is done by him, accomplishes his task without dwelling upon it. ~ He does not want his merits to be seen.

[77c16т] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ Tao of Nature is like tensing the string of a bow. ~ The high parts of the string comes down, the low parts lift up. ~ If it is too long, then we cut out excessive part. ~ If it is too short, then we add some. ~ It is Tao of Nature that excessive part is reduced and insufficient part is supplemented. ~ But Tao of People is opposite. ~ The poor become poorer. ~ The rich become richer. ~ Only those who have Te can donate their surplus to the world. ~ This is why sages work but do not force their way, and succeed but do not glorify their merits. ~ It is their modesty that is wise.

[77c17т] Arthur Waley ~ Heaven's way is like the bending of a bow. ~ When a bow is bent the top comes down and the bottom-end comes up. ~ So too does Heaven take away from those who have too much, and give to those that have not enough. ~ But if it is Heaven's way to take from those who have too much and give to those who have not enough, this is far from being man's way. ~ He takes away from those that have not enough in order to make offering to those who already have too much. ~ One there is and one only, so rich that he can afford to make offerings to all under heaven. ~ Who is this? ~ It is the possessor of Tao. ~ If, then, the Sage 'though he controls does not lean, and when he has achieved his aim does not linger', it is because he does not wish to reveal himself as better than others.

* * *

[77c18т] Richard John Lynn ~ The Dao of Heaven, is it not like when a bow is pulled? ~ As the high end gets pulled down, the low end gets pulled up: so those who have more than enough are diminished, and those who have less than enough get augmented. ~ The Dao of Heaven diminishes those who have more than enough and augments those who have less than enough, but the Dao of man is not like this, ~ For it diminishes those who have less than enough in order to give to those who have more than enough. ~ Who can take his more than enough and give it to all under Heaven? ~ It is only one who has the Dao. ~ Thus it is that the sage acts, yet they [the people] do not depend on him, and he achieves success yet takes no pride in it, for he does not want to appear as a worthy [xian].

[77c19т] Lin Yutang ~ BENDING THE BOW ~ The Tao (way) of Heaven, ~ Is it not like the bending of a bow? ~ The top comes down and the bottom-end goes up, ~ The extra (length) is shortened, the insufficient (width) is expanded. ~ It is the Way of Heaven to take away from those that have too much ~ And give to those that have not enough. ~ Not so with man's way: ~ He takes away from those that have not ~ And gives it as tribute to those that have too much. ~ Who can have enough and to spare to give to the entire world? ~ Only the man of Tao. ~ Therefore the Sage acts, but does not possess, ~ Accomplishes but lays claim to no credit, ~ Because he has no wish to seem superior.

[77c20т] Victor H. Mair ~ The Way of heaven is like the bending of a bow - ~ the upper part is pressed down, ~ the lower part is raised up, ~ the part that has too much is reduced, ~ the part that has too little is increased. ~ Therefore, ~ The Way of heaven ~ reduces surplus to make up for scarcity; ~ The Way of man ~ reduces scarcity and pays tribute to surplus. ~ Who is there that can have a surplus and take from it to pay tribute to heaven? ~ Surely only one who has the Way! ~ For this reason, ~ The sage ~ acts but does not possess, ~ completes his work but does not dwell on it. ~ In this fashion, ~ he has no desire to display his worth.

[77c21т] Tolbert McCarroll ~ The way of heaven is like the bending of a bow. ~ The high end is pulled down and the low end is raised up. ~ The excessive is diminished and the deficient is supplemented. ~ It is the way of heaven to take where there is too much in order to give where there is not enough. ~ The way of people is otherwise. ~ They take where there is not enough in order to increase where there is already too much. ~ Who will take from their own excesses and give to all under heaven? ~ Only those who hold to the Tao. ~ Therefore, ~ the True Person ~ benefits yet expects no reward, ~ does the work and moves on. ~ There is no desire to be considered better than others.

[77c22т] David H. Li ~ The cosmos's Direction is like extending a bow. ~ Aiming too high, it lowers; ~ aiming too low, it raises. ~ From the excessive, it takes; ~ to the insufficient, it augments. ~ The cosmos's Direction is to take from the excessive and augment the insufficient. ~ This is not so for the direction in humans, which is to take from the insufficient to augment the excessive. ~ Who is willing to augment [the insufficient of] the world with excesses? ~ Only ones with Direction. ~ Thus, ~ a sage provides without expecting approbation, ~ accomplishes without seeking acclamation, ~ does without flaunting wisdom.

[77c23т] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ The Way of Heaven is like the bending of a bow. ~ The upper is lowered, while the lower is raised. ~ The too long is shortened, while the too short is lengthened. ~ The Way of Heaven is the way of balance: ~ Take from that which has more ~ and give to that which has less. ~ The way of man is different: ~ Take from those who have less ~ and give to those who have more. ~ Who is so abundant that he can continue to give to the world? ~ Only the man who embodies the Tao and is thus inexhaustible. ~ Therefore, the sage, being the fulcrum of the world, ~ Benefits his people without proclaiming it, ~ Accomplishes his task without dwelling on it, ~ Enlightens his world without flaunting his wisdom.

[77c24т] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ Is not the superior Tao like drawing a bow? ~ The high part moves downward, the low part moves upward, ~ What is full is reduced, what is insufficient is filled. ~ The superior Tao reduces the full, fills what is insufficient. ~ Man's Tao, in contrast, takes from the insufficient and gives to the full. ~ Who can take from the full and give to the insufficient? ~ Only he who has the Tao can. ~ Therefore, the sage does not hoard anything for himself. ~ The more he helps others, the more he obtains for himself. ~ The superior Tao does good, and never does evil, ~ The sage's Tao acts, but never hurts others.

[77c25т] Man-Ho Kwok ~ The Tao of Heaven is like the tensing of a bow: ~ - what is above is drawn down, ~ - and what's below is drawn up, ~ - what has plenty is drawn from and is given to what doesn't have enough. ~ The Heavenly Tao takes from those who have too much, ~ And it gives to those who have little or nothing. ~ Ah, but the human way is different. ~ Even the wealthiest leech the poor ~ So they can have even more. ~ What kind of person is it ~ Who has more than they need ~ And so gives it out, and gives it freely? ~ Only a being that is filled with the Tao.

[77c26т] Gu Zhengkun ~ Does not the Tao of heaven resemble the bending of a bow (aiming): ~ Pressing down the high, ~ Lifting up the low, ~ Reducing the excessive, ~ Compensating the deficient? ~ So the Tao of heaven means to compensate the deficient by reducing the excess. ~ The Tao of man is different: ~ It gives to one who already has more than enough by taking from one who is in want. ~ Who can offer what he has in excess to the people? ~ Only the man of Tao. ~ Thus the sage ~ Benefits all things without claiming to be their benefactor; ~ Succeeds without claiming credit; ~ Because he does not want to show off his wisdom.

[77c27т] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ Isn't the Tao of Heaven like stretching a bow? ~ When it is high, it presses down, ~ when it is low, it lifts up. ~ When it is surplus, it reduces. ~ When it is deficient, it increases. ~ The Tao of Mankind is the opposite: it reduces the deficiency in order to add to the surplus. ~ Only the one who has the Tao offers his surplus to others. ~ Therefore the sage benefits others, yet claims no gratitude, ~ accomplishes his task, yet assumes no merit. ~ It is only because he does not want to be considered as a virtuous person.

* * *

[77c28т] Liu Qixuan ~ The way of Heaven is like the opening of the bow, ~ Which flats the high, lifts the low, ~ Reduces the surplus, and compensates for losses. ~ The way of Heaven cuts the superfluous ~ To compensate the meager. ~ The way of Mankind cuts the meager ~ To add to the superfluous. ~ Who can have more than enough to provide for the world? ~ Only the ones who are good at keeping the Way. ~ Therefore, the wise person does but occupies nothing, ~ Achieves but does not feel successful, ~ Because he/she does not want to be praised as a sage.

[77c29т] Shi Fu Hwang ~ Bending The Bow ~ Lao Tze says, ~ May not the way of Heaven be compared to bending a bow? ~ The upper end is where Heaven presses down, and the bottom end is where Heaven lifts up. ~ So the extra length is shortened; ~ the insufficient width is expanded. ~ It is the way of Heaven to reduce from those that have too much, and increase to those that have not enough. ~ It is not so with the way of Man. ~ He takes away from those who have not enough to add to those that have too much. ~ Who can have too much and spare to give to the entire world? ~ Only he who is enlightened in the Tao. ~ Therefore the sage works without claiming his endeavor. ~ He achieves his task and does not rest arrogantly in it. ~ For he does not wish to display his superiority.

[77c30т] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ Is not the Tao of heaven like the drawing of a bow? ~ It brings down the part which is high; it raises the part which is low; it lessens the part which is redundant (convex); it fills up the part which is insufficient (concave). ~ The Tao of heaven is to lessen the redundant and fill up the insufficient. ~ The Tao of man, on the contrary, is to take from the insufficient and give to the redundant. ~ Who can take from the redundant and give to the insufficient? ~ Only he who has Tao can. ~ Therefore the Sage does not hoard. ~ The more he helps others, the more he benefits himself; the more he gives to others, the more he gets himself. ~ The Tao of heaven does one good but never does one harm; the Tao of the Sage acts but never contends.

[77c31т] Paul J. Lin ~ Perhaps the Tao of heaven resembles the drawing of a bow. ~ When it is high, lower it. ~ When low, raise it. ~ When excessive, diminish it. ~ When deficient, replenish it. ~ The Tao of heaven diminishes the excessive and replenishes the deficient. ~ The Tao of man is not so - while decreasing the deficient, it supplies the excessive. ~ Who can supply the world with overabundance? ~ Only the man with Tao. ~ Therefore the Sage acts without exalting his ability. ~ He achieves without dwelling upon it. ~ He does not want to display his superiority.

[77c32т] Michael LaFargue ~ Heaven's Way is like the stringing of a bow: ~ It pulls down what is high, ~ it lifts up what is low, ~ it takes away from what has an abundance, ~ to give to what has not enough. ~ Heaven's Way: ~ Take away from what has an abundance, ~ help along what has not enough. ~ People's way is not like this: ~ Take away from what has not enough, ~ to offer it to what has an abundance. ~ Who can have an abundance to offer the world? ~ Only the one who has Tao. ~ And so the Wise Person: ~ Works but does not rely on this, ~ achieves successes but does not dwell in them, ~ has no desire to show off his worth.

[77c33т] Cheng Lin ~ The way of Heaven is like the drawing of a bow! ~ The bulge is levelled; ~ the depression is raised; ~ the excess is diminished; ~ the deficiency is replenished. ~ The way of Heaven is to diminish excess, and replenish deficiency. ~ The way of man is the opposite. ~ He robs the poor to serve the rich. ~ Who can give all he has to serve the world? ~ Only the follower of Truth. ~ Thus the Sage gives without the wish for return; ~ he achieves without claiming credit. ~ Is this not because he wishes to conceal his worth?

[77c34т] Yi Wu ~ Is not the way of Heaven like the stringing of a bow? ~ The upper part is depressed, ~ The lower part is raised; ~ The too-long string is shortened, ~ The too-short string is added to. ~ The way of Heaven reduces excesses and makes-up deficiencies. ~ The path of man is not so; ~ It decreases the deficient to supply the excessive. ~ Who can have more to offer to the world? ~ Only the man with the Way. ~ Therefore, the sage acts without taking credit, ~ Achieves without attachment. ~ He does not want to display his worthiness.

[77c35т] Han Hiong Tan ~ The way of Dao operates like the art of archery. ~ When you aim too high, you have to adjust downwards. ~ When you aim too low, you have to adjust upwards. ~ If the tension is excessive, you lower it. ~ If the tension is inadequate, you augment it. ~ The way of Dao is to take from the excess and give it to the deficient. ~ In the human realm, it is totally different. ~ It is the case of robbing the poor and giving it to the rich. ~ Who would take from the haves and give it to the have-nots? ~ Only the people who follow the way of Dao would. ~ Therefore, the sage does things without ulterior motives. ~ When he accomplishes, he does not claim credit. ~ It is because he does not want to appear sagacious.

* * *

[77c36т] Hua-Ching Ni ~ The subtle Way of the universe: is it not expressed in the stretching of a bow? ~ The high it presses down. ~ The low it lifts up. ~ The excessive it takes from. ~ The deficient it gives to. ~ It is the nature of this subtle truth to take from what is excessive and give to what is deficient. ~ The way of man, however, is otherwise. ~ It takes from those in need to give to those who already have more than enough. ~ Only one of whole virtue always has something to give to others. ~ Therefore, one of whole virtue does things, but does not keep them for himself; ~ accomplishes his tasks, but does not cling to them. ~ He has no desire to trade his virtue for people's worship.

[77c37т] Chang Chung-yuan ~ The course of nature is similar to the curve of a bow: ~ That which is at the top is pulled down; ~ That which is at the bottom is brought up. ~ That which is overfull is reduced; ~ That which is deficient is supplemented. ~ The course of nature is to reduce what is overfull ~ And to supplement what is deficient. ~ The course of man is to reduce what is deficient ~ And to supplement what is overfull. ~ Who can supplement the overfull for the people of the world? ~ Only the man of Tao can do it. ~ Therefore, with the wise, work is done and no one depends on it. ~ Achievements are made, but no one claims credit. ~ Is he not free from wishing to show off his superiority?

[77c38т] Henry Wei ~ The Way of Heaven ~ T'ien Tao ~ The Way of Heaven, ~ Is it not like stretching the bow? ~ What is high is brought low; ~ What is low is pulled up; ~ What is superfluous is taken off; ~ What is deficient is strengthened. ~ The Way of Heaven takes from what has a surplus ~ To supply what has a deficit. ~ The way of men acts differently. ~ It takes from what has a deficit ~ To serve what has a surplus. ~ Who will use his surplus to serve the world? ~ Only the man who is possessed of Tao. ~ Thus the Sage acts but does not presume on the result; ~ He achieves success but does not claim any credit. ~ Doesn't this show that he dislikes showing off his worth?

[77c39т] Ha Poong Kim ~ The way of Heaven - ~ Isn't it like stretching a bow? ~ You press down the high, ~ Raise the low, ~ Take away the excess, ~ Add to the deficient. ~ The way of Heaven ~ Takes away from those who have too much and gives to those who have not enough. ~ The way of man ~ Is not so. ~ It takes away from those who have not enough and offers to those who have too much. ~ Who can have too much and offer to all under Heaven? ~ Only the man of Tao can. ~ Therefore the sage ~ Rules without depending on anyone. ~ His work is done, but he never dwells in it. ~ He does not wish to show his worthiness.

* * *

[77c40т] Tao Huang ~ The Tao of heaven is like drawing a bow. ~ The high bends down, ~ The low rises up. ~ The surplus decreases, ~ Insufficiency is supplied. ~ So the Tao of heaven reduces what is surplus and enhances what is insufficient. ~ The human Tao reduces what is insufficient and caters to the surplus. ~ Who can use the surplus to benefit the heaven? ~ Only those who possess Tao. ~ So the sage ~ Exists without ownership, ~ Accomplishes without holding on. ~ It is thus, without desire, that the wise see.

[77c41т] Tang Zi-chang ~ Is not the law of Nature like aiming with a bow? ~ It brings down the high and lifts up the low; ~ reduces the excessive, drawing strength; ~ and increases insufficient, drawing strength. ~ So that the law of Nature is to diminish the excess and supply the want. ~ But the way of Man is not so: ~ He robs the poor and serves the rich! ~ Who can give his excessive possessions to serve the world? ~ The man who possesses Dao. ~ Thus a Sage ruler provided everything but did not take anything. ~ He accomplished deeds but did not claim them. ~ That is, he did not display his sagacity.

* * *

[77c42т] Wing-tsit Chan ~ Heaven's Way is indeed like the bending of a bow. ~ When (the string) is high, bring it down. ~ When it is low, raise it up. ~ When it is excessive, reduce it. ~ When it is insufficient, supplement it. ~ The Way of Heaven reduces whatever is excessive and supplements whatever is insufficient. ~ The way of man is different. ~ It reduces the insufficient to offer to the excessive. ~ Who is able to have excess to offer to the world? ~ Only the man of Tao. ~ Therefore the sage acts, but does not rely on his own ability. ~ He accomplishes his task, but does not claim credit for it. ~ He has no desire to display his excellence.

[77c92т] А. А. Маслов ~ Разве не напоминает Путь Неба натягивание лука? ~ Что было вверху - опускается, а что было внизу - поднимается. ~ Что было в избытке - уменьшается, а что было в недостатке - дополняется. ~ В этом и заключается Путь Неба: уменьшать то, что в избытке, и дополнять то, что в недостатке. ~ Путь человека, увы, не таков. ~ Он уменьшает то, что и так в недостатке, и дополняет этим то, что и так в избытке. ~ Кто же может дополнить Поднебесную тем, чем он владеет в избытке? ~ Лишь тот, кто обладает Дао. ~ Именно так поступали мудрецы и не требовали воздаяния, достигали цели и не считали это заслугой. ~ Ибо они не хотели, чтобы их ставили выше других.

[77c93т] Е. А. Торчинов ~ Разве природа небесного Дао-Пути не похожа на натягивание лука? ~ Возвышающееся он опускает, опускающееся он возвышает, когда есть избыток, он отнимает его, когда есть недостаток, он восполняет его. ~ Небесный Дао-Путь отнимает, когда есть излишек, и дает, когда есть недостаток. ~ Но не таков путь людской, ибо он в том, чтобы отнять, когда и так недостаток, и прибавить, когда и так излишек. ~ Кто сможет при помощи излишка прибавить нечто в Поднебесной? ~ Только тот, кто обладает Дао-Путем. ~ Поэтому совершенномудрый действует, не замышляя преднамеренно. ~ Он обладает благими качествами и свойствами, но к ним не привязан. ~ И он нисколько не намерен смотреться перед миром как мудрец.

[77c94т] А. Е. Лукьянов ~ Небесное Дао подобно натягиванию лука: ~ верх в нем опускается, низ в нем поднимается, ~ излишек в нем сокращается, недостаток в нем восполняется. ~ Дао Неба сокращает излишек и восполняет недостаток. ~ Если же взять человеческое Дао, то здесь не так: ~ [оно] изымает, где недостаток, и отдает туда, где избыток. ~ Кто же может, имея избыток, отдать его Поднебесной? ~ Только тот, в ком [небесное] Дао. ~ Вот почему совершенномудрый человек воздействует и ни на что не опирается, ~ успешно завершает и не ставит себе это в заслугу. ~ Он не желает выглядеть мудрым (достойным).

прославляет. ~ Он благороден потому, что у него нет страстей.

[77c96т] Д. П. Конисси ~ Небесное Тао похоже на человека, натягивающего тетиву на лук: ~ высокий поднимает лук наверх, а низкий поднимает взор наверх. ~ Имеющий избыток потерпит потерю. ~ Страдающий недостатком будет иметь избыток. ~ Потому что небесное Тао всегда отнимает у изобилующих и отдает страдающим недостатком. ~ Человеческое Тао, впрочем, наоборот: оно отнимает от не имеющих и отдает изобилующим. ~ Поэтому кто посвящает свой избыток всему миру, тот имеет Тао. ~ Святой муж делает много, но не хвалится сделанным; ~ совершает заслуги, но не признает их, потому что он не желает обнаружить свою мудрость.

[77c97т] В. В. Малявин ~ Небесный Путь - это как натягивание на лук тетивы: ~ Верхний край надо опустить вниз, ~ Нижний край надо поднять вверх. ~ Если слишком длинно, укоротить, ~ Если слишком коротко, удлинить. ~ Так и Путь Небес: отнимает лишнее и прибавляет недостающее. ~ Путь же людей не таков: ~ Отнимают недостающее и добавляют к тому, что в избытке. ~ Кто способен, имея излишек, отдать его миру? ~ Только человек Пути. ~ Вот почему Премудрый человек ~ Действует - и не держится за сделанное, ~ Имеет успехи - и не привязан к ним, ~ И не имеет желания показывать свою мудрость.

[77c98т] Б. Б. Виногродский ~ В небесном Пути нет ли подобия натягиванию лука? ~ Высокое - оно придавливается. ~ Низкое - оно приподнимается. ~ При наличии излишка его убавляют. ~ При недостаточности его восполняют. ~ В небесном Пути убавляют наличие излишка и восполняют не-достаточность. ~ Кто способен наличие излишка отдавать Поднебесной? ~ Только тот, у кого в наличии Путь. ~ Это дает: ~ Человек мудрости в осуществлении не отождествляется, ~ совершив дело, не пребывает в нем. ~ Нет у него стремления проявить умелость.

[78c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ In the whole world, nothing is softer and weaker than water. ~ {And yet for attacking} the hard and strong, nothing can {beat} it, ~ Because there is nothing you can use to replace it. ~ That water can defeat the unyielding - ~ That the weak can defeat the strong - ~ There is no one in the whole world who doesn't know it, ~ And yet {there is no one who can} put {it} into practice. ~ For this reason, the words of the Sage say: ~ To take on yourself the disgrace of the state - this is called being the lord of [the altars of] earth and grain; ~ To assume responsibility for all ill-omened events in the state - this is called being the king of the world. ~ Correct words seem to say the reverse [of what you expect them to say].

[78c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ NOTHING in the world is softer and weaker than water; ~ But, for attacking the hard and strong, there is nothing like it! ~ For nothing can take its place. ~ That the weak overcomes the strong, and the soft overcomes the hard, ~ This is something known by all, but practised by none. ~ Therefore, the Sage says: ~ To receive the dirt of a country is to be the lord of its soil-shrines. ~ To bear the calamities of a country is to be the prince of the world. ~ Indeed, Truth sounds like its opposite!

[78c03т] D. C. Lau ~ In the world there is nothing more submissive and weak than water. ~ Yet for attacking that which is hard and strong nothing can surpass it. ~ This is because there is nothing that can take its place. ~ That the weak overcomes the strong, ~ And the submissive overcomes the hard, ~ Everyone in the world knows yet no one can put this knowledge into practice. ~ Therefore the sage says, ~ One who takes on himself the humiliation of the state ~ Is called a ruler worthy of offering sacrifices to the gods of earth and millet; ~ One who takes on himself the calamity of the state ~ Is called a king worthy of dominion over the entire empire. ~ Straightforward words seem paradoxical.

[78c04т] R. L. Wing ~ Nothing in the world, ~ Is as yielding and receptive as water; ~ Yet in attacking the firm and inflexible, ~ Nothing triumphs so well. ~ Because of what it is not, ~ This becomes easy. ~ The receptive triumphs over the inflexible; ~ The yielding triumphs over the rigid. ~ None in the world do not know this. ~ None have the ability to practice it. ~ Therefore Evolved Individuals say: ~ One who accepts the disgrace of the organization ~ Can be called the leader of the grain shrine. ~ One who accepts the misfortunes of the organization ~ Can be called the leader of the world. ~ Right words appear to reverse themselves.

[78c05т] Ren Jiyu ~ Nothing under Heaven is softer and weaker than water, ~ But in attacking the hard and strong, no force can compare with it, ~ For nothing can take its place. ~ The reason why the weak can overcome the strong and the soft can overcome the hard is known to all the people under Heaven, ~ But none would follow and practise it. ~ Therefore the sage said: ~ He who bears humiliation of the whole state can be the sovereign of the country. ~ He who bears the disaster of the whole state can be the king of all under Heaven. ~ Positive words seem to be negative.

[78c06т] Gia-fu Feng ~ Under heaven nothing is more soft and yielding than water. ~ Yet for attacking the solid and strong, nothing is better; ~ It has no equal. ~ The weak can overcome the strong; ~ The supple can overcome the stiff. ~ Under heaven everyone knows this, ~ Yet no one puts it into practice. ~ Therefore the sage says: ~ He who takes upon himself the humiliation of the people is fit to rule them. ~ He who takes upon himself the country's disasters deserves to be king of the universe. ~ The truth often sounds paradoxical.

[78c07т] Lok Sang Ho ~ Nothing under heaven is weaker than water. ~ Yet nothing however proficient in attacking the strong can win over water. ~ The reason is that nothing can lay a handle on water. ~ The weak overcomes the strong; ~ The soft overcomes the hard. ~ All under heaven know about this dictum ~ but few people can put it into practice. ~ That is why the Sage says: ~ "Those who take what other people discard as garbage ~ is the lord of Society. ~ Those who love the nation when it is in the grip of misfortune ~ can claim to be the king." ~ What is right often seems to be wrong.

[78c08т] Xiaolin Yang ~ Nothing in this world is softer than water; ~ However, nothing in this world is more powerful than water in breaking the hardest things, ~ And nothing in this world can replace water. ~ Everyone knows this, but no one acts according to it. ~ So, the great men said: ~ "Those who can share the humiliation of the country can be the masters of the country; ~ Those who can share the disasters of the country can be the rulers of the country." ~ These truthful words sound like nonsense to present-day people.

[78c09т] Walter Gorn Old, ACCEPTING THE TRUTH ~ Nothing on earth is so weak and yielding as water, but for breaking down the firm and strong it has no equal. ~ This admits of no alternative. ~ All the world knows that the soft can wear away the hard, and the weak can conquer the strong; but none can carry it out in practice. ~ Therefore the Sage says: He who bears the reproach of his country is really the lord of the land. He who bears the woes of the people is in truth their king. ~ The words of truth are always paradoxical!

[78c10т] James Legge ~ There is nothing in the world more soft and weak than water, and yet for attacking things that are firm and strong there is nothing that can take precedence of it; ~ - for there is nothing (so effectual) for which it can be changed. ~ Every one in the world knows that the soft overcomes the hard, and the weak the strong, but no one is able to carry it out in practice. ~ Therefore a sage has said, ~ 'He who accepts his state's reproach, ~ Is hailed therefore its altars' lord; ~ To him who bears men's direful woes ~ They all the name of King accord.' ~ Words that are strictly true seem to be paradoxical.

[78c11т] David Hinton ~ Nothing in all beneath heaven is so soft and weak as water. ~ And yet, for conquering the hard and strong, nothing succeeds like water. ~ And nothing can change it: ~ weak overcoming strong, ~ soft overcoming hard. ~ Everything throughout all beneath heaven knows this, ~ and yet nothing puts it into practice. ~ That's why the sage said: ~ Whoever assumes a nation's disgrace is called the sacred leader of a country, ~ and whoever assumes a nation's misfortune is called the emperor of all beneath heaven. ~ Words of clarity sound confused.

[78c12т] Chichung Huang ~ Nothing under heaven is softer and weaker than water, ~ Yet, in attacking the hard and strong, ~ Nothing can surpass it, ~ Because nothing can replace it. ~ That the soft overcome the hard, ~ And the weak overcome the strong - ~ None under heaven does not know it, ~ Yet none can practice it. ~ Hence, the sage man's saying goes: ~ "He who bears the state's humiliations ~ Is called lord of the land; ~ He who bears the state's calamities ~ Is called king of the empire." ~ A positive statement sounds paradoxical.

[78c13т] Ellen M. Chen ~ Nothing under heaven ~ Is softer (jou) and weaker (jo) than water, ~ Yet nothing can compare with it ~ In attacking the hard (chien) and strong (ch'iang). ~ Nothing can change (i) place with it. ~ That the weak overcomes the strong, ~ And the soft overcomes the hard, ~ No one under heaven does not know (chih), ~ Though none can put it into practice. ~ Therefore a sage said: ~ "One who receives the filth of a state, ~ Is called the Master of the Altar of the Soil and Grain; ~ One who shoulders the evils of a state, ~ Becomes the king under heaven." ~ Straightforward words (yen) appear to be their reverse.

[78c14т] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ The most flexible and weak (pliable) thing on Earth is water; ~ But, when it comes to the feat of overpowering hardness, I have not come across anything better than it; ~ Nothing whatsoever can substitute it for its strength. ~ [The above stated fact demonstrates that] the weak (pliable) ones can win over the strong ones, and the flexible (adaptable) ones can conquer the rigid (steely) ones; ~ [Nevertheless] this principle is difficult [for ordinary people] in the world to comprehend and utilize. ~ Accordingly a Sage once said: ~ "The person who could bear the insult for the sake of a state is the one who mostly deserved to be the lord of the people; ~ The person who could endure the misfortune for the sake of a country is the most qualified one to be the king of the world." ~ This straight talk does appear antithetical [to the established belief]!

[78c15т] Tien Cong Tran ~ Nothing in the world is softer and weaker than water; but, for attacking the hard and strong, there is nothing like it! ~ For nothing can take its place. ~ The weak overcomes the strong, and the soft overcomes the hard. ~ This is something known by all, but practiced by none. ~ Therefore, the sage says: To receive the blame of a country is to be the lord of its soil-shrines. ~ To bear the calamities of a country is to be the king of the world. ~ Indeed, the truth sounds like its opposite!

[78c16т] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ Nothing in the world is more flexible and adaptable than water. ~ Yet, when conquering the hard and strong, nothing is better. ~ This is because water does not have definite shape. ~ The yielding wins over the strong. ~ Flexibility wins over rigidity. ~ Everybody understands this. ~ But few practice it. ~ Therefore the sage says: ~ "Those, who can endure disgrace for their kingdom, can be the head of the kingdom; ~ Those, who can accept misfortune for their kingdom, can be Emperor of the world." ~ These logical words appear to be controversial.

* * *

[78c17т] Arthur Waley ~ Nothing under heaven is softer or more yielding than water; but when it attacks things hard and resistant there is not one of them that can prevail. ~ For they can find no way of altering it. ~ That the yielding conquers the resistant and the soft conquers the hard is a fact known by all men, yet utilized by none. ~ Yet it is in reference to this that the Sage said ~ 'Only he who has accepted the dirt of the country can be lord of its soil-shrines; only he who takes upon himself the evils of the country can become a king among those what dwell under heaven.' ~ Straight words seem crooked.

[78c18т] Richard John Lynn ~ Of all under Heaven, nothing is more soft and pliable than water, yet for attacking the hard and stiff, nothing can beat it, so it is impossible to take its place. ~ That the soft conquers the stiff and the pliable conquers the hard, none among all under Heaven fails to know, yet none can practice it. ~ Therefore, according to what the sage says, he who sustains disgrace on behalf of the state is referred to as the master of altars dedicated to the soil and grain [its rightful ruler], and he who sustains misfortune on behalf of the state is referred to as a sovereign for all under Heaven. ~ These are true words that seem false.

[78c19т] Lin Yutang ~ NOTHING WEAKER THAN WATER ~ There is nothing weaker than water ~ But none is superior to it in overcoming the hard, ~ For which there is no substitute. ~ That weakness overcomes strength ~ And gentleness overcomes rigidity, ~ No one does not know; ~ No one can put into practice. ~ Therefore the Sage says: ~ "Who receives unto himself the calumny of the world ~ Is the preserver of the state. ~ Who bears himself the sins of the world ~ Is the king of the world." ~ Straight words seem crooked.

[78c20т] Victor H. Mair ~ Nothing under heaven is softer or weaker than water, ~ and yet nothing is better for attacking what is hard and strong, ~ because of its immutability. ~ The defeat of the hard by the soft, ~ The defeat of the strong by the weak - ~ this is known to all under heaven, yet no one is able to practice it. ~ Therefore, ~ in the words of the sage, it is said: ~ "He who bears abuse directed against the state is called 'lord of the altars for the gods of soil and grain'; ~ He who bears the misfortunes of the state is called the 'king of all under heaven.'" ~ True words seem contradictory.

* * *

[78c21т] Tolbert McCarroll ~ Nothing under heaven is softer or more yielding than water. ~ Yet it has no equal for attacking things that are hard and stiff. ~ Nothing can withstand it. ~ Everyone knows that the yielding overcomes the stiff, ~ and the soft overcomes the hard. ~ Yet no one applies this knowledge. ~ Therefore, an Old One said: ~ Only a person who has accepted the country's dirt is a leader worthy to offer sacrifice at its shrines of earth and grain. ~ Only a person who takes up the country's burdens deserves to be a leader among those who dwell under heaven. ~ Straightforward words seem crooked.

[78c22т] David H. Li ~ In the world, nothing is softer and weaker than water, yet, in combating the strong, nothing can win over it. ~ There is nothing to replace it. ~ The weak wins over the strong; the tender wins over the steely. ~ No one in the world is unaware of it, yet no one follows it. ~ Thus, the sage says: ~ "One accepting a state's disgrace is worthy of being her governor; ~ one accepting the state's misfortunes is worthy of being the king to the world." ~ Rightful words appear paradoxical.

[78c23т] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ Nothing under heaven is as soft and yielding as water. ~ Yet, for attacking the hard and strong, ~ Nothing is better and nothing is like it. ~ The yielding overcomes the unyielding; ~ the soft overcomes the hard. ~ Everyone under heaven knows this, ~ yet no one puts it into practice. ~ Therefore, the sage says: ~ He who absorbs as does water the detritus of the people ~ is the worthy master of the nation. ~ He who flows as does water with the tides of the troubled land ~ is the worthy king of the nation. ~ Truth seems often paradoxical and against common sense.

[78c24т] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ The weakest thing in the world can overcome the strongest thing in the world. ~ Nothing in the world can compare with the weakness of water, whose nature is limp and submissive, ~ But when it attacks the hardest and strongest of all, there is nothing more efficient, ~ Since there is no alternative to it. ~ The weak can overcome the strong, and the soft can conquer the tough: ~ The whole world knows that, but does not abide by it. ~ Therefore the sage says: ~ The person who bears all the disgrace of the country can be the master of the land, ~ The person who bears all the troubles of the country can be the king of the world. ~ These are words of truth, ~ Even though they sound like nothing more than a paradox.

* * *

[78c25т] Man-Ho Kwok ~ Nothing in the world is softer than water ... ~ - but we know it can wear away the hardest of things. ~ The supple overcomes the hard, ~ And the so-called weak, the strong. ~ People know this, but no one quite believes it. ~ The sage always shoulders the blame, and the grief ~ - that is why he is fit to rule. ~ He takes on his nation like a world as if it was the world ~ - and so it is. ~ And the truth is that the truth is often a paradox ...

* * *

[78c26т] Gu Zhengkun ~ Nothing in the world is more supple than water, ~ Yet nothing is more powerful than water in attacking the hard and strong. ~ Why? ~ Because nothing can take its place. ~ Everyone in the world knows ~ That the weak is more powerful than the strong, ~ That the supple is more rigid than the hard, ~ Yet no one so far can put the knowledge into practice. ~ That is why the sage says, ~ Only he who can bear the humiliation on behalf of the state ~ Can be called the great priest of the state; ~ Only he who dare shoulder the responsibility for the calamity of the state ~ Can be called the king of the state. ~ Factual words seem ironical.

[78c27т] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ There is nothing under Heaven softer and weaker than water, ~ yet to attack the hard and the strong nothing can surpass it, nothing can take its place. ~ That is why the soft overcomes the hard, the weak surpasses the strong. ~ Everyone knows this, yet no one is able to practise it. ~ Therefore the sage says: ~ He who can take upon himself the humiliation and insults inflicted on the country is called the king of a state. ~ He who can take upon himself the bad luck suffered by the country is called the emperor of the land under Heaven. ~ Straightforward words often seem contrary.

[78c28т] Liu Qixuan ~ Nothing is softer and weaker ~ And, at the same time, stronger, than water ~ While it is attacking the strong and hard in the world. ~ Only water can keep being the weakest steadfastly. ~ All the world knows the weak defeats the strong ~ And the soft defeats the hard, ~ But none can be courageous enough to do it. ~ Therefore, the wise person says: ~ "One who bears the worst disgrace ~ Is the glorious lord of a land; ~ One who suffers the worst disaster ~ Is the greatest savior of a nation." ~ The most truthful words always seem the most absurd.

[78c29т] Shi Fu Hwang ~ Nothing Weaker Than Water ~ Lao Tze says, ~ There is nothing in the world softer and weaker than water, ~ and yet for attacking things that are hard and strong, there is nothing that can surpass it. ~ For there is nothing so effectual that can take its place. ~ Every one in the world knows that the soft overcomes the hard, ~ and the weak the strong, yet no one can put this knowledge into practice. ~ Therefore a sage has said, ~ 'He who receives unto himself the calumny of the nation entitles himself to the lordship of the state; ~ he who bears the nation's direful woes shall be looked up to as the king of the world.' ~ Words that are strictly true seem to be opposed to common senses.

[78c30т] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ The weakest things in the world can overmatch the strongest things in the world. ~ Nothing in the world can be compared to water for its weak and yielding nature; yet in attacking the hard and the strong nothing proves better than it. ~ For there is no other alternative to it. ~ The weak can overcome the strong and the yielding can overcome the hard: ~ This all the world knows but does not practise. ~ Therefore the Sage says: ~ He who sustains all the reproaches of the country can be the master of the land; ~ He who sustains all the calamities of the country can be the king of the world. ~ These are words of truth, ~ Though they seem paradoxical.

[78c31т] Paul J. Lin ~ Nothing in the world is softer and weaker than water. ~ Yet, in attacking the hard and strong, nothing can surpass it. ~ Because nothing can exchange places with it, ~ Use weakness to overcome strength, ~ Use softness to overcome hardness. ~ None in the world do not know this. ~ But none can practice it. ~ Therefore the Sage says: ~ To suffer dishonor for the state ~ is to be the lord of the community; ~ To bear the calamity of the state ~ is to be the king of the world. ~ True words seem paradoxical.

[78c32т] Michael LaFargue ~ Nothing in the world is Softer or Weaker than water. ~ But when it attacks what is hard and strong, ~ none of them can win out, ~ because they have no way of affecting it. ~ Softness overcomes what is hard, ~ Weakness overcomes what is unyielding. ~ Everyone in the world understands it, ~ no one can practice it. ~ And so the Wise Person says: ~ Taking on a state's dirt makes one lord of its earth altars, ~ taking on a state's misfortunes makes one King of the world. ~ Right words seem the opposite.

* * *

[78c33т] Cheng Lin ~ There is nothing in this world more supple and pliant than water. ~ Yet even the most hard and stiff cannot overcome it. ~ This is an irrefutable truism. ~ That the meek can overcome the strong, just as the supple can overcome the hard, is known to all people. ~ Only they fail to practise it. ~ A Sage once said: ~ "He who can suffer humiliation for the sake of his country is qualified to rule over a State. ~ He who can suffer calamities for the sake of his country is qualified to rule over an Empire."

* * *

[78c34т] Yi Wu ~ Nothing in the world is softer or weaker than water, ~ But those who attack the hard and strong cannot conquer it, ~ Because nothing can change it. ~ The weak wins over the strong, ~ The soft wins over the tough. ~ Everyone in the world knows this, ~ But no one can practice it. ~ Therefore, the sage says, ~ To accept the state's sordid aspects is to be the lord of the state. ~ To accept the state's ill omens is to be the king of the world. ~ True words sound like their opposite.

* * *

[78c35т] Han Hiong Tan ~ Nothing in the world is softer and more yielding than water. ~ Nevertheless, among all things that can overcome the hard and strong, ~ None is more formidable than water and none can supplant it. ~ Everybody knows that the soft can overcome the hard, ~ And the weak can subdue the strong, ~ But few can put these into practice. ~ The ancient sage once said: ~ "A person who can withstand all the nation's insults, ~ Is fit to be the ruler. ~ A person who can endure all the misfortunes of the nation, ~ Is fit to be the king of the world." ~ Here lies the paradox: truthful words that are candid and self-evident may appear to be "trash talk".

* * *

[78c36т] Hua-Ching Ni ~ Nothing in the world is softer or more yielding than water. ~ But, for wearing down the hard and strong, ~ there is nothing like it. ~ That yielding overcomes the strong and softness overcomes the hard is something that is known by all, ~ but is practiced by few. ~ An ancient developed one said: ~ "He who can take the troubles of the people of the world is qualified to rule the world. ~ He who can tend to calamities for the sake of all beings is the right person to be the sovereign of the world." ~ Indeed, truth seems paradoxical!

[78c37т] Chang Chung-yuan ~ Water is the softest and meekest thing in the world, ~ Yet it is best able to overcome that which is strong and solid. ~ This is the truth and cannot be changed. ~ "The meek suppresses the solid, the soft suppresses the strong." ~ All the people in the world know this, ~ Yet they cannot apply it to their lives. ~ Therefore, the wise says: ~ "Those who can accept the blame for the entire nation ~ Will be the leaders of the nation. ~ Those who can endure the evil omens of the world ~ Will be the kings of the world." ~ Right expression is similar to its reversal.

[78c38т] Henry Wei ~ Trust in Faith ~ Ren Hsin ~ Nothing in the world ~ Surpasses water in softness and weakness; ~ Yet among things that attack the hard and strong, ~ None can do a better job than water. ~ Nothing can serve as its substitute. ~ Therefore the weak overcomes the strong; ~ The soft overcomes the hard. ~ Few in the world do not know this; ~ Yet nobody is able to put it into practice. ~ Therefore the Sage says: ~ He who bears the blame for the ignominy of his country ~ Can be called lord of the state; ~ He who bears the blame for the misfortune of his country ~ Can become king of the world. ~ Statements of the truth seem paradoxical.

[78c39т] Ha Poong Kim ~ Nothing under Heaven is softer and weaker than water. ~ Yet in attacking what is hard and strong ~ Nothing can surpass water, ~ Because nothing can destroy it. ~ That the weak prevails over the strong, ~ That the soft prevails over the hard - ~ This everyone under Heaven knows, ~ Yet none can practice it. ~ Therefore the sage says: ~ "He who takes on himself the shame of the state ~ Is called lord of the land; ~ He who takes on himself the misfortune of the state ~ Is called king of all under Heaven." ~ True words sound contrary.

[78c40т] Tao Huang ~ Nothing in the world is softer and more supple than water. ~ When confronting strength and hardness nothing can overcome it. ~ Using nothing simplifies. ~ Using water overcomes hardness. ~ Using weakness overcomes strength. ~ There is no one in the world who does not know it, but no one can apply it. ~ So it is a saying of sages that: ~ Whoever can bear the disgrace of the country is the ruler of the country. ~ Whoever can bear the misfortune of the world is the ruler of the world. ~ Truthful speech seems paradoxical.

* * *

[78c41т] Tang Zi-chang ~ Under heaven, there is nothing as soft as water, yet it can penetrate the hard; ~ while the strong things cannot overcome it. ~ Be not easy-going! ~ Thus, weakness overcomes strength and softness overcomes hardness. ~ Very few people in the world can understand and follow it. ~ Therefore, the Sage rulers said: ~ "One whose capacity can sustain blame from the whole kingdom, can be the ruler of the kingdom. ~ One whose capacity can bear the calamities of the world, can be the ruler of world." ~ Positive advice may use the opposite way.

* * *

[78c42т] Wing-tsit Chan ~ There is nothing softer and weaker than water, ~ And yet there is nothing better for attacking hard and strong things. ~ For this reason there is no substitute for it. ~ All the world knows that the weak overcomes the strong and the soft overcomes the hard. ~ But none can practice it. ~ Therefore the sage says: ~ He who suffers disgrace for his country ~ Is called the lord of the land. ~ He who takes upon himself the country's misfortunes ~ Becomes the king of the empire. ~ Straight words seem to be their opposite.

* * *

[78c92т] А. А. Маслов ~ В Поднебесной нет ничего податливее и слабее воды. ~ Но в противостоянии твёрдому и сильному ничто не сравнится с ней. ~ И в использовании ничто не может заменить её. ~ Слабое одолеет сильное, податливое одолеет твёрдое. ~ Нет в Поднебесной того, кто не знал бы об этом. ~ Но нет и того, кто мог бы следовать этому. ~ Именно об этом и говорили мудрецы: ~ "Принимающий на себя скверну государства, зовётся правителем алтарей и амбаров. ~ Принимающий на себя беды страны, зовётся властителем Поднебесной". ~ Истинные слова похожи на свою противоположность.

[78c93т] Е. А. Торчинов ~ По мягкости и слабости своей ничто в Поднебесной не может воду превзойти. ~ Но ничто не может также превзойти ее по способности атаковать и побеждать то, что сильно и крепко. ~ И тут ничто не сможет заменить ее. ~ Слабое побеждает сильное, мягкое побеждает твердое. ~ И нет никого в Поднебесной, кто не мог бы этого понять, кто не мог бы этому следовать. ~ Поэтому совершенномудрый говорит: ~ "Кто принимает на себя всю скверну Поднебесной, становится владыкой над храмами зерна и предков. ~ Кто принимает на себя невзгоды Поднебесной, тот становится царем всей Поднебесной". ~ Правильные слова подобны их противоположности.

[78c94т] А. Е. Лукьянов ~ В Поднебесной нет ничего мягче и слабее воды. ~ Но ничто из устойчивого, крепкого и сильного не может победить ее. ~ Согласно этому нет ничего, что могло бы изменить следующее: ~ "Слабое побеждает сильное, мягкое побеждает твердое". ~ В Поднебесной нет таких, кто не знал бы этого, но нет и таких, кто мог бы последовать этому. ~ Вот почему совершенномудрые люди говорят: ~ "Тот, кто принял на себя позор царства, ~ становится главой страны и трона (земли и злаков). ~ Тот, кто принял на себя беды царства, ~ становится ваном Поднебесной". ~ Истинное высказывание подобно парадоксу.

[78c95т] Ян Хин-шун ~ Вода - это самое мягкое и самое слабое существо в мире, но в преодолении твердого и крепкого она непобедима, и на свете нет ей равного. ~ Слабые побеждают сильных, мягкое преодолевает твердое. ~ Это знают все, но люди не могут это осуществлять. ~ Поэтому совершенномудрый говорит: ~ "Кто принял на себя унижение страны - становится государем, ~ и, кто принял на себя несчастье страны - становится властителем". ~ Правдивые слова похожи на свою противоположность.

* * *

* * *

[78c97т] В. В. Малявин ~ В целом мире нет ничего мягче и слабее воды, ~ Но вода лучше всего побеждает то, что прочно и твердо, ~ Ибо ничто не может ее изменить. ~ То, что слабое одолеет сильное, а мягкое - твердое, ~ Знает весь мир, а исполнить никто не может. ~ Вот почему премудрые люди говорили: ~ Кто берет на себя грязь царства, ~ Может быть господином его алтарей. ~ Кто берет на себя несчастья царства, ~ Может быть повелителем мира. ~ В прямых речах все говорится словно наоборот.

[78c98т] Б. Б. Виногродский ~ В Поднебесной нет ничего мягче и слабее воды. ~ Но при столкновении с твердостью и силой никто не способен ее победить. ~ Посредством отсутствия в

себе, посредством переменчивости. ~ Через слабость побеждают силу. ~ Через мягкость побеждают твердость. ~ В Поднебесной нет никого, кто не знает. ~ Нет никого, кто способен сделать. ~ Это дает: ~ Человек мудрости говорит: ~ Принимаешь на себя грязь государства. ~ Это определяется: ~ Хозяин главного алтаря. ~ Принимаешь на себя недобрые знамения в государстве. ~ Это определяется: ~ Правитель Поднебесной. ~ Правильность речи отталкивается от обратного.

[79c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ To make peace where there has been great resentment, there is bound to be resentment left over. ~ How could this be regarded as good? ~ Therefore the Sage [holds] the right tally yet makes no demands of others. ~ For this reason, those who have virtue are in charge of the tally; ~ Those without virtue are in charge of the taxes. ~ The Way of Heaven has no favorites, ~ It's always with the good man.

[79c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ WHEN a great wound is healed, ~ There will still remain a scar. ~ Can this be a desirable state of affairs? ~ Therefore, the Sage, holding the left-hand tally, ~ Performs his part of the covenant, ~ But lays no claims upon others. ~ The virtuous attends to his duties; ~ The virtueless knows only to levy duties upon the people. ~ The Way of Heaven has no private affections, ~ But always accords with the good.

* * *

[79c04т] R. L. Wing ~ Even when a great resentment is reconciled, ~ Some resentment must linger. ~ How can this be made good? ~ That is why Evolved Individuals ~ Hold the left side of the contract ~ And do not censure others. ~ Those with Power are in charge of the contract; ~ Those without Power are in charge of resolving it. ~ The Tao in Nature has no favorites. ~ It always works through the good person.

* * *

[79c05т] Ren Jiyu ~ When an attempt has been made to reconcile two sides in great enmity, and there is surely some enmity remaining, ~ How can this be a good thing? ~ So, although the sage holds the counterfoil of receipt, ~ He does not force the debtor to pay back. ~ The moral man is as calm and unhurried as a bookkeeper is, ~ And the immoral man is as calculating as a rent collector is (while he is collecting the rent). ~ The Tao of Heaven has no partiality for any person, and always helps the good man.

[79c06т] Gia-fu Feng ~ After a bitter quarrel, some resentment must remain. ~ What can one do about it? ~ Therefore the sage keeps his half of the bargain ~ But does not exact his due. ~ A man of Virtue performs his part, ~ But a man without Virtue requires others to fulfill their obligations. ~ The Tao of heaven is impartial. ~ It stays with good men all the time.

[79c07т] Lok Sang Ho ~ Trying to neutralize a wrong with another wrong will never work, ~ because there is bound to be some wrong left over. ~ To return grievance or wrong with benevolence is ~ the way to absolve a grievance. ~ The Sage only sees to it that what is agreed is carried out; ~ He will not lay the blame on anyone. ~ The virtuous one only enforces contracts. ~ The non-virtuous one imposes his will. ~ The Way of Heaven will not favor any one in particular, ~ But it will favor those who do good deeds.

* * *

[79c08т] Xiaolin Yang ~ If you have a big feud, no matter how much you make peace, the resentment still lingers. ~ How can this make you a nice person? ~ Therefore, the great men did not push and harass people. ~ Those who have DE do not harass people; those who do not have DE always push and harass people. ~ The law of the heavens does not practice nepotism; it gives the benefit to the nice people.

* * *

[79c09т] Walter Gorn Old, KEEPING ONE'S BOND ~ When a compromise is effected after a long dispute, one of the parties retains a grudge: how can this be called a good settlement? ~ Therefore the wise man takes his part of the bond, and does not insist upon having the other. ~ The virtuous man attends only to his engagements in the bond, while the man without virtue contrives for his own advantage. ~ The Tao of Heaven has no favourites; it always aids the good man.

* * *

[79c10т] James Legge ~ When a reconciliation is effected (between two parties) after a great animosity, there is sure to be a grudge remaining (in the mind of the one who was wrong). ~ And how can this be beneficial (to the other)? ~ Therefore (to guard against this), the sage keeps the left-hand portion of the record of the engagement, and does not insist on the (speedy) fulfilment of it by the other party. ~ (So), he who has the attributes (of the Tao) regards (only) the conditions of the engagement, while he who has not those attributes regards only the conditions favourable to himself. ~ In the Way of Heaven, there is no partiality of love; ~ it is always on the side of the good man.

[79c11т] David Hinton ~ You can resolve great rancor, but rancor always lingers on. ~ Understanding the more noble way, ~ a sage holds the creditor's half of contracts ~ and yet asks nothing of others. ~ Those with Integrity tend to such contracts; ~ those without Integrity tend to the collection of taxes. ~ The Way of heaven is indifferent, always abiding with people of nobility.

* * *

[79c12т] Chichung Huang ~ In pacifying a great enmity, ~ There must be some remnant enmity. ~ How could that be considered good? ~ Hence, the sage man ~ Held the left half of the deed ~ Without demanding payment from the people. ~ Therefore, those who possess virtue administer deeds; ~ Those who possess no virtue administer tithing. ~ Heaven's Tao is unbiased; ~ It always supports good men.

* * *

[79c13т] Ellen M. Chen ~ In reconciling a great injury (yüan), ~ There is sure to have some injury left. ~ How can this be good? ~ Therefore the sage holds the left tally, ~ He does not blame others. ~ One who has te is in charge of the tally, ~ One who has no te is in charge of the tax law. ~ The Tao of heaven has no partiality (ch'in), ~ It is always with the good people.

* * *

* * *

[79c16т] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ After big conflicts are reconciled, some hostility may remain. ~ Reply the resentment with kindness. ~ Is it not good? ~ Thus a sage keeps the creditor's deed but does not demand the payment. ~ People with Te are like creditors. ~ People without Te are like tax collectors. ~ Tao of the nature does not discriminate. ~ It constantly provides benefit to all people.

* * *

[79c17т] Arthur Waley ~ To allay the main discontent, but only in a manner that will certainly produce further discontents can hardly be called successful. ~ Therefore the Sage behaves like the holder of the left-hand tally, who stays where he is and does not go round making claims on people. ~ For he who has the 'power' of Tao is the Grand Almoner; he who has not the 'power' is the Grand Perquisitor. ~ 'It is Heaven's way, without distinction of persons, to keep the good perpetually supplied.'

* * *

[79c18т] Richard John Lynn ~ Bring harmony to great resentment, and some resentment is sure to remain. ~ How could this be considered good? ~ This is why the sage holds the left half of the tally ~ And does not place blame on the other party. ~ A person of virtue concerns himself with his contracts, ~ And the person of no virtue concerns himself with scrutinizing others. ~ The Dao of Heaven has no favorites but is always with the good man.

* * *

[79c19т] Lin Yutang ~ PEACE SETTLEMENTS ~ Patching up a great hatred is sure to leave some hatred behind. ~ How can this be regarded as satisfactory? ~ Therefore the Sage holds the left tally, ~ And does not put the guilt on the other party. ~ The virtuous man is for patching up; ~ The vicious is for fixing guilt. ~ But "the way of Heaven is impartial; It sides only with the good man."

* * *

[79c20т] Victor H. Mair ~ Compromise with great resentment will surely yield lingering resentment; ~ How can this be seen as good? ~ For this reason, ~ The sage holds the debtor's side of a contract and does not make claims upon others. ~ Therefore, ~ The man of integrity attends to his debts; ~ The man without integrity attends to his exactions. ~ The Way of heaven is impartial, yet is always with the good person.

* * *

[79c21т] Tolbert McCarroll ~ Even though a truce is made between great enemies, ~ some enmity is bound to remain. ~ How can this be beneficial? ~ Therefore, the True Person ~ undertakes the obligations of the agreement but makes no claim upon others. ~ The person who has Virtue shares with others. ~ The person who lacks Virtue takes from others. ~ The way of heaven has no favorites; ~ it always remains with what is good.

* * *

[79c23т] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ After the reconciliation of great hostilities, ~ Lingering resentment always remains. ~ Can this be considered a true reconciliation? ~ Therefore, the sage returns injury with kindness. ~ He takes the position of a giver, ~ And does not make claims upon others. ~ The virtuous relates to the world as if he owes the world. ~ The non-virtuous relates to the world as if the world owes him. ~ Though the way of Heaven is impartial, ~ It always supports those who live in harmony with it.

* * *

[79c24т] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ Give love in return for fierce hatred. ~ Otherwise, when the fierce hatred is forgotten, ~ A little of it will still remain. ~ And how can this end well? ~ Therefore the sage keeps the left half of a contract, ~ And does not check what the other holder has to do. ~ The virtuous person acts according to the contract, ~ The person who is not virtuous resorts to lawsuits and disputations. ~ "The superior Tao is not biased, ~ It always accompanies the virtuous person."

* * *

[79c25т] Man-Ho Kwok ~ If you've had a real set-to with someone ~ And you've tried to patch it up - ~ And there's still some bitterness, what can you do? ~ I tell you: repay bitterness with good. ~ Those who practise Te hold credit ~ - but don't demand repayment. ~ Those who practise Virtue do their bit ~ - and those without it will expect you to. ~ The Tao of Heaven doesn't deal in nepotism - it just grace's good people, like it always has and will.

[79c26т] Gu Zhengkun ~ When the great enmity is allayed, ~ There must be some remaining hostility; ~ Even if one requites hostility with kindness, ~ How can that be considered perfect? ~ Therefore the sage keeps the stub of the receipt for a loan ~ But never presses for payment from people. ~ A man of virtue is as tolerant as the sage who keeps the stub of the receipt; ~ A man of no virtue is as harsh as tax collectors. ~ The Tao of heaven never shows favouritism; ~ It always helps those who are good.

* * *

[79c27т] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ When peace is made between two great rivals, ~ some resentment will surely remain. ~ How can this be considered a good deed? ~ That is why the sage keeps his half of the agreement, ~ but does not require the debt from the other party. ~ That is how a man with virtue takes charge of the agreement. ~ But a man without virtue requires the other to fulfil his obligation, ~ like a wheel running in a rut. ~ The Tao of Heaven shows no favouritism: it is always on the side of good men.

* * *

[79c28т] Liu Qixuan ~ Suppression of an uprising does not eliminate the revolt. ~ How can one solve the problem by suppressing? ~ The wise person prefers to be the owner of debts ~ Who gives for ever but presses for no paying back. ~ The wise contractor gives but does not take. ~ The poor contractor takes but does not give. ~ The way of Heaven favors none. ~ It gives all the time and only the good ones can receive.

* * *

[79c29т] Shi Fu Hwang ~ Peace Settlement ~ Lao Tze says, ~ When a reconciliation is made between two parties, surely a grudge still remains in one of them. ~ How can this be counted as a decent method? ~ Therefore the sage guards against this method. ~ He keeps the left-hand tally, and does not insist on the fulfillment of it by others. ~ So he who has the attribute of the Tao keeps the tally; ~ while he who has not the attribute of the Tao keeps the record of taxing. ~ In the way of Heaven, there is no partiality of love; ~ it is always on the side of a good man.

[79c30т] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ Return love for great hatred. ~ Otherwise, when a great hatred is reconciled, some of it will surely remain. ~ How can this end in goodness? ~ Therefore the Sage holds to the left half of an agreement but does not exact what the other holder ought to do. ~ The virtuous resort to agreement; ~ The virtueless resort to exaction. ~ The Tao of heaven shows no partiality; ~ It abides always with good men.'

* * *

* * *

[79c33т] Cheng Lin ~ When one merely tries to allay anger, the feelings of resentment may always remain. ~ Only by returning injury with kindness can there be goodwill. ~ Wherefore, the Sage always gives without expecting gratitude. ~ The virtuous is preoccupied with the thought of how to benefit others. ~ The unvirtuous is preoccupied with the thought of how to injure others. ~ The way of Heaven is impartial, helping all men alike in doing good.

* * *

[79c34т] Yi Wu ~ Reconciliation of a great grudge ~ Surely will leave some ill-will. ~ How can this be considered as good? ~ Therefore, the sage holds the left-hand part of the contract and does not blame the other person. ~ The man with virtue is likely to keep the contract; ~ The man without virtue is likely to collect the tax. ~ The way of Heaven has no favor; ~ It is constantly with the good man.

* * *

[79c35т] Han Hiong Tan ~ To bury the hatchet following a bitter struggle does not necessarily dispel the residual hatred. ~ How can it be called a good resolution? ~ The sage only carries the credit note but does not ask for the repayment. ~ A person with great virtue holds the credit note but does not insist on remittance. ~ The immoral person relentlessly extracts exorbitant taxes from the people. ~ Although the way of Dao is impartial, it always gives succour to good people.

* * *

[79c36т] Hua-Ching Ni ~ Even after settling a great dispute, some resentment is likely to remain. ~ Can this be considered a true settlement? ~ Only by cultivating the virtue of wholeness and by returning injury with kindness can there be true harmony. ~ Therefore, one of deep virtue always gives without expecting gratitude. ~ One whose virtue is deep treats the world as if he were the debtor, ~ holding the left side of the tally. ~ He willingly repays the world through serving his fellow man. ~ One who is partially virtuous treats the world as if he were the creditor, ~ holding the right side of the tally. ~ He thinks the world owes him something and should repay him. ~ Although the subtle Way of the universe holds no favoritism or partiality, ~ it always supports those who are naturally virtuous.

[79c37т] Chang Chung-yuan ~ When a serious resentment is reconciled, ~ Some resentment certainly remains. ~ Thus, reconciliation cannot be considered the best way. ~ Although the wise holds to the contract prepared by the debtor, ~ He never forces the debtor to fulfill his responsibility. ~ Therefore, the man of Tê holds only to the contract, ~ While the man without Tê presses for taxes. ~ The way of nature is free from intimacy. ~ Yet it constantly stays with the good man.

* * *

[79c38т] Henry Wei ~ Observance of Obligations ~ Ren Ch'i ~ In allaying a great grievance, ~ There is bound to be some grievance remaining. ~ How can this be called good? ~ Therefore the Sage holds the left tally, ~ But does not urge the other party to keep his word. ~ Thus the virtuous seeks to preserve the contract; ~ The unvirtuous seeks to blame the other party. ~ The Way of Heaven has no preferences, ~ But always suits the good man.

* * *

[79c39т] Ha Poong Kim ~ You allay the great discontent, ~ Yet, surely, there will still remain some discontent. ~ How can this be considered good? ~ Therefore the sage ~ Holds the left-hand tally, ~ Makes no claims on the people. ~ The man of Te oversees the tally, ~ The man of no Te oversees tax-collection. ~ The way of Heaven favors none, ~ Always sides with the good man.

* * *

[79c40т] Tao Huang ~ Reconciling a great hatred necessarily entails unsolved hatred. ~ How can this be kindful? ~ So the sage honors the left-hand tally but does not blame people. ~ Before the kind Action, hold onto the tally. ~ Before the kindless Action, hold onto the openness. ~ The Tao of heaven is impersonal. ~ It enhances those who are kind.

* * *

[79c41т] Tang Zi-chang ~ When a great hatred is reconciled there must be some hatred remaining. ~ How can this be made into perfection? ~ Thus, the Sage ruler granted rights to the people and required no repayment from them. ~ Hence, the office of a virtuous ruler is established for welfare of the people; ~ while the office of a virtueless ruler is established for taxation of the people. ~ The law of Nature is impartial yet it is always with the good man.

* * *

* * *

* * *

* * *

[79c93т] Е. А. Торчинов ~ Отвечайте на гнев воздействием Блага-Дэ. ~ Если смириться с великим гневом, часть гнева все еще останется непременно, разве это можно считать удачным приемом? ~ Поэтому совершенномудрый всегда держится за левую половину договорной бирки, не требуя мзды от людей. ~ Тот, кто владеет Благом-Дэ, тот держится за договорную бирку. ~ Тот, кто не обладает Благом-Дэ, тот взыскивает плату. ~ Небесный Дао-Путь не знает родственных симпатий, но постоянно творит добро для всех людей.

[79c94т] А. Е. Лукьянов ~ После усмирения большого недовольства непременно остается недовольство. ~ Успокоить всех можно посредством добра. ~ Поэтому совершенномудрый человек, соблюдая договор, не взыскивает с людей. ~ Обладающий Дэ руководствуется договором. ~ Не обладающий Дэ руководствуется взиманием налогов. ~ Дао Неба не роднится с таким, [оно] постоянно с человеком добра.

* * *

[79c95т] Ян Хин-шун ~ После успокоения большого возмущения непременно останутся его последствия. ~ Как можно назвать это добром? ~ Поэтому совершенномудрый дает клятву, что он не будет никого порицать. ~ Добрые стремятся к соглашению, а недобрые - к вымогательству. ~ Небесное дао относится ко всем одинаково, оно всегда на стороне добрых.

* * *

[79c96т] Д. П. Конисси ~ После сильной ненависти останется слабая ненависть. ~ Ненавидящий, хоть слабо, не может творить добро для ненавистного. ~ Святой берет от всех клятвенное свидетельство, но не притесняет никого. ~ Нравственный человек соблюдает клятву, а безнравственный нарушает. ~ Небесное Тао не имеет родственников, поэтому оно всегда склоняется к добрым людям.

* * *

[79c98т] Б. Б. Виногродский ~ Смирение в большой обиде обусловливает наличие остаточной обиды. ~ Как можно таким образом осуществлять совершенствование? ~ Это дает: ~ Человек мудрости держит левую половину контрактной бирки и не предъявляет претензий к людям. ~ При наличии Потенции отвечают за обязательства. ~ При отсутствии Потенции ведают взиманием податей. ~ В небесном Пути отсутствует родственность, а есть постоянство контакта с совершенствующимся человеком.

[80c01т] Robert G. Henricks ~ Let the states be small and people few - ~ Bring it about that there are weapons for "tens" and "hundreds," yet let no one use them; ~ Have the people regard death gravely and put migrating far from their minds. ~ Though they might have boats and carriages, no one will ride them; ~ Though they might have armor and spears, no one will display them. ~ Have the people return to knotting cords and using them. ~ They will relish their food, ~ Regard their clothing as beautiful, ~ Delight in their customs, ~ And feel safe and secure in their homes. ~ Neighboring states might overlook one another, ~ And the sounds of chickens and dogs might be overheard, ~ Yet the people will arrive at old age and death with no comings and goings between them.

[80c02т] John C. H. Wu ~ AH, for a small country with a small population! ~ Though there are highly efficient mechanical contrivances, the people have no use for them. ~ Let them mind death and refrain from migrating to distant places. ~ Boats and carriages, weapons and armour there may still be, but there are no occasions for using or displaying them. ~ Let the people revert to communication by knotting cords. ~ See to it that they are contented with their food, pleased with their clothing, satisfied with their houses, and inured to their simple ways of living. ~ Though there may be another country in the neighbourhood so close that they are within sight of each other and the crowing of cocks and barking of dogs in one place can be heard in the other, ~ yet there is no traffic between them, and throughout their lives the two peoples have nothing to do with each other.

* * *

[80c03т] D. C. Lau ~ Reduce the size and population of the state. ~ Ensure that even though the people have tools of war for a troop or a battalion they will not use them; ~ And also that they will be reluctant to move to distant places because they look on death as no light matter. ~ Even when they have ships and carts, they will have no use for them; ~ And even when they have armour and weapons, they will have no occasion to make a show of them. ~ Bring it about that the people will return to the use of the knotted rope, ~ Will find relish in their food ~ And beauty in their clothes, ~ Will be content in their abode ~ And happy in the way they live. ~ Though adjoining states are within sight of one another, ~ And the sound of dogs barking and cocks crowing in one state can be heard in another, ~ yet the people of one state will grow old and die without having had any dealings with those of another.

* * *

[80c04т] R. L. Wing ~ In a small organization with few people; ~ Let there be ten or a hundred times ~ More tools than they can use. ~ Let the people value their lives ~ And yet not move far away. ~ Even though there are boats and carriages, ~ There is no occasion to use them. ~ Even though there are armor and weapons, ~ There is no occasion to display them. ~ Let the people again knot cords and use them. ~ Their food will be pleasing. ~ Their clothes will be fine. ~ Their homes will be secure. ~ Their customs will be joyful. ~ Nearby organizations may watch each other; ~ Their crowing and barking may be heard. ~ Yet the people may grow old and die ~ Without coming or going between them.

* * *

[80c05т] Ren Jiyu ~ Let the state be small, and let the population be sparse. ~ Though there are various kinds of instruments, let them not be used; ~ Let the people not risk their lives, not move to distant places; ~ Though there are boats and carriages, ~ There is no occasion to ride in them; ~ Though there are weapons and military equipment, ~ There is no occasion to display them. ~ Let the people return to the use of knotted cords in recording events, ~ delight in their food, ~ dress in beauty, ~ dwell in comfort, ~ and enjoy their life. ~ The neighbouring states are within sight of each other, and the cries of roosters and dogs can be heard by one another, ~ But the people do not have any contact with each other until they die of old age.

* * *

[80c06т] Gia-fu Feng ~ A small country has fewer people. ~ Though there are machines that can work ten to a hundred times faster than man, they are not needed. ~ The people take death seriously and do not travel far. ~ Though they have boats and carriages, no one uses them. ~ Though they have armor and weapons, no one displays them. ~ Men return to the knotting of rope in place of writing. ~ Their food is plain and good, their clothes fine but simple, their homes secure; ~ They are happy in their ways. ~ Though they live within sight of their neighbors, ~ And crowing cocks and barking dogs are heard across the way, ~ Yet they leave each other in peace while they grow old and die.

* * *

[80c07т] Lok Sang Ho ~ For a small country with a small population, ~ Let there be no need to use labor-saving gadgets. ~ Let people love to die where they are born ~ and not want to migrate to a distant land. ~ Let there be no need to use boats for long trips. ~ Although the country has armed forces ready to protect the country, ~ Let there be no need to display the military strength. ~ Let the people find happiness in a simple life. ~ Let people enjoy their good foods and fine clothing. ~ Let them settle down peacefully and follow their traditions happily. ~ Let neighboring nations eye one another, ~ and hear the calls of poultry and dogs from the other nation. ~ Let their people find sufficiency in their own lands. ~ Till their death let there be no need to interact.

[80c08т] Xiaolin Yang ~ The most ideal country has little land and few people; ~ The people have many technologies but do not use them; ~ They are afraid of death and do not migrate far. ~ Even though they have boats and carriages, they do not use them; ~ Even though they have weapons and soldiers, they do not fight battles. ~ People go back to the ancient ways of life. ~ They enjoy their own food, admire their own clothes, ~ Appreciate their own peaceful lives, and love their own traditions. ~ Even if the people can see neighboring countries and hear the sounds of their cocks and dogs, ~ Up to their deaths, they never go there.

[80c09t] Walter Gorn Old, STANDING ALONE ~ If I had a small kingdom and but ten or a hundred men of ability, I would not administrate with them. ~ I would teach the people to look upon death as a grievous thing, and then they would not go abroad to meet it. ~ Though they had boats and carriages, yet they would not go away in them. ~ Though they had armour, yet they would never have occasion to wear it. ~ The people should return to the use of the quipu. ~ They should find their coarse food sweet, think their plain clothes grand, regard their homes as places of rest, and take delight in their own simple pleasures. ~ Though the neighbouring state could be seen by us, and the crowing of the cocks and the barking of the dogs could be heard, yet my people would grow old, and die before ever feeling the need of having intercourse with it.

* * *

[80c10t] James Legge ~ In a little state with a small population, I would so order it, that, though there were individuals with the abilities of ten or a hundred men, there should be no employment of them; ~ I would make the people, while looking on death as a grievous thing, yet not remove elsewhere (to avoid it). ~ Though they had boats and carriages, they should have no occasion to ride in them; ~ though they had buff coats and sharp weapons, they should have no occasion to don or use them. ~ I would make the people return to the use of knotted cords (instead of the written characters). ~ They should think their (coarse) food sweet; ~ their (plain) clothes beautiful; ~ their (poor) dwellings places of rest; ~ and their common (simple) ways sources of enjoyment. ~ There should be a neighbouring state within sight, and the voices of the fowls and dogs should be heard all the way from it to us, but I would make the people to old age, even to death, not have any intercourse with it.

* * *

[80c11t] David Hinton ~ Let nations grow smaller and smaller and people fewer and fewer, ~ let weapons become rare ~ and superfluous, ~ let people feel death's gravity again ~ and never wander far from home. ~ Then boat and carriage will sit unused ~ and shield and sword lie unnoticed. ~ Let people knot ropes for notation again and never need anything more, ~ let them find pleasure in their food and beauty in their clothes, peace in their homes and joy in their ancestral ways. ~ Then people in neighboring nations will look across to each other, ~ their chickens and dogs calling back and forth, ~ and yet they'll grow old and die without bothering to exchange visits.

[80c12t] Chichung Huang ~ A small state with few people: ~ Let there be utensils ten, ~ A hundred times its population ~ Without being used; ~ Let the people take death seriously, ~ And stay away from migration; ~ Let there be boats and carriages ~ With no occasion to ride them; ~ Let there be armor and weapons ~ With no occasion to display them; ~ Let the sovereign revert to tying knots ~ With a rope and put it to use. ~ Make their food delicious, ~ Their clothes beautiful, ~ Their customs joyous, ~ Their habitations comfortable. ~ Neighboring states may be within sight of each other, ~ And sounds of roosters and dogs within hearing, ~ Yet the people, to their old age and death, ~ Never come and go visiting one another.

[80c13t] Ellen M. Chen ~ A small state with few people. ~ Let the implements (ch'ih) for ten and hundred men be unused, ~ Let the people fear death such that they do not move far away. ~ Although there are boats and carriages, ~ There are no places to ride them to. ~ Although there are weapons and armours, ~ There are no occasions to display them. ~ Let the people again tie ropes and use them (as memory aids). ~ Let them enjoy their food, ~ Consider their clothing beautiful, ~ Be contented with their dwellings, ~ And happy with their customs. ~ The neighbouring states overlooking one another, ~ The dogs' barkings and cocks' crowings are heard from other states, ~ Yet till they are old and dying the people do not visit one another.

[80c14t] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ An ideal state should be a small country sparsely populated; ~ Even though there are utensils big enough to serve tens or hundreds of people there is never any need to use them; ~ Its countrymen, passed from one generation to another, are too settled to move afar; ~ There are boats and wagons, yet there is never any need to ride on them; ~ Even though there are weapons and shields, there is no occasion calling for their deployment; ~ People will be encouraged to return to [such simplicity of] using knotted cords for record-keeping; ~ People are happy with their [simple] food and clothing; ~ As well as enjoying [plain] dwellings and lore; ~ Neighboring countries are within sights of one another, that even roosters' crowing and dogs' barking can be overheard in neighboring countries; ~ Citizens of different countries will not socialize with one another even until they become old and die away.

[80c15t] Tien Cong Tran ~ [Suppose] there is (we establish) a small country with a small population. ~ Therefore there are enough tools of war for a troop or a battalion, but the people have no use for them. ~ So the people mind death and refrain from migrating to distant places. ~ Even though there are boats and carriages, they do not ride them; even though there are weapons and armor, they do not carry and wear them. ~ The people return to the use of the knotting cords. ~ They find relish with their food, beauty with their clothing, peace with their houses, and merriment with their ways of living. ~ There is another country in the neighborhood. ~ The two countries are so close that they are within sight of each other and the crowing of cocks and barking of dogs in one place can be heard in the other. ~ Yet throughout their lives the two peoples do not travel to and fro.

* * *

[80c16t] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ In small countries with fewer people, ~ No delicate utensils are used. ~ Make people fear death so that they refuse to venture far away. ~ Although there are vehicles and boats, nobody uses them. ~ Although there are troops and weapons, they are not deployed. ~ Let people once again use knot-tying to keep records. ~ Let people enjoy their food, beautify their clothes, live peacefully, and be happy with their traditions. ~ Although neighboring kingdoms are within sight; and dog barks and roster crows can be heard over the border, but people never interfere with each other in their lifetime.

* * *

[80c17t] Arthur Waley ~ Given a small country with few inhabitants, he could bring it about that though there should be among the people contrivances requiring ten times, a hundred times less labour, they would not use them. ~ He could bring it about that the people would be ready to lay down their lives and lay them down again in defence of their homes, rather than emigrate. ~ There might still be boats and carriages, but no one would go in them; ~ there might still be weapons of war but no one would drill with them. ~ He could bring it about that ~ 'The people should have no use for any form of writing save knotted ropes, should be contented with their food, pleased with their clothing, satisfied with their homes, should take pleasure in their rustic tasks. ~ The next place might be so near at hand that one could hear the cocks crowing in it, the dogs barking; ~ but the people would grow old and die without ever having been there'.

* * *

[80c18t] Richard John Lynn ~ Let the state be small and the common folk few. ~ Let there be military equipment for a company, then it would not be used. ~ Let the common folk take death seriously, then they would not travel far. ~ Although they had boats and carriages, they would have no occasion to ride in them. ~ Although they had shields and weapons, they would have no occasion to array them for battle. ~ Let the people again knot cords, then they would use them. ~ They would find their food so delicious, their clothes so beautiful, their dwellings so satisfying, and their customs so delightful that, though neighboring states might provide distant views of each other and the sounds of each other's chickens and dogs might even be heard, the common folk would reach old age without ever going back and forth between such places.

* * *

[80c19t] Lin Yutang ~ THE SMALL UTOPIA ~ (Let there be) a small country with a small population, ~ Where the supply of goods are tenfold or hundredfold, more than they can use. ~ Let the people value their lives and not migrate far. ~ Though there be boats and carriages, ~ None be there to ride them. ~ Though there be armor and weapons, ~ No occasion to display them. ~ Let the people again tie ropes for reckoning, ~ Let them enjoy their food, ~ Beautify their clothing, ~ Be satisfied with their homes, ~ Delight in their customs. ~ The neighboring settlements overlook one another ~ So that they can hear the barking of dogs and crowing of cocks of their neighbors, ~ And the people till the end of their days shall never have been outside their country.

* * *

[80c20t] Victor H. Mair ~ Let there be a small state with few people, ~ where military devices find no use; ~ Let the people look solemnly upon death, ~ and banish the thought of moving elsewhere. ~ They may have carts and boats, ~ but there is no reason to ride them; ~ They may have armor and weapons, ~ but they have no reason to display them. ~ Let the people go back to tying knots to keep records. ~ Let ~ their food be savory, ~ their clothes beautiful, ~ their customs pleasurable, ~ their dwellings secure. ~ Though they may gaze across at a neighboring state, and hear the sounds of its dogs and chickens, ~ The people will never travel back and forth, till they die of old age.

* * *

[80c21t] Tolbert McCarroll ~ In a small country with few people: ~ Though there are machines that would increase production ten to a hundred times they are not used. ~ The people take death seriously and do not travel about. ~ Though they have boats and carriages no one uses them. ~ Though they have armor and weapons, there is no occasion to display them. ~ The people give up writing and return to the knotting of cords. ~ They are satisfied with their food. ~ They are pleased with their clothes. ~ They are content with their homes. ~ They are happy in their simple ways. ~ Even though they live within sight of another country and can hear dogs barking and cocks crowing in it, ~ still the people grow old and die without ever coming into conflict.

[80c22t] David H. Li ~ Small states. ~ Few people. ~ All sorts of utensils, not in use. ~ The populace value death, unwilling to move. ~ Vehicles available, not in use. ~ Weaponry available, not on display. ~ Tying knots for events. ~ Superbly governed. ~ Well fed, beautifully clad, serenely housed, happily serenad'd. ~ Neighboring states within sights. ~ Crowing and barking heard across states. ~ From birth to death, no interstate communication.

* * *

[80c23t] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ Let there be small countries with few people. ~ Let the people take the matter of life and death seriously, ~ And let them not move too far from their birthplaces. ~ Even if there are complicated devices, ~ Let there be no necessity to use them. ~ Even if there are boats and carriages, ~ Let there be no reason to ride them. ~ Even if there are armors and weapons, ~ Let there be no occasion to display them. ~ Let the life be so simple that ~ The people return to tying knots for keeping records. ~ Let them be delighted with plain food, pleased with simple clothes, satisfied with modest homes, joyous with natural customs. ~ Though they may gaze across at a neighboring country, ~ hearing the barking of its dogs and crowing of its roosters, ~ they are so happy and satisfied where they are ~ that they will not visit one another until the end of their days.

* * *

[80c24t] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ Imagine a small land with few people. ~ Even if it contains plenty of vessels, I will not use them. ~ I will induce the people to respect death, and not to go wandering far afield. ~ Even if they have boats and chariots, they will not travel in them, ~ Even if they have weapons and armor, they will not bear them. ~ I will bring them back to knotted cords instead of writings. ~ Their food will satisfy them, ~ Their clothing will please them, ~ Their dwellings will be full of tranquillity, ~ Their customs will be full of happiness. ~ Even though the neighboring lands are within view, ~ And the crowing of the roosters and the barking of the dogs from there are audible, ~ The people of that small country will not go there in their lifetime.

* * *

[80c25t] Man-Ho Kwok ~ If a nation could be small, with few enough people ~ Even if you had the means to produce more, they'd be useless. ~ Such a people would know that death is real, ~ And they wouldn't travel far, even if they were able to. ~ They would not vaunt their army or their weaponry. ~ They would count in their heads again and write by hand. ~ Their food would be simple, but it would feed them; ~ Their clothes would be fine, but homely ~ And they would have fires in their homes. ~ They would be happy with what they have! ~ And even though they'd live along the border within earshot ~ Of their neighbours' cocks at dawn, and the dogs barking, ~ They wouldn't mind if they never went there. ~ It is enough, for them, to live and let live.

* * *

[80c26t] Gu Zhengkun ~ The state should be small; ~ The population should be sparse. ~ Tools, though of many kinds, ~ Should not be used. ~ Teach the people to fear death ~ And not to migrate to remote places; ~ Although they have ships and carts, ~ They will have no need to use them; ~ Although they are well armed with weapons, ~ They will have no place to make them effective. ~ Encourage the people to return to the condition ~ Under which the knotted rope was used to record things. ~ The world best ruled is a place where ~ The people will have delicious food, ~ beautiful clothes, ~ comfortable living quarters, ~ cheerful customs. ~ Though within easy reach of neighbouring states, ~ The dog's barking and the cock's crowing in one state are heard in another; ~ The people of one state will never have dealings with those of another, ~ Even if they get old and die.

* * *

[80c27t] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ A small country with a limited population ensures that even though the people may have many valuables, they do not need to use them. ~ The ruler lets the people consider death as a serious matter, ~ so that they will not wish to leave their homes. ~ Though they have ships and carriages, they will not use them; ~ and though they have soldiers and arms, there is no need to deploy them. ~ The ruler lets the people return to the time of knotting ropes to record information. ~ They will find pleasure in their tasteless food. ~ They will find beauty in their simple clothes. ~ They will find peace in their small houses. ~ They will enjoy their own customs. ~ They can see the neighbouring country. ~ They can even hear the sounds of each other's roosters and dogs. ~ They will grow old and die, but remain content never to go to the neighbouring country.

* * *

[80c28t] Liu Qixuan ~ The wise person reduces the importance of governments ~ And simplifies the modes of living, ~ So that people use fewer tools and wares ~ And treasure simplicity in their lives, ~ So that, though there are vehicles, ~ People do not take them. ~ And, though there are weapons, ~ People do not carry them. ~ And, though there are records, ~ Tying knots will serve the record-keeping purpose. ~ Thus, the highest political achievement is one ~ In which people savor their food, ~ Like the beauty of their clothes, ~ Appreciate their safe and peaceful homes, ~ Enjoy their social customs; ~ And in which roosters and dogs ~ Can be heard between countries; ~ But people, all their lives, ~ Have no need to go across the borders.

[80c29t] Shi Fu Hwang ~ Perfect Government ~ Lao Tze says, ~ The king of men should always think that his state is little, and his people a small population. ~ He would attribute the governing responsibility to ten or a hundred tribal elders. ~ His government would never consider to draft people's implements for government use. ~ Further, he would make his people's looking after departed ancestors estates an important duty, thus they would not move elsewhere. ~ Though the king of men has boats and carriages, he would have no occasion to ride on them. ~ Though he had buff coats and sharp weapons, he would have no occasion to use them. ~ He would make the people return to their pure custom which they used in antiquity - the knotted cord to remember events. ~ At that time, they thought their coarse food sweet; ~ their plain clothes beautiful; ~ their poor dwelling places restful; ~ and common simple ways sources of enjoyment. ~ There should be a neighboring state within sight, and the voices of fowls and dogs should be heard all the way from hither to thither, but the people to an old age, even to death, have no intention to visit each other.

[80c30т] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ Supposing here is a small state with few people. ~ Though there are various vessels I will not have them put in use. ~ I will make the people regard death as a grave matter and not go far away. ~ Though they have boats and carriages they will not travel in them; ~ Though they have armour and weapons they will not show them. ~ I will let them restore the use of knotted cords (instead of writing). ~ They will be satisfied with their food; ~ Delighted in their dress; ~ Comfortable in their dwellings; ~ Happy with their customs. ~ Though the neighbouring states are within sight ~ And their cocks' crowing and dogs' barking within hearing; ~ The people (of the small state) will not go there all their lives.

* * *

[80c31т] Paul J. Lin ~ The state may be small; its people may be few. ~ Let the people have tenfold and one-hundredfold of utensils, ~ But never make use of them. ~ Let the people weigh death heavily ~ And have no desires to move far away. ~ Though there be boats and carriages, ~ No one will ride in them. ~ Though there be armour and weapons, ~ No one will exhibit them. ~ Let the people return to tying knots and using them. ~ Relish their food, ~ Appreciate their clothes, ~ Secure in their homes, ~ Happy with their customs. ~ The neighboring states will be so close that they can see each other, and hear the sounds of roosters and dogs. ~ But the people will grow old and die, ~ Without having visited each other.

* * *

[80c32т] Michael LaFargue ~ Oh for a small country with few people! ~ Supposing there were men with the talents of dozens and hundreds, ~ but no one employed them. ~ Supposing the people took death seriously, ~ and did not travel far distances. ~ Although there exist boats and carriages, ~ they have no occasion to ride in them. ~ Although there exist armor and weapons, ~ they have no occasion to show them off. ~ Supposing people returned to knotting cords, ~ and using this as writing. ~ They find their food savory, ~ they find their clothes elegant, ~ they are content with their homes, ~ they are fond of their folkways. ~ Neighboring states are in sight of one another, ~ so they hear the sounds of each others' dogs and roosters - ~ but people reach old age and die with no comings and goings between them.

* * *

[80c33т] Cheng Lin ~ The State should be small, and its inhabitants should be few. ~ Its ruler should teach the people to shun arms and weapons even though they are available. ~ He should teach the people to avoid the risks of death, and to be reluctant to travel in distant countries. ~ Thus though there might be ships and carriages, they would have no need to mount them. ~ Though there might be arms and weapons, they would have no need to use them. ~ He should make the people return to the state of pristine simplicity where the system of knotting threads was used. ~ Then they would relish the food they eat; ~ consider beautiful the clothes they wear; ~ regard as comfortable the houses they dwell in; ~ enjoy the customs they have. ~ The State may be so closely situated that the barking of dogs and the crowing of cocks in one may be heard in the other. ~ Thus the people would be content to live in their own country from the time of their birth until their death without thinking of foreign intercourse.

* * *

[80c34т] Yi Wu ~ There can be a small state with few people. ~ Let it have many vessels; the people will not use them. ~ Let the people value death and not move to far places. ~ Though there are boats and carriages, there is no place to ride them. ~ Though there are arms and weapons, there is no place to display them. ~ Let the people again tie knots of rope and use them. ~ Sweet their food, ~ Beautiful their clothes, ~ Peaceful their living, ~ Happy their customs. ~ Neighboring states can see each other, ~ The sounds of cocks and dogs can be heard by each other, ~ But the people will grow old and die, never having visited each other.

* * *

[80c35т] Han Hiong Tan ~ In a small and sparsely populated country, ~ Even if there are many talented military leaders, the nation does not require their services. ~ People treasure their lives and livelihoods that they loathe to emigrate. ~ Although there are boats and carriages, no one wants to use them. ~ While there are armour and weapons, there is no place to exhibit them. ~ People revert back to ancient way of recording events by tying knots on the string. ~ Their food is sumptuous. ~ Their garments are beautiful. ~ Their lodgings are comfortable. ~ Their social mores and customs are unsophisticated but joyous. ~ The neighbouring states can be sighted, and the noises of barking dogs and crowing cocks can be heard reciprocally. ~ Yet, people will never visit each other, never in a million years.

* * *

[80c36т] Hua-Ching Ni ~ Let there be small communities with few inhabitants. ~ The supply of vessels may be more than enough, ~ yet no one would use them. ~ The inhabitants would love living there so dearly that they would never wish to move to another place. ~ They may have every kind of vehicle, ~ but they would not bother to ride them. ~ They may have powerful weapons, ~ but they would not resort to using them. ~ They would return to a simple system of cords and knots to record their simple events, ~ as was done in ancient times. ~ They would be content with plain food, ~ pleased with simple clothing, ~ satisfied with rustic but cozy homes, ~ and would cling to their natural way of life. ~ The neighboring country would be so close at hand that one could hear its roosters crowing and its dogs barking along the boundaries. ~ But, to the end of their days, people would rarely trespass the territory of another's life.

* * *

[80c37т] Chang Chung-yuan ~ There is a kingdom which is small and sparsely populated. ~ There are numerous implements, but no one uses them. ~ The people love their lives and no one wants to move afar. ~ Boats and carriages are available, but no one rides them. ~ Fine weapons are in their possession, but no one uses them. ~ The people are back in the times when knotted cords were used to record things. ~ They enjoy fine delicacies and are handsome in their dress. ~ They are happy with their residences and are pleased with their traditions. ~ Although the next state is within sight, and the sounds of cocks crowing and dogs barking are heard, ~ The people live their whole lives without traveling to and fro.

* * *

[80c38т] Henry Wei ~ Independence ~ Tu Li ~ A state should be small in size and population. ~ It should teach the people not to use arms, ~ Even though arms may be found in abundance. ~ It should teach the people ~ To view death as a serious matter, ~ And not to move to a far-away place. ~ Though there are boats and carriages, ~ There is no occasion to use them; ~ Though there are arms and soldiers, ~ There is no occasion to stage public reviews. ~ The people are taught - ~ To resume the practice of tying knots; ~ To enjoy their daily food; ~ To wear beautiful clothes; ~ To enhance the comfort of their homes; ~ And to take delight in their social customs. ~ Neighbor states may be within sight of one another, ~ And the barking of dogs and the crowing of cocks ~ In one of them may be heard in the others, ~ Yet the people to the end of their days, ~ Do not maintain intercourse with their neighbors.

* * *

[80c39т] Ha Poong Kim ~ Let the state be small and its people few. ~ Let the thousand contrivances go idle. ~ Let the people take death seriously and not move to distant places. ~ Though they may have boats and carriages, ~ They will not ride in them. ~ Though they may have armor and weapons, ~ They will not display them. ~ Let the people return to the practice of knotting cords. ~ They will relish what they eat, ~ Find their clothes beautiful, ~ Be content in their homes, ~ Delight in their customs. ~ States may be within sight of one another, ~ So that one may hear cocks and dogs from a neighboring state; ~ Yet people will grow old and die ~ Without trafficking with another state.

* * *

[80c40т] Tao Huang ~ A small country has few people. ~ Weapons are far more numerous than the people, but they are not used. ~ Let people be serious about death and enjoy a long journey. ~ Though there are carriages and boats, they are not useful for travel. ~ Let people return to: ~ Use the technique of knotting the rope, ~ Enjoying the food, ~ Appreciating the cloth, ~ Delighting in customs, ~ Settling into their living conditions. ~ The neighboring countries are in sight. ~ The sounds of dogs and chickens are heard. ~ People grow old and die without interference from each other.

* * *

[80c41т] Tang Zi-chang ~ Prefer to rule a small kingdom with few people. ~ Even though there are abundant resources, prefer to use the one tenth or one hundredth. ~ Care only for their life and refrain from moving far away, even though there were war ships and chariots ready but no place to use them; ~ and there were arms and weapons ready but no front to deploy them. ~ He led them to a simple life even by use of "Knotted Cords" again, ~ To be contented with their foods, be beautiful with their clothes, be satisfied with their homes and be happy with their customs. ~ The neighboring countries are within sight of each other; ~ the voices of cocks and dogs were heard from both sides. ~ Yet the people might grow old and die before they would cross territories of each other.

[80c42т] Wing-tsit Chan ~ Let there be a small country with few people. ~ Let there be ten times and a hundred times as many utensils ~ But let them not be used. ~ Let the people value their lives highly and not migrate far. ~ Even if there are ships and carriages, none will ride in them. ~ Even if there are arrows and weapons, none will display them. ~ Let the people again knot cords and use them (in place of writing). ~ Let them relish their food, beautify their clothing, be content with their homes, and delight in their customs. ~ Though neighboring communities overlook one another and the crowing of cocks and barking of dogs can be heard, ~ Yet the people there may grow old and die without ever visiting one another.

[80c91т] И. И. Семененко ~ В небольшом и малолюдном государстве способствовать тому, чтобы таланты не использовались, даже если бы их было в десять, сто раз больше, чем обычно, и побуждать народ из почтения к смерти не ездить далеко. ~ Появись там лодки и повозки, им не нашлось бы места для использования, ~ появись там даже латы и оружие, их негде было бы расположить. ~ Пусть люди снова бы завязывали на веревках узелки вместо письма и было бы им сладко есть, прекрасно одеваться, удобно жить и радостно изведывать свои обычаи. ~ Со страною по соседству друг на друга бы глядели издалека и слушали бы друг у друга лай собак и крики петухов, ~ но меж собою не общались бы до самой старости и смерти.

[80c92т] А. А. Маслов ~ Когда государство мало, а его население невелико, пусть даже у него будет огромное количество оружия, - некому будет воспользоваться им. ~ Люди же, в страхе смерти, не уедут в дальние места. ~ Даже если у них будут корабли и повозки, они не снарядят их. ~ Даже если у них будут доспехи и оружие, им не представится случая продемонстрировать их. ~ Чтобы народ вернулся к использованию узелковых веревок [для письма], пусть наслаждается пищей, красуется одеждами, будет доволен жилищем и радуется жизни. ~ Когда соседние владения находятся на расстоянии взаимной видимости, они слышат пение петухов и лай собак друг у друга, а народ доживает до старости и умирает, не ездя туда-сюда.

[80c95т] Ян Хин-шун ~ Пусть государство будет маленьким, а население редким. ~ Если [в государстве] имеются различные орудия, не надо их использовать. ~ Пусть люди до конца своей жизни не уходят далеко [от своих мест]. ~ Если [в государстве] имеются лодки и колесницы, не надо их употреблять. ~ Даже если имеются воины, не надо их выставлять. ~ Пусть народ снова начинает плести узелки и употреблять их вместо письма. ~ Пусть его пища будет вкусной, одеяние красивым, жилище удобным, а жизнь радостной. ~ Пусть соседние государства смотрят друг на друга, слушают друг у друга пение петухов и лай собак, а люди до самой старости и смерти не посещают друг друга.

[80c96т] Д. П. Конисси ~ Так как в маленьком государстве мало народа, то хотя в нем много лучших орудий, но они останутся без употребления и без надобности. ~ Народ такого государства потеряет всякую предприимчивость и умрет на месте своего рождения, не двигаясь никуда. ~ Если у него много возов и кораблей, то они останутся без употребления. ~ Хотя он имеет благоустроенное войско, но негде выставить его. ~ Он будет плесть веревку, чтобы ею оградить свое государство. ~ Хотя он кушает хорошо, одевается красиво, устраивает покойное жилище и живет весело, но существование его будет бесполезно. ~ Хотя такое государство находится с соседним в таком близком расстоянии, что слышны пение петухов и лай собак в нем, но сообщения между ними никогда не будет.

[80c97т] В. В. Малявин ~ Лучше царству быть маленьким, а населению - редким. ~ Пусть у людей будут десятки и сотни орудий, ~ Но пользы от них искать не нужно. ~ Пусть люди будут почтительны к смерти и не уезжают далеко от дома. ~ Даже если есть лодки и повозки, пусть на них никто не ездит. ~ Даже если есть пики и стрелы, пусть никто не берет их в руки. ~ Пусть люди завязывают узелки вместо письма. ~ Пусть люди наслаждаются едой и любуются своей одеждой, ~ Имеют покой в своем жилище и радуются своим обычаям. ~ Пусть будут видны соседние селения ~ И оттуда доносятся лай собак и крик петухов. ~ А люди до самой старости и смерти друг с другом не знаются.

PSEUDO-CHAPTER One

[01c01t] Robert G. Henricks ~ As for the Way, the Way that can be spoken of is not the constant Way; ~ As for names, the name that can be named is not the constant name. ~ The nameless is the beginning of the ten thousand things; ~ The named is the mother of the ten thousand things. ~ Therefore, those constantly without desires, by this means will perceive its subtlety. ~ Those constantly with desires, by this means will see only that which they yearn for and seek. ~ These two together emerge; ~ They have different names yet they're called the same; ~ That which is even more profound than the profound - ~ The gateway of all subtleties.

[01c02t] John C. H. Wu ~ TAO can be talked about, but not the Eternal Tao. ~ Names can be named, but not the Eternal Name. ~ As the origin of heaven-and-earth, it is nameless: ~ As "the Mother" of all things, it is nameable. ~ So, as ever hidden, we should look at its inner essence: ~ As always manifest, we should look at its outer aspects. ~ These two flow from the same source, though differently named; ~ And both are called mysteries. ~ The Mystery of mysteries is the Door of all essence.

[01c03t] D. C. Lau ~ The way that can be spoken of ~ Is not the constant way; ~ The name that can be named ~ Is not the constant name. ~ The nameless was the beginning of heaven and earth; ~ The named was the mother of the myriad creatures. ~ Hence always rid yourself of desires in order to observe its secrets; ~ But always allow yourself to have desires in order to observe its manifestations. ~ These two are the same ~ But diverge in name as they issue forth. ~ Being the same they are called mysteries, ~ Mystery upon mystery - ~ The gateway of the manifold secrets.

[01c04t] R. L. Wing ~ The Tao that can be expressed ~ Is not the Tao of the Absolute. ~ The name that can be named ~ Is not the name of the Absolute. ~ The nameless originated Heaven and Earth. ~ The named is the Mother of All Things. ~ Thus, without expectation, ~ One will always perceive the subtlety; ~ And, with expectation, ~ One will always perceive the boundary. ~ The source of these two is identical, Yet their names are different. ~ Together they are called profound, ~ Profound and mysterious, ~ The gateway to the Collective Subtlety.

[01c05t] Ren Jiyu ~ The Tao that can be spoken of is not the eternal Tao; ~ The name that can be named is not the eternal name. ~ The nameless is the origin of Heaven and Earth; ~ The named is the root of all things. ~ Therefore, the subtleties of Tao are always apprehended through their formlessness, ~ The limits of things are always seen through their form. ~ These two (the form and the formless) have the same source but different names. ~ Both of them can be called deep and profound, ~ The deepest and the most profound, the door of all mysteries.

[01c06t] Gia-fu Feng ~ The Tao that can be told is not the eternal Tao. ~ The name that can be named is not the eternal name. ~ The nameless is the beginning of heaven and earth. ~ The named is the mother of ten thousand things. ~ Ever desireless, one can see the mystery. ~ Ever desiring, one can see the manifestations. ~ These two spring from the same source but differ in name; this appears as darkness. ~ Darkness within darkness. ~ The gate to all mystery.

[01c07t] Lok Sang Ho ~ Ways that can be spelled out ~ cannot be the eternal way. ~ Names that can be named ~

Underdog_way.pdf, revision 8, sanmayce@hotmail.com, a corpus of 50(42 english, 8 russian) proofed(many originals' bugs crushed) translations of 老子道德經 or Lao Zi Dao De Jing must change with time and place. ~ Emptiness is the origin of heaven and earth; ~ Existence is the mother of everything that had a birth. ~ Appreciate Emptiness, that we may see the nature of the Dao's versatility; ~ Appreciate Existence, that we may see the extent of the Dao's possibilities. ~ These two, Emptiness and Existence, came from the same source. ~ Though they bear different names, they serve the same mystical cause. ~ A mystery within a mystery, ~ such is the gateway to all versatility.

[01c08t] Xiaolin Yang ~ The DAO can be talked about, but that is not the ever-lasting DAO. ~ The NAME can be called, but that is not the ever-lasting NAME. ~ Nothingness is called the origin of the world. ~ Existence is called the root of everything. ~ Therefore, ~ you should stay in nothingness if you want to see the real essence of the world; ~ you should stay in existence if you want to see the different entities of the world. ~ They are from the same source but named differently: both are called XUAN. ~ Understanding the XUANs is the key to the kingdom of truth.

[01c09t] Walter Gorn Old, MARKING OUT THE PATH ~ The Tao that is the subject of discussion is not the true Tao. ~ The quality which can be named is not its true attribute. ~ That which was before Heaven and Earth is called the Non-Existent. ~ The Existent is the mother of all things. ~ Therefore doth the wise man seek after the first mystery of the Non-Existent, while seeing in that which exists the Ultimates thereof. ~ The Non-Existent and Existent are identical in all but name. ~ This identity of apparent opposites I call the profound, the great deep, the open door of bewilderment.

[01c10t] James Legge ~ The Tao that can be trodden is not the enduring and unchanging Tao. ~ The name that can be named is not the enduring and unchanging name. ~ (Conceived of as) having no name, it is the Originator of heaven and earth; ~ (conceived of as) having a name, it is the Mother of all things. ~ Always without desire we must be found, ~ If its deep mystery we would sound; ~ But if desire always within us be, ~ Its outer fringe is all that we shall see. ~ Under these two aspects, it is really the same; ~ but as development takes place, it receives the different names. ~ Together we call them the Mystery. ~ Where the Mystery is the deepest is the gate of all that is subtle and wonderful.

[01c11t] David Hinton ~ A Way become Way isn't the perennial Way. ~ A name become name isn't the perennial name: ~ the named is mother to the ten thousand things, ~ but the unnamed is origin to all heaven and earth. ~ In perennial nonbeing you see mystery, and in perennial being you see appearance. ~ Though the two are one and the same, once they arise, they differ in name. ~ One and the same they're called dark-enigma, ~ dark-enigma deep within dark-enigma, ~ gateway of all mystery.

[01c12t] Chichung Huang ~ A tao that can be spoken about ~ Is not the constant Tao; ~ A name that can be named ~ Is not the constant name. ~ Nonbeing names ~ The ten thousand things' beginning; ~ Being names ~ The ten thousand things' mother. ~ Therefore, constantly be desireless, ~ Whereby to observe its minutiae; ~ Constantly be desirous, ~ Whereby to observe where it ends. ~ The two issued from the same origin, ~ And, though different in name, ~ Refer to the same thing. ~ Deep and remote, doubly deep and remote, ~ Gate of multitudinous minutiae.

[01c13t] Ellen M. Chen ~ Tao that can be spoken of, ~ Is not the Everlasting (ch'ang) Tao. ~ Name that can be named, ~ Is not the Everlasting (ch'ang) name. ~ Nameless (wu-ming), the origin (shih) of heaven and earth; ~ Named (yu-ming), the mother (mu) of ten thousand things. ~ Alternate, ~ Non-being (wu), to name (ming) the origin (shih) of heaven and earth; ~ Being (yu), to name (ming) the mother of ten thousand things. ~ Therefore, always (ch'ang) without desire (wu-yü), ~ In order to observe (kuan) the hidden mystery (miao); ~

Always (ch'ang) with desire (yu-yü), ~ In order to observe the manifestations (chiao). ~ Alternate, ~ Therefore, by the Everlasting (ch'ang) Non-Being (wu), ~ We desire (yü) to observe (kuan) its hidden mystery (miao); ~ By the Everlasting (ch'ang) Being (yu), ~ We desire (yü) to observe the manifestations (chiao). ~ These two issue from the same origin, ~ Though named differently. ~ Both are called the dark (hsüan). ~ Dark and even darker, ~ The door to all hidden mysteries (miao).

[01c14t] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ Tao (Truth) can be talked about (theorized in any manner each person considers viable), though hardly of these theories will be eternally valid; ~ Names (Descriptions) can be ascribed [to Tao in any fashion each person deems workable], yet hardly of these names (descriptions) will last forever. ~ The beginning of the Universe (Heaven and Earth) [is beyond us, so in all honesty it] is indescribable; ~ [Nevertheless,] whatever is namable (describable) by us served as the mother (origin) of [our knowledge of] myriad (all and every) things and creatures. ~ Accordingly, ~ I constantly refrain from my selfish (subjective) desires for the purpose of exploring its (Nature's) manifested (apparent) wonder; ~ I also constantly maintain my will [to seek objective knowledge] in order to pursue its (Nature's) deep-seated enigma. ~ These two (Tao and Te) were originated from the same source, but they were described with different names by us. ~ They are both depicted as profound [as each is intricate in its own right]; ~ The profundity (complexity) intensifies as we fathom its mystery further and deeper; ~ Eventually, it will [lead us] to the gateway of all mysteries.

[01c15t] Tien Cong Tran ~ The way that can be talked about is not the eternal Way. ~ The name that can be named is not the eternal name. ~ "Nothing" is the name of the origin of Heaven and Earth. ~ "Being" is the name of "the mother" of all things. ~ So, in eternal Nothing, we should look at the wonderfulness of the Way. ~ In eternal Being, we should look at its outer aspects. ~ These two flow from the same source, though differently named; and both are called mysteries. ~ Mysterious and more mysterious. ~ That is the door of all wonders.

[01c16t] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ If Tao can be described, then it is not general Tao. ~ If a name can be denned, then it is not a general name. ~ The invisible is the origin of the universe. ~ The visible is the mother of all things. ~ By constantly thinking the invisible, we understand the universe; ~ By constantly observing the visible, we can see how the natural laws work. ~ Thinking and observing are two different things. ~ Yet they serve the same goal: to theorize. ~ Theorizing and evolving these theories is the gate to marvels.

[01c17t] Arthur Waley ~ The Way that can be told of is not an Unvarying Way; ~ The names that can be named are not unvarying names. ~ It was from the Nameless that Heaven and Earth sprang; ~ The named is but the mother that rears the ten thousand creatures, each after its kind. ~ Truly, 'Only he that rids himself forever of desire can see the Secret Essences'; ~ He that has never rid himself of desire can see only the Outcomes. ~ These two things issued from the same mould, but nevertheless are different in name. ~ This 'same mould' we can but call the Mystery, ~ Or rather the 'Darker than any Mystery', ~ The Doorway whence issued all Secret Essences.

[01c18t] Richard John Lynn ~ The Dao that can be described in language is not the constant Dao; ~ the name that can be given it is not its constant name. ~ Nameless, it is the origin of the myriad things; ~ named, it is the mother of the myriad things. ~ Therefore, always be without desire so as to see their subtlety. ~ And always have desire so as to see their ends. ~ These two emerge together but have different names. ~ Together, we refer to them as mystery: the mystery upon mystery and gateway of all subtleties.

[01c19t] Lin Yutang ~ ON THE ABSOLUTE TAO ~ The Tao that can be told of ~ Is not the Absolute Tao; ~ The Names that can be given ~ Are not Absolute Names. ~ The Nameless is the origin of Heaven and Earth; ~ The Named is the Mother of All Things. ~ Therefore: ~ Oftentimes, one strips oneself of passion ~ In order to see the Secret of Life; ~ Oftentimes, one regards life with passion ~ In order to see its manifest forms. ~ These two (the Secret and its manifestations) ~ Are (in their nature) the same; ~ They are given different names ~ When they become manifest. ~ They may both be called the Cosmic Mystery: ~ Reaching from the Mystery into the Deeper Mystery ~ Is the Gate to the Secret of All Life.

[01c20t] Victor H. Mair ~ The ways that can be walked are not the eternal Way; ~ The names that can be named are not the eternal name. ~ The nameless is the origin of the myriad creatures; ~ The named is the mother of the myriad creatures. ~ Therefore, ~ Always be without desire in order to observe its wondrous subtleties; ~ Always have desire so that you may observe its manifestations. ~ Both of these derive from the same source; ~ They have different names but the same designation. ~ Mystery of mysteries, ~ The gate of all wonders!

[01c21t] Tolbert McCarroll ~ The Tao that can be spoken of is not the eternal Tao. ~ The name that can be named is not the eternal name. ~ The nameless is the beginning of heaven and earth. ~ The named is the mother of the ten thousand things. ~ Send your desires away and you will see the mystery. ~ Be filled with desire and you will see only the manifestation. ~ As these two come forth they differ in name. ~ Yet at their source they are the same. ~ This source is called a mystery. ~ Darkness within darkness, ~ the gateway to all mystery.

[01c22t] David H. Li ~ Direction, as expressed, is no ordinary direction; ~ as named, no ordinary name. ~ Null identifies the universe at the beginning. ~ Ull identifies the mother of myriad matters. ~ Thus, visit Null to observe its intricateness. ~ Visit Ull to observe its limitlessness. ~ These two spring from the same source; ~ only their identifications differ. ~ Both are profound. ~ Profound upon profound, it is the portal to all intricacies.

[01c23t] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ The Tao Eternal is beyond definition. ~ No name given can capture its eternality. ~ Nameless, it is the origin of the Kosmos. ~ Named, it is the beginning of all things. ~ Nothingness, it is the inner being of the Kosmos. ~ Thingness, it is the outer distinctions of the Kosmos. ~ These two, though different in names, arise from the same source: ~ The source called the Invisible. ~ Invisible beyond the invisible, ~ It is the entry into the myriad wonders of the Eternal Kosmos.

[01c24t] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ The Tao that can be expressed in words is not the eternal Tao. ~ The name that can be defined in words is not the name that never changes. ~ Non-existence is what we will call the source of heaven and earth. ~ Existence is the mother of all things. ~ From eternal non-existence, therefore, we observe the beginning of the existence of the many hidden qualities of the universe. ~ From eternal existence, therefore, we clearly observe the overt qualities of the universe. ~ These two, the hidden and the overt, are originally the same at source, and become different when they manifest themselves. ~ This same origin is "the smallest of the small." ~ The absolute "smallest of the small" is the gate from which the beginning of all the parts of the universe emerges.

[01c25t] Man-Ho Kwok ~ The Tao that can be talked about is not the true Tao. ~ The name that can be named is not the eternal Name. ~ Everything in the universe comes out of Nothing. ~ Nothing - the nameless is the beginning; ~ While Heaven, the mother is the creatrix of all things. ~ Follow the nothingness of the Tao, ~ and you can be like it, not needing anything, ~ seeing the wonder and the root of everything. ~ And even if you cannot grasp this nothingness, ~ you can still see something of the Tao in everything. ~ These two are the same only called by different names ~ - and both are mysterious and wonderful. ~ All mysteries are Tao, and Heaven is their mother: ~ She is the gateway and the womb-door.

[01c26t] Gu Zhengkun ~ The Tao that is utterable ~ Is not the eternal Tao; ~ The name that is namable ~ Is not the eternal Name. ~ The Nothingness is the name of the beginning of heaven and earth; ~ The Being (substance) is the name of the mother of all things. ~ Hence one should gain an insight into the beginning of the Tao by constantly observing the Nothingness, ~ And should perceive the end of the Tao by constantly observing the Being. ~ These two things, the Nothingness and the Being, are of the same origin but different in name. ~ They are both so profound as to be a key to the door of myriad secrets.

[01c27t] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ The Tao that can be named is not the eternal Tao. ~ The Name that can be spoken is not the eternal name. ~ The Nameless is the beginning of Heaven and Earth. ~ The Named is the mother of all creatures. ~ Observe the mysteries of the Tao without longing. ~ Survey its appearance with desire. ~ Both mysteries and appearance come from the same origin but wear a different name; ~ they are enigmatic. ~ The greatest mystery is the gate to all mysteries.

[01c28t] Liu Qixuan ~ There are ways to follow, ~ But what is followed is not the true Way. ~ There are names to give, ~ But what is given is not the true Name. ~ Let us call non-being the beginning of the universe ~ And let us call being the development of all things. ~ When we follow non-being ~ We approach the wonder of the Way. ~ When we follow being ~ We approach the farther-end manifestation of the Way. ~ Each has the same origin, ~ And here exists a metaphysical door to true wisdom.

[01c29t] Shi Fu Hwang ~ Understanding The Tao ~ Lao Tze says, ~ The Tao is that on which one can always tread. ~ That on which one cannot always tread is not the Tao. ~ And fame is that of which one can always remember. ~ That of which one cannot always remember is not fame. ~ All things are without names prior to the formation of Heaven and Earth. ~ And names are brought out to classify various things. ~ Since there is no name in the very beginning, why should one care about fame! ~ Hence, those who are constantly free of desire of fame shall see the Tao's subtle secret. ~ Those who bear desire shall see the end lying in front of them. ~ Both two types of men ferment their thinking in the same place, yet they will experience different fates. ~ Both their fates shall be up to Heaven. ~ Beyond our heaven, there are other heavens: whoever knows this shall find the gate of the Tao.

[01c30t] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ The Tao that can be expressed is not the eternal Tao; ~ The name that can be defined is not the unchanging name. ~ Non-existence is called the antecedent of heaven and earth; ~ Existence is the mother of all things. ~ From eternal non-existence, therefore, we serenely observe the mysterious beginning of the Universe; ~ From eternal existence we clearly see the apparent distinctions. ~ These two are the same in source and become different when manifested. ~ This sameness is called profundity. ~ Infinite profundity is the gate whence comes the beginning of all parts of the Universe.

[01c31t] Paul J. Lin ~ The Tao that can be spoken of is not the eternal Tao; ~ The Name that can be named is not the eternal Name. ~ The Nameless [non-being] is the origin of heaven and earth; ~ The Namable [being] is the mother of all things. ~ Therefore constantly without desire, ~ There is the recognition of subtlety; ~ But constantly with desire, ~ Only the realization of potentiality. ~ The two come from the same source, ~ Having different names. ~ Both are called mysteries, ~ More mystical than the most mystical, ~ The gate of all subtleties.

[01c32t] Michael LaFargue ~ The Tao that can be told is not the invariant Tao, ~ the names that can be named are not the invariant Names. ~ Nameless, it is the source of the thousands of things ~ (named, it is 'Mother' of the thousands of things). ~ Yes: ~ Always: ~ being desireless, ~ one sees the hidden essentials. ~ Always: ~ having desires, ~ one sees only what is sought. ~ These two lines are about The Merging - ~ it is when things develop and emerge from this that the different names appear. ~ The Merging is something mysterious - ~ mysterious, and more mysterious, ~ the abode of all the hidden essences.

[01c33t] Cheng Lin ~ The truth that may be told is not the everlasting Truth. ~ The name given to a thing is not the everlasting Name. ~ Nothingness is used to denote the state that existed before the birth of heaven and earth. ~ Reality is used to denote the state where the multitude of things begins to have a separate existence. ~ Therefore, ~ when the mind rests in the state of Nothingness, the enigma can be understood; ~ when the mind rests in the state of Reality, the bounds can be reached. ~ These two states, though bearing different names, have a common origin. ~ Both are mysterious and metaphysical. ~ They are the most mysterious, and form the gateway to all mysteries.

[01c34t] Yi Wu ~ The way that can be talked about is not the constant Way. ~ The name that can be named is not the constant Name. ~ Non-being is the name of the origin of Heaven and Earth; ~ Being is the name of the mother of all things. ~ Therefore: ~ Constantly in Non-being, one wishes to contemplate its (the Way's) subtlety. ~ Constantly in Being, one wishes to contemplate its path. ~ These two come from the same source, but are different in name. ~ The same source is called Mystery. ~ Mystery and more mystery. ~ It is the gateway to myriad subtleties.

[01c35t] Han Hiong Tan ~ Dao that can be expressed in words is not the absolute Dao. ~ The names that can be given are not the absolute names. ~ Non-being is before the dawn of time, ~ Being is when everything begins to emerge. ~ Therefore, maintaining a passive and receptive mode, ~ You can watch the secret of life; ~ Maintaining an active and attentive mode, ~ You can perceive the rhythm of life. ~ These two cognitive processes, though differing in names, ~ Are in the same continuum. ~ Both are known as the inscrutable Mystery, ~ Which is the greatest of all mysteries. ~ And it is through these perspectives that we can observe the marvellous phenomena of Nature.

[01c36t] Hua-Ching Ni ~ Tao, the subtle reality of the universe cannot be described. ~ That which can be described in words is merely a conception of the mind. ~ Although names and descriptions have been applied to it, the subtle reality is beyond the description. ~ One may use the word "Nothingness" to describe the Origin of the universe, and "Beingness" to describe the Mother of the myriad things, ~ but Nothingness and Beingness are merely conceptions. ~ From the perspective of Nothingness, ~ one may perceive the expansion of the universe. ~ From the perspective of Beingness, ~ one may distinguish individual things. ~ Both are for the conceptual convenience of the mind. ~ Although different concepts can be applied, ~ Nothingness and Beingness and other conceptual activity of the mind all come from the same indescribable subtle Originalness. ~ The Way is the unfoldment of such subtle reality. ~ Having reached the subtlety of the universe, ~ one may see the ultimate subtlety, ~ the Gate of All Wonders.

[01c37t] Chang Chung-yuan ~ The Tao that can be spoken of is not the Tao itself. ~ The name that can be given is not the name itself. ~ The unnameable is the source of the universe. ~ The nameable is the originator of all things. ~ Therefore, oftentimes without intention I see the wonder of Tao. ~ Oftentimes with intention I see its manifestations. ~ Its wonder and its manifestations are one and the same. ~ Since their emergence, they have been called by different names. ~ Their identity is called the mystery. ~ From mystery to further mystery: ~ The entry of all wonders!

[01c38t] Henry Wei ~ Realization of Tao ~ T'i Tao ~ The Tao that can be stated is not the Eternal Tao. ~ The name that can be named is not the Eternal Name. ~ The Unnameable is originator of Heaven and Earth. ~ The Nameable is mother of the ten thousand things. ~ Therefore, ~ Always be desireless, so as to discern Tao's wonderful essence; ~ Always have some desire, so as to discern its manifestations. ~ These two come out from the same source, ~ But are different in name. ~ Their identical nature is a mystery. ~ Mystery of mysteries - ~ That is the gate of all wonderful essence.

[01c39t] Ha Poong Kim ~ No Tao that may be Tao is the constant Tao; ~ No name that may be a name is the constant name. ~ By non-being you name the beginning of Heaven and Earth; ~ By being you name the mother of the ten thousand things. ~ Therefore, always free of desire you see the secret; ~ Always with desire you see its appearance. ~ These two ~ Are the same in origin yet different in name. ~ Their sameness may be called a mystery. ~ It is the mystery beyond mysteries, ~ The gate to myriad secrets.

[01c40t] Tao Huang ~ The Tao that is voiced is no longer that of eternal Tao. ~ The name that has been written is no longer that of eternal name. ~ The nameless is the beginning of the cosmic universe. ~ The named is the mother of the myriad creatures. ~ Being at peace, one can see into the subtle. ~ Engaging with passion, one can see into the manifest. ~ They both arise from a common source but have different names. ~ Both are called the mystery within the mystery. ~ They are the door to all wonders.

[01c41t] Tang Zi-chang ~ Dao that can be talked about is not the eternal Dao itself; ~ A name that can be given is not the eternal thing itself. ~ The nameless existed ~ Before the birth of birth of Heaven and Earth - Universe; ~ The names which were given were after ~ The birth of All Things. ~ By the eternity of unknown existence ~ Comprehend the common essence of things; ~ By the eternity of Existence ~ Observe the apparent differences. ~ These two came from the same origin - the unknown, ~ But with different names. ~ They all are called the "profoundness", ~ Profoundly and profoundly it is the entrance ~ From which come all wonders.

[01c42t] Wing-tsit Chan ~ The Tao that can be told of is not the eternal Tao; ~ The name that can be named is not the eternal name. ~ The Nameless is the origin of Heaven and Earth; ~ The Named is the mother of all things. ~ Therefore let there always be non-being, so we may see their subtlety, ~ And let there always be being, so we may see their outcome. ~ The two are the same, ~ But after they are produced, they have different names. ~ They both may be called deep and profound. ~ Deeper and more profound, ~ The door of all subtleties!

[01c92t] А. А. Маслов ~ Дао, которое может быть выражено словами, не есть постоянное Дао. ~ Имя, которое может быть поименовано, не есть постоянное имя. ~ Небытие зовётся началом Неба и Земли. ~ Бытие зовётся Матерью мириад созданий. ~ Поэтому, желая узреть его утончённо-неуловимую сущность, обрети постоянство небытия. ~ Желая наблюдать его проявления, пребывай в постоянстве бытия. ~ Оба они произрастают вместе и различаются лишь именем. ~ Будучи тождественными, они зовутся сокровенным. ~ Сокровенное и ещё раз сокровенное - врата ко множеству потаённого.

[01c93t] Е. А. Торчинов ~ Путь, что может быть пройден, не есть постоянный Путь-Дао. ~ Имя, что может быть поименовано, не есть постоянное имя. ~ Безымянное - Неба, Земли начало. ~ Именуемое - Матерью сущего стало. ~ В отсутствии тайну вещей созерцать стремись. ~ В наличии предел бытия созерцать стремись. ~ Те двое родятся вместе, но их имена различны. ~ Их вместе назову я Сокровенным. ~ И Сокровенное вновь Сокровенным стало. ~ Таковы врата всех тайн.

[01c94t] А. Е. Лукьянов ~ Дао, которое может быть высказано, не есть постоянное Дао. ~ Имя, которое может быть названо, не есть постоянное имя. ~ Небытием именуется начало Неба и Земли, ~ Бытием именуется Мать мириад вещей. ~ Поэтому: ~ обращаясь к постоянному небытию, стремлюсь к тому, чтобы увидеть его тайну; ~ обращаясь к постоянному бытию, стремлюсь к тому, чтобы увидеть его предел (спиральный путь). ~ Оба они (небытие и бытие) из тождества происходят, но различно именуются. ~ В тождестве они называются первоначалом. ~ Первоначало и еще первоначало - вот дверь ко всем тайнам.

[01c95t] Ян Хин-шун ~ Дао, которое может быть выражено словами, не есть постоянное дао. ~ Имя, которое может быть названо, не есть постоянное имя. ~ Безымянное есть начало неба и земли, ~ обладающее именем - мать всех вещей. ~ Поэтому тот, кто свободен от страстей, видит чудесную тайну [дао], ~ а кто имеет страсти, видит его только в конечной форме. ~ Оба они одного и того же происхождения, но с разными названиями. ~ Вместе они называются глубочайшими. ~ [Переход] от одного глубочайшего к другому - ~ дверь ко всему чудесному.

[01c96t] Д. П. Конисси ~ Тао, которое должно быть действительным, не есть обыкновенное Тао. ~ Имя, которое должно быть действительным, не есть обыкновенное имя. ~ То, что не имеет имени, - есть начало неба и земли; ~ то, что имеет имя, - есть мать всех вещей. ~ Вот почему свободный от всех страстей видит величественное проявление Тао, ~ а находящийся под влиянием какой-нибудь страсти видит только незначительное его проявление. ~ Эти оба происходят из одного и того же начала, но только носят разное название. ~ Они называются непостижимыми. ~ Непостижимое из непостижимых и есть ворота всего таинственного.

[01c97t] В. В. Малявин ~ Путь, о котором можно поведать, - не постоянный Путь. ~ Имя, которое можно назвать, - не постоянное Имя. ~ Где имени нет - там начало всех вещей, ~ Где имя есть - там мать всех вещей. ~ Посему, постоянно не имея желания, видишь его исток, ~ А постоянно имея желание, видишь его исход. ~ То и другое является совместно, ~ Они имеют разные имена, но одинаково сказываются. ~ В сокровенном есть еще сокровенность: ~ Вот откуда исходит все утонченное.

[01c98t] Б. Б. Виногродский ~ Постоянный Путь составляется из возможности выбора Пути и невозможности выбора Пути. ~ Постоянное имя составляется из возможности выбора имени и невозможности выбора имени. ~ Отсутствием именуется начальное действие Неба-Земли. ~ Наличием именуется рождение-материнство мириад сущностей. ~ Причинность: ~ Стремление к постоянному отсутствию осуществляет созерцание тончайшей тайны. ~ Стремление к постоянному наличию осуществляет созерцание его внешнего проявления. ~ Эта пара представляет собой общность исхода при различии наименования. ~ Если определить вместе, то это будет непостижимая тайна. ~ Пытаясь проникнуть в эту тайну, придешь только к тайне. ~ Это врата для появления множества тончайших начал.

PSEUDO-CHAPTER Two

[02c01t] Robert G. Henricks ~ When everyone in the world knows the beautiful as beautiful, ugliness comes into being; ~ When everyone knows the good, then the not good comes to be. ~ The mutual production of being and nonbeing, ~ The mutual completion of difficult and easy, ~ The mutual formation of long and short, ~ The mutual filling of high and low, ~ The mutual harmony of tone and voice, ~ The mutual following of front and back - ~ These are all constants. ~ Therefore the Sage dwells in nonactive affairs and practices the wordless teaching. ~ The ten thousand things arise, but he doesn't begin them; ~ He acts on their behalf, but he doesn't make them dependent; ~ He accomplishes his tasks, but he doesn't dwell on them; ~ It is only because he doesn't dwell on them, that they therefore do not leave him.

[02c02t] John C. H. Wu ~ WHEN all the world recognizes beauty as beauty, this in itself is ugliness. ~ When all the world recognizes good as good, this in itself is evil. ~ Indeed, the hidden and the manifest give birth to each other. ~ Difficult and easy complement each other. ~ Long and short exhibit each other. ~ High and low set measure to each other. ~ Voice and sound harmonize each other. ~ Back and front follow each other. ~ Therefore, the Sage manages his affairs without ado, ~ And spreads his teaching without talking. ~ He denies nothing to the teeming things. ~ He rears them, but lays no claim to them. ~ He does his work, but sets no store by it. ~ He accomplishes his task, but does not dwell upon it. ~ And yet it is just because he does not dwell on it ~ That nobody can ever take it away from him.

[02c03t] D. C. Lau ~ The whole world recognizes the beautiful as the beautiful, yet this is only the ugly; ~ the whole world recognizes the good as the good, yet this is only the bad. ~ Thus Something and Nothing produce each other; ~ The difficult and the easy complement each other; ~ The long and the short offset each other; ~ The high and the low incline towards each other; ~ Note and sound harmonize with each other; ~ Before and after follow each other. ~ Therefore the sage keeps to the deed that consists in taking no action and practises the teaching that uses no words. ~ The myriad creatures rise from it yet it claims no authority; ~ It gives them life yet claims no possession; ~ It benefits them yet exacts no gratitude; ~ It accomplishes its task yet lays claim to no merit. ~ It is because it lays claim to no merit ~ That its merit never deserts it.

[02c04t] R. L. Wing ~ When all the world knows beauty as beauty, There is ugliness. ~ When they know good as good, There there is evil. ~ In this way ~ Existence and nonexistence produce each other. ~ Difficult and easy complete each other. ~ Long and short contrast each other. ~ High and low attract each other. ~ Pitch and tone harmonize each other. ~ Future and past follow each other. ~ Therefore, Evolved Individuals ~ Hold their position without effort, ~ Practice their philosophy without words, ~ Are a part of All Things and overlook nothing. ~ They produce but do not possess, Act without expectation, Succeed without taking credit. ~ Since, indeed, they take no credit, it remains with them.

[02c05t] Ren Jiyu ~ When all people in the world know the beautiful as beauty, ~ There appears ugliness; ~ When they know goodness as good, ~ There appears evil. ~ Therefore, by opposing each other, ~ Existence and nonexistence come into being, ~ Difficult and easy form themselves, ~ Long and short are distinct, ~ High and low contrast, ~ Sound and voice harmonize, ~ Front and back emerge. ~ Thus, the sage manages affairs by "nonaction," ~ And teaches by "saying nothing." ~ He leaves all things to grow and change without initiation; ~ Raises all things without making claim for his ownership; ~ Promotes all things without attributing them to his contribution; ~ And takes no credit for himself when the work is done. ~ It is because no claim is made that his credit cannot be forfeited.

[02c06t] Gia-fu Feng ~ Under heaven all can see beauty as beauty only because there is ugliness. ~ All can know good as good only because there is evil. ~ Therefore having and not having arise together. ~ Difficult and easy complement each other. ~ Long and short contrast each other; ~ High and low rest upon each other; ~ Voice and sound harmonize each other; ~ Front and back follow one another. ~ Therefore the sage goes about doing nothing, teaching no-talking. ~ The ten thousand things rise and fall without cease, ~ Creating, yet not possessing, ~ Working, yet not taking credit. ~ Work is done, then forgotten. ~ Therefore it lasts forever.

[02c07t] Lok Sang Ho ~ People under heaven see beauty in what they call "beauty," ~ that way they know of the "ugly." ~ Similarly people see good in what they call "good," ~ that way they know of the "bad." ~ Existence and Emptiness are concepts that make sense by comparison. ~ Similarly, long lends meaning to short, and high to low. ~ Harmony is produced when sounds combine in unison. ~ Because the fore goes, so the back follows. ~ Thus the Sage would not act as if he could act on his will. ~ He teaches the unspoken teaching. ~ No word is ever spoken, yet living things thrive. ~ No ownership is claimed, though Nature begets all creation. ~ Humility is maintained even as achievement is made. ~ No credit is claimed even as work is done. ~ Because no credit is claimed, so no credit is ever lost.

[02c08t] Xiaolin Yang ~ Everyone knows that beauty is good, but ugliness exists as well. ~ Everyone knows that kindness is good, but unkindness exists as well. ~ Therefore, nothingness and existence always coexist; ~ As do difficulty and easiness, long and short, high and low, and sound and hearing. ~ For this reason, the great men practiced WUWEI. ~ They wordlessly taught people and let the world develop by itself. ~ Create but do not control, nurture but do not own, accomplish but do not claim. ~ Only when you do not claim the accomplishment, will it never leave.

[02c09t] Walter Gorn Old, SELF-PERFECTION ~ When the world speaks of beauty as being beautiful, ugliness is at once defined. ~ When goodness is seen to be good, evil is at once apparent. ~ So do existence and non-existence mutually give rise to one another, as that which is difficult and that which is easy, distant and near, high and low, shrill and bass, preceding and following. ~ The Sage therefore is occupied only with that which is without prejudice. ~ He teaches without verbosity, he acts without effort; he produces without possessing, he acts without regard to the fruit of action; he brings his work to perfection without assuming credit; and claiming nothing as his own, he cannot at any time be said to lose.

[02c10t] James Legge ~ All in the world know the beauty of the beautiful, ~ and in doing this they have (the idea of) what ugliness is; ~ they all know the skill of the skilful, ~ and in doing this they have (the idea of) what the want of skill is. ~ So it is that existence and non-existence give birth the one to (the idea of) the other; ~ that difficulty and ease produce the one (the idea of) the other; ~ that length and shortness fashion out the one the figure of the other; ~ that (the ideas of) height and lowness arise from the contrast of the one with the other; ~ that the musical notes and tones become harmonious through the relation of one with another; ~ and that being before and behind give the idea of one following another. ~ Therefore the sage manages affairs without doing anything, ~ and conveys his instructions without the use of speech. ~ All things spring up, and there is not one which declines to show itself; ~ they grow, and there is no claim made for their ownership; ~ they go through their processes, and there is no expectation (of a reward for the results). ~ The work is accomplished, and there is no resting in it (as an achievement). ~ The work is done, but how no one can see; ~ 'Tis this that makes the power not cease to be.

[02c11t] David Hinton ~ All beneath heaven knows beauty is beauty only because there's ugliness, and knows good is good only because there's evil. ~ Being and nonbeing give birth to one another, ~ difficult and easy complete one another, ~ long and short measure one another, ~ high and low fill one another, ~ music and noise harmonize one another, ~ before and after follow one another: ~ that's why a sage abides in the realm of nothing's own doing, ~ living out that wordless teaching. ~ The ten thousand things arise without beginnings there, ~ abide without waiting there, ~ come to perfection without dwelling there. ~ Without dwelling there: that's the one way you'll never lose it.

[02c12t] Chichung Huang ~ When all under heaven know beauty as beauty, ~ There is ugliness; ~ When all know goodness, ~ There is evil. ~ That being and nonbeing mutually generate, ~ Difficult and easy mutually complement, ~ Long and short mutually formulate, ~ High and low mutually fulfill, ~ Music and voice mutually harmonize, ~ Front and back mutually follow ~ Is constant. ~ Hence, the sage man ~ Assumed the office of nonaction, ~ Conducted speechless instruction. ~ When the ten thousand things rose, ~ He did not initiate. ~ He assisted without taking credit; ~ Scored merits without claiming. ~ Precisely because he claimed not, ~ They never vanished.

[02c13t] Ellen M. Chen ~ When all under heaven know beauty (mei) as beauty, ~ There is then ugliness (o); ~ When all know the good (shan) good, ~ There is then the not good (pu shan). ~ Therefore being and non-being give rise to each other, ~ The difficult and easy complement each other, ~ The long and short shape each other, ~ The high and low lean on each other, ~ Voices and instruments harmonize with one another, ~ The front and rear follow upon each other. ~ Therefore the sage manages affairs without action, ~ Carries out (hsing) teaching without speech (yen). ~ Ten thousand things arise and he does not initiate them, ~ They come to be and he claims no possession (yu) of them, ~ He works (wei) without holding on, ~ Accomplishes (ch'eng) without claiming merit. ~ Because he does not claim merit, ~ His merit does not go away.

[02c14t] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ In our world: ~ When there was a consensus on what should be judged as beautiful, a convention on what should be disliked [as ugly] was reciprocally brought in [inadvertently]. ~ When there was an agreement on what should be deemed good, an agreement on what was evil (not good) was correspondingly decided upon. ~ Accordingly, [the following contrasting concepts were formulated because of their relative relations]: ~ Existence (being) and non-existence (nothing) are inter-dependent [concepts]; ~ Difficulty and easiness are determined by comparison; ~ Long and short are conjointly formulated; ~ High and low owe their existences to their relative positions [to the observer]; ~ Tune and sound are distinguished by [the rule whether a stream of sounds has internal harmonization]; ~ Front and back are joined together by perspective positions [of objects to the observer]. ~ Accordingly, a Sage (leader) [adopts the following measure to lead]: ~ When comes to managing the government, he would practice the policy of non-interference; ~ When comes to educating the population, he would avoid making speeches (through using tantalizing rhetoric); ~ Even after having had activated and motivated all and every things and creatures to embark their potentialities on the best possible course, he will never withdraw from his continuous and painstaking support. ~ [A Sage] would help [all creatures] to relish their lives without being possessive; ~ [He] would carry out good deeds without asserting his authority; ~ [He] would not claim his merit after each success; ~ It is just because of his avoiding appropriating his contributions, nothing whatsoever can take away from him his achievements [of Te].

[02c15t] Tien Cong Tran ~ When the entire world recognizes beauty as beauty, there is ugliness. ~ When the entire world recognizes good as good, there is evil. ~ Indeed, "nothing" and "being" give birth to each other. ~

Difficult and easy complement each other. ~ Long and short exhibit each other. ~ High and low set measure to each other. ~ Voice and sound harmonize each other. ~ Back and front follow each other. ~ Therefore, the sage manages his affairs by "non-doing", and spreads his teaching by "non-talking". ~ The Way makes all things and denies nothing; it gives birth to them, but lays no claim to them; it does its work, but does not say by its work; it accomplishes his work, but does not dwell on things. ~ And yet it is just because he does not dwell on things that nobody can ever take them away from it.

[02c16t] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ People know what beauty is, because there is ugliness; ~ people know what good is, because there is bad. ~ Likewise, empty and full, difficulty and ease, long and short, high and low, sound and tone, front and rear, all go side by side. ~ Thus, ~ the sage handles affairs without the intention for fame, and teaches without preaching, ~ lets things develop without initialize them, ~ lets things grow without interfering them, ~ lets things move ahead without forcing them, ~ lets things succeed without boast about them. ~ Because the sage does not brag his success, he would continue to be successful.

[02c17t] Arthur Waley ~ It is because every one under Heaven recognizes beauty as beauty, that the idea of ugliness exists. ~ And equally if every one recognized virtue as virtue, this would merely create fresh conceptions of wickedness. ~ For truly 'Being and Not-being grow out of one another; ~ Difficult and easy complete one another. ~ Long and short test one another; ~ High and low determine one another. ~ Pitch and mode give harmony to one another. ~ Front and back give sequence to one another'. ~ Therefore the Sage relies on actionless activity, ~ Carries on wordless teaching, ~ But the myriad creatures are worked upon by him; he does not disown them. ~ He rears them, but does not lay claim to them, ~ Controls them, but does not lean upon them, ~ Achieves his aim, but does not call attention to what he does; ~ And for the very reason that he does not call attention to what he does ~ He is not ejected from fruition of what he has done.

[02c18t] Richard John Lynn ~ Once all under Heaven knew beauty as "beauty"; at that moment "ugliness" was already there. ~ Once all knew goodness as "goodness"; at that moment "not good" was already there. ~ Thus it is that presence and absence generate each other; ~ difficulty and ease determine the sense of the other; ~ long and short give proportion to the other; ~ highs and lows are a matter of relative inclination; ~ instrumental sounds and voice tones depend on one other for harmony; ~ and before and after result from their relative places in a sequence. ~ Therefore, the sage [sheng] tends to matters without conscious effort ~ And practices the teaching that is not expressed in words. ~ The myriad folk model their behavior on him, yet he does not tell them to do so. ~ He gives them life, yet he possesses them not. ~ He acts, yet they do not depend on him. ~ And he achieves success yet takes no pride in it. ~ It is just because he is not proprietary that he does not lose it.

[02c19t] Lin Yutang ~ THE RISE OF RELATIVE OPPOSITES ~ When the people of the Earth all know beauty as beauty, ~ There arises (the recognition of) ugliness. ~ When the people of the Earth all know the good as good, ~ There arises (the recognition of) evil. ~ Therefore: ~ Being and non-being interdepend in growth; ~ Difficult and easy interdepend in completion; ~ Long and short interdepend in contrast; ~ High and low interdepend in position; ~ Tones and voice interdepend in harmony; ~ Front and behind interdepend in company. ~ Therefore the Sage: ~ Manages affairs without action; ~ Preaches the doctrine without words; ~ All things take their rise, but he does not turn away from them; ~ He gives them life, but does not take possession of them; ~ He acts, but does not appropriate; ~ Accomplishes, but claims no credit. ~ It is because he lays claim to no credit ~ That the credit cannot be taken away from him.

[02c20t] Victor H. Mair ~ When all under heaven know beauty as beauty, already there is ugliness; ~ When everyone knows goodness, this accounts for badness. ~ Being and nonbeing give birth to each other, ~ Difficult and easy complete each other, ~ Long and short form each other, ~ High and low fulfill each other, ~ Tone and voice harmonize with each other, ~ Front and back follow each other - it is ever thus. ~ For these reasons, ~ The sage dwells in affairs of nonaction, carries out a doctrine without words. ~ He lets the myriad creatures rise up but does not instigate them; ~ He acts but does not presume; ~ He completes his work but does not dwell on it. ~ Now, ~ Simply because he does not dwell on them, his accomplishments never leave him.

[02c21t] Tolbert McCarroll ~ All under heaven see beauty as beauty only because they also see ugliness. ~ All announce that good is good only because they also denounce what is bad. ~ Therefore, ~ something and nothing give birth to one another. ~ Difficult and easy complete one another. ~ Long and short fashion one another. ~ High and low arise from one another. ~ Notes and tones harmonize with one another. ~ Front and back follow one another. ~ Thus, ~ the True Person acts without striving and teaches without words. ~ Deny nothing to the ten thousand things. ~ Nourish them without claiming authority, ~ Benefit them without demanding gratitude, ~ Do the work, then move on. ~ And, the fruits of your labor will last forever.

[02c22t] David H. Li ~ For [people in] the world to know [only] beauty and what is beautiful is ugly; ~ to know [only] goodness and what is good is not good. ~ Ull and Null complement in generation, ~ difficult and easy complement in completion; ~ long and short complement in form, ~ high and low complement in norm; ~ voice and sound complement in harmony, ~ front and rear complement in company; ~ - they are ever so. ~ Thus, ~ a sage practices laissez-faire governance and provides wordless instructions. ~ [A sage] neither interferes with myriad matters' generation, ~ nor takes possession of [their] cultivation, ~ nor expects approbation of [his/her] provision, ~ nor seeks acclamation for [their] accomplishments. ~ It is because [the sage] does not seek acclamation for [his/her] accomplishments that they do not disappear.

[02c23t] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ When the world recognizes beauty as beauty, ugliness arises. ~ When the world recognizes good as good, evil arises. ~ Being and non-being create each other. ~ Difficult and easy define each other. ~ Long and short form each other. ~ High and low support each other. ~ Tone and voice accompany each other. ~ Before and after follow each other. ~ Hence, ~ the sage lives in the state of non-action - of eternal balance, ~ And teaches by the precept of silence - and through his silent deed. ~ He accepts things as they arise, ~ Creates without possessing, ~ Performs without depending, ~ Accomplishes without claiming credit. ~ Because he does not claim credit for himself, ~ His virtues endure forever more.

[02c24t] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ When the world understands that beauty is beautiful, ugliness will exist. ~ When the world understands that goodness is good, evil will exist. ~ From that we learn that: ~ Existence affirms non-existence, ~ Ease affirms difficulty, ~ Short derives from long, because that is what it is compared to, ~ Low derives from high, because according to that it is measured, ~ Echo affirms sound, ~ After follows before. ~ Accordingly, ~ The sage operates without action, ~ And teaches his pupils without words. ~ Everything in the universe, when defined, is relative to everything else. ~ The sage does not try to differentiate things, he does not try to show his preference for things either in deed or in speech. ~ This does not mean that the sage does nothing or says nothing; ~ rather, it means that he "accepts things as they are," easily and naturally, without making any demands.

[02c25t] Man-Ho Kwok ~ Beauty and mercy are only recognized by people ~ Because they know the opposite, which is ugly and mean. ~ If the people think they know goodness ~ Then all they really know is what evil is like! ~ Nothing, and Heaven share the same root - ~ Difficulty and ease are a part of all work. ~ The long and the short are in your hands, ~ Above and below exist because they each do, ~ What you want and what you say should be the same ... ~ Neither future nor past can exist alone. ~ The sage has no attachment to anything, ~ and he therefore does what is right without speaking by simply being in the Tao. ~ Life, all life began without words. ~ Life is made - and no one owns it. ~ The Tao is neither selfish nor proud. ~ The Tao is generous and graceful in what it does ~ Without ever claiming any merit ~ And the sage's greatness lies in taking no credit.

[02c26t] Gu Zhengkun ~ The whole world knows the beautiful as beautiful ~ Only because of the existence of the ugly; ~ The whole world knows the good as good ~ Only because of the existence of the bad. ~ Hence the Being and the Nothingness exist in opposition; ~ The difficult and the easy complement each other; ~ The long and the short manifest themselves by comparison; ~ The high and the low are inclined as well as opposed to each other; ~ The consonants and vowels harmonize with each other; ~ The front and the back follow each other. ~ Thus the sage behaves ~ Without taking active action, ~ Teaches without using words, ~ Lets all things rip without interference, ~ Gives them life without claiming to be their owner, ~ Benefits them without claiming to be their benefactor, succeeds without claiming credit. ~ Because he does not claim credit, ~ His credit is never lost.

[02c27t] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ The whole world can see the beautiful as the beautiful only because of the ugly. ~ The whole world can recognize the good as the good only because of the bad. ~ Something and nothing create each other. ~ The difficult and the easy complement each other. ~ The long and the short define each other. ~ The high and the low counterbalance each other. ~ Before and after follow each other. ~ Therefore the sage acts without action, teaches without words. ~ The myriad creatures keep on going without an end, ~ creating life without possessing it, ~ performing deeds without expectations, ~ fulfilling the mission without claiming a victory, ~ because the sage does not ask for praise, ~ therefore the praise remains with him for ever.

[02c28t] Liu Qixuan ~ We know beauty because there is ugliness. ~ We know goodness because there are evils. ~ Therefore, being and non-being are relative to each other ~ As are what is difficult and what is easy; ~ What is long and what is short; ~ What is high and what is low; ~ What sounds and what resonates; ~ And what precedes and what follows. ~ The wise do good by doing nothing ~ And teach well by teaching nothing. ~ Things work without intruding on the natural process, ~ Develop and produce without desiring willfully, ~ And are successful without feeling success. ~ Only those who possess nothing ~ Will lose nothing.

[02c29t] Shi Fu Hwang ~ The Rise Of Relative Opposites ~ Lao Tze says, ~ When the people in the world gain a knowledge of that which is beautiful, ~ they will also gain a knowledge of that which is ugly. ~ When they gain a knowledge of that which belongs to the realm of the good, ~ they will also gain a knowledge of that which belongs to the realm of the bad. ~ Existence and non-existence shall rotate to take place; ~ difficulty and ease impress people by the prepossession; ~ length long and short are acknowledged in comparison; ~ tallness and lowness confront to make contrast; ~ harmonious musical pieces, the notes and tones interdepend; ~ that which is before or behind leads or follows the other. ~ Therefore, there is a sage who likes to do business without the intent to control fate and conveys his instruction without speech. ~ All things make an effort to prosper, and there is no one who comes to interfere with them. ~ Moreover, the one who gives life to all things does not claim ownership of them; ~ works laboriously for them, and does not expect a reward in return; ~ establishes the feat for them, and does not confess the achievement. ~ Because it does not confess the achievement, no one can forget the achievement.

[02c30t] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ When all in the world understand beauty to be beautiful, then ugliness exists. ~ When all understand goodness to be good, then evil exists. ~ Thus existence suggests non-existence; ~ Easy gives rise to difficult; ~ Short is derived from long by comparison; ~ Low is distinguished from high by position; ~ Resonance harmonizes sound; ~ After follows before. ~ Therefore, the Sage carries on his business without action, and gives his teaching without words.

[02c31t] Paul J. Lin ~ When all in the world recognize beauty as beauty, it is ugliness. ~ When they recognize good as good, it is not good. ~ Therefore, ~ being and non-being beget each other, ~ hard and easy complement each other, ~ long and short shape each other, ~ high and low rely on each other, ~ sound and voice harmonize with each other, ~ front and back follow each other. ~ Therefore, the Sage administers without action and instructs without words. ~ He lets all things rise without dominating them, ~ produces without attempting to possess, ~ acts without asserting, ~ achieves without taking credit. ~ And because he does not take credit, it will never leave him.

[02c32t] Michael LaFargue ~ When everyone in the world recognizes the elegant as elegant ... ~ then ugliness has just appeared. ~ When all recognize goodness as good ... ~ then the not-good has just appeared. ~ Yes: ~ 'Being' and 'nothing' give birth one to the other; ~ 'the difficult' and 'the easy' give full shape to one another; ~ 'what excels' and 'what falls short' form one another; ~ 'the noble' and 'the lowly' give content to one another; ~ the music and the voice harmonize with one another; ~ the back and the front follow one another. ~ Always. ~ And so the Wise Person: ~ Settles into his job of Not Doing, ~ carries on his teaching done without talking. ~ The thousands of things arise and are active - ~ and he rejects none of them. ~ He is a doer but does not rely on this, ~ he achieves successes but does not dwell in them. ~ He just does not dwell in them, and so they cannot be taken away.

[02c33t] Cheng Lin ~ As soon as the world regards some thing as beautiful, forthwith also appears ugliness. ~ As soon as the world regards some deed as good, forthwith also appears evil. ~ Thus we have the alternation of existence and non-existence; ~ the succession of the difficult and the easy; ~ the comparison of the long and the short; ~ the contrast between the high and the low; ~ the variation of pitch notes; ~ the order of precedence and sequence. ~ The Sage is ever free from artifice, and practises the precept of silence. ~ He dose things without the desire for control. ~ He lives without the thought of private ownership. ~ He gives without the wish for return. ~ He achieves without claiming credit for himself. ~ Because he does not claim credit for himself, he is always given credit.

[02c34t] Yi Wu ~ When all in the world know beauty as beauty, ~ then ugliness already has arisen. ~ When all know good as good, ~ then bad already has arisen. ~ Therefore: ~ existence and non-existence give birth to each other, ~ difficult and easy complement each other, ~ long and short contrast with each other, ~ high and low rely on each other, ~ sound and voice harmonize with each other, ~ front and back follow each other. ~ Therefore: ~ the sage manages his affairs by non-action and spreads his teachings without words. ~ All things arise, he does not reject them. ~ He produces, but does not possess; ~ acts, but does not take credit; ~ achieves merit, but does not dwell [on it]. ~ Because he does not dwell on it, it does not leave him.

[02c35t] Han Hiong Tan ~ When everyone knows what beauty is, ~ There must also be ugliness. ~ When everybody knows what goodness is, ~ Then evil must also exist. ~ Therefore, the haves and the have-nots coexist. ~ Easy and hard become complementary. ~ Long and short differ in length. ~ High and low contrast in height. ~ Tone and pitch harmonise with each other. ~ The past is followed by the present. ~ Hence, the sage manages his affairs with non-action, ~ Teaches without utterance, ~ And lets everything develop without any interference. ~ Dao procreates but does not possess. ~ It facilitates development but does not gloat. ~ When it accomplishes his task, it does not claim credit. ~ As the sage does not claim credit for his success, ~ The credit cannot be taken away from him.

[02c36t] Hua-Ching Ni ~ As soon as the world regards something as beautiful, ~ ugliness simultaneously becomes apparent. ~ As soon as the world regards something as good, ~ evil simultaneously becomes apparent. ~ In exactly the same manner, ~ existence and nonexistence give birth to each other. ~ Difficult and easy define each other. ~ Long and short form each other. ~ High and low make each other distinguishable. ~ Silence and sound make each other conspicuous. ~ Front and back connect each other. ~ Realizing this, one does not separate one's being from the subtle essence of the universe. ~ One holds no preconceptions, and does things without insisting on personal conditions. ~ One guides people by living in accord with the essence of life. ~ One brings good things about, but has no intention of possessing them. ~ One performs work, but has no intention to acquire personal power. ~ When one's task is accomplished, ~ one lets go of it and seeks no reward or recognition. ~ Because one does not claim credit for oneself, ~ one does not do any damage to oneself.

[02c37t] Chang Chung-yuan ~ When beauty is universally affirmed as beauty, therein is ugliness. ~ When goodness is universally affirmed as goodness, therein is evil. ~ Therefore: being and non-being are mutually posited in their emergence. ~ Difficult and easy are mutually posited in their complementariness. ~ Long and short are mutually posited in their positions. ~ High and low are mutually posited in their contradiction. ~ Voice and tone are mutually posited in their unity. ~ Front and back are mutually posited in their succession. ~ Thus, the wise deals with things through non-interference and teaches through no-words. ~ All things flourish without interruption. ~ They grow by themselves, and no one possesses them. ~ Work is done, and no one depends on it. ~ Achievements are made, but no one claims credit. ~ Because no one claims credit, achievements are always there.

[02c38t] Henry Wei ~ Self-Culture ~ Yang Shen ~ When all the world knows beauty as beauty, ~ Then ugliness comes into being; ~ When all the world knows goodness as goodness, ~ Then evil comes into being. ~ Therefore, ~ Being and Non-Being condition each other; ~ Difficult and Easy give rise to each other; ~ Long and Short set off each other; ~ High and Low contrast each other; ~ Tone and Voice harmonize each other; ~ Front and Rear succeed each other. ~ Thus the Sage handles affairs non-assertively, ~ And imparts his teaching without words. ~ The ten thousand things grow apace, ~ But he does not let them down. ~ He produces but does not claim ownership; ~ He acts but does not presume on the result; ~ He achieves success but does not take the credit. ~ For the very reason that he takes no credit, ~ Credit does not separate from him.

[02c39t] Ha Poong Kim ~ All under Heaven recognize beautiful as beautiful, ~ But this is none other than ugly. ~ Everyone recognizes good as good, ~ But this is none other than bad. ~ Therefore being and non-being rise together; ~ Difficult and easy complete each other; ~ Long and short shape each other; ~ High and low lean on each other; ~ Sound and voice come in harmony; ~ Front and back accompany each other. ~ Therefore the sage ~ Relies on no-action, ~ Practices wordless teaching. ~ There rise the ten thousand things, but he disowns nothing, ~ He gives them life, yet does not possess them; ~ Rules them, yet does not depend on them; ~ His work is done, but he never dwells in it. ~ Truly, since he never dwells, ~ He never departs.

[02c40t] Tao Huang ~ In the world, ~ Everyone recognizes beauty as beauty, ~ Since the ugly is also there. ~ Everyone recognizes goodness as goodness, ~ Since evil is also there. ~ Since being and nonbeing give birth to each other, ~ Difficulty and ease complete each other, ~ Long and short measure each other, ~ High and low overflow into each other, ~ Voice and sound harmonize with each other, ~ And before and after follow each other, ~ Therefore the sage ~ Lives in actionless engagement, ~ And preaches wordless doctrine. ~ The myriad creatures ~ Act without beginning, ~ Nourish without possessing, ~ Accomplish without claiming credit. ~ It is accomplishment without claiming credit that makes the outcome self-sustaining.

[02c41t] Tang Zi-chang ~ When the whole world recognizes that beauty is beautiful, ~ It may be not beautiful at all. ~ When the whole world recognizes that goodness is good, ~ It may not be good at all. ~ Thus, existence and nonexistence produce each other. ~ The high and the low are compared with each other. ~ The long and the short show off each other. ~ The high and the low compliment each other. ~ The front and the rear follow each other. ~ Thus the Sage ruler administered state affairs by non-interference and carried out education by non-preaching. ~ All things are resolved in order and nothing is rejected. ~ It produces All Things but it does not possess them. ~ It provides everything for them but it does not take anything from them. ~ He accomplished deeds for them, but he did not claim the deeds. ~ Since he did not claim the deeds, they did not leave him.

[02c42t] Wing-tsit Chan ~ When the people of the world all know beauty as beauty, ~ There arises the recognition of ugliness. ~ When they all know the good as good, ~ There arises the recognition of evil. ~ Therefore: ~ Being and non-being produce each other; ~ Difficult and easy complete each other; ~ Long and short contrast each other; ~ High and low distinguish each other; ~ Sound and voice harmonize each other; ~ Front and behind accompany each other. ~ Therefore the sage manages affairs without action ~ And spreads doctrines without words. ~ All things arise, and he does not turn away from them. ~ He produces them but does not take possession of them. ~ He acts but does not rely on his own ability. ~ He accomplishes his task but does not claim credit for it. ~ It is precisely because he does not claim credit that his accomplishment remains with him.

[02c91t] И. И. Семененко ~ Когда все в Поднебесной знают, что прекрасное прекрасно, то вот и безобразное; ~ когда все знают, что добро является добром, то вот и зло. ~ Наличие и неналичие друг друга порождают, ~ трудное и легкое друг друга образуют, ~ короткое и длинное друг друга формируют, ~ высокое и низкое взаимно соотносятся, ~ тона звучат в гармонии, ~ переднее и заднее друг за другом следуют. ~ Вот почему Премудрый человек пребывает в деле недеяния, ~ проводит в жизнь учение, невыразимое в словах. ~ От десяти тысяч вещей, хотя они и возрастают, он не отказывается; ~ чему дает жизнь, не имеет, что делает, на то не опирается, свершая подвиги, к себе их не относит. ~ Лишь потому, что не относит, и остается с ними неразлучен.

[02c92t] А. А. Маслов ~ Лишь только в Поднебесной узнали, что красивое - красиво, тотчас появилось и уродство. ~ Как только все узнали, что добро - это добро, тотчас появилось и зло. ~ Ибо наличие и отсутствие порождают друг друга. ~ Сложное и простое создают друг друга. ~ Длинное и короткое поверяют друг друга. ~ Высокое и низкое тянутся друг к другу. ~ Голоса и звуки приходят в гармонию друг с другом. ~ "До" и "после" следуют друг за другом. ~ Поэтому мудрец действует недеянием и учит молчанием. ~ Мириады созданий возникают из этого, а он не правит ими. ~ Он порождает их и не обладает ими; ~ действует, не имея воздаяния; ~ достигая совершенства, не считает это успехом; ~ в силу того, что он никогда не стремится к успеху, тот никогда не покидает его.

[02c93t] Е. А. Торчинов ~ Когда в Поднебесной все узнают, что прекрасно прекрасное, - это уже безобразно. ~ Когда в Поднебесной все узнают, что добро есть добро, - это уже не добро. ~ Поэтому отсутствие и наличие друг друга порождают, ~ легкое и трудное друг друга определяют, ~ длинное и короткое друг друга измеряют, ~ высокое и низкое друг друга исчисляют, ~ мелодия и ритм друг с другом гармонируют, ~ начало и конец друг с другом чередуются. ~ Поэтому совершенный мудрец пребывает в делах недеяния, не прибегая к словам, он осуществляет учение. ~ Все сущее творит, не полагая начала творению, и действует, не замышляя ничего преднамеренно. ~ И Дао-Путь - рождает, но не обладает, действует, но не предумышляет, благими качествами и свойствами обладает, к ним не привязываясь никогда. ~ Поскольку в них он к ним не привязан, то их он и не теряет.

[02c94t] А. Е. Лукьянов ~ Когда в Поднебесной все узнают, что прекрасное есть прекрасное, то появляется и безобразное. ~ [Когда в Поднебесной] все узнают, что добро есть добро, то появляется и не добро. ~ Это происходит потому, что бытие и небытие друг друга порождают, ~ трудное и легкое друг друга создают, ~ длинное и короткое друг с другом соизмеряются, ~ высокое и низкое друг с другом сопоставляются, ~ звук и мелодия друг с другом согласуются, ~ переднее и заднее друг за другом следуют. ~ Вот почему совершенномудрый человек правит службу недеяния, ведет учение без слов. ~ Мириады вещей творит и не уклоняется от этого. ~ Рождает и не обладает [ими]. ~ Возделывает и ни на что не опирается, ~ Успешно завершает и не ставит себе это в заслугу. ~ А поскольку не ставит в заслугу, постольку и не отвергается.

[02c95t] Ян Хин-шун ~ Когда все в Поднебесной узнают, что прекрасное является прекрасным, появляется и безобразное. ~ Когда все узнают, что доброе является добром, возникает и зло. ~ Поэтому ~ бытие и небытие порождают друг друга, ~ трудное и легкое создают друг друга, ~ длинное и короткое взаимно соотносятся, ~ высокое и низкое взаимно определяются, ~ звуки, сливаясь, приходят в гармонию, ~ предыдущее и последующее следуют друг за другом. ~ Поэтому совершенномудрый, ~ совершая дела, предпочитает недеяние; ~ осуществляя учение, не прибегает к словам; ~ вызывая изменения вещей, [он] не осуществляет их сам; ~ создавая, не обладает [тем, что создано]; ~ приводя в движение, не прилагает к этому усилий; ~ успешно завершая [что-либо], не гордится. ~ Поскольку он не гордится, его заслуги не могут быть отброшены.

[02c96t] Д. П. Конисси ~ Под небом все (люди) знают, что красивое есть красивое, но оно только безобразное. ~ Точно также все знают, что добро есть добро, но оно только зло. ~ Из бытия и небытия произошло все; ~ из невозможного и возможного - исполнение; ~ из длинного и короткого - форма. ~ Высокое подчиняет себе низшее; ~ высшие голоса вместе с низшими производят гармонию; ~ предшествующее подчиняет себе последующее. ~ Святой муж, будучи бездеятельным, распространяет свое учение. ~ Вся тварь повинуется ему и никогда не откажется от исполнения его воли. ~ Он производит много, но ничего не имеет; ~ делает много, но не хвалится сделанным; ~ совершает подвиги, но их не приписывает себе. ~ Он нигде не останавливается, поэтому ему не будет надобности удаляться туда, куда он не желает.

[02c97t] В. В. Малявин ~ Когда в мире узнают, что прекрасное - прекрасно, тотчас появляется уродство. ~ Когда в мире узнают, что доброе - добро, появляется зло. ~ Наличное и отсутствующее друг друга порождают. ~ Трудное и легкое друг друга создают. ~ Длинное и короткое друг друга выявляют. ~ Высокое и низкое друг друга устанавливают. ~ Музыка и голос друг другу откликаются. ~ Предыдущее и последующее друг за другом следуют. ~ Так будет всегда. ~ Посему премудрый человек предается делу недеяния ~ И претворяет бессловесное учение. ~ Десять тысяч вещей созидают - и он ничего не отвергает, ~ Рождают - и он ничем не владеет. ~ Все свершают - и он за это не держится. ~ Успехи приходят - и он не помещает себя в них. ~ Он ни в чем не пребывает - и от него ничто не уходит!

PSEUDO-CHAPTER Three

[03c01t] Robert G. Henricks ~ By not elevating the worthy, you bring it about that people will not compete. ~ By not valuing goods that are hard to obtain, you bring it about that people will not act like thieves. ~ By not displaying the desirable you bring it about that people will not be confused. ~ Therefore, in the government of the Sage: ~ He empties their minds, ~ And fills their bellies. ~ Weakens their ambition, ~ And strengthens their bones. ~ He constantly causes the people to be without knowledge and without desires. ~ If he can bring it about that those with knowledge simply do not dare to act, ~ Then there is nothing that will not be in order.

[03c02t] John C. H. Wu ~ BY not exalting the talented you will cause the people to cease from rivalry and contention. ~ By not prizing goods hard to get, you will cause the people to cease from robbing and stealing. ~ By not displaying what is desirable, you will cause the people's hearts to remain undisturbed. ~ Therefore, the Sage's way of governing begins by ~ Emptying the heart of desires, ~ Filling the belly with food, ~ Weakening the ambitions, ~ Toughening the bones. ~ In this way he will cause the people to remain without knowledge and without desire, and prevent the knowing ones from any ado. ~ Practice Non-Ado, and everything will be in order.

[03c03t] D. C. Lau ~ Not to honour men of worth will keep the people from contention; ~ not to value goods which are hard to come by will keep them from theft; ~ not to display what is desirable will keep them from being unsettled of mind. ~ Therefore in governing the people, the sage empties their minds but fills their bellies, weakens their wills but strengthens their bones. ~ He always keeps them innocent of knowledge and free from desire, and ensures that the clever never dare to act. ~ Do that which consists in taking no action, and order will prevail.

[03c04t] R. L. Wing ~ Do not exalt the very gifted, And people will not contend. ~ Do not treasure goods that are hard to get, And people will not become thieves. ~ Do not focus on desires, And people's minds will not be confused. ~ Therefore, Evolved Individuals lead others by Opening their minds, ~ Reinforcing their centers, Relaxing their desires, Strengthening their characters. ~ Let the people always act without strategy or desire; ~ Let the clever not venture to act. ~ Act without action, And nothing is without order.

[03c05t] Ren Jiyu ~ Refrain from exalting capable men, so that the people shall not compete. ~ Refrain from valuing rare goods, so that the people shall not steal. ~ Refrain from displaying anything which arouses desires, so that the people's hearts will not be disturbed. ~ Therefore the government of (under Heaven) the sage lies in: ~ Simplifying the people's minds, ~ Filling their bellies, ~ Weakening their ambitions, ~ Strengthening their bones, ~ And always keeping the people innocent of knowledge and desires. ~ (Thus) anyone who thinks himself clever is afraid of meddling. ~ By handling affairs on the principle of nonaction everyone will do well.

[03c06t] Gia-fu Feng ~ Not exalting the gifted prevents quarreling. ~ Not collecting treasures prevents stealing. ~ Not seeing desirable things prevents confusion of the heart. ~ The wise therefore rule by emptying hearts and stuffing bellies, ~ by weakening ambitions and strengthening bones. ~ If people lack knowledge and desire, then intellectuals will not try to interfere. ~ If nothing is done, then all will be well.

[03c07t] Lok Sang Ho ~ The wise ruler treats able men the same as he would treat others. ~ In so doing he avoids strife. ~ He plays down precious goods. ~ In so doing he discourages the emergence of thieves. ~ He makes an effort to stem the emergence of objects of desire. ~ In so doing he ensures that his citizens' minds will not be thrown into disarray. ~ Thus the Sage's governance satisfies the real needs of people, ~ while emptying their minds of desires; ~ Builds up the inner strengths (bones) of people ~ while weakening their vain ambitions. ~ He would preserve the natural simplicity of his citizens' minds and reduce their desires. ~ In so doing the clever people will learn that their contrivance will not work. ~ Because the Sage does nothing but following the law of nature ~ nothing will deviate from their natural and orderly places.

[03c08t] Xiaolin Yang ~ If you do not worship the nobility, there will be no fighting among people. ~ If you do not value scarce items, there will be no stealing. ~ If you do not show people temptations, their hearts will not be wild. ~ Therefore, the great men's ways of governing people were: ~ To remove their greed but fill their stomachs, ~ To weaken their ambition but strengthen their bodies. ~ Always keep them without knowledge and without desires, ~ And this prevents those clever manipulators from doing anything.

[03c09t] Walter Gorn Old, RESTING THE PEOPLE ~ Avoiding distinctions of merit among the people prevents jealousy. ~ Not setting a value on rare things prevents theft. ~ Not seeking the things of sense keeps the mind in peace. ~ Thus the Sage governs by ridding the heart of its desires, giving the stomach due satisfaction, by resting the muscles and strengthening the bones, by preserving the world from a knowledge of evil and hence from its desire, and by making those who have such knowledge afraid to use it. ~ He acts by non-action, and by this he governs all.

[03c10t] James Legge ~ Not to value and employ men of superior ability is the way to keep the people from rivalry among themselves; ~ not to prize articles which are difficult to procure is the way to keep them from becoming thieves; ~ not to show them what is likely to excite their desires is the way to keep their minds from disorder. ~ Therefore the sage, in the exercise of his government, empties their minds, fills their bellies, weakens their wills, and strengthens their bones. ~ He constantly (tries to) keep them without knowledge and without desire, and where there are those who have knowledge, to keep them from presuming to act (on it). ~ When there is this abstinence from action, good order is universal.

[03c11t] David Hinton ~ Never bestow honors and people won't quarrel. ~ Never prize rare treasures and people won't steal. ~ Never flaunt alluring things and people won't be confused. ~ This is how a sage governs. ~ Fill bellies and empty minds, ~ strengthen bones and weaken ambition, ~ always keep the people from knowing and wanting, ~ then those who know are those who never presume to act. ~ If you're nothing doing what you do all things will be governed well.

[03c12t] Chichung Huang ~ Do not exalt talents ~ So that the people will not contend; ~ Do not treasure goods hard to come by ~ So that the people will not steal; ~ Do not parade enviable things ~ So that the people will not rebel. ~ Hence, when the sage man ruled, ~ He emptied their minds, ~ Filled their stomachs, ~ Weakened their ambitions, ~ Strengthened their bones. ~ He constantly made the people ~ Uncrafty and unlustful, ~ And made them know not to be daring. ~ He acted not, that is all. ~ Thus, the state cannot but become well-ruled.

[03c13t] Ellen M. Chen ~ Do not honor (shang) the worthy (hsien), ~ So that the people will not contend (cheng) with one another. ~ Do not value (kuei) hard-to-get goods, ~ So that the people will not turn robbers. ~ Do not show objects of desire (k'o yü), ~ So that the people's minds (hsin) are not disturbed. ~ Therefore, when the sage rules: ~ He empties the minds (hsin) of his people, ~ Fills their bellies, ~ Weakens their wills (chih), ~ And strengthens their bones. ~ Always he keeps his people in no-knowledge (wu-chih) and no-desire (wu-yü), ~ Such that he who knows dares not act. ~ Act by no-action (wu-wei), ~ Then, nothing is not in order.

[03c14t] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ [A Sage] would not exalt sages [with honor and benefit] for the purpose of preventing sapiens from [connivingly] contending [for the title out of vanity]; ~ [He] would not promote hard-to-get goods so that people will not [be tempted to] rob and steal; ~ [He] would keep sense-appealing objects out of people's sight so that people's hearts (minds) will not be confused. ~ Accordingly, ~ A Sage rules with the following measure: ~ Humbling people's heart [to weed out prejudices and conceit from their minds, so that they are prepared for the reception of true knowledge]; ~ Filling up people's stomachs; ~ Weakening people's [selfish and improper] desires; ~ Strengthening people's backbones [for the quest of truth]. ~ [A Sage] would constantly keep people away from [unaccountable] knowledge and [selfish] desires; ~ By doing so, sly and artful people will not dare to muddle through; ~ Practicing the principle of non-interference with utmost diligence will bring about orderly and even-handed management.

[03c15t] Tien Cong Tran ~ Do not exalt the talented, and the people cease from rivalry and contention. ~ Do not prize goods hard to get, and the people cease from robbing and stealing. ~ Do not display what is desirable, and the people's hearts remain undisturbed. ~ Therefore, the sage's way of governing is: emptying the mind, filling the belly, weakening the will, toughening the bones. ~ In this way he will cause the people to remain without knowledge and without desire, and prevent the knowing ones from any doing. ~ Doing "non-doing", and everything will be in order.

[03c16t] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ Do not glorify the elite, and people will not compete. ~ Do not treasure rare things, and people will not steal them. ~ Do not let people see things that induce desire, and people will not commit crimes. ~ Thus, ~ the sage will make people know less, but feed them well; ~ make them less ambitious, but physically strong; ~ make people less knowledgeable and have less desire. ~ This way, even knowledgeable people would not dare to have ambition. ~ Do not coerce people, and then they are not difficult to rule.

[03c17t] Arthur Waley ~ If we stop looking for 'persons of superior morality' (hsien) to put in power, there will be no more jealousies among the people. ~ If we cease to set store by products that are hard to get, there will be no more thieves. ~ If the people never see such things as excite desire, their hearts will remain placid and undisturbed. ~ Therefore the Sage rules ~ By emptying their hearts ~ And filling their bellies, ~ Weakening their intelligence ~ And toughening their sinews ~ Ever striving to make the people knowledgeless and desireless. ~ Indeed he sees to it that if there be any who have knowledge, they dare not interfere. ~ Yet through his actionless activity all things are duly regulated.

[03c18t] Richard John Lynn ~ Do not exalt the worthy [xian], and so keep the common folk from contention. ~ Do not value goods hard to get, and so stop the common folk from becoming thieves. ~ Do not let them see desirable things, and so spare the hearts/minds of the common folk from disorder. ~ Therefore the way the sage governs is to keep their hearts/minds empty and their bellies full. ~ He keeps their wills weak and their bones strong. ~ He always keeps the common folk free from the capacity for knowing and from feeling desire. ~ And prevents the knowledgeable from ever daring to act. ~ Because he acts without conscious effort, nothing remains ungoverned.

[03c19t] Lin Yutang ~ ACTION WITHOUT DEEDS ~ Exalt not the wise, ~ So that the people shall not scheme and contend; ~ Prize not rare objects, ~ So that the people shall not steal; ~ Shut out from sight the things of desire, ~ So that the people's hearts shall not be disturbed. ~ Therefore in the government of the Sage: ~ He keeps empty their hearts, ~ Makes full their bellies, ~ Discourages their ambitions, ~ Strengthens their frames; ~ So that the people may be innocent of knowledge and desires, ~ And the cunning ones shall not presume to interfere. ~ By action without deeds ~ May all live in peace.

[03c20t] Victor H. Mair ~ Not exalting men of worth prevents the people from competing; ~ Not putting high value on rare goods prevents the people from being bandits; ~ Not displaying objects of desire prevents the people from being disorderly. ~ For these reasons, ~ The sage, in ruling, ~ hollows their hearts, ~ stuffs their stomachs, ~ weakens their wills, ~ builds up their bones, ~ Always causing the people to be without knowledge and desire. ~ He ensures that the knowledgeable dare not be hostile, ~ and that is all. ~ Thus, ~ His rule is universal.

[03c21t] Tolbert McCarroll ~ Not exalting the talented prevents rivalry. ~ Not valuing goods that are hard to obtain prevents stealing. ~ Not displaying desirable things prevents confusion of the heart. ~ Therefore, ~ the True Person governs by ~ emptying the heart of desire ~ and filling the belly with food, ~ weakening ambitions ~ and strengthening bones. ~ If the people are simple and free from desire, ~ then the clever ones never dare to interfere. ~ Practice action without striving and all will be in order.

[03c22t] David H. Li ~ Where admiration is not bestowed upon the wise, ~ the populace will not compete for recognition. ~ Where premium is not placed on rare goods, ~ the populace will not engage in robbery. ~ Where desirable items are not on display, ~ the populace will not be tempted. ~ Thus, ~ the sage governs by cleansing [the populace's] hearts, ~ filling their stomachs, ~ taming their will, ~ and strengthening their bodies ~ - to induce the populace, in time, not to indulge in knowledge nor to cultivate avarice. ~ So prepared, those with wisdom dare not offer schemes, and laissez-faire governance follows. ~ With that, no affair is beyond governance.

[03c23t] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ When the learned is not over esteemed, ~ There will not be unnecessary competition amongst people. ~ When the treasure is not over valued, ~ There will not be acts of stealing amongst people. ~ When we do not show people things that stir up their wants, ~ Their minds will not be disturbed. ~ Therefore, the sage governs the people by ~ Restoring balance in value and worth, through ~ Emptying people's minds and filling their essence, ~ Weakening their ambition and strengthening their character, ~ Freeing them from knowledge and wants, and ~ Keeping the learned from over exercising their authority. ~ Act in accordance with the principle of non-action - of eternal balance, ~ Then order will arise of itself.

[03c24t] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ If the exalted are not praised, the humble will not put on airs. ~ When rare things are not assigned a value, the thief has no reason to steal them. ~ When the desired object is not shown, the heart has no reason to covet it. ~ Therefore the sage says: ~ By emptying their hearts ~ By filling their stomachs ~ By weakening their ambition ~ By strengthening their bones, ~ He prevents them from knowing what evil is and yearning for good, and this also prevents the knowledgeable ones from acting according to their knowledge. ~ He governs by non-action, ~ And therefore, there is nothing that cannot be done. ~ Non-quiet and non-order in the world are caused by ambition to attain the unattainable, ~ and by plotting to go from the undesired to the desired. ~ If people would obey the laws of the world the way the sage does, there would always be balance between body and soul, and peace and serenity would abound in the world.

[03c25t] Man-Ho Kwok ~ If the sage refuses to be proud ~ Then people won't compete for his attention; ~ If the sage does not buy treasures ~ Then the people won't want to steal them; ~ If the sage governs with vision ~ Then his people will not go wrong. ~ So in his wisdom, he restrains himself: ~ - by not being greedy for food ~ - by not dominating the State ~ - by keeping himself healthy and fit. ~ The sage always makes sure that the people don't know what he's done, so they never want to be in control - and are never driven by ambition. ~ He keeps them in truth like this acting invisibly. ~ You see, if there is nothing to fight for ~ then there is nothing that can break the flow.

[03c26t] Gu Zhengkun ~ Keep the people from contention by disregarding men of abilities; ~ Keep the people from theft by not valuing rare goods; ~ Keep the people from the disturbed state of mind by concealing what is desirable. ~ That is why in governing the people ~ The sage simplifies their minds but fills up their stomachs; ~ weakens their wills, but strengthens their bones. ~ By keeping the people from knowledge and desires, ~ He disables wise men from taking any active action. ~ Act in accordance with this principle of inaction ~ And the world will be kept in order everywhere.

[03c27t] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ Not to value one's own virtues is the way to restrain people from striving for wealth. ~ Not to value the precious is the way to restrain people from theft. ~ Not to see the desirable is the way to restrain confusion in the mind. ~ Therefore the wise way to rule is: ~ not to give importance to oneself, ~ or try to enrich one's spirit and virtue; ~ not to be inordinately proud of one's ability, ~ or try to make unceasing efforts to improve oneself. ~ Let the people stay free from desire and knowledge in order to avoid the pitfalls that knowledge may bring. ~ Rule by doing nothing, then everything will be as it should.

[03c28t] Liu Qixuan ~ Worship no sage, ~ And people will not struggle for vanity. ~ Treasure no rare goods, ~ And people will not steal them. ~ Dangle no tantalizer, ~ And people will not be confused in mind and will. ~ Therefore, ~ The wise politics fills the stomach rather than the mind, ~ Strengthens the bones and muscles rather than the will, ~ And enables people to be rather than to desire to be. ~ Indeed, it is through doing nothing misleading ~ That the greatest political success can be achieved.

[03c29t] Shi Fu Hwang ~ Acting Without The Intent To Control Fate ~ Lao Tze says, ~ When I don't promote those men of high character to the position of authority and give them gifts, then people will not strive to follow their examples. ~ When I don't value those things which are difficult to attain, then people will be kept from becoming thieves. ~ When I don't let people see things which will excite evil desires, their minds will be kept from becoming disordered. ~ Therefore, when a sage is in charge of the government, he prefers to humble people's minds, feed their stomachs, weaken their ambitions, and make their frames strong. ~ He constantly keeps them from knowledge and from desire, and those who have knowledge would not presume to act against this rule. ~ When practicing acting without the intent to control fate, there is no evil which can't be cured.

[03c30t] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ Not exalting the worthy keeps the people from emulation. ~ Not valuing rare things keeps them from theft. ~ Not showing what is desirable keeps their hearts from confusion. ~ Therefore the Sage rules ~ By emptying their hearts, ~ Filling their stomachs, ~ Weakening their ambitions ~ And strengthening their bones. ~ He always keeps them from knowing what is evil and desiring what is good; thus he gives the crafty ones no chance to act. ~ He governs by non-action; consequently there is nothing un-governed.

[03c31t] Paul J. Lin ~ Exalt not the worthy, so that the people will not fight. ~ Prize not the rare treasure, so that they will not steal. ~ Exhibit not the desirable, so that their hearts will not be distracted. ~ Therefore in governing, the Sage ~ empties the people's hearts and fills their stomachs, ~ weakens their will and strengthens their bones. ~ He always keeps them void of knowledge and desire, so that those who know will not dare to act. ~ Acting through inaction, he leaves nothing ungoverned.

[03c32t] Michael LaFargue ~ Not promoting the wise and worthy, ~ brings it about that the people are not contentious. ~ Not prizing goods hard to come by, ~ brings it about that the people do not become thieves. ~ Not paying attention to the desirable, ~ brings it about that the people's minds do not become disordered. ~ And so, the government of the Wise Person: ~ Empty their minds, fill their bellies, ~ weaken their ambitions, strengthen their bones. ~ Always bring it about that the people ~ are without knowledge and without desires. ~ Bring it about that the clever ones ~ do not presume to set about doing. ~ Do Not Doing, ~ and nothing will be left un-governed.

[03c33t] Cheng Lin ~ When talents are not esteemed, men will not strive to excel one another. ~ When wealth is not treasured, men will not attempt to rob one another. ~ When the objects of sensual satisfaction disappear, men's minds are free from distraction and confusion. ~ Wherefore the Sage, as regards government, wishes only that it will enable men to be humble at heart, well-fed in body, free from sensuous desires, and strong in physique. ~ When the people are free of cunning, desires, and artifice, there must be good order.

[03c34t] Yi Wu ~ [The ruler] not exalting talent, the people will not compete; ~ [The ruler] not valuing rare goods, the people will not steal; ~ [The ruler] not displaying desirable things, the people's hearts will not be disturbed. ~ Therefore, the sage's government: ~ empties their hearts, ~ fills their bellies, ~ weakens their wills, ~ strengthens their bones. ~ He always causes the people to have no knowledge and no desires ~ And causes those who are clever to not dare to act. ~ Acting by non-action, nothing will not be governed well.

[03c35t] Han Hiong Tan ~ Do not venerate the intelligentsia, ~ So that people will not rival. ~ Do not value rare objects, ~ So that people will not steal. ~ Do not display any desirable goods, ~ So that people will not be tempted. ~ Therefore, the sage rules the people by ~ Emptying their hearts, filling their stomachs, ~ Diminishing their desires and strengthening their bones. ~ He constantly makes people devoid of cunning and ambition, ~ So much so that even a rabid rabble-rouser among them ~ Is not able to stir up any trouble. ~ By practising non-action, ~ The rule will be peaceful.

[03c36t] Hua-Ching Ni ~ When the superior are not exalted, envy will not be aroused. ~ Then there will be no rivalry or contention among people. ~ When wealth is not treasured, desire for possessions will not be stirred up. ~ Then people will not be tempted to rob one another. ~ By shutting that which is desirable out of sight, the heart will remain undisturbed. ~ Then there will be no confusion in the hearts of people. ~ The guidance of the Universal One of natural wholeness is therefore: ~ Empty your mind. ~ Enjoy good health. ~ Weaken your ambitions. ~ Strengthen your essence. ~ When people are free from cunning, desire, and artifice, everything will be well-ordered of its own accord.

[03c37t] Chang Chung-yuan ~ If no one esteems the best, men will be free from contention. ~ If no one values the precious, men will be free from illegal gain. ~ If men see nothing to desire, their minds will be free from confusion. ~ Therefore, the wise guides men by relaxing their minds and keeping their bellies firm; ~ By reducing their wills and letting their physiques become strong. ~ He always frees men from the search for knowing and demanding. ~ This means that the knower dares not act for the known. ~ When action is through non-action, no one is uncultivated.

[03c38t] Henry Wei ~ Peace to the People ~ An Min ~ Do not exalt the worthy, ~ So that the people will not contend. ~ Do not treasure hard-to-get objects, ~ So that the people will not become thieves. ~ Keep what is desirable out of sight, ~ So that their heart will not get excited. ~ Therefore, in ruling the people the Sage ~ Empties their hearts, ~ Fills their bellies, ~ Weakens their aspirations, ~ Strengthens their bones. ~ He always makes them guileless and desireless, ~ And makes the guileful ones afraid to interfere. ~ Practice non-interference, ~ And there will never be any misrule.

[03c39t] Ha Poong Kim ~ If you do not exalt the worthy, ~ You will keep the people from contention. ~ If you do not treasure rare goods, ~ You will keep them from stealing. ~ If you do not exhibit things that may arouse their desire, ~ You will keep their minds in peace. ~ Therefore the sage, in governing the people, ~ Makes their minds empty, ~ Their stomachs full, ~ Their ambitions weak, ~ Their bones strong.

[03c40t] Tao Huang ~ Do not exalt intelligence and people will not compete; ~ Do not value rare goods and people will not steal; ~ Do not display for public view and people will not desire. ~ So the sage's governing methods are: ~ Emptying the mind, ~ Vitalizing the stomach, ~ Softening the will, ~ Strengthening the character. ~ This always makes people not know and not desire. ~ This always makes the knower dare not act. ~ Therefore, nothing is beyond ruling.

[03c41t] Tang Zi-chang ~ Promote no exalted persons, thus enabling the people to cease competition. ~ Prize no rare goods, thus enabling the people to cease robbery. ~ Don't display desirable things. ~ Let people's minds be undisturbed. ~ A Sage ruler enabled them to be tranquil in their hearts; ~ be filled in their stomachs; ~ be weakened in their ambitions; ~ be strengthened in their will. ~ He made them less intelligent and less desirous. ~ If intelligent people are made afraid of doing wrong, then no one in the world can not be governed.

[03c42t] Wing-tsit Chan ~ Do not exalt the worthy, so that the people shall not compete. ~ Do not value rare treasures, so that the people shall not steal. ~ Do not display objects of desire, so that the people's hearts shall not be disturbed. ~ Therefore in the government of the sage, ~ He keeps their hearts vacuous, ~ Fills their bellies, ~ Weakens their ambitions, ~ And strengthens their bones. ~ He always causes his people to be without knowledge (cunning) or desire, ~ And the crafty to be afraid to act. ~ By acting without action, all things will be in order.

[03c91t] И. И. Семененко ~ Когда не возвышают лучших, в народе нет соперничества; ~ когда не ценят редкие товары, в народе не бывает воровства; ~ когда устраняют все соблазны, сердце народа не находится в смятении. ~ Вот почему Премудрый человек при наведении порядка делает сердца людей пустыми, а желудки полными, стремления слабыми, а кости крепкими. ~ Он неизменно побуждает народ пребывать без знаний и желаний. ~ А на знающих влияет так, что они не смеют действовать. ~ Когда приводят в действие бездействие, то неизбежно добиваются порядка.

[03c92t] А. А. Маслов ~ Не превозноси мудрых - и люди не будут соперничать. ~ Не цени редкие вещи - и не будут красть. ~ Не гляди на то, что возбуждает желания, и сердца людей не придут в смятение. ~ Поэтому, управляя людьми, мудрец опустошает их сердца и наполняет желудки; ~ ослабляет их волю, но усиливает их кости; ~ постоянно стремится к тому, чтобы они были незатронуты знаниями и свободны от желаний, ~ а те, кто освящён мудростью, не помышляли о действии. ~ Действуй недеянием - и не будет того, что не управлялось бы тобой.

[03c93t] Е. А. Торчинов ~ Не почитайте мудрецов, и ссор не будет меж людьми. ~ Не цените труднодоступные товары, и люди не пойдут разбойничать и грабить. ~ Не устремляйте взор на вожделенное, и не смутится ваше сердце. ~ Вот совершенномудрый управляет так: ~ опустошает подданных сердца, но наполняет животы им, ~ их волю-самочинность ослабляет, взамен их кости укрепляя. ~ Всегда стремится он, чтоб у народа не было ни знаний, ни желаний, а знающие чтобы действовать не смели. ~ Творит недеяние он, но нет на свете ничего, не приведенного им в порядок.

[03c94t] А. Е. Лукьянов ~ Не превозносите достойных (талантливых), чтобы люди не соперничали. ~ Не цените трудно добываемого богатства, чтобы люди не становились разбойниками. ~ Не показывайте могущее вызвать страсть, чтобы сердца людей не трепетали. ~ Вот почему правление совершенномудрого человека состоит в следующем: ~ опустошай свое сердце, ~ наполняй свой живот, ~ ослабляй свою волю, ~ укрепляй свои кости. ~ Постоянство ведет к тому, что люди не будут иметь знаний, не будут иметь страстей; ~ ведет к тому, что мужи мудрствующие не посмеют деять. ~ Деяй недеяние, и тогда не будет неуправляемого.

[03c95t] Ян Хин-шун ~ Если не почитать мудрецов, то в народе не будет ссор. ~ Если не ценить редких предметов, то не будет воров среди народа. ~ Если не показывать того, что может вызвать зависть, то не будут волноваться сердца народа. ~ Поэтому, управляя [страной], совершенномудрый делает сердца [подданных] пустыми, а желудки - полными. ~ [Его управление] ослабляет их волю и укрепляет их кости. ~ Оно постоянно стремится к тому, чтобы у народа не было знаний и страстей, а имеющие знания не смели бы действовать. ~ Осуществление недеяния всегда приносит спокойствие.

[03c96t] Д. П. Конисси ~ Чтобы не было ссор в народе, нужно не уважать мудрецов. ~ Чтобы люди не сделались ворами, нужно не придавать никакого значения трудно добываемым (ценным) предметам, потому что когда люди не будут иметь тех предметов, которые бы прельстили их сердца, они никогда не соблазнятся ими. ~ Отсюда, когда святой муж управляет страной, то сердце его пусто, а тело его полно; ~ (он) ослабляет желания и укрепляет (свои) кости. ~ Он старается, чтобы народ был в невежестве и без страстей. ~ Также он старается, чтобы мудрые не смели сделать чего-нибудь. ~ Когда все сделаются бездеятельными, то (на земле) будет полное спокойствие.

[03c97t] В. В. Малявин ~ Не возвышайте "достойных" - тогда люди не будут соперничать. ~ Не цените редкостные товары - тогда люди не будут разбойничать. ~ Не выставляйте напоказ привлекательные вещи - тогда в людских сердцах не будет смущения. ~ Вот почему премудрый человек, управляя людьми, ~ Опустошает их головы ~ И наполняет их животы, ~ Ослабляет их стремления ~ И укрепляет их кости. ~ Он всегда делает так, что у людей нет ни знаний, ни желаний, ~ А знающие не осмеливаются что-либо предпринять. ~ Действуй неделанием - и во всем будет порядок.

[03c98t] Б. Б. Виногродский ~ Если не восхвалять умелость, тогда народ не соперничает. ~ Если не придавать ценности трудно достающимся товарам, тогда в народе не будет воровства. ~ Если не смотреть на то, что может вызвать стремление, тогда в сердце-сознании народа не будет смуты. ~ Это дает: ~ Человек мудрости, упорядочивая - ~ Поддерживает состояние пустоты в своем сердце-сознании. ~ Поддерживает ощущение полноты в своем животе. ~ Делает слабыми свои волеустремления. ~ Делает сильными свои кости. ~ Постоянство позволяет народу пребывать в отсутствии знания и отсутствии стремления. ~ Это приводит к тому, что даже знающий не осмеливается осуществлять-действовать. ~ Когда осуществляется осуществление отсутствия, тогда отсутствует беспорядок.

PSEUDO-CHAPTER Four

[04c01t] Robert G. Henricks ~ The Way is empty; ~ Yet when you use it, you never need fill it again. ~ Like an abyss! It seems to be the ancestor of the ten thousand things. ~ It files down sharp edges; ~ Unties the tangles; ~ Softens the glare; ~ And settles the dust. ~ Submerged! It seems perhaps to exist. ~ We don't know whose child it is; ~ It seems to have [even] preceded the Lord.

[04c02t] John C. H. Wu ~ THE Tao is like an empty bowl, ~ Which in being used can never be filled up. ~ Fathomless, it seems to be the origin of all things. ~ It blunts all sharp edges, ~ It unties all tangles, ~ It harmonizes all lights, ~ It unites the world into one whole. ~ Hidden in the deeps, ~ Yet it seems to exist forever. ~ I do not know whose child it is; ~ It seems to be the common ancestor of all, the father of things.

[04c03t] D. C. Lau ~ The way is empty, yet use will not drain it. ~ Deep, it is like the ancestor of the myriad creatures. ~ Blunt the sharpness; ~ Untangle the knots; ~ Soften the glare; ~ Let your wheels move only along old ruts. ~ Darkly visible, it only seems as if it were there. ~ I know not whose son it is. ~ It images the forefather of God.

[04c04t] R. L. Wing ~ The Tao is empty and yet useful; ~ Somehow it never fills up. ~ So profound! ~ It resembles the source of All Things. ~ It blunts the sharpness, ~ Unties the tangles, ~ And harmonizes the brightness. ~ It identifies with the ways of the world. ~ So deep! ~ It resembles a certain existence. ~ I do not know whose offspring it is, This Image in front of the source.

[04c05t] Ren Jiyu ~ Tao is invisible, but its usefulness cannot be exhausted. ~ It is so fathomless, like the ancestor of all things. ~ It covers its cutting edge, ~ It transcends entanglement, ~ It contains its light, ~ It mixes with its dust. ~ It has no form or image, but actually it exists. ~ I don't know where it was born of, ~ (I only know) it appeared before the Lord.

[04c06t] Gia-fu Feng ~ The Tao is an empty vessel; it is used, but never filled. ~ Oh, unfathomable source of ten thousand things! ~ Blunt the sharpness, ~ Untangle the knot, ~ Soften the glare, ~ Merge with dust. ~ Oh, hidden deep but ever present! ~ I do not know from whence it comes. ~ It is the forefather of the emperors.

[04c07t] Lok Sang Ho ~ The Way (Dao) is like water that simmers slowly, ~ perpetually emitting its energy without boiling over. ~ It is like a deep, deep pool in the mountains, ~ unfathomable yet could well harbor the origin of all life forms. ~ It can blunt sharp angles, ~ resolve disputes, ~ soften light that otherwise dazzles, ~ re-establish concordance where there is discord. ~ Unfathomable, who would know its existence? ~ Today I know of no child of anyone ~ who resembles our ancient forefathers. ~ (Who followed the Dao).

[04c08t] Xiaolin Yang ~ The DAO looks empty, but it can last forever. ~ It is so deep, it can be the ancestor of everything. ~ It dulls its sharpness, unties itself from the outside world, ~ Dims its brightness, and makes itself like dust. ~ It is so elusive, yet seems present. ~ I do not know its origin; ~ It should exist before the God that people worship.

[04c09t] Walter Gorn Old, THE CAUSELESS ~ Tao is without limitation; its depth is the source of whatsoever is. ~ It makes sharp things round, it brings order out of chaos, it obscures the brilliant, it is wholly without attachment. ~ I know not who gave it birth; it is more ancient than God.

[04c10t] James Legge ~ The Tao is (like) the emptiness of a vessel; ~ and in our employment of it we must be on our guard against all fulness. ~ How deep and unfathomable it is, as if it were the Honoured Ancestor of all things! ~ We should blunt our sharp points, and unravel the complications of things; ~ we should attemper our brightness, and bring ourselves into agreement with the obscurity of others. ~ How pure and still the Tao is, as if it would ever so continue! ~ I do not know whose son it is. ~ It might appear to have been before God.

[04c11t] David Hinton ~ Way is empty. ~ Use it: it never needs filling. ~ An abyss so deep ~ it seems ancestor to the ten thousand things, ~ it blunts edges, loosens tangles, softens glare, mingles dust. ~ A clarity so clear it only seems real, ~ whose child could it be? ~ Apparently it precedes gods and creators.

[04c12t] Chichung Huang ~ The Tao is the empty space of a vessel, ~ Yet, when used, ~ Never brims over. ~ How deep, ~ Like the ten thousand things' progenitor! ~ It files its sharpness, ~ Unravels its entanglements, ~ Softens its brightness, ~ And mingles with the dust. ~ How transparent, ~ As if existing! ~ I do not know whose son it was; ~ Seemed to precede the Emperor.

[04c13t] Ellen M. Chen ~ Tao is a whirling emptiness (ch'ung), ~ Yet (erh) in use (yung) is inexhaustible (ying). ~ Fathomless (yuan), ~ It seems to be the ancestor (tsung) of ten thousand beings. ~ It blunts the sharp, ~ Unties the entangled, ~ Harmonizes the bright, ~ Mixes the dust. ~ Dark (chan), ~ It seems perhaps to exist (ts'un). ~ I do not know whose child it is, ~ It is an image (hsiang) of what precedes God (Ti).

[04c14t] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ Tao [in physical world] is like an empty vessel; ~ Yet when comes to making use of it, its usefulness would go on and on as if it will never be exhausted. ~ The profundity [of Tao] is as fathomless as an abyss; ~ It appears [to me] to be the source of all and every thing and creature [in this world]. ~ [Equilibrium is maintained by followers of Tao in the following fashion:] ~ It rounds off [hurtful] sharp [edges]; ~ It unties the entangled (disputes); ~ It tampers the [disturbing blazing] light; ~ It coalesces with the earthy. ~ [Tao] is so unfathomable [laying beneath the phenomenon] that in all likelihood it exists! ~ I do not know whose offspring it is; ~ But I know that it existed prior to, as well as surpassed, the [Five] Phenomenon Gods [who were worshipped as heavenly governors of changing of seasons].

[04c15t] Tien Cong Tran ~ The Way is like an empty bowl, which is never used up. ~ Fathomless, it seems to be the origin of all things. ~ It blunts all sharp edges; it unties all tangles; it harmonizes all lights; it unites the worldly dusts. ~ Hidden in the deeps, yet it seems to exist forever. ~ I do not know whose child it is; it seems to be the common ancestor of all, the father of things.

[04c16t] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ Tao is abstract, their applicability is inexhaustible. ~ Abyss appears to be the origin of everything. ~ Deepness appears to be where the intangible exists. ~ Smoothening sharp edges; ~ Resolving conflicts; ~ Harmonizing glares; ~ Blending into the earth. ~ I do not know from where the theory comes, it appears to come from our late ancestors.

[04c17t] Arthur Waley ~ The Way is like an empty vessel ~ That yet may be drawn from ~ Without ever needing to be filled. ~ It is bottomless; the very progenitor of all things in the world. ~ In it all sharpness is blunted, ~ All tangles untied, ~ All glare tempered, ~ All dust smoothed. ~ It is like a deep pool that never dries. ~ Was it too the child of something else? ~ We cannot tell. ~ But as a substanceless image it existed before the Ancestor.

[04c18t] Richard John Lynn ~ The vessel of the Dao is empty, so use it but do not try to refill it. ~ It is such an abyss, oh, that it appears to be the progenitor of the myriad things. ~ It blunts the sharp, cuts away the tangled, merges with the brilliant, and becomes one with the very dust. ~ Its depth is so deep, oh, that it seems somehow to exist. ~ I do not know whose child it could be, for it appears to have been born before the Lord.

[04c19t] Lin Yutang ~ THE CHARACTER OF TAO ~ Tao is a hollow vessel, ~ And its use is inexhaustible! ~ Fathomless! ~ Like the fountain head of all things. ~ Its sharp edges rounded off, ~ Its tangles untied, ~ Its light tempered, ~ Its turmoil submerged, ~ Yet dark like deep water it seems to remain. ~ I do not know whose Son it is, ~ An image of what existed before God.

[04c20t] Victor H. Mair ~ The Way is empty, yet never refills with use; ~ Bottomless it is, like the forefather of the myriad creatures. ~ It files away sharp points, ~ unravels tangles, ~ diffuses light, ~ mingles with the dust. ~ Submerged it lies, ~ seeming barely to subsist. ~ I know not whose child it is, ~ only that it resembles the predecessor of God.

[04c21t] Tolbert McCarroll ~ The Tao is like an empty bowl, ~ yet it may be used without ever needing to be filled. ~ It is the deep and unfathomable source of the ten thousand things. ~ Blunt the sharpness. ~ Untie the knot. ~ Soften the glare. ~ Settle with the dust. ~ It is hidden deep yet ever present. ~ I do not know whose child it is. ~ It existed before the common ancestor.

[04c22t] David H. Li ~ Direction is the hollow. ~ Regardless of use, it is inexhaustible. ~ So unfathomable, as if the source of all matters. ~ So deep, as if it exists. ~ I do not know whose offspring Direction is; ~ it precedes kings.

[04c23t] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ Empty of all doctrines, ~ The Tao is wisdom eternally inexhaustible. ~ Fathomless for the mere intellect, ~ The Tao is the law wherewith all things come into being. ~ It blunts the edges of the intellect, ~ Untangles the knots of the mind, ~ Softens the glare of thinking, ~ And settles the dust of thought. ~ Transparent yet invisible, ~ The Tao exists like deep pellucid water. ~ Its origin is unknown, ~ For it existed before Heaven and Earth.

[04c24t] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ The Tao, if you examine it, will always be empty and will never be full. ~ In its infinite emptiness lies the source of all things, ~ It will remain in its depths forever. ~ I don't know whose seed it is, ~ But it looks like the predecessor of the universe itself.

[04c25t] Man-Ho Kwok ~ The Tao pours out everything into life - ~ it is a cornucopia that never runs dry. ~ It is the deep source of everything - ~ it is nothing, and yet in everything. ~ It smooths round sharpness and untangles the knots. ~ It glows like the lamp that draws the moth ... ~ Tao exists, Tao is ~ but where It came from I do not know. ~ It has been shaping things from before the First Being, ~ from the before the Beginning of Time.

[04c26t] Gu Zhengkun ~ The Tao is invisibly empty, ~ But its use is extremely plentiful. ~ It is profound like the originator of all things. ~ It shows no sharpness, ~ stays away from entanglements, ~ glows with veiled radiance, ~ mingles with dust. ~ It is formless and invisible, but indeed exists. ~ I do not know where it comes, ~ It seems to have appeared before the existence of God.

[04c27t] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ The Tao is based on harmony between emptiness and abundance. ~ It is the deep source of the myriad creatures. ~ It softens their sharpness. ~ It releases their confusion. ~ It lessens their lustre. ~ It merges with their dust. ~ The Tao is so clear and so transparent that it is nearly invisible, nearly formless; ~ no one can know its origin, ~ for it came before all creation.

[04c28t] Liu Qixuan ~ The Way is open for endless use ~ And will never fill up. ~ Like an endless valley ~ It blunts the sharpness, ~ Dissolves the currents, ~ Softens the intense light, ~ Assimilates all substances. ~ Is it being or non-being? ~ I don't know which son takes after which father.

[04c29t] Shi Fu Hwang ~ The Character Of The Tao ~ Lao Tze says, ~ The Tao in the void state works on everything. ~ It guards against fullness. ~ Its depth is unfathomable, as if it were the honored ancestor of all things. ~ It blunts the sharp points, sets in order the tangles, tempers the light, and agrees with the obscurity of others. ~ How pure and still the Tao is, as if it would ever stand. ~ I do not know its origin, and it seems to have existed before the coming of all gods.

[04c30t] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ Tao, when put in use for its hollowness, is not likely to be filled. ~ In its profundity it seems to be the origin of all things. ~ In its depth it seems ever to remain. ~ I do not know whose offspring it is; ~ But it looks like the predecessor of Nature.

[04c31t] Paul J. Lin ~ Tao is empty, used yet never filled. ~ It is deep, like the forefather of all things. ~ It dulls sharpness, and sorts tangles, ~ Blends with the light, becoming one with the dust. ~ So serene, as if it hardly existed. ~ I do not know whose son it is. ~ It seems to have preceded God.

[04c32t] Michael LaFargue ~ Tao being Empty, ~ it seems one who uses it will lack solidity. ~ An abyss, ~ it seems something like the ancestor of the thousands of things. ~ It dampens the passion, ~ it unties the tangles, ~ it makes the flashing things harmonious, ~ it makes the dust merge together. ~ Deep, ~ it is perhaps like an enduring something. ~ I don't know of anything whose offspring it might be - ~ it appears to precede God.

[04c33t] Cheng Lin ~ Truth may appear hollow, but its usefulness is inexhaustible. ~ It is so profound that it comprehends all things. ~ It is so vague that its very existence may seem doubtful. ~ I do not know its origin, but I believe that its existence preceded that of the gods.

[04c34t] Yi Wu ~ The Way appears empty; ~ in use, it may not overflow. ~ Fathomless, it seems to be the ancestor of all things. ~ It blunts its own sharpness, ~ unties its own tangles, ~ tempers its own brightness, ~ unites itself with dust. ~ Deep but clear, it seems to exist and not to exist. ~ I do not know whose son it is. ~ It symbolizes that which precedes the Creator.

[04c35t] Han Hiong Tan ~ Dao is akin to an empty vessel. ~ It is inexhaustible, as if the vessel can never be filled completely. ~ So deep and unfathomable, ~ It must be from where all things come forth. ~ Dao blunts its own sharpness, ~ Simplifies its own complexity, ~ Attenuates its own brilliance, ~ And mingles with the dirt. ~ Vast and profound, it appears that it could go on forever. ~ I do not know whose progeny it is. ~ It was there before the existence of the creator.

[04c36t] Hua-Ching Ni ~ The subtle Way of the universe appears to lack strength, ~ yet its power is inexhaustible. ~ Fathomless, it could be the origin of all things. ~ It has no sharpness, ~ yet it rounds off all sharp edges. ~ It has no form, ~ yet it unties all tangles. ~ It has no glare, ~ yet it merges all lights. ~ It harmonizes all things and unites them as one integral whole. ~ It seems so obscure, ~ yet it is the Ultimate Clarity. ~ Whose offspring it is can never be known. ~ It is that which existed before any divinity.

[04c37t] Chang Chung-yuan ~ Tao functions through its nothingness. ~ And can not be conceived of as full of things. ~ Profound indeed, it is the model of all things. ~ Dulling its sharpness, ~ Releasing its entanglements, ~ Tempering its light, and ~ Unifying with the earth, ~ Clearly, indeed, it remains. ~ I do not know who created it, ~ But it is likely that it existed prior to God.

[04c38t] Henry Wei ~ Source Non-Existent ~ Wu Yuan ~ Tao is hollow, yet its utility ~ Seems unlikely to reach the limit. ~ Profound indeed it is; ~ It seems to be the fount of all things. ~ It blunts the sharp; ~ It unravels the tangled; ~ It harmonizes with the light; ~ It mingles with the dust. ~ Calm like a deep pool it seems to remain. ~ I do not know whose son it is. ~ It apparently antecedes the Creator.

[04c39t] Ha Poong Kim ~ Tao is empty, ~ You may use it but never fill it. ~ Fathomless, it is like the progenitor of the ten thousand things. ~ [It] blunts the sharpness, ~ Unravels the tangles, ~ Softens the brilliance, ~ Identifies with the dust. ~ Deep and still, it seems as though existing forever. ~ I don't know whose son it is. ~ It bears the image of God's forefather.

[04c40t] Tao Huang ~ Tao functions in empty harmony. ~ When used, it remains full. ~ For sure, this source is the very ancestor of the myriad things. ~ Blunting the sharp edges, ~ Unraveling the tangles, ~ Husbanding into the light, ~ Being as ordinary as the dust. ~ Ah! Limpid, it seems to exist forever. ~ I do not know whose son it is, ~ This who is exceeding the Heavenly Emperor.

[04c41t] Tang Zi-chang ~ Dao is charged to produce these gases into orderly use. ~ The eternal capacity will never overflow. ~ Profoundly! ~ It is the ancestor of All Things! ~ It blunts all sharpness; ~ it settles all disputes; ~ it harmonizes all lights and it unites all lands. ~ The clear mind will be constantly receptive. ~ We do not know whose descent it is. ~ It existed before all phenomena and all lives.

[04c42t] Wing-tsit Chan ~ Tao is empty (like a bowl). ~ It may be used but its capacity is never exhausted. ~ It is bottomless, perhaps the ancestor of all things. ~ It blunts its sharpness. ~ It unties its tangles. ~ It softens its light. ~ It becomes one with the dusty world. ~ Deep and still, it appears to exist forever. ~ I do not know whose son it is. ~ It seems to have existed before the Lord.

[04c91t] И. И. Семененко ~ Дао совершенно пусто, но при пользовании им его, пожалуй, не наполнить. ~ Как оно глубоко! ~ Это прародитель десяти тысяч вещей. ~ Оно притупляет свою остроту, ~ смиряет всю свою запутанность, ~ смягчает силу своего сияния, ~ делает единой свою пыль. ~ И как же оно скрытно! ~ Но существует, кажется, на самом деле. ~ Я не знаю, чье оно дитя. ~ Похоже, что предшествует Владыке.

[04c92t] А. А. Маслов ~ Дао пустотно, но использованием не исчерпать его. ~ Глубочайшее! Оно подобно предку мириад существ. ~ Притупи лезвие, развяжи узлы, пригаси блеск, уподобь его пылинке. ~ Отсутствующее! Лишь кажущееся присутствующим здесь. ~ Мне не постичь, чьим сыном оно является. ~ Но кажется предком Владыки.

[04c93t] Е. А. Торчинов ~ Путь-Дао пуст, но при использовании неисчерпаем. ~ О как глубок он, словно предок всех существ! ~ Скрой остроту свою и развяжи узлы, умерь свой свет и уподобься пыли. ~ О! Тонет он в пучинах бытия и как бы существует в них и ныне! ~ Не знаю я, чье он дитя, но он предшествует Небесному Владыке.

[04c94t] А. Е. Лукьянов ~ Дао пусто, и кто бы ни старался [наполнить] его, не наполнит. ~ О бездна-пучина, подобная Пращуру мириад вещей! ~ Стихает ее стремительность, ~ слабеют ее путы, ~ умеряется ее свечение, ~ осаждается ее пыль. ~ И тогда вот он, чистейший! ~ Подобие будущего существования! ~ Я не ведаю, чей это сын. ~ Видимо, родоначальник Первопредков.

[04c95t] Ян Хин-шун ~ Дао пусто, но в применении неисчерпаемо. ~ О глубочайшее! ~ Оно кажется праотцем всех вещей. ~ Если притупить его проницательность, ~ освободить его от хаотичности, ~ умерить его блеск, ~ уподобить его пылинке, ~ то оно будет казаться ясно существующим. ~ Я не знаю, чье оно порождение, [я лишь знаю, что] оно предшествует небесному владыке.

[04c96t] Д. П. Конисси ~ Тао пусто, но когда его употребляют, то, кажется, оно неистощимо. ~ О, какая глубина! Оно начало всех вещей. ~ Оно притупляет свое острие, развязывает узлы, смягчает блеск и, наконец, соединяет между собою мельчайшие частицы. ~ О, как чисто! ~ Оно существует предвечно, но я не знаю, чей оно сын и предшествовало ли первому царю.

[04c97t] В. В. Малявин ~ Путь - все вмещающая в себя пустота, ~ Пользуйся ею - и она как будто не переполняется. ~ О, бездна! Предок десяти тысяч вещей! ~ Тупит свои острые края, ~ Развязывает свои узлы, ~ Смиряет свое свечение, ~ Уподобляется своему праху. ~ Неуловимое! Оно как будто существует вечно. ~ Я не ведаю, чье оно дитя. ~ Кажется, оно предшествует Верховному Владыке!

[04c98t] Б. Б. Виногродский ~ В срединной пульсации происходит функционирование Пути. ~ Невозможно, чтобы случилось заполнение. ~ В бездонности своей он - будто бы прародитель мириад сущностей. ~ Затупляет их остроту. ~ Разрубает их путы. ~ Смягчает их сияние. ~ Объединяет их прах. ~ В прозрачности своей он - будто бы возможность существования. ~ Сущность моя не знает, чье это порождение. ~ Предшествует первопредку всех образов.

PSEUDO-CHAPTER Five

[05c01t] Robert G. Henricks ~ Heaven and Earth are not humane; ~ They regard the ten thousand things as straw dogs. ~ The Sage is not humane; ~ He regards the common people as straw dogs. ~ The space between Heaven and Earth - is it not like a bellows? ~ It is empty and yet not depleted; ~ Move it and more [always] comes out. ~ Much learning means frequent exhaustion. ~ That's not so good as holding on to the mean.

[05c02t] John C. H. Wu ~ HEAVEN-and-Earth is not sentimental; ~ It treats all things as straw-dogs. ~ The Sage is not sentimental; ~ He treats all his people as straw-dogs. ~ Between Heaven and Earth, ~ There seems to be a Bellows: ~ It is empty, and yet it is inexhaustible; ~ The more it works, the more comes out of it. ~ No amount of words can fathom it: ~ Better look for it within you.

[05c03t] D. C. Lau ~ Heaven and earth are ruthless, and treat the myriad creatures as straw dogs; ~ the sage is ruthless, and treats the people as straw dogs. ~ Is not the space between heaven and earth like a bellows? ~ It is empty without being exhausted: ~ The more it works the more comes out. ~ Much speech leads inevitably to silence. ~ Better to hold fast to the void.

[05c04t] R. L. Wing ~ Heaven and Earth are impartial; ~ They regard All Things as straw dogs. ~ Evolved Individuals are impartial; ~ They regard all people as straw dogs. ~ Between Heaven and Earth, ~ The space is like a bellows. ~ The shape changes, ~ But not the form. ~ The more it moves, ~ The more it produces. ~ Too much talk will exhaust itself. ~ It is better to remain centered.

[05c05t] Ren Jiyu ~ Heaven and Earth cannot be called benevolent letting all things emerge or perish of themselves. ~ The sage cannot be called benevolent letting all people live or die by themselves. ~ Isn't between Heaven and Earth like a bellows? ~ While vacuous, it is not inexhaustible; ~ The more it is drawn off, the more air it sends forth. ~ Much talk is doomed to a dead end, ~ It is better to keep to moderation.

[05c06t] Gia-fu Feng ~ Heaven and earth are ruthless; ~ They see the ten thousand things as dummies. ~ The wise are ruthless; ~ They see the people as dummies. ~ The space between heaven and earth is like a bellows. ~ The shape changes but not the form; ~ The more it moves, the more it yields. ~ More words count less. ~ Hold fast to the center.

[05c07t] Lok Sang Ho ~ Heaven and earth are unkind. ~ They treat everything like the straw dogs used in sacrifice. ~ The Sages too are unkind. ~ In their eyes everyone is no different from a straw dog. ~ Within the bounds of Heaven and Earth, ~ There is plenty of space, ~ Much like there is space within a bellows. ~ Hollow but unyielding is this space. ~ The more you work on it, ~ The more air comes out. ~ Words are superfluous and soon reach their limits. ~ It is far better to adhere to impartiality and the middle way.

[05c08t] Xiaolin Yang ~ Nature is not charitable; it neglects everything like a used grass-dog after sacrifice. ~ Great men were not charitable; they neglected people like a used grass-dog after sacrifice. ~ Between heaven and earth, is it not like a pair of bellows? ~ Empty, but always able to produce wind; the more you push, the more wind comes out. ~ Talking too much will lead to embarrassment: be like the bellows and keep the wind inside.

[05c09t] Walter Gorn Old, THE VALUE OF NOTHING ~ Neither Heaven nor Earth has any predilections; they regard all persons and things as sacrificial images. ~ The wise man knows no distinctions; he beholds all men as things made for holy uses. ~ The celestial space is like unto bellows - though containing nothing that is solid, it does not at any time collapse; and the more it is set in motion, the more does it produce. ~ The inflated man, however, is soon exhausted. ~ Than self-restraint there is nothing better.

[05c10t] James Legge ~ Heaven and earth do not act from (the impulse of) any wish to be benevolent; ~ they deal with all things as the dogs of grass are dealt with. ~ The sages do not act from (any wish to be) benevolent; ~ they deal with the people as the dogs of grass are dealt with. ~ May not the space between heaven and earth be compared to a bellows? ~ 'Tis emptied, yet it loses not its power; ~ 'Tis moved again, and sends forth air the more. ~ Much speech to swift exhaustion lead we see; ~ Your inner being guard, and keep it free.

[05c11t] David Hinton ~ Heaven and earth are Inhumane: ~ they use the ten thousand things like straw dogs. ~ And the sage too is Inhumane: ~ he uses the hundred-fold people like straw dogs. ~ Is all heaven and earth ~ really so much like a bellows-chamber? ~ It's empty but never contracts, ~ just keeps bringing forth more and more. ~ Words go on failing and failing, nothing like abiding in its midst.

[05c12t] Chichung Huang ~ Heaven and earth are unfeeling, ~ Treating the ten thousand things like straw and dogs; ~ The sage man was unfeeling, ~ Treating the hundred family names like straw and dogs. ~ The space between heaven and earth - ~ Is it not like a bellows? ~ Empty yet inexhaustible. ~ The more it operates, the more it emits. ~ Much learning brings a quick end. ~ Better adhere to the middle.

[05c13t] Ellen M. Chen ~ Heaven and earth are not humane (jen), ~ They treat the ten thousand beings as straw dogs (ch'u kou). ~ The sage is not humane (jen), ~ He treats the hundred families as straw dogs (ch'u kou). ~ Between heaven and earth, ~ How like a bellows (t'o yo) it is! ~ Empty and yet inexhaustible, ~ Moving and yet it pours out ever more. ~ By many words one's reckoning (shu) is exhausted. ~ It is better to abide by the center (shou chung).

[05c14t] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ Heaven-and-Earth are not compassionate; ~ They created and destroyed myriad things and creatures [indiscriminately], in the same manner people made straw-dogs but routinely destroy them for ritual sacrifices [because they had no feeling attached to their destruction]; ~ Most of [so-called] sages (sapients) are not compassionate either; ~ They, too, treated people [without any feeling] as though they were [as cheap as] ritually disposable straw-dogs. ~ [The working of Tao] between Heaven and Earth is similar to the activities within a bellows. ~ A bellows is empty inside, yet a stream of forceful and inexhaustible air can be generated from within [the void]; ~ The more frequently the piston rod is worked up, the more forceful the stream of air is blown out [from the empty tube]. ~ Verbosity exhausts a person of his resources; ~ It is better to keep quiet and collect oneself and concentrate on individual self's inward serenity.

[05c15t] Tien Cong Tran ~ Heaven and Earth are not sentimental; they treat all things as straw-dogs. ~ The sage is not sentimental; he treats all his people as straw-dogs. ~ Between Heaven and Earth, there seems to be a bellows: it is empty, and yet it is inexhaustible; the more it works, the more it produces. ~ No amount of words can fathom it: Better look for it in the middle.

[05c16t] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ Heaven and earth have no bias; they treat everything as if they are the straw dogs used in ritual; ~ Rulers have no biases; they treat citizens as if they are the straw dogs. ~ The world is like the bellows. ~ When it is static, its ability to blow is not lost. ~ When it is moving, it generates more and more wind. ~ To go extreme is not as good as to stay normal.

[05c17t] Arthur Waley ~ Heaven and Earth are ruthless; ~ To them the Ten Thousand Things are but as straw dogs. ~ The Sage too is ruthless; ~ To him the people are but as straw dogs. ~ Yet Heaven and Earth and all that lies between ~ Is like a bellows ~ In that it is empty, but gives a supply that never fails. ~ Work it, and more comes out. ~ Whereas the force of words is soon spent. ~ Far better is it to keep what is in the heart.

[05c18t] Richard John Lynn ~ Heaven and Earth are not benevolent and treat the myriad things as straw dogs ~ The sage is not benevolent and treats the common folk as straw dogs. ~ The space between Heaven and Earth, is it not just like a bellows or a mouth organ! ~ Empty, it can never be used up. ~ Active, it produces all the more. ~ Many words lead to quick exhaustion; better to maintain emptiness within.

[05c19t] Lin Yutang ~ NATURE ~ Nature is unkind: ~ It treats the creation like sacrificial straw-dogs. ~ The Sage is unkind: ~ He treats the people like sacrificial straw-dogs. ~ How the universe is like a bellows! ~ Empty, yet it gives a supply that never fails; ~ The more it is worked, the more it brings forth. ~ By many words is wit exhausted. ~ Rather, therefore, hold to the core.

[05c20t] Victor H. Mair ~ Heaven and earth are inhumane; ~ they view the myriad creatures as straw dogs. ~ The sage is inhumane; ~ he views the common people as straw dogs. ~ The space between heaven and earth, how like a bellows it is! ~ Empty but never exhausted, ~ The more it pumps, the more comes out. ~ Hearing too much leads to utter exhaustion; ~ Better to remain in the center.

[05c21t] Tolbert McCarroll ~ Heaven and earth are not moved by offerings of straw-dogs. ~ The True Person is not moved by offerings of straw-dogs. ~ The space between heaven and earth is like a bellows. ~ It is empty and yet never exhausted. ~ The more it works the more comes out. ~ Many words lead to exhaustion. ~ Better to hold fast to your center.

[05c22t] David H. Li ~ The universe is ignoble; it regards myriad matters as straw dogs. ~ The sage is ignoble; he/she regards the gentry as straw dogs. ~ Is the universe not a wind tunnel? ~ Inexhaustible at rest; dynamic at its fiercest. ~ More rules yield faster demise. ~ Laissez-faire is a better device.

[05c23t] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ The Kosmos is not humane; ~ Impartially, it treats all things as transitory. ~ The sage is not humane; ~ Impartially, he treats all people as transitory. ~ Manifesting the Tao Eternal, ~ The kosmic space is like a bellows. ~ Empty, yet inexhaustible, ~ The more one activates it, the more it generates. ~ Being full, too many words lead one nowhere; ~ Impartially, keep to the silent core of emptiness.

[05c24t] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ Heaven and earth do not own all things, ~ For them, things are like straw dogs. ~ The sage does not own his words, ~ For him, all people are like straw dogs. ~ The hollow space that lies between heaven and earth is like the blacksmith's bellows. ~ Hollow in appearance, nothing is lacking, ~ And if it moves, a lot of what is in it moves. ~ The person who speaks a lot will be exhausted. ~ It would be better for him to keep his words to himself.

[05c25t] Man-Ho Kwok ~ Heaven and earth are not like humans. ~ The Tao does not act like a human. ~ They don't expect to be thanked for making life, ~ so they view it without expectation. ~ Heaven and earth are like a pair of bellows: ~ they are empty, and yet they can never be exhausted. ~ Work them, and they produce more and more ~ - there's too much talking, it's really better to stay quiet. ~ There are too many laws, when all you have to do is to hold on to the centre.

[05c26t] Gu Zhengkun ~ Heaven and earth are not merciful, ~ They treat all things as straw dogs; ~ The sage is not merciful, ~ He treats the people as straw dogs. ~ Does not the space between heaven and earth form like a bellows? ~ It is empty but (the air in it) can never be exhausted; ~ The more air it expels, the more comes out. ~ That is why too many government decrees only result in more failures. ~ It is better, therefore, to hold fast to moderation and the void.

[05c27t] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ Heaven and Earth treat all creatures as they treat a straw dog: ~ with great kindness. ~ The sage treats the people as he treats a straw dog: ~ with great kindness. ~ Between Heaven and Earth there is a big void; ~ it is like a bag without a seam, ~ it is like the hole in a bamboo flute. ~ This void cannot be overpowered: ~ the more it moves, the more it yields. ~ Many words lead to less understanding, therefore it is best to guard the void.

[05c28t] Liu Qixuan ~ The universe benefits none ~ And takes every being for a straw dog. ~ The wise king benefits none ~ And takes all people for nothing dearer. ~ Should we say that ~ It is just like bellows between Heaven and Earth? ~ It is empty but well propped up, ~ And any stir in it will cause spilling. ~ After all moralization and calculation, ~ It is a better strategy to keep that bellows empty.

[05c29t] Shi Fu Hwang ~ The Heaven And The Earth Are Not Benevolent ~ Lao Tze says, ~ When Heaven and Earth proceed their works, they do not consider benevolence, ~ they regard all things as straw-made dogs. ~ When the sage proceeds his work, he does not consider benevolence, ~ he regards all people as straw-made dogs. ~ Between Heaven and Earth, space functions like a blacksmith's bellow. ~ It is void, but is not out of function. ~ Once it is set in motion, a continuous stream of production will issue from it. ~ And the people who like to talk face the same consequence; ~ the more they talk, the more shortage others will know. ~ There is no better way than to model after the Tao, and keep oneself in the void state also.

[05c30t] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ Heaven and earth do not own their benevolence; ~ To them all things are straw-dogs. ~ The Sage does not own his benevolence; ~ To him the people are straw-dogs. ~ The space between heaven and earth is like a (blacksmith's) bellows. ~ Hollow as it seems, nothing is lacking. ~ If it is moved, more will it bring forth. ~ He who talks more is sooner exhausted. ~ It is better to keep what is within himself.

[05c31t] Paul J. Lin ~ Without kindness heaven and earth treat all things as straw dogs. ~ Without kindness the Sage treats the people as straw dogs. ~ The space between heaven and earth is a vacuum like a bellows, ~ Emptied, but inexhaustible. ~ The more it moves, the more it yields. ~ Too much talk often brings exhaustion. ~ Is it not better to keep to the middle path?

[05c32t] Michael LaFargue ~ "Heaven and Earth are not Good, they treat the thousands of things like straw dogs. ~ The Wise Person is not Good, he treats the hundred clans like straw dogs." ~ The space between heaven and earth ~ isn't it like a bellows? ~ Empty, but not shrivelled up, ~ set it in motion and always more comes out. ~ Much talking, quickly exhausted. ~ It can't compare to watching over what is inside.

[05c33t] Cheng Lin ~ The universe is a-moral, and it regards all things as mere straw-dogs. ~ The Sage is a-moral, and he regards all men as mere straw-dogs. ~ The whole universe may be compared to a bellows. ~ It is hollow, but not empty. ~ It is moving and renewing without cease. ~ The more volubly one talks, the quicker will come his exhaustion. ~ It is best to abide by the old traditions.

[05c34t] Yi Wu ~ Heaven and Earth have no humanity; ~ They regard all things as straw-dogs. ~ The sage has no humanity; ~ He regards the people as straw-dogs. ~ Between Heaven and Earth, it is like a bellows or a flute! ~ Empty, but not exhausted; ~ With movement, more comes out. ~ Too much talk always exhausts; ~ It is better to keep to the inside.

[05c35t] Han Hiong Tan ~ Nature is impartial; ~ It treats everything like sacrificial straw dogs. ~ The sage is also indifferent; ~ He regards everyone as sacrificial straw dogs. ~ The universe is just like a bellows. ~ Though empty and intangible, it is never spent. ~ The more you use it, the more briskly it carries on. ~ But to argue excessively will definitely come to a dead end. ~ It is best to maintain the central core of human nature.

[05c36t] Hua-Ching Ni ~ The subtle virtue of the universe is wholeness. ~ It regards all things as equal. ~ The virtue of the sage is wholeness. ~ He too regards all things as equal. ~ The universe may be compared to a bellows. ~ It is empty, yet it never fails to generate its products. ~ The more it moves, the more it brings forth. ~ Many words lead one nowhere. ~ Many pursuits in different directions bring only exhaustion. ~ Rather, embrace the subtle essence within.

[05c37t] Chang Chung-yuan ~ Heaven and earth are not benevolent: ~ They treat ten thousand things indifferently. ~ The wise is not benevolent: ~ He treats men indifferently. ~ The entire universe is basically void, like a bellows: ~ When it is in non-action, it does not lack anything; ~ When it is in action, it is even more productive. ~ Debating with words leads to limitations. ~ Therefore, nothing is better than to remain in the state before things are stirred.

[05c38t] Henry Wei ~ The Utility of Hollowness ~ Hsu Yung ~ Heaven and Earth are not kindly; ~ They equate the ten thousand things with straw dogs. ~ The Sage is not kindly; ~ He equates the people with straw dogs. ~ The space between Heaven and Earth, ~ Is it not like a bellows? ~ It is hollow, yet it never fails to supply. ~ The more it is worked, the more it gives forth. ~ Much talk often leads to exhaustion. ~ Better concentrate on the center.

[05c39t] Ha Poong Kim ~ Heaven and Earth are not humane: ~ They treat the ten thousand things as straw dogs. ~ The sage is not humane: ~ He treats the people as straw dogs. ~ The space between Heaven and Earth - ~ Is it not as though it were a bellows? ~ It is empty, yet inexhaustible. ~ Ever active, it gives off more and more. ~ Much talk inevitably leads to predicament. ~ It is better to hold on to the void.

[05c40t] Tao Huang ~ Nature has no benevolence, ~ It treats all things like strawdogs; ~ The sage has no benevolence, ~ He treats his people like strawdogs. ~ Between heaven and earth it seems like a bellows: ~ Empty, yet inexhaustible, ~ The stronger it is activated, the greater the output. ~ Being overly informed leads to exhaustion, ~ Better to be centered.

[05c41t] Tang Zi-chang ~ Heaven and earth are not benevolent because they make All Things sacrificial victims. ~ Sage rulers were not benevolent because they punished the people as sacrificial victims. ~ Between the heavens and the earth there is nothing but an empty space! ~ It may be compared to a bellow or pocket of vast capacity. ~ Humbly modest but not submissive. ~ The more it moves, changes, the more nearly perfect it becomes. ~ Excess means Extreme. ~ It is better to hold fast to perfection.

[05c42t] Wing-tsit Chan ~ Heaven and Earth are not humane. ~ They regard all things as straw dogs. ~ The sage Семененко ~ Небо и Земля не человечны. ~ Они видят в десяти тысячах вещей лишь соломенных собак; ~ Премудрый человек не человечен, он видит в ста фамилиях лишь соломенных собак. ~ Промежуток между Небом и Землей - это как кузнечные мехи: ~ они пусты, но не иссякают, а движутся и все больше производят. ~ Многоречивость для числа - тупик, лучше придерживаться середины.

[05c92t] А. А. Маслов ~ Небо и Земля не гуманны и относятся к мириадам существ, как к соломенным собачкам. ~ Мудрый человек не гуманен и относится к людям, как к соломенным собачкам. ~ Не подобно ли пространство между Небом и Землёй [кузнечным] мехам? ~ Будучи пустотным, оно неисчерпаемо. ~ Чем больше оно движется, тем больше ему прибавляется. ~ Произносящий бесчисленное множество речей не сравним со сберегающим это в себе.

[05c93t] Е. А. Торчинов ~ Не милосердны Небо и Земля, ~ и сущее для них - соломенное чучело собаки. ~ Не милосерден и мудрец совершенный, ~ и для него все люди - соломенное чучело собаки. ~ Пространство между Небом и Землей, пожалуй, как кузнечные меха: ~ оно пустеет, но не знает искривленья, и чем сильнее в нем движенье, тем более вовне выходит ветра. ~ В тупик многословье ведет. ~ Не лучше ли тот, кто всегда середину блюдет?

[05c94t] А. Е. Лукьянов ~ Небо и Земля не соотносятся через Жэнь (Человеколюбие), ~ и потому мириады вещей живут как трава и собаки. ~ Совершенномудрые люди не соотносятся через Жэнь (Человеколюбие), ~ и потому все роды человеческие живут как трава и собаки. ~ (Вариант перевода: Небо и Земля не проявляют Жэнь, ~ ибо все вещи превратятся в "соломенное чучело". ~ Совершенномудрые люди не проявляют Жэнь, ~ ибо все роды человеческие превратятся в "соломенное чучело"). ~ Пространство между Небом и Землей, не подобно ли оно кузнечному меху? ~ [Оно] пусто и не складывается, а сжимается и выдыхает. ~ Много слов - все напраслина, не лучше ли держаться середины?

[05c95t] Ян Хин-шун ~ Небо и земля не обладают человеколюбием и предоставляют всем существам возможность жить собственной жизнью. ~ Совершенномудрый не обладает человеколюбием и предоставляет народу возможность жить собственной жизнью. ~ Разве пространство между небом и землей не похоже на кузнечный мех? ~ Чем больше [в нем] пустоты, тем дольше [он] действует, ~ чем сильнее [в нем] движение, тем больше [из него] выходит [ветер]. ~ Тот, кто много говорит, часто терпит неудачу, ~ поэтому лучше соблюдать меру.

[05c96t] Д. П. Конисси ~ Небо и земля не суть любвеобильные существа. ~ Они поступают со всеми вещами, как с соломенною собакой. ~ Святой муж не любвеобилен: он поступает с земледельцами, как с соломенной собакой. ~ Все находящееся между небом и землей похоже на кузнечный мех. ~ Он (кузнечный мех) пуст, но неистощим: чем чаще надувается, тем больше выпускает воздух. ~ Кто много говорит, тот часто терпит неудачу; ~ поэтому лучше всего соблюдать средину.

[05c97t] В. В. Малявин ~ Небо и Земля не обладают человечностью, ~ Для них вся тьма вещей - что соломенные собаки. ~ Премудрый человек не обладает человечностью, ~ Для него все люди - что соломенные собаки. ~ Пространство между Небом и Землей ~ Подобно кузнечным мехам: ~ Пустое - а нельзя его устранить, ~ Надави на него - и из него выйдет еще больше. ~ Кто копит знания, тот скоро утомится, ~ Так не лучше ли держаться срединности?

[05c98t] Б. Б. Виногродский ~ Небо-Земля не вступают в контакт. ~ Из мириад сущностей они делают соломенную собаку. ~ Человек мудрости не вступает в контакт. ~ Из ста родов он делает соломенную собаку. ~ Пространство Неба-Земли можно уподобить кузнечным мехам. ~ При опустошении не истощаются. ~ Приводишь в движение, а выходит еще больше. ~ Избыточность в речах истощает возможности чисел. ~ Лучше всего удерживать срединность.

PSEUDO-CHAPTER Seven

[07c01t] Robert G. Henricks ~ Heaven endures; Earth lasts a long time. ~ The reason why Heaven and Earth can endure and last a long time - ~ Is that they do not live for themselves. ~ Therefore they can long endure. ~ Therefore the Sage: ~ Puts himself in the background yet finds himself in the foreground; ~ Puts self-concern out of [his mind], yet finds self-concern in the fore; ~ Puts self-concern out of [his mind], yet finds that his self-concern is preserved. ~ Is it not because he has no self-interest, ~ That he is therefore able to realize his self-interest?

[07c02t] John C. H. Wu ~ HEAVEN lasts long, and Earth abides. ~ What is the secret of their durability? ~ Is it not because they do not live for themselves ~ That they can live so long? ~ Therefore, the Sage wants to remain behind, ~ But finds himself at the head of others; ~ Reckons himself out, ~ But finds himself safe and secure. ~ Is it not because he is selfless ~ That his Self is realized?

[07c03t] D. C. Lau ~ Heaven and earth are enduring. ~ The reason why heaven and earth can be enduring is that they do not give themselves life. ~ Hence they are able to be long-lived. ~ Therefore the sage puts his person last and it comes first, ~ Treats it as extraneous to himself and it is preserved. ~ Is it not because he is without thought of self that he is able to accomplish his private ends?

[07c04t] R. L. Wing ~ Heaven is eternal, the Earth everlasting. ~ They can be eternal and everlasting Because they do not exist for themselves. ~ For that reason they can exist eternally. ~ Therefore, Evolved Individuals Put themselves last, ~ And yet they are first. ~ Put themselves outside, ~ And yet they remain. ~ Is it not because they are without self-interest That their interests succeed?

[07c05t] Ren Jiyu ~ Heaven is eternal and Earth everlasting. ~ Heaven and Earth can be eternal and everlasting because they don't exist for themselves, ~ And for this reason they obtain longevity. ~ Therefore the sage puts himself last, ~ But actually he stands foremost. ~ He has no regard for himself, ~ But his life is well preserved. ~ Is it not because he has no personal interests that his private ends are fulfilled?

[07c06t] Gia-fu Feng ~ Heaven and earth last forever. ~ Why do heaven and earth last forever? ~ They are unborn, ~ So ever living. ~ The sage stays behind, thus he is ahead. ~ He is detached, thus at one with all. ~ Through selfless action, he attains fulfillment.

[07c07t] Lok Sang Ho ~ Heaven and earth last. ~ It is so because they do not give birth to themselves. ~ Similarly the last thing in the Sage's mind is to propagate his body. ~ Paradoxically, that is why his body advances. ~ The body to the Sage is like any external object. ~ For this very reason his body perpetuates. ~ Is it not true that because he is selfless, ~ That he realizes his true self?

[07c08t] Xiaolin Yang ~ The heavens and the earth last forever. ~ They can do so because they do not exist for themselves. ~ Therefore, great men always let other people go first, but ended up being first themselves. ~ They put their lives out of consideration, but always survived. ~ Is it not because they were selfless, ~ That they benefited themselves at the end?

[07c09t] Walter Gorn Old, HIDING THE LIGHT ~ Both Heaven and Earth endure a long time. ~ The cause of their endurance is their indifference to long life. ~ That is why they subsist. ~ Thus the wise man, indifferent to himself, is the greatest among men, and taking no care for himself, he is nevertheless preserved. ~ By being the most unselfish he is the most secure of all.

[07c10t] James Legge ~ Heaven is long-enduring and earth continues long. ~ The reason why heaven and earth are able to endure and continue thus long is because they do not live of, or for, themselves. ~ This is how they are able to continue and endure. ~ Therefore the sage puts his own person last, and yet it is found in the foremost place; ~ he treats his person as if it were foreign to him, and yet that person is preserved. ~ Is it not because he has no personal and private ends, that therefore such ends are realised?

[07c11t] David Hinton ~ Heaven goes on forever. ~ Earth endures forever. ~ There's a reason heaven and earth go on enduring forever: ~ their life isn't their own so their life goes on forever. ~ Hence, in putting himself last the sage puts himself first, and in giving himself up he preserves himself. ~ If you aren't free of yourself ~ how will you ever become yourself?

[07c12t] Chichung Huang ~ Heaven is permanent and earth, everlasting. ~ The reason why heaven and earth ~ Can be permanent and everlasting ~ Is that they do not live for themselves. ~ Therefore, they can live permanently. ~ Hence, the sage man ~ Withdrew himself to the back, ~ Yet found himself in front; ~ Cast himself aside, ~ Yet found himself preserved. ~ Is it not because he was selfless ~ That he could fulfill the self?

[07c13t] Ellen M. Chen ~ Heaven and earth are long lasting (chiu). ~ The reason why heaven and earth are long lasting: ~ Because they do not live for self (pu tzu sheng). ~ Therefore they last long. ~ Thus the sage puts his body (shen) behind, ~ Yet his body is in front. ~ He regards his body as external, ~ Yet his body remains in existence (ts'un). ~ Is it not because he is selfless (wu szu), ~ That he can fulfill himself (ch'eng ch'i szu).

[07c14t] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ Heaven is long-drawn and Earth is enduring; ~ The reason that both Heaven and Earth can exist permanently is because they are not self serving; ~ Consequently, they are durable and will perpetuate [myriad creatures and things] for a long, long time. ~ Accordingly: ~ A Sage shall surrender his personal interests [in favor of the common good]; ~ It is by virtue of his renouncing his self-interests [for the good of people's welfare] that he is [in the rank of] genuine leaders; ~ He shall also think objectively, as though he is outside his physical self [to scrutinize himself as an observer]; ~ [By virtue of being unselfish and objective] he lives a meaningful existence. ~ Doesn't he have anything left for his private self [by being so thoroughly selfless]? ~ Isn't it because he is completely selfless that he has achieved the most exclusively his own fulfilling individual existence!

[07c15t] Tien Cong Tran ~ Heaven lasts long, and Earth abides long. ~ What is the secret of their durability? ~ Is it not because they do not live for themselves that they can live so long? ~ Therefore, the sage wants to remain behind, but finds himself at the head of others; reckons himself out, but finds himself safe and secure. ~ Is it not because he is selfless that his self is realized?

[07c16t] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ The universe is long-lasting. ~ The reason it can last long is because it is not living for itself, therefore it can be enduring. ~ Following this, ~ the sage is modest and yet he is ahead of others; ~ he cares less for himself, and yet he gains respect from others; ~ is it not because he is not anxious for his goal, and yet his goal is achieved?

[07c17t] Arthur Waley ~ Heaven is eternal, the Earth everlasting. ~ How come they to be so? ~ It is because they do not foster their own lives; ~ That is why they live so long. ~ Therefore the Sage ~ Puts himself in the background; but is always to the fore. ~ Remains outside; but is always there. ~ Is it not just because he does not strive for any personal end ~ That all his personal ends are fulfilled?

[07c18t] Richard John Lynn ~ Heaven is everlasting, and Earth endless. ~ That they can last forever and go on without end is because they do not try to exist for themselves. ~ Thus they can exist forever. ~ As such, the sage places himself in the rear yet finds himself in front. ~ He puts aside his person, yet his person is preserved. ~ Is this not because he is utterly free of self-interest? ~ This is how he can achieve self-fulfillment.

[07c19t] Lin Yutang ~ LIVING FOR OTHERS ~ The universe is everlasting. ~ The reason the universe is everlasting ~ Is that it does not live for Self. ~ Therefore it can long endure. ~ Therefore the Sage puts himself last, ~ And finds himself in the foremost place; ~ Regards his body as accidental, ~ And his body is thereby preserved. ~ Is it not because he does not live for Self ~ That his Self is realized?

[07c20t] Victor H. Mair ~ Heaven is long and earth is lasting. ~ Heaven and earth can be long and lasting because they do not live for themselves. ~ Therefore, ~ They can be long-lived. ~ For this reason, ~ The sage withdraws himself but comes to the fore, ~ alienates himself but is always present. ~ Is this not because he is free of private interests? ~ Therefore, ~ He can accomplish his private interests.

[07c21t] Tolbert McCarroll ~ Heaven and earth last forever. ~ The reason why heaven and earth last forever is that they do not live for themselves. ~ Hence, they last forever. ~ Therefore, ~ the True Person leaves self behind and thus is found in front, ~ is not guarded and thus is preserved, ~ is self-free and thus is able to find fulfillment.

[07c22t] David H. Li ~ The cosmos is long. ~ The earth is lasting. ~ The reason the cosmos is long and the earth lasting is that they exist not for self-perpetuation. ~ Unconcerned with self-perpetuation, they perpetuate. ~ Thus, the sage, ~ by queuing himself/herself behind others, ends in being ahead; ~ by being unconcerned, endures. ~ Is it not so that the sage, without self-interest, satisfies his/her self-interest?

[07c23t] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ Heaven is eternal and earth everlasting. ~ They thus endure forever, ~ Because they exist not for themselves ~ But for the whole, selflessly. ~ Whereby the sage, ~ Existing selflessly for the whole, ~ Puts himself behind and thereby finds himself foremost, ~ Holds himself outside and thereby finds himself inmost. ~ He has no self apart from the whole, ~ Wherefore he realizes the self that is the whole.

[07c24t] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ Heaven and earth will exist forever. ~ The reason they exist forever is that they do not live for themselves and they do not live because of themselves. ~ Therefore they live forever. ~ In the same way, the sage stays behind everything and finds himself in front of everything, he is not himself and he is preserved forever. ~ Since he has no self-interest, his self-interest can realize itself. ~ Even though it looks like heaven and earth give life to all creatures, they do not live in order to preserve their own existence, and therefore they live forever and never die. ~ In his rule over the kingdom, the sage does everything for people, ignoring his personal goals, and ultimately earns glory, honor, and everything he wanted for himself.

[07c25t] Man-Ho Kwok ~ Heaven and earth are enduring. ~ The universe can live for ever, because it does not live for itself. ~ And so both last - outliving themselves. ~ The sage guides his people by putting himself last.

~ Desiring nothing for himself, ~ he knows how to channel desires. ~ And is it not because he wants nothing that he is able to achieve everything?

[07c26t] Gu Zhengkun ~ Heaven and earth exist for ever. ~ This eternal existence is justified by the fact ~ That they do not exist for themselves. ~ Thus they enjoy an eternal life. ~ The sage similarly puts himself behind others, ~ Yet it turns out that he comes before others; ~ He completely disregards his own existence, ~ And yet it turns out that his existence is preserved.

[07c27t] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ Heaven and Earth are enduring only because they have no ego; ~ therefore they can live for ever. ~ The sage does not try to be the first, and does not fight for fame. ~ Only through unselfishness can he achieve fulfilment.

[07c28t] Liu Qixuan ~ The heaven lasts. ~ The earth lasts. ~ They last because they do not live to last. ~ The wise person lags behind in struggles for benefits ~ And finally benefits more than others; ~ The wise person does not live for himself, ~ And is therefore able to enjoy longevity. ~ Isn't it one's thorough selflessness ~ That makes one seem to be most successfully selfish?

[07c29t] Shi Fu Hwang ~ Being Selfless Can Fulfill The Selfishness ~ Lao Tze says, ~ The Heaven has endured a long existence, so has the Earth. ~ The reason they can last so long is that they never go out of their way to seek life, hence they can be everlasting. ~ The sage understood this secret, put himself last, and became first at length. ~ He treated himself as extraneous, preserving his person safe and sound. ~ Cannot one who is selfless fulfill the selfishness?

[07c30t] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ Heaven is lasting and earth enduring. ~ The reason why they are lasting and enduring is that they do not live for themselves; ~ Therefore they live long. ~ In the same way the Sage keeps himself behind and he is in the front; ~ He forgets himself and he is preserved. ~ Is it not because he is not self-interested ~ That his self-interest is established?

[07c31t] Paul J. Lin ~ Heaven lasts; earth endures. ~ They last and endure because they do not live for themselves. ~ And thus can live forever. ~ Therefore, the Sage positions himself behind and yet stays ahead. ~ He denies himself and so is preserved. ~ Is it not because of his selflessness ~ That he completes his own?

[07c32t] Michael LaFargue ~ Heaven is lasting, Earth endures. ~ What enables Heaven and Earth to last and endure? ~ Because they do not live for themselves - ~ so it is that they can live so long. ~ And so, the Wise Person: ~ Puts himself last, and so finds himself in front. ~ Puts himself in the out group, and so maintains his place. ~ The personal does not exist for him - ~ isn't this how he can perfect what for him is most personal?

[07c33t] Cheng Lin ~ Heaven is everlasting, and earth is perpetual. ~ Their endurance is due to the fact that they exist without the consciousness of self, because of which they endure for ever. ~ Likewise, the Sage is most highly esteemed because he regards himself as the least important. ~ His life is long preserved because he has no thought about his personal security. ~ He is able to realize his complete self because he is always selfless.

[07c34t] Yi Wu ~ Heaven is eternal and Earth is everlasting. ~ The reason they can last forever ~ Is because they do not live for themselves. ~ So, they can live long. ~ Therefore, the sage places himself behind, ~ But actually he goes ahead; ~ Neglects himself, ~ But actually preserves himself. ~ Is it not because he has no self ~ That his self is realized?

[07c35t] Han Hiong Tan ~ The universe is everlasting. ~ It is eternal because it does not exist for its own sake. ~ Hence, it will be everlasting. ~ The sage safeguards his interest by always putting his personal interests last. ~ He regards his interests as inconsequential. ~ Yet, it is often preserved. ~ Is this because by not being self-serving that his interests are always preserved?

[07c36t] Hua-Ching Ni ~ Heaven is everlasting and Earth is perpetual. ~ Why so? ~ Because they live without holding onto any consciousness of self. ~ Therefore, they can endure forever. ~ One who does not separate his being from the nature of universal wholeness lives with the universal virtue of wholeness. ~ He, too, dissolves all consciousness of self and lives as the universe. ~ By putting himself behind others, ~ he finds himself foremost. ~ By not considering his own personal ends, ~ his personal life is accomplished. ~ He finds himself safe, secure and preserved. ~ Because he does not hold a narrow concept of self, ~ his true nature can fully merge with the one universal life.

[07c37t] Chang Chung-yuan ~ The existences of heaven and earth are long-lasting. ~ Their existences are long-lasting because they do not conceive of their existences as existences. ~ Therefore, their existences are long-lasting. ~ When the wise stays back, he steps forward. ~ When he forgets his self, he finds his self. ~ Is it not through selflessness that one achieves selfhood?

[07c38t] Henry Wei ~ Dimming the Light ~ T'ao Kuang ~ Heaven is eternal, Earth is durable. ~ The reason why they are eternal and durable ~ Is that they do not exist for themselves. ~ This is why they can long endure. ~ Therefore, the Sage putting himself behind, ~ Finds himself in front; ~ And placing himself beyond his concern, ~ Finds himself well preserved. ~ Is this not because he is unselfish? ~ For the very reason that he is unselfish, ~ He is able to find Self-fulfilment.

[07c39t] Ha Poong Kim ~ Heaven and Earth are everlasting. ~ The reason why they are everlasting ~ Is that they do not live for themselves. ~ That is why they can live long. ~ Therefore the sage ~ Puts himself last and finds himself first; ~ He leaves himself out and finds himself preserved. ~ Is it not because he is selfless ~ That he can fulfill himself?

[07c40t] Tao Huang ~ Heaven is eternal, and earth is long lasting. ~ What makes heaven and earth eternal and long lasting is that they do not give birth to themselves. ~ It is this that makes them eternal and long lasting. ~ Hence the sage, ~ Relaxing the body, the body comes to the fore. ~ Beyond the body, the body comes to the fore. ~ Beyond the body, the body exists of itself. ~ Not even relying on selflessness ~ Enables the self to be fulfilled.

[07c41t] Tang Zi-chang ~ Heaven is enduring and earth is lasting. ~ Why heaven and earth can be enduring and lasting is because they do not live for themselves, thus, they can endure and last. ~ So that a Sage ruler put himself behind others, and he came to the front; ~ he excluded himself from struggle with others and he survived. ~ It is because he was selfless that he fulfilled himself.

[07c42t] Wing-tsit Chan ~ Heaven is eternal and Earth everlasting. ~ They can be eternal and everlasting because they do not exist for themselves, ~ And for this reason can exist forever. ~ Therefore the sage places himself in the background but finds himself in the foreground. ~ He puts himself away, and yet he always remains.

~ Is it not because he has no personal interests? ~ This is the reason why his personal interests are fulfilled.

[07c92t] А. А. Маслов ~ Небо извечно, Земля - долговременна. ~ Небо и Земля могут быть извечны и долговременны, ибо они не порождают сами себя. ~ Вот почему они извечны и долговременны. ~ Поэтому мудрец, становясь позади всех, оказывается впереди всех, пренебрегает собой и потому сберегает себя. ~ Разве этим он не преследует личных целей? ~ Поэтому он и может достичь их.

[07c93t] Е. А. Торчинов ~ Вековечно Небо и постоянна Земля. ~ Небо и Земля вековечны и постоянны потому, что не сами собой рождены. ~ Поэтому и могут быть они вековечными и постоянными. ~ Поэтому и совершенномудрый себя назад всенепременно ставит, но вдруг оказывается впереди. ~ Себя он чем-то внешним почитает, существованье в этом обретя. ~ И уж не потому ли это, что лишен он личных интересов? ~ Благодаря такому поведению он как раз и может всегда и полностью блюсти свой личный интерес.

[07c94t] А. Е. Лукьянов ~ Небо вечно, Земля долговечна. ~ Небо и Земля оттого могут быть одно вечным, ~ а другая долговечной, что не сами себя породили. ~ Поэтому [они] могут вечно жить. ~ Вот почему совершенномудрый человек ставит себя позади, ~ но сам оказывается впереди; ~ забывает о себе самом, но сам существует. ~ Нельзя ли сказать, что тем самым ему не достичь своей личной цели? ~ Напротив, только так он и может осуществить задуманное.

[07c95t] Ян Хин-шун ~ Небо и земля - долговечны. ~ Небо и земля долговечны потому, что они существуют не для себя. ~ Вот почему они могут быть долговечными. ~ Поэтому совершенномудрый ставит себя позади других, благодаря чему он оказывается впереди. ~ Он пренебрегает своей жизнью, и тем самым его жизнь сохраняется. ~ Не происходит ли это от того, что он пренебрегает личными [интересами]? ~ Напротив, [он действует] согласно своим личным [интересам].

[07c96t] Д. П. PSEUDO-CHAPTER Eight

[08c01t] Robert G. Henricks ~ The highest good is like water; ~ Water is good at benefiting the ten thousand things and yet it [does not] compete [with them]. ~ It dwells in places the masses of people detest, ~ Therefore it is close to the Way. ~ In dwelling, the good thing is the land; ~ In the mind, the good thing is depth; ~ In giving, the good thing is [being like] Heaven; ~ In speaking, the good thing is sincerity; ~ In governing, the good thing is order; ~ In affairs, the good thing is ability; ~ In activity, the good thing is timeliness. ~ It is only because it does not compete, that therefore it is without fault.

[08c02t] John C. H. Wu ~ THE highest form of goodness is like water. ~ Water knows how to benefit all things without striving with them. ~ It stays in places loathed by all men. ~ Therefore, it comes near the Tao. ~ In choosing your dwelling, know how to keep to the ground. ~ In cultivating your mind, know how to dive in the hidden deeps. ~ In dealing with others, know how to be gentle and kind. ~ In speaking, know how to keep your words. ~ In governing, know how to maintain order. ~ In transacting business, know how to be efficient. ~ In making a move, know how to choose the right moment. ~ If you do not strive with others, ~ You will be free from blame.

[08c03t] D. C. Lau ~ Highest good is like water. ~ Because water excels in benefiting the myriad creatures without contending with them and settles where none would like to be, it comes close to the way. ~ In a home it is the site that matters; ~ In quality of mind it is depth that matters; ~ In an ally it is benevolence that matters; ~ In speech it is good faith that matters; ~ In government it is order that matters; ~ In affairs it is ability that matters; ~ In action it is timeliness that matters. ~ It is because it does not contend that it is never at fault.

[08c04t] R. L. Wing ~ The highest value is like water. ~ The value in water benefits All Things, And yet it does not contend. ~ It stays in places that others disdain, And therefore is close to the Tao. ~ The value in a dwelling is location. ~ The value in a mind is depth. ~ The value in relations is benevolence. ~ The value in words is sincerity. ~ The value in leadership is order. ~ The value in work is competence. ~ The value in effort is timeliness. ~ Since, indeed, they do not contend, There is no resentment.

[08c05t] Ren Jiyu ~ The highest good is like water. ~ Water is apt to benefit all things and does not compete with them. ~ It dwells in places people disdain. ~ Thus it is closest to Tao. ~ (The best man should be like water) ~ In his dwelling he is at ease with lowness, ~ In his heart he is profound, ~ He is sincere in his dealings with others, ~ He is faithful in speech, ~ He is orderly in government, ~ He is competent in deeds, ~ He is timely in action. ~ It is because he is not competitive that he is without any faults.

[08c06t] Gia-fu Feng ~ The highest good is like water. ~ Water gives life to the ten thousand things and does not strive. ~ It flows in places men reject and so is like the Tao. ~ In dwelling, be close to the land. ~ In meditation, go deep in the heart. ~ In dealing with others, be gentle and kind. ~ In speech, be true. ~ In ruling, be just. ~ In business, be competent. ~ In action, watch the timing. ~ No fight: No blame.

[08c07t] Lok Sang Ho ~ The superior good man is like water. ~ Just as water enlivens all living creatures and never contests with them, ~ dwelling in places disdained by others, ~ so the superior good man is prepared to situate himself where nobody wants. ~ In this way he is close to the Dao. ~ To live on the good earth, ~ To cherish good thoughts, ~ To do a good turn to others, ~ To speak the good truth, ~ To let good governance find its right place, ~ To put the good ability to work, ~ To set in motion the good times, ~ Such is the way to live without contesting with others. ~ Such is the man free from complaints and anguish.

[08c08t] Xiaolin Yang ~ The best is like water. ~ Water benefits everything without fighting for credit. ~ Only without fighting for credit, will water never get any trouble. ~ It flows to the lowest places where no one wants to stay, ~ So water is the closest to the DAO. ~ Therefore, one should have the traits of water: ~ Humble and lowly in his character, ~ Peaceful and deep in his heart, ~ Charitable in his treatment of everything, ~ Credible in his words, ~ Methodical in his ways of governing a country, ~ Capable of doing anything, ~ And able to catch opportunities when taking action. ~ Only without fighting for credit, will one never get any trouble.

[08c09t] Walter Gorn Old, THE EASY NATURE ~ The greatest virtue is like water; it is good to all things. ~ It attains the most inaccessible places without strife. ~ Therefore it is like Tao. ~ It has the virtue of adapting itself to its place. ~ It is virtuous like the heart by being deep. ~ It is virtuous like speech by being faithful. ~ It is virtuous like government in regulating. ~ It is virtuous like a servant in its ability. ~ It is virtuous like action by being in season. ~ And because it does not strive it has no enemies.

[08c10t] James Legge ~ The highest excellence is like (that of) water. ~ The excellence of water appears in its benefiting all things, ~ and in its occupying, without striving (to the contrary), the low place which all men dislike. ~ Hence (its way) is near to (that of) the Tao. ~ The excellence of a residence is in (the suitability of) the place; ~ that of the mind is in abysmal stillness; ~ that of associations is in their being with the virtuous; ~ that of government is in its securing good order; ~ that of (the conduct of) affairs is in its ability; ~ and that of (the initiation of) any movement is in its timeliness. ~ And when (one with the highest excellence) does not wrangle (about his low position), no one finds fault with him.

[08c11t] David Hinton ~ Lofty nobility is like water. ~ Water's nobility is to enrich the ten thousand things ~ and yet never strive: ~ it just settles through places people everywhere loathe. ~ Therefore, it's nearly Way. ~ Dwelling's nobility is earth, ~ mind's nobility is empty depth, ~ giving's nobility is Humanity, ~ word's nobility is sincerity, ~ government's nobility is accord, ~ endeavor's nobility is ability, ~ action's nobility is timing. ~ When you never strive you never go wrong.

[08c12t] Chichung Huang ~ The supreme good man is like water. ~ Water is good at benefiting ~ The ten thousand things without contending, ~ Lying where the multitude loathes to: ~ Therefore, close to the Tao. ~ In habitation, ~ He is good at choosing the place; ~ In mind, ~ Good at profundity; ~ In giving, ~ Good at imitating heaven; ~ In speech, ~ Good at honesty; ~ In government, ~ Good at bringing order; ~ In duties, ~ Good at exerting his ability; ~ In making moves, ~ Good at timeliness. ~ Being uncontentious, ~ There is no resentment.

[08c13t] Ellen M. Chen ~ A person with superior goodness (shan) is like water, ~ Water is good in benefiting (li) all beings, ~ Without contending (cheng) with any. ~ Situated in places shunned (o) by many others, ~ Thereby it is near (chi) Tao. ~ (Such a person's) dwelling is the good earth, ~ (His/her) mind (hsin) is the good deep water (yuan), ~ (His/her) associates are good kind people (jen), ~ (His/her) speech shows good trust (hsin), ~ (His/her) governing is the good order, ~ (His/her) projects (shih) are carried out by good talents (neng), ~ (His/her) activities (tung) are good in timing. ~ Because he does not contend (pu cheng) with any, ~ He commits no wrong.

[08c14t] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ [The performance of people with] the highest Te (arete) resembles the [working of] water; ~ Water benefits myriad things and creatures without vying [for control or profits]; ~ It, however, settles for the lowest position which is [customarily considered] disdainful by people. ~ Therefore, [the performance of] water comes very close to that of [people whose behaviors are] drawing closest to Tao. ~ [A Sage] withholds his principle [as unmovable] as the ground; ~ His heart tolerates as much (profoundly) as an abyss; ~ His actions are motivated by compassion; ~ His words are trustworthy; ~ His administration is efficient; ~ His performance is proficient; ~ His movements are timely; ~ Since he does not compete with people [for power or for profiting himself], so nobody has any good reason to accuse him.

[08c15t] Tien Cong Tran ~ The man of the highest goodness is like water. ~ Water knows how to benefit all things without striving with them. ~ It stays in places loathed by all men. ~ Therefore, it comes near the Way. ~ In choosing your dwelling, know how to keep to the earth. ~ In cultivating your mind, know how to dive in the abyss. ~ In dealing with others, know how to be in relation to benevolence. ~ In speaking, know how to keep faithfulness. ~ In controlling the affairs of the state, know how to maintain good governing. ~ In working, know how to be suitable to ability. ~ In acting, know how to be suitable to time. ~ If you do not strive with others, you will be free from error.

[08c16t] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ The best virtue is like water. ~ Water nurtures everything; yet, without rivaling, it flows towards lower grounds, where people would be reluctant to go. ~ Water behaves like following Tao. ~ Live in suitable place; ~ Think deeply; ~ Give generously; ~ Keep one's words; ~ Rule orderly; ~ Do things ably; ~ Act when the time is right. ~ Do not rival, then there would be no trouble.

[08c17t] Arthur Waley ~ The highest good is like that of water. ~ The goodness of water is that it benefits the ten thousand creatures; yet itself does not scramble, but is content with the places that all men disdain. ~ It is this that makes water so near to the Way. ~ And if men think the ground the best place for building a house upon, ~ If among thoughts they value those that are profound, ~ If in friendship they value gentleness, ~ In words, truth; in government, good order; ~ In deeds, effectiveness; in actions, timeliness - ~ In each case it is because they prefer what does not lead to strife, ~ And therefore does not go amiss.

[08c18t] Richard John Lynn ~ The highest good is like water. ~ The goodness of water lies in benefiting the myriad things without contention, while locating itself in places that common people scorn. ~ Therefore it is almost exactly like the Dao. ~ Goodness in position depends on location; ~ goodness in heart/mind depends on profundity; ~ goodness in association depends on benevolence; ~ goodness in words depends on sincerity; ~ goodness in government depends on order; ~ goodness in affairs depends on ability; ~ goodness in action depends on timeliness. ~ And it is only by avoiding contention that no blame occurs.

[08c19t] Lin Yutang ~ WATER ~ The best of men is like water; ~ Water benefits all things ~ And does not compete with them. ~ It dwells in (the lowly) places that all disdain - ~ Wherein it comes near to the Tao. ~ In his dwelling, (the Sage) loves the (lowly) earth; ~ In his heart, he loves what is profound; ~ In his relations with others, he loves kindness; ~ In his words, he loves sincerity; ~ In government, he loves peace; ~ In business affairs, he loves ability; ~ In his actions, he loves choosing the right time. ~ It is because he does not contend ~ That he is without reproach.

[08c20t] Victor H. Mair ~ The highest good is like water; ~ Water is good at benefiting the myriad creatures ~ but also struggles to occupy the place loathed by the masses. ~ Therefore, ~ It is near to the Way. ~ The quality of an abode is in its location, ~ The quality of the heart is in its depths, ~ The quality of giving lies in trust, ~ The quality of correct governance lies in orderly rule, ~ The quality of an enterprise depends on ability, ~ The quality of movement depends on timing. ~ Now, ~ It is precisely because one does not compete that there is no blame.

[08c21t] Tolbert McCarroll ~ The highest good is like water. ~ For water benefits the ten thousand things without striving. ~ It settles in places that people avoid and so is like the Tao. ~ In choosing your home look to the land. ~ In preparing your heart go deep. ~ In associating with others value gentleness. ~ In speaking exhibit good faith. ~ In governing provide good order. ~ In the conduct of business be competent. ~ In action be timely. ~ When there is no strife, nothing goes amiss.

[08c22t] David H. Li ~ Goodness at its best is like water. ~ Water benefits myriad matters but is not in competition with them. ~ Water stays at a level disliked by others, as if it were the Direction. ~ Wherever [the sage] stays, it is a good place; ~ whatever [the sage] thinks, it is good thought; ~ whomever [the sage] contacts, it is nobleness; ~ whatever [the sage] expresses, it is truthfulness; ~ however [the sage] governs, it is good administration; ~ whatever [the sage] does, it is good deed; ~ whenever [the sage] acts, it is timely action. ~ Being not in competition, [the sage] has no concern.

[08c23t] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ The highest good is like water, ~ Benefiting all but contending with none, ~ Flowing in low places which the masses disdain. ~ Hence, it is close to the goodness of the Tao. ~ In dwelling, be grounded, ~ In thinking, be deep, ~ In giving, be balanced, ~ In speaking, be truthful, ~ In governing, be orderly, ~ In working, be competent, ~ In action, be timely. ~ In following the virtues of water, ~ The sage contends with no one, ~ And therefore he invites no troubles in life.

[08c24t] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ The best of the best is like water. ~ Water is beneficial to everything, ~ And does not demand anything for itself in return. ~ Water stays in places where nothing else stays. ~ Therefore, water is close to Tao. ~ At home, it is important for this to be a good place to live in. ~ In feeling, examine the depths of your heart. ~ In friendship, maintain good relations with others. ~ In words, have confidence. ~ In government, abide by good order. ~ In trade, taking things easy will be to your benefit. ~ In movement, use every opportunity. ~ Since there is no demand for anything, there is no blame, either. ~ This shows how the sage, the highest level of good, operates selflessly. ~ He does good for others but demands nothing of them. ~ He is satisfied with everything. ~ He does not covet anything that belongs to someone else. ~ When he serves as an example for us, the world enjoys peace and tranquillity.

[08c25t] Man-Ho Kwok ~ The sage's way, ~ Tao is the way of water. ~ There must be water for life to be, and it can flow wherever. ~ And water, being true to being water is true to Tao. ~ Those on the Way of Tao, like water need to accept where they find themselves; ~ and that may often be where water goes to the lowest places, and that is right. ~ Like a lake the heart must be calm and quiet having great depth beneath it. ~ The sage rules with compassion, and his word needs to be trusted. ~ The sage needs to know like water ~ how to flow around the blocks ~ and how to find the way through without violence. ~ Like water, the sage should wait for the moment to ripen and be right: ~ water, you know, never fights ~ it flows around without harm.

[08c26t] Gu Zhengkun ~ The perfect goodness is like water. ~ Water approaches all things instead of contending with them. ~ It prefers to dwell where no one would like to stay; ~ Hence it comes close to the Tao. ~ A man of perfect goodness chooses a low place to dwell as water, ~ He has a heart as deep as water, ~ He offers friendship as tender as water, ~ He speaks as sincerely as water, ~ He rules a state as orderly as water, ~ He does a thing as properly as water, ~ He takes action as timely as water. ~ Like water, he never contends with others, ~ So he never commits a mistake.

[08c27t] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ The greatest good is like water: it benefits all life without being noticed. ~ It flows even to the lowliest places where no one chooses to be and so it is very close to the Tao. ~ It settles only in quiet locations. ~ Its deepest heart is always clear. ~ It offers itself with great goodness. ~ It keeps its rhythm as it keeps its promises. ~ It governs tributaries as it governs its people. ~ It adapts to all necessities. ~ It moves at the right moment. ~ It never flaunts its goodness and so it never attracts any blame.

[08c28t] Liu Qixuan ~ The perfect goodness is like the water. ~ Water benefits everything without caring for its own profit, ~ And lives in places that none would like. ~ As a good instance of the able Way, ~ Water is best at choosing places for its existence, ~ Freeing its mind for working up new wonders ~ Matching the heaven in generous grace ~ Speaking with the most persuasive power, ~ Governing supremely without verbalized policies ~ Crowning everything it does with success ~ And taking its actions at the best times. ~ For one who struggles for nothing ~ Will find no difficulty in everything.

[08c29t] Shi Fu Hwang ~ On Water ~ Lao Tze says, ~ Ultimate goodness shall be found in water. ~ Water is good at helping all things, being free of conflict with them. ~ It stays in places that most people despise, so it is closest to the Tao. ~ It provides benefit wherever it stays, ~ illustrates the example of good men's hearts by forming the depth of the abyss, ~ distributes to the needy one to demonstrate benevolence, ~ reflects genuine images to interpret credibility, ~ removes dirty things to purify the government, ~ transforms to different shapes to display its capability, ~ moves as the seasons change to show timeliness. ~ Because water never competes with others, hence no one will resent it.

[08c30t] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ The highest goodness is like water. ~ Water is beneficent to all things but does not contend. ~ It stays in places which others despise. ~ Therefore it is near Tao. ~ In dwelling, think it a good place to live; ~ In feeling, make the heart deep; ~ In friendship, keep on good terms with men; ~ In words, have confidence; ~ In ruling, abide by good order; ~ In business, take things easy; ~ In motion, make use of the opportunity. ~ Since there is no contention, there is no blame.

[08c31t] Paul J. Lin ~ The man of supreme goodness resembles water. ~ Water benefits all things ~ Without competing with them, ~ Staying in places that men despise; ~ Therefore, it is very close to Tao. ~ Dwelling in good places, ~ Having a heart that loves the profound, ~ Allying with benevolence, ~ Inviting trust with words, ~ Being righteous in governing, ~ Managing all things well, ~ Moving at the right time. ~ Just because he does not compete, ~ The man of supreme goodness frees himself of blame.

[08c32t] Michael LaFargue ~ The highest Excellence is like water. ~ Water, Excellent at being of benefit to the thousands of things, does not contend - ~ it settles in places everyone else avoids. ~ Yes, it is just about Tao. ~ Excellence in a house: the ground; ~ "Excellence in a mind: depth; ~ Excellence in companions: Goodness; ~ Excellence in speaking: sincerity; ~ Excellence in setting things right: good management; ~ Excellence on the job: ability; ~ Excellence in making a move: good timing." ~ Simply do not contend ~ then there will be no fault.

[08c33t] Cheng Lin ~ The way of a good man is like that of water which benefits all things without contention. ~ He is content to keep that which is discarded by the multitude. ~ Hence he is close to Truth. ~ He adapts himself to any environment; ~ he attunes his mind to what is profound; ~ he associates himself with the virtuous; ~ his words inspire confidence; ~ his rule brings about order; ~ he administers affairs with ability; ~ his actions are opportune. ~ Because he does not contend, he gives no cause for resentment.

[08c34t] Yi Wu ~ The supremely good [man] is like water. ~ Water is good at benefiting all things ~ but does not compete with them. ~ It dwells in places that people dislike; ~ therefore, it is close to the Way. ~ In dwelling, he is good at living close to the ground. ~ In mind, he is good at making himself like an abyss. ~ In giving, he is good at practicing humanity. ~ In speaking, he is good at keeping his word. ~ In governing, he is good at managing. ~ In doing, he is good at using his abilities. ~ In moving, he is good at discerning the right time. ~ Because he does not compete with others, he will be free from blame.

[08c35t] Han Hiong Tan ~ A person of great virtue behaves like water. ~ Water benefits everything but does not contend. ~ It resides at the lowest place that everyone loathes. ~ Thus this characteristic of water bears close resemblance to the typical trait of Dao. ~ A person of great virtue prefers to live on the lowest ground. ~ His heart is quiescent and serene. ~ His dealings with others are based on goodwill. ~ His utterances are forever sincere. ~ His rule is orderly and peaceful. ~ His managerial skills are superb. ~ His timing is always impeccable. ~ Because he is not contentious, nobody will ever hold a grudge against him.

[08c36t] Hua-Ching Ni ~ One of universal nature is like water; ~ he benefits all things but does not contend with them. ~ He unprotestingly takes the lowest position; ~ thus, he is close to the universal truth. ~ One of universal virtue chooses to live in a suitable environment. ~ He attunes his mind to become profound. ~ He deals with others with kindness. ~ In his speech, he is sincere. ~ His rule brings about order. ~ His work is efficient. ~ His actions are opportune. ~ One of deep virtue does not contend with people; ~ thus, he is above reproach.

[08c37t] Chang Chung-yuan ~ That which is best is similar to the water. ~ Water profits ten thousand things and does not oppose them. ~ It is always at rest in humble places that people dislike. ~ Thus, it is close to Tao. ~ Therefore, for staying, we prefer a humble place. ~ For minds, we prefer profundity. ~ For companions, we prefer the kindness. ~ For words, we prefer sincerity. ~ For government, we prefer good order. ~ For affairs, we prefer ability. ~ For actions, we prefer the right time. ~ Because we do not strive, ~ We are free from fault.

[08c38t] Henry Wei ~ Yielding Nature ~ I Hsing ~ A man of the superior type resembles water, ~ Whose goodness lies in benefiting all things without contention, ~ And staying in places detested by the masses. ~ This makes him closely akin to Tao. ~ The goodness of his abode is its low location. ~ The goodness of his heart is its cavern-like hollowness. ~ Benevolence is the goodness of his offerings. ~ Sincerity is the goodness of his speech. ~ The goodness of his rule means peace. ~ The goodness of his dealings means competence. ~ His moves are good because timely. ~ As he is not disposed to contend, ~ He causes little resentment.

[08c39t] Ha Poong Kim ~ The supreme good is like water. ~ Water benefits the ten thousand things, yet contends with nothing. ~ It dwells where everyone is loath to be. ~ That is why it is near to Tao. ~ In dwelling, the good is the ground, ~ In thought, the good is depth, ~ In association, the good is gentleness, ~ In speech, the good is truthfulness, ~ In government, the good is order, ~ In work, the good is ability, ~ In movement, the good is timeliness. ~ Truly, because it [water] contends with nothing, ~ It is beyond reproach.

[08c40t] Tao Huang ~ Eminent goodness is like water. ~ Water is good at benefiting all things, ~ Yet it actively competes. ~ It retires to undesirable places. ~ Thus it is near to Tao. ~ Dwelling in good places, ~ Drawing from good sources, ~ Supplying from good nature, ~ Speaking with good trust, ~ Governing with good rules, ~ Conducting with good ability, ~ And acting within good time. ~ For this reason, ~ There is no competition, ~ There is no concern.

[08c41t] Tang Zi-chang ~ Perfect excellence is like gentle water. ~ Gentle water benefits All Things and yet it does not struggle. ~ Do away with what all people hate. ~ Thus this is approaching Dao. ~ Give to what is of perfect personnel. ~ Stay in a perfect place, ~ think in a perfect way, ~ cooperate with perfect people, ~ speak perfect truth, ~ govern in perfect order, ~ work for perfect potentiality, ~ move when the time is perfect. ~ Because of non-struggle, therefore, there is no blame.

[08c42t] Wing-tsit Chan ~ The best (man) is like water. ~ Water is good; ~ It benefits all things and does not compete with them. ~ It dwells in (lowly) places that all disdain. ~ This is why it is so near to Tao. ~ (The best man) in his dwelling loves the earth. ~ In his heart, he loves what is profound. ~ In his associations, he loves humanity. ~ In his words, he loves faithfulness. ~ In government, he loves order. ~ In handling affairs, he loves competence. ~ In his activities, he loves timeliness. ~ It is because he does not compete that he is without reproach.

[08c91t] И. И. Семененко ~ Высшее добро сходно с водой. ~ Добро воды состоит в том, что она приносит пользу десяти тысячам вещей и при этом не соперничает. ~ Место, где она пребывает, ненавистно для толпы, поэтому она и близка к Дао. ~ Добрым местом обитания является Земля, ~ добром для сердца выступает глубина, ~ добро в общении составляет человечность, ~ добро в высказывании - это искренность, ~ добро в правлении исчерпывается порядком, ~ добро деяния заключается в способности, ~ добро движения есть время. ~ Не соперничает и поэтому не вызывает осуждения.

[08c92t] А. А. Маслов ~ Человек высшей Благости подобен воде, ~ ибо вода приносит пользу мириадам существ, не соперничая с ними, и находится в том месте, которое все ненавидят. ~ Поэтому она близка Дао. ~ В жилище он ценит землю, ~ в сердце ценит глубину, ~ в союзе ценит гуманность, ~ в словах ценит искренность, ~ в правлении ценит порядок, ~ в поступках ценит способности, ~ в делах ценит время. ~ В силу того, что он не соперничает, он и не допускает ошибок.

[08c93t] Е. А. Торчинов ~ Высшее благо словно вода. ~ Вода приносит благо и пользу всем существам, ни с кем вражды не зная. ~ Течет она в таких местах, где людям, да и тварям, жить нельзя. ~ Поэтому близка она Дао-Пути. ~ Живи в благих землях, пусть твое сердце станет полноводным водоемом блага. ~ Пусть милосердие твое всегда обрящет единение с благом, а речи проникнутся благом достоверности. ~ Всегда осуществляй благое исправление, свершай дела благие по возможности своей и действуй лишь во время должное, благое. ~ Лишь тот, кто не враждует, не будет ненавидим.

[08c94t] А. Е. Лукьянов ~ Верхняя доброта подобна воде. ~ Доброта воды приносит пользу вещам и не борется [с ними]. ~ [Вода] устремляется туда, где многие люди погрязли во зле. ~ Поэтому [она] почти как Дао. ~ Селясь где-нибудь, проявляй доброту к земле. ~ Сердцу повинуясь, проявляй доброту безмерно. ~ Завязывая дружбу, наполняй добротой Жэнь (Человеколюбие). ~ Говоря что-либо, наполняй добротой Синь (Доверие-Веру). ~ Управляя, согласовывай с добротой методы управления. ~ Отправляя службы, наполняй добротой способности. ~ Действуя, будь добр, следуй времени. ~ Ни в коем случае не соперничай и тогда не будешь повинен ни в чем.

[08c95t] Ян Хин-шун ~ Высшая добродетель подобна воде. ~ Вода приносит пользу всем существам и не борется [с ними]. ~ Она находится там, где люди не желали бы быть. ~ Поэтому она похожа на дао. ~

[Человек, обладающий высшей добродетелью, так же как и вода], должен селиться ближе к земле; ~ его сердце должно следовать внутренним побуждениям; ~ в отношениях с людьми он должен быть дружелюбным; ~ в словах должен быть искренним; ~ в управлении [страной] должен быть последовательным; ~ в делах должен исходить из возможностей; ~ в действиях должен учитывать время. ~ Поскольку [он], так же как и вода, не борется с вещами, [он] не совершает ошибок.

[08c96t] Д. П. Конисси ~ Высшая добродетель похожа на воду. ~ Вода, давая всем существам обильную пользу, не сопротивляется ничему. ~ Она находится на том месте, которого люди не видят, поэтому она похожа на Тао. ~ Жить хорошо - для земли; ~ сердце - для глубины; ~ союз - для любви; ~ слова - для доверия; ~ управление - для благоденствия (страны); ~ дела - для умения; ~ движение - для жизни. ~ Не ссорящийся не осуждается.

[08c97t] В. В. Малявин ~ Высшее благо подобно воде: ~ Вода приносит благо всей тьме вещей и ни с чем не борется. ~ Собирается в местах, которых люди избегают, ~ Вот почему она близка Пути. ~ Для жизни благотворна земля; ~ Для сердца благотворна глубина; ~ В общении благотворна доброта; ~ В речах благотворно доверие; ~ В правлении благотворно смирение; ~ В деяниях благотворно умение; ~ В движениях благотворно само время. ~ Лишь там, где нет соперничества, не будет и ущерба.

[08c98t] Б. Б. Виногродский ~ Продвижение к совершенству подобно воде. ~ Вода в своем совершенстве приносит пользу мириадам сущностей, не соперничая при этом. ~ Она находится в местах, которые неприятны множеству людей. ~ Причинность: ~ Она близка Пути. ~ Пребывание совершенствуется землей. ~ Сердце-сознание совершенствуется бездонностью. ~ Сопричастность совершенствуется контактностью. ~ Речь совершенствуется верой. ~ Управление совершенствуется порядком. ~ Ситуация-дело совершенствуется энергией-возможностью. ~ Движение совершенствуется временем. ~ И если только не соперничаешь, тогда - отсутствие просчетов.

PSEUDO-CHAPTER Nine

[09c01t] Robert G. Henricks ~ To hold it upright and fill it, ~ Is not so good as stopping [in time]. ~ When you pound it out and give it a point, ~ It won't be preserved very long. ~ When gold and jade fill your rooms, ~ You'll never be able to protect them. ~ Arrogance and pride with wealth and rank, ~ On their own bring on disaster. ~ When the deed is accomplished you retire; ~ Such is Heaven's Way!

[09c02t] John C. H. Wu ~ As for holding to fullness, ~ Far better were it to stop in time! ~ Keep on beating and sharpening a sword, ~ And the edge cannot be preserved for long. ~ Fill your house with gold and jade, ~ And it can no longer be guarded. ~ Set store by your riches and honour, ~ And you will only reap a crop of calamities. ~ Here is the Way of Heaven: ~ When you have done your work, retire!

[09c03t] D. C. Lau ~ Rather than fill it to the brim by keeping it upright ~ Better to have stopped in time; ~ Hammer it to a point ~ And the sharpness cannot be preserved for ever; ~ There may be gold and jade to fill a hall ~ But there is none who can keep them. ~ To be overbearing when one has wealth and position ~ Is to bring calamity upon oneself. ~ To retire when the task is accomplished ~ Is the way of heaven.

[09c04t] R. L. Wing ~ Holding to fullness Is not as good as stopping in time. ~ Sharpness that probes Cannot protect for long. ~ A house filled with riches Cannot be defended. ~ Pride in wealth and position Is overlooking one's collapse. ~ Withdrawing when success is achieved Is the Tao in Nature.

[09c05t] Ren Jiyu ~ To hold and fill is not as good as to give up. ~ If a sword edge is sharpened to its sharpest, ~ It is hard to last long. ~ If your hall is filled with gold and jade, ~ Whoever could keep them safe? ~ To be proud with honour and wealth will bring misfortune. ~ To withdraw as soon as the work is done ~ That is Heaven's right way (Tao).

[09c06t] Gia-fu Feng ~ Better stop short than fill to the brim. ~ Oversharpen the blade, and the edge will soon blunt. ~ Amass a store of gold and jade, and no one can protect it. ~ Claim wealth and titles, and disaster will follow. ~ Retire when the work is done. ~ This is the way of heaven.

[09c07t] Lok Sang Ho ~ Holding a full load of what you desire in your hands ~ Is not as wise as putting it down. ~ Sharpening a knife edge to the extreme, ~ And it may chip off in use. ~ To have a house full of gold and jade, ~ And you will only invite thieves. ~ To succumb to conceit and arrogance upon getting wealth and status, ~ In the end you will regret it. ~ Retire once a task has been accomplished ~ And you are in consonance with Heaven's Way.

[09c08t] Xiaolin Yang ~ To be overflowing is not as good as having just enough. ~ If a point is made too sharp, the sharpness will not last long. ~ A houseful of treasure is impossible to keep. ~ The rich and arrogant are destined for disaster. ~ When you are successful and famous, quickly back out, which is the heavens' way.

[09c09t] Walter Gorn Old, MAKING THINGS EQUAL ~ It is advisable to refrain from continual reaching after wealth. ~ Continual handling and sharpening wears away the most durable thing. ~ If the house be full of jewels, who shall protect it? ~ Wealth and glory bring care along with pride. ~ To stop when good work is done and honour advancing is the way of Heaven.

[09c10t] James Legge ~ It is better to leave a vessel unfilled, than to attempt to carry it when it is full. ~ If you keep feeling a point that has been sharpened, the point cannot long preserve its sharpness. ~ When gold and jade fill the hall, their possessor cannot keep them safe. ~ When wealth and honours lead to arrogancy, this brings its evil on itself. ~ When the work is done, and one's name is becoming distinguished, to withdraw into obscurity is the way of Heaven.

[09c11t] David Hinton ~ Forcing it fuller and fuller can't compare to just enough, ~ and honed sharper and sharper means it won't keep for long. ~ Once it's full of jade and gold your house will never be safe. ~ Proud of wealth and renown you bring on your own ruin. ~ Just do what you do, and then leave: such is the Way of heaven.

[09c12t] Chichung Huang ~ To hold and fill it to the brim - ~ You'd better stop it; ~ To hammer and sharpen it - ~ You cannot long preserve it; ~ To fill a room with gold and jade - ~ Nobody can safeguard it; ~ To be noble, rich but arrogant - ~ You will bring yourself calamity. ~ To withdraw yourself after scoring merits - ~ Heaven's Tao.

[09c13t] Ellen M. Chen ~ To hold and fill (a vessel) to the full (ying), ~ It had better not be done. ~ To temper and sharpen a sword, ~ Its edge could not be kept (pao) long. ~ To fill the hall with gold and jade, ~ There is no way to guard (shou) them. ~ To be rich, exalted, and proud, ~ This is to invite blame (chiu) upon oneself. ~ When work is done (sui), the person (sheng) retires, ~ Such is the Tao of heaven.

[09c14t] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ People who accumulate extravagantly are less fortunate than those who would voluntarily cease and desist [before the accumulation of wealth becomes an obsession]; ~ [It is similar to the fact that:] ~ If a person grinds and sharpens sword beyond reason he would run the risk of thinning off the blade, [not for long], he will be unable to keep the blade; ~ If a person has a house full of gold and jade, he will run into mounting problems of guarding them [against theft and robbery]; ~ If a person of wealth and power (fame) is arrogant, he will unquestionably incite hostility and criticism [against him]. ~ Retiring physically after deeds are accomplished and names (identification) are established is [a manifestation of] the heavenly Tao.

[09c15t] Tien Cong Tran ~ You hold to fullness, and it is better to stop in time! ~ You keep on beating and sharpening a sword, and the edge cannot be preserved for long. ~ You fill your house with gold and jade, and it can no longer be guarded. ~ You put on airs by your riches and honor, and you will only reap a crop of calamities. ~ Here is the Way of Heaven: When you have done your work, retire.

[09c16t] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ To fill to its full is not as good as to leave it alone. ~ Why make things very sharp, if the edge can not keep long-lasting sharpness. ~ Greed for treasure cannot make the fortune last. ~ Rich and arrogant, one would bring troubles for oneself. ~ Retire when the goal is achieved; this conforms to Tao.

[09c17t] Arthur Waley ~ Stretch a bow to the very full, ~ And you will wish you had stopped in time; ~ Temper a sword-edge to its very sharpest, ~ And you will find it soon grows dull. ~ When bronze and jade fill your hall ~ It can no longer be guarded. ~ Wealth and place breed insolence ~ That brings ruin in its train. ~ When your work is done, then withdraw! ~ Such is Heaven's Way.

[09c18t] Richard John Lynn ~ With it firmly in hand, he goes on to fill it up, but it would be better to quit. ~ If, having forged it, one goes on to sharpen it, it could not last long. ~ Gold and jade fill the hall, but none can keep them safe. ~ If one is arrogant because of wealth and rank, he will give himself a blameworthy fate. ~ Once achievement has occurred, one retires, for such is the Dao of Heaven.

[09c19t] Lin Yutang ~ THE DANGER OF OVERWEENING SUCCESS ~ Stretch (a bow) to the very full, ~ And you will wish you had stopped in time. ~ Temper (a sword-edge) to its very sharpest, ~ And the edge will not last long. ~ When gold and jade fill your hall, ~ You will not be able to keep them safe. ~ To be proud with wealth and honor ~ Is to sow the seeds of one's own downfall. ~ Retire when your work is done, ~ Such is Heaven's way.

[09c20t] Victor H. Mair ~ Instead of keeping a bow taut while holding it straight, better to relax. ~ You may temper a sword until it is razor sharp, but you cannot preserve the edge for long. ~ When gold and jade fill your rooms, no one will be able to guard them for you. ~ If wealth and honor make you haughty, you bequeath misfortune upon yourself. ~ To withdraw when your work is finished, ~ that is the Way of heaven.

[09c21t] Tolbert McCarroll ~ Better to stop in time than to fill to the brim. ~ Hone a blade to the sharpest point, ~ and it will soon be blunt. ~ Fill your house with gold and jade, ~ and no one can protect it. ~ Be prideful about wealth and position, ~ and you bring disasters upon yourself. ~ Retire when the work is done. ~ This is the way of heaven.

[09c22t] David H. Li ~ Filling to the brim is not as good as stopping short; ~ Polishing to the sharpest does not last long. ~ A roomful of gold and jade is hard to follow. ~ One prideful of wealth and fame sows the seeds of sorrow. ~ With mission accomplished, it is time to offer resignation. ~ This is cosmos's Direction.

[09c23t] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ To fill to the brim is to be out of balance, ~ Wherefore it is better to stop before overfilling. ~ To over-sharpen a sword is to be out of balance, ~ Wherefore its edge will not last long. ~ To line a hall with gold and jade is to be out of balance, ~ Wherefore no one can guard them. ~ If wealth and rank make a man haughty and clinging, ~ He will surely bequeath misfortune upon himself. ~ If success is achieved and honor bestowed, ~ Quietly withdraw from your position. ~ This is the Way of Heaven.

[09c24t] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ It is better to leave a thing alone ~ Than to hold it and keep it full to the brim. ~ If you sharpen the blade and use it, ~ It will not remain sharp for long. ~ When gold and jade fill the temple, ~ No one can protect them. ~ When wealth and honor come together with pride ~ Self-destruction quickly joins them. ~ After the goal has been achieved and the objective has been honorably accomplished, ~ The Tao of heaven ~ Is to retire from everything.

[09c25t] Man-Ho Kwok ~ Hold yourself back from filling yourself up, or you'll tip off your stand. ~ You can hammer a blade until it's razor-sharp - and in seconds, it can blunt. ~ You may amass gold and jade in plenty ~ but then the more you have, the less safety ... ~ Are you strutting your wealth like a peacock? ~ Then you've set yourself up to be shot. ~ You bring about your own disaster ~ Because you've got too much. ~ Let go, when your work is done: ~ That is the Way of Heaven.

[09c26t] Gu Zhengkun ~ One should stop in due time ~ Rather than fill it to the brim. ~ When a point is whittled too sharp, ~ Its sharpness cannot remains long. ~ When a hall is full of gold and jade, ~ Nobody can keep them long; ~ When a man of wealth and rank is arrogant, ~ He is looking for a calamity upon himself; ~ When one succeeds and subsequently retires, ~ He follows the true way of heaven.

[09c27t] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ To stop in time is better than to hold a full bowl with fear of spilling. ~ A knife cannot be kept constantly sharp, therefore it is wise not to flaunt the blade. ~ Amass a hoard of gold and jade and it cannot be possessed for ever. ~ Those who vaunt their position and worth risk attracting blame. ~ To retire when the goal is reached: this is the Tao of Heaven.

[09c28t] Liu Qixuan ~ Rather than possessing more and more wealth, ~ One would do better to give it all up. ~ Rather than forging sharper and sharper weapons, ~ One would get better protection by throwing them away. ~ One who gets a whole house of gold can not keep it. ~ One who is proud of wealth and status will suffer for it. ~ It is in agreement with the spirit of the Way ~ That one duly withdraws with his successes achieved.

[09c29t] Shi Fu Hwang ~ The Danger of Overweening Success ~ Lao Tze says, ~ A full utensil in hand has to be halted. ~ The blade sharpened to the thinnest edge, cannot be endured long. ~ A hall full of jewels and gold, can never be safely guarded. ~ A man who takes pride in richness and nobleness, has his downfall because of the seeds he sowed. ~ Recess at the day of success, such is the way of Heaven.

[09c30t] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ Holding and keeping a thing to the very full - it is better to leave it alone; ~ Handling and sharpening a blade - it cannot be long sustained; ~ When gold and jade fill the hall, no one can protect them; ~ Wealth and honour with pride bring with them destruction; ~ To have accomplished merit and acquired fame, then to retire - ~ This is the Tao of heaven.

[09c31t] Paul J. Lin ~ Hold [a cup] and fill it to the brim; ~ Is it not better to stop in time? ~ Hammer and sharpen [an edge]; ~ It cannot last long. ~ Fill a hall with gold and jade; ~ They cannot be protected. ~ He who is rich, honored, and arrogant brings blame upon himself. ~ He who withdraws after achieving success and performing duty adheres to the Tao of heaven.

[09c32t] Michael LaFargue ~ In filling, if you keep on and on - ~ better to have stopped. ~ In sharpening, if you keep trying - ~ the edge won't last long. ~ When gold and jade fill the halls, ~ no one can guard it all. ~ Rich, famous - and conceited: ~ leading to a downfall self-caused. ~ Achieve successes, win the fame, remove yourself: ~ Heaven's Way.

[09c33t] Cheng Lin ~ Those who amass wealth without ceasing are comparable to one who continues to temper a weapon until it loses its keenness. ~ A house that is filled with gold and jades cannot long remain secure. ~ A man who proudly displays his riches invites trouble for himself. ~ The effacement of self after success has been achieved is the way of Heaven.

[09c34t] Yi Wu ~ Holding [a cup] until it overflows, is not as good as stopping in time. ~ [A sword] beaten to its sharpest, will not last long. ~ A hall filled with gold and jade, cannot be kept forever. ~ Pride in riches and honors, creates trouble for oneself. ~ After achieving merit, retire. ~ It is the Way of Heaven.

[09c35t] Han Hiong Tan ~ As brimming with pride will often lead to a downfall, ~ A timely halt is much preferred. ~ If you continue to hone the blade of a knife, ~ You will not be able to preserve its sharp edge. ~ It is impossible to safeguard a house full of treasures forever. ~ Wealthy people who are arrogantly extravagant, ~ Inevitably bring calamity upon themselves. ~ To retire after a successful career is to follow the way of Dao.

[09c36t] Hua-Ching Ni ~ A bow that is stretched to its fullest capacity may certainly snap. ~ A sword that is tempered to its very sharpest may easily be broken. ~ A house that is full of jade and gold cannot remain secure for long. ~ One who proudly displays his wealth invites trouble. ~ Therefore, resign from a high position when your mission is complete. ~ This is the Universal Way of a life of deep virtue.

[09c37t] Chang Chung-yuan ~ To hold things and to be proud of them is not as good as not to have them, ~ Because if one insists on an extreme, that extreme will not dwell long. ~ When a room is full of precious things, one will never be able to preserve them. ~ When one is wealthy, high ranking, and proud of himself, he invites misfortune. ~ When one's task is completed and his mission is fulfilled, he removes himself from his position. ~ This is indeed the way of Nature!

[09c38t] Henry Wei ~ Practice of Placidity ~ Yun Yi ~ To hold and fill a vessel to brimful ~ Is not so good as to stop before the limit. ~ Hone a tool to its sharpest state, ~ And its keenness cannot be long preserved. ~ A hall filled with gold and jade ~ Can hardly be safeguarded. ~ To show pride in one's wealth and high rank ~ Is to pave the way for one's own doom. ~ Retire after achieving success and winning renown! ~ This is the Way of Heaven.

[09c39t] Ha Poong Kim ~ Rather than hold the bowl until it fills to the brim, ~ Better quit in time. ~ Hammer the blade to its sharpest, ~ And you will be unable to preserve it long. ~ Fill the hall with gold and jade, ~ And you will be unable to keep them safe. ~ He who is arrogant with his wealth and position ~ Will bring calamity upon himself. ~ To withdraw when the task is accomplished ~ Is the way of Heaven.

[09c40t] Tao Huang ~ Hanging on to it will cause overflow, better to let go. ~ Forced consent does not endure. ~ Filling the house with gold and jade will not bring safety. ~ Riches and royalty result in pride, they bring about their own punishment. ~ When the work is done, the body withdraws. ~ This is the Tao of heaven.

[09c41t] Tang Zi-chang ~ Do not concentrate one's wealth in abundance. ~ It is far better for one to know where to stop. ~ Do not beat one's sword sharp, one can never keep its edge for ever. ~ If their houses are full of gold and jade, they have no way to keep them forever. ~ If they are proud of having great riches and honors, they just make more troubles for themselves. ~ When merits have been achieved, fame has been completed - one may withdraw himself. ~ That is to follow the law of Nature.

[09c42t] Wing-tsit Chan ~ To hold and fill a cup to overflowing ~ Is not as good as to stop in time. ~ Sharpen a sword-edge to its very sharpest, ~ And the (edge) will not last long. ~ When gold and jade fill your hall, ~ You will not be able to keep them. ~ To be proud with honor and wealth ~ Is to cause one's own downfall. ~ Withdraw as soon as your work is done. ~ Such is Heaven's Way.

[09c91t] И. И. Семененко ~ Наполнить до краев, придерживая, чтобы не разлить, - не идет в сравнение с тем, когда уже пусто. ~ Не сохранить надолго острым то, что натачивают все острее. ~ Когда забита вся палата златом и нефритом, никто не сможет их сберечь. ~ Кто гордится тем, что знатен и богат, сам обрекает себя на несчастье. ~ Дао Неба в том, чтобы успешно завершить свои труды и удалиться.

[09c92t] А. А. Маслов ~ Лучше вовремя остановиться, чем наполнить [сосуд] до краёв. ~ Если заточить лезвие до предела, то долго его не сохранить. ~ Покои могут быть полны золота и каменьев, но не найдётся того, кто устерёг бы их. ~ Похваляться богатством и знатностью - значит накликать на себя беду. ~ Добившись успеха - отступай. ~ В этом - Путь Неба.

[09c93t] Е. А. Торчинов ~ Не лучше ли ослабить натянутую тетиву, чем вечно напрягать ее? ~ И даже если бесконечно точить клинок, надолго сохранить остроту его, пожалуй, не удастся. ~ Когда нефритом или золотом наполнен зал, кто сможет уберечь его от вора? ~ Когда богатством или знатностью кичатся люди, не навлекают сами этим ли беду большую? ~ Богатство, почести и слава сгинут прочь, истлеет тело - вот небесное Дао, вот Путь!

[09c94t] А. Е. Лукьянов ~ Можно взять да и наполнить что-либо, ~ но не лучше ли оставить его как есть? ~ Можно расплющить и отточить что-либо, ~ но невозможно надолго сохранить [остроту]. ~ Можно золотом и яшмой завалить палаты, ~ да разве найдется тот, кто сможет сберечь [все это]? ~ Можно осыпать себя драгоценностями и смотреть на всех свысока, ~ но ведь только накличешь беду на себя. ~ Поэтому для успешного достижения цели ты сам возьми да и уступи Небесному Дао.

[09c95t] Ян Хин-шун ~ Лучше ничего не делать, чем стремиться к тому, чтобы что-либо наполнить. ~ Если [чем-либо] острым [все время] пользоваться, оно не сможет долго сохранить свою [остроту]. ~ Если зал наполнен золотом и яшмой, то никто не в силах их уберечь. ~ Если богатые и знатные проявляют кичливость, они сами навлекают на себя беду. ~ Когда дело завершено, человек [должен] устраниться. ~ В этом закон небесного дао.

[09c96t] Д. П. Конисси ~ Чтобы посуда была наполнена чем-нибудь, нужно держать ее твердо (без малейшего движения) и ровно. ~ Чтобы лезвие наострилось, нужно долго продолжать натачивание. ~ Когда дом наполнен золотом и драгоценными камнями, то невозможно сохранить его в целости. ~ Кто достигнет чести и приобретет богатство, тот сделается гордым. ~ Он легко забудет, что существует наказание (за преступление). ~ Когда дела увенчаются блестящим успехом и будет приобретено доброе имя, то лучше всего удалиться (в уединение). ~ Вот это-то и есть небесное Тао (или естественное Тао).

[09c97t] В. В. Малявин ~ Чем удерживать наполненное до краев, ~ Лучше вовремя остановиться. ~ Кто старается наточить острее, ~ Не сохранит достигнутого надолго. ~ Коли золото и яшма заполнили покои, ~ Никому не под силу их сберечь. ~ Тот, кто кичится богатством и знатностью, ~ Сам навлечет на себя беду. ~ Подвиг совершен, слава явилась, а сам скрылся - ~ Вот Путь Небесный.

[09c98t] Б. Б. Виногродский ~ Удерживают и заполняют его. ~ А лучше бы прекратить это. ~ Куют и заостряют его. ~ Не смогут сохранить долго. ~ Золото и драгоценности заполнили залы. ~ Никто не сумеет уберечь. ~ Если в богатстве и знатности загордился, сам себе создаешь проблемы на будущее. ~ Приходит успех - личность отступает. ~ Таков Путь Неба.

[10c17t] Arthur Waley ~ Can you keep the unquiet physical-soul from straying, hold fast to the Unity, and never quit it? ~ Can you, when concentrating your breath, make it soft like that of a little child? ~ Can you wipe and cleanse your vision of the Mystery till all is without blur? ~ Can you love the people and rule the land, yet remain unknown? ~ Can you in opening and shutting the heavenly gates play always the female part? ~ Can your mind penetrate every corner of the land, but you yourself never interfere? ~ Rear them, then, feed them, ~ Rear them, but do not lay claim to them. ~ Control them, but never lean upon them; ~ Be chief among them, but do not manage them. ~ This is called the Mysterious Power.

[10c18t] Richard John Lynn ~ Stay where your earthbound soul is protected, and embrace integrity: can you do this with never a deviation? ~ Rely exclusively on your vital force, and become perfectly soft: can you play the infant? ~ Cleanse your vision into the mystery of things: can you make it spotless? ~ Cherish the people and govern the state: can you do this without intelligence? ~ The gateway of Heaven, whether it is to be open or shut: can you play the female? ~ Your bright understanding casts its light over the four quarters: can you stay free of conscious effort? ~ He gives them life ~ And nurtures them. ~ He gives them life, yet he possesses them not. ~ He acts, yet does not make them dependent. ~ He matures them, yet he is not their steward. ~ This we call mysterious virtue.

[10c19t] Lin Yutang ~ EMBRACING THE ONE ~ In embracing the One with your soul, ~ Can you never forsake the Tao? ~ In controlling your vital force to achieve gentleness, ~ Can you become like the new-born child? ~ In cleansing and purifying your Mystic vision, ~ Can you strive after perfection? ~ In loving the people and governing the kingdom, ~ Can you rule without interference? ~ In opening and shutting the Gate of Heaven, ~ Can you play the part of the Female? ~ In comprehending all knowledge, ~ Can you renounce the mind? ~ To give birth, to nourish, ~ To give birth without taking possession, ~ To act without appropriation, ~ To be chief among men without managing them - ~ This is the Mystic Virtue.

[10c20t] Victor H. Mair ~ While you ~ Cultivate the soul and embrace unity, ~ can you keep them from separating? ~ Focus your vital breath until it is supremely soft, ~ can you be like a baby? ~ Cleanse the mirror of mysteries, ~ can you make it free of blemish? ~ Love the people and enliven the state, ~ can you do so without cunning? ~ Open and close the gate of heaven, ~ can you play the part of the female? ~ Reach out with clarity in all directions, ~ can you refrain from action? ~ It gives birth to them and nurtures them, ~ It gives birth to them but does not possess them, ~ It rears them but does not control them. ~ This is called "mysterious integrity."

[10c21t] Tolbert McCarroll ~ While carrying your active life on your head ~ can you embrace the quiet spirit in your arms, and not let go? ~ While being fully focused on your vital breath ~ can you make it soft like that of a newborn babe? ~ While cleaning your inner mirror ~ can you leave it without blemish? ~ While loving the people and ruling the country ~ can you dispense with cleverness? ~ While opening and closing the gates of heaven ~ can you be like a mother bird? ~ While penetrating the four quarters with your insight ~ can you remain simple? ~ Help the people live! ~ Nourish the people! ~ Help them live yet lay no claim to them. ~ Benefit them yet seek no gratitude. ~ Guide them yet do not control them. ~ This is called the hidden Virtue.

[10c22t] David H. Li ~ Unite physically and mentally to embrace One. ~ Can one be not separated from it? ~ Channel energy toward tenderness. ~ Can one emulate the infant? ~ Cleanse the deep mirror within. ~ Can one be without blemishes? ~ Love the populace in governance. ~ Can one practice laissez-faire? ~ Open and close the cosmic portal. ~ Can one assume the feminine role? ~ Discern and deliberate. ~ Can one be ignorant? ~ Cultivate, rear. ~ Cultivate, but possess not; ~ Provide, but claim not; ~ Nurture, but dominate [10c40t] Tao Huang ~ Donning the spirit and soul, and drawing them into Oneness, ~ Can this come apart? ~ Gathering in Qi and making the body supple, ~ Is this not an infant? ~ Being clear-headed and eliminating any mystic vision, ~ Can even a speck exist? ~ Loving the people and governing the country, ~ Is this not inactive? ~ Opening and closing the Gate of Heaven, ~ Is this not the female? ~ Comprehending the four corners of the world, ~ Is this not knowledge? ~ Begetting and nourishing, ~ Begetting but not possessing, ~ Enhancing but not dominating. ~ This is Mysterious Action.

[10c41t] Tang Zi-chang ~ By keeping the body and soul balanced, they can not be split. ~ By soft breathing and being tender, one can be innocent. ~ By purifying the mind and broadening views, one can be free from errors. ~ By loving the people and serving the country, one should not interfere. ~ If one's mind is indecisive, one should make it inactive. ~ By thoroughly understanding all angles, one can discard dogmatism. ~ It gives life, nourishes them. ~ It produces all things but it does not possess them. ~ It provides everything for them but it does not take anything from them. ~ It leads them but does not lord over them. ~ This is called the "incomprehensive Virtues".

[10c42t] Wing-tsit Chan ~ Can you keep the spirit and embrace the One without departing from them? ~ Can you concentrate your vital force and achieve the highest degree of weakness like an infant? ~ Can you clean and purify your profound insight so it will be spotless? ~ Can you love the people and govern the state without knowledge (cunning)? ~ Can you play the role of the female in the opening and closing of the gates of Heaven? ~ Can you understand all and penetrate all without taking any action? ~ To produce things and to rear them, ~ To produce, but not to take possession of them, ~ To act, but not to rely on one's own ability, ~ To lead them, but not to master them - ~ This is called profound and secret virtue.

[10c91t] И. И. Семененко ~ Возможно ль, сохраняя душу и в объятиях с единым, с ними не расстаться? ~ Возможно ль, как младенцу, сосредоточивать дыхание и быть предельно мягким? ~ Возможно ли избавиться от недостатков, если добиться чистоты и зреть сокровенное? ~ Возможно ли без знаний любить народ и управлять страной? ~ Возможно ли без самки открыть или закрыть Небесные врата? ~ Возможно ль, находясь в бездействии, все ясно понимать? ~ Рождать и взращивать, ~ чему давать жизнь - не иметь, ~ на свои действия не опираться, ~ быть старшим, но не властвовать ~ - это зовется сокровенной добродетелью.

[10c92t] А. А. Маслов ~ Можно ли, соединив душу и плоть, объять Единое и не утратить это? ~ Можно ли, регулируя ци и становясь податливым, обрести состояние новорождённого? ~ Можно ли, отполировав сокровенное зеркало, не оставить на нём пятен? ~ Можно ли, любя народ и правя государством, пребывать в недеянии? ~ Можно ли, открывая и закрывая Небесные Врата, сохранять состояние самки? ~ Можно ли, постигнув четыре начала, пребывать вне знания? ~ Давать жизнь и вскармливать? ~ Давать жизнь и не обладать этим? ~ Действуя, не требовать воздаяния? ~ Взращивая, не править этим? ~ Это зовётся сокровенной Благостью.

[10c93t] Е. А. Торчинов ~ Соедини воедино души земные и дух небес, ~ Одно обними - и не смогут они ввек расстаться! ~ Сосредоточь пневму-ци и мягкость этим обрети - ~ тогда сумеешь уподобиться дитяте! ~ Зерцало темное от скверны омой - ~ и беспорочен стань душой! ~ Цени народ, страну в порядок приведи - ~ тогда недеяние осуществить ты сможешь! ~ Небесные врата то отверзаются, то затворяются - ~ узри начало женственное в них! ~ Поняв четыре принципа, ты можешь пребывать в неведении полном! ~ Дао рождает сущее и его питает. ~ Рождает, но им не обладает и действует, не замышляя преднамеренно. ~ Оно все взращивает, но ничем не повелевает, и это Сокровенной Силой-

Дэ зовется, знаю!

[10c94t] А. Е. Лукьянов ~ Если сопрячь тело и душу и заключить в одно-единое, ~ могут ли остаться [они] нераздельны? ~ Если грубое семя-энергию довести до мягкости, ~ можно ли обратиться новорожденным? ~ Если начисто устранить видение сокровенного первоначала, ~ можно ли избежать изъяна? ~ Если любить народ и управлять страной, можно ли быть незнающим? ~ Если небесные врата открываются и закрываются, ~ может ли не быть Самки [Поднебесной]? ~ Если прояснить все в пределах четырех сторон, можно ли не деять? ~ [Оно] рождает все, размножает все. ~ Порождающее и не обладающее [порожденным], ~ возделывающее и ни на что не опирающееся, ~ главенствующее и не карающее - ~ это и есть изначально-сокровенное Дэ.

[10c95t] Ян Хин-шун ~ Если душа и тело будут в единстве, можно ли сохранить его? ~ Если сделать дух мягким, можно ли стать [бесстрастным] подобно новорожденному? ~ Если созерцание станет чистым, возможны ли тогда заблуждения? ~ Можно ли любить народ и управлять страной, не прибегая к мудрости? ~ Возможны ли превращения в природе, если следовать мягкости? ~ Возможно ли осуществление недеяния, если познать все взаимоотношения в природе? ~ Создавать и воспитывать [сущее]; ~ создавая, не обладать [тем, что создано]; ~ приводя в движение, не прилагать к этому усилий; ~ руководя, не считать себя властелином - вот что называется глубочайшим дэ.

[10c96t] Д. П. Конисси ~ Душа имеет единство, поэтому она не делится (на части). ~ Кто вполне духовен, тот бывает смирен, как младенец. ~ Кто свободен от всякого рода знаний, тот никогда не будет болеть. ~ Кто любит народ и управляет им, тот должен быть бездеятельным. ~ Кто хочет открыть небесные ворота, тот должен быть как самка. ~ Кто делает вид, что много знает и ко всему способен, тот ничего не знает и ни к чему не способен. ~ Кто производит (вещь) и постоянно держит ее, тот ничего не имеет. ~ Не хвалиться тем, что сделано, не начальствовать над другими, превосходя их, называется небесною добродетелью.

[10c97t] В. В. Малявин ~ Пестуй душу, обнимай Единое - можешь ли не терять их? ~ Сосредоточь дух, приди к мягкости - можешь ли быть как младенец? ~ Очищай сокровенное зеркало - можешь ли быть без изъяна? ~ Люби народ, блюди порядок в царстве - можешь ли пребывать в недеянии? ~ Небесные врата отворяются и затворяются - можешь ли быть женственным? ~ Постигай все в четырех пределах - можешь ли обойтись без знания? ~ Порождает и вскармливает, ~ Все рождает и ничем не обладает. ~ Всему поспешествует, а не ищет в том опоры, ~ Всех старше, а ничем не повелевает: ~ Вот что зовется сокровенным совершенством.

[10c98t] Б. Б. Виногродский ~ Практикуя осознание единности духовного и физического начал, способен ли пребывать в состоянии отсутствия рассеяния? ~ Концентрируя дыхание-ци, устремляясь к мягкости, способен ли быть в состоянии младенца? ~ Совершенствуя и очищая мистическое видение, способен ли быть в состоянии отсутствия изъянов? ~ В любви к народу и управлении государством, способен ли пребывать в состоянии отсутствия знаний? ~ Когда открываются и закрываются Небесные врата, способен ли быть в состоянии отсутствия иньской асимметрии? ~ Стремясь к полному постижению четырех пределов, способен ли пребывать в состоянии отсутствия осуществления? ~ Порождают и накапливают. ~ Порождая, не вступай в отношения обладания. ~ Осуществляя, не отождествляйся. ~ Возрастая, не главенствуй. ~ Это определяется: ~ Мистическая Потенция.

PSEUDO-CHAPTER Eleven

[11c01t] Robert G. Henricks ~ Thirty spokes unite in one hub; ~ It is precisely where there is nothing, that we find the usefulness of the wheel. ~ We fire clay and make vessels; ~ It is precisely where there's no substance, that we find the usefulness of clay pots. ~ We chisel out doors and windows; ~ It is precisely in these empty spaces, that we find the usefulness of the room. ~ Therefore, we regard having something as beneficial; ~ But having nothing as useful.

[11c02t] John C. H. Wu ~ THIRTY spokes converge upon a single hub; ~ It is on the hole in the center that the use of the cart hinges. ~ We make a vessel from a lump of clay; ~ It is the empty space within the vessel that makes it useful. ~ We make doors and windows for a room; ~ But it is these empty spaces that make the room livable. ~ Thus, while the tangible has advantages, ~ It is the intangible that makes it useful.

[11c03t] D. C. Lau ~ Thirty spokes share one hub. ~ Adapt the nothing therein to the purpose in hand, and you will have the use of the cart. ~ Knead clay in order to make a vessel. ~ Adapt the nothing therein to the purpose in hand, and you will have the use of the vessel. ~ Cut out doors and windows in order to make a room. ~ Adapt the nothing therein to the purpose in hand, and you will have the use of the room. ~ Thus what we gain is Something, yet it is by virtue of Nothing that this can be put to use.

[11c04t] R. L. Wing ~ Thirty spokes converge at one hub; ~ What is not there makes the wheel useful. ~ Clay is shaped to form a vessel; ~ What is not there makes the vessel useful. ~ Doors and windows are cut to form a room; ~ What is not there makes the room useful. ~ Therefore, take advantage of what is there, By making use of what is not.

[11c05t] Ren Jiyu ~ Thirty spokes are united in one nave to make a wheel, ~ But it is on the hole of the nave that the use of the carriage depends. ~ Clay is mixed to mold a utensil, ~ But it is on its empty space that the use of utensils depends. ~ Doors and windows are cut out to form a room, ~ But it is on the vacancy within, that the use of the room depends. ~ Therefore, the advantage existence brings to people rests exclusively upon the decisive role of nonexistence.

[11c06t] Gia-fu Feng ~ Thirty spokes share the wheel's hub; ~ It is the center hole that makes it useful. ~ Shape clay into a vessel; ~ It is the space within that makes it useful. ~ Cut doors and windows for a room; ~ It is the holes which make it useful. ~ Therefore profit comes from what is there; ~ Usefulness from what is not there.

[11c07t] Lok Sang Ho ~ Thirty spokes make a wheel. ~ Forget about the spokes, ~ And we have the use of the wheel. ~ Working clay in the right way can produce a bowl. ~ Forget about the clay, ~ And we have the use of the bowl. ~ Carve a room off the side of a hill, ~ Forget about the hill, ~ And we have the use of the room. ~ We lay our hands on all kinds of materials for our advantage. ~ Yet we do not possess any of these materials ~ when we actually use their services.

[11c08t] Xiaolin Yang ~ A wooden wheel has thirty spokes: ~ Carve out the center to make it useful for a carriage. ~ A piece of clay is used to make a container: ~ Take out some clay from the middle to form a pot. ~ A house has four walls: ~ Empty the inside to make a room. ~ Therefore, having materials provides the resources, ~ But getting rid of some of it makes the materials useful.

[11c09t] Walter Gorn Old, THE USE OF NOTHING ~ The thirty spokes of a carriage wheel uniting at the nave are made useful by the hole in the centre, where nothing exists. ~ Vessels of moulded earth are useful by reason of their hollowness. ~ Doors and windows are useful by being cut out. ~ A house is useful because of its emptiness. ~ Existence, therefore, is like unto gain, but Non-Existence to use.

[11c10t] James Legge ~ The thirty spokes unite in the one nave; ~ but it is on the empty space (for the axle), that the use of the wheel depends. ~ Clay is fashioned into vessels; ~ but it is on their empty hollowness, that their use depends. ~ The door and windows are cut out (from the walls) to form an apartment; ~ but it is on the empty space (within), that its use depends. ~ Therefore, what has a (positive) existence serves for profitable adaptation, and what has not that for (actual) usefulness.

[11c11t] David Hinton ~ Thirty spokes gathered at each hub: absence makes the cart work. ~ A storage jar fashioned out of clay: absence makes the jar work. ~ Doors and windows cut in a house: absence makes the house work. ~ Presence gives things their value, but absence makes them work.

[11c12t] Chichung Huang ~ Thirty spokes share a hub; ~ In its nothingness ~ Rests the carriage's usefulness. ~ One burns clay to make a pot; ~ In its nonbeing ~ Rests the clay pot's usefulness. ~ One cuts out doors and windows; ~ In its nonbeing ~ Rests the room's usefulness. ~ Therefore, being provides the advantage; ~ Nonbeing provides the usefulness.

[11c13t] Ellen M. Chen ~ Thirty spokes share one hub to make a wheel. ~ Through its non-being (wu), ~ There is (yu) the use (yung) of the carriage. ~ Mold clay into a vessel (ch'i). ~ Through its non-being (wu), ~ There is (yu) the use (yung) of the vessel. ~ Cut out doors and windows to make a house. ~ Through its non-being (wu), ~ There is (yu) the use (yung) of the house. ~ Therefore in the being (yu-chih) of a thing, ~ There lies the benefit (li). ~ In the non-being (wu-chih) of a thing, ~ There lies its use (yun).

[11c14t] Lee Sun Chen Org ~ A wheel was made through the process of assembling thirty spokes together, by befitting each spoke into individual holes (on the hub); ~ This illustrates that the holes (emptiness) are useful means in making carts; ~ A kitchen utensil (bowl) was made, because a hole was perforated (emptiness was created) in the middle of a lump of [solid] clay; ~ This again is an example that emptiness is useful for the shaping of a container; ~ Part of the solid walls of a room were cut out open so these openings could be used for either windows or doors; ~ Once again it is an example that emptiness (the voided sections of the wall) is useful in the completion of a room. ~ Accordingly: ~ Existence (Being) is advantageous; ~ While void (not to have the existence; Nothingness) is useful (significant) too.

[11c15t] Tien Cong Tran ~ Thirty spokes converge upon one hub; but it is the center hole that is the use of the cart. ~ We shape a lump of clay into a vessel; but it is the empty space within the vessel that is its use. ~ We make doors and windows for a chamber; but it is the empty space within it that is its use. ~ Thus, while the beings are profitable, the non-being is useful.

[11c16t] Thomas Z. Zhang ~ Thirty spokes connected to one hub with a hole (for shaft), can be used as a wheel. ~ Using clay to make a concave pottery, it can be used as a container. ~ Buildings with doors and windows can be houses. ~ Therefore, solidness provides the utility, and hollowness makes things useful.

[11c17t] Arthur Waley ~ We put thirty spokes together and call it a wheel; ~ But it is on the space where there is nothing that the usefulness of the wheel depends. ~ We turn clay to make a vessel; ~ But it is on the space where there is nothing that the usefulness of the vessel depends. ~ We pierce doors and windows to make a house; ~ And it is on these spaces where there is nothing that the usefulness of the house depends. ~ Therefore just as we take advantage of what is, we should ~ recognize the usefulness of what is not.

[11c18t] Richard John Lynn ~ Thirty spokes share one hub. ~ It is exactly where there is nothing of it that the functionality of the wheel resides. ~ Mix clay with water to make a vessel. ~ It is exactly where there is nothing of it that the functionality of the vessel resides. ~ Cut doors and windows to make a room. ~ It is exactly where there is nothing of it that the functionality of the room resides. ~ Therefore this is how what is there provides benefit and how what is not there provides functionality.

[11c19t] Lin Yutang ~ THE UTILITY OF NOT-BEING ~ Thirty spokes unite around the nave; ~ From their not-being (loss of their individuality) ~ Arises the utility of the wheel. ~ Mold clay into a vessel; ~ From its not-being (in the vessel's hollow) ~ Arises the utility of the vessel. ~ Cut out doors and windows in the house(-wall), ~ From their not-being (empty space) arises the utility of the house. ~ Therefore by the existence of things we profit. ~ And by the non-existence of things we are served.

[11c20t] Victor H. Mair ~ Thirty spokes converge on a single hub, ~ but it is in the space where there is nothing that the usefulness of the cart lies. ~ Clay is molded to make a pot, ~ but it is in the space where there is nothing that the usefulness of the clay pot lies. ~ Cut out doors and windows to make a room, ~ but it is in the spaces where there is nothing that the usefulness of the room lies. ~ Therefore, ~ Benefit may be derived from something, but it is in nothing that we find usefulness.

[11c21t] Tolbert McCarroll ~ Thirty spokes connect to the wheel's hub; ~ yet, it is the center hole that makes it useful. ~ Clay is shaped into a vessel; ~ yet, it is the emptiness within that makes it useful. ~ Doors and windows are cut for a room; ~ yet it is the space where there is nothing that makes it useful. ~ Therefore, ~ though advantage comes from what is; ~ usefulness comes from what is not.

[11c22t] David H. Li ~ Thirty spokes share one hub. ~ The hollow in the hub expresses the carriage's usefulness. ~ With clay, a vessel is molded. ~ The hollow within expresses the vessel's usefulness. ~ With doors and windows, a room is formed. ~ The hollow within expresses the room's usefulness. ~ Thus, visible provides the facility; hollow expresses its usefulness.

[11c23t] Yasuhiko Genku Kimura ~ Thirty spokes share a hub; ~ The usefulness of the cart ~ lies in the space where there is nothing. ~ Clay is kneaded into a vessel; ~ The usefulness of the vessel ~ lies in the space where there is nothing. ~ A room is created by cutting out doors and windows; ~ The usefulness of the room ~ lies in the space where there is nothing. ~ Therefore, ~ The benefit of things lies in the usefulness of nothing.

[11c24t] Chou-Wing Chohan ~ Thirty spokes unite in the middle of the wheel, ~ And because of the part between them where nothing exists, ~ We enjoy the use of the carriage wheel. ~ Clay is formed into bowls and vessels, ~ And because of the hollow in it where nothing exists, ~ We use them as vessels. ~ Doors and windows are cut into the walls of the house, ~ And since they are empty space, we can use them. ~ Therefore, on the one hand, we have the advantage of what exists, ~ And, on the other, we utilize the non-existent. ~ Without that which does not exist, we cannot take advantage of the wheel, the vessel, or the house. ~ Without wooden spokes, clay, and walls, we cannot take advantage of the space they contain. ~ Ultimately, existence and non-existence coexist and are intertwined.

[11c25t] Man-Ho Kwok ~ Thirty spokes on a cartwheel ~ Go towards the hub that is the centre ~ - but look, there is nothing at the centre and that is precisely why it works! ~ If you mould a cup you have to make a hollow: ~ it is the emptiness within it that makes it useful. ~ In a house or room it is the empty spaces ~ - the doors, the windows - that make it useable. ~ They all use what they are made of to do what they do, ~ but without their nothingness they would be nothing.

[11c26t] Gu Zhengkun ~ Thirty spokes share one hub. ~ It is just the space (the Nothingness) between them ~ That makes a cart function as a cart. ~ Knead clay to make a vessel ~ And you find within it the space ~ That makes a vessel as a vessel. ~ To build a house with doors and windows ~ And you find within them the space ~ That makes a house function as a house. ~ Hence the Being (substance) can provide a condition ~ Under which usefulness is found, ~ But the Nothingness (space) is the usefulness itself.

[11c27t] Chao-Hsiu Chen ~ Thirty spokes share one hub, yet the spokes and the hub cannot make use of the carriage. ~ Mix water, mud and earth and they can be shaped into a vessel, yet they cannot make use of the vessel itself. ~ Cut out windows and doors to create a room, yet they cannot make use of the room itself. ~ Therefore take the useful as the useless, the useless as the useful.

[11c28t] Liu Qixuan ~ Thirty strokes radiate from the axle, ~ And there is a good working cart when it is empty. ~ Clay is given shapes for holding things, ~ And there is a good working ware when it is not full. ~ Windows and doors have been made, ~ And there is a good working house when it is not occupied. ~ Therefore, in general principle, ~ Seeking after being is for profit, ~ Keeping non-being is for use.

[11c29t] Shi Fu Hwang ~ The Utility of The Void ~ Lao Tze says, ~ It takes thirty spokes to share one nave. ~ Because a nave is a void space, we can have the use of the cart. ~ People knead clay to make a bowl. ~ Because a bowl is void in the center, we can use the bowl. ~ People cut out of a wall to make a door and a window. ~ Because they are void spaces, we can have the use of apartments. ~ Thus, this is something we can gain, that the positive existence shall serve for profitable adaption, ~ and that which has no existence shall serve for its purpose.

[11c30t] Ch'u Ta-Kao ~ Thirty spokes unite in one nave, ~ And because of the part where nothing exists we have the use of a carriage wheel. ~ Clay is moulded into vessels, ~ And because of the space where nothing exists we are able to use them as vessels. ~ Doors and windows are cut out in the walls of a house, ~ And because they are empty spaces, we are able to use them. ~ Therefore, on the one hand we have the benefit of existence, and on the other, we make use of non-existence.

[11c31t] Paul J. Lin ~ Thirty spokes converge in a nave; ~ just because of its nothingness [void] the usefulness of the cart exists. ~ Molded clay forms a vessel; ~ just because of its nothingness [hollowness] the usefulness of the utensil exists. ~ Doors and windows are cut into a house; ~ just because of their nothingness [emptiness] the usefulness of the house exists. ~ Therefore, profit from that which exists and utilize that which is absent.

[11c32t] Michael LaFargue ~ Thirty spokes unite in one hollow hub - ~ in this 'nothing' lies the wheel's usefulness. ~ Knead clay to make a jar - ~ in its 'nothing' lies the jar's usefulness. ~ Cut out doors and windows in making a house - ~ in their 'nothing' lies the house's usefulness. ~ Yes: ~ 'Being' makes for profit, ~ 'Nothing' makes for usefulness.

[11c33t] Cheng Lin ~ Thirty spokes share the space of one nave. ~ The substance and the void are both essential to the usefulness of a carriage. ~ Clay is moulded to make vessels. ~ The substance and the void are both essential to the usefulness of a vessel. ~ Doors and windows are hewn in a house. ~ The substance and the void are both essential to the usefulness of a house. ~ Thus, the presence of something may prove beneficial, just as the absence of something may prove useful.

[11c34t] Yi Wu ~ Join thirty spokes at one hub; ~ in its emptiness, the carriage has its use. ~ Mold clay into a vessel; ~ in its emptiness, the vessel has its use. ~ Make doors and windows for a room; ~ in its emptiness, the room has its use. ~ Therefore, to have existence is beneficial; ~ not to have it is useful.

[11c35t] Han Hiong Tan ~ Thirty spokes come together at the hub. ~ The empty hub houses the axle of the wheel, and this allows the cart to move. ~ You mould clay to make utensils. ~ The empty space of the container makes it useful. ~ While building a house, you put in windows and doors. ~ The empty space gives us the room to use. ~ The substantial part creates the space, and thus provides us the benefit. ~ However, it is in the empty space that the actual utility lies.

[11c36t] Hua-Ching Ni ~ Thirty spokes together make a wheel for a cart. ~ It is the empty space in the center which enables it to be used. ~ Mold clay into a vessel; ~ it is the emptiness within that creates the usefulness of the vessel. ~ Cut out doors and windows in a house; ~ it is the empty space inside that creates the usefulness of the house. ~ Thus, what we have may be something substantial, ~ but its usefulness lies in the unoccupied, empty space. ~ The substance of your body is enlivened by maintaining the part of you that is unoccupied.

[11c37t] Chang Chung-yuan ~ Thirty spokes are joined at the hub. ~ From their non-being arises the function of the wheel. ~ Lumps of clay are shaped into a vessel. ~ From their non-being arises the function of the vessel. ~ Doors and windows are constructed together to make a chamber. ~ From their non-being arises the function of the chamber. ~ Therefore, as individual beings, these things are useful materials. ~ Constructed together in their non-being, they give rise to function.

[11c38t] Henry Wei ~ Utility of Non-Being ~ Wu Yung ~ Thirty spokes converge on the nave of a wheel: ~ It is where there is non-being (hollow space) ~ That the usefulness of the wheel lies. ~ Clay is molded into a vessel: ~ It is where there is non-being ~ That the usefulness of the vessel lies. ~ Doors and windows are hewn out to make a room: ~ It is where there is non-being ~ That the usefulness of the room lies. ~ Therefore, while being is valuable, ~ It is non-being that is useful.

[11c39t] Ha Poong Kim ~ Thirty spokes share one hub; ~ On its non-being depends the usefulness of the wheel. ~ You make a vessel, kneading clay; ~ On its non-being depends the usefulness of the vessel. ~ You make a room, carving out doors and windows; ~ On its non-being depends the usefulness of the room. ~ Therefore, being's advantage ~ Is non-being's usefulness.

[11c40t] Tao Huang ~ Thirty spokes join at one hub, ~ Yet it is the emptiness inside the hub that makes the vehicle useful; ~ Clay is molded into a vessel, ~ Yet it is the hollowness that makes the vessel useful; ~ Windows and doors are cut out, ~ Yet it is their empty space that makes the room usable. ~ So, any having makes for excess, ~ Any not-having makes for usefulness.

[11c41t] Tang Zi-chang ~ To combine two thirty-spoke wheels makes a cart. ~ Where there is a capacity in it, it possesses the function of a cart. ~ A lump of clay can be made into pottery. ~ Where there is a capacity within it, it possesses the function of a vessel. ~ A house is built with windows and doors. ~ Where there is a capacity in it, it possesses the function of a house. ~ Thus to possess a thing is for its utility, while its capacity is its function.

[11c42t] Wing-tsit Chan ~ Thirty spokes are united around the hub to make a wheel, ~ But it is on its non-being that the utility of the carriage depends. ~ Clay is molded to form a utensil, ~ But it is on its non-being that the utility of the utensil depends. ~ Doors and windows are cut out to make a room, ~ But it is on its non-being that the utility of the room depends. ~ Therefore turn being into advantage, and turn non-being into utility.

[11c91t] И. И. Семененко ~ Ступицу окружают 30 спиц, но пользоваться повозкой позволяет пустота отверстия в ступице. ~ Мнут глину, чтобы вылепить сосуд, но пользоваться сосудом позволяет его пустота. ~ Строя дом, проделывают дверь и окна, но пользоваться домом позволяет его пустота. ~ Приносит пользу то, что в них имеется, но пользоваться ими позволяет то, чего в них нет.

[11c92t] А. А. Маслов ~ Тридцать спиц соединяются в одной ступице. ~ Использование же повозки обуславливается пустотой между ними. ~ Для того, чтобы изготовить сосуд, размешивают глину. ~ Использование же сосуда обуславливается пустотой в нём. ~ Для того, чтобы соорудить жилище, прорубают двери и окна. ~ Использование же жилища обуславливается пустотой в нём. ~ Поэтому ту выгоду, которую получаем благодаря "наличию", мы можем использовать лишь благодаря "отсутствию".

[11c93t] Е. А. Торчинов ~ Тридцать спиц вместе - одно колесо. ~ Но то, что в нем - отсутствие, определяет наличие возможности использования телеги. ~ Стенки из глины - это сосуд. ~ Но то, что в нем - отсутствие, определяет наличие возможности использования сосуда. ~ В стенах пробиты окна и двери - это дом. ~ Но то, что в нем - отсутствие, определяет наличие возможности использования дома. ~ Поэтому наличие чего-либо определяет характер использования вещи, а отсутствие - принципиальную возможность использовать ее.

[11c94t] А. Е. Лукьянов ~ Тридцать спиц сходятся в одной ступице, а используется она в колесе за счет своего небытия и бытия (пустоты и полноты). ~ Формуют глину, чтобы изготовить сосуд, а используется он за счет своего небытия и бытия. ~ Пробивают окна и двери, чтобы устроить жилище, а используется оно за счет своего небытия и бытия. ~ Следовательно: ~ бытием приносится польза, небытием создается использование.
